Dictionary of Battles and Sieges: A Guide to 8,500 Battles from Antiquity through the Twenty-first Century, Volumes 1–3

Tony Jaques

Greenwood Press

Dictionary of Battles and Sieges

EDITORIAL BOARD

Daniel Coetzee, Board Leader
Independent Scholar
London

Frances F. Berdan
Professor of Anthropology
California State University, San Bernardino

Jeremy Black
Professor of History
Exeter University, Devon, United Kingdom

David A. Graff
Associate Professor Department of History
Kansas State University

Kevin Jones
University College, London

John Laband
Wilfrid Laurier University, Ontario, Canada

Carter Malkasian
Center for Naval Analyses

Toby McLeod
Lecturer in Modern History
University of Birmingham, United Kingdom

Tim Moreman
Independent Scholar
London

Bill Nasson
Department of Historical Studies
University of Cape Town, South Africa

David Nicolle
Honourary Research Fellow
Nottingham University, United Kingdom

Kaushik Roy
Lecturer, Department of History
Presidency College, Kolkata, India

Dennis Showalter
Professor of History
Colorado College

Stephen Turnbull
Lecturer in Japanese Religious Studies
Department of Theology and Religious Studies
Leeds University, United Kingdom

Michael Whitby
Professor of Classics and Ancient History
University of Warwick, Coventry
United Kingdom

Dictionary of Battles and Sieges

A Guide to 8,500 Battles from Antiquity through the Twenty-first Century

Volume 1
A–E

Tony Jaques

Foreword by Dennis Showalter

GREENWOOD PRESS
Westport, Connecticut • London

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Jaques, Tony.
Dictionary of battles and sieges : a guide to 8,500 battles from antiquity through the twenty-first century / Tony Jaques ; foreword by Dennis Showalter.
p. cm.
Includes bibliographical references and index.
ISBN 0–313–33536–2 (set : alk. paper)—ISBN 0–313–33537–0 (vol. 1 : alk. paper)—ISBN 0–313–33538–9 (vol. 2 : alk. paper)—ISBN 0–313–33539–7 (vol. 3 : alk. paper) 1. Battles—History—Encyclopedias. 2. Sieges—History—Encyclopedias. 3. Military history—Encyclopedias. I. Title.
D25.J33 2007
355.403—dc22 2006015366

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data is available.

Copyright © 2007 by Issue Outcomes Proprietary Limited

All rights reserved. No portion of this book may be reproduced, by any process or technique, without the express written consent of the publisher.

Library of Congress Catalog Card Number: 2006015366
ISBN: 0–313–33536–2 (set)
0–313–33537–0 (vol. 1)
0–313–33538–9 (vol. 2)
0–313–33539–7 (vol. 3)
ISBN-13: 978–0–313–33536–5 (set)
978–0–313–33537–2 (vol. 1)
978–0–313–33538–9 (vol. 2)
978–0–313–33539–6 (vol. 3)

First published in 2007

Greenwood Press, 88 Post Road West, Westport, CT 06881
An imprint of Greenwood Publishing Group, Inc.
www.greenwood.com

Printed in the United States of America

The paper used in this book complies with the Permanent Paper Standard issued by the National Information Standards Organization (Z39.48–1984).

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

This dictionary is dedicated to the memory of my father, Pat Jaques, 1903–1980.

Contents

Foreword by Dennis Showalter ❙ ix

Preface ❙ xi

Chronological Reference Guide ❙ xxiii

Alphabetical Listing of Battles and Sieges ❙ 1

Appendix ❙ 1139

Bibliography ❙ 1147

Index ❙ 1171

Foreword

Why write and publish a book like this? Why, in an age of increasingly-sophisticated electronic search agents, search agents able not merely to compile lists, but categorize and cross-reference their contents, did Tony Jaques and Greenwood Press collaborate on this Dictionary of Battles and Sieges?

Utilitarian considerations play a part. It is useful even in the computer age to have a compendium like this one ready to hand. It is convenient to let one's fingers do the walking through actual printed pages; and stimulating to pursue the comparisons across space and time suggested by alphabetical listings of common events. A technologically-oriented critic, however, might be excused for dismissing these arguments as exercises in nostalgia: examples of a vestigial mind-set no less dated than quill pens and typewriters.

Perhaps, then, we might consider this work from an aesthetic perspective, as a tribute to the intelligence and the energy of its author. In that context the Dictionary is surely a tour de force. Nothing remotely like it exists; nothing remotely like it will be needed in the foreseeable future. Jaques draws references from six continents and four millennia. Their scale extends from epic engagements that lasted weeks and involved millions to frontier skirmishes with a few dozen men to a side. Their location ranges from familiar cockpits and choke points—Flanders in Europe, the Bosporus in Asia Minor, Panipat in northern India—to remote dots on a map, with no discernible significance of any kind. Yet each has its place in a structure whose synergy of complexity and order invites comparison to a mosaic or a tapestry. As an overview of organized violence, the volume is in a class by itself.

Yet the question remains: why? Particularly at a time when military history is turning away from its historic focus on combat, emphasizing instead the structure of armed forces, the relationship of military institutions to their societies, the cultural, intellectual and psychological aspects of war—why reinforce an obsolescent paradigm?

The Dictionary of Battles and Sieges provides convincing evidence that war is an integral part of the human experience. From its emergence as a species, mankind has competed with other species for survival. Individuals and cultures have defended and aggrandized themselves by organized violence. The adjective is as important as the noun. Homo sapiens in a pristine state is a poor squib indeed, ill equipped physically by nature either to fight or to run. Homo faber, man the tool-maker, is a very different proposition. Archaeological evidence indeed suggests he might more accurately be called "man the weapons-maker." And the human forebrain that enabled the development of weapons enabled as well an understanding that those weapons were most effective when employed cooperatively, even in the random clashes of small hunting parties that probably evolved into the first battles.

That understanding has shaped the nature of war from its beginning—certainly from the beginning of recorded history. Recent debates on the existence of a distinctive "Western way of war," with a unique emphasis on decisive battle, have obscured the universal centrality of fighting to warmaking. Battle can mean different things to different cultures. Its scale and its nature may vary widely. But battle, the direct encounter of competing forces, ultimately structures war's impact and war's consequences, individual and collective. Tony Jaques merits the thanks of the historical community by this massive and eloquent reminder of a fact sufficiently uncomfortable to invite suppression, yet too fundamental to be overlooked.

Dennis Showalter

Preface

It has often been said that there is more to history than kings and battles. But it is equally true that kings and battles are an essential and intriguing part of history, and the study of battles and wars can provide a valuable window to history.

At the very least, battles can be dramatic milestones in the journey of history and can provide insight into the broader understanding of war. Indeed, some battles have proved decisive turning points, not just in the course of a war, but sometimes even dramatic turning points in the history of an entire people, such as the siege and destruction of Carthage in 146 BC or the demise of the Aztec Empire at Tenochtitlan in 1521.

This book sets out to bring into a single source battles and sieges from all periods of recorded history and across all geographies. The 8,500 battles included are presented in the main alphabetical section, which also contains about 2,500 cross-references, which are mainly alternate names for battles, or the names of battles within a campaign.

Each entry includes the name and date of the battle, the name of the war and the context in which it was fought, the opposing commanders if known, the outcome of the fighting, and any other outstanding detail which can be contained within the necessary constraints of the limited words available. Any mention of a related battle included elsewhere in the book appears in bold.

In addition, every battle in the book appears in a Chronological Reference Guide as a finding aid. The only exceptions are Adas 1775 and Dacca 1971, where two battles were fought in the same year but in different wars.

This book was conceived as a dictionary of battles and sieges, not a dictionary of wars and not an encyclopedia of battles. However, some wars which do not have specific recorded battles remain significant in their own right in an historic context. For completeness of the project, a small number of such wars appear in a separate appendix and are also included in the Chronological Reference Guide.

The general principle underlying this book has been comprehensiveness, not selectivity. The objective was to include as many battles as possible, which meant that each entry had to be in very brief dictionary style in order to contain the information within a single publishing project. The entries are not intended to be standalone analyses of each battle, but should provide sufficient detail to enable the reader to research the full information elsewhere in the sources, including those referenced in the bibliography.

As a result, the same space is devoted to a brief skirmish as is given to a major strategic encounter. The book makes no attempt to distinguish or categorise different military encounters.

Some writers and historians have attempted to categorise or define what they believe are the most significant or most decisive battles.

One of the earliest and most famous of these works was Sir Edward Creasey's Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World, originally published in 1852. Others include the classic Decisive Battles of the Western World and Their Influence upon History (J.F.C. Fuller, 1954) and, more recently, Turning the Tide of War: Fifty Battles That Changed the Course of Modern History from 1792–1995 (Tim Newark, 2001), One Hundred Decisive Battles: From Ancient Times to the Present (Paul K. Davis, 1999), Fifty Battles That Changed the World: The Conflicts That Most Changed the Course of History (William Weir, 2001) and The Seventy Great Battles in History (Jeremy Black, ed, 2005). But before considering what makes a battle significant, the more fundamental question must be asked, what is a battle?

What is a battle?

At the simplest level, a battle is any clash between organised forces of combatants. While this allows no distinction in scope, scale or significance, considerations such as significance are often applied only in retrospect and may have very little to do with scope or scale. For instance, some battles which were very minor military affairs have gained significance for other reasons, such as the loss of an important political or military leader. Examples would include the siege of Chalus (1199), which saw Richard I "the Lionheart" killed by a crossbow bolt in a pointless dispute over some supposed treasure; the otherwise unremarkable siege of Fredrikshald (1718), where King Charles XII of Sweden was shot dead (possibly by one of his own soldiers); or the battle of Klissova (1826), a struggle over a worthless harbour sandbar near Missolonghi during the Greek War of Independence, noted mainly for the death of the renowned Turkish commander Hussein bey Djertili.

Apart from the loss of an important commander, the level of casualties in a battle does not necessarily impart significance. As Sir Edward Creasey wrote in the introduction to his classic study, "I hardly need remark that it is not the number of killed and wounded in a battle that determines its general historical importance."

There have of course been some important battles with no casualties at all to enemy action, such as Charleston Harbour (1863), where the bloodless bombardment of Fort Sumter effectively triggered the American Civil War; or the bloodless escalade and capture of Gwalior (1780) by British General Thomas Goddard, which was a major setback to the Maratha army.

Sadly, at the opposite end of the scale, there have been all too many battles, such as on the Western Front during World War I, with losses running into the tens of thousands killed for no tactical or strategic gain whatever.

Some military historians have developed alternative terminology in an attempt to categorise the scale of actions. Such writers have introduced seemingly graduated descriptions such as encounter, skirmish, fight, ambush, raid, action, engagement and combat to expand the vocabulary of actions regarded as less-than-full-scale battles. (An example of a history which uses such distinctions would be the classic 128-volume American Civil War official record, The War of the Rebellion, published between 1880 and 1901.) However, the present project eschews such labels, and the simple words "battle" or "siege" are used throughout, regardless of scale, although the text sometimes particularises certain events. It is essential to remember that from the point of view of the man with a rifle or the man with a spear, no battle is less than another, and the individual risk of brutal death or injury is just as great whenever he looks his enemy in the eye. Historians and armchair generals may later debate whether it was a skirmish, an ambush or a battle, but to the companions and family of the fallen, it makes little difference.

In pursuit of comprehensiveness, not selectivity, some actions have been included which might be regarded as marginal to the more narrow definition of a battle.

For example, the "confrontation" between King Charles I and Parliamentary forces at Turnham Green (1642) saw only scattered shots fired, but the King was forced to withdraw, saving London. A similar confrontation by Ivan Ivanovich of Moscow at Ugra (1480) persuaded the Mongol leader Ahmed Khan to withdraw and is claimed to symbolise the end of Mongol rule.

Standing in contrast to confrontations which involved very large numbers of men, but little or no fighting, are small actions where opposing forces effectively agreed to resolve issues by a clash of champions. Typical of these are the so-called Battle of the Thirty (1351), when the English and French garrisons of neighbouring castles in Brittany sent 30 men from either side to fight to the death; the Battle of North Inch (1396), when champions from two Scottish clans fought to the death in a judicial battle in the presence of the King himself to resolve a long-running feud; the tournament at Arcos de Valdevez (1140), when Portuguese and Galician knights fought to settle an invasion by royal rivals; or the semi-legendary Battle of the Champions (547 BC), when 300 men from either side reportedly fought to the death in a failed attempt to resolve a war between Sparta and Argos.

Also included in this project are a number of events which have been described as massacres. But in most cases, they have been included because of their broader historic or military significance.

Such events—with heavy losses inflicted on an ill-armed or even unarmed group—include the Whitman Massacre (1847), which triggered the Cayuse War; the Jamestown Massacre (1622), which began the Powhatan War; the Yellow Creek Massacre (1774), which led to the so-called Cresap's War; the Amritsar Massacre (1919), which galvanised Indian opposition to British rule in India and the massacre at My Lai (1968), which severely undermined America's war effort in Vietnam.

In other instances, however, the description "massacre" is far more equivocal and politically charged, such as the Sand Creek Massacre (1864), when Colonel John Chivington attacked a Cheyenne Indian camp; or the Massacre at Wounded Knee Creek (1890), when Colonel James Forsyth attacked a Ghost Dance camp in South Dakota. In both cases, it has been argued by some historians that these were battles, not massacres, because the Indians fought back and inflicted casualties on the American horse-soldiers. Addressing this question in relation to a similar attack at Sappa Creek (1875), William Chalfont wrote: "If a massacre is defined as the indiscriminate, wanton and wholesale slaughter of people, then there was a massacre" (1997).

Much less debatable are some other so-called massacres which are self-evidently battles, but in which one side suffered disproportionate or even total loss. Indeed, the description massacre is sometimes applied somewhat indiscriminately to any one-sided military disaster. A good example is the Fetterman Massacre (1866). In this battle in Wyoming, two well-armed forces fought a very hard action, but the outnumbered Americans under the impetuous Captain William Fetterman were killed to the last man. Many sources call it a massacre, but this famous defeat is perhaps more accurately described by its Sioux name, the Battle of the Hundred Slain. The same applies with the Dade Massacre (1835), in which only three soldiers out of 80 survived an Indian attack.

What battles to include?

Apart from the question of how to define a battle comes the question how to determine which battles should be included. This is equally challenging.

The most self-evident requirement is that the battle must have been recorded in writing, and for inclusion here, it must be cross-referenced in at least two independent sources, with good detail (or at least consensus among authorities) on the date, the event, the participants and the outcome. As a result, battles recorded in oral history alone are generally not included, even recognising that this excludes some extensive historic traditions, such as in parts of pre-European sub-Saharan Africa.

But even accepting that, a number of battles have been included which bear the classification "semi-legendary," such as Halys (585 BC), Fei River (383), Bravalla (735), Svolde (1000) or Calatanazar (1002).

One major objective of this military history project has been to bring to Western literature the many important battles fought in wars which are little reported in the principal English-language sources, particularly those fought in Central and Eastern Europe, South America, Mesoamerica and Central and East Asia. A typical case would be the Battle of Cesis, between Estonian and German forces in the shadow of World War I (19–23 June 1919). While this decisive action is seldom featured in the mainstream western European sources, within Estonia it marked the turning point of their War of Independence and is still celebrated every year as Victory Day.

The challenge of determining what to include is well illustrated by the American Civil War, one of history's most widely studied and documented conflicts. The US Federal Civil War Sites Advisory Commission reported that out of 10,500 armed conflicts in the war, they had chosen 384 as "principal battles," which they then classified according to historic significance. Although Civil War enthusiasts challenge the Federal government selection, the present publication has adhered explicitly to the Commission's determination, and has included just those 384 battles (although some which took place between Indian forces and government troops during the period have been reclassified as being part of various Indian campaigns rather than as specific Civil War battles).

In another example, the Military History Bureau of China's Ministry of National Defence has published a 100-volume History of the Sino-Japanese War, 1937–1945, which claimed that the Chinese fought 23 campaigns, 1,117 major battles, 38,531 engagements and, in the course of the war, lost an extraordinarily precise 3,327,916 military casualties and 5,787,352 civilian casualties. In this case, however, the relevant government authority failed to provide its own categorisation of the principal battles, and the selection of battles for inclusion here is once again subjective.

Another complexity regarding what to include is that some quite extensive conflicts had no specific actions at all which can be classified as named battles, but remain of historic interest. As a result, a limited selection of such wars is included in an appendix, and they also appear in the chronological index. This does not include history's large number of low-level wars and insurgencies, such as the Malayan Emergency of 1948–1960, where there were no significant battles. Many such conflicts have occurred, and most in the modern era are well documented elsewhere, especially those since 1945.

Beyond the scope of more traditional land battles, it is also necessary to consider what will be categorised as a naval battle. Is it a ship-to-ship action between just two vessels, such as Guadaloupe (1800)? Or does it include only fleet actions, such as Actium (31 BC)? Does the carrier-borne aircraft attack on the Italian fleet at Taranto (1940) constitute a naval battle? What about the Italian human torpedoes sinking the only two British battleships in the Mediterranean at Alexandria harbour (1941)?

The answer in each of these cases is that such actions are included, though of course on a selective basis. Furthermore, the list of naval battles in fact also includes what are effectively prolonged naval campaigns rather than specific actions, such as the Battles of the Atlantic in World War I and World War II. In the selection of battles, it must also be remembered that this is not just a dictionary of battles, but also of sieges, and many historic sieges were either wholly or partly naval operations, such as Thasos (465–463 BC), Bari (1068–1071), Almeria (1309) and Dubrovnik (1991–1992).

The question of air battles is even more difficult. To be included, the general rule is that there must be reasonably large-scale air forces on either side, which means that no air battles until after World War I are included. Broadly, this has also excluded large-scale air raids as specific battles, unless major forces were deployed from either side, or there were major losses, for example, Nuremberg (1944), Ploesti (1943), the Battle of Britain (1940), Namsi (1951); or when there was some other major military or political significance, such as Guernica (1937). In reality, however, air warfare is a relatively new technology and has been well covered in other publications.

Before leaving the issue of what constitutes a battle, a modern-day example illustrates the challenge of determining what should be included. In November 2001, during the Afghanistan War, a group of mainly foreign Taliban and al-Qaeda prisoners captured near Kunduz overwhelmed guards and seized their prison at Qala-i-Jangi. The bloodbath which followed has been variously described as a three-day prison riot, a massacre and a battle. And, while even today the details remain shrouded by often highly politicised reports, it is clear that artillery, tanks and jet aircraft were employed, and that perhaps 400 Taliban were killed along with about 40 Northern alliance troops and an American special forces observer. Was it a battle? Perhaps history will tell, but for now it has been included in this book.

What to call a battle?

Having decided what battles to include, it is by no means self-evident what name to give to each battle. While the great majority of battles are named for their geographic location, even that is subject to considerable variation. Even so famous a battle as Waterloo (1815) is known by some French historians as Mont St Jean.

Similarly, the French battle of Guise (1914) is known by the Germans as St Quentin; the allied Battle of the Java Sea (1942) is the Japanese Battle of Surubaya; the American Battle of Buenavista (1847) is the Mexican La Angostura; the German Battle of Korsun (1944) is the Russian Battle of the Cherkassy Pocket; the British Battle of Jutland (1916) is the German Battle of the Skaggerak; the British Battle of Omdurman (1898) is the Sudanese Karala; and one of the most famous battlefields of the American Civil War (1861 and 1862) is called either Manassas or Bull Run, depending on which side is describing the event.

Some distinctions arise simply from legitimate differences in the focus of the opposing armies, such as where they were headquartered, or from opposing nations using their own names for the same location, such as German Diedenhofen and French Thionville (1639), or the city of Oradea in modern Romania, also known as German Grosswardein and Hungarian Nagyvarad (1660).

A good example of the confusion which can arise from different national names is the Battle of Ebelsberg (1809), which is located just southeast of Linz. This action is sometimes referred to as Ebersberg, which has led to it being mistakenly located in a number of sources at Ebersberg, which is about 100 miles west near Munich.

A similar challenge arises from the use of modern names for locations. Broadly, the rule has been to use the name which applied at the time (in some cases, with the modern name in parentheses). Thus, for place names in India, for example, Bombay and Madras have been used throughout, not Mumbai and Chennai. And a battle as famous as Stalingrad (1942–1943) could hardly appear under its modern name Volgagrad. This distinction is especially difficult with the revised spellings in China. In general, this project uses the modern Pinyin Romanisation of Chinese names throughout—thus, Zhijiang (not Chihchiang), and Tianjin (not Tientsin), with cross-references where necessary. There are, however, a handful of exceptions, including Chiang Kai-Shek (not Jiang Jieshi) and Hong Kong (not Xianggang). The challenge of modern alternatives also applies to many Indian and Arabic place names (as well as personal names), which creates equal difficulties of transliteration into the English alphabet. The estimable Encyclopedia of Islam has been used as a reference in the latter cases. Thus, as referred to below, the famous battle in 636 is given here as Qadisiyya, with Kadasiya, Kadesiah and Cadesia provided as alternatives. The transliteration of Aztec and other Mesoamerican names is another such challenge (for example, the personal name Motecuhzoma, not Montezuma or Moctezuma).

Sometimes, the choice of name for a battle reflects other events. A classic case is the action at the confluence of the Rosillo and Salado Creeks, southeast of San Antonio, Texas, in 1813. At the time it was known as the Battle of the Salado, but is today usually called the Battle of Rosillo, in order to distinguish it from another battle fought at the Salado in 1842.

However, some geographic name choices are much more deliberate. A good example of the purely political naming of a battle is the great German victory in East Prussia at Tannenberg (1914). According to military historian Basil Liddell Hart, General Erich Ludendorf originally designated his triumph as Frogenau, which is where the battle took place. But his aide, Colonel Max Hoffman, reportedly suggested it should be called Tannenberg to erase the defeat of the Teutonic knights nearby in 1410. Although Tannenberg was some miles to the southeast, this is the name by which the battle came to be known by both sides—a telling instance of how history is written by the victors.

Apart from geography, battles are also named for many other reasons. Some are named for one of the key participants, such as Lochrey's Defeat (1781) in Pennsylvania, named for the unfortunate Colonel Archibald Lochrey; or Dudley's Defeat (1813) in Ohio, named for the rashly impetuous Colonel William Dudley; or Monson's Retreat (1804), named for the equally rash Colonel William Monson in northwest India. Meanwhile, Whitman Massacre (1847) in Washington commemorates the ill-fated missionary Dr Marcus Whitman.

Similarly, both a battle and geography can be named for one of the participants, such as the Cañón de Ugalde in West Texas, named for the battle in the Sabinal River Canyon in 1790, between Apache and the Mexican commander General Juan de Ugalde.

An example of how this form of name evolves is provided by the clash on an unnamed island in the dry Arikee River in eastern Colorado in 1848. During this action, an American scouting detachment under Major George Forsyth was attacked by a large war party led by the Cheyenne Chief Roman Nose. One of 23 American casualties was Lieutenant Fredrick Beecher, and Roman Nose was also killed. The army called it the Battle of Beecher Island, while the Indians call it the Battle Where Roman Nose Was Killed.

Perhaps the most extreme example of this form is the battle which many historians have come to describe as Boudicca (61 AD). The exact location of this decisive Roman victory over Boudicca (or Boadicea) of the Iceni is effectively unknown and remains the subject of extensive academic debate. But it is of such historic importance that the event has widely been assigned simply the name of the British Warrior Queen whose army was crushed.

Another example of an uncertain battle site is the great Roman disaster on the German frontier, known as the Battle of Teutoborgwald (9 AD). In the 1980s, the apparent battlefield was finally located some considerable distance away at Kalkriese, near Osnabruck. However, the traditional name is still generally accepted and retained.

Likewise, historians have traditionally recorded that the Byzantine Emperor Heraclius, in 622, landed on the Plain of Issus in the northeastern Mediterranean to advance into Armenia and defeat the Persian Shahbaraz. Modern scholars believe it is more likely that Heraclius crossed the Sea of Marmara from Constantinople to land in northwestern Turkey, advancing to Ophlimos on the Lycus to secure his decisive victory over the Persians.

Another category of battles are those known today by a name assigned after the event, which has become the accepted name for the location, such as Massacre Canyon (Nebraska, 1873), Battle Creek (Idaho, 1878), Bloody Ridge (Guadalcanal, 1942 and Korea, 1951), Blood River (Natal, 1838) or Bloody Nose Ridge (Peliliu, 1944). The battlefield of Kepaniwai (which means "damning of the waters") is named for the action in Hawaii's Iao Valley in 1790 when there were so many dead that they reputedly blocked the stream.

Similarly, the site of the British disaster at Parent's Creek in Detroit in 1763 was subsequently named Bloody Run, and the Battle of Anzac in the Dardanelles is named for the 1915 landing by the Australian and New Zealand Army Corps (ANZACs) on a previously unnamed stretch of coast just north of Gabe Tepe, identified on allied military maps as Beach Z.

Even the date can provide the name for a battle, such as Christmas Hill (also known as Longstop Hill or Djebel Rhar) in Tunisia, where a battle took place on Christmas Eve 1942; or the famous victory at Puebla in Mexico in 1862, which is still celebrated as Cinco de Mayo (5 May). The great naval battle known as the Glorious First of June (1794) was obviously named by the British for the date of their victory. The defeated French call it Ushant (or Ouessant) after the Breton island more than 400 miles to the east.

In addition, there are battles which have gained "popular" names unrelated to date or geography. Typical of these would be Leipzig (1813), which is known by the Germans as the Battle of the Nations, while the French call it the Battle of the Giants. Austerlitz (1805) is also known as the Battle of the Three Emperors, while Alcazarquivir (1578) is called the Battle of the Three Kings.

Some battles, including many in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, are well known by their code names, such as Operation Market Garden used to describe the attack on Arnhem in September 1944, or Operation Buffalo for the battle at Con Thien in July 1967. Broadly, this book avoids such operational names, except where there is no adequate or generally accepted geographic name, such as the Operation Longcloth incursion in northern Burma in early 1943.

However, in recognition of the different names for particular battles, this book provides the widest possible range of alternates. These are given in the format "Abárzuza, 1874, 2nd Carlist War See Estella," There are over 2,500 such cross-references.

Furthermore, while most battles are described simply by their accepted names, this book has added further distinction where there may be confusion over battlefields of the same name in different countries, such as Tripoli, Libya (1551) and Tripoli, Syria (1289); Hyderabad, India (1709) and Hyderabad, Pakistan (1843) or Barcelona, Spain (1936) and Barcelona, Venezuela (1817). A similar distinction has also been provided where there are battlefields of the same name within one country, such as the Indian battles of Gheria, Bombay (1756) and Gheria, Bengal (1763); the New Zealand War battles at Te Ahuahu, Bay of Islands (1845) and Te Ahuahu, Taranaki (1864); the American battles at Charleston, Massachusetts (1776), Charleston, South Carolina (1781) and Charlestown, West Virginia (1864) and, even more confusingly, the battles at Friedberg, Bavaria and Friedberg, Hesse fought within a few weeks in Germany in 1796.

Finally, where more than one battle has been fought at a particular location, these are commonly referred to elsewhere as, for example, First Bull Run (1861) and Second Bull Run (1862). However, because some locations have so seen many battles (this book has, for example, 15 entries for Constantinople, 15 for Kabul, 12 for Alexandria and 11 for Adrianople), the designations 1st, 2nd, 3rd etc. are used only for battles fought in the same year. In this way, the two battles of Bull Run are not referred to as first and second, whereas this distinction is used for the two battles at Babi Wali Kotal in 1842, the three battles at Douaumont in 1916 and the four separate battles at Cawnpore in 1857. The same applies to the eleven battles fought on the Isonzo between 1915 and 1917.

In the book's chronological index, however, such battles appear only once for each year. The only exception is Dacca, 1971, where two battles were fought in the same year at the same location, but in different wars.

What date to assign?

The seemingly simple question of what date to assign to a battle also gives rise to argument and debate. The most common complication is the overlap of the New and Old Style calendars, which were introduced around the Western world at different times. In general, this book attempts to use the calendar applicable in the country concerned at the time of the battle, though historic records can vary and cause great confusion, especially where opposing combatant countries were using different calendars.

While these calendar variations are usually no more than a few days, much more significant differences can arise from academic debate over the correct interpretation of historic battles, which may rely on ambiguous documents or on varying interpretations of non-Western chronologies, such as certain Muslim or Asian calendar systems.

Where serious academic debate continues, an attempt has been made to assign dates which appear to reflect a consensus among historians, though for battles such as Kadesh (1275 BC), Megiddo (1468 BC), Covadonga (718) and the Siege of Troy (1184 BC), the annotation "trad date" has been used to indicate uncertainty. In the case of the vital strategic battle at Qadisiyya during the Muslim conquest of Persia, the exact timing is so important and so hotly argued by scholars that this entry has the annotation "disputed date 636 or 637." For a handful of battles in medieval India, where regnal chronologies are the subject of extensive academic debate, the style used is Pullalur (disputed date, c 610).

When exact dates are known, historians are most often in agreement about what day a battle started. But when a battle ended can be a subject of considerable debate. A good example is provided by some of the great offensives on the Western Front during World War I. Some historians date such battles as ending when the last advance was halted, but others give a date days or even weeks later, when fighting finally died down.

While determining the exact date for a battle can be challenging, dating a siege can be even more fraught with variables, especially for very prolonged siege campaigns. Some writers, for example, date the start of a siege from when the enemy army first approaches the target town or fort, or when they first meet the defenders in battle outside the walls. Other historians suggest that a siege commences only when the attacking force complete their encirclement, or when they commence the preliminary bombardment, or perhaps when they launch the first major assault. It is similarly debatable when to date a siege reaching its conclusion. Some historians record that a siege ends when a relieving force breaks through the encircling attackers, or at the time of the final assault. Others date as the siege ending when the attacking army finally secures the target town, or when the unsuccessful attackers finally withdraw. It is even more confusing when the attackers storm and seize a city, yet the garrison holds out in the citadel. The difference in dates can be very significant, especially in the case of some historic battles where a defeated or unsuccessful siege force might take weeks or even months before it finally withdraws.

What to call a war?

The final issue to be considered is what name to use for the wars to which battles are assigned. While the names of wars usually seem to be self-evident, this is very often not the case. Some distinctions are simply reflections of national involvement, such as the Swabian War (1499), which the Germans call the Swiss War; the Vietnam War (1963–1972), which the Vietnamese call the American War or the anti-American War; the French-Mexican War (1861–1867), which the Mexicans call the War of the Intervention; or the brutal conflict of 1857–1858, which the British call the Indian Mutiny (or the Sepoy Rebellion), and which some Indian historians call the First Indian War of Independence.

Similarly, the war on the American central plains in 1874–1875, which the Army called the Red River War, is known by the Indians as the War to Save the Buffalo, while the Creek Indian War (1813–1814) is known by the Creek themselves as the Red Stick War. Indeed, some historians do not credit the latter as a separate war at all, but regard it simply as part of the War of 1812.

In some cases, European names have been given to non-European wars. For example, the Japanese refer to the Boshin War (1868–1869) and the Seinan War (1877), which are respectively nominated here as the War of the Meiji Restoration and the Satsuma Rebellion.

Descriptors such as rebellion, mutiny and uprising are widely employed in this book, even though one side's rebellion is often the other side's war of liberation. Similarly, words such as rebel and insurgent have been used in some instances. The broad objective throughout, however, is to conform to common usage, not to express any political or partisan opinion.

Indeed, some wars have been renamed in modern times, specifically in the interests of political sensitivity. Take for instance the series of campaigns fought between the British and the Xhosa people of South Africa between 1779 and 1877, often referred to as the Kaffir Wars. As that term is now regarded as pejorative, they are now sometimes called the Frontier Wars, the Cape Frontier Wars or the Anglo-Xhosa Wars. This book has called them the Cape Frontier Wars, even though Kaffir Wars is undeniably the name by which they were best known at the time. Similarly, the conflicts in New Zealand between 1843 and 1870 were known for 130 years as the Maori Wars. But that nomenclature too is now criticised, and this book has adopted the alternative term New Zealand Wars. By contrast, however, this book has retained throughout the term Indian rather than Native American—as in Sioux Indian Wars and Navajo Indian War.

In other cases, the choice of war name used in this project must sometimes necessarily be little more than arbitrary. For example, the American phase of the War of the Grand Alliance (1688–1697) is referred to as King William's War, and the American phase of the War of the Spanish Succession (1701–1714) has been given its alternate name, Queen Anne's War. However, the War of Netherlands' Independence (1566–1648) is not given its common alternative name, the Eighty Years War, and the name Seven Years War is given only to the great European conflict of 1756–1763, not its alternate use for the Second Seminole War (1835–1842). Nor are either the Russo-Polish War (1654–1667) or the War between Poland and the Teutonic Order (1454–1566) given their common alternative name, the Thirteen Years War. Similarly, the description Wars of the Three Kingdoms is used for the brutal struggle in China in the third century AD, not as the modern alternative for what was once called the English civil wars, now more widely known as the British civil wars.

For some wars, the selection of a "correct" name is made difficult simply by the abundance of choice. The 1973 Arab-Israeli War, for example, is widely also known as the Yom Kippur War, the Ramadan War, the October War and the War of Atonement. And the book Our Incredible Civil War (Burke Davis, 1960) records no fewer than 35 different names for the American Civil War, including the War of the Rebellion, the War of Secession, the War between the States, the Confederate War and many others.

For some conflicts, there is simply no generally accepted name. Accordingly, this book categorises such campaigns very broadly, for example, the Greco-Persian Wars (498–450 BC), Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire (402–471), Ottoman Conquest of the Balkans (1363–1396), Maratha Wars of Succession (1762–1775), Colombian civil wars (1823–1877) and Persian-Afghan Wars (1711–1755). For very prolonged campaigns, such as the 400 years of intermittent conflict between Byzantium and her Muslim neighbours, the battles have been assigned to three major logical groupings: Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars (645–739), Byzantine-Muslim Wars (778–902) and Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars (961–1038).

These descriptions are necessarily arbitrary and fairly loose, as is the timing of when such campaigns began and finished. A good example of debate over the time frame of a campaign is the Reconquista, or Christian Reconquest of Spain and Portugal. Most historians agree that the campaign concluded with the recapture of Granada in 1492, but there is extensive academic disagreement over when it commenced. Some scholars argue that the Reconquest began with the semi-legendary defeat of the Muslim invaders at Covadonga (718), while others argue that the campaign commenced when Alfonso VI of Castile captured Toledo (1085). Yet others suggest the Reconquest really began only after Pope Urban's proclamation of Crusade in 1095. For the record, this book defines the first battle of the Reconquest as Graus (1063), and for convenience divides the long struggle into Early Christian Reconquest of Spain (1063–1248), Later Christian Reconquest of Spain (1309–1452) and Final Christian Reconquest of Spain (1481–1492). A similar problem arises when wars merge into one another, such as Cresap's War (1774), which soon merged with Lord Dunmore's War (1774), or the eight-year struggle between Japan and China, which commenced in 1937 as the Sino-Japanese War and merged after December 1941 into World War II. Some Chinese historians have overcome this latter problem by referring to the entire campaign as the War of Resistance, though this nomenclature has limited currency outside China.

Names of commanders

The style adopted for naming commanders is usually given name and family name only, but in some cases, a further degree of distinction is needed to avoid misunderstanding, such as dates of birth and death or the use of a middle name.

In this way, dates are used to distinguish the almost exact contemporaries General Sir Charles Napier (1782–1853) and his cousin naval commander Sir Charles Napier (1786–1860), or the cousins Admiral Samuel Hood (1762–1814) and Admiral Samuel Hood (1724–1816). Equally confusing for historians are Sir John Doveton (1768–1847) and Sir John Doveton (1782–1857), who both fought in India, as did General Sir Henry Norman (1818–1899) and Field Marshal Sir Henry Norman (1826–1904).

While American commanders are commonly credited with their middle initial, even more distinction is needed in the case of Henry H. (Hastings) Sibley (1811–1891), who fought the Sioux in Minnesota and Dakota and served as a General in the Union army, while Henry H. (Hopkins) Sibley (1816–1886) was a Confederate General in the same war. A similar American example of the need for further distinction is General James Henry Lane (1833–1907), who led a Confederate brigade in many key battles, while General James Henry "Jim" Lane (1814–1866) was an anti-slavery campaigner who commanded Kansas militia and was later a US Senator.

For ranks and titles, the objective has been to use the rank or title at the time of the particular battle. For example, Stephan Dushan of Serbia is described as Crown Prince when he helped defeat the Byzantines at Velbuzhde (1330), while he is referred to as Emperor in his decisive victory over the Byzantine army at Adrianople (1355). Similarly, commanders are generally credited with their rank at the time of a particular battle, not their ultimate rank. For example, one of Britain's most famous soldiers is referred to as Colonel Arthur Wellesley in his early battles in Europe and India, as General Sir Arthur Wellesley at the start of the Peninsular Campaign, as Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington.

I have tried to use the same principle of simplicity in other combinations titles such as Field Marshal Sir Henry Norman after his elevation to the peerage following the great victory at Talavera de la Reina (1809) and as the Duke of Wellington in the Waterloo Campaign of 1815.

At a broader level, in the interests of brevity, the courtesy rank of General is used throughout, rather than Lieutenant General, Brigadier General and so on. For the same reason, naval flag officers are referred to as Admiral, not Vice Admiral or Rear Admiral, and Field Marshals generally appear simply as Marshal.

The selection of who to name as commander can also be a challenge for such brief battle entries—whether to identify the national military commander or the overall army commander or the field commander. In general, it is the field commander who has been identified.

Accuracy

Military historians and military history enthusiasts are notoriously keen to identify "mistakes" in their field—from arguments about which was in fact the "last cavalry charge in battle" or "the largest tank battle in history," to movie anachronisms such as the 1915-model Webley revolver reportedly carried by Stanley Baker in the movie Zulu, set at Rorke's Drift in 1879.

It is essential, however, to distinguish between errors of facts and differences of opinion. The preceding discussion of the "correct" name for battles, the "correct" date and even the "correct" location illustrates just a few of the challenging areas which may provide a rich source of claimed "mistakes." Similarly, the reporting of casualties in any particular battle can be highly contentious and politically charged. Apart from the ever-present elements of propaganda and nationalistic exaggeration, even the "facts" can be open to interpretation. A good illustration is provided by the air battle over Namsi during the Korean War. The official American record correctly says three B-29 bombers were "shot down." However, two crash-landed after the raid and two more were so badly damaged that they were scrapped. So the Russian record of the same action equally correctly says seven American bombers were "destroyed."

For every battle recorded in this book, extensive effort has been made to cross-reference as many sources as possible for academic and historic consensus and consistency. But even this is difficult. For, as Dr Samuel Johnson said, "Many things which are false are transmitted from book to book and gain credit in the world." Indeed, the research for this project revealed many cases where a clear mistake made in one book was picked up and repeated in others. But, as Napoleon Bonaparte himself said, "What is history but a fable agreed upon." Where there is legitimate disagreement among authorities, there is sometimes little choice but to make a judgment based on the available information. In this respect, a good option is sometimes to fall back on what Lieutenant-Colonel Alfred H. Burne rather nicely calls "Inherent Military Probability" (1952).

Beyond these matters of opinion and legitimate debate, however, there is the reality that in any project of this scope and scale, it is inevitable that there will be errors of fact, despite the extensive cross-referencing of sources, checking of transcription and extensive review by experts in their respective historic periods. Some of the hundreds of individuals, institutions and libraries who kindly provided invaluable assistance are acknowledged below, but all opinions, interpretations and details—right or wrong—remain the sole responsibility of the author. Any legitimate corrections or suggested additional battles will of course be welcome for future editions.

Acknowledgments

Scores of scholars, historians, researchers and enthusiasts around the world (not to mention dozens of mainly anonymous librarians, especially those at the State Library of Victoria) have contributed to this project, particularly in tracking down obscure details such as the full names of lesser known commanders and the exact location and geographic relationship of obscure battlefields. This help was especially appreciated in relation to battles in Central and Eastern Europe, many of which are little known in the mainstream English-language literature.

The following are particularly acknowledged and thanked:

Bob Babcock (22nd Infantry Regiment Society, Marietta, Georgia), John Beauval (Ghent, Belgium), Dr Valdis Berzins (Institute of History of Latvia, Riga), Bernard Browne (National 1798 Centre, Enniscorthy, Ireland), James Burd (Italian-American Military Collector's Association), Scott Chafin (Houston, Texas), Cheat Mountain Club (West Virginia), Jose Correia (Estarreja, Portugal), Professor Rafe de Crespigny (Australian National University, Canberra), Holger Doebold (Spain), Dr Srilal Fernando (Ceylon Society, Melbourne, Australia), Goran Frilund (Nykarleby, Finland), Dr Femme Gaastra (Leiden University, Holland), Chris George (Journal of the War of 1812, Baltimore), Wilma Goosen (University Library of Amsterdam, Maastricht), Slawek Grzechnik (California), Mike Guidry (Church Point, Louisiana), Natalya Gutina (Petrozavodsk, Russia), Scott Hartwig (Gettysburg National Military Park), Herki Helves (Viljandi Museum, Estonia), Ara Hakopian (Moscow), Tom Holmburg (Chicago), Esben Høstager (Copenhagen, Denmark), Dr Dexter Hoyos (Sydney University), Chris Hunt (Leicester, England), Ian Jackson (San Francisco), Henrik Stissing Jensen (Danish National Archives, Copenhagen), J. L. Keene (South African National Museum of Military History, Johannesburg), Mikail Khvostov (Russia), Chris Kimball (Orlando, Florida), Jüri Kivimäe (University of Toronto), Bill Latta (USA), Martin Liechty (Zurich), Dr Stewart Lone (Australian Defence Force Academy, Canberra), Philip Mackie (Seven Years War Association, England), Gordon Mackinlay (Sydney, Australia), Adjutant Emilio Condado Madera (Foreign Legion Museum, Aubagne, France), Joan Marsh (South African Military History Society, Kengray), Lidia Martinez (Madrid, Spain), Dr Pat McCarthy (Military History Society of Ireland, Dublin), Earl McGill (Tucson, Arizona), Alexander Mikaberidze (Mississippi State University), Michel Moerenhout (Royal Museum of the Army and Military History, Brussels), Linda Morton-Keithley (Idaho State Historical Society), George Nafziger (West Chester, Ohio), Soeren Noerby (Royal Danish Naval Museum, Copenhagen), Jean-Marie Piquart (Nancy, France), George Razutov (Moscow), Professor Merle Ricklefs (Melbourne University), Bernabe

Saiz (Logrona, Spain), Iwona Sakowicz (University of Gdansk, Poland), Dan Schorr (Maine), Nikolay Semibratov (Russia), Steven H. Smith (California), Julie Somay (Commonwealth War Graves Commission), 8th Tennessee Infantry Reenactment Unit, J. M. Toledo (Leioa, Spain), Geert van Uythoven (Willemstad, Holland), Bernhard Voykowitsch (Vienna), John Wilson (Wellington, New Zealand), Neil Wood (HMS Charybdis Association), Kate Woods (National Army Museum, London), Alexander Zhmodikov (St Petersburg).

Chronological Reference Guide

This semi-chronological reference guide contains every named battle in the main alphabetical section, sorted by the earliest battle recorded in any particular war. The reference guide also has chronological entries for a small number of selected wars which do not have specific recorded battles, but which remain sufficiently significant to be included in a separate appendix (pages 1139 to 1146).

Battles of the Ancient World to 600 AD

Egyptian-Syrian Wars: Megiddo, 1468 BC

Egyptian-Hittite Wars: Kadesh, 1275 BC

Trojan War: Troy, 1184 BC

Philistine-Israel Wars: Eben-ezer, 1050 BC; Michmash, 1013 BC; Mount Gilboa, 1010 BC

Wars of the Western Zhou: Muye, 1045 BC; Zongzhou, 771 BC

Early Assyrian Wars: Qarqar, 854 BC

Nubian Conquest of Egypt, 750–730 BC. See Appendix

1st Messenian War, 736–716 BC. See Appendix

Lelantine War, 725–700 BC. See Appendix

Assyrian Wars: Samaria, 724–722 BC; Qarqar, Raphia, 720 BC; Eltekeh, 700 BC; Khalule, 691 BC; Khanigalbat, 681 BC; Azotus, 659–630 BC; Nineveh, 653 BC; Babylon (Iraq), 650–648 BC

Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era: Xuge, 707 BC; Han, 645 BC; Hong, 638 BC; Chengpu, 632 BC; Yao, 627 BC; Bi, 597 BC; An, 589 BC; Yanling, 575 BC; Biyang, 563 BC; Boju, 506 BC; Zuili, 496 BC; Fuqiao, 494 BC; Lizhe, 478 BC; Suzhou, 475–473 BC

Rise of Argos: Hysiae, 669 BC

2nd Messenian War, 650–630 BC. See Appendix

Babylon's Wars of Conquest: Nineveh, 612 BC; Harran, 610 BC; Carchemish, 605 BC; Jerusalem, 597 BC; Jerusalem, 587–586 BC

Egyptian Conquest of Judah: Megiddo, 609 BC

Egyptian-Nubian War: Napata, 593 BC

1st Sacred War: Crisa, 590 BC

Median-Lydian War: Halys, 585 BC

Median-Persian War, 553–550 BC. See Appendix

Persian-Lydian War: Pteria, 547 BC; Sardis, Thymbria, 546 BC

Spartan-Argive Wars: Champions, 547 BC; Sepeia, 494 BC

Persian-Babylonian War: Babylon (Iraq), 541–539 BC

Carthaginian-Greek Wars: Alalia, 535 BC

Persian Invasion of Egypt: Pelusium, 525 BC

Persian War of Succession, 521–519 BC. See Appendix

Persia's Scythian Expedition, 516–509 BC. See Appendix

Early Roman-Etruscan Wars: Rome, 505 BC; Lake Regillus, 496 BC; Cremera, 477 BC

Greco-Persian Wars: Ephesus, 498 BC; Salamis (Cyprus), 497 BC; Lade, 494 BC; Marathon, 490 BC; Artemisium, Salamis (Greece), Thermopylae, 480 BC; Mycale, Plataea, 479 BC; Eurymedon, 466 BC; Papremis, 459 BC; Prosopitis, 456–454 BC; Salamis (Cyprus), 450 BC

Carthaginian Invasion of Sicily: Himera, 480 BC

Syracusan-Etruscan War: Cumae, 474 BC

Arcadian War: Tegea, 473 BC; Dipaea, 417 BC

Wars of the Delian League: Drabescus, 465–464 BC; Thasos, 465–463 BC

3rd Messenian War, 464–455 BC. See Appendix

1st Peloponnesian War: Aegina, 458–457 BC; Oenophyta, Tanagra, 457 BC; Coronea, 447 BC

2nd Sacred War, 449–448 BC. See Appendix

Corinthian-Corcyrean War: Leucimne, 435 BC; Sybota, 433 BC

Great Peloponnesian War: Potidaea, 432–429 BC; Methone, 431 BC; Naupactus, Patras, Spartolus, 429 BC; Plataea, 429–427 BC; Mytilene, 428–427 BC; Corcyra, 427 BC; Olpae, Tanagra, 426 BC; Pylos-Sphacteria, Solygeia, 425 BC; Delium, Megara, 424 BC; Amphipolis, 422 BC; Mantinea, 418 BC; Syracuse, 415 BC; Syracuse, 414–413 BC; Syracuse Harbour, 413 BC; Chios, 412 BC; Miletus, 412 BC; Cynossema, Eretria, Syme, 411 BC; Cyzicus, 410 BC; Arginusae, Notium, 406 BC; Aegospotami, 405 BC; Athens, 404 BC; Munychia, 403 BC

Wars of the Roman Republic: Algidus, 431 BC

Roman-Etruscan Wars: Fidenae, 426 BC; Veii, 405–396 BC

Carthaginian-Syracusan Wars: Himera, Selinus, 409 BC; Acragas, 406 BC

Persian Civil War: Cunaxa, 401 BC

1st Dionysian War: Motya, 397–396 BC; Syracuse, 396 BC

Corinthian War: Haliartus, 395 BC; Corinth, 394–392 BC; Cnidus, Coronea, Nemea, 394 BC; Lechaeum, 390 BC; Cremaste, 388 BC

Gallic Invasion of Italy: Allia, 390 BC

2nd Dionysian War: Elleporus, 389 BC

3rd Dionysian War: Cabala, Cronium, 383 BC

Wars of the Greek City-States: Naxos, 376 BC; Tegyra, 375 BC; Leuctra, 371 BC; Midea, 368 BC; Cynoscephalae, 364 BC; Mantinea, 362 BC; Peparethus, 361 BC

4th Dionysian War: Lilybaeum, 368–367 BC

1st Greek Social War: Chios, 357 BC; Embata, Potidaea, 356 BC

3rd Sacred War: Methone, 355–354 BC; Neon, 354 BC; Thessaly, 353 BC; Pagasae, 352 BC; Olynthus, 348 BC

China's Era of the Warring States: Guiling, 353 BC; Maling, 341 BC; Jimo, 279 BC; Changping, 260 BC; Handan, 259–258 BC; Pingyang, 234 BC

Timoleon's War: Adranum, 344 BC; Crimisus, 340 BC

1st Samnite War: Mount Gaurus, 342 BC

Latin War: Suessa, 339 BC

4th Sacred War: Perinthus, 339 BC; Chaeronea, 338 BC

Archidamian Wars: Mandonium, 338 BC

Conquests of Alexander the Great: Thebes, 335 BC; Granicus, Halicarnassus, Miletus, 334 BC; Issus, 333 BC; Gaza, Tyre, 332 BC; Gaugamela, 331 BC; Jaxartes, 329 BC; Aornos, Sogdian Rock, 327 BC; Hydaspes, 326 BC

Macedonian Conquests: Megalopolis, Pandosia, 331 BC

Lamian War: Lamia, 323–322 BC; Amorgos, Crannon, 322 BC

2nd Samnite War: Caudine Forks, 321 BC; Lautulae, 315 BC; Tarracina, 314 BC; Lake Vadimo, 310 BC; Bovianum, 305 BC

Wars of the Diadochi: Memphis, 321 BC; Paraetacene, 317 BC; Tyre, 315–314 BC; Gaza, 312 BC; Salamis (Cyprus), 306 BC; Rhodes, 305–304 BC; Ipsus, 301 BC; Corupedion, 281 BC

Wars of the Mauryan Empire, 321–232 BC. See Appendix

Agathoclean War: Himera River, 311 BC; Syracuse, 311–307 BC; Carthage (Tunisia), 310–307 BC

3rd Samnite War: Camerinum, Sentinum, 295 BC; Aquilonia, 293 BC

Later Roman-Etruscan War: Arretium, Lake Vadimo, 283 BC

Damascene War, 280–275 BC. See Appendix

Pyrrhic War: Heraclea (Lucania), 280 BC; Asculum (Apulia), 279 BC; Lilybaeum, 277–275 BC; Beneventum, 275 BC; Argos, 272 BC

1st Syrian War, 274–271 BC. See Appendix

Chremonidian War: Corinth, 265 BC; Athens, 264–262 BC

1st Punic War: Messana, 264 BC; Acragas, 262 BC; Lipara, Mylae, 260 BC; Adys, Ecnomus, 256 BC; Hermaeum, Tunis, 255 BC; Panormus (Sicily), 251 BC; Lilybaeum, 250–241 BC; Drepanum, 249 BC; Aegates Islands, 241 BC

2nd Syrian War, 260–255 BC. See Appendix

Macedonian-Egyptian Wars: Cos, 254 BC; Andros, 245 BC

3rd Syrian War: Antioch (Syria), 244 BC

Wars of the Achaean League: Corinth, 243 BC; Pellene, 241 BC

Truceless War: Utica, Bagradas, 240 BC; Saw, Tunis, Leptis, 238 BC

War of Demetrius, 239–229 BC. See Appendix

War of the Brothers: Ancyra, 235 BC

Pergamum-Seleucid Wars: Pergamum, 230 BC; Lake Koloe, Harpasus, 229 BC

1st Illyrian War: Paxos, 229 BC

Cleomenic War: Ladoceia, Mount Lyceum, 227 BC; Hecatombaeum, 226 BC; Sellasia, 222 BC

Gallic Wars in Italy: Faesulae, Telamon, 225 BC; Adda, 223 BC; Clastidium, 222 BC; Cremona, Placentia, 200 BC; Mincio, 197 BC; Lake Como, 196 BC; Mutina, 193 BC

Syrian Civil War: Apollonia, 220 BC

2nd Punic War: Tagus, 220 BC; Saguntum, 219 BC; Chevelu, Tarraco, Ticinus, Trebbia, White Rock, 218 BC; Ebro, Lake Trasimene, 217 BC; Cannae, Nola, 216 BC; Ibera, Nola, 215 BC; Beneventum, Casilinum, Leontini, Nola, 214 BC; Syracuse, 213–212 BC; Beneventum, Capua, Herdonea, Saguntum, Silarus, 212 BC; Baetis, Capua, Ilurci, 211 BC; Herdonea, Numistro, 210 BC; Asculum, Apulia, New Carthage, 209 BC; Baecula, Bantia, Venusia, 208 BC; Gibraltar, Grumentum, Metaurus, 207 BC; Ilipa, 206 BC; Locri, 205 BC; Agathocles, Crotona, Liguria, 204 BC; Bagradas, Utica, 203 BC; Zama, 202 BC

2nd Illyrian War: Dimale, 219 BC

2nd Greek Social War, 219–217 BC. See Appendix

4th Syrian War: Raphia, 217 BC

1st Macedonian War, 215–205 BC. See Appendix

Early Syrian-Parthian War: Arius, 208 BC

Fall of the Qin Dynasty: Julu, 207 BC; Xianyang, 207 BC

Spartan-Achaean Wars: Mantinea, 207 BC; Scotitas, 199 BC; Argos, 195 BC; Gytheum, 194 BC; Mount Barbosthene, 192 BC

Chu-Han War: Jingxing, Pengcheng, 205 BC; Chenggao, 204 BC; Gaixia, 202 BC

2nd Macedonian War: Chios, Lade, 201 BC; Abydos, 200 BC; Aous, 198 BC; Cynoscephalae, 197 BC

Wars of the Former Han: Pingcheng, 200 BC; Dayuan, 102 BC; Kangju, 36 BC

5th Syrian War: Paneas, 198 BC

Roman-Syrian War: Corycus, Thermopylae, 191 BC; Eurymedon, Magnesia, Myonnesus, 190 BC

3rd Macedonian War: Callicinus, 171 BC; Pydna, 168 BC

Maccabean War: Beth Horon, Beth Zur, Emmaus, Gophna, 166 BC; Beth Zachariah, 164 BC; Adasa, Capharsalma, Elasa, 161 BC

Lusitanian Wars, 154–138 BC. See Appendix

Celtiberian Wars, 153–133 BC. See Appendix

Seleucid Dynastic War: Ptolemais, 150 BC

4th Macedonian War: Pydna, 149 BC

3rd Punic War: Carthage (Tunisia), 148–146 BC

Roman-Achaean War: Corinth, Scarpheia, 146 BC

Syrian Dynastic War: Oenaparus, 145 BC

Syrian-Parthian War, 141–139 BC. See Appendix

1st Servile War: Enna, Tauromenium, 133 BC

Numantian War: Numantia, 133 BC

Later Syrian-Parthian War: Zab, 130 BC; Ecbatana, 129 BC

Rome's Gallic Wars: Avignon, Isara, 121 BC; Noreia, 113 BC; Provence, 109 BC; Aginnum, 107 BC; Arausio, 105 BC; Adige, Aquae Sextiae, 102 BC; Vercellae, 101 BC

Chinese Conquest of Vietnam, 111 BC. See Appendix

Jugurthine War: Suthul, 109 BC; Muthul, 108 BC; Thala, 107 BC; Cirta, 106 BC

2nd Servile War, 104–99 BC. See Appendix

Roman Social War: Acerrae, Teanum, Tolenus, 90 BC; Asculum (Marche), Fucine Lake, Pompeii, 89 BC

1st Mithridatic War: Rhodes, 88 BC; Piraeus, 87–86 BC; Chaeronea, Orchomenus, 86 BC; Miletopolis, Tenedos, 85 BC

Sullan Civil War: Mount Tifata, 83 BC; Aesis, Colline Gate, Faventia, Sacriportus, 82 BC

2nd Mithridatic War: Halys, 82 BC

Sertorian War: Baetis, 80 BC; Anas, 79 BC; Ilerda, 78 BC; Lauron, 76 BC; Italica, Murviedro, Sucro, Turia, 75 BC; Calahorra, 74 BC

Lepidus Revolt, 77 BC. See Appendix

3rd Mithridatic War: Chalcedon, 74 BC; Cyzicus, Lemnos, 73 BC; Cabira, 72 BC; Tigranocerta, 69 BC; Artaxata, 68 BC; Zela, 67 BC; Lycus, 66 BC

3rd Servile War: Silarus, 71 BC

Catiline Revolt: Pistoria, 62 BC

Rome's Later Gallic Wars: Admagetobriga, 61 BC; Mühlhausen, Arar, Bibracte, 58 BC; Aduatuca, Aisne, Sambre, 57 BC; Morbihan Gulf, 56 BC; Aduatuca, 54 BC; Agendicum, Alesia, Avaricum, Gergovia, 52 BC

Roman Invasion of Britain: Deal, 55 BC; Wheathampstead, 54 BC

Roman-Parthian Wars: Carrhae, 53 BC; Gindarus, 38 BC; Phraaspa, 36 BC

Wars of the First Triumvirate: Bagradas, 49 BC; Curicta, 49 BC; Ilerda, 49 BC; Massilia, 49 BC; Utica, 49 BC; Dyrrhachium, 49–48 BC; Messana, 48 BC; Pharsalus, 48 BC; Vibo, 48 BC; Alexandria, 48–47 BC; Nile, 47 BC; Tauris, 47 BC; Ruspina, 46 BC; Thapsus, 46 BC; Munda, 45 BC

Roman-Pontian Wars: Nicopolis (Armenia), 48 BC; Zela, 47 BC

Wars of the Second Triumvirate: Mutina, 44–43 BC; Forum Gallorum, 43 BC; Philippi (Macedonia), 42 BC; Perusia, 41–40 BC; Cumae, 38 BC; Mylae, Naulochus, Tauromenium, 36 BC; Metulum, Siscia, 34 BC; Actium, Methone, 31 BC

Roman-Nubian War: Napata, 23 BC

Rome's Germanic Wars: Lippe, 11 BC; Teutoburgwald, 9; Weser, 16

Fall of the Xin Dynasty: Kunyang, 23

Wars of the Later Han: Changlu, 29; Chengdu, 36; Lang Bac, 42; Jiluo Mountain, 90

Roman Conquest of Britain: Medway, 43; Caer Caradoc, 50; Boudicca, 61; Loch Ore, 83; Mons Graupius, 84

Later Roman-Parthian Wars: Artaxata, 58; Arsanias, 62

Jewish Rising against Rome: Beth Horon, 66; Jotapata, 67; Jerusalem, 70; Masada, 72–73

Vitellian Civil War: Bedriacum, 69

1st Satavahana-Saka War, 80–106. See Appendix

Domitian's Dacian War: Tapae, 86; Tapae, 88

1st Dacian War: Tapae, 101; Sarmizegethusa, 102

2nd Dacian War: Sarmizegethusa, 105

2nd Jewish Rising, 115–117. See Appendix

2nd Satavahana-Saka War, 126–131. See Appendix

Bar-Cocheba's Revolt: Aelia, 133–135

German Invasion of Italy: Aquileia, 166

Wars of Emperor Severus: Perinthus, 191; Byzantium, 193–196; Cyzicus, Issus, Nicaea, 194; Lugdunum, 197; Ctesiphon, 198; Atra, 199

Wars of the Three Kingdoms: Jieqiao, 191; Guandu, 200; White Wolf Mountain, 207; Changban, Red Cliffs, 208; Huayin, 211; Dingjun, 219; Fancheng, 219; Yiling, 222

Roman Military Civil Wars: Immae, 218; Carthage (Tunisia), 238; Aquileia, 240; Verona, 249; Mursa, 260; Illyricum, 261; Mediolanum, 268; Chalons, 273; Margus, 285; Alexandria, Silchester, 296

Persian-Parthian War: Hormizdagan, 224

Roman-Persian Wars: Resaena, 243; Misiche, 244; Edessa, 260; Callinicum, 297; Erzurum, 298

1st Gothic War: Nicopolis ad Istrum, Philippopolis, 250; Abrittus, 251

2nd Gothic War: Nestus, 267

Roman-Alemannic Wars: Lake Benacus, 268; Placentia, Fano, Pavia, 271

3rd Gothic War: Nish, 269

Roman-Palmyrean War: Immae, 271; Emessa, Palmyra, 272

Roman Wars of Succession: Ravenna, 307; Milvian Bridge, Turin, Verona, 312; Tzirallum, 313; Cibalae, 316; Campus Ardiensis, 317; Adrianople, Chrysopolis, Hellespont, 324; Aquileia, 340

Wars of the Sixteen Kingdoms Era: Luoyang, 311; Chang'an, 316; Luoyang, 328; Fangtou, 369; Fei River, 383; Shenhe, 395; Zhengrong, 404

Later Roman-Persian Wars: Nisibis, 338; Singara, 348; Nisibis, 350; Amida, 359; Ctesiphon, Maiozamalacha, Pirisabora, 363

Aksum-Meroite War: Atbara, 350

Later Roman Military Civil Wars: Mursa, Pavia, 351; Mons Seleucus, 353; Aquileia, Siscia, 388; Frigidus, 394

Alemannic Invasion of Roman Gaul: Rheims, Sens, 356; Argentoratum, 357; Chalons, 366; Solicinium, 368; Argentoratum, 378

4th Gothic War: Noviodunum, 369

5th Gothic War: Ad Salices, Marcianopolis, 377; Adrianople, 378

Gildo's Rebellion: Theveste, 398

Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire: Asta, Pollentia, 402; Verona, 403; Faesulae, 405; Rome, 408–410; Ostia, 409; Massilia, 413; Arles, 425; Arles, 435; Narbonne, 436–437; Toulouse, 439; Orbigo, 456; Toulouse, 458; Orleans, 463; Bergamo, 464; Bolia, Deols, 469; Arles, 471

Later Roman Wars of Succession: Arles, Vienne, 411; Ravenna, 425; Ravenna, 432; Placentia, 456; Cotyaeum, 491

Roman-Vandal Wars: Tarraco, 422; Hippo Regius, 430–431; Carthage (Tunisia), 439; Rome, 455; Corsica, 456; Garigliano, 457; Cartagena (Spain), 460; Cape Bon, 468

Vandal-Suevic War: Merida, 428

Roman-Frankish Wars: Helena, 431

Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire: Sirmium, 441; Asemus, Chersonesus, Constantinople, 443; Utus, 447; Chalons, 451; Aquileia, 452

Wars of the Six Dynasties: Huatai, 450; Xuyi, 451; Jiankang, 548–549; Jiankang, 589

Christian Rising in Armenia: Avarayr, 451

Hun-Ostrogoth Wars: Nedao, 454; Bassianae, 468

Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain: Aegelsthrep, 456; Creccanford, 457; Wippedesfleet, 465; Cymensore, 477; Mearcredesburn, 485; Anderida, 491; Mons Badonicus, 497; Charford, 508; Camlann, 515; Charford, 519; Carisbrook, 530; Searobyrg, 552; Beranbyrg, 556; Wibbandun, 568; Bedcanford, 571; Arthuret, 573; Deorham, 577; Fethanleag, 583

Alemannic Invasion of Northern Italy: Campi Cannini, 457

Hun Invasion of India: Indus, 458

Fall of the Western Roman Empire: Rome, 472; Ravenna, 475; Pavia, 476; Soissons, 486

Goth Invasion of Italy: Sontius, Verona, 489; Adda, Faenza, 490; Ravenna, 490–493

Frankish-Alemannic War: Zulpich, 496

Burgundian-Frankish War: Avignon, Dijon, Vienne, 500; Vézeronce, 524; Autun, 532

Byzantine-Persian Wars: Amida, 502–503; Apadna, Edessa, 503; Dara, 530; Callinicum, 531; Antioch (Syria), Dara, 540; Edessa, 544; Petra, 548–549; Petra, 551; Dara, 573; Melitene, 576; Solachon, 586; Hyrcanian Rock, Martyropolis, 588; Araxes, 589; Ganzak, 591; Antioch (Syria), 611; Jerusalem, 614; Ophlimos, 622; Dwin, 624; Arcesh, Sarus, 625; Nineveh, 627

Gothic War in Italy: Horreum Margi, 505; Rome, 537–538; Ravenna, 539–540; Rome, 545–546; Sinigaglia, 551; Taginae, 552; Mount Lactarius, 553; Casilinum, 554

Visigothic-Frankish Wars: Vouillé, 507; Arles, 508–510

Aksum-Sabaean War: Zabid, 525

Wei Dynastic Wars: Ye, 528; Hanling, 532; Shayuan, 537; Heqiao, 538; Mangshan, 543; Yubi, 546; Yingchuan, 548–549; Pingyang, 576–577; Taiyuan, 577

Nika Insurrection: Constantinople, 532

Vandal War in Africa: Ad Decimum, Tricameron, 533

Sino-Vietnamese Wars: Chu Dien, 547; Giao-chou, 602; Tra-khe, 605

Byzantine-Balkan Wars: Melanthius, 559; Sirmium, 580–582; Thessalonica, 586; Viminacium, 601; Thessalonica, 615; Thessalonica, 618; Constantinople, 626

"Star" Wars: Tikal, 562; Dos Pilas, 679; Calakmul, 695

Lombard Invasion of Italy: Pavia, 569–572

Frankish Imperial Wars: Carcassonne, 589; Wogastisburg, 631

Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars: Lindisfarne, 590; Wodnesbeorg, 592; Cathraeth, 598; Daegsaston, 603; Beandun, 614; Chester, 615; Idle, 617; Cirencester, 628; Morpeth, 629; Heathfield, 633; Heavenfield, 634; Maserfield, 641; Bradford, 652; Winwaed, 655; Penselwood, 658; Pontesbury, 661; Badon, 665; Biedenheafde, 674; Trent, 679; Dunnichen Moss, 685; Wodnesbeorg, 715; Camel, 721; Somerton, 733; Burford, 752; Seccandun, 757; Otford, 775; Bensington, 779

Medieval Warfare, 600–1500

Persian-Arab Wars: Dhu-Qar, 610

Indian Dynastic Wars: Pullalur, 610; Narmada, 620; Vatapi, 642; Kanchi, 655; Vilande, 731; Kanchi, 740; Khandesh, 752; Pennagadam, 775

Sino-Korean Wars: Salsu, 612; Ansi Sung, 644; Sabi, 660; Paekchon, 663; Pyongyang, 668

Rise of the Tang Dynasty: Huoyi, 617; Qianshuiyuan, Yanshi, 618; Luoyang, 620–621; Hulao, 621

Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed: Badr, 624; Ohud, 625; Medina, 627; Khaybar, 628; Hunain, Mecca, 630

Muslim Conquest of Syria: Muta, 629; Ajnadin, Bosra, Marj Rahit, Wadi al-Arabah, Yarmuk, 634; Damascus, Fihl, Marj as-Suffar, 635; Yarmuk, 636; Jerusalem, 638; Aleppo, 639

Tang Imperial Wars: Iron Mountain, 630; Sunqu, 641; Dafeichuan, 670; Gilgit, 747; Talas, 751

Muslim Civil Wars: Buzakha, Dhu al Quassa, 632; Akraba, 633; Camel, 656; Siffin, 657; Karbala, 680; Harra, Mecca, Medina, 683; Marj Rahit, 684; Mecca, 692; Dayr al Jamajm, Maskin, 701; Akra, 721; Aqua Portora, 742; Ain Diar, 744; Karbala, 749; Zab, 750; Medina, 762; Bakhamra, 763

Muslim Conquest of Iraq: Hafir (Iraq), Hira, Mazar, Ullais, Walaja, 633; Ain Tamar, Babylon (Iraq), Bridge, Firadz, Nimaraq, 634; Buwayb, 635; Qadisiyya, 636; Jalula, Madain, 637

Muslim Conquest of Egypt: Heliopolis, Pelusium, 640; Babylon (Egypt), 640–641; Alexandria, 641–642

Muslim Conquest of Iran: Nehavend, 641

Egyptian-Nubian War, 641–652. See Appendix

Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars: Alexandria, 645; Mount Phoenix, 654; Amorium, 669; Syllaeum, 677; Sebastopolis, 692; Constantinople, 717–718; Adrianople, 718; Akroinos, 739

Muslim Conquest of North Africa: Sufetula, 647; Biskra, 683; Mams, 688; Carthage (Tunisia), 697–698

Sino-Indian War: Kanauj, 648

Jinshin War: Yamazaki, 672

Frankish Civil Wars: Tertry, 687

Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars: Anchialus, 708; Marcellae, 759; Anchialus, 763; Marcellae, 792; Verbitza, 811; Versinikia, 813

Muslim Conquest of Spain: Ecija, Guadalete, 711; Merida, Segoyuela, 713; Covadonga, 718

Muslim Conquest of Sind: Raor, 712; Navsari, 738

Rise of Charles Martel: Ambleve, 716; Vincy, 717; Soissons, 719

Muslim Invasion of France: Toulouse, 721; Bordeaux, Tours, 732

Danish War of Succession: Bravalla, 735

Berber Rebellion: El Asnam, 740; Badkura, 741; Wadi Salit, 742; Tawurgah, 761

An Lu-shan Rebellion: Luoyang, 755; Chang'an, 756; Suiyang, Xiangji, 757; Xiangzhou, 758; Luoyang, 762

Later Tang Imperial Wars: Chang'an, 763; Fengtian, 783; Caizhou, 817

Wars of Charlemagne: Roncesvalles, 778; Suntel Hill, 782; Detmold, 783

Byzantine-Muslim Wars: Hadath, 778–779; Samalu, 780; Nicomedia, 782; Crasus, 805; Heraclea (Anatolia), 806; Syracuse, 827–828; Palermo, 830–831; Amorium, Dazimon, 838; Messina, 843; Ostia, 849; Castrogiovanni, 859; Poson, 863; Bari, 871; Syracuse, 877–878; Taormina, 902

Viking Raids on Britain: Lindisfarne, 793; Carhampton, 835; Hingston Down, 837; Carhampton, 843; Burnham, 848; Aclea, Sandwich, Thanet, 851

Later Indian Dynastic Wars: Bundelkhand, Monghyr, 800; Tellaru, Vengi, 830; Vingavelli, 850; Arisil, 860; Madura, 862; Sripurambiyam, 880; Kanauj, 916; Vellur, 917; Takkolam, 949; Kalighatta, 972; Koppam, 1054; Kudalsangamam, 1063; Talakad, 1116

Muslim War of Succession: Baghdad, 809–811

Shi'ite Rebellion, 814–819. See Appendix

Later Wars of Wessex: Ellandun, Gafulford, 825

Frankish War of Succession: Fontenoy (France), 841

Scottish Dynastic Wars: Logie, 844; Duncrub, 965

Breton Rebellion: Ballon, 845

Viking Wars in Britain: York, 866–867; Hoxne, Englefield, 870; Ashdown, Basing, Merton, Reading, Wilton, 871; Dollar, 875; Wareham, 876; Inverdovat, 877; Chippenham, Countisbury Hill, Edington, 878; Farnham, 893; Buttington, 894; Dunnottar, 900; Wimborne, 902; Holme, 905; Tettenhall, 910; Wednesfield, 911; Corbridge, 914; Derby, 917; Corbridge, Tempsford, 918; Brunanburh, 937; Castleford, 948; Stainmore, 954

Paulician War, 867–872. See Appendix

Christian Recapture of Zamora: Zamora, 873

Carolingian Imperial Wars: Andernach, 876

Huang Chao Rebellion: Guangzhou, 879; Liangtian, 883; Chenzhou, 883–884

Viking Raids on Germany: Ebsdorf, 880; Dyle, La Gueule, 891

Viking Raids on France: Saucourt, 881; Paris, 885–886; Montfaucon, 886; Sens, 886–887

Zandj Slave Rebellion: Al-Mukhtara, 883

German Imperial Wars: Meuse, 900; Brennaburg, 928; Lenzen, 929; Andernach, 939

Magyar Invasion of Germany: Pressburg, 907; Augsburg, 910; Riade, 933; Lechfeld, 955

Later Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars: Anchialus, 917

Christian-Muslim Wars in Spain: San Esteban de Gormaz, 918; Val-de-Junquera, 920; Sanguesa, 924; Simancas, 939

Franco-Norman Wars: Soissons, 923; Laon, 941

Sack of Mecca: Mecca, 930

Muslim Civil War, 936–944. See Appendix

Sino-Annamese War: Bach Dang, 938

Masakado Uprising: Kojima, 940

Sumitomo Uprising: Hakata, 941

Muslim Civil War, 945–948. See Appendix

Wars of the Five Dynasties: Gaoping, 954

Later Viking Raids on Britain: Invercullen, 961; Luncarty, Tara, 980; Maldon, 991; Nairn, 1009; Mortlack, 1010; Clontarf, 1014

Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars: Crete, 961; Aleppo, 962; Adana, 964; Tarsus, 965; Aleppo, Antioch (Syria), 969; Amida, 973; Azaz, 1030; Edessa, 1031; Rometta, 1038

Muslim Civil War, 968–978. See Appendix

Byzantine-Russian Wars: Arcadiopolis, 970; Dorostalon, 971

Polish-German Wars: Cedynia, 972; Naklo, Psie Pole, 1109

Byzantine Military Rebellions: Pancalia, 978; Aquae Saravenae, 979; Abydos, 989

Later Christian-Muslim Wars in Spain: Rueda, 981; Calatanazar, 1002

Byzantine Wars of Tsar Samuel: Mount Haemus, 981; Trajan's Gate, 986; Spercheios, 996; Balathista, 1014

War of Leonese Succession: Portela, 982

Later German Imperial Wars: Cotrone, 982; Belkesheim, 983; Sant'Angelo, 998

Scandinavian National Wars: Hjorungavag, 985; Svolde, 1000; Nesjar, 1016

Muslim Conquest of Northern India: Lamghan, 989; Peshawar, 1001; Bhera, Waihand, 1006; Waihand, 1008; Thaneswar, 1011; Sharwa, 1019; Somnath, 1026; Hansi, 1037–1038

Afghan Wars of Succession: Ghazni, 998; Fatehabad, 1041

Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars: Merv, 999; Tarq, 1002; Uk, 1003; Balkh, 1008; Hazarasp, 1017; Samarkand, 1025; Sarjahan, 1029; Dabusiyya, 1032

German War of Succession: Creussen, 1003

Arduin's Wars, 1004–1014. See Appendix

Revolt of Baldwin of Flanders: Valenciennes, 1006–1007

Danish Conquest of England: Ashingdon, Penselwood, Sherston, 1016; Carham, 1018

Russian Dynastic Wars: Liubech, 1016; Bug, 1018; Alta, 1019; Nemiga, 1067; Alta, 1068; Kiev, 1069; Nezhatina Niva, 1078; Tripole, 1093; Chernigov, 1094

Norman Conquest of Southern Italy: Cannae, 1018; Montemaggiore, Monte Siricolo, Olivento, 1041; Monopoli, 1042; Civitate, 1053; Messina, 1061; Cerami, 1063; Misilmeri, 1068; Bari, 1068–1071; Palermo, 1071–1072; Syracuse, 1085

German Civil Wars: Vlaardingen, 1018; Unstrut, 1075; Merseburg, 1080; Warmstadt, 1113; Andernach, 1114; Welfesholze, 1115; Weinsberg, 1141

Chola-Pala War, 1021–1024. See Appendix

Norwegian Wars of Succession: Helgeaa, 1026; Stangebjerg, 1028; Stiklestad, 1030

Anglo-Welsh Wars: Ystradowen, 1032; Aberdare, 1093; Coleshill, 1157

French Barons' War: Bar-le-Duc, 1037

Spanish Territorial Wars: Tamaron, 1037; Atapuerca, 1054

Seljuk Wars of Expansion: Nishapur, 1037; Dandanaqan, 1040; Hasankale, 1048; Isfahan, 1050–1051; Tarq, 1051; Manzikert, 1054; Baghdad, 1055; Rayy, 1059; Kufah, 1060

Scottish War of Succession: Elgin, 1040; Dunsinane, 1054; Lumphanan, 1057; Essie, 1058

Later Byzantine Military Rebellions: Ostrovo, 1043; Constantinople, 1047

German-Magyar War: Raab, 1044

Rise of William of Normandy: Val-es-Dunes, 1047; Mortemer, 1054; Varaville, 1058

Fall of Ghana: Audaghost, 1054; Kumbi, 1076

Earlier Nine Years War: Torinomi, 1057; Kawasaki, 1058; Komatsu, Kuriyagawa, 1062

Early Christian Reconquest of Spain: Graus, 1063; Coimbra (Portugal), 1064; Cabra, 1079; Almenar, 1082; Ebro, 1084; Toledo (Spain), 1084–1085; Zallaka, 1086; Almodovar del Rio, 1091; Cuarte, Valencia (Valencia), 1093–1094; Alcoraz, 1096; Bairen, 1097; Mollerusa, 1102; Uclés, 1108; Valtierra, 1110; Saragossa, 1118; Cutanda, 1120; Arinsol, 1126; Cullera, 1129; Fraga, 1134; Tortosa, 1148; Alarcos, 1195; Las Navas de Tolosa, 1212; Cordova, 1236; Seville, 1248

Norwegian Invasion of England: Fulford, Stamford Bridge, 1066

Norman Conquest of Britain: Hastings, 1066; Exeter, 1068; Durham, 1069; York, 1069–1070; Ely, 1071; Norwich, 1075; Durham, 1080

War of the Three Sanchos: Viana, 1067

War of Castilian Succession: Lantada, 1068; Golpejerra, Zamora, 1072

Byzantine-Turkish Wars: Sebastia, 1070; Manzikert, 1071; Antioch (Syria), 1085; Aleppo, 1086; Cotyaeum, 1113; Philomelion, 1116; Myriocephalum, 1176

Franco-Frisian War: Cassel, 1071

Welsh Dynastic War: Bron yr Erw, 1075; Mynydd Carn, 1081; Llandudoch, Llechryd, 1088

Byzantine Wars of Succession: Nicaea, 1077; Calavryta, 1079

Norman Dynastic Wars: Gerberoi, 1080; Pevensey, Rochester, 1088; Bamburgh, 1095; Arundel, Bridgnorth, 1102; Tinchebrai, 1106; Brenneville, 1119; Bourgtherolde, 1126

1st Byzantine-Norman War: Dyrrhachium, 1081; Dyrrhachium, 1083; Corfu, Larissa, 1084

Later Three Years War: Numa, 1086; Kanazawa, 1087

Byzantine-Pecheneg Wars: Mount Leburnion, 1091; Eski Zagra, 1122

Anglo-Scottish Territorial Wars: Alnwick, 1093; Clitheroe, Standard, 1138

1st Crusade: Civetot, Wieselburg, Xerigordon, 1096; Albara, Antioch (Syria), Dorylaeum, Heraclea (Anatolia), Nicaea, Tarsus, 1097; Antioch (Syria), 1097–1098; Arqa, Edessa, Harenc, Jerusalem, Maarat an-Numan, Orontes, 1098; Ascalon, Jerusalem, 1099

Crusader-Muslim Wars: Melitene, 1100; Heraclea (Anatolia), Mersivan, Ramleh, 1101; Joppa, Ramleh, Tripoli (Lebanon), 1102; Acre, Harran, 1104; Artah, Ramleh, 1105; Khabar, 1107; Menbij, 1108; Tripoli (Lebanon), 1109; Beirut, Sidon, 1110; Tyre, 1110–1111; Tel-Danith, 1115; Antioch (Syria), 1119; Ascalon, 1123; Tyre, 1124; Azaz, 1125; Anazarbus, 1130; Edessa, 1144; Edessa, 1146; Inab, 1149; Ascalon, 1153; Baniyas, Mallaha, 1157; Artah, 1164; Montgisard, 1177; Baniyas, 1179

2nd Byzantine-Norman War: Dyrrhachium, 1107

Jurchen Invasion of Northern China: Songhua, 1114

Later Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars: Ghazni, 1117

Jin-Song Wars: Kaifeng, 1126–1127; Nanjing, 1129; Chenjia, Caishi, 1161; De'an, Xiangyang, 1206–1207

Portuguese War of Succession: Sao Mamede, 1128

War of Flemish Succession: Alost, Thielt, 1128

Moray Rebellion: Stracathro, 1130

Norman-Papal War: Garigliano, 1139

Christian Reconquest of Portugal: Ourique, 1139; Lisbon, Santarem, 1147; Alcacer do Sol, 1158; Alcacer do Sol, 1217

Portuguese-Castilian Wars: Arcos de Valdevez, 1140

English Period of Anarchy: Lincoln, Oxford, Winchester, 1141; Wilton, 1143; Wallingford, 1153

Wars of the Great Seljuk Sultanate: Samarkand, 1141; Balkh, 1153; Shahr Rey, 1194

2nd Crusade: Dorylaeum, 1147; Damascus, 1148; Mopsuestia, 1152

Ghor-Ghazni Wars: Ghazni, 1148; Ghazni, 1151

Frederick's 1st Expedition to Italy: Tortona, 1155

1st Byzantine-Sicilian War: Apulia, 1155; Brindisi, 1156

Hogen War: Shirakawa, 1156

Danish War of Succession: Grathe Heath, 1157

Frederick's 2nd Expedition to Italy: Cassano, Milan, 1158; Crema, 1159–1160; Milan, 1161–1162

Heiji War: Rokuhara, 1160

Swedish Wars of Succession: Upsala, 1160; Visingo, 1167; Gestilren, 1210

Crusader Invasion of Egypt: Alexandria, El Ashmunien, 1167; Damietta, 1169

Wars of the Lombard League: Rome, 1167; Ancona, 1173; Alessandria, 1174–1175; Legnano, 1176

Danish Wars of Expansion: Arkona, 1168; Stralsund, 1184; Reval, 1219; Molln, 1225; Bornhoved, 1227

Anglo-Norman Conquest of Ireland: Waterford, 1170; Dublin, 1171

Byzantine-Venetian War, 1171–1177. See Appendix

Anglo-Norman Rebellion: Fornham, 1173; Alnwick, 1174

Later Muslim Conquest of Northern India: Gujarat (India), 1178; Taraori, 1191; Taraori, 1192; Chandwar, 1194

Gempei War: Fujigawa, Ishibashiyama, Ujigawa, 1180; Sunomata, 1181; Hiuchi, Kurikara, Mizushima, Shinowara, 1183; Awazu, Hojuji, Ichinotani, Uji, 1184; Dannoura, Yashima, 1185; Koromogawa, 1189

2nd Byzantine-Sicilian War: Strymon, Demetritsa, 1185

Branas Rebellion: Constantinople, 1187

3rd Crusade: Cresson, Hattin, Jerusalem, Tyre, 1187; Acre, 1189–1191; Arsouf, 1191; Joppa, 1192

Byzantine-Serbian War: Morava, 1190

Imperial Invasion of Sicily: Ascoli, 1190

Bulgarian Imperial Wars: Berroea, 1190; Arcadiopolis, 1194; Adrianople, 1205; Philippopolis, 1208; Trnovo, 1218; Klokotnitsa, 1230; Adrianople, 1255

French War of Richard I: Freteval, 1194; Gisors, 1198; Chalus, 1199

Muslim War of Succession, 1196–1200. See Appendix

4th Crusade: Sidon, 1196; Joppa, 1198; Zara, 1202; Constantinople, 1203–1204

Conquests of Genghis Khan: Kerulen, Khalakhaljit, 1203; Khangai, 1204; Irtysh, 1208; Beijing, 1214–1215; Jand, Kashgar, 1218; Otrar, 1219–1220; Bokhara, Hamadan, Khojend, Samarkand, 1220; Bamian, Gurganj, Indus, Merv, Nishapur, Parwan, Durrah, 1221; Herat, 1221–1222; Kuban, 1222; Kalka, 1223; Yellow River, 1227

Wars of Sosso: Kumbi, 1203; Kirina, 1235

Anglo-French Wars: Chateau Gaillard, 1203–1204; Damme, 1213; Bouvines, 1214; Toulouse, 1218; Saintes, Taillebourg, 1242; Cape St Mathieu, 1293

Ghor-Khwarezm War: Andkhui, 1205

Albigensian Crusade: Beziers, Carcassonne, 1209; Muret, 1213; Avignon, 1226

1st Latin-Byzantine Imperial War: Antioch (Anatolia), Rhyndacus, 1211

1st English Barons' War: Rochester, 1215; Dover, 1216–1217; Lincoln, South Foreland, 1217; Bytham, 1221; Bedford, 1224

Early Russian Dynastic Wars: Lipitsa, 1216

Wars of the Delhi Sultanate: Taraori, 1216; Kaithal, 1240; Deogiri, 1294; Deogiri, 1307; Warangal, 1309–1310; Deogiri, 1318; Warangal, 1322–1323; Godaveri, 1326

5th Crusade: Adiliya, 1218; Damietta, 1218–1219; Ashmoun Canal, 1221

Jokyo Disturbance: Kyoto, 1221

Latin-Epirote War: Thessalonica, 1224

Mongol Conquest of Korea, 1231–1241. See Appendix

Mongol Conquest of China: Yuxian, 1232; Kaifeng, 1232–1233; Jiangling, 1236; Diao Yu, 1258

Rise of Mali, 1235–1332. See Appendix

2nd Latin-Byzantine Imperial War: Constantinople, 1236

Early Wars of the Teutonic Knights: Siauliai, 1236; Durbe, 1260; Rakvere, 1268; Karuse, 1270; Aizkraulke, 1279

Mongol Conquest of Russia: Ryazan, 1237; Kolomna, Moscow, Sit, Vladimir, 1238; Kiev, 1240

Imperial-Papal Wars: Cortenuova, 1237; Brescia, 1238; Meloria, 1241; Parma, 1247–1248; Fossalta, 1248

Later Crusader-Muslim Wars: Gaza, 1239; Jerusalem, La Forbie, 1244; Ascalon, 1247; Sarvantikar, 1266; Antioch (Syria), 1268; Krak de Chevaliers, 1271; Marqab, 1285; Tripoli (Lebanon), 1289; Acre, 1291; Rhodes, 1310; Smyrna, 1344

Rise of Russia: Neva, 1240; Lake Peipus, 1242; Rakvere, 1268

Mongol Invasion of Europe: Carpathian Passes, Cracow, Liegnitz, Sajo, 1241

Mongol Invasions of India: Lahore, 1241; Jalandhar, 1298; Kili, 1299; Amroha, 1305; Ravi, 1306

Mongol Conquest of Asia Minor: Kose Dagh, 1243

Austro-Hungarian War: Leitha, 1246

7th Crusade: Ashmoun Canal, Damietta, 1249; Fariskur, Mansura (Egypt), 1250

War of Welsh Succession: Bryn Derwyn, 1255

Mongol Invasion of the Middle East: Alamut, 1256; Anbar, Baghdad, 1258; Ain Jalut, Aleppo, 1260; Homs, 1281

Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan: Thang Long, 1258; Xiangyang, 1268–1272; Hakata Bay, 1274; Hangzhou, 1276; Ngasaunggyan, 1278; Yashan, 1279; Hakata Bay, 1281; Champa, 1281–1283; Siming, 1285; Liao, 1287; Bach Dang, Noi Bang, 1288; Singhasari, 1293

3rd Latin-Byzantine Imperial War: Pelagonia, 1259; Constantinople, 1261; Prinitza, 1263; Makry Plagi, Thessalonica, 1264

Guelf-Ghibelline Wars: Cassano, 1259; Montaperti, 1260; Campaldino, 1289; Montecatini, 1315; Altopascio, 1325

Bohemian Wars: Kressenbrunn, 1260; Marchfeld, 1278

Mongol Dynastic Wars: Kuba, 1262; Terek, 1263; Karakorum, 1301

Norwegian Invasion of Scotland: Largs, 1263

2nd English Barons' War: Lewes, Northampton, Rochester, 1264; Axholme, Evesham, Kenilworth, Newport, 1265; Chesterfield, 1266; Ely, 1267

Venetian-Genoese Wars: Saseno, 1264; Trapani, 1266; Laiazzo, 1294; Kaffa, 1296; Curzola, 1298; Constantinople, 1352; Sapienza, 1354

Angevin Conquest of the Two Sicilies: Benevento, 1266; Tagliacozzo, 1268

8th Crusade: Carthage (Tunisia), 1270

Mamluk-Nubian War, 1272–1275. See Appendix

Neapolitan-Byzantine War: Berat, 1281

War of the Sicilian Vespers: Sicilian Vespers, 1282; Messina, 1283; Naples, 1284

English Conquest of Wales: Aber Edw, Bangor, 1282; Conwy, 1295

Genoese-Pisan War: Meloria, 1284

French-Aragonese War: Gerona, Las Hormigas, 1285

German Ducal Wars: Worringen, 1288

Habsburg-Swiss Wars: Winterthur, 1292; Nafels, 1352; Sempach, 1386; Nafels, 1388

English Invasion of Scotland: Berwick, Dunbar, 1296

William Wallace Revolt: Stirling, 1297; Falkirk, 1298; Roslin, 1303; Happrew, Stirling, 1304

Franco-Flemish Wars: Furnes, 1297; Bruges, Courtrai, 1302; Mons-en-Pevele, Zieriksee, 1304; Cassel, 1328

Habsburg Wars of Succession: Gollheim, 1298; Gammelsdorf, 1313; Morgarten, 1315; Solothurn, 1318; Mühldorf, 1322

Hungarian War of Succession, 1301–1308. See Appendix

Byzantine-Ottoman Wars: Baphaeum, 1301; Brusa, 1317–1326; Pelacanon, 1328; Nicomedia, 1331–1337; Didymoteichon, 1352; Gallipoli, 1354; Adrianople, 1362; Gallipoli, 1366; Dardanelles, 1399; Constantinople, 1422; Constantinople, 1453

Wars of the Catalan Company: Aprus, 1305; Cephisus, 1311

Rise of Robert the Bruce: Dalry, Kirkincliffe, Methven, 1306; Glentrool, Lochryan, Loudon, Hill, Slioch, 1307; Brander, Cree, Dee, Inverurie, 1308; Durham, 1312; Perth, 1312–1313; Stirling, 1313–1314; Bannockburn, Edinburgh, Roxburgh, Rushen, 1314; Ardscull, 1316; Dundalk, 1318; Berwick, 1318–1319; Myton, 1319; Byland, 1322

Wars of the Teutonic Knights: Gdansk, 1308; Plowce, 1331; Reval, 1343

Later Christian Reconquest of Spain: Algeciras, Almeria, 1309; Genil, Vega, 1319; Alcalá, Algeciras, Rio Salado, 1340; Algeciras, 1343–1344; Higueruela, 1431; Alporchones, 1452

Tiepolo's Rebellion: Venice, 1310

Khalji Invasion of Pandya, 1310–1311. See Appendix

English Invasion of Ireland: Athenry, 1316; Dysert O'Dea, 1318

1st Ethiopian-Ifat War, 1320–1332. See Appendix

Rebellion of the Marches: Boroughbridge, 1322

Serbian Imperial Wars: Velbuzhde, 1330; Stefaniana, 1344; Adrianople, 1355

Genko War: Akasaka, 1331; Chihaya, Kamakura, Kyoto, 1333

Anglo-Scottish War of Succession: Annan, Dupplin, 1332; Berwick, Halidon Hill, 1333; Dundarg, 1334; Boroughmuir, Kilblain, 1335; Lochindorb, 1336; Crichton, 1337; Dunbar, 1337–1338; Perth, 1339

Ashikaga Rebellion: Kamakura, 1335; Kyoto, Minatogawa, Tatarahama, 1336

Hundred Years War: Cadsand, 1337; Sluys, Tournai, 1340; Hennebont, 1341–1342; Brest, Morlaix, Quimperlé, 1342; Auberoche, 1345; Aiguillon, Caen, Crecy, St Pol de Léon, 1346; Calais, 1346–1347; Roche-Derrien, 1347; Winchelsea, 1350; Saintes, Thirty, 1351; Mauron, 1352; Poitiers, 1356; Rennes, 1356–1357; Rheims, 1359–1360; Brignais, 1362; Becherel, 1363; Auray, Cocherel, 1364; Navarette, 1367; Limoges, Pontvallain, 1370; La Rochelle, 1372;

Chize, 1373; Chateauneuf-de-Randon, 1380; Bruges, Roosebeke, 1382; Margate, 1387; Othée, 1408; Agincourt, Harfleur, 1415; Harfleur, Valmont, 1416; Caen, 1417; Rouen, 1418–1419; Fresnay, Melun, 1420; Baugé, 1421; Meaux, 1421–1422; Cravant, 1423; Verneuil, 1424; Avranches, 1426; Montargis, 1427; Orleans, 1428–1429; Jargeau, Paris, Patay, Rouvray, 1429; Compiegne, 1430; Bulgnéville, 1431; Paris, 1436; Pontoise, 1441; Rouen, 1449; Caen, 1450; Formigny, 1450; Bordeaux, Castillon, 1453

Condottieri Wars: Parabiago, 1339

Burgundian-Swiss Wars: Laupen, 1339; Fribourg, 1340

Florentine-Pisan Wars: Lucca, 1341

Hungarian-Venetian Wars: Zara, 1346

Anglo-Scottish Border Wars: Neville's Cross, 1346; Nesbit, 1355; Otterburn, 1388; Homildon Hill, Nesbit, 1402

Aragonese Civil War: Epila, 1348

War of the Japanese Emperors: Shijo Nawate, 1348

Florentine-Milanese Wars: Scarperia, 1351; Castellazzo, 1391; Brescia, 1401

Aragon's Conquest of Sardinia: Alghero, 1353–1354

Rise of the Ming Dynasty: Nanjing, 1356; Shaoxing, 1359; Nanchang, Poyang Lake, 1363; Suzhou, 1366–1367

Wars of the Hanseatic League: Visby, 1361; Copenhagen, Helsingborg, 1362

Russian-Mongol Wars: Syni Vody, 1362; Vozha, 1378; Kalka, Kulikovo, 1380; Moscow, 1382

Ottoman Conquest of the Balkans: Maritza, 1363; Vidin, 1366; Maritza, Samokov, 1371; Savra, 1385; Plotchnik, 1387; Kossovo, 1389; Rovine, 1395; Nicopolis (Bulgaria), 1396

Egyptian Crusade of Peter of Cyprus: Alexandria, 1365

Conquests of Tamerlane: Tashkent, 1365; Balkh, 1370; Herat, 1383; Isfahan, 1387; Syr Darya, 1389; Kunduzcha, 1391; Shiraz, 1393; Terek, 1395; Delhi, Multan, 1398; Meerut, Vorskla, 1399; Aleppo, Baghdad, 1400; Damascus, 1401; Angora, Smyrna, 1402

Vijayanagar-Bahmani Wars: Kauthal, 1367; Krishna, 1398; Vijayanagar, 1406; Pangul, 1418–1420; Mudgal, 1443

Castilian War of Succession: Montiel, 1369

Scottish Clan Wars: Invernahavon, 1370; North Inch, 1396; Arbroath, 1446

Guglers' War: Fraubrunnen, 1375

War of the Eight Saints, 1375–1378. See Appendix

War of the Swabian League: Ulm, 1376; Reutlingen, 1377

War of Chioggia: Antium, 1378; Pula, 1379; Chioggia, 1379–1380

Neapolitan-Papal War: Anagni, 1381

Portuguese-Castilian Wars: Atoleiros, 1384; Aljubarrota, 1385

English Barons' Revolt: Radcot Bridge, 1387

Padua-Verona War: Castagnaro, 1387

German Towns War: Doffingen, 1388; Beraun, 1394

Wars of Scandinavian Union: Aasle, Falkoping, 1389

Glendower's Rebellion: Welshpool, 1400; Pilleth, 1402

Habsburg-Swiss Wars: Speicher, 1403; Stoss, 1405; Bregenz, 1408

Percy's Rebellion: Shrewsbury, 1403; Bramham Moor, 1408

Florentine-Pisan Wars: Pisa, 1406

Ming Imperial Wars: Kerulen, 1409; Jing Luzhen, Onon, 1410; Tumu, 1449

Later Wars of the Teutonic Knights: Tannenberg, 1410; Wilkomierz, 1435

MacDonald Rebellion: Harlaw, 1411; Lochaber, 1429; Inverlochy, 1431; Strathfleet, 1453; Bloody Bay, 1480

Ottoman Civil Wars: Chamorlu, 1413; Yenisehir, 1481

2nd Ethiopian-Ifat War, 1415. See Appendix

Portuguese Colonial Wars in North Africa: Ceuta, 1415; Tangier, 1437; Arsilah, 1471

Venetian-Turkish Wars: Gallipoli, 1416; Salonika, 1430; Mytilene, 1462; Krujë (Albania), 1466–1467; Negroponte, 1470; Scutari, 1474; Krujë (Albania), 1478; Scutari, 1478–1479; Lepanto, 1499

Hussite Wars: Bor Pansky, Porici, Sudomer, Vitkov Hill, Vysehrad, 1420; Kutna Hora, Vladar, Zatec, 1421; Habry, Nebovidy, Nemecky Brod, 1422; Horice, Kromeriz, Strachuv, Tynec, 1423; Malesov, Skalice, 1424; Aussig, 1426; Tachov, Zwettl, 1427; Domazlice, 1431; Lipany, 1434; Grotniki, 1439

Swiss-Milanese Wars: Arbedo, 1422; Giornico, 1478

Condottieri Wars: Aquila, 1424

Sino-Vietnamese War: Tot-dong, 1426; Dong-do, 1426–1427; Chi Lang Pass, 1427

Venetian-Milanese Wars: Brescia, 1426; Casa-al-Secco, Gottolengo, Maclodio, 1427; Cremona, Soncino, 1431; Maderno, 1439; Anghiari, 1440

Malwa-Bahmani Wars: Kherla, 1428

Aztec Wars of Conquest: Azcapotzalco, 1428; Coixtlahuaca, 1458; Tarascan Frontier, 1478; Soconusco, 1498–1500

Thai Invasion of Cambodia: Angkor, 1430–1431

Scandinavian Revolt, 1433–1439. See Appendix

Aragon's Conquest of Naples: Gaeta, 1435; Naples, 1442; Troia, 1462

Wars of Russian Succession: Skoriatino, 1436

Anglo-Scottish Border Wars: Piperdean, Roxburgh, 1436; Sark, 1448; Roxburgh, 1460

Transylvanian Peasant Revolt: Bábolna, 1437

Turkish-Hungarian Wars: Semendria, 1439; Belgrade, 1440; Császáhalom, 1441; Hermannstadt, Vasaq, 1442; Varna, 1444; Ialomitsa, 1446; Kossovo, 1448; Krusevac, 1454; Novo Brdo 1455; Belgrade, 1456; Jajce, 1464; Shabatz, 1476; Villach, 1492; Belgrade, Shabatz, 1521; Mohacs, Peterwardein, 1526

Old Zurich War: St Jakob on the Sihl, 1443; St Jakob on the Birs, 1444

Turkish-Hungarian Wars (Long Campaign): Melshtitsa, Nish, Zlatitsa, 1443; Kunovica, 1444

Albanian-Turkish Wars: Domosdova, 1444; Dibra, Krujë (Albania), Svetigrad, 1448; Krujë (Albania), 1450; Berat, 1455; Oranik, 1456; Albulen, 1457

Spanish Wars of Succession: Olmedo, 1445; Aibar, 1452

Thai-Malacca War: Ulu Muar, 1445; Batu Pahat, 1456

Russian-Mongol Wars: Suzdal, 1445; Aleksin, 1472; Ugra, 1480

Albanian-Venetian War: Danj, 1447–1448

Milanese War of Succession: Caravaggio, 1448; Borgomanero, 1449; Milan, 1449–1450

Portuguese War of Succession: Alfarrobeira, 1449

Cade's Rebellion: London Bridge, Sevenoaks, 1450

Hungarian Civil War: Szentkiraly, 1451

Polish-Bohemian War: Lucenec, 1451

Douglas Rebellion: Brechin, 1452; Abercorn, Arkinholm, 1455

Franco-Burgundian Wars: Gavere, 1453; Montenaeken, Montlhéry, 1465; Dinant, 1466; Brusthem, 1467; Liège, 1468; Héricourt, 1474; Neuss, 1474–1475

Thirteen Years War: Chojnice, 1454; Puck, 1462

Wars of the Roses: St Albans, 1455; Blore Heath, Ludford Bridge, 1459; Northampton, Sandwich, Wakefield, 1460; Dunstable, Ferrybridge, Mortimer's Cross, St Albans, Towton, 1461; Alnwick, 1462–1463; Twt Hill, 1463; Bamburgh, Hedgeley Moor, Hexham, 1464; Caister Castle, 1469; Edgecote, 1469; Lose-Coat Field, Nibley Green, 1470; Barnet, Ravenspur, Tewkesbury, 1471; Bosworth Field, 1485

Muscovite Wars of Expansion: Novgorod, 1456; Shelon, Shilenga, 1471

Hungarian National Wars: Baia (Romania), 1467; Vienna, 1485

Wars of the Songhai Empire: Timbuktu, 1468; Anfao, 1493

Hungarian-Bohemian War, 1469–1478. See Appendix

Vietnamese-Cham War: Vijaya, 1471

Wars of the Kalmar Union: Brunkeberg, 1471; Rotebro, 1497; Hemmingstedt, 1500; Brännkyrka, 1518; Bogesund, 1520; Copenhagen, 1523–1524

Ottoman-Turkoman War: Terjan, 1472; Erzincan, 1473

Genoese-Turkish War: Kaffa, 1475

Moldavian-Turkish War: Rakhova, 1475; Valea Alba, 1476

Portuguese-Castilian Wars: Toro, 1476

Burgundian-Swiss War: Grandson, Morat, 1476; Nancy, 1477

Florentine-Neapolitan War: Poggibonzi, 1479

Franco-Austrian War: Guinegate, 1479

Transylvanian-Turkish Wars: Kenyermezo, 1479

Turkish Imperial Wars: Otranto, Rhodes, 1480; Cosmin, 1497; Rhodes, 1522; Tunis, 1533; Tripoli (Libya), 1551; Malta, 1565

Final Christian Reconquest of Spain: Zahara, 1481; Alhama, Loja, 1482; Axarquia, Lucena, 1483; Malaga, 1487; Almeria, Baza, 1489; Granada, 1491–1492

Polish-Crimean Tatar Wars: Kiev, 1482; Kleck, 1506

Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars: Berwick, 1482; Lochmaben, 1484; Goodwin Sands, 1511; Broomhouse, Flodden, 1513; Hadden Rig, Solway Moss, 1542; Ancrum Moor, 1545; Pinkie, 1547; Leith, 1560

Simnel's Rebellion: Stoke, 1487

Russia's Volga Wars: Kazan, 1487; Kazan, 1552; Astrakhan, 1554; Astrakhan, 1569

Mad War: St Aubin du Cormier, 1488

Scottish Barons' Rebellion: Sauchieburn, 1488; Gartalunane, 1489

Persian-Turkoman Wars: Dartanat, 1488; Jabani, 1500; Sharur, 1501; Hamadan, 1503

Spanish Conquest of Haiti, 1494–1509. See Appendix

Italian War of Charles VIII: Fornovo, Seminara, 1495; Aversa, 1496

Flammock's Rebellion: Blackheath, 1497

Mughal-Uzbek Wars: Samarkand, 1497–1498; Sar-i-Pul, 1501; Akhsikath, 1503; Herat, Maruchak, 1507; Kandahar, 1508; Pul-i-Sanghin, 1511; Ghujduwan, Kul-i-Malik, 1512

Swabian War: Bruderholz, Calven, Dornach, Frastenz, Hard, Schwaderloch, Triesen, 1499

The Early Modern Era, 1500–1750

1st Muscovite-Lithuanian War: Vedrosha, 1500; Helmed, Mstislavl, Seritsa, 1501; Lake Smolino, Smolensk, 1502

Italian War of Louis XII: Novara, 1500; Taranto, 1501–1502; Barletta, 1502–1503; Cerignola, Garigliano, Seminara, 1503

Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia: Calicut, 1500; Cochin, 1506; Chaul, 1508; Diu, 1509; Goa, 1510; Malacca, 1511

Portuguese Colonial Wars in East Africa: Zanzibar, 1503; Kilwa, Mombasa, 1505; Mombasa, 1528; Mombasa, 1589

Irish Barons' Wars: Knockdoe, 1504

Funj-Nubian War, 1504–1505. See Appendix

Mughal Dynastic War: Kabul, 1504; Kandahar, 1520–1522

Spanish Colonial Wars in North Africa: Mers el Kebir, 1505; Oran, 1509; Bougie, Los Gelves, Tripoli (Libya), 1510; Algiers, 1511

Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia: Muscat, 1507; Hormuz, 1507–1508; Aden, 1513; Hormuz, 1515; Bahrain, 1521

War of the League of Cambrai: Cadore, 1508; Agnadello, Padua, 1509

Spanish Conquest of Puerto Rico, 1508–1511. See Appendix

Persian-Uzbek Wars: Merv, 1510; Damghan, Herat, Torbat-i-Jam, 1528

Spanish Conquest of Cuba, 1511–1513. See Appendix

Turko-Persian War in Anatolia: Kayseri, 1511; Chaldiran, 1514; Turna Dag, 1515

War of the Holy League: Casalechio, Mirandola, 1511; Brest, Ravenna, 1512; Brest, Guinegate, Novara, Vicenza, 1513; Marignano, 1515

2nd Muscovite-Lithuanian War: Smolensk, 1512–1514; Orsha, 1514

Vijayanagar-Gajapati War: Udayagiri, 1513–1514; Kondavidu, 1515

Transylvanian Peasant War: Temesvár, 1514

Ottoman-Mamluk War: Marj-Dabik, Yaunis Khan, 1516; Ridanieh, 1517

Spanish Conquest of Yucatan: Champotón, 1517; Aké, 1528; Chichén Itzá, 1531

Spanish Conquest of Mexico: Cholula, 1519; Cempoala, Otumba, Tenochtitlan, 1520; Tenochtitlan, 1521

Wars of the Deccan Sultanates: Raichur, 1520; Jamkhed, 1560; Kondavidu, 1563; Talikota, 1565

Comuneros Uprising: Villalar, 1521

Philippines Expedition: Mactan, 1521

1st Habsburg-Valois War: Esquiroz, 1521; Bicocca, Genoa, 1522; Marseilles, Rebecco, Sesia, 1524; Pavia, 1524–1525

German Knights' War: Landstuhl, 1523

Spanish Conquest of Guatemala: Quetzaltenango, Ututlán, 1524

German Peasants' War: Böblingen, Frankenhausen, Frauenberg, Ingolstadt, Kempten, Königshofen, Leipheim, Weinsberg, Zabern, 1525; Schladming, 1526

Scottish Royalist Wars: Linlithgow Bridge, Melrose, 1526

Mughal Conquest of Northern India: Panipat, 1526; Khanua, 1527; Gogra, 1529; Chitor, 1534–1535; Champaner, Mandu, 1535; Chausa, 1539; Kanauj, 1540; Sirhind, 1555; Delhi, Panipat, 1556; Chitor, 1567–1568; Ahmadabad, Sarnal, 1572; Tukaroi, 1575; Haldighat, Rajmahal (Bengal), 1576; Malandarai Pass, 1586; Nekujyal, 1612

2nd Habsburg-Valois War: Rome, 1527; Naples, 1528; Landriano, 1529; Florence, 1529–1530

Turkish-Habsburg Wars: Tokay, 1527; Buda, Vienna, 1529; Guns, 1532; Tunis, 1535; Valpovo, 1537; Buda, 1540; Algiers, Buda, 1541; Nice, 1543; Mahdiyya, 1550; Eger, Temesvár, 1552; Djerba, 1560; Hadad, 1562; Gyula, Szigetvar, 1566; Lepanto, 1571; Sissek, Veszprem, 1593; Komárom, 1594; Esztergom, 1595; Keresztes, 1596; Esztergom, 1605

Burmese Dynastic Wars: Ava, 1527; Pegu, 1539; Pegu, 1551; Prome, 1552; Ava, 1555; Pegu, 1599; Syriam, 1613

Adal-Ethiopian War: Shimbra-Kure, 1529; Wayna Daga, 1543

Polish-Moldavian War: Gwozdiec, Obertyn, 1531

Swiss Religious Wars: Kappel, Zug, 1531

Inca War of Succession: Cuzco, 1532

Spanish Conquest of Peru: Cajamarca, 1532

Ottoman Conquest of Persia: Baghdad, 1534

German Religious Wars: Munster, 1534–1535

Danish Counts' War: Bornholm, Oksnebjerg, 1535; Copenhagen, 1535–1536

3rd Habsburg-Valois War: Marseilles, 1536

Later Venetian-Turkish War: Corfu, 1537; Preveza, 1538; Castelnuovo (Albania), 1538–1539

Spanish Civil War in Peru: Abancay, 1537; Salinas (Peru), 1538; Chupas, 1542; Anaquito, 1546; Huarina, 1547; Xaquixaguana, 1548; Chuquinga, 1554

Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia: Diu, 1538–1539; Diu, 1546; Malacca, 1568; Colombo, 1587–1588; Mannar, 1591; Balane, 1594

Spanish Conquest of Honduras: Cerquin, 1539

Dacke's Rebellion: Hjortensjon, 1543

4th Habsburg-Valois War: Ceresole, Serravalle, 1544

Scottish Clan Wars: Shirts, 1544

French War of Henry VIII: Boulogne, 1544; Spithead, 1545

Maya Revolt, 1546–1547. See Appendix

Mughal Wars of Succession: Kabul, 1546–1549; Machiwara, 1560; Khurd-Kabul, 1581

War of the German Reformation: Mühlberg, 1547; Sieveshausen, 1553

Burmese-Siamese Wars: Ayutthaya, 1548; Ayutthaya, 1568–1569; Pa Mok, 1585; Nong Sarai, 1593

Kett's Rebellion: Dussindale, Norwich, 1549

Western Rebellion: Exeter, Sampford Courtenay, St Mary's Clyst, 1549

5th Habsburg-Valois War: Metz, 1552; Marciano, 1554; Siena, 1554–1555; St Quentin, 1557; Calais, Gravelines, 1558

Spanish Conquest of Chile: Tucapel, 1553; Marigüeñu, 1554; Mataquito, 1557; Curalaba, 1598

Wyatt's Rebellion: Temple Bar, Wrotham Heath, 1554

Sack of Havana: Havana, 1555

Japan's Era of the Warring States: Miyajima, 1555; Okehazama, 1560; Anegawa, Ishiyama Honganji, 1570; Mikata ga hara, 1572; Nagashino, 1575; Kozuki, 1577–1578; Mimikawa, 1578; Minamata, 1581; Takamatsu, Yamazaki, 1582; Shizugatake, 1583; Nagakute, Okita Nawate, 1584; Kagoshima, Sendaigawa, Takashiro, Toshimitsu, 1587; Odawara, 1590; Sekigahara, 1600; Osaka Castle, 1614–1615

Livonian War: Narva, 1558; Fellin, Oomuli, 1560; Polotsk, 1563; Chashniki, Nevel, 1564; Reval, 1570–1571; Reval, Wenden, 1577; Wenden, 1578; Polotsk, 1579; Velikie Luki, 1580; Narva, 1581; Pskov, 1581–1582

Persian-Mughal Wars: Kandahar, 1558; Kandahar, 1622; Kandahar, 1637; Kandahar, 1649; Kandahar, 1652; Kandahar, 1653

1st French War of Religion: Dreux, Rouen, Vassy, Vergt, 1562; Le Havre, Orleans, 1563

Huntly Rebellion: Corrichie, 1562; Craibstane, Tillyangus, 1571; Glenlivet, 1594

Nordic Seven Years War: Alvsborg, Gotland, Halmstad, Mared, 1563; Oland, 1564; Axtorna, Varberg, 1565; Oland, 1566; Varberg, 1569

O'Neill Rebellion: Coleraine, 1564; Ballycastle, 1565; Knockfergus, 1566; Letterkenny, 1567

Netherlands War of Independence: Valenciennes, 1566–1567; Heiligerlee, Jemmingen, Jodoigne, 1568; Brielle, Goes, Havré, Mons, Naarden, 1572; Haarlem, 1572–1573; Middelburg, 1572–1574; Alkmaar, Zuyder Zee, 1573; Leyden, 1573–1574; Mookerheyde, Walcheren, 1574; Zieriksee, 1575–1576; Antwerp, 1576; Gembloux, Rymenant, 1578; Maastricht, 1579; Hardenberg Heath, 1580; Steenwijk, 1580–1581; Kollum, Noordhorn, Tournai, 1581; Antwerp, 1584–1585; Zutphen, 1586; Bergen-op-Zoom, 1588; Gertruydenberg, 1588–1589; Breda, 1590; Zutphen, 1591; Steenwijk, 1592; Gertruydenberg, 1593; Groningen, 1594; Turnhout, 1597; Nieuport, 1600; Ostend, 1601–1604; Narrow Seas, 1602; Sluys, 1603; Sluys, 1604; Mulheim, 1605; Cape St Vincent, 1606; Gibraltar, 1607; Breda, 1624–1625; Grol, 1627; Hertogenbosch, Wesel, 1629; Slaak, 1631; Maastricht, 1632; Breda, 1636–1637; Downs, 1639; Sas van Gent, 1644; Hulst, 1645

2nd French War of Religion: St Denis, 1567

Uprising against Mary Queen of Scots: Carberry Hill, 1567; Langside, 1568

Morisco Revolt, 1568–1570. See Appendix

3rd French War of Religion: Jarnac, La Roche-L'Abeille, Moncontour, Orthez, Poitiers, 1569; Arnay-le-Du, 1570

Dacre's Rebellion: Gelt, 1570

Venetian-Turkish War in Cyprus: Nicosia, 1570; Famagusta, 1570–1571

Russian-Tatar Wars: Moscow, 1571; Molodi, 1572

Tupac Amaru Revolt: Huayna Pucará, 1572

4th French War of Religion: St Bartholomew's Eve, 1572; La Rochelle, 1572–1573

Burmese-Laotian Wars: Vientiane, 1574

Moldavian Rebellion: Jiliste, Kagul Lagoon, 1574

Portuguese Colonial Wars in West Africa: Sao Salvador, 1574; Ambuila, 1665; Pungu-a-Ndongo, 1671

5th French War of Religion: Dormans, 1575

Balkan National Wars: Sinpaul, 1575; Selimbar, 1599; Bucov, Khotin, Mirischlau, 1600; Goraslau, 1601; Brasov, 1603; San Petru, 1611

Gdansk War: Danzig, Lubieszow, 1577

Portuguese-Moroccan War: Alcazarquivir, 1578

Geraldine Rebellion: Fort del Or, 1580; Glen Malure, 1580

Spanish-Portuguese War: Alcántara, 1580; Terceira, 1582; Sao Miguel, 1583

Russian Conquest of Siberia: Kashlyk, 1582

Turko-Persian Wars: Vilasa, 1583; Khoi, 1584; Tabriz, 1585; Baghdad, 1587; Gandzha, 1588; Tabriz, 1603; Sufiyan, 1605; Erivan, 1616–1618; Baghdad, 1625–1626; Baghdad, Hamadan, 1630; Erivan, 1635–1636; Baghdad, 1638

Drake's Caribbean Raid: Cartagena (Colombia), Santo Domingo, St Augustine, 1586

8th French War of Religion: Auneau, Coutras, 1587

Siamese-Cambodian Wars: Lovek, 1587; Lovek, 1594

Anglo-Spanish Wars: Cadiz, Sluys, 1587; Spanish Armada, 1588; Burgos, 1589; Azores, 1591; Cadiz, 1596

Habsburg-Polish War: Byczyna, 1588

Mughal-Uzbek Wars: Herat, 1588–1589; Balkh, 1646

9th French War of Religion: Arques, 1589; Ivry, Paris, 1590; Rouen, 1591–1592; Aumâle, Caudebec, 1592; Fontaine-Française, 1595; Calais, 1596; Amiens, 1597

Moroccan-Songhai War: Tondibi, 1591

Ningxia Mutiny: Ningxia, 1592

Japanese Invasion of Korea: Angolpo, Chongju, Hansan, Imjin, Okpo, Pusan, Pyongyang, Sachon, Sangju, Tanghangpo, Tangpo, Tongnae, 1592; Haengju, Pyokjekwan, Pyongyang, 1593; Chiksan, Kyo Chong, Myongyang, Namwon, 1597; Noryang, Sachon, Sunchon, Ulsan, 1598

Cossack-Polish Wars: Piatka, 1593; Lubny, 1596

Later Scottish Clan Wars: Dryfe Sands, 1593; Glen Fruin, 1603; Altimarlach, 1680

O'Donnell's Rebellion: Ford of the Biscuits, 1594

Wallachian-Turkish War: Calugareni, Giurgiu, Tirgovist, 1595

Tyrone Rebellion: Clontibret, 1595; Blackwater, 1598; Derry, Moyry Pass, 1600; Kinsale, 1601

Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars: Ahmadnagar, Supa, 1596; Ahmadnagar, 1600; Asirgarh, 1600–1601; Roshangaon, 1616; Bhatavadi, 1624; Kalinjar, Sironj, 1631; Daulatabad, 1633

Persian Reconquest of Khorasan: Rabat-i-Pariyan, 1598

Swedish War of Succession: Stangebro, 1598

Spanish Conquest of New Mexico: Acoma Pueblo, 1598–1599

Cambodian-Spanish War: Phnom Penh, 1599

1st Polish-Swedish War: Kokenhausen, 1601; Dorpat, 1603; Weissenstein, 1604; Kirkholm, 1605

Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars: Bantam, 1601; Goa, 1604; Ambon, 1605; Malacca, 1606; Salvador, 1624–1625; Salvador, 1627; Recife, 1630; Recife, 1632; Porto Calvo, 1635; Porto Calvo, 1637; Salvador, 1638; Itamaraca, 1640; Malacca, 1640–1641; Guararapes, Luanda, 1648; Guararapes, 1649; Recife, 1650–1654

Swiss Religious Wars: Geneva, 1602

Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia: Bahrain, 1602; Muscat, 1650

Russian Time of Troubles: Novgorod Seversk, 1604; Dobrynitchi, 1605; Bolkhov, Khodynka, 1608; Smolensk, 1609–1611; Klushino, 1610; Moscow, 1611–1612; Moscow, 1618

Zebrzydowski's Rebellion: Janowiec, 1606; Guzów, 1607

Dutch-Spanish Colonial Wars: Manila, 1610; Muysers Bay, 1625; Matanzas, 1628

War of Kalmar: Alvsborg, Kringen, Vaxholm, 1612

Anglo-Portuguese Colonial Wars: Swally Roads, 1612; Jask, 1620; Hormuz, 1622

Anglo-French Wars in North America: Port Royal, 1614; Quebec, 1629

Russo-Swedish Wars: Bronnitsa, Gdov, 1614; Pskov, 1615; Riga, 1656

2nd Polish-Swedish War: Riga, 1617; Riga, 1621; Mitau, 1621–1622; Dorpat, 1625; Mewe, Wallhof, 1626; Danzig, 1626–1630; Kasemark, Oliwa, Tczew, 1627; Gorzno, Sztum, 1629

Thirty Years War (Bohemian War): Pilsen, 1618; Sablat, 1619; White Mountain, 1620

Early Dutch Wars in the East Indies: Bantam, 1618; Jakarta, 1619; Batavia, 1628; Batavia, 1629

Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia: Jaffna, 1619; Radenivela, 1630; Hooglhy, 1632; Gannoruwa, 1638; Trincomalee, 1639; Colombo, 1655–1656

Manchu Conquest of China: Niumaozhai, Sarhu, Siyanggiayan, 1619; Shenyang, 1621; Ningyuan, 1626; Dalinghe, Xoaling, 1631; Kaifeng, 1642; Beijing, Shanhaiguan, 1644; Tongguan, Yangzhou, 1645; Nanjing, 1659

Swiss-Milanese Wars: Tirano, 1620

Polish-Turkish Wars: Cecora, Jassy, 1620; Khotin, 1621

French Civil War: Ponts-de-Ce, 1620; Castelnaudary, 1632

Corsair Wars: Algiers, 1620–1621; Porto Farina, 1665; Bougie, 1671

1st Huguenot Rebellion: Montauban, St Jean d'Angely, 1621

Early Mughal-Sikh Wars: Rohilla, 1621; Amritsar, 1634; Kartarpur, 1635

Thirty Years War (Palatinate War): Fleurus, Heidelberg, Höchst (Frankfurt), Mannheim, Wiesloch, Wimpfen, 1622; Stadtlohn, 1623

Powhatan Indian Wars: Jamestown, 1622; Pamunkey, 1625; York River (Virginia), 1644

Rebellion of Prince Shahjahan: Balochpur, 1623; Damdama, 1624

Anatolian Rebellion: Kayseri, 1624

Polish-Tatar Wars: Martynow, 1624; Kamieniec, Sasowy Rog, 1633; Okhmatov, 1644

2nd Huguenot Rebellion: La Rochelle, 1625

Turkish-Druse War: Anjar, 1625

Cossack-Polish Wars: Borovitsa, 1625; Pereiaslav, 1630; Kumeiky, 1637; Zhovnyne, 1638; Bazavluk, Korsun, Pilawce, Zolte Wody, 1648; Zborov, 1649; Beresteczko, Bila Tserkva, 1651; Batoh, 1652

Anglo-Spanish Wars: Cadiz, 1625; Jamaica, Santo Domingo, 1655; Cadiz, 1656; Santa, Cruz de Tenerife, 1657

Thirty Years War (Saxon-Danish War): Dessau, Lutter am Barenberg, 1626; Stralsund, Wolgast, 1628

Manchu Conquest of Korea: Pyongyang, 1627

3rd Huguenot Rebellion: Ile de Ré, 1627; La Rochelle, 1627–1628

Thirty Years War (Mantuan War): Casale, 1628–1629; Casale, Mantua, 1629–1630; Avigliana, 1630

Thirty Years War (Swedish War): Magdeburg, 1630–1631; Breitenfeld, Frankfort on the Oder, Neubrandenburg, Werben, 1631; Alte Veste, Lützen, Rain, 1632; Hessich-Oldendorf, Steinau, 1633; Landshut, Nördlingen, Regensberg, 1634

Later Portuguese Wars in East Africa: Mombasa, 1631–1633; Zanzibar, 1652; Mahungwe, 1684; Mombasa, 1696–1698; Mombasa, 1728–1729

Russo-Polish "War of Smolensk": Smolensk, 1632–1634

Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War): Avein, Boulay, Domitz, Goldberg, Kyritz, Mainz, 1635; Hanau, 1635–1638; Corbie, St Jean de Losne, Tornavento, Wittstock, 1636; Monte Baldo, 1637; Breisach, Brema, Fuentarrabia, Rheinfelden, Sennheim, Vlotho, Wittenweier, 1638; Brandeis, Chemnitz, Chieri, Thionville, 1639; Casale, Turin, 1640; La Marfée, Wolfenbüttel, 1641; Barcelona (Spain), Breitenfeld, Kempen, Lérida, Olmütz, Schweidnitz, 1642; Cabo de Gata, Rocroi, Rottweil, Sierck, Thionville, Tuttlingen, 1643; Freiburg, Gravelines, Juterbog, Kolberg Heath, Lérida, Lolland, 1644; Jankau, Mergentheim, Nördlingen, Rosas, 1645; Dunkirk, Isola del Giglio, Lérida, Orbetello, Porto Longone, 1646; Lérida, 1647; Lens, Prague, Trancheron, Zusmarshausen, 1648

Transylvanian-Turkish Wars: Salonta, 1636

Pequot Indian War: Block Island, 1636; Mystic, Wethersfield, 1637

Japanese Christian Rising: Amakusa, 1638

Shimabara Rebellion: Hara, 1638

1st Bishops' War: Dee, Megray Hill, 1639

2nd Bishops' War: Newburn, 1640

Catalonian Uprising: Barcelona, 1641; Barcelona, 1652

British Civil Wars: Brentford, Edgehill, Powick Bridge, Tadcaster, Turnham Green, 1642; Adwalton Moor, Alton, Braddock Down, Bristol, Chalgrove Field, Gainsborough, Gloucester, Grantham, Highnam, Hopton Heath, Lansdown, Launceston, Newbury, Piercebridge, Reading, Ripple Field, Roundway Down, Rowde Ford, Seacroft Moor, Sourton Down, Stratton, Wakefield, Winceby, 1643; Arundel, 1643–1644; Basing House, 1643–1645; Aberdeen, Alresford, Beacon Hill, Bolton, Cropredy Bridge, Fyvie, Inveraray, Latham, Laugharne, Lostwithiel, Lyme, Marston Moor, Nantwich, Newark, Newbury, Selby, Tippermuir, York, 1644; Alford, Auldearn, Borough Hill, Bridgwater, Bristol, Colby Moor, Inverlochy, Kilsyth, Langport, Leicester, Naseby, Philiphaugh, Rowton Heath, Taunton, 1645; Benburb, Inverness, Stow, Torrington, 1646; Dungan Hill, 1647; Colchester, Maidstone, Pembroke, Preston, St Fagan's, 1648; Drogheda, Rathmines, Wexford, 1649; Carbiesdale, Clonmel, Dunbar, 1650; Dundee, Inverkeithing, Limerick, Wigan, Worcester, 1651; Lochgarry, 1654

Spanish-Portuguese Wars: Montijo, 1644; Elvas, 1659; Ameixial, 1663; Montes Claros, 1665

Ingle's Rebellion: St Mary's, 1645–1646

Venetian-Turkish Wars: Khania, 1645; Candia, 1648–1669; Dardanelles, 1654; Dardanelles, 1656; Dardanelles, 1657; Castelnuovo (Albania), 1687; Monemvasia, 1689–1690; Cattaro, 1690; Khania, 1692; Chios, 1694; Spalmadori, 1695

Allesi's Insurrection: Palermo, 1647

Masaniello's Insurrection: Naples, 1647

Bijapur-Maratha Wars: Gingee, 1648; Pratabgarh, 1659; Panhala, 1660; Panhala, Umrani, 1673; Nesri, 1674; Ponda, 1675; Koppal, Tiruvadi, 1677; Vellore, 1677–1678

War of the 1st Fronde: Charenton, 1649

War of the 2nd Fronde: Champ Blanc, 1650; Blenau, Etampes, St Antoine, 1652

1st Dutch War: Dungeness, Elba, Goodwin Sands, Kentish Knock, Plymouth (England), 1652; Gabbard Bank, Leghorn, Portland (Dorset), Scheveningen, 1653

Moldavian Civil War: Finta, 1653

Swiss Peasant War: Gisikon, Herzogenbuchsee, Wohlenschwyl, 1653

Russo-Polish Wars: Smolensk, Szepiele, 1654; Lvov, Okhmatov, Ozernoe, 1655; Kiev, Poltava, Werki, 1658; Konotop, 1659; Chudnov, Liubar, Polonka, Slobodyszcze, 1660; Kushliki, 1661; Lokhvitsa, 1663; Podhajce, 1667

Franco-Spanish War: Arras, 1654; Valenciennes, 1656; Cambrai, 1657; Dunes, Dunkirk, 1658; Luxembourg, 1684

1st Northern War: Cracow, Jasna Gora, Nowy Dwor, Opoczno, Sobota, Ujscie, Wojnicz, 1655; Gnesen, Golab, Sandomierz, Warka, Warsaw, 1656; Fredericia, 1657; Funen, Sound, 1658; Nyborg, 1659

1st Villmergen War: Rapperswil, Villmergen, 1656

Transylvanian-Polish War: Trembowla, Warsaw, 1657

War of the Mughal Princes: Bahadurpur, Dharmat, Samugargh, 1658; Deorai, Khajwa, Maldah, 1659

Transylvanian National Revolt: Lippa, 1658; Gilau, Nagyvarad, 1660; Nagyszollos, 1662

Royalist Rising: Winnington Bridge, 1659

Wallachian-Turkish War: Fratesci, 1659

1st Dutch-Khoikhoi War, 1659–1660. See Appendix

Dutch Wars in the East Indies: Macassar, 1660; Macassar, 1667–1668; Kartosuro, 1705; Bangil, 1706

Mughal-Maratha Wars: Chakan, 1660; Poona, 1663; Surat, 1664; Purandar, 1665; Dindori, Sinhgarh, Surat, 1670; Salher, 1671–1672; Bhupalgarh, Bijapur, 1690; Kanchi, 1692; Chitaldrug, 1695; Aiwagudi, Basawapatna, 1696; Satara, 1699–1700; Panhala, 1701; Khelna, 1701–1702; Raigarh, 1703–1704; Torna, 1704; Ratanpur, 1706

Chinese Conquest of Taiwan: Fort Zeelandia, 1661–1662; Penghu, 1683

Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars: Neuhausel, 1663; St Gotthard, 1664; Esztergom, Parkany, Vienna, 1683; Neuhausel, 1685; Buda, 1686; Harkany, 1687; Belgrade, 1688; Nish, 1689; Belgrade, Nish, Zernyest, 1690; Slankamen, 1691; Lugos, 1695; Zenta, 1697

North African War of Louis XIV: Jijelli, 1664

2nd Dutch War: Dylerschans, 1664; Bergen (Norway), Lowestoft, 1665; Four Days Battle, North Foreland, Vlie, 1666; Martinique, 1667; Medway, Nevis, 1667

Lubomirski's Rebellion: Matwy, 1666

Scottish Covenanter Rebellion: Pentland Hills, 1666; Bothwell Bridge, Drumclog, 1679

War of Devolution: Lille, 1667; Dole, 1668

Morgan's Raids on Panama: Porto Bello, 1668; Panama, 1671

Cossack Rebellion: Simbirsk, 1670

Revolt of the Three Feudatories, 1671–1681. See Appendix

3rd Dutch War: Aardenburg, Charleroi, Groningen, Nijmegen, Sole Bay, Tolhuis, 1672; Bonn, Maastricht, Schooneveld, Texel, 1673; Besançon, Enzheim, Grave, Mühlhausen, Seneffe, Sinsheim, 1674; Consarbruck, Sasbach, Turckheim, 1675; Augusta (Sicily), Messina, Palermo, Stromboli, 1676; Cassel, Kochersberg, 1677; St Denis (France), 1678

Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine: Kamieniec, 1672; Khotin, 1673; Trembowla, Zloczow, 1675; Soczawa, Zurawno, 1676; Chigirin, 1677; Chigirin, 1678

2nd Dutch-Khoikhoi War, 1673–1677. See Appendix

King Philip's War: Deerfield, Great Swamp Fight, Swansea, 1675; Hadley, 1676; Mount Hope, Seekonk, 1676

Scania War: Fehrbellin, Rathenow, 1675; Jasmund, Lund, Oland, 1676; Koge Bay, Landskrona, 1677

Bacon's Rebellion: Jamestown, Occaneechee Island, 1676

Mughal Conquest of the Deccan Sultanates: Indi, 1676; Bijapur, 1679; Bijapur, 1685–1686; Golconda, 1687

Pueblo Rising: Santa Fé, 1680

Mughal-Berad Wars: Sagar, 1680; Wagingera, 1705

Franco-Barbary Wars: Algiers, 1682–1683; Algiers, 1688

Franco-Genoese War: Genoa, 1684

Monmouth Rebellion: Norton St Philip, Sedgemoor, 1685

Russo-Chinese Border War: Albazin, 1685–1686

War of the Grand Alliance: Philippsburg, 1688; Bantry Bay, Walcourt, 1689; Beachy Head, Fleurus, Staffarda, 1690; Mons, 1691; La Hogue, Leuze, Namur, Steenkirk, 1692; Baia (Italy), Charleroi, Lagos Bay, Marsaglia, Neerwinden, 1693; Camaret Bay, 1694; Barcelona (Spain), Namur, 1695; Cartagena (Colombia), 1697

Mughal-Sikh Wars: Bhangani, 1688; Nadaun, 1691; Guler, 1696; Anandpur, 1700; Anandpur, 1701; Basoli, Nirmohgarh, 1702; Anandpur, Chamkaur, Sarsa, 1704; Muktsar, 1705; Samana, 1709; Jalalabad, Lohgarh, Rahon, Sirhind, 1710; Jammu, 1712; Gurdas Nangal, 1715

War of the British Succession in Ireland: Londonderry, Newtown Butler, 1689; Boyne, Limerick, 1690; Athlone, Aughrim, Limerick, 1691

First Jacobite Rebellion: Dunkeld, Killiecrankie, 1689; Cromdale, 1690; Glencoe, 1692

King William's War: Lachine, 1689; Fort Loyal, Port Royal, Quebec, Salmon Falls, Schenectady, 1690; La Prairie, 1691; Wells, York (Maine), 1692; Oyster, 1694; Fort William Henry (Maine), 1696

Chinese-Mongol Wars: Ulan Butong, 1690; Jaomodo, 1696; Hoton Nor, 1731

Russian Invasion of the Crimea: Azov, 1695–1696

Spanish-Itzá War: Nojpeten, 1698

2nd "Great" Northern War: Copenhagen, Jungfernhof, Narva, 1700; Dunamunde, Riga, 1701; Erestfer, Hummelshof, Kliszow, Noteborg, 1702; Nyenskans, Pultusk, Thorn, 1703; Dorpat, Narva, Punitz, 1704; Gemauerthof, Kotlin Island, 1705; Fraustadt, Kalisch, 1706; Baturin, Grodno, Holowczyn, Lesnaya, 1708; Poltava, 1709; Riga, 1709–1710; Helsingborg, Vyborg, 1710; Gadebusch, 1712; Tonning, 1713; Altona, Hango, Storkyro, 1714; Stralsund, 1714–1715; Fredrikshald, 1718; Osel Island, 1719; Grengam, 1720

War of the Spanish Succession: Carpi, Chiari, 1701; Cadiz, Cremona, Friedlingen, Landau, Luzzara, Santa Marta, Santa Vittoria, Vigo Bay, 1702; Breisach, Ekeren, Granville, Höchstädt, Munderkingen, Speyer, 1703; Barcelona, Blenheim, Castelo Branco, Donauwörth, Gibraltar, Malaga, 1704; Badajoz, Barcelona, Cassano, Marbella, Valencia (Alcántara), 1705; Alcántara, Alicante, Calcinato, Cartagena (Spain), Ramillies, Turin, 1706; Almanza, Beachy Head, Denia, Játiva, Lérida, Lizard, Stollhofen, Toulon, 1707; Cartagena (Colombia), Firth of Forth, Lille, Minorca, Oudenarde, Sardinia, Wynendael, 1708; Alicante, 1708–1709; Malplaquet, Mons, Tournai, Val Gudina, 1709; Almenar, Brihuega, Douai, Rio de Janeiro, Saragossa, Villaviciosa, 1710; Arleux, Rio de Janeiro, 1711; Denain, 1712; Freiburg, Landau, 1713; Barcelona, 1713–1714

Queen Anne's War: St Augustine, 1702; Ayubale, 1703; Deerfield, Port Royal, 1704; Charleston (South Carolina), 1706; Port Royal, 1710; Quebec, 1711

Spanish-Algerian Wars: Oran, 1704–1708; Oran, 1732; Algiers, 1775; Oran, 1780–1791; Algiers, 1783

Rákóczi Rebellion: Zsibó, 1705; Trenchin, 1708

Maratha Civil War: Khed, 1707

Mughal Wars of Succession: Jajau, 1707; Hyderabad (India), 1709; Lahore, 1712; Agra, 1713; Hasanpur, 1720; Gheria (Bengal), 1740; Daulatabad, 1741; Rajmahal (Rajasthan), 1747

Russian Invasion of Moldavia: Stanilesti, 1711

Persian-Afghan Wars: Kandahar, 1711; Kandahar, 1714; Farah, Herat, 1719; Kerman, 1721; Gulnabad, Isfahan, Kerman, 1722; Meshed, 1726; Herat, Mehmandost, Murchakhar, 1729; Zarghan, 1730; Herat, 1731–1732; Kandahar, 1737–1738; Kabul, 1738; Herat, 1750; Nishapur, 1750–1751; Torbat-i-Jam, 1751; Meshed, 1754; Sabzavar, 1755

2nd Villmergen War: Bremgarten, Villmergen, 1712

Tuscarora Indian War: Cotechna, 1712; Nohoroco, 1713

Ottoman Invasions of Montenegro: Podgoritza, 1712; Cevo, 1768

Jacobite Rebellion (The Fifteen): Preston, Sheriffmuir, 1715

Yamasee Indian War: Salkehatchie, 1715

Austro-Turkish War: Peterwardein, Temesvár, 1716; Belgrade, 1717

War of the Quadruple Alliance: Cape Passaro, 1718; Glenshiel, Messina, Vigo, 1719

Mughal-Hyderabad War: Balapur, Ratanpur, 1720; Shakarkhelda, 1724

Spanish-Moroccan Wars: Ceuta, 1720–1721; Melilla, 1774–1775

Russian Invasion of the Caspian: Baku, 1723

Dummer's War: Norridgewock, 1724; Fryeburg, 1725

Rise of Dahomey, 1724–1727. See Appendix

Turko-Persian War: Erivan, 1724; Tabriz, 1724–1725; Kiemereh, 1726; Erivan, Hamadan, 1731

Franco-Barbary Wars: Tripoli (Libya), 1728

Later Mughal-Maratha Wars: Amjhera, Palkhed, 1728; Jaitpur, 1729; Delhi, 1737; Bhopal, 1737–1738; Damalcherry Pass, 1740; Trichinopoly, 1740–1741; Katwa, 1742; Trichinopoly, 1743; Katwa, 1745; Burdwan, 1747; Malthan, 1751; Sindkhed, 1757; Mangrol, 1761; Rakshasbhuvan, 1763

Funj-Ethiopian War, 1730–1755. See Appendix

Maratha Rebellions: Dabhoi, 1731; Savanur, 1756

War of the Polish Succession: Danzig, 1733–1734; Bitonto, Guastalla, Parma, Philippsburg, Secchia, 1734

Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah: Baghdad, Karkuk, Leilan, 1733; Baghavand, 1735; Basra, Mosul, 1743; Kars, 1745

Chickasaw-French War: Ackia, Chucalissa, 1736

Austro-Russian-Turkish War: Azov, Perekop, 1736; Banyaluka, Nish, Ochakov, Valjevo, 1737; Bender, Orsova, 1738; Belgrade, Kroszka, Stavuchany, 1739

Portuguese-Maratha War: Bassein (India), 1737–1739; Thana, 1738

Persian Invasion of India: Jamrud, 1738; Karnal, 1739

War of the Austrian Succession: Porto Bello, 1739; St Augustine, 1740; Cartagena (Colombia), Mollwitz, Santiago de Cuba, 1741; Bloody Swamp, Chotusitz, Sahay, 1742; Braunau, Camposanto, Dettingen, 1743; Cuneo, Madonna del Olmo, Prague, Toulon, Velletri, 1744; Amberg, Bassignano, Fontenoy (Belgium), Hennersdorf, Hohenfriedberg, Kesseldorf, Soor, 1745; Piacenza, Rottofredo, 1746; Genoa, 1746–1747; Bergen-op-Zoom, Cape Finisterre, Exilles, Lauffeld, Rocoux, 1747; Havana, Maastricht, 1748

Persian-Uzbek Wars: Charjui, Khiva, 1740

1st Russo-Swedish War: Willmanstrand, 1741

King George's War: Annapolis Royal, 1744; Louisbourg, 1745

Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five): Carlisle, 1745; Clifton Moor, Inverurie, Prestonpans, 1745; Stirling, 1745–1746; Culloden, Falkirk, 1746

1st Carnatic War: Madras, Negapatam, St Thomé, 1746; Fort St David, 1746–1748; Cuddalore, Pondicherry, 1748

Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah: Manupur, 1748; Lahore, 1752; Delhi, Gohalwar, 1757; Lahore, 1759; Barari Ghat, Kunjpura, Sikandarabad, 1760; Panipat, Gujranwala, Sialkot, 1761; Kup, 1762; Sialkot, 1763

2nd Carnatic War: Ambur, Devikota, 1749; Gingee, Tiruvadi, 1750; Arcot, Arni, Conjeeveram, Volkondah, 1751; Trichinopoly, 1751–1752; Bahur, Chingleput, Covelung, Gingee, Kaveripak, Seringham, 1752; Tiruvadi, Trichinopoly, 1753

The Century of Revolution, 1750–1850

Pathan War: Farrukhabad, Kasganj, 1750; Farrukhabad, Qadirganj, 1751

Later Dutch Wars in the East Indies: Jenar, 1751; Tjiledug, 1752

Persian Wars of Succession: Chahar Mahall, 1751; Asterabad, 1752; Kermanshah, 1752–1753; Qomsheh, 1753; Kamarej, 1754; Kazzaz, 1756; Lahijan, Urmiya, 1757; Shiraz, 1758; Ashraf, 1759; Maragheh, 1760; Qara Chaman, 1762; Urmiya, 1762–1763; Shiraz, 1780–1781

Burmese Civil Wars: Ava, 1752; Pegu, 1757

Seven Years War (North America): Fort Necessity, Great Meadows, 1754; Beauséjour, Belle Isle (Canada), Lake George, Monongahela, 1755; Oswego, 1756; Fort William Henry (NY), 1757; Fort Duquesne, Fort Frontenac, Fort Ticonderoga, Louisbourg, Snowshoes, 1758; Fort Niagara, Fort Ticonderoga, Montmorency Gorge, Quebec, 1759; Montreal, 1760; Quebec, St Francis, 1760

War against Malabar Pirates: Savandrug, 1755; Gheria (Bombay), 1756

Guarani War: Caibaté, 1756

Seven Years War (India): Calcutta, 1756; Calcutta, Chandernagore, Plassey, Trichinopoly, 1757; Cuddalore, Fort St David, Negapatam, Rajahmundry, Tanjore, 1758; Madras, 1758–1759; Chinsura, Masulipatam, Patna, Pondicherry, 1759; Hajipur, Karikal, Masumpur, Sherpur (India), Udgir, Wandewash, 1760; Pondicherry, 1760–1761; Suan, 1761

Seven Years War (Europe): Kolin, Lobositz, Minorca, Pirna, Port Mahon, 1756; Breslau, Gotha, Gross-Jagersdorf, Hastenbeck, Leuthen, Moys, Prague, Rossbach, Schweidnitz, 1757; Ile d'Aix, Cancale, Cherbourg, Crefeld, Domstadtl, Hochkirch, Lutterberg, Olmütz, Sandershausen, St Cast, Zorndorf, 1758; Bergen (Hesse), Kay, Kunersdorf, Lagos Bay, Maxen, Minden, Neuwarp, Quiberon Bay, 1759; Carrickfergus, Dresden, Emsdorf, Glatz, Kloster-Kamp, Kolberg, Korbach, Landshut, Liegnitz, Torgau, Warburg, 1760; Belle Isle (Brittany), Gruneberg, Kolberg, Vellinghausen, 1761; Almeida, Amoneburg, Burkersdorf, Freiberg, Kassel, Lutterberg, Reichenbach (Poland), Valencia (Alcántara), Vila Velha, Wilhelmstahl, 1762

Seven Years War (Caribbean): Cap Francais, 1757; Guadeloupe, Martinique, 1759; Dominica, 1761; Havana, Martinique, 1762

Baluchi Rebellion: Mastung, 1758

Seven Years War (West Africa): Gorée, Senegal, 1758

Cherokee Indian Wars: Etchoe, Fort Loudoun, Fort Prince George, 1760; Etchoe, 1761

Burmese Invasions of Siam: Ayutthaya, 1760; Ayutthaya, 1766–1767

Seven Years War (Philippines): Manila, 1762

Maratha Wars of Succession: Alegaon, 1762; Miraj, 1762–1763; Dhodap, 1768; Kasegaum, 1774; Adas, Panchgaum, 1775

Pontiac's War: Bloody Run, Bushy Run, Devil's Hole, Fort Pitt, Michilimackinac, Point Pelee, 1763; Detroit, 1763–1764

Bengal War: Gheria (Bengal), Katwa, Patna, Udaynala, 1763; Buxar, Patna, 1764; Kora, 1765

1st British-Mysore War: Ambur, Chengam, Trinomalee, Vaniyambadi, 1767; Mulbagal, 1768

Mamluk Wars: Tanta, 1768; Cairo, 1772; Salihiyya, 1773; Jaffa, 1775

Polish Rebellion: Orekhovo, 1769; Lanskroun, Stalowicz, 1771; Cracow, 1772

Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War: Dniester, Khotin, 1769; Bender, Chesme, Chios, Kagul, Larga, Lemnos, Nauplia, Pruth, Ryabaya Mogila, 1770; Bucharest, Perekop, 1771; Hirsov, Silistria, Turtukai, 1773; Kozludzha, Kurchukai, Turtukai, 1774

Regulators War: Alamance Creek, 1771

Maratha-Mysore Wars: Chinkurli, 1771; Saunshi, 1777

Mamluk-Ottoman Wars: Damascus, 1771; Jaffa, 1772–1773; Rahmaniyya, 1786

Pugachev Rebellion: Orenburg, Ufa, 1773–1774; Kazan, Tatishchevo, Tsaritsyn, 1774

Vietnamese Civil War: Quy Nhon, 1773; Thang Long, 1789; Thang Long, 1802

Cresap's War: Yellow Creek, 1774

Dunmore's War: Point Pleasant, 1774

Rohilla War: Miranpur Katra, 1774

1st British-Maratha War: Thana, 1774; Adas, 1775; Wargaom, 1779; Ahmadabad, Bassein (India), Doo-

gaur, Gwalior, Kalyan, Malang-gad, 1780; Arnala, 1780–1781; Bhorghat, Durdah, 1781; Ratnagiri, 1783

Turko-Persian Gulf War: Basra, 1775–1776

War of the American Revolution: Bunker Hill, Chambly, Concord, Crown Point, Fort Ticonderoga, Great Bridge, Hampton, Lexington (Massachusetts), Longueuil, Machias, Montreal, St Johns, 1775; Boston, Quebec, 1775–1776; Charleston (Massachusetts), Dorchester Heights, Fort Lee, Fort Sullivan, Fort Washington, Gwynn Island, Harlem Heights, Kip's Bay, Long Island, Moore's Creek Bridge, New Providence, Norfolk, Pell's Point, Throg's Neck, Trenton, Trois Rivières, Valcour Island, White Plains, 1776; Bennington Raid, Brandywine, Cooch's Bridge, Danbury Raid, Fort Anne, Fort Clinton, Fort Mercer, Fort Mifflin, Fort Stanwix, Fort Ticonderoga, Germantown, Hubbardton, Oriskany, Paoli, Peekskill Raid, Princeton, Saratoga (New York), Somerset Court House, Staten Island, White Marsh, 1777; Barren Hill, Carrickfergus, Cherry Valley, Dominica, Little Egg Harbour, Monmouth, Newport (Rhode Island), Pondicherry, Rhode Island, Savannah, St Augustine, St Lucia, Ushant, Whitehaven, Wyoming Massacre, 1778; Baton Rouge, Beaufort, Briar Creek, Charleston (South Carolina), Flamborough Head, Grenada, Kettle Creek, Minisink, Newtown, Paulus Hook, Penebscot, Savannah, St Vincent, Stono Ferry, Stony Point, Vincennes, 1779; Gibraltar, 1779–1783; Blackstocks, Camden, Cape Finisterre, Cape St Vincent, Charleston (South Carolina), Charlotte, Fishdam Ford, Fishing Creek, Hanging Rock, King's Mountain, Lanneau's Ferry, Martinique, Mobile, Monck's Corner, Monte Christi, Piqua, Rocky Mount, Ruddle's Station, Rugley's Mill, Springfield (New Jersey), St Louis, St Lucia, Wateree Ferry, Waxhaw, Williamson's Plantation, Young's House, 1780; Augusta (Georgia), Charleston (South Carolina), Chesapeake Capes, Cowan's Ford, Cowpens, Dogger Bank, Eutaw Springs, Fort Ninety-Six, Fort St Joseph, Guildford Courthouse, Haw River, Hobkirk's Hill, Jamestown Ford, Lochrey's Defeat, Martinique, Pensacola, Porto Praya, Quinby Bridge, Richmond (Virginia), Scilly Isles, St Eustatius, Tappan Zee, Tarrant's Tavern, Ushant, Yorktown, 1781; Minorca, 1781–1782; Blue Licks, Dominica, Little Mountain, Negapatam, Providien, Sadras, Saints, St Kitts, Trincomalee, 1782; Cuddalore, 1783

Tupac Amaru Revolt, 1780–1782. See Appendix

2nd British-Mysore War: Arcot, Perambakam, 1780; Negapatam, Pollilore, Porto Novo, Sholinghur, 1781; Arni, Cuddalore, Kumbakonam, Paniani, Trikalur, 1782; Bednur, 1783; Mangalore, 1783–1784

1st Cape Frontier War: Fish River, 1781

Anglo-Dutch War: Elmina, 1782

Hawaiian Wars: Mokuohai, 1782; Kepaniwai, 1790

Shays' Rebellion: Petersham, Springfield (Massachusetts), 1787

Mughal-Maratha War of Ismail Beg: Lalsot, 1787; Agra, 1787–1788; Bagh Dera, Chaksana, 1788; Merta, Patan, 1790

Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War: Kinburn, 1787; Khotin, Liman, Ochakov, Orsova, Thedonisi Island, 1788; Belgrade, Focsani, Rimnik, 1789; Izmail, Tendra, Yenikale Strait, 1790; Babadag, Cape Kaliakra, Matchin, 1791

2nd Russo-Swedish War: Hogland, 1788; Bornholm, Fredriksham, Hogfors, Oland, Svenskund, 1789; Fredriksham, Kronstadt Bay, Reval, Svenskund, Vyborg Bay, 1790

Brabantine Rebellion: Turnhout, 1789

3rd British-Mysore War: Travancore, 1789; Calicut, Sathinungulum, Tiagar, 1790; Koppal, 1790–1791; Arikera, Bangalore, Gurrumkonda, Nandi Drug, Savandrug, Shimoga, 1791; Seringapatam, 1792

Mexican-Apache Wars: Cañón de Ugalde, 1790

Little Turtle's War: Harmar's Defeat, 1790; St Clair's Defeat, 1791; Fallen Timbers, Fort Recovery, 1794

Polish Rising: Dubienka, Zielenice, 1792

French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition): Baisieux, Jemappes, Lille, Longwy, Mainz, Speyer, Valmy, Verdun, 1792; Aix-la-Chapelle, Aldenhoven, Avesnes-le-Sec, Condé-sur-l'Escaut, Dunkirk, Froeschwiller, Hondschoote, Kaiserslautern, La Maddalena, Lincelles, Louvain, Lyons, Mainz, Marseilles, Martinique, Menin, Neerwinden, Pirmasens, Le Quesnoy, St Pierre and Miquelon, Tobago, Toulon, Trouillas, Valenciennes, Wattignies, Wissembourg, 1793; Aldenhoven, Bastia, Beaumont-en-Cambresis, Bellegarde, Bois-le-Duc, Boulou, Boxtel, Calvi, Charleroi, Coullioure, Courtrai, Figueras, First of June, Fleurus, Guadeloupe, Hooglede, Kaiserslautern, Platzberg, Trippstadt, L'Ecluse, Landrécies, Mannheim, Martinique, Mouscron, Nieuport, Ourthe, Pont-à-Chin, Roulers, San Fiorenzo, San Lorenzo (Spain), St Lucia, Tourcoing, Tournai, Villers-en-Cauchies, Willems, 1794; Luxembourg, Mainz, Rosas, 1794–1795; Bilbao, Cape Colony, Genoa, Höchst im Odenwald, Hyèyes, Ile de Groix, Loano, Mannheim, Quiberon, Texel, Trincomalee, Ushant, 1795; Altenkirchen, Amberg, Ambon, Arcola, Aschaffenburg, Augsburg, Bassano, Biberach, Bleichfeld, Borghetto, Caldiero, Calliano, Castelnuovo (Italy), Castiglione, Ceva, Colombo, Cosseria, Dego, Deining, Emmendingen, Friedberg (Bavaria), Friedberg (Hesse), Grenada, Lavis, Lodi, Lonato, Malsch, Millesimo, Mindelheim, Mondovi, Montenotte, Neresheim, Neumarkt, Neuwied, Piacenza, Primolano, Rastatt, Renchen, Roveredo, Saldanha Bay, Schliengen, St Lucia, St Vincent, Uckerath, Wetzlar, Wilnsdorf, Würzburg, 1796;

Huningue, Kehl, Mantua, 1796–1797; Altenkirchen, Cape St Vincent, Diersheim, Fishguard, Imola, Kirchberg, La Corona, La Favorita, Malborghetto, Neuwied, Rivoli, Santa Cruz de Tenerif, Tagliamento, Tarvis, Trinidad (West Indies), 1797; Bern, Civita Castelana, Corfu, Ionian Islands, Minorca, 1798; Valetta, 1798–1800; Naples, 1799

French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War): Angers, Chatillon-sur-Sevre, Chemille, Cholet, Dol-de-Bretagne, Entrammes, Fontenay, Granville, Laval, Le Mans, Lucon, Montaigu, Nantes, Pallet, Pont de Gravereau, Pornic, Saumur, Savenay, St Fulgent, Thouars, Torfou, 1793

2nd Cape Frontier War: Trompettersdrift, 1793

Maratha Territorial Wars: Lakhairi, 1793; Kharda, 1795; Agra, Fatehpur, 1799; Malpura, 1800; Georgegarh, Indore, Ujjain, 1801; Hansi, 1801–1802; Poona, 1802

Persian Wars of Succession: Kerman, 1794

War of the 2nd Polish Partition: Brest-Litovsk, Bydgoszcz, Chelmno, Kobylka, Kruptchitsa, Maciejowice, Praga, Raclawice, Szczekociny, Vilna, Warsaw, 1794

Hawaiian Wars: Nuuanu, 1795

Persian-Georgian War: Shusha, Tiflis, 1795

Punjab Campaigns of Shah Zaman: Rohtas, 1795; Amritsar, Gujrat (Pakistan), 1797; Amritsar, 1798

Afghan Wars of Succession: Girishk, 1795; Kabul, 1800; Nimla, 1809; Kabul, 1818; Kandahar, 1834

Montenegran-Scutari War: Krusi, Martinici, 1796

French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising): Bantry Bay, 1796; Camperdown, 1797; Ballinamuck, Castlebar, Collooney, Donegal Bay, Killala, Rutland, 1798

Irish Rebellion: Antrim, Arklow, Ballygullen, Ballynahinch, Carlow, Enniscorthy, Gibbet Rath, Kilcullen, Kilcumney Hill, Naas, New Ross, Oulart, Tara, Tubberneering, Vinegar Hill, 1798

Franco-American Quasi War: Guadeloupe, 1798; Nevis, 1799; Guadeloupe, 1800

French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East): Alexandria, Malta, Nile, Pyramids, Sediman, Shubra Khit, 1798; Aboukir, Acre, Aswan, Cape Carmel, El Arish, Jaffa, Mount Tabor, Er Ridisiya, Samhud, 1799; Heliopolis, 1800; Aboukir, Alexandria, Cairo, Mandora, 1801

4th British-Mysore War: Malavalli, Seringapatam, Sidassir, 1799

French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition): Acqui, Airolo, Alessandria, Alkmaar, Bergen-aan-Zee, Cassano, Castricum, Coire, Devil's Bridge, Feldkirch, Groote Keeten, Magnano, Mannheim, Martinsbruch, Modena, Muottothal, Novi Ligure, Ostrach, Ramosch, St Maria, Stockach, Tauffes, Toulouse, Trebbia, Turin, Verona, Wetzikon, Zurich, Zuyper Sluys, 1799; Bard, Biberach, Engen, Erbach, Genoa, Höchstädt, Hohenlinden, Ivrea, Marengo, Mincio, Montebello, Montréjeau, Mosskirch, Stockach, Surinam, 1800; Algeciras Bay, Boulogne, Copenhagen, Elba, 1801

3rd Cape Frontier War: Roodewal (Cape Province), Sundays, 1802

Napoleonic Wars (Santo Domingo Rising): Crête-à-Perriot, Gonaives, 1802; Santo Domingo, 1802–1803; Port-au-Prince, Vertieres, 1803

Emmet's Insurrection: Dublin, 1803

1st British-Kandyan War: Hanwella, Kandy, 1803

Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition): St Lucia, 1803; Boulogne, Gorée, Pulau Aur, Surinam, 1804; Amstetten, Austerlitz, Caldiero, Cape Finisterre, Dominica, Durrenstein, Elchingen, Gunzburg, Haslach, Hollarbrunn, Maria Zell, St Kitts, Tagliamento, Trafalgar, Ulm, Wertingen, 1805

2nd British-Maratha War: Agra, Ahmadnagar, Aligarh, Argaum, Assaye, Delhi, Gawilgarh, Laswari, 1803; Delhi, Dieg, Farrukhabad, Monson's Retreat, 1804; Bharatpur, 1805

Tripolitan War: Tripoli, 1803; Tripoli, 1804; Derna, 1805

Russo-Persian Wars: Echmiadzin, 1804; Akhalkalaki, 1810; Aslanduz, 1812; Lenkoran, 1813; Shamkhor, Shusha, Yelizavetpol, 1826; Abbasabad, Echmiadzin, Erivan, 1827

1st Serbian Rising: Ivanovatz, 1805; Misar, 1806; Belgrade, 1807; Nish, 1809; Loznitza, Varvarin, 1810

Rise of Sokoto: Alkalawa, 1806

Vellore Mutiny: Vellore, 1806

Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition): Auerstadt, Blueberg, Buenos Aires, Castelnuovo (Albania), Czarnowo (Mazowieckie), Golymin, Halle, Jena, Lubeck, Magdeburg, Maida, Potsdam, Prenzlau, Pultusk, Saalfield, Santo Domingo, Schleitz, Zehdenick, 1806; Breslau, 1806–1807; Alexandria, Bergfriede, Buenos Aires, Constantinople, Copenhagen, Danzig, Eylau, Friedland, Heilsberg, Hof, Konigsberg, Mohrungen, Montevideo, Ostrolenka, Queetz, Rosetta, St Thomas, Stralsund, Waltersdorf, 1807

Russo-Turkish Wars: Lemnos, 1807; Silistria, 1809; Batin, Silistria, 1810; Loftche, 1810–1811; Ruschuk, 1811; Akhaltsikhe, Kars, Varna, 1828; Adrianople, Kulevcha, Sliven, 1829

Napoleonic Wars (Russo-Swedish War): Juthas, Kauhajoki, Kokonsaari, Lapuu, Nykarleby, Oravais, Pulkkila, Revolax, Siikajoki, Sveaborg, Vasa, Virta bro, 1808; Savar, 1809

Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign): Alcolea, Baylen, Benavente, Bilbao, Cabezon, Cabrillas, Cadiz,

Cardedeu, Durango, Espinosa, Evora, Gamonal, Gerona, Guenes, Lodosa, Mansilla, Medina del Rio Seco, Mengibar, Molins de Rey, Obidos, Pancorbo, Reynosa, Rolica, Rosas, Sahagun, Saragossa, Somosierra, Tudela, Valencia (Valencia), Valmaseda, Vimeiro, Zornoza, 1808; Alba de Tormes, Alcaniz, Alcántara, Almonacid, Amarante, Arzobispo, Banos, Belchite, Braga, Cacabellos, Casa de Salinas, Chaves, Ciudad Real, Corunna, Gerona, Grijon, Igualada, Lugo, Maria, Medellin, Meza de Ibor, Miajadas, Monjuich, Monzon, Ocaña, Oitaven, Oporto, Oveida, Santiago, Talavera de la Reina, Tamames, Trepa, Uclés, Valls, 1809; Hostalrich, 1809–1810; Alcalá la Real, Almaden, Almazan, Almeida, Astorga, Barba de Puerco, Barquill, Baza, La Bisbal, Bussaco, Ciudad Rodrigo, Coa, El Ronquillo, Fuengirola, Fuente de Cantos, Jaen, La Carolina, Lérida, Manresa, Margalef, Torres Vedras, Vich, Vilafranca del Penèdes, Villagarcia, 1810; Tortosa, 1810–1811; Cadiz, 1810–1812; Albuhera, Albuquerque, Aldea del Ponte, Almeida, Arroyo Molinos, Ayerbe, Badajoz, Barrosa, Benavides, Bornos, Calatayud, Campo Mayor, Carpio de Azaba, Castillejos, Cazal Novo, Coimbra (Portugal), Condeixa, El Bodon, Figueras, Foz d'Aronce, Fuentes d'Onoro, Gebora, Monjuich, Montserrat, Navas de Membrillo, Niebla, Olivenza, Orbigo, Oropesa, Pla, Pombal, Redhina, Sabugal, Sagunto, Tarragona, Usagre, 1811; Tarifa, Valencia (Valencia), 1811–1812; Alba de Tormes, Albufera, Alicante, Almaraz, Altafulla, Badajoz, Bilbao, Bornos, Burgos, Castalla, Castrejon, Castrillo, Castro Urdiales, Ciudad Rodrigo, Foix, Garcia Hernandez, Guarda, Guetaria, Huebra, Lequeitio, Llera, Majadahonda, Peñíscola Portugalete, Puente Larga, Roda, Salamanca Forts, Salamanca, Salinas (Spain), Santander, Tordesillas, Venta del Pozo, Villa Muriel, Villagarcia, 1812; Amposta, Biar, Bidassoa, Buenza, Castalla, Castro Urdiales, Dona Maria, Echalar, Fort Balaguer, Irurzun, Lizasso, Lodosa, Maya, Morales, Nive, Nivelle, Ordal, Osma, Pamplona, Poza, Roncesvalles, La Salud, San Marcial, San Millan, San Sebastian, Sorauren, St Jean de Luz, St Pierre d'Irube, Sumbilla, Tarragona, Tiebas, Tolosa, Vera, Villafranca de Oria, Vitoria, Yanzi, Yecla, 1813; Aire, Arriverayte, Bayonne, Bordeaux, Croix D'Orade, Garris, Orthez, St Étienne, Tarbes, Toulouse, Vic-de-Bigorre, 1814

Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition): Abensberg, Aix, Aspern-Essling, Cayenne, Ebelsberg, Eckmühl, Flushing, Gefrees, Hausen, Landshut, Martinique, Neumarkt-St-Viet, Piave, Raab, Raszyn, Regensberg, Sacile, Santo Domingo, St Michael-Leoben, St Paul, Stralsund, Vienna, Wagram, Walcheren, Znaim, 1809; Grand Port, Guadeloupe, Ionian Islands, Mauritius, Réunion, 1810; Anholt, Batavia, Foule Point, Lissa, 1811

Anglo-Arab Wars: Ras al-Khaimah, 1809; Ras al-Khaimah, 1819; Sur, 1820; Balad Bani Bu Ali, 1821; Aden, 1839

West Florida Revolution: Baton Rouge, 1810

Mexican Wars of Independence: Aculco, Dolores, Guanajuato, Monte de las Cruces, 1810; Calderón, Zitácuaro, 1811; Cuautla, Palmar, Zitácuaro, 1812; Palmar, Valladolid, 1813; Puruarán, 1814; San Juan de los Llanos, Sombrero, Soto La Marina, Venadito, 1817; Los Remedios, 1817–1818

Argentine War of Independence: Cotagaita, Suipacha, 1810; Cerro Porteño, Huaqui, Las Piedras, San Nicolás, 1811; Cerrito, Río Piedras, Tucumán, 1812; Ayohuma, Salta, San Lorenzo, Vilcapugio, 1813; Arroyo de la China, Florida (Bolivia), Martín García, Montevideo, 1814; Puesto del Márquez, Sipe-Sipe, Venta y Media, 1815; Parí, 1816; Jujuy, 1821

Paraguayan War of Independence: Tacauri, 1811

Tecumseh's Confederacy: Tippecanoe, 1811

Colombian War of Independence: Palacé, 1811; Ventaquemada, 1812; Carillo, Palacé, Santa Fé de Bogotá, 1813; Bogotá, Calibio, Tacines, 1814; Balaga, Cartagena, Chire, Palo, 1815; Cachirí, La Plata, El Tambo, 1816; Boyacá, Gámeza, Pantano de Vargas, 1819; Genoy, Tenerife, 1820; Cartagena, 1820–1821; Bomboná, 1822

Turko-Wahhabi War: Hejaz, 1812–1813

Gutiérrez-Magee Expedition: Nacogdoches, 1812; La Bahía, 1812–1813; Alazán Creek, Medina (Texas), Rosillo, 1813

Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign): Berezina, Bolshoi-Stakhov, Borisov, Borodino, Dahlenkirchen, Eckau, Gorodeczno, Inkovo, Jacobovo, Kobryn, Kovno, Krasnoye, Loshnitza, Maloyaroslavetz, Mir, Mogilev, Ostrowno, Polotsk, Romanov, Shevardino, Smolensk, Smoliantsy, Tarontin, Valutino, Vinkovo, Vitebsk, Vyazma, 1812; Kalisch, 1813

War of 1812: Bahia, Brownstown, Detroit, Faial, Fort Dearborn, Fort Erie, Madeira, Magagua, Mississinewa, Queenston, Virginia, 1812; Beaver Dams, Black Rock, Boston Harbour, Buffalo, Chateaugay, Chrysler's Farm, Craney Island, Dudley's Defeat, Florida, Fort George (Quebec), Fort Meigs, Fort Niagara, Fort Schlosser, Fort Stephenson, Frenchtown, Guyana, Lake Erie, Newfoundland, Ogdensburg, Portland (Maine), Sackets Harbour, Stoney Creek, Thames (Ontario), York (Ontario), 1813; Baltimore, Barataria, Bladensburg, Caulk's Field, Chippewa, Fort Bowyer, Fort Erie, Fort McHenry, Hampden, Lacolle Mill, Lake Borgne, Lake Champlain, Longwood, Lundy's Lane, Michilimackinac, Pensacola, Plattsburg, Prairie du Chien, Rock Island Rapids, St George's Channel, Sandy Creek, Stonington, Valparaiso, Villeré's Plantation, Western Approaches, 1814; Connecticut, Fort Bowyer, Madeira, New Orleans, Tristan de Cunha, 1815

Venezuelan War of Independence: Puerto Cabello, 1812; Araure, Bárbula, Barquisimeto, Los Horcones, Mosquiteros, Niquitao, San Marcos, Taguanes, Vigirima, 1813; Aragua de Barcelona, Carabobo, La Puerta, La Victoria, San Mateo, Urica, Valencia, 1814; Angostura, Barcelona, La Hogaza, Mucuritas, San Felix, 1817; Calabozo, Semen, Sombrero, 1818; Queseras del Medio, Rincón de los Toros, 1819; Carabobo, Caracas, 1821; Maracaibo, 1823

Creek Indian War: Autossee, Burnt Corn, Fort Mims, Fort Sinquefield, Hillabee, Holy Ground, Littafatchee, Talladega, Tallaseehatchee, 1813; Calabee Creek, Emuckfaw, Enotachopco, Horseshoe Bend, 1814

Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation): Altenberg, Bautzen, Cassel, Colditz, Dennewitz, Dresden, Grossbeeren, Hagelsberg, Hanau, Hoyerswerda, Katzbach, Königswartha, Kulm, Leipzig, Libertwolkwitz, Lindenau, Lowenberg, Luckau, Luneberg, Lützen, Mockern, Pirna, Reichenbach (Germany), Rippach, Sehested, Wachau, Wartenburg, 1813; Cattaro, Danzig, Hamburg, 1813–1814

Chilean War of Independence: Cancha Rayada, Roble, Yerbas Buenas, 1813; Alto de Quilo, Rancagua, 1814; Chacabuco, Gavilán, Potrerillos, Putaendo, Salala, 1817; Cancha Rayada, Maipú, Talcahuano, 1818; Hualqui, Quilmo, 1819; Valdivia, 1820; Chiloé, 1826

Afghan-Sikh Wars: Attock, 1813; Multan, 1818; Shupiyan, 1819; Nowshera, 1823; Peshawar, 1834; Jamrud, 1837

Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign): Arcis-sur-Aube, Bar-sur-Aube, Bergen-op-Zoom, Borghetto, Brienne, Champaubert, Chateau-Thierry, Craonne, Fismes, La Fère-Champenoise, La Rothière, Laon, Maubeuge, Merxem, Montereau, Montmirail, Mortmant, Ourcq, Paris, Rheims, Soissons, St Dizier, Troyes, Vauchamps, 1814

British-Gurkha War: Kalanga, Mangu, Nalagarh, 1814; Jaitak, 1814–1815; Almorah, Jitgargh, Katalgarh, Malaon, Parsa, 1815; Makwanpur, 1816

Peruvian War of Independence: Apacheta, Chacaltaya, Huanta, 1814; Matará, Umachiri, 1815; Callao, Pisco, 1819; Cerro de Pasco, 1820; Callao, 1820–1821; Torata, 1823; Ayacucho, Junín, 1824; Callao, 1824–1826

Algerine War: Cabo de Gata, 1815

Napoleonic Wars (The Hundred Days): Ferrara, Huningue, La Souffel, Ligny, Namur, Quatre Bras, Tolentino, Waterloo, Wavre, 1815

2nd British-Kandyan War: Kandy, 1815

1st Seminole Indian War: Negro Fort, 1816; Fowltown, 1817; Pensacola, 1818

Corsair Wars: Algiers, 1816; Algiers, 1824

3rd British-Maratha War: Kirkee, Mehidpur, Nagpur, Sitibaldi, 1817; Ashti, Chanda (Maharashtra), Koregaon, Malegaon, Rampura, Seoni, Sholapur, Talneer, Kandy, 1818; Asirgarh, 1819

Xhosa Civil War: Amalinda, 1818

Rise of Shaka Zulu: Gqokli, 1818; Mhlatuze, 1819

Persian-Afghan Wars: Kafir Qala, 1818; Herat, 1837–1838; Herat, 1856; Herat, 1863

5th Cape Frontier War: Fish River, Grahamstown, 1819

Argentine Civil Wars: Barrancas, La Herradura, 1819; Cepeda, 1820; Río Seco, 1821; Navarro, 1828; Puente de Márquez, San Roque, La Tablada, Vizcacheras, 1829; Oncativo, 1830; La Ciudadela, Rio Cuarto, Rodeo de Chacón, 1831; Cagancha, Chascomús, Pago Largo, Yerua, 1839; Quebracho Herrado, Sauce Grande, 1840; Caaguazú, Famaillá, Rodeo del Medio, 1841; Rincón de Vences, 1847; Caseros, 1852; Sierra Chica, 1855; Pigüé, 1858; Cepeda, 1859; Pavón, 1861; San Ignacio, 1867; Santa Rosa (Entre Rios), 1870; Ñaembé, 1871; San Carlos, 1872; Santa Rosa (Mendoza), 1874

Brazilian Occupation of Uruguay: Tacuarembó, Huachi, 1820; Huachi, Tanizahua, Yaguachi, 1821; Pichincha, Ríobambo, 1822; Ibarra, 1823

Italian Revolt against Austria: Novara, Rieti, 1821

Turko-Persian War in Azerbaijan: Erzurum, 1821; Khoi, 1822

Greek War of Independence: Dragasani, Eressos, Galaxidi, Monemvasia, Navarino, Sekou, Thermopylae, Tripolitza, Valtesti, Vasilika, Vrachori, 1821; Acropolis, Nauplia, 1821–1822; Chios, Devernaki, Peta, Stura, 1822; Missolonghi, 1822–1823; Anatoliko, Karpenision, 1823; Bodrum, Kasos, Psara, Samos, 1824; Krommydi, Lerna, Maniaki, Navarino, Sphakteria, Trikorpha, 1825; Missolonghi, 1825–1826; Arachova, Chaidari, Klissova, 1826; Acropolis, 1826–1827; Analatos, Distomo, Navarino, 1827

Brazilian War of Independence: Piraja, 1822; Salvador, 1822–1823; Jenipapo, Salvador, 1823; Montevideo, 1823–1824

Cape Frontier Wars: Takoon, 1823

Franco-Spanish War: Trocadera, 1823

Mexican Civil Wars: Almolonga, 1823; Gallinero, Posadas, Poza de las Carmelos, Puebla, Tolomé, Vera Cruz, 1832

Colombian Civil Wars: Catambuco, 1823; Barbacoas, 1824; La Ladera, 1828; Santuario (Antioquia), 1829; Santuario (Cundinamarca), 1830; Palmira, 1831; Buesaco, 1839; Buesaco, Rionegro, 1851; Bogotá, 1854; Manizales, 1860; Bogotá, Subachoque, 1861; Los Chancos, Garrapata, 1876; La Donjuana, Manizales, 1877

Central American National Wars: Mejicanos, Ochomogo, 1823; Arrazola, Comayagua, La Trinidad, Milingo, 1827; Gualcho, San Antonio (El Salvador), 1828; Guatemala City, 1829; San José, 1835; Espiritu Santo, Jicaral, San Pedro Perulapán, Soledad, Tegucicalpa, 1839; El Potrero, Guatemala City, 1840; Cartago, 1842; Danli, Jutiapa, Nacaome, 1844; Comayagua, Leon, Obrajuela, 1845; La Arada, 1851; Atulapa, Omoa, 1853; Masaguara, 1856; Coatepeque, San Felipe, San Salvador, Santa Rosa (Honduras), 1863; Palencia, 1870; Pasaquina, San Lucas Sacatepéquez, Santa Ana, Tacaña, 1871; Comayagua, 1872; Comayagua, 1874; Apaneca, La Esperanza, Pasaquina, San Marcos (Honduras), 1876; Chalchuapa, 1885; Choluteca, Tegucicalpa, 1894

Karankawa Indian War: Jones Creek, 1824

1st British-Ashanti War: Bonsaso, 1824; Dodowa, 1826

1st British-Burmese War: Kemmendine, Martaban, Rangoon, 1824; Bassein, Danubyu, Prome, Watteegoung, 1825; Melloone, Pagahm-mew, Sittang, 1826

Bolivian War of Independence: Tumusla, 1825

Uruguayan War of Independence: Sarandi, 1825

British-Maratha Wars: Bharatpur, 1825–1826

Great Java War, 1825–1830. See Appendix

Argentine-Brazilian War: Los Pozos, Quilmes, 1826; Bacacay, Ituzaingó, Juncal, Monte Santiago, Quilmes, 1827

Siamese-Laotian Wars: Nong Bua Lamphu, 1827

Miguelite Wars: Coimbra (Portugal), Praia Bay, 1828; Oporto, 1832; Cape St Vincent, 1833; Asseiceira, 1834

Peruvian-Colombian War: Tarqui, 1829

Spanish Invasion of Mexico: Tampico, 1829

Chilean Conservative Revolution: Ochagavía, 1829; Lircay, 1830

Belgian War of Independence: Antwerp, 1830; Antwerp, 1832

French Conquest of Algeria: Algiers, 1830; Macta, Mascara, 1835; Constantine, 1836–1837; Smala, 1843; Isly, 1844

Polish Rebellion: Grochow, Ostrolenka, Praga, Siedlce, Warsaw, Wawer, 1831

1st Turko-Egyptian War: Acre, 1831–1832; Belen, Homs, Konya, 1832

Russian Conquest of the Caucasus: Aghdash Awkh, 1831; Gimrah, 1832; Akhulgo, Burtinah, 1839; Darghiyya, 1842; Darghiyya, 1845; Girgil, Saltah, 1847; Zakataly, 1853; Gunib, 1859

Blackfoot Indian War: Pierre's Hole, 1832

Black Hawk Indian War: Bad Axe, Kellogg's Grove, Pecatonica, Rock River, Wisconsin Heights, 1832

Texan Wars of Independence: Anahuac, Nacogdoches, Velasco, 1832; Anahuac, Concepcion, Goliad, Gonzales, Grass Fight, Lipantitlán, San Antonio, 1835; Agua Dulce Creek, Alamo, Coleto Creek, Refugio, San Jacinto, San Patricio, 1836; Mill Creek, San Gabriels, 1839; Dawson's Massacre, Laredo, Mier, Salado, San Antonio, 1842

1st Carlist War: Asarta, Guernica, Los Arcos, Peñacerrada, 1833; Alegría, Alsasua, Arquijas, Artaza, Gulina, Mayals, Mendaza, Peñas de San Fausto, 1834; Arquijas, Bilbao, Descarga, Larrainzar, Larremiar, Mendigorría, Orbiso, Ormáiztegui, Villafranca de Oria, 1835; Arlaban, Bilbao, Fuentarrabia, Hernani, Orduña, San Sebastian, Tirapegui, Zubiri, 1836; Barbastro, Huesca, Irun, Oriamendi, 1837; Morella, 1837–1838; Morella, Peñacerrada, 1838; Morella, 1840

6th Cape Frontier War: Ciskei, 1834–1835

Bolivian-Peruvian War: Yanacocha, 1835; Socabaya, 1836; Ingavi, 1841

2nd Seminole Indian War: Black Point, Dade Massacre, Withlacoochee, 1835; Dunlawton, Fort Defiance, Fort Drane, San Felasco Hammock, Thonotosassa, Wahoo Swamp, Welika Pond, Withlacoochee, 1836; Lake Okeechobee, 1837; Jupiter Inlet, Loxahatchee, 1838; Caloosahatchee, 1839; Bridgewater, Fort King, Indian Key, Martin's Point, 1840; Peliklahaka, 1842

Ecuadorian Civil Wars: Minarica, 1835; Bodegas, 1860

Boer-Matabele War: Vegkop, 1836; Kapain, Mosega, 1837

Uruguayan Civil War: Carpinteria, 1836; Palmar, 1838

Canadian Rebellion: Toronto, 1837

French-Canadian Rebellion: St Charles, St Denis, St Eustache, 1837

Kichai Indian War: Stone Houses, 1837

Boer-Zulu War: Blood River, Bloukranz, Ethaleni, Retief Massacre, Tugela, Veglaer, 1838

Pastry War: San Juan de Ulúa, 1838

Kickapoo Indian Wars: Battle Creek (Texas), Kickapoo Town, Killough Massacre, 1838; Little Concho, Wichita Agency, 1862; Dove Creek, 1865; Nacimiento, 1873

Chilean War of the Confederation: Yungay, 1839

Mexican Federalist War: Acajete, Alcantra, Tampico, 1839; Saltillo, Santa Rita de Morelos, 1840

2nd Turko-Egyptian War: Nezib, 1839; Acre, Beirut, 1840

Cherokee Indian Wars: Neches, San Saba, 1839; Village Creek, 1841

1st British-Afghan War: Ali Masjid, Ghazni, Kalat, 1839; Bamian, Kahan, Parwan Durrah, 1840; Bemaru,

Charikar, Tezin, 1841; Jalalabad, Kabul, Kandahar, 1841–1842; Ali Masjid, 1842; Babi Wali Kotal, Ghoaine, Haikalzai, Jagdalak, Maidan, Tezin, 1842

1st Opium War: Chuanbi, Kowloon, 1839; Dinghai, 1840; Bogue Forts, Dinghai, Guangzhou, Xiamen, Zhenhai, 1841; Ningbo, Zhapu, Zhenjiang, 1842

Comanche Indian Wars: Brushy Creek, 1839; Colorado, Council House Affair, Plum Creek (Texas), 1840; Bandera Pass, 1841; Walker's Creek, 1844; Antelope Hills, Rush Springs, 1858; Crooked Creek, 1859; Prairie Dog Creek, 1860; Adobe Walls, 1864; Blanco Canyon, 1871

Colombian War of Supreme Commanders: Culebrera, Huilquipamba, La Polonia, 1840; Aratoca, La Chanca, Garcia, Itagüí, Ocaña, Riofrio, Salamina, Tescua, 1841

Spanish Civil War, 1840–1843. See Appendix

Zulu Wars of Succession: Maqonqo, 1840; Ndondakusuka, 1856

Natal War: Congella, 1842

Argentine-Uruguayan War: Arroyo Grande, 1842; Montevideo, 1843–1851; Arroyo del Sauce, 1844; India Muerta, Vuelte de Obligada, 1845

British Conquest of Sind: Hyderabad (Pakistan), Miani, Shahdadpur, 1843

British-Gwalior War: Maharajpur (Gwalior), Panniar, 1843

1st New Zealand War: Wairau, 1843; Kapotai, Kororareka, Ohaewai, Puketutu, Te Ahuahu (Bay of Islands), 1845; Ruapekapeka, 1845–1846; Boulcott's Farm, Horokiri, 1846; Rutland Stockade, St John's Wood, 1847

Dominican War of Independence, 1844. See Appendix

Peruvian Civil Wars: Carmen Alto, 1844; La Palma, 1855; Arequipa, 1857–1858

Sonderbund War: Gisikon, 1845

1st British-Sikh War: Ferozeshah, Mudki, 1845; Aliwal, Baddowal, Dharmkot, Sobraon, 1846

French Conquest of Madagascar: Tamatave, 1845; Tamatave, 1883; Andriba, Tananarive, Tsarasoatra, 1895

7th Cape Frontier War: Burnshill, Fort Peddie, Gwanga, 1846

American-Mexican War: Brazito, Fort Texas, Monterey, Monterrey, Palo Alto, Rancho Dominguez, Resaca de la Palma, San Pascual, Thornton's Ambush, 1846; Atlixco, Buena Vista, Cerro Gordo, Chapultepec, Churubusco, Contreras, Embudo Pass, Huamantla, Izúcar de Matamoros, La Cañada, Molino del Rey, Mora, Puebla, Pueblo de Taos, Sacramento, San Gabriel (California), Vera Cruz, 1847; Santa Cruz de Rozales, 1848

Caste War of Yucatan, 1846–1901. See Appendix

Dutch Conquest of Bali: Singaraja, 1846; Jagaraga, 1848; Jagaraga, 1849; Cakranegara, Mataram, 1894; Denpasar, 1906

Cayuse Indian War: Whitman Massacre, 1847; Deschutes, Willow, Tucannon, 1848

French Conquest of Indochina: Danang, 1847; Danang, 1858; Saigon, 1859; Chi Hoa, 1860–1861; Hanoi, 1873; Hanoi, 1882; Hue, Nam Dinh, 1883

Orange Free State War: Boomplaats, 1848

1st Italian War of Independence: Curtatone, Custozza, Goito, Luino, Morazzone, Santa Lucia, Vicenza, 1848; Brescia, Catania, Mortara, Novara, Palestrina, Rome, Velletri, Venice, 1849

Hungarian Revolutionary War: Mór, Schwechat, Pakozd, Vienna, 1848; Acs, Buda, Hatvan, Isaszeg, Kapolna, Komárom, Nagy Sallo, Pered, Segesvár, Temesvár, Waitzen, 1849

2nd British-Sikh War: Kineyre, Ramnagar, Sadulapur, Sadusam, 1848; Multan, 1848–1849; Chilianwallah, Gujrat (Pakistan), 1849

1st Schleswig-Holstein War: Bov, Dannevirke, 1848; Duppel, Eckenforde, Fredericia, 1849; Friedrichstadt, Idstedt, 1850

The Rise of Modern Professionalism, 1850–1900

Pit River Indian War: Clear Lake, Russian, 1850

8th Cape Frontier War: Boomah Pass, Fort White, 1850; Fish River, Viervoet, Waterkloof, 1851; Berea Mountain, Iron Mountain, 1852

Taiping Rebellion: Huazhou, 1850; Jiangkou, Jintian, Yung'an, 1851; Changsha, Dadong Mountains, Guilin, Quanzhou, Suo'yi Ford, Wuchang, 1852; Anqing, Huaiqing, Nanchang, Nanjing, Wuxue, 1853; Luzhou, 1853–1854; Wuchang, 1854; Jiujiang, Wuchang, 1855; Changshu, Nanjing, Wuchang, Zhenjiang, 1856; Nanjing, Qingpu, Shanghai, Songjiang, 1860; Anqing, 1860–1861; Hangzhou, 1861; Ningbo, Shanghai, Tzeki, Yuhuatai, 1862; Nanjing, 1862–1864; Suzhou, 1863; Changzhou, Hangzhou, 1863–1864

1st Chilean Liberal Revolt: Loncomilla, Petorca, 1851

Apache Indian Wars: Janos Massacre, 1851; Arizpe, 1852; Cieneguilla, Rio Caliente, 1854; Canyon of the Dead Sheep, Gila River, 1857; Apache Pass, 1862; Bloody Tanks, 1864; Chiricahua Pass, 1869; Camp Grant, 1871; Skeleton Cave, 1872; Turret Butte, 1873; Rattlesnake Springs, Tinaja de las Palmas, Tres Castillos, 1880; Cibecue Creek, 1881; Big Dry Wash, 1882; Aros, 1886

2nd British-Burmese War: Bassein, Martaban, Pegu, Prome, Rangoon, 1852; Danubyu, 1853

Crimean War: Akhaltsikhe, Bashgedikler, Oltenitza, Sinope, 1853; Alma, Balaklava, Bayazid, Bomarsund, Calafat, Chorokh, Citate, Giurgiu, Inkerman, Kürük-Dar, Odessa, Petropavlosk, Silistria, 1854; Sevastopol, 1854–1855; Chernaya, Eupatoria, Ingur, Kars, Kerch, Kinburn, Malakov, Redan, Sveaborg, 1855

Turko-Montenegran Wars: Ostrog, 1853; Grahovo, 1858; Piva, 1861; Rijeka, 1862

Eureka Rebellion: Eureka Stockade, 1854

Sioux Indian Wars: Fort Laramie, 1854; Ash Hollow, 1855; Spirit Lake, 1857; Birch Coulee, Fort Ridgely, New Ulm, Wood Lake, 1862; Big Mound, Dead Buffalo Lake, Stony Lake, Whitestone Hill, 1863; Killdeer Mountain, 1864; Massacre Canyon, 1873; Crazy Woman Creek, Little Big Horn, Powder, Rosebud, Slim Buttes, War Bonnet Creek, 1876; Muddy Creek, Wolf Mountain, 1877; Wounded Knee Creek, 1890

Mexican Liberal Rising: Acapulco, 1855

Rogue River War: Hungry Hill, 1855; Big Meadow, 1856

3rd Seminole Indian War: Big Cypress Swamp, 1855; Tillis Farm, 1856

Yakima Indian Wars: Toppenish, Union Gap, 1855; Grande Ronde Valley, Satus, 1856; Four Lakes, Pine Creek, Spokane Plain, 1858

National (Filibuster) War: Granada (Nicaragua), La Virgen, Rivas, 1855; Granada (Nicaragua), Masaya, Rivas, San Jacinto (Nicaragua), Santa Rosa de Copán, 1856; Rivas, San Jorge, 1857; Trujillo, 1860

Ute Indian Wars: Poncha Pass, 1855; Spanish Fork Canyon, 1863; Red Canyon, White River, 1879

Anglo-Persian War: Bushire, Reshire, 1856; Khoosh-Ab, Mohammerah, 1857

Cheyenne Indian War: Solomon Forks, 1857

Mormon War: Mountain Meadows, 1857

Pisacane Rebellion: Sapri, 1857

Indian Mutiny: Agra, Aligarh, Aong, Arrah, Badli-ki-Serai, Bashiratganj, Bithur, Bulandshahr, Cawnpore, Chanda (Uttar Pradesh), Chatra, Chinhat, Danchua, Delhi, Dhar, Fatehpur, Ghazi-ud-din-Nagar, Goraria, Jagdispur, Jiran, Kasganj, Khajwa, Lucknow, Mainpuri, Manduri, Mangalwar, Meerut, Najafghar, Narnaul, Nimach, Pali, Pandu Nadi, Patiala, Rawal, Shahganj, Sikander Bagh, Sohanpur, Trimmu Ghat, Unnao, 1857; Alambagh, 1857–1858; Amorha, Awah, Azamgarh, Badshahganj, Banda, Banki, Bareilly, Barodia, Betwa, Bijapur, Budhayan, Burgidiah, Chanda (Uttar Pradesh), Chanderi, Dalippur, Dundia Khera, Fategarh, Garhakota, Gorakhpur, Gwalior, Haraiya, Jagdispur, Jaunpur, Jawra Alipur, Jhansi, Kalpi, Kankar, Kankrauli, Kotah, Kotah-ki-Serai, Kunch, Lucknow, Madanpur, Maniar, Morar, Muhamdi, Musa Bagh, Musjidiah, Nagal, Nagina, Nawabganj, Rahatgarh, Rajgarh, Ranod, Ruiya, Sagar, Sanganer, Shamsabad, Sirsa, 1858; Dausa, Rapti, Sikar, 1859

2nd Opium War: Fatshan Creek, Guangzhou, 1857; Dagu Forts, 1858; Dagu Forts, 1859; Baliqiao, Dagu Forts, 1860

Diaz Revolt in Uruguay: Cagancha, 1858

Mexican War of the Reform: Acámbaro, Ahualalco, Atenquique, Guadalajara, Salamanca, 1858; Colima, La Estancia, Tacubaya, Vera Cruz, 1859; Calderón, Calpulalpam, Guadalajara, Silao, Toluca, Vera Cruz, 1860

2nd Chilean Liberal Revolt: Cerro Grande, Loros, 1859

Venezuelan Federalist Revolt: Santa Inés, 1859; Cople, 1860

2nd Italian War of Independence: Magenta, Melegnano, Montebello, Palestro, San Fermo, Solferino, Tre Ponti, Turbigo, Varese, 1859; Ancona, Calatafimi, Castelfidardo, Milazzo, Palermo, Volturno, 1860; Gaeta, 1860–1861; Messina, 1860–1861

Pyramid Lake Indian War: Pinnacle Mountain, Truckee, 1860

Spanish-Moroccan War: Castillejos, Guad-el-Ras, Tetuán, 1860

2nd New Zealand War: Mahoetai, Puketakauere, Waireka, Waitara, 1860; Te Arei, 1861; Camerontown, Katikara, Koheroa, Mauku, Poutoko, Pukekohe East, Rangiriri, 1863; Gate Pa, Kaitake, Mangapiko, Moutoa, Orakau, Rangiaowhia, Sentry Hill, Te Ahuahu (Taranaki), Te Ranga, 1864; Hungahungatoroa, Nukumaru, Waerenga, 1865; Otapawa, 1866; Makaretu, Matawhero, Moturoa, Te Ngutu-o-temanu, 1868; Mohaka, Ngatapa, Te Porere, 1869; Waikorowhiti, 1870

American Civil War (Eastern Theatre): Aquia Creek, Ball's Bluff, Big Bethel, Blackburn's Ford, Bull Run, Camp Allegheny, Carnifex Ferry, Cheat Summit, Cross Lanes, Dranesville, Fort Hatteras, Greenbrier River, Hoke's Run, Philippi (West Virginia), Rich Mountain, Sewell's Point, 1861; Antietam, Beaver Dam Creek, Bull Run, Cedar Mountain, Chantilly, Cockpit Point, Cross Keys, Drewry's Bluff, Eltham's Landing, Fort Macon, Fredericksburg, Front Royal, Gaines' Mill, Garnett's & Golding's Farm, Goldsboro Bridge, Groveton, Hampton Roads, Hancock, Hanover Court House, Harper's Ferry, Kernstown, Kettle Run, Kinston, Malvern Hill, McDowell, New Bern, Oak Grove, Port Republic, Rappahannock, Roanoke Island, Savage's Station, Seven Days' Battles, Seven Pines, Shepherdstown, South Mills, South Mountain, Thoroughfare Gap, Tranter's Creek, White Hall, White Oak Swamp, Williamsburg, Winchester (Virginia), Yorktown, 1862; Aldie, Auburn, Boonsboro, Brandy Station, Bristoe Station, Buckland Mills, Chancellorsville, Droop Mountain, Fort Anderson, Fredericksburg, Gettysburg, Hanover, Kelly's Ford, Manassas Gap, Middleburg (Virginia), Mine Run, Rappahannock Station, Salem Church, Suffolk, Upperville, Washington (North Carolina), Williamsport, Winchester (Virginia), 1863; Albermarle Sound, Berryville, Cedar Creek, Cedarville, Chester Station, Cloyd's Mountain, Cold Harbour, Cove Mountain, Crater, Cumberland, Darbytown Road, Deep Bottom, Drewry's Bluff, Fair Oaks, Fisher's Hill, Fort Fisher, Fort Stevens, Globe Tavern, Hatcher's Run, Haw's Shop, Jerusalem Plank Road, Kernstown, Lynchburg, Monocacy, Moorefield, Morton's Ford, New Market, New Market Heights, New Market Road, North Anna, Old Church, Opequon, Petersburg, Piedmont, Plymouth (North Carolina), Poplar Springs Church, Port Walthall Junction, Reams Station, Sappony Church, Smithfield, Snicker's Ferry, Spotsylvania Court House, St Mary's Church, Staunton River Bridge, Stephenson's Depot, Summit Point, Swift Creek, Tom's Brook, Totopotomoy Creek, Trevilian Station, Walkerton, Ware Bottom Church, Wilderness, Wilson's Wharf, Yellow Tavern, 1864; Amelia Springs, Appomattox Court House, Appomattox Station, Dinwiddie Court House, Farmville, Five Forks, Fort Fisher, Fort Stedman, Hatcher's Run, High Bridge, Lewis's Farm.

American Civil War (Lower Seaboard): Fort Sumter, Santa Rosa Island, 1861; Baton Rouge, Donaldsonville, Fort Jackson and St Philip, Fort Pulaski, Georgia Landing, New Orleans, Secessionville, Simmon's Bluff, St John's Bluff, Tampa, 1862; Charleston Harbour, Cox's Plantation, Donaldsonville, Fort Bisland, Fort Brooke, Fort McAllister, Fort Wagner, Grimball's Landing, Irish Bend, Lafourche Crossing, Plains Store, Port Hudson, Stirling's Plantation, Vermillion Bayou, 1863; Olustee, 1864; Natural Bridge, 1865

American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi): Bird Creek, Blue Mills Landing, Boonville, Carthage (Missouri), Dry Wood Creek, Fredericktown, Lexington (Missouri), Mount Zion Church, Round Mountain, Shoal Creek, Springfield (Missouri), Wilson's Creek, 1861; Cane Hill, Clark's Mill, Galveston, Glorieta Pass, Hill's Plantation, Independence, Kirksville, Lone Jack, Newtonia, Old Fort Wayne, Pea Ridge, Prairie Grove, Roan's Tan Yard, Sabine Pass, St Charles (Arkansas), Valverde, 1862; Baxter Springs, Bayou Fourche, Cabin Creek, Cape Girardeau, Chalk Bluff, Devil's Backbone, Galveston, Hartville, Honey Springs, Lawrence, Pine Bluff, Sabine Pass, Springfield (Missouri), 1863; Big Blue, Blair's Landing, Elkin's Ferry, Fort Davidson, Fort De Russy, Glasgow, Independence, Jenkins' Ferry, Lexington (Missouri), Little Blue River, Mansfield, Mansura (Louisiana), Marais des Cygnes, Marks' Mills, Marmiton, Mine Creek, Monett's Ferry, Newtonia, Old River Lake, Pleasant Hill, Poison Spring, Prairie d'Ane, Westport, Yellow Bayou, 1864; Palmito Ranch, 1865

American Civil War (Western Theatre): Barbourville, Belmont (Missouri), Camp Wild Cat, Ivy Mountain, Rowlett's Station, 1861; Chattanooga, Chickasaw Bluffs, Corinth (Mississippi), Fort Donelson, Fort Henry, Hartsville, Hatchie Bridge, Island Number Ten, Iuka, Jackson (Tennessee), Memphis (Tennessee), Middle Creek, Mill Springs, Munfordville, Murfreesboro, Parker's Cross Roads, Perryville, Richmond (Kentucky), Shiloh, 1862; Stones River, 1862–1863; Arkansas Post, Bean's Station, Big Black, Blountsville, Blue Springs, Brentwood, Buffington Island, Campbell's Station, Champion Hill, Chattanooga, Chickamauga, Collierville, Corydon, Davis' Cross Roads, Day's Gap, Fort Donelson, Fort Sanders, Franklin, Goodrich's Landing, Grand Gulf, Helena (Arkansas), Hoover's Gap, Jackson (Mississippi), Milliken's Bend, Mossy Creek, Port Gibson, Raymond, Ringgold Gap, Salineville, Snyder's Bluff, Thompson's Station, Vaught's Hill, Vicksburg, Wauhatchie Station, 1863; Adairsville, Allatoona, Athens (Alabama), Atlanta, Brice's Cross Roads, Buck Head Creek, Bull's Gap, Columbia, Cynthiana, Dallas, Dalton, Dandridge, Decatur, Ezra Church, Fair Garden, Fort McAllister, Fort Pillow, Franklin, Griswoldville, Honey Hill, Johnsonville, Jonesborough, Kennesaw Mountain, Kolb's Farm, Lovejoy's Station, Marietta, Marion, Memphis (Tennessee), Meridian, Mobile Bay, Murfreesboro, Nashville, New Hope Church, Okolona, Paducah, Peachtree Creek, Pickett's Mill, Resaca, Rocky Face Ridge, Saltville, Spring Hill, Tupelo, Utoy Creek, Waynesborough (Georgia), 1864; Averasborough, Bentonville, Blakely, Kinston, Monroe's Cross Roads, Rivers' Bridge, Selma, Spanish Fort, 1865

Garibaldi's First March on Rome: Aspromonte, 1862

Serbo-Turkish Wars: Belgrade, 1862

Ecuador-Colombia War: Tulcán, 1862; Cuaspud, 1863

Mexican-French War: Acultzingo, Orizaba, Puebla, 1862; Camerone, Piedra-Gorda, Puebla, San Lorenzo, San Luis Potosi, Santa Inés, 1863; Candelaria, Matehuala, 1864; Oaxaca, Santa Ana Amatlan, Tacámbaro, 1865; La Coronilla, La Carbonera, Matamaros, Miahuatlán, Oaxaca, Santa Gertrudis, Santa Isabel (Coahuila), 1866; Mexico City, Puebla, Querétaro, San Jacinto, San Lorenzo, 1867

Bear River Indian War: Bear River, 1863

British-Satsuma War: Kagoshima, 1863

Pathan Rising: Ambela, 1863

Dominican War of Restoration, 1863–1864. See Appendix

War of the Meiji Restoration: Kyoto, 1863; Kyoto, 1864; Fushimi, Ueno, Wakamatsu, 1868; Goryokaku, 1869

American Civil War (High Seas): Cherbourg, 1864

Navajo Indian War: Canyon de Chelly, 1864

2nd Schleswig-Holstein War: Alsen, Duppel, Helgoland, 1864

Shimonoseki War: Shimonoseki, 1864

Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War: Ash Creek, Cedar Canyon, Sand Creek, 1864; Fort Rice, Julesburg, Platte Bridge, Powder, Tongue, 1865; Plum Creek (Nebraska), 1867; Beaver Creek, Beecher Island, Washita, 1868; Summit Springs, 1869

War of the Triple Alliance: Coimbra (Brazil), 1864; Paysandú, 1864–1865; Corrientes, Paso de Cuevas, Mbutuy, Riachuelo, Uruguayana, Yatay, 1865; Boquerón (Nhembucu), Corrales, Curupaíty, Curuzú, Estero Bellaco, Ilha de Redencão, Tuyutí, Yataití-Corá, 1866; Estero Rojas, Nhembucu, Potrero Obella, Tatayiba, Tuyutí, 1867; Angostura (Paraguay), Avaí, Humaitá, Ita Ybate, Tebicauri, Ytororó, 1868; Acosta-Ñu, Piribebuy, Tupium, 1869; Cerro Corá, 1870

British-Bhutanese War: Dewangiri, 1865

Later Afghan War of Succession: Khujbaz, 1865; Kabul, Sheikhabad, 1866; Khujbaz, Kila Alladad, 1867; Zurmat, 1869; Herat, 1870

Russian Conquest of Central Asia: Tashkent, 1865; Bokhara, 1868; Khiva, 1873; Khokand, 1875; Andizhan, 1876; Geok Tepe, 1879; Geok Tepe, 1881

Peruvian-Spanish War: Callao, Valparaiso, 1866

Seven Weeks War: Aschaffenburg, Blumenau, Gerchsheim, Gitschin, Hammelburg, Helmstadt, Huhnerwasser, Kissingen, Königgratz, Langensalza, Laufach, Liebenau, Münchengratz, Nachod, Podol, Schweinschadel, Skalitz, Soor, Tauberbischofsheim, Tobitschau, Trautenau, Werbach, Wiesenthal, Würzburg, Zella, 1866

3rd Italian War of Independence: Bassa, Bezzecca, Custozza, Lissa, Monte Suella, 1866

Red Cloud's War: Fetterman Massacre, Lodge Trail Ridge, 1866; Fort Phil Kearney, 1866–1867; Hayfield Fight, Wagon Box Fight, 1867

Garibaldi's Second March on Rome: Mentana, Monterotondo, Villa Glori, 1867

British Expedition to Ethiopia: Arogi, Magdala, 1868

Canadian River Expedition: Soldier Spring, 1868

Spanish Revolution: Alcolea, 1868

1st Cuban War of Independence: Bayamo, 1869; Virginius Incident, 1873

Piegan Indian Expedition: Marias, 1870

Franco-Prussian War: Amiens, Artenay, Bagneux, Bazeilles, Beaugency, Beaumont-en Argonne, Beaune-la-Rolande, Bellevue, Buzancy, Chateaudun, Chatillon-le-Duc, Chatillon-sous-Bagneux, Chatillon-sur-Seine, Chevilly, Colombey, Coulmiers, Dijon, Dreux, Etival, Gravelotte, Gray, Hallue, Le Bourget, Loigny, Malmaison, Mars-la-Tour, Metz, Neu-Breisach, Noiseville, Nouart, Nuits Saint George, Saarbrucken, Schlettstadt, Sedan, Soissons, Spicheren, Strasbourg, Thionville, Toul, Verdun, Villiers, Wissembourg, Wörth, 1870; Bapaume, Paris, 1870–1871; Belfort, Dijon, Héricourt, Le Mans, Mont Valerian, Pontarlier, St Quentin, Villersexel, 1871

Kiowa Indian War: Little Wichita, 1870; Salt Creek, 1871

Paris Commune: Paris, 1871

Egyptian Wars of Expansion: Masindi, 1872

Modoc Indian War: Lost River (California), 1872; Lava Beds, Schonchin Flow, 1873

Red River Indian War: McClellan Creek, 1872; Adobe Walls, Buffalo Wallow, Lost Valley (Texas), Lyman's Wagon Train, Palo Duro, 1874; Sappa Creek, 1875

2nd Carlist War: Oroquieta, 1872; Alpens, Bocairente, Mañeru, Montejurra, 1873; Bilbao, 1873–1874; Caspe, Castellfullit de la Roca, Cuenca, Estella, Gandesa, Oteiza, Somorrostro, 1874; Lácar, Treviño, 1875; Estella, Montejurra, 1876

2nd British-Ashanti War: Abakrampa, Escobea, Essaman, 1873; Amoafo, Odasu, 1874

2nd Riel Rebellion: Cypress Hills, 1873; Batoche, Battleford, Cut Knife Creek, Duck Lake, Eagle Hills, Fish Creek, Frenchman's Butte, Frog Lake, Loon Lake, 1885

Saga Rebellion: Saga, 1874

Egyptian-Ethiopian War: Aussa, Gundet, 1875; Gura, 1876

Diaz Revolt in Mexico: Icamole, Jazmin, Oaxaca, San Juan Epatlán, Tecoac, 1876

Serbo-Turkish War: Alexinatz, Djunis, Vucji Do, 1876

Xinjiang Rebellion: Ürümqi, 1876; Turpan, 1877

Nez Percé Indian War: Bear Paw Mountains, Big Hole, Canyon Creek, Clearwater, White Bird Canyon, 1877

Satsuma Rebellion: Kagoshima, Kumamoto, Shiroyama, 1877

9th Cape Frontier War: Ibeka, 1877; Kentani, N'Axama, 1878

Russo-Turkish War: Aladja Dagh, Ardahan, Gorni-Dubnik, Kars, Kizil-Tepe, Loftche, Mount St Nicholas,

Nicopolis (Bulgaria), Orchanie, Pelischat, Plevna, Shipka Pass, Stara Zagora, Svistov, Tahir, Yahni, Zivin, 1877; Erzurum, 1877–1878; Plovdiv, Senova, Tashkessan, 1878

Austro-Turkish War in Bosnia: Sarajevo, 1878

Bannock Indian War: Battle Creek (Idaho), Birch Creek, Pendleton, Silver Creek (Oregon), 1878

2nd British-Afghan War: Ali Masjid, Peiwar Kotal, 1878; Charasia, Fatehabad, Kabul, Sherpur (Afghanistan), 1879; Ahmad Khel, Kandahar, Maiwand, Urzu, 1880

Anglo-Zulu War: Eshowe, 1879; Gingindlovu, Hlobane, Inyezane, Isandhlwana, Khambula, Myer's Drift, Rorke's Drift, Sihayo's Kraal, Ulundi, 1879

Baputhi War: Moorosi's Mountain, 1879

Sheepeater War: Vinegar Hill (Idaho), 1879

White River Massacre: Meeker Massacre, 1879

War of the Pacific: Angamos, Iquique, San Francisco (Chile), Tarapacá, 1879; Arica, Los Angeles (Peru), Tacna, 1880; Chorrillos, Miraflores, 1881; Concepción (Peru), Pucará, Tongos, 1882; Huamachuco, 1883

1st Anglo-Boer War: Bronkhorstspruit, 1880; Ingogo, Laing's Nek, Majuba Hill, 1881

Afghan Civil Wars: Kandahar, 1881; Ghaznigak, 1888

Arabi's Egyptian Rebellion: Alexandria, Kassassin, Tel-el-Kebir, Tel-el-Maskhuta, 1882

Franco-Mandingo Wars: Kéniéra, 1882; Bamako, 1883; Sikasso, 1887–1888; Guélémou, Sikasso, 1898

War of the Desert: Apeleg, 1883

Zulu Civil War: Msebe, Ondini, 1883; Tshaneni, 1884

Sino-French War: Hanoi, Son Tay, 1883; Bac Le, Bac Ninh, Chilung, Fuzhou, Tanshui, 1884; Lang Son, Tuyen-Quang, 1885

British-Sudan Wars: El Obeid, Tokar, 1883; El Teb, Sinkat, Tamai, 1884; Khartoum, 1884–1885; Abu Klea, Abu Kru, Ginniss, Hashin, Kirkeban, Tofrek, 1885; Gemaizeh, Handoub, 1888; Toski, 1889; Tokar, 1891; Firket, Hafir, 1896; Abu Hamed, 1897; Atbara, Dakhila, Gedaref, Omdurman, 1898; Um Diwaykarat, 1899

Russo-Afghan War: Penjdeh, 1885

Serbo-Bulgarian War: Pirot, Slivnitza, 1885

3rd British-Burmese War: Bhamo, Minhla, 1885

Sudanese-Ethiopian War: Kufit, 1885; Debra Sina, 1887; Gallabat, 1889

1st Italo-Ethiopian War: Dogali, 1887; Halai, 1894; Amba Alagi, Coatit, 1895; Makale, 1895–1896; Adowa, 1896

Saudi-Rashidi Wars: Riyadh, 1887; Mulaydah, 1891; Dilam, Riyadh, 1902; Bukairiya, Unayzah, 1904; Rawdhat al Muhanna, 1906; Jirab, 1915; Kinzan, 1915; Hail, 1921

Zulu Rebellion: Ceza, Hlophekhulu, Ivuna, 1888

German Colonial Wars in Africa: Bagamoyo, Pangani, 1889; Lugalo, 1891; Hornkranz, 1893; Iringa, Naukluf, 1894; Adibo, 1896

1st Franco-Dahomean War: Atchoupa, Cotonou, 1890

Chilean Civil War: Caldera Bay, Concón, Huara, Placilla, Pozo Almonte, San Francisco (Chile), 1891

2nd Franco-Dahomean War: Abomey, Dogba, 1892

British Conquest of Nigeria: Yemoji, 1892; Benin, Ugbine, 1897

Venezuelan Civil Wars: San Pedro, 1892; Mata Carmelera, 1898; Tocuyito, 1899; La Victoria, 1902; Ciudad Bolívar, 1903

British Occupation of Sierra Leone: Waima Incident, 1893

Italo-Sudanese Wars: Agordat, 1893

Matabele War: Bembesi, Empadine, Shangani, Shangani Incident, 1893

3rd Franco-Dahomean War: Acheribe, 1893

War of Melilla: Melilla, 1893–1894

Sino-Japanese War: Caohekou, Fenghuangcheng, Haiyang, Kangwachai, Phung-tao, Port Arthur, Pyongyang, Songhwan, Yalu, 1894; Haicheng, 1894–1895; Kaiping, Niuzhuang, Taipingshan, Weihaiwei, Yingkou, 1895

Chitral Campaign: Chitral, Malakand, Nisa Col, Panjkora, 1895

2nd Cuban War of Independence: Coliseo, Dos Ríos, Iguará, Jobito, Mal Tiempo, Manacal, Peralejo, Sao del Indio, 1895; Artemisa, Cacarajicara, Candelaria, Loma del Gato, Paso Real, Punta Brava, Saratoga, 1896; Victoria de la Tunas, 1897

Jameson's Raid: Krugersdorp, 1896

Philippines War of Independence: Binakayan, Imus, San Isidro, San Juan del Monte, San Mateo, Zapote Bridge, 1896; Dasmariñas, Imus, Naic, Puray, Silang, Zapote Bridge, 1897; Baler, 1898–1899

1st Greco-Turkish War: Domokos, Mati, Nezeros, Pharsalus, Velestino, Vigla, 1897

Great Frontier Rising: Dargai, Landi Kotal, Malakand, Dargai, Landi Kotal, Shabkadr, 1897

British Conquest of Northern Nigeria: Ilorin, Bida, 1897; Burmi, Kano, Rawiya, Sokoto, 1903

Spanish-American War: Cienfuegos, Coamo, Cuzco Hills, El Caney, Guam, Guánica, Guantánamo Bay, Las Guásimas, Maine, Manila, Manila Bay, Nipe, San Juan Hill, San Juan (Puerto Rico), Santiago Bay, Santiago de Cuba, 1898

Colombian War of the Thousand Days: Peralonso, 1899; Palonegro, 1900

Philippine-American War: Bagbag, Caloocan, Calumpit, Iloilo, Malolos, Manila, Polo, Quinqua, San Isidro, San Mateo, Santa Cruz, Sucat, Tirad Pass, Vigan, Zapote River, 1899; Balangiga, 1900; Palanan, 1901

2nd Anglo-Boer War: Belmont, Chieveley, Colenso, Elandslaagte, Graspan, Magersfontein, Modder, Nicholson's Nek, Rietfontein, Stormberg, Talana Hill, Willow Grange, 1899; Kimberley, Ladysmith, Mafeking, 1899–1900; Alleman's Neck, Belfast, Biddulphsberg, Boshof, Bothaville, Diamond Hill, Doornkop, Driefontein, Elands River Post, Elandsfontein, Helvetia, Karee Siding, Lindley, Nooitgedacht, Paardeberg, Poplar Grove, Reddersburg, Roodewal (Orange Free State), Sannah's Post, Spion Kop, Stadt, Tugela Heights, Vaal Kranz, Vryheid, Wagon Hill, Wepener, Zand, Zilikats Nek, 1900; Bakenlaagt, Belfast, Blood River Poort, Elands River Poort, Fort Itala, Groenkloof, Kleinfontein, Lichtenburg, Moedwil, Tweefontein, Vlakfontein, 1901; Roodewal (Transvaal), Tweebosch, Yzer Spruit, 1902

French Colonial Wars in North Africa: Ingosten, 1899; In Rhar, In Salah, 1900; Charouine, Timimoun, 1901; Tit, 1902; El Moungar, Taghit, 1903; Casablanca, Taddert, Wadi Kiss, 1907; Bou Denib, Bou Nouala, Djorf, El Menabba, R'Fakha, Settat, Wadi M'Koun, 1908; Fez, 1911; Fez, Sidi Ben Othman, 1912; El Ksiba, 1913; El Herri, Khenifra, 1914; Sidi Sliman, 1915; Gaouz, 1918

World War and Revolution, 1900–1939

French Conquest of Chad: Kouno, Niellim, 1899; Kousséri, 1900

Ashanti Rising: Ashanti, 1900

Boxer Rebellion: Beicang, Beijing, Dagu Forts, Langfang, Tianjin, Yangcun, 1900

Russo-Chinese War: Aigun, Haicheng, Jilin, Liaoyang, Ongon, Qiqihar, Shaho, Xing-an, 1900

Wars of the Mad Mullah: Ferdiddin, Samala, 1901; Erego, 1902; Daratoleh, Gumburu, 1903; Illig, Jidballi, 1904; Dul Madoba, 1913; OK Pass, 1919; Baran, Galiabur, Taleh, 1920

Venezuelan Incident: La Guaira, 1902

American-Moro Wars: Bayan, 1902; Bacolod, Lake Seit, 1903; Kudarangan, Pangpang, 1904; Malala, 1905; Bud Dajo, 1906; Bud Bagsak, Mount Talipao, 1913

Honduran Civil War: Nacaome, 1903; San Pedro Sula, 1919; Tegucicalpa, 1924

British Invasion of Tibet: Guru, Gyantse, Karo Pass, Red Idol Gorge, 1904

Russo-Japanese War: Chemulpo, Chongju, Dashiqiao, Delisi, Dogger Bank, Hill 203, Liaoyang, Motien Pass, Nanshan, Port Arthur, Shaho, Ulsan, Yalu, Yangzi Pass, Yellow Sea, 1904; Port Arthur, 1904–1905; Mukden, Sandepu, Tsushima, 1905

German Colonial Wars in Africa: Freyer's Farm, Naris, Okaharui, Onganjira, Oviumbo, Owikokorero, Waterberg, 1904; Hartebeestmund, Mahenge, Namabengo, Vaalgras, 1905; Van Rooisvlei, 1906

Bambatha Rebellion: Bobe, Mome, Mpukonyoni, 1906

Guatemalan-Salvador War: El Jícaro, 1906

Nicaraguan-Honduran War: Maraita, Namasigue, San Marcos de Colón, 1907

1st Chinese Revolution: Hankou, Hanyang, Nanjing, Wuchang, 1911

Italo-Turkish War: Ain Zara, Benghazi, Sidi El Henni, Sidi Mesri, Tripoli (Libya), 1911; Dardanelles, Derna, Two Palms, Zanzur, 1912

Mexican Revolution: Casas Grandes, Ciudad Juárez, Cuautla, 1911; Rellano, 1912; Chihuahua, Ciudad Juárez, Mexico City, San Andrés, Tierra Blanca, Torréon, 1913; Ojinaga, 1913–1914; Paredón, Torréon, Vera Cruz Incident, Zacatecas, 1914; Naco, 1914–1915; Agua Prieta, Aguascalientes, Celaya, Trinidad (Mexico), 1915

1st Balkan War: Chataldja, Jannitsa, Kirk Kilissa, Kumanovo, Lüleburgaz, Monastir, Sarandáporon, 1912; Adrianople, Jannina, Scutari, 1912–1913; Bizani, 1913

Saudi-Ottoman War: Hofuf, 1913

2nd Balkan (Inter-ally) War: Bregalnica, Kilkis, Kresna, 1913

2nd Chinese Revolution: Nanchang, Nanjing, 1913

World War I (Far East): Qingdao, 1914

World War I (Eastern Front): Augustovo, Galicia, Gnila Lipa, Gorodok, Gumbinnen, Ivangorod, Komárow, Krasnik, Limanowa, Lodz, Masurian Lakes, Orlau-Frankenau, Przemysl, Radom, Rawa Russka, San, Stalluponen, Tannenberg, Warsaw, Zlota Lipa, 1914; Bolimov, Brest-Litovsk, Carpathians, Dvinsk, Gorlice-Tarnow, Grodno, Kovno, Lemberg, Lutsk, Masurian Lakes, Nowo Georgiewsk, Przasnysz, Triple Offensive, Vilna, Warsaw, 1915; Strypa, 1915–1916; Baranovitchi, Brody, Brusilov Offensive, Brzezany, Czernowitz, Lake Naroch, Lutsk, Riga, Stochod, Styr, 1916; Aa River, Brzezany, Kerensky Offensive, Riga, Stanislau, Tarnopol, 1917

World War I (African Colonial Theatre): Dar es Salaam, Duala, Kamina, Sandfontein, Tanga, 1914; Garua, 1914–1915; Gibeon, Jasini, Rufiji Delta, Windhoek, 1915; Mora (Cameroon), 1915–1916; Iringa, Mahiwa, Morogoro, Salaita, Tabora, 1916; Narungombe, 1917; Kasama, 1918

World War I (Balkan Front): Cer, Drina, Kolubara, Sabac, 1914; Belgrade, Kossovo, Kosturino, Vardar, 1915; Salonika, 1915–1918; Arges, Constanta, Flamanda, Florina, Hermannstadt, Mojkovac, Monastir, Rimnic Sarat, Targu Jiu, Tutrakan, 1916; Doiran, Lake Prespa, Maracesti, 1917; Dobro Polje, Doiran, Vardar, 1918

World War I (Caucasus Front): Sarikamish, 1914–1915; Karakilise, Malazgirt, 1915; Bayburt, Bitlis, Erzincan, Erzurum, Koprukoy Trebizond, 1916; Baku, Sardarapat, 1918

World War I (Mesopotamia): Qurna, Sahil, 1914; Ahwaz, Amara, Ctesiphon, Kut-al-Amara, Nasiriya, Shaiba, Umm-at-Tubal, 1915; Kut-al-Amara, 1915–1916; Dujaila, Hanna, Khanikin, Sannaiyat, Sheik Sa'ad, Wadi, 1916; Baghdad, Istabulat, Kut-al-Amara, Mushahida, Ramadi, 1917; Khan Baghdadi, Sharqat, 1918

World War I (War at Sea): Cape Sarych, Coronel, Falkland Islands, Helgoland Bight, Scarborough, Sevastopol, 1914; Dogger Bank, 1915; Atlantic, 1915–1917; Jutland, 1916; Dover Straits, Otranto, 1917; Ostend, Zeebrugge, 1918

World War I (Western Front): Aisne, Albert, Antwerp, Ardennes, Armentières, Arras, Charleroi, Flanders, Frontiers, Gheluvelt, Givenchy, Guise, Haelen, La Bassée, Langemark, Le Cateau, Liège, Lorraine, Marne, Messines, Mons, Mühlhausen, Namur, Nancy, Néry, Nonne Boschen, Ourcq, Tirlement, Ypres, Yser, 1914; Champagne, 1914–1915; Argonne, Artois, Aubers, Bellewaarde, Champagne, Festubert, Frezenberg, Givenchy, Gravenstafel, Hill 60 (Flanders), Loos, Neuve Chappelle, St Julien, Woevre, Ypres, 1915; Albert, Bazentin, Delville Wood, Douaumont, Flers-Courcelette, Fleury, Guillemont, Le Mort-Homme, Louvement, Morval, Pozières, Somme, Souville, Thiepval, Transloy Ridges, Vaux, Verdun, 1916; Ancre, 1916–1917; Aisne, Arras, Broodseinde, Cambrai, Langemark, Menin Road, Messines, Nivelle Offensive, Passchendaele, Pilkem Ridge, Poelcappelle, Polygon Wood, Verdun, Ypres, 1917; Aisne, Albert, Amiens, Arras, Bapaume, Belleau Wood, Cambrai-St Quentin, Canal du Nord, Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry, Courtrai, Épéhy, Flanders, Hamel, Hindenburg Line, Kemmel, Le Cateau, Lys, Marne, Meuse-Argonne, Noyon-Montdidier, Sambre, Scarpe, Selle, Somme, St Mihiel, St Quentin Canal, 1918

World War I (Gallipoli): Anzac, Baby 700, Chunuk Bair, Dardanelles, Dardanelles Narrows, Eski Hissarlik, Hill 60 (Gallipoli), Krithia, Kum Kale, Lone Pine, Sari Bair, Scimitar Hill, Suvla Bay, 1915; Gallipoli, Helles, 1915–1916

World War I (Italian Front): Isonzo, 1915; Asiago, Isonzo, 1916; Caporetto, Isonzo, Monte Grappa, Ortigara, 1917; Monte Grappa, Piave, Vittorio Veneto, 1918

World War I (Middle East): Suez Canal, 1915; Agagia, Beringia, Guiba, Hejaz, Jeddah, Katia, Magdhaba, Rafa, Romani, Taif, Yanbu, 1916; Medina, 1916–1919; Aqaba, Beersheba, El Mughar, Gaza, Huj, Jerusalem, Sheria, Siwa, Tel el Ful, Wejh, 1917; Abu Tellul, Aleppo, Amman, Damascus, Dera, Es Salt, Jericho, Jisr Benat, Maan, Megiddo, Tafileh, Yakub, 1918

Easter Rising: Dublin, 1916

United States' Expedition against Villa: Carrizal, 1916

Villa's Raids: Columbus, Santa Isabel (Sonora), 1916

Manchu Restoration: Beijing, 1917

Russian Civil War: Petrograd, 1917; Orenburg, 1917–1918; Belaya Glina, Chelyabinsk, Ekaterinburg, Ekaterinodar, Kazan, Novocherkassk, Perm, Rostov, Samara, Stavropol, Torgovaya, Ufa, 1918; Alexandrovsk, Chelyabinsk, Don Basin, Ekaterinburg, Kronstadt, Odessa, Omsk, Orel, Peregonovka, Perm, Tobol, Tsaritsyn, Ufa, Velikoknyazheskaya, Voronezh, Zlatoust, 1919; Chita, Kuban, Melitopol, Novorossisk, Perekop, Rostov, Torgovaya, 1920

Finnish War of Independence: Aland, Helsinki, Oulo, Porvoo, Rautu, Ruovesi, Sigurds, Tampere, Vilppula, Vyborg, 1918

D'Annunzio's Insurrection: Fiume, 1919

Estonian War of Independence: Cesis, Narva, Petrograd, Tallinn, 1919

Hungarian-Czech War: Nove Zamky, Salgótarján, 1919

Hungarian-Romanian War: Budapest, Tisza, 1919

Latvian War of Independence: Riga, 1919

Polish-Czech War: Teschen, 1919

Punjab Disturbances: Amritsar, 1919

Sapoa Revolution: Santa Rosa de Copán, 1919

3rd British-Afghan War: Bagh, Dakka, Spin Baldak, Thal, 1919

Russo-Polish War: Minsk, 1919; Berezina, Kiev, Nieman, Szczara, Vilna, Warsaw, Zamosc, 1920

Waziristan Campaign: Palosina, 1919; Ahnai Tangi, Aka Khel, Barari Tangi, 1920

Lithuanian War of Independence: Vilna, 1919; Memel, 1923

Saudi-Hashemite Wars: Turabah, 1919; Taif, 1924; Medina, 1925

Anglo-Irish War: Balbriggan, Bloody Sunday, Cork, Rineen, 1920

Anhui-Zhihli War: Zhuozhou, 1920

French Occupation of Syria: Maisalun, 1920

Iraqi Revolt: Jarbuiyah, Kufah, Rumaithah, Rustumiyah, Samawah, Tel Afar, 1920

Saudi-Kuwait War: Hamad, Jahrah, 1920

Hungarian Civil War: Budapest, 1921

Kronstadt Rebellion: Kronstadt, 1921

2nd Greco-Turkish War: Eskisehir, Inönü, Sakarya, 1921; Afyon, Bursa, Smyrna, 1922

Spanish-Rif War: Anual, 1921; Tizzi Azza, 1922; Tizzi Azza, 1923; Chaouen, 1924; Alhucemas, 1925

1st Zhihli-Fengtian War: Changxindian, 1922

Irish Civil War: Beal na mBlath, Clonmel, Cork, Four Courts, Kilmallock, Limerick, O'Connell Street, Tipperary, Waterford, 1922; Clashmealcon Caves, 1923

Corfu Incident: Corfu, 1923

2nd Zhihli-Fengtian War: Shanhaiguan, 1924

Druze Rebellion: Damascus, Hama, Kafr, Mazraa, Museifré, Rashaya, Suwayda, 1925; Damascus, Suwayda, 1926

Guo Songling's Revolt: Tianjin, Xinmintun, 1925; Tianjin, 1926

1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War: Changsha, Fuzhou, Hesheng, Nanchang, Pingjiang, Tingsiqiao, Tingzu, Wuchang, 1926; Hangzhou, 1926–1927; Linying, Luoyang, Nanjing, Shanghai, Zhumadian, 1927

Chaco War: Sorpresa, 1927; Vanguardia, 1928; Boquerón (Gran Chaco), Carlos Antonio López, 1932; Alihuatá, Campo Vía, Gondra, Nanawa, Pampa Grande, Toledo (Paraguay), 1933; Ballivian, Cañada el Carmen, Cañada Tarija, Cañada-Strongest, Villazón, Ybibobo, Yrendagüe, 1934; Boyuibé, Ingavi, 1935

2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War: Guangzhou, Longtan, Xuzhou, 1927; Baoding, Beijing, Jinan, 1928; Changsha, 1930; Guangchang, Xiang, 1934; Lazikou Pass, Loushan Pass, 1935

Afghan Reformist War: Kabul, 1929

Ikhwan Rebellion: Sabalah, Umm Urdhumah, 1929

Italo-Senussi War: Al Khufrah, 1931

Manchuria Incident: Mukden, 1931; Great Wall, 1933

Shanghai Incident: Shanghai, 1932

Saudi-Yemeni War: Hudayda, 1934

2nd Italo-Ethiopian War: Walwal, 1934; Adowa, Dembeguina, 1935; Addis Ababa, Amba Aradam, Ganale Doria, Lake Ashangi, Maychew, Ogaden, Shire, Tembien, 1936

Waziristan Campaign, 1936–1937. See Appendix

Spanish Civil War: Alcazar, Alto de Leon, Badajoz, Barcelona, Boadilla del Monte, Cape Espartel, Chapinería, El Ferrol, Gijon, Ilescas, Larache, Madrid, Majorca, Melilla, Merida, Navalcarnero, Oveida, Somosierra, Talavera de la Reina, Villarreal de Alava, 1936; Corunna Road, Maria de la Cabeza, 1936–1937; Belchite, Bilbao, Brunete, Cape Cherchell, Gijon, Guadalajara, Guernica, Jarama, Malaga, Santander, Saragossa, 1937; Teruel, 1937–1938; Belchite, Cape Palos, Castellón de la Plana, Ebro, Valencia, Vinaroz, 1938; Barcelona, 1938–1939

Russo-Japanese Border Wars: Kanchatzu, 1937; Changfukeng, 1938; Khalkan Gol, 1939

Sino-Japanese War: Beijing, Marco Polo Bridge, Nanjing, Panay Incident, Pingsingguan, Shanghai, Taiyuan, 1937; Xuzhou, 1937–1938; Guangzhou, Taierzhuang, Wuhan, 1938; Changsha, Nanchang, Nanning, 1939; Anhui Incident, Changsha, Shanggao, 1941

World War II, 1939–1945

Russo-Finnish War: Helsinki, Mannerheim Line, Petsamo, Suomussalmi, Tolvajärvi, 1939; Winter War, 1939–1940; Mannerheim Line, Raate Road, 1940

World War II (Southern Europe): Albania, 1939; Greece, 1940; Malta, 1940–1943; Balkans, Belgrade, Crete, Greece, Maleme, 1941; Bari, Catania, Dodecanese Islands, Foggia, Gela, Kos, Leros, Messina, Naples, Ortona, Palermo, Salerno, Sangro, Sicily, Termoli, Troina, Volturno, 1943; Gustav Line, 1943–1944; Anzio, Apennines, Bologna, Garigliano, Liri Valley, Monte Cassino, Rapido, Rimini, 1944; Gothic Line, 1944–1945; Po Valley, 1945

World War II (War at Sea): River Plate, Scapa Flow, 1939; Atlantic, 1939–1945; Calabria, Cape Passaro, Cape Spada, Cape Spartivento, Glowworm, Taranto, 1940; Alexandria, Bismarck, Cape Bon, Cape Matapan, Sirte, 1941; Barents Sea, Channel Dash, Convoy Pedestal, Convoy PQ17, Sirte, 1942; Alten Fjord, North Brittany, North Cape, 1943

World War II (Western Europe): Bzura, Hel, Kock, Poland, Warsaw, Westerplatte, 1939; Ardennes, Arras, Belgium, Boulogne, Britain, Calais, Channel Ports, Dunkirk, Dyle Line, Eben Emael, France, Laon, Rotterdam, 1940; Bruneval, Dieppe, St Nazaire, 1942; Dams Raid, Ploesti, Schweinfurt, 1943; Berlin, 1943–1944; Aachen, Alsace, Antwerp, Arnhem, Avranches, Bastogne, Breskens, Brest, Caen, Cherbourg, Epsom, Falaise, Fort Driant, Goodwood, Marseilles, Metz, Mons, Montélimar, Montrevel, Mortain, Nancy, Normandy, Nuremberg, Paris, Riviera, Scheldt Estuary, Schnee Eifel, St Lo, St Malo, St Vith, Toulon, 1944; Ardennes, Hürtgen Forest, Siegfried Line, 1944–1945; Colmar, Granville Raid, Reichswald, Remagen, Rhineland, Ruhr, Wesel, 1945

World War II (Northern Africa): Dakar, Gallabat, Mers el Kebir, Sidi Barrani, Tug Argan, 1940; Addis Ababa, Agordat, Amba Alagi, Bardia, Beda Fomm, Debra Tabor, Dessie, El Agheila, Gondar, Keren, Keyes Raid, Massawa, Mechili, Sidi Rezegh, Sollum-Halfaya, Tobruk, Wolchefit Pass, 1941; Alam Halfa,

Algiers, Bir Hacheim, Casablanca, Cauldron, El Agheila, El Alamein, Gazala, Kidney Ridge, Longstop Hill, Mersa Brega, Mersah Matruh, Oran, Tébourba, Tobruk, Torch, 1942; Tunisia, 1942–1943; Bizerte-Tunis, Buerat, El Guettar, Faid Pass, Fondouk Pass, Hunt's Gap, Kasserine, Mareth Line, Médenine, Sidi Nsir, Wadi Akarit, 1943

World War II (Northern Europe): Altmark Incident, Andalsnes, Narvik, Norway, Oslo, Valdres, 1940; Karelia, Lofoten, Vaagso, 1941; Spitzbergen, 1943; Ihantala, Ilomantsi, Kirkenes, Vuosalmi, Vyborg, 1944; Lapland, 1944–1945

World War II (Middle East): Fallujah, Habbaniyah, Iran, Iraq, Lebanon, Palmyra, Syria, 1941

World War II (China): Hong Kong, Kowloon, 1941; Changsha, 1941–1942; Zhejiang-Jiangxi, 1942; Changde, Western Hubei, 1943; Central Henan, Changsha, Guilin-Liuzhou, Hengyang, Ichigo, Longling, Songshan, Tengchong, 1944; Salween, Wanting, 1944–1945; Laohekou, Manchuria, Zhijiang, 1945

World War II (Eastern Front): Bialystok, Brody-Dubno, Bryansk, Chernigovka, Kiev, Minsk, Odessa, Perekop, Rostov, Smolensk, Soltsy, Uman, Vyazma, 1941; Moscow, Sevastopol, 1941–1942; Leningrad, 1941–1944; Kerch, Kharkov, Kotelnikovo, Rostov, Rzhev, Voronezh, 1942; Caucasus, Stalingrad, 1942–1943; Dnieper, Kharkov, Kiev, Kursk, Melitopol, Novorossisk, Orel, Prokhorokva, Smolensk, Zhitomir, 1943; Balkans, Belgrade, Belorussia, Bobruysk, Jassy-Kishinev, Kamenets Podolsk, Kerch, Kirovograd, Korsun, Krivoy Rog, Lublin, Lvov, Minsk, Mogilev, Odessa, Perekop, Riga, Sevastopol, Tarnopol, Uman, Vilna, Vitebsk, Warsaw, 1944; Budapest, 1944–1945; Berlin, Breslau, Danzig, Königsberg, Lake Balaton, Pillau, Poznan, Prague, Vienna, Vistula-Oder, 1945

World War II (Pacific): Guam, Jitri, Kota Bharu, Pearl Harbour, Prince of Wales and Repulse, Wake, 1941; East Indies, Kampar, Malaya, Philippines, 1941–1942; Aleutians, Bataan, Bismarck Sea, Bloody Ridge, Cape Esperance, Coral Sea, Corregidor, Darwin (Australia), Doolittle Raid, Eastern Solomons, Gemas, Gona, Guadalcanal—Naval, Java Sea, Kokoda Trail, Lombok Strait, Macassar Strait, Madoera Strait, Makin, Matanikau, Midway, Milne Bay, Muar, Palembang, Santa Cruz Islands, Savo Island, Singapore, Slim River, Solomon Islands, Sunda Strait, Tassafaronga, Tenaru, Tulagi, 1942; Buna, Guadalcanal—Land, Kokumbona, Papua, Sanananda, 1942–1943; Attu, Cape St George, Empress Augusta Bay, Enogai Inlet, Gilbert Islands, Horaniu, Huon Peninsula, Kolombangara, Komandorski Islands, Kula Gulf, Makin, New Georgia, Piva Forks, Rennell Island, Salamaua, Tarawa, Treasury Islands, Vella Gulf, Vella Lavella—Land, Vella Lavella—Naval, 1943; Arawe, Bougainville, Cape Gloucester, New Britain, Shaggy Ridge, Solomon Islands, 1943–1944; Admiralty Islands, Aitape, Angaur, Biak, Bloody Nose Ridge, Cape Engaño, Eniwetok, Green Islands, Guam, Hollandia, Kwajalein, Leyte, Leyte Gulf, Los Negros, Manus, Mariana Islands, Marshall Islands, Noemfoor, Ormoc Bay, Palau Islands, Palawan Passage, Peliliu, Philippine Sea, Roi-Namur, Saipan, Samar, Sarmi, Sibuyan Sea, Surigao Strait, Tinian, Truk, Wakde, 1944; Philippines, Wewak, 1944–1945; Balikpapan, Bataan, Borneo, Brunei Bay, Corregidor, East China Sea, Iwo Jima, Luzon, Manila, Mindanao, Okinawa, Penang, Tarakan, 1945

World War II (Indian Ocean): Ceylon, Colombo, Madagascar, Trincomalee, 1942

World War II (Burma-India): Bilin, Burma, Kawkareik, Kuzeik, Lashio, Moulmein, Pegu, Prome, Shwegyin, Sittang, Toungoo, Yenangyaung, 1942; Arakan, 1942–1943; Irriwaddy, 1942–1945; Longcloth, 1943; Arakan, 1943–1944; Admin Box, Bhamo, Hukawng, Imphal, Indaw, Kohima, Mogaung, Myitkyina, 1944; Arakan, 1944–1945; Mandalay, Meiktila, 1945

War after 1945

Greek Civil War: Athens, 1944–1945; Deskarti, Litokhoro, Naoussa, 1946; Florina, Grevena, Metsovo, 1947; Konitsa, 1947–1948; Grammos, Karditsa, Kastoria, Roumeli, 1948; Naoussa, 1948–1949; Florina, Grammos, Karpenision, Vitsi, 1949

Indonesian War of Independence: Surabaya, 1945; Marga, 1946; Jogjakarta, 1948

3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War: Handan, Shangdang, Shanhaiguan, 1945; Changchun, Jiangsu, Mukden, Siping, 1946; Siping, Songhua, Yan'an, 1947; Liaoshi, 1947–1948; Baoji, Changchun, Jinan, Jinzhou, Kaifeng, Liaoshen, Luoyang, Mukden, Nianzhuang, Shuangduiji, Siping, Yichuan, 1948; Beijing-Tianjin, Huaihai, 1948–1949; Beijing, Chenguanzhuang, Nanjing, Taiyuan, Tianjin, Xi'an, Yangzi Incident, 1949

French Indo-China War: Thakhek, 1946; Cao-Bang, Dong-Khé, Red River Delta, 1950; Day River, Mao Khé, Nghia Lo, Vinh Yen, 1951; Hoa Binh, 1951–1952; Nghia Lo, 1952; Muong-Khoua, 1953; Dien Bien Phu, 1953–1954

Madagascan Insurrection: Moramanga, 1947

Paraguayan Civil War: Asuncion, 1947

1st Indo-Pakistan War: Bhatgiran, Shalateng, Uri, 1947; Poonch, 1947–1948; Leh, Skardu, Zojila, 1948

Israeli War of Independence: Asluj, Beersheba, Deganiya, Deir Yassin, Gesher, Haifa, Huleiqat, Jaffa, Jenin, Jerusalem, Kastel, Latrun, Lydda-Ramleh, Manara, Mishmar Hayarden, Nazareth, Safad, Tarshiha, Tiberias, 1948; Faluja, 1948–1949

Costa Rican Civil War: Ochomogo, San Isidro del General, 1948; Santa Rosa de Copán, 1955

Korean War: Chochiwon, Chongchon, Chosin, Chunchon, Hadong, Han, Inchon, Koto-ri, Kum, Naktong Bulge, Osan, Pusan Perimeter, Pyongyang, Seoul, Taejon, Unsan, Wonju, Yongchon, 1950; Bloody Ridge, Chipyong, Heartbreak Ridge, Imjin, Kapyong, Namsi, No Name Line, Seoul, Sinuiju, 1951; Hook, Old Baldy, Triangle Hill, White Horse Hill, 1952; Hook, Kumsong, Old Baldy, Pork Chop Hill, 1953

Cuban Revolution: Moncada, 1953; Alegría del Pío, 1956; Cienfuegos, El Uvero, La Plata, 1957; Santa Clara, Sierra Maestra, 1958

Mau Mau Revolt: Aberdare, Mount Kenya, 1955

Imam Revolt: Rustaq, 1955; Jebel Akhdar, 1958

Arab-Israeli Sinai War: Abu Ageila, Gaza, Mitla Pass, Rafa, Straits of Tiran, 1956

Suez Crisis: Port Said, 1956

Algerian War: Algiers, 1956–1957; Frontier, Souk-Ahras, 1958; Kabylie, 1959

Ifni War: Ifni, 1957

Indonesian Civil Wars: Bukittingi, Manado, 1958

Western Sahara Wars: El Ayoun, 1958; Tindouf, 1963; Amgala, Nouakchott, Smara, 1976; Oum Droussa, Zouerate, 1977; Lebouirate, Tan-Tan, 1979; Zag, 1980; Guelta Zemmour, 1981

Laotian Civil War: Vientiane, 1960; Nam Tha, 1962; Long Cheng, 1971–1972; Sala Phou Khoun, 1975

Bay of Pigs Incident: Bay of Pigs, 1961

Franco-Tunisian Crisis: Bizerte, 1961

Congolese Civil War: Elizabethville, 1961; Elizabethville, 1962–1963; Stanleyville, 1964

Brunei Rebellion: Brunei, Limbang, Seria, 1962

Dutch-Indonesian War: West Irian, 1962

Sino-Indian War: Bomdila, Namka Chu, Se La, Tseng Jong, 1962

Venezuelan Porteñazo Uprising: Puerto Cabello, 1962

Vietnam War: Ap Bac, 1963; Bien Hoa, Nam Dong, 1964; Binh Gia, 1964–1965; Ba Gia, Chu Lai, Dong Xoai, Ia Drang, Phuoc Ha, Pleiku, Plei Me, 1965; A Shau, Ap Chinh An, Bon Son, Chau Nhai, Dau Tieng, Long Tan, Plain of Reeds, Song Ngan, Toumorong, Tuy Hoa, 1966; Con Thien, Dak To, Iron Triangle, Khe Sanh, Loc Ninh, Suoi Tre, 1967; Dong Ha, Hue, Khe Sanh, My Lai, Saigon, Tet Offensive, 1968; Dong Ap Bia, 1969; Cambodia, Son Tay, 1970; Lam Son, 1971; An Loc, Eastertide Offensive, Kontum, Quang Tri, 1972; Phuoc Binh, 1974–1975; Ban Me Thuot, Danang, Hue, Saigon, Xuan Loc, 1975

Indonesian-Malaysian Confrontation: Mongkus, 1964; Bau, Plamam Mapu, 1965

Guinea-Bissau War: Como, 1964; Guiledge, 1973

Dominican Civil War: Santo Domingo, 1965

2nd Indo-Pakistan War: Buttar Dograndi, Chawinda, Chhamb, Haji Pir, Khem Karan, Lahore, Phillora, Sialkot, 1965

Arab-Israeli Six Day War: Abu Ageila, Bir Gafgafa, Gaza, Golan Heights, Jebel Libni, Jenin, Jerusalem, Mitla Pass, Nablus, Rafa, 1967

Biafran War: Benin, Calabar, Enugu, 1967; Onitsha, 1967–1968; Abagana, Port Harcourt, 1968; Owerri, 1968–1969; Umuahia, 1969

Yemeni Civil Wars: Sanaa, 1967–1968; Aden, 1986; Aden, 1994

Arab-Israeli Border Wars: Karama, 1968

Bangladesh War of Independence: Dacca, 1971

3rd Indo-Pakistan War: Chhamb, Dacca, Garibpur, Karachi, Longewala, Shakargarh, 1971

Dhofar War: Jebel Akhdar, 1971; Mirbat, 1972

Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War: Chinese Farm, Golan Heights, Latakia, Mount Hermon, Suez Canal, 1973

Turkish Invasion of Cyprus: Kyrenia, 1974

Cambodian Civil War: Phnom Penh, 1975

Lebanon Civil War: Tel-el-Zataar, 1976; Beirut, 1978; Zahle, 1981; Beirut, 1982; Beirut, 1990

Ogaden War: Gode, Jijiga, Marda, 1977; Dire Dawa, Harer, 1977–1978; Jijiga, 1978

Eritrean War of Independence: Massawa, 1977; Keren, 1977–1978; Nakfa, 1977–1986; Barentu, 1985; Afabet, 1988; Massawa, 1990; Dekemhare, 1990–1991; Assab, 1991

Shaba War: Kolwezi, 1978

Tanzanian-Ugandan War: Kagera, 1978; Kampala, 1979

Chad Civil Wars: Ati, 1978; N'Djamena, 1979; N'Djamena, 1980; Abéché, Faya Largeau, Oum Chalouba, 1983; Iriba, Ouaddai, 1990

Afghan Civil War: Herat, Kabul, 1978; Kabul, 1979; Panjshir Valley, 1982; Ali Kheyl, Panjshir Valley, 1984; Khost, Parrot's Beak, 1985; Zhawar, 1986; Jalalabad, 1989; Khost, 1991; Kabul, 1992; Kabul, 1996

Sino-Vietnamese War: Lang Son, 1979

Vietnamese-Cambodian War: Phnom Penh, 1979

Iraq-Iran War: Abadan, Ahwaz, Khorramshahr, Susangerd, 1980; Abadan, Susangerd, 1981; Basra, Khorramshahr, Mandali, Musian, 1982; Amara, Haj Omran, Mehran, Panjwin, 1983; Basra, 1984; Basra, 1985; Al Faw, Mehran, 1986; Basra, Suleimaniya, 1987; Al Faw, Halabja, Mehran, Salamcheh, 1988

Falklands War: Goose Green, Mount Longdon, Mount Tumbledown, San Carlos, South Georgia, Stanley, 1982

American Invasion of Grenada: Grenada, 1983

Libyan-Chad War: Erdi, 1986; Zouar, 1986–1987; Aozou, Fada, Maaten-as-Sarra, Ouadi Doum, 1987

Angolan War: Cuito Cuanavale, 1987–1988

Somalian Civil War: Hargeisa, 1988; Mogadishu, 1990–1991; Mogadishu, 1993

American Invasion of Panama: Panama, 1989

Ethiopian Civil War: Inda Silase, 1989; Asosa, 1990; Addis Ababa, 1991

1st Gulf War: Kuwait, 1990; As-Salman, Baghdad, Bubiyan, Desert Storm, Khafji, Kuwait, Wadi al-Batin, 1991

Croatian War: Vukovar, 1991; Dubrovnik, 1991–1992; Medak, 1993; Knin, 1995

Bosnian War: Bihac, 1992–1995; Sarajevo, 1992–1996; Mostar, 1993–1994; Srebrenica, 1993–1995; Gorazde, 1994–1995

Ethiopian-Eritrean War: Badme, 1998; Badme, Tsorona, 1999; Barentu, 2000

Kargil War: Tololing, 1999

Kossovo War: Kossovo, 1999

Afghanistan War: Kabul, Kandahar, Kunduz, Mazar-i-Sharif, Qala-i-Jangi, Tora Bora, 2001

2nd Gulf War: Baghdad, Basra, Najaf, Nasiriya, Tikrit, Umm Qasr, 2003

A

Aachen ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Aix-la-Chapelle

Aachen ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

American General Courtney Hodges advanced on the Siegfried Line and attacked the heavily fortified Aachen sector, defended by General Friedrich Koechling. After severe street fighting, Colonel Gerhard Wilch was forced to surrender Aachen itself, the first German city to fall. Hodges then took his army through the first breach of the West Wall into the Hürtgen Forest (2–21 October 1944).

Aardenburg ❙ 1672 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

Advancing through the neutral Spanish Netherlands, French General Claude de Dreux Comte de la Nancré secured Dutch Flanders and invaded Zeeland, where he was blocked by the small garrison at Aardenburg, southwest of Breskens, under young Elias Beekman. De la Nancré had to retreat after suffering heavy losses in two failed night attacks and Zeeland was saved (26–28 June 1672).

Aa River ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

After German forces eventually halted the Brusilov Offensive, Russian General Radko Dmitriev launched a new offensive in the north along the River Aa, west of Riga. Germans under General Oskar von Hutier were initially forced back, but he soon counter-attacked to retake the lost ground. Later in the year, he attacked and drove the Russians out of Riga (7–29 January 1917).

Aasle ❙ 1389 ❙ Wars of Scandinavian Union

During a time of rebellion among local nobles, Queen Margaret of Denmark invaded Sweden and at Aasle, near Falkoping, she defeated and captured King Albert of Sweden (Albert of Mecklenburg), bringing an end to the Folkung Dynasty. As a result of the battle, Denmark, Norway and Sweden came under one crown and the Scandinavian Union lasted for 130 years (24 February 1389).

Abadan ❙ 1980 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

After costly delays attempting a frontal assault on Khorramshahr, Iraqi forces tried to encircle and besiege nearby Abadan, on the Shatt al-Arab, one of the largest cities in Iran. The delay enabled Iran to reinforce the island city and, although Iraqis largely surrounded Abadan and seized some suburbs, Iran kept communication open and the invaders settled down to a siege (October 1980).

Abadan ❙ 1981 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Following failure at Susangerd, Iran's Mullahs overthrew President and Army Chief Beni-Sadr and launched a massive counter-offensive to break the siege of Abadan. While Iran suffered terrible losses, the Iraqis were unwilling to sacrifice their army against "human wave" attacks and retreated across the Karun, leaving about 35,000 men to hold nearby Khorramshahr (26–29 September 1981).

Abagana ❙ 1968 ❙ Biafran War

Supporting the siege of rebel-held Onitsha by Nigerian Federal forces under Colonel Murtala Mohammed, a weakly escorted Federal convoy of almost 100 trucks was ambushed to the northeast at Abagana by Biafran Major Jonathon Uchendu. When the two escorting armoured cars fled, the column was burned and destroyed, cutting supplies to the siege, but Onitsha was already doomed (31 March 1968).

Abakrampa ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd British-Ashanti War

When Ashanti Chief Amonquatia threatened British territory on the coast of modern Ghana, he was driven off at Essaman in October, then led a large-scale attack 15 miles inland at Abakrampa, held by Major Baker Russell. The Ashanti were repulsed with heavy losses and, as General Sir Garnet Wolseley approached with reinforcements, they retreated north through Amoafo (5–6 November 1873).

Abancay ❙ 1537 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

In the war between rival Spanish factions in Peru, forces of Diego del Almagro under Rodrigo Orgoñez defeated supporters of the Conquistador Francisco Pizarro at Abancay in southern Peru and captured their commander, Alonzo de Alvarado. The following year, Almagro was defeated by Pizarrist forces at Salinas and executed and the Pizarro faction gained control (12 July 1537).

Abárzuza ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

See Estella

Abbasabad ❙ 1827 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

Russian commander Ivan Paskevich led a new offensive against the Persian invasion of Azerbaijan, where he left a blockade on Erivan, then occupied Nakhichevan and took his siege train against Abbasabad. A 40,000-strong relief army under Persian Prince Abbas Mirza was defeated at nearby Dzhevan-Bulak (5 July) and Abbasabad fell two days later (7 July 1827).

Abéché ❙ 1983 ❙ Chad Civil Wars

Well equipped with Libyan heavy arms, rebels loyal to Goukouni Oueddei seized Faya Largeau in northern Chad, then advanced south and took Abéché. Government troops under Idriss Miskine and Idriss Déby launched a bloody counterattack which retook Abéché and checked the rebel offensive. They then pursued rebel General Negue Djogo back to disaster at Faya Largeau (8–12 July 1983).

Abensberg ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Encouraged by French reverses in Spain, Austria sent Archduke Charles Louis to invade Bavaria and trap Napoleon Bonaparte at Regensberg on the Upper Danube. Beaten at Hausen, Charles was badly defeated further south at Abensberg by Marshals Louis Davout and Jean Lannes. The divided Austrians were defeated in detail in the next two days at Eckmühl and Landshut (20 April 1809).

Abercorn ❙ 1455 ❙ Douglas Rebellion

James Earl of Douglas renewed rebellion against James II of Scotland and took an army against Abercorn, near Queensferry on the Firth of Forth. When rebels began to desert, then dispersed without serious fighting, the Earl withdrew and Abercorn Castle surrendered with many of its garrison executed. Earl Douglas fled to England and his brothers were routed at Arkinholm (March 1455).

Aberdare, Kenya ❙ 1955 ❙ Mau Mau Revolt (1st)

On the offensive against Mau Mau guerrillas in Kenya, General Sir George Erskine swept Nairobi (Operation Anvil, 24 April 1954), then launched 10,000 troops against a reported 2,000 rebels to the north in the Aberdare Forest. Operation Hammer yielded only 99 killed and 62 captured but was quickly followed by another offensive further east on Mount Kenya (6 January–11 April 1955).

Aberdare, Kenya ❙ 1955 ❙ Mau Mau Revolt (2nd)

New commander General Gerald Lathbury followed success at Aberdare and Mount Kenya by attacking the Mau Mau again in the Aberdare Forest. Despite bombers and artillery, this final, large-scale action achieved little and a British colonel was killed by friendly fire. Anti-insurgent gangs took over much of the fighting and the last British troops left Kenya in November 1956 (July 1955).

Aberdare, Wales ❙ 1093 ❙ Anglo-Welsh Wars

When Welsh King Rhys ap Tewdwr invaded Glamorgan and threatened Cardiff, Norman commander Sir Robert Fitzhamon sent a Norman-Welsh force under Cedrych and Einion (who had escaped at Llandudoch in 1088). The King's sons Goronwy and Cynan were both killed in a terrible defeat at Aberdare and Rhys himself was later captured and executed (17–23 April 1093).

Aberdeen ❙ 1639 ❙ 1st Bishops' War

See Dee

Aberdeen ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

Two weeks after victory at Tippermuir, Scottish Royalist forces led by James Graham Marquis of Montrose inflicted a decisive defeat near Aberdeen on non-conformist Covenanters under Robert Balfour Lord Burleigh. The city of Aberdeen suffered a terrible sack before Montrose withdrew through Fyvie. Within months, Montrose renewed his offensive at Inveraray and Inverlochy (13 September 1644).

Aber Edw ❙ 1282 ❙ English Conquest of Wales

Edward I was determined to subdue Llewellyn ap Gruffydd of Wales (who had supported Simon de Montfort in the English Barons' War) and took a large army which was repulsed at Bangor. A month later, he defeated Llewellyn at Aber Edw on the Wye in Radnor. Llewellyn was killed in a skirmish at nearby Builth and the Welsh cause was effectively lost (11 December 1282).

Abomey ❙ 1892 ❙ 2nd Franco-Dahomean War

While advancing north into Dahomey (modern Benin) against King Behanzin, French Colonel Alfred Dodds fought off an attack at Dogba, then secured the holy city of Kana (6 November) before marching on Abomey. With nearby forts bombarded, the King burned and abandoned his capital. Dodds entered the city to enforce another truce until surrender at Acheribe (17 November 1892).

Aboukir ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

With British naval support, a large Turkish force led by Said Mustafa Pasha landed from Rhodes at Aboukir at the mouth of the Nile in an attempt to re-establish Allied influence in Egypt. Attacked by a French force only half as large under Generals Jean Lannes and Joachim Murat, the Turkish army was utterly defeated, with thousands drowned attempting to escape (25 July 1799).

Aboukir ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Despite grim losses, a British-Turkish army under General Sir Ralph Abercromby made a successful amphibious landing on the Nile Delta at Aboukir against strong French forces led by General Louis Friant. Two weeks later, Abercromby began advancing towards Alexandria and was mortally wounded while defeating the French (8 March 1801).

Aboukir Bay ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

See Nile

Abraham, Plains of ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Quebec

Abricium ❙ 251 ❙ 1st Gothic War

See Abrittus

Abrittus ❙ 251 ❙ 1st Gothic War

Emperor Decius recovered from disaster near Philippopolis to attack the Goth leader Kniva in Thrace a year later and pursue him to the lower Danube, where the Romans were lured onto marshy ground at Abrittus (modern Razgrad, Bulgaria). Decius and his son Herennius Etruscus were killed in a terrible defeat, but the Goths were eventually bought off by a cash tribute and withdrew (June 251).

Abu Ageila ❙ 1956 ❙ Arab-Israeli Sinai War

At the start of Israel's pre-emptive war against Egypt in Sinai, Colonel Yehuda Wallach attacked the strong HQ fortress in the north at Abu Ageila under Brigadier Gaafer el Abd. After heavy fighting for outlying positions, Abu Ageila fell by storm and the Egyptians were forced to withdraw, opening Israel's route south towards the Straits of Tiran (29 October–1 November 1956).

Abu Ageila ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

On the central axis of Israel's invasion of the Sinai, General Ariel Sharon's tanks advanced on General Sadi Naguib in the sprawling Egyptian fortifications at Abu Ageila. A brilliant encircling attack, supported by paratroops landing to neutralise artillery, saw the Egyptians forced to flee, abandoning their equipment. Sharon then turned southwest towards Mitla Pass (5–6 June 1967).

Abu Hamed ❙ 1897 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

During British reconquest of the Sudan, General Sir Herbert Kitchener sent a flying column of British and Sudanese troops under General Sir Archibald Hunter forward from Merowi against the Nile railhead at Abu Hamed. The Mahdist troops were driven out, with 300 killed and commander Muhammad al-Zayn captured, and Kitchener continued on towards the Atbara (7 August 1897).

Abu Klea ❙ 1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

British troops under General Sir Herbert Stewart advanced up the Nile as part of the failed attempt to relieve Khartoum and crossed the desert from Dongola to Metemmeh to reach Jakdul and defeat a much larger Mahdist force at Abu Klea. The adventurer Colonel Frederick Burnaby was among those killed. The British won again two days later, further south at Abu Kru (17 January 1885).

Abu Kru ❙ 1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Two days after victory at Abu Klea while crossing the desert from Dongola, British troops of the Khartoum Relief Expedition returning to the Nile were attacked by Mahdists further south at Abu Kru. While his British troops successfully held a defensive square, General Sir Herbert Stewart was mortally wounded. Khartoum fell a few days later and the failed expedition returned to Cairo (19 January 1885).

Abu Tellul ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

In a final offensive to recover Jericho, attacking Turkish and German forces seized the strategic village of Abu Tellul in the hills to the north from the Australian Light Horse under General Charles Cox. A rapid counter-attack regained Abu Tellul and the garrison were forced to withdraw with heavy losses and 500 men captured, including over 350 Germans (14 July 1918).

Abydos ❙ 411 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

See Cynossema

Abydos ❙ 200 BC ❙ 2nd Macedonian War

Philip V of Macedon captured Chios in 201 BC, then ravaged Pergamum and attacked the free city of Abydos, on the Asian side of the Dardenelles. Attalus of Pergamum and his Rhodian allies sent inadequate assistance and the city was forced to surrender after a bitter siege. Abydos regained its freedom in 196 BC under a peace agreement after Cynoscephalae.

Abydos ❙ 989 ❙ Byzantine Military Rebellions

Ten years after routing a usurper at Aquae Saravenae, Byzantine General Bardas Phocas had proclaimed himself Emperor and marched on Basil II at Constantinople, who sought aid from Prince Vladimir of Kiev. Checked at Chrysopolis, Bardas Phocas was then decisively defeated at Abydos at the narrowest point of the Hellespont. He died soon afterwards and the rebellion ended (13 April 989).

Acajete ❙ 1839 ❙ Mexican Federalist War

Generals José Urrea and José Antonio Mejía rose against Mexican President Anastasio Bustamente, who sent General Gabriel Valencia with 1,600 men to meet the Federalists at Acajete, northwest of Jalapa. Urrea fled to Tampico after fierce fighting and heavy losses, while Mejía was captured and shot without trial by newly arrived General Antonio de Santa Anna (3 May 1839).

Acámbaro ❙ 1858 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Just weeks after defeat at Atenquique, the Liberal offensive resumed in central Mexico, where about 4,000 men led by General Manuel Garcia-Pueblita met a strong Conservative government force under General Leonardo Márquez at Acámbaro. While Márquez withdrew north to Querétaro after a severe yet indecisive action, the Liberals were routed six weeks later at Ahualalco (12 August 1858).

Acapulco ❙ 1855 ❙ Mexican Liberal Rising

Liberals under Benito Juarez who supported the reform programme known as the Plan of Ayutla rose against the military dictator General Antonio de Santa Anna and defeated the government at Acapulco in southwest Mexico. Santa Anna then fled the country, ending his 30 years as the dominant personality in Mexican affairs (9 August 1855).

Accra ❙ 1824 ❙ 1st British-Ashanti War

See Bonsaso

Accra ❙ 1826 ❙ 1st British-Ashanti War

See Dodowa

Acerrae ❙ 90 BC ❙ Roman Social War

At war with Rome over failure to extend citizenship, near Teanum the Marsi and Samnites beat Consul Lucius Julius Caesar, who was reinforced and moved south along the Vulturno to relieve Acerrae. When Caesar's Numidian auxiliaries deserted, Samnite commander Papius Mutilus attacked, but was routed with about 6,000 men killed. However, Rome soon lost in the north at Fucine Lake.

Achalzie ❙ 1828 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

See Akhaltsikhe

Achelous ❙ 917 ❙ Later Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars

See Anchialus

Acheribe ❙ 1893 ❙ 3rd Franco-Dahomean War

Despite losing his capital at Abomey, King Behanzin of Dahomey (modern Benin) continued his resistance and General Alfred Dodds soon returned from France to put an end to the renewed war. Advancing to Acheribe, Dodds forced the King's officers to submit (9 November 1893) and enthroned Behanzin's brother Gouchili. Behanzin himself later surrendered (25 January 1894) and died in exile.

Achi Baba ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

See Krithia

Ackia ❙ 1736 ❙ Chickasaw-French War

Advancing up the Mississippi from Louisiana against the hostile Chickasaw, Governor Jean Baptiste le Moyne de Bienville led a mixed French and Chocktaw force to avenge defeat at Chucalissa in March 1736. At Ackia, near Tupelo, Mississippi, de Bienville was routed in the worst French defeat at Indian hands and, after a further failure in 1739, returned to New Orleans (26 May 1736).

Aclea ❙ 851 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

Danish Vikings were beaten at sea off Sandwich, but soon attacked London, then moved south of the Thames where they were defeated at Aclea (probably modern Oakley near Gravesend) by Aethelwulf of Wessex and his second son, Aethelbald. However, the invaders then withdrew to a position near the mouth of the Thames and secured their presence later in the year at Thanet.

Acoma Pueblo ❙ 1598–1599 ❙ Spanish Conquest of New Mexico

As Governor Don Juan de Oñate campaigned against Pueblo Indians in New Mexico, 30 soldiers were surprised near Acoma Pueblo, with 14 killed, including Commander Juan de Zaldivar. His brother Vicente returned and, in a three-day action, captured the "sky city," east of modern Grants. Up to 800 Indians were massacred, with many more enslaved (December 1598–22 January 1599).

Acosta-Ñu ❙ 1869 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Withdrawing from defeat at Piribebuy, the rearguard of Paraguay's retreating army under Colonel Florentino Oveida was quickly attacked by Brazilian forces east of Asunción at Acosta-Ñu. The Paraguayan force—comprising mainly teenage boy-soldiers—was routed with terrible losses and Dictator Francisco Solano López himself was killed six months later at Cerro Corá (16 August 1869).

Acqui ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

After French losses in northern Italy at the hands of Russian General Alexander Suvorov, General Barthélemy Joubert took over command of the French army and managed a sharp victory against an Austrian force at Acqui, south of Genoa. However, facing the combined Austro-Russian army at Novi Ligure two days later, the French were heavily defeated and Joubert was killed (13 August 1799).

Acragas ❙ 406 BC ❙ Carthaginian-Syracusan Wars

Carthaginian General Hannibal invaded Sicily to avenge the loss at Himera (409 BC). He sacked Selinus and Himera, then besieged the Greek city of Acragas, where he died beating a relief force of Spartans under Dexippus and Syracusans led by Daphnaeus. His cousin Himilco finally took the city, and Dionysius of Syracuse ceded half of Sicily. Ten years later, Himilco returned to besiege Syracuse.

Acragas ❙ 262 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

When Rome besieged the city of Acragas, on the southwest coast of Sicily, held for Carthage by Hannibal, a Carthaginian relief army under Hanno was narrowly defeated. As the city fell, Hannibal and his supporters escaped, giving Rome control over most of the rich island. The Romans renamed the city, 60 miles southeast of Palermo, Agrigentum (modern Agrigento).

Acre ❙ 1104 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Following a failed siege of Acre in 1103, Baldwin I of Jerusalem tried again the next year, supported by a large fleet of Genoese galleys in return for commercial privileges and a share of the booty. Cut off by the Genoese blockade, commander Bena Zahr ad-Daulah surrendered Acre after three weeks of assault and the Crusaders secured one of the best harbours in Palestine (6–27 May 1104).

Acre ❙ 1189–1191 ❙ 3rd Crusade

During the two-year siege of Acre, north of modern Haifa, the attacking Crusaders fought at least nine engagements with the defenders and the surrounding army of the Kurdish-Muslim leader Saladin. In June 1191 the Crusaders were reinforced by King Richard I of England, who finally defeated Saladin's relief army and forced the Muslim garrison to surrender (28 August 1189–12 July 1191).

Acre ❙ 1291 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

Sultan Khalil led a massive Mamluk army, which besieged, then stormed Acre, the last great Crusader-held city in the Holy Land. While there were scenes of remarkable heroism by knights of the Military Orders as survivors attempted to escape by sea, the dramatic fall of the city effectively ended the Christian Crusader kingdoms of the Middle East (6 April–18 May 1291).

Acre ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Egypt)

Marching from Egypt into Syria, Napoleon Bonaparte besieged Acre, north of modern Haifa, defended by Djezzar, Pasha of Acre, aided at sea by British Captain Sir William Sidney Smith. Despite beating a relief force at Mount Tabor, Bonaparte made no headway. With his siege train captured off Cape Carmel and his army struck by plague, he withdrew to Egypt (16 March–20 May 1799).

Acre ❙ 1831–1832 ❙ 1st Turko-Egyptian War

Egyptian Viceroy Mohammed Ali invaded Turkish Syria, then sent his son Ibrahim Pasha, who quickly captured Gaza, Jaffa, Jerusalem and Haifa before besieging Pasha Abdallah at Acre. The great fortress fell by storm after a long siege. Following further victories at Homs and Belen, Ibrahim invaded Anatolia and defeated the Turks at Konya (10 November 1831–27 May 1832).

Acre ❙ 1840 ❙ 2nd Turko-Egyptian War

When Egyptian Viceroy Mohammed Ali defeated Turkey at Nezib in Syria in June 1839 and accepted the surrender of the Turkish fleet, the European powers intervened to prevent danger to Allied shipping. Having bombarded Beirut, a British-Austrian naval force under Admiral Sir Robert Stopford then shelled and seized Acre. Ali gave up the Turkish fleet and evacuated Syria (3 November 1840).

Acroinum ❙ 739 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Akroinos

Acropolis ❙ 1821–1822 ❙ Greek War of Independence

Early in the war, the Muslims of Athens, besieged in the Acropolis, were relieved after 83 days by Omer Vrioni, advancing through Thermopylae. When he withdrew after the fall of Tripolitza, 1,150 men, women and children finally surrendered in return for safe passage. About 400 were butchered in the streets before the survivors were saved by French marines (May 1821–21 June 1822).

Acropolis ❙ 1826–1827 ❙ Greek War of Independence

Ottoman commander Reshid Pasha secured Missolonghi and captured Athens (25 August), then besieged the Acropolis, held by Yannis Gouras and later by British Admiral Lord Thomas Cochrane and General Sir George Church. The Acropolis surrendered following defeats at Chaidari and Analatos, and Turkey regained Greece until October's disaster at Navarino (August 1826–5 June 1827).

Acs ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

Austria was driven out of Hungary by defeat at Hatvan, Isaszeg and Waitzen before Russia intervened to help and, following victory at Pered, General Ivan Paskievich and Field Marshal Alfred Windischgratz attacked Hungarian General Artur Gorgey at Acs, outside Komárom, northwest of Budapest. This battle was indecisive but rebellion was later crushed at Temesvár (2 July 1849).

Actium ❙ 31 BC ❙ Wars of the Second Triumvirate

In the Roman struggle for power, Octavian's navy under Marcus Agrippa blockaded Mark Antony's massive fleet in the Bay of Actium, on the west coast of Greece near modern Preveza. One of the largest sea battles of the ancient world led to the eventual surrender of Antony's army. He and his wife Cleopatra fled to Egypt, where they committed suicide to avoid capture (2 September 31 BC).

Aculco ❙ 1810 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

Turned back from Mexico City at Monte de las Cruces, Miguel Hidalgo's peasant army marched on Guadalajara and was intercepted at Aculco by Royalist commander Félix María Calleja marching south from Querétaro. The revolutionaries were defeated and driven out, further dispersing Hidalgo's disheartened force, decisively beaten two months later at Calderón (7 November 1810).

Acultzingo ❙ 1862 ❙ Mexican-French War

Determined to establish French-dominated government in Mexico, Napoleon III sent a force under Charles Latrille Comte de Lorencez, whose advance towards the central plateau was blocked in the Cumbres Pass near Acultzingo by Mexican General Ignacio Zaragoza and 4,000 men. With a bold front assault, the French cleared the pass and Zaragoza fell back on Puebla (28 April 1862).

Adairsville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union commander William T. Sherman marched south through Georgia towards Atlanta and drove General Joseph E. Johnston out of Resaca, southeast of Chattanooga, then advanced through Calhoun and caught the Confederates at Adairsville. Johnston repulsed an initial Union attack but was forced to continue withdrawing through Cassville to a defensive line near Dallas (17 May 1864).

Adana ❙ 964 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

After capturing Aleppo in Syria (962), Nicephorus Phocas (now Emperor Nicephorus II) attacked the Muslims in Asia Minor and beat the garrison of the Cilician coastal city of Adana in southern Turkey, held for Sayf ad-Dawla, Emir of Aleppo. Nicephorus seized Tarsus and continued his advance across the Seyhan River into northern Syria for victory in 969 at Antioch and Aleppo.

Adas ❙ 1775 ❙ Maratha Wars of Succession

On campaign against the Peshwa Raghunath Rao, who had murdered his nephew Narayan Rao, the Maratha ministers at Poona recovered from defeat at Kasegaum in March 1774 and sent General Hari Pant Phadke against the usurper at Adas, near Napar on the Mahi. Raghunath was heavily defeated and deposed. A further action at Adas four months later failed to restore him (17 February 1775).

Adas ❙ 1775 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

Intervening in a Maratha civil war, British forces under Colonel Thomas Keating marched towards Ahmadabad to support deposed Peshwa Raghunath Rao. They were intercepted on the Mahi near Napar at Adas by a Maratha government force under Hari Pant Phadke. A hard-fought but indecisive action with heavy losses on both sides saw Phadke eventually driven back (18 May 1775).

Adasa ❙ 161 BC ❙ Maccabean War

Soon after being defeated at Capharsalma, north of Jerusalem, by the Hebrew leader Judas Maccabeus, the Seleucid General Nicanor awaited reinforcements before renewing his pursuit of the rebels later that year. Lured once again into the nearby hills, the former elephant-master's troops were ambushed at Adasa. This time Nicanor himself was among those killed in the rout.

Adda ❙ 223 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy

Insubrian Gauls from the north campaigning in central Italy were defeated at Telamon and driven back to the Po Valley, where they were pursued and challenged two years later by the successful Roman commander Gaius Flaminius. Consul Flaminius dealt them a heavy defeat at the Adda River but was himself killed in 217 BC in the famous Roman disaster at Lake Trasimene.

Adda ❙ 490 ❙ Goth Invasion of Italy

After defeating Odoacer, the German ruler of Italy, on the Sontius and at Verona and confining him under siege at Ravenna, Theodoric of the Ostrogoths was repulsed by a major sortie from Ravenna at Faenza and withdrew towards the Alps. In a bold defensive battle at the Adda, Theodoric defeated Odoacer, who was once again driven back to a long siege at Ravenna (11 August 490).

Adda ❙ 1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Cassano

Adda ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd coalition)

See Cassano

Ad Decimum ❙ 533 ❙ Vandal War in Africa

The celebrated Byzantine General Belisarius was ordered by Emperor Justinian to reconquer North Africa from the Vandals and met Ammatus, brother of King Gelimer, in battle outside Carthage at Ad Decimum. Ammatus was heavily defeated when he launched his force on a premature charge and the Romans retook the city two days later (13 September 533).

Addis Ababa ❙ 1936 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

With Ethiopia's last remaining forces routed in the north at Maychew and in the east at Ogaden, Italian Marshal Pietro Badoglio rapidly advanced on Addis Ababa. The capital fell following one-sided fighting just three days after Emperor Haile Selassie fled into exile and resistance quickly collapsed. Haile Selassie returned with the Allied counter-offensive in April 1941 (5 May 1936).

Addis Ababa ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

British General Sir Alan Cunningham advanced into Ethiopia from Kenya with armoured forces and defeated the Italian army to seize Addis Ababa, the first enemy-occupied capital to fall to the Allies. Cunningham then continued north through Dessie to attack the Italians in their mountain stronghold at Amba Alagi. Emperor Haile Selassie returned to Addis Ababa on 5 May (6 April 1941).

Addis Ababa ❙ 1991 ❙ Ethiopian Civil War

Facing defeat in Eritrea, the military government of Colonel Haile Mariam Mengistu came under siege in Addis Ababa by Tigrayan rebels advancing from the north and Oromo forces in the south. When Mengistu fled into exile (21 May), the Ethiopian capital collapsed in bloody disorder with perhaps 600 killed. Rebel tanks then rolled in to end the regime and the war (21–28 May 1991).

Aden ❙ 1513 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia

The great Portuguese commander Afonso de Albuquerque captured Goa and Malacca, then took a force to besiege Aden, at the mouth of the Red Sea. He was driven off by Governor Mira Merjão following heavy fighting, but two years later he secured Portugal a foothold in the Persian Gulf by capturing Hormuz. Shortly afterwards, Aden itself fell to the Ottomans (March 1513).

Aden ❙ 1839 ❙ Anglo-Arab Wars

When negotiations over naval use of the port of Aden in modern Yemen failed, British ships shelled the city. It was then captured and occupied by British troops from India under Major Thomas Maubourg Bailie. Attempts to retake the city were repulsed in November 1839 and May 1840, after which Aden remained a British protectorate and colony until 1967 (19 July 1839).

Aden ❙ 1986 ❙ Yemeni Civil Wars

Ali Nasir Muhammad al-Husani seized South Yemen by coup in 1984 and later faced violent attack by forces of former President Abdul Fattah Ismail. Severe fighting around Aden saw a claimed 10,000 killed, including Ismail, before Ali Nasir went into exile with many thousands of supporters. A new government moved steadily towards unification with North Yemen (13–24 January 1986).

Aden ❙ 1994 ❙ Yemeni Civil Wars

Despite unification of North and South Yemen in 1990, dissident Vice President Ali Selim al-Baidh created a Democratic Republic of Yemen in the south. President Ali Abdullah Saleh declared war on the secessionists and the heaviest fighting was around Aden, which suffered severe damage from northern shelling. The rebels were forced into exile and unity was restored (5 May–7 July 1994).

Adibo ❙ 1896 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

When Dagomba tribesmen rebelled against German authority in Togoland, Lieutenant Valentin von Massow was sent with about 100 paramilitary police, who came under massive rebel attack at Adibo (now in modern Ghana). The heavily armed German force inflicted massive losses, then burned the nearby capital, Yendi, and the rebellion was soon crushed (30 November 1896).

Adige ❙ 102 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

Although the Teutones and their Cimbri allies lost in Gaul at Aquae Sextiae, King Boiorix of the Cimbri (who had beaten a Roman army in Gaul at Arausio in 105 BC) marched across the Brenner Pass into northern Italy and on the Adige defeated Consul Quintus Lutatius Catulus. The following year, the Cimbri were destroyed by a reinforced Roman army in the decisive battle at Vercellae.

Adiliya ❙ 1218 ❙ 5th Crusade

Campaigning against Egypt, Crusaders from Palestine and Europe attacked Damietta, at the eastern mouth of the Nile, defended by al-Kamil, son of Sultan al-Adil Saif al-Din. Months of indecisive action ended when the Crusaders launched a determined attack and captured the fortress of Adiliya, a few miles to the south, opening the way to enforcing the siege of Damietta (24–25 August 1218).

Admagetobriga ❙ 61 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

A Germanic tribal leader, the Suebian Ariovistus, invaded Gaul at the invitation of the Sequani—supposedly in a dispute over tolls on the Saone—and crushed the Aedui, led by Chief Eporedorix, an ally of Rome. The Germanic victory at Admagetobriga, in modern Alsace, is said to have inspired Julius Caesar to intervene in central Gaul in support of the Aedui and thus launch his great career.

Admin Box ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

With British forces advancing in Arakan, Japanese General Tadishi Hanaya was reinforced and sent General Tokutaro Sakurai circling north to cut off the strategic Ngakyedauk Pass and besiege Admin Box, near Sinzweya. A tiny garrison under Brigadier Geoffrey Evans held out until General Harold Briggs retook the pass in the claimed first British victory over the Japanese (5–25 February 1944).

Admiralty Islands ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As part of the campaign to isolate Rabaul, American General Innis Swift invaded the Admiralty Islands, northeast of New Guinea, held by Colonel Yoshio Ezaki. With Australian air support, Swift captured Los Negros and then Manus with about 300 Americans killed and 1,200 wounded, and about 3,000 Japanese dead. Victory secured the harbour at Seeadler (29 February–25 March 1944).

Adobe Walls ❙ 1864 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

A well-equipped force led by Colonel Kit Carson marched against Comanche and Kiowa in the Texas panhandle, where they defeated Kiowa under Chief Little Mountain near the trading post at Adobe Walls on the South Canadian River. Carson was then unexpectedly besieged by over 1,000 Comanche. Aided by two mountain howitzers, he broke out and withdrew to New Mexico (24 November 1864).

Adobe Walls ❙ 1874 ❙ Red River Indian War

Fearing the threat of buffalo hunting, 700 Comanche, Kiowa, Cheyenne and Arapaho united under Quanah Parker attacked Adobe Walls trading post, on the South Canadian River in the Texas panhandle. Armed with high-powered buffalo guns, 28 hunters under William Dixon drove off the Indians, killing about 10, with many more wounded. Three whites were killed (27 June 1874).

Adowa ❙ 1896 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War

Reinforcing the Italian invasion of northern Ethiopia after defeat at Amba Alagi and Makale, General Oreste Baratieri's Italian-native force was rashly ordered to advance from a strong defensive position, Adowa, to seek victory for national prestige. They were virtually annihilated by Emperor Menelik's hugely superior Ethiopian army, the worst European defeat in Africa (1 March 1896).

Adowa ❙ 1935 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

In supposed response to a border clash at Walwal, a year later Mussolini sent an invasion force into Ethiopia under General Emilio de Bono. Next day, General Ruggero Santini captured Adowa, which fell with little resistance but was presented as a major victory to avenge defeat 40 years earlier. De Bono secured much of northern Ethiopia before a local counter-attack at Dembeguina (6 October 1935).

Adranum ❙ 344 BC ❙ Timoleon's War

Timoleon of Corinth invaded eastern Sicily to deliver Syracuse from tyranny and attacked Carthaginians under Hicetas of Leontini at Adranum (modern Adano), northwest of Catania. Though badly outnumbered, Timoleon secured a brilliant victory. As a result, Dionysius II of Syracuse yielded eastern Sicily and Timoleon beat the Carthaginians four years later in the west at the Crimisus.

Adrianople ❙ 313 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

See Tzirallum

Adrianople ❙ 324 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

During the resumed Roman War of Succession, Western Emperor Constantine marched with a large army towards the modern Bulgarian border and inflicted a major defeat on Eastern Emperor Valerius Licinius near the Hebrus outside Adrianople (modern Edirne). Licinius fell back under siege in his capital at Byzantium (later Constantinople) and was defeated at sea on the Hellespont (3 July 324).

Adrianople ❙ 378 ❙ 5th Gothic War

Ten years after beating Goths at Noviodunum, Eastern Emperor Valens entered Thrace to meet Goth Chief Fritigern, who had routed a local Roman army at Marcianopolis (377). Without waiting for Western Emperor Gratian and his reinforcements, Valens attacked near Adrianople (modern Edirne). Valens was killed and his army was destroyed in one of Rome's worst military defeats (9 August 378).

Adrianople ❙ 718 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

When the Muslim Generals Maslama and Suleiman besieged Constantinople, Khan Tervel of Bulgaria (who had previously fought against the Byzantines at Anchialus) entered the war to support Emperor Leo III. The Bulgarians defeated Maslama near Adrianople (modern Edirne, Turkey), after which the Muslims abandoned the siege of Constantinople and withdrew.

Adrianople ❙ 1205 ❙ Bulgarian Imperial Wars

A year after seizing Constantinople, the newly established Latin Emperor Baldwin I attempted to suppress a Bulgarian rising in Thrace and besieged Adrianople (modern Edirne). Tsar Kaloyan of Bulgaria arrived with a large relief army and the Crusaders were routed with terrible casualties. Baldwin was captured and died in captivity, and the Bulgarians secured Macedonia (12 April 1205).

Adrianople ❙ 1255 ❙ Bulgarian Imperial Wars

Twenty years after Bulgaria supported Byzantine Nicaea against the Latin Emperors in Constantinople, Tsar Michael II Asen of Bulgaria attempted to recover territory lost to the Byzantines in Macedonia and Thrace. In battle at Adrianople (modern Edirne), Michael suffered a heavy defeat at the hands of Theodore II Lascaris of Nicaea, virtually ending the Bulgarian Empire.

Adrianople ❙ 1355 ❙ Serbian Imperial Wars

Despite defeat at Didymoteichon in 1352, the great Serbian Emperor Stephan Dushan (Uros IV) seized much of the Balkans, then defeated the Byzantine army in a decisive battle at Adrianople (modern Edirne, Turkey) before capturing the city. However, when Stephan died soon afterwards, his hugely expanded empire began to disintegrate and was destroyed three decades later at Kossovo.

Adrianople ❙ 1362 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Ottoman Sultan Murad I expanded his empire in Europe, sending Lala Shahin Pasha into Thrace, where he defeated a weak Byzantine army to seize Adrianople (modern Edirne). Murad then secured Serbia at the Maritza and Kossovo and Turkish rule was established for the next 500 years. The Ottoman capital moved from Brusa to Adrianople until the capture of Constantinople (July 1362).

Adrianople ❙ 1829 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

Russia crossed the Danube in support of Greek independence and, after victories at Varna and Kulevcha, General Count Hans von Diebitsch soon passed the Balkan Mountains and advanced on Adrianople (modern Edirne) near the Bulgarian border. Its capture forced Turkey to sue for peace, granting Greece independence and ceding Russia the mouth of the Danube (20 August 1829).

Adrianople (1st) ❙ 1912–1913 ❙ 1st Balkan War

As the main Bulgarian army advanced into Thrace through Kirk Kilissa, General Nikola Ivanoff was sent to besiege the powerful fortress of Adrianople (modern Edirne), held by about 60,000 Turks under Shukri Pasha. The siege was suspended during a failed armistice, but when fighting resumed, Ivanoff, with Serb reinforcements, took the city by assault (October 1912–26 March 1913).

Adrianople (2nd) ❙ 1913 ❙ 2nd Balkan (Inter-ally) War

When Bulgaria rashly attacked her former allies—Greece and Serbia—Turkey entered the fray and advanced from the lines at Chataldja, outside Constantinople, recently held in the previous war. Advancing into Thrace, General Enver Bey attacked Adrianople, lost just four months earlier. The Bulgarians had to withdraw, and at war's end Turkey retained the valuable prize (22 July 1913).

Ad Salices ❙ 377 ❙ 5th Gothic War

When a local Roman army was defeated south of the Danube at Marcianopolis, Emperor Valens sent his Generals Saturninus, Trajan and Profuturus, who drove the Goths into a marshy region near the mouth of the Danube. A bloody but indecisive action at Ad Salices cost the Romans heavily before Goth Chief Fritigern slipped away. A year later the Goths killed Valens himself at Adrianople.

Aduatuca ❙ 57 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Julius Caesar beat the Belgae at the Aisne and the Sambre and in the same year besieged and captured Aduatuca (modern Tongres), capital of the Aduatuci tribe, in eastern Belgium north of Liège, where he inflicted terrible casualties. Caesar's success effectively completed Roman subjugation of the Belgae, and he soon conquered Brittany with victory at sea in Morbihan Gulf (September 57 BC).

Aduatuca ❙ 54 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

The Belgic tribe of the Eburones under Ambiorix rose against Roman rule in northern Gaul, attacking Titurius Sabinus in winter camp at Aduatuca (modern Tongres) in modern Belgium. When the attack failed, the Romans were lured out by a promise of withdrawal under safe conduct southwest to Namur. They were then promptly ambushed, with all 9,000 reportedly massacred.

Aduwa ❙ 1896 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War
See Adowa

Aduwa ❙ 1935 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War
See Adowa

Adwalton Moor ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

A large Royalist army under William Cavendish Earl of Newcastle advanced to relieve the Parliamentary siege of York and severely defeated a Parliamentary force under Ferdinando Lord Fairfax and his son Sir Thomas on Adwalton Moor, southeast of Bradford near Drighlington. The victory secured for the Royalists all of Yorkshire except Hull (30 June 1643).

Adys ❙ 256 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

Soon after beating the Carthaginian fleet off Cape Ecnomus in southern Sicily, Roman Consul Atilius Regulus landed a large army in North Africa, where he won a major victory at Adys, near Carthage. But Regulus attempted to impose peace terms so harsh that Carthage vowed to fight on and he was defeated and captured by Xanthippus. Carthage was finally defeated near the Aegates in 241 BC.

Aegates Islands ❙ 241 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

In a great naval victory near the Aegates (modern Egadi) Islands off western Sicily, the Roman Consul Lutatius Catulus arrived with a fresh fleet and captured or sank the Carthaginian fleet of Hanno. Coming soon after the loss of their nearby fortress at Lilybaeum, Carthage agreed to evacuate Sicily and sued for peace, bringing the 1st Punic War to an end (10 March 241 BC).

Aegean ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)
See Dodecanese Islands

Aegelsthrep ❙ 456 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Jutes under the semi-legendary warrior brothers Hengist and Horsa were invited to England by King Vortigern of the Britons to fight the Picts, but at Aegelsthrep (modern Aylesford, Kent) they turned on and defeated their former ally. Although Horsa died in the battle, Hengist secured further victory over Vortigern at Creccanford in 457 and eventually occupied Kent and much of southeast England.

Aegina ❙ 458–457 BC ❙ 1st Peloponnesian War

In 460 BC, the island of Aegina in the Saronic Gulf joined Corinth and other states to oppose the increasing power of Athens. In a great naval battle offshore against Athenian commander Leocrates, Aegina lost a reported 70 vessels sunk or captured and her sea power was broken forever. Soon afterwards, Leocrates landed to besiege Aegina, which fell after blockade by land and sea.

Aegospotami ❙ 405 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

Spartan commander Lysander rebuilt the Peloponnesian fleet with Persian aid after defeat at Arginusae, then surprised the Athenians at anchor by the Aegospotami stream, on the northern shore of the Dardenelles. Most of Athenian Admiral Conon's ships and crews ashore were destroyed, effectively ending Athenian naval power. Lysander then sailed to besiege Athens itself (September 405 BC).

Aelia ❙ 133–135 ❙ Bar-Cocheba's Revolt

When Rome constructed a new colony named Aelia Capitolina on the site of ancient Jersualem, Jews rebelled against Emperor Hadrian. Led by Simon Bar-Cocheba (the "second Judas Maccabeus"—claimed by some to be the Messiah), they seized Aelia and held it for two years until the city fell by storm to Julius Severus. The Jewish rebellion was then crushed with extreme severity.

Aescesdune ❙ 871 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain
See Ashdown

Aesis ❙ 82 BC ❙ Sullan Civil War

As General Lucius Cornelius Sulla advanced on Rome, his General, Quintus Metellus Pius, met Loyalist forces to the northeast near Aesis

(modern Iesi) on the Esino, inland from Ancona. The Loyalist army, led by Carrinas, a commander under Gnaeus Carbo, was badly defeated and driven north towards Ariminum (modern Rimini), suffering continued losses in the retreat.

Afabet ❙ 1988 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

When Liberation forces attacked the northern city of Afabet, on the plain east of Nakfa, one of the decisive battles of the 30-year war saw three Ethiopian divisions destroyed, with perhaps 10,000 killed and massive arms and supplies captured. Ethiopian forces abandoned north and west Eritrea and this bloody defeat led directly to a failed military coup in Addis Ababa (17–18 March 1988).

Afyon ❙ 1922 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War

Turkish commander Mustafa Kemal launched his counter-offensive against the Greeks a year after checking their advance into Anatolia at the Sakarya. On the Akar at Afyon (Afyonkarahisar), he achieved a decisive victory, and the Greek army suffered heavy losses in the subsequent brutal pursuit to Smyrna. A large Turkish detachment then diverted north against Brusa (30 August 1922).

Afyonkarahisar ❙ 739 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Akroinos

Agagia ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

While facing the Turks east of Suez, British forces had to turn west against the pro-Turkish Senussi. After several indecisive actions in late 1915, commander William Peyton sent General Henry Lukin against the rebels at Agagia, on the coast near Barrani. The Senussi were routed, with their leader Jafaar Pasha captured. Other Senussi forces were later defeated at Siwa (26 February 1916).

Agathocles ❙ 204 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Roman General Publius Scipio the Younger was besieging Carthaginian Utica, in modern Tunisia, when he attacked a nearby encampment, supported by renegade Numidian Prince Masinissias. The Numidian cavalry ambushed and defeated an enemy advance guard near an old fortress known as the Tower of Agathocles. Hanno (son of Hasdrubal Gisco) was among the many Carthaginians killed.

Agendicum ❙ 52 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Threatened by a fresh rising in central Gaul led by Vercingetorix of the Averni, Julius Caesar's deputy commander Titus Labienus was cut off and outnumbered south of the Seine by Gauls under Camulogenus. Labienus secured a fine defensive victory at Agendicum, near modern Sens, then marched south to join up with Caesar's main army to fight against Vercingetorix at Avaricum.

Ager Sanguinis ❙ 1119 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Antioch, Syria

Aghdash Awkh ❙ 1831 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Facing rebellion in Muslim Dagestan, west of the Caspian, Russian General Grigori Emmanuel advanced to relieve Vnezapnaia, besieged by Imam Ghazi Muhammad. But further south on the Aghdash River at Aghdash Awkh, Emmanuel was ambushed and badly defeated, losing about 400 men. The Imam was killed by a much larger Russian force a year later at Gimrah (13 July 1831).

Agheila ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See El Agheila

Aghrim ❙ 1691 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution

See Aughrim

Agincourt ❙ 1415 ❙ Hundred Years War

King Henry V of England was marching from Harfleur to Calais when he utterly destroyed a much larger French force under Charles D'Albret, Marshal of France, at Agincourt. While more than 5,000 knights of the French nobility were slaughtered by the unexpected power of the English longbow, Henry's campaign was seemingly exhausted and he soon returned to England (25 October 1415).

Aginnum ❙ 107 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

When Germanic tribes invaded Gaul and beat a Roman army in Provence, they continued west, and Consul Lucius Cassius Longinus met them on the Garonne. But the Tigurini under Divico ambushed Lucius at Aginnum (modern Agen), northwest of Toulouse, where he was routed and killed. Rome was beaten again at Arausio, before destroying the invaders at Aquae Sextiae (102 BC) and Vercellae.

Agnadello ❙ 1509 ❙ War of the League of Cambrai

In support of the League of Cambrai between Germany, France, Spain and the Papal States, Louis XII of France took a large army to northern Italy, and at Agnadello, near Crema, routed Venetian General Bartolomeo d'Alviano, who had earlier defeated an Imperial army at Cadore. After a brutal attack on Padua, the anti-Venetian League broke up and Venice recovered lost territory (14 May 1509).

Agordat ❙ 1893 ❙ Italo-Sudanese Wars

Mahdist Emir Ahmed Ali campaigned against the Europeans in eastern Sudan and led about 8,500 men east from Kassala against 2,300 Italians at Agordat, west of Asmara, commanded by Colonel Giuseppe Arimondi. About 3,000 Dervishes, including the Emir, were killed in a complete rout and a year later, Italian forces seized Kassala (21 December 1893).

Agordat ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

After British forces routed Italy's invasion of Egypt at Sidi Barrani (December 1940), troops were transferred to the Sudan, where General William Platt invaded Eritrea. Advancing through Kassala and Barentu, Platt attacked Italian General Luigi Frusci at Agordat. Three days of heavy fighting forced the Italians to withdraw northeast to the mountain stronghold at Keren (27–31 January 1941).

Agosta ❙ 1676 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

See Augusta, Sicily

Agra ❙ 1707 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

See Jajau

Agra ❙ 1713 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

Amid civil disorder which followed the death of the Mughal Bahadur Shah, the rebel Farokshin (Farrukh Siyar) defeated and killed his uncle, the new Padshah Jahandar Shah, in northern India on the River Jumna at Agra. Farokshin then seized the Mughal throne until he was in turn deposed and brutally put to death six years later by three powerful nobles known as the Sayyid brothers (10 January 1713).

Agra ❙ 1787–1788 ❙ Mughal-Maratha War of Ismail Beg

After deserting the Marathas at Lalsot in June 1787, Mughal warlord Ismail Beg and Rohilla Chief Ghulam Kadir besieged Agra, defended by Lakwa Dada Lad. A Maratha relief force was repulsed at Chaksana, but a renewed relief attempt at Bagh Dera, just outside Agra, routed Ismail Beg, who fled the capture of the city by swimming the Jumna (November 1787–18 June 1788).

Agra ❙ 1799 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

When the Maratha Governor of Agra attempted to resist the authority of Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior, General Pierre Perron surprised and seized the city, then besieged the 4,000-strong garrison in the fortress and citadel. A mine destroyed part of the bastion after 58 days, and the garrison surrendered. They were allowed to march out with the honours of war (17 February–16 April 1799).

Agra ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

Within weeks of beating the Marathas at Aligarh and Delhi, General Sir Gerard Lake marched south to the fortress city of Agra, on the Jumna River, where he defeated a large force under Daulat Rao Sindhia. He then besieged and occupied the fort, capturing a massive treasure. Lake's subsequent victory further west at Laswari effectively ended the so-called Hindustan Campaign (4–18 October 1803).

Agra ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Colonel Edward Greathed marched south from Delhi to relieve Agra (besieged following defeat at Shahganj) and routed the rebels at Bulandshahr and Aligarh, before meeting a large force of mutineers outside Agra, on the Jumna River. Greathed inflicted severe casualties in a substantial and decisive action before entering the city next day to raise the siege (7 July–10 October 1857).

Agrigentum ❙ 406 BC ❙ Carthaginian-Syracusan Wars

See Acragas

Agrigentum ❙ 262 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

See Acragas

Agua Dulce Creek ❙ 1836 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

After Colonel Francis W. Johnson was defeated on the Texas Gulf Coast at San Patricio by General José Urrea's invading Mexican army, a foraging party under Dr James Grant was attacked by cavalry 23 miles to the southwest at Agua Dulce. Six escaped and six were captured, but Grant and 14 others were killed. Urrea then continued through Refugio towards Coleto Creek (2 March 1836).

Agua Prieta ❙ 1915 ❙ Mexican Revolution

When the United States recognised President Venustiano Carranza, Francisco (Pancho) Villa attacked the Mexican border town of Agua Prieta, held by Federal General Plutarco Elías Calles since victory at Naco. Watched by American forces at Douglas, Arizona, Villa's cavalry were destroyed against cannon and barbed wire. He later raided into the USA at Columbus (1–3 November 1915).

Aguascalientes ❙ 1915 ❙ Mexican Revolution

Mexican rebel Francisco (Pancho) Villa was defeated by government forces at Celaya and Trinidad, and withdrew to Aguascalientes. He soon counter-attacked General Álvaro Obregón and encircled his position in the nearby semi-desert. With brilliant tactics, Obregón broke out and finally destroyed Villa's force. The rebel fought back four months later at Agua Prieta (6–10 July 1915).

Ahmadabad ❙ 1572 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

On a campaign of conquest into Gujarat, in northwest India, Mughal Emperor Akbar took just 3,000 horsemen against Sultan Muzaffar II in Ahmadabad, where he defeated a reported 20,000 Gujarati clansmen. Following a further victory at Sarnal (24 December), Akbar annexed the rich province, which remained part of the Mughal Empire for the next 200 years (2 September 1572).

Ahmadabad ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

One month after British defeat at Wargaom at the hands of the Maratha Confederacy, General Thomas Goddard attacked the strong fortress of Ahmadabad, on the Sabarmati in Gujarat. Defended by Maratha and Scinde troops, the city fell to a brave assault by Colonel James Hartley, with 106 British and 300 Maratha dead. Goddard went on to capture other key Maratha fortresses (15 February 1780).

Ahmad Khel ❙ 1880 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

As General Sir Donald Stewart marched from Kandahar in southern Afghanistan to support General Sir Frederick Roberts in Kabul, his force was attacked at Ahmad Khel, west of Ghazni, by Afghan Ghilzais. A one-sided engagement saw the British form a defensive square and inflict heavy casualties before continuing towards Ghazni and attacking the Afghans at Urzu (19 April 1880).

Ahmadnagar ❙ 1596 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

Emperor Akbar campaigned to extend Mughal control into Deccan India and sent forces under his son Murad to besiege the great fortress of Ahmadnagar, east of Bombay. In one of India's great heroic exploits, the warrior-Queen Chand Bibi of Bijapur, Regent for the infant Sultan, personally led the defence which saved the city. However, it fell to superior forces four years later.

Ahmadnagar ❙ 1600 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

After years of warfare to extend Mughal control into Deccan India, Emperor Akbar besieged the great fortress of Ahmadnagar, east of Bombay, previously defended by Chand Bibi, Queen Dowager of Bijapur. But she was later killed by the mob and, just as Mughal troops breached the massive walls, the war came to an end, and the Muslim Sultans made peace (21 April–28 August 1600).

Ahmadnagar ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

General Arthur Wellesley restored the deposed Peshwa Baji Rao II of Poona, then marched east into the Deccan against the large French-trained army of Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior and Raja Raghuji Bhonsle of Berar. He defeated the Maratha army near the junction of the Jua and Kelna Rivers, then captured Ahmadnagar, and went on to famous victory in September at Assaye (8 August 1803).

Ahmedabad ❙ 1572 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Ahmadabad

Ahmedabad ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

See Ahmadabad

Ahmednugger ❙ 1596 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

See Ahmadnagar

Ahmednugger ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Ahmadnagar

Ahnai Tangi ❙ 1920 ❙ Waziristan Campaign

After heavy losses at Palosina, Mahsud tribesmen in Waziristan withdrew north to a defensive line at the steep Ahnai Tangi Gorge. Fighting in extreme winter conditions, an Indian army striking force under General Andrew Sheen launched night attacks on the heights. In the face of further losses, the rebels abandoned their positions and fell back further north to Barari Tangi (7–15 January 1920).

Ahualalco ❙ 1858 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

After an indecisive action at Acámbaro, northwest of Mexico City, Conservative Government forces under Generals Miguel Miramón and Tomás Mejía occupied San Lui Potosi (12 September), then marched against Liberal commander Santiago Vidaurri northwest at Ahualalco. Vidaurri was routed, losing 400 killed, 3,000 prisoners, 33 guns and 120 wagons of supplies (29 September 1858).

Ahvenanmaa ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Hango

Ahwaz ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

While British forces under General Sir John Nixon advanced up the Euphrates from Basra towards Amara, a column under General George Gorringe marched northeast along the Korun to protect the key city of Ahwaz and secure the area's oilfields for Britain. A heavy Turkish assault was repulsed, and Gorringe later campaigned on the opposite British flank at Nasiriya (24–27 April 1915).

Ahwaz ❙ 1980 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

At the start of the war, invading Iraqi forces from Basra and Amara converged on Ahwaz, capital of Khuzestan and a major Iranian military base. Heavy fighting saw the Iraqi tanks repulsed and many were lost when Iran flooded key defensive areas. A smaller invading force was also halted further north outside Dezful, and Iran soon struck back at Susangerd (September–October 1980).

Ahzab ❙ 627 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed

See Medina

Aibar ❙ 1452 ❙ Spanish Wars of Succession

When Blanche of Navarre married Prince Juan of Aragon and Castile, he assumed her patrimony, but she died leaving him the title, while the Governorship of Navarre went to their only son, Prince Charles of Viana. In a bitter family dispute, Juan defeated his son in battle at Aibar near Pamplona and made him prisoner. Charles was later recognised as heir, but predeceased his father.

Aiglaesthrep ❙ 456 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Aegelsthrep

Aiguillon ❙ 1346 ❙ Hundred Years War

John of Valois, Duke of Normandy, marched into English-held Gascony and besieged the small garrison at Aiguillon on the Garonne, held by Ralph Stafford, who took the castle in December 1345. Holding out against costly assaults, Stafford was finally relieved when Edward III of England led a fresh invasion, culminating in the great English victory a week later at Crecy (2 April–20 August 1346).

Aigun ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

In the aftermath of the Boxer Rebellion, Russians on the Amur under General Deian Subotich advanced through Sakhalin on the Chinese at Aigun (in modern Heihe in Heilongjiang). In very heavy house-to-house fighting, Aigun was stormed by General Pavel Rennenkampf. The Russians then marched south through Mergen (Nenjiang) to the Chinese Eastern Railway at Qiqihar (2–5 August 1900).

Ain Diar ❙ 744 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

Following the death of the Umayyad Caliph Yazid III, his former ally Governor Marwan of Armenia marched into Syria and utterly defeated the Caliph's army in a narrow valley at Ain Diar, near the modern Turkish border. Yazid's designated successor fled Damascus and Marwan seized the throne as Marwan II, the last of the Umayyad Caliphs.

Ain Jalut ❙ 1260 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

After Mongols captured Baghdad (1258), Kitbuqa invaded Syria, then advanced into Palestine, where his Mongol army was met by the Mamluk Baibars, supported by Mamluk Sultan Kutuz from Egypt. A decisive battle near Nazareth at Ain Jalut—the Pools of Goliath—saw Kitbuqa routed and executed. The Mamluks regained Syria and Mongol expansion was halted (3 September 1260).

Ain Tamar ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid advanced up the Euphrates from Hira to take Anbar, then marched west against the powerful fortress of Ain Tamar, defended by Persian Governor Mahran and Christian Arabs under Oqba (who was defeated and captured nearby). The fort capitulated after a brutal siege. Khalid then executed Oqba and other Arab leaders and advanced on Firadz (August 633).

Ain Zara ❙ 1911 ❙ Italo-Turkish War

With Tripoli secured in the east at Sidi Mesri and Sidi El Henni, Italian General Guglielmo Pecori-Giraldi soon led 12,000 men south against the Turko-Arab position at Ain Zara. An artillery barrage and very heavy fighting saw the town taken and large quantities of guns and supplies captured, but the Italian flanking movement was too slow and the Turks escaped (4 December 1911).

Aire ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Defeated at Orthez, Marshal Nicolas Soult withdrew to the Upper Adour to make a stand on the mid-river island of Aire. Attacked days later by General Sir Rowland Hill, supported by Generals Edward Barnes and John Byng, the French Generals Bertrand Clausel, Jean Isidore Harispe and Eugène Villatte were defeated south of the river, and Soult withdrew southeast (2 March 1814).

Airolo ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

While crossing the Alps from Italy to support General Alexander Korsakov in Switzerland, Russian General Alexander Suvorov met stubborn French resistance from General Claude Lecourbe at Airolo, guarding St Gotthard Pass. Suvorov broke through at heavy cost, and won again next day at the Devil's Bridge, but Korsakov lost at Zurich and Suvorov turned to the Rhine (23 September 1799).

Aisne ❙ 57 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

With the Germans expelled from Gaul at Mühlhausen in 58 BC, Belgic tribes in northeast Gaul formed an alliance against Rome. When Julius Caesar started south, King Galba of the Suessiones led a large force trying to block him at the River Aisne. A hard-fought action secured Caesar decisive victory, and he then advanced across the river against the Nervii and destroyed them at the Sambre.

Aisne ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

After the Battle of the Marne blunted the German advance into France, French Generals Louis d'Esperey and Michel Maunoury and British General Sir John French counter-attacked across the Aisne against Erich von Falkenhayn's army. The Allied offensive stabilised the front, and began the outflanking "Race to the Sea" through Albert and Arras to the coast (13–28 September 1914).

Aisne ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

French commander Alfred Micheler spearheaded the Nivelle Offensive with a massive attack along a 50-mile front on the Aisne against Generals Max von Boehn and Fritz von Bulow. The first days cost over 100,000 French casualties and, despite limited British success further north around Arras, the attack ended with shocking losses on both sides for no gain (16 April–9 May 1917).

Aisne ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

After bloody offensives on the Somme and Lys, German commander Erich von Ludendorff attacked again across the Chemin des Dames and the Aisne. Generals Bruno von Mudra and Max von Boehn routed Anglo-French forces under General Denis Duchene, but were halted on the Marne at Chateau-Thierry. Ludendorff's next offensive was at Noyon-Montdidier (27 May–6 June 1918).

Aitape ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Supporting the landing in northern New Guinea at Hollandia, American General Jens Doe landed 120 miles further east at Aitape against light resistance (22–24 April). When General Hotazo Adachi later counter-attacked at the nearby Driniumor River against General Charles Hall, the Japanese were driven off with very heavy losses and withdrew east to Wewak (28 June–5 August 1944).

Aiwagudi ❙ 1696 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

During the epic Mughal siege of Maratha King Rajaram at Gingee, northwest of Pondicherry, the ambitious Maratha General Santaji Ghorpade fell out with his King and was dismissed as Senapati. Santaji defeated his successor Dhanaji Jadhav in battle at Aiwagudi, near Kanchi, but the great warrior was eventually forced to flee. He was hunted down and killed two years later (June 1696).

Aix ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

British Captain Sir Thomas Cochrane led a courageous night attack against French Admiral Zacharie Allemand in the Aix Roads off Brest, taking explosive-filled fire ships which shattered the anchorage boom. But deliberate delay by Lord James Gambier's Channel Fleet next day meant just four French ships were destroyed, resulting in a bitter dispute and court-martial (11–12 April 1809).

Aix, Ile de ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

See Ile d'Aix

Aix-en-Provence ❙ 102 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

See Aquae Sextiae

Aix-la-Chapelle ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Four months after France captured Aix-la-Chapelle (modern Aachen), French under the Venezuelan-born General Francisco de Miranda were defeated and driven out by Austrians led by Friedrich Josias, Prince of Saxe-Coburg. Defeated again two weeks later at Neerwinden, Miranda was dismissed for suspected treason and returned to Venezuelan revolutionary politics (3 March 1793).

Aiyina ❙ 458–457 BC ❙ 1st Peloponnesian War

See Aegina

Aizkraulke ❙ 1279 ❙ Early Wars of the Teutonic Knights

Having beaten the Livonian Order at Karuse (1270), Duke Traidenis of Lithuania attacked Livonian knights withdrawing after a raid into Lithuania. Near Aizkraulke, on the Daugava southeast of modern Riga, the knights suffered a costly defeat, including Livonian Master Ernst von Rassburg killed. Traidenis died soon afterwards, but resistance to the German Crusaders continued (5 March 1279).

Aiznadin ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

See Ajnadin

Aizu ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration

See Wakamatsu

Ajnadin ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

With the Muslim invasion of Byzantine Syria and Palestine stalling after victory at Wadi al-Arabah, Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid marched across the desert from Mesopotamia. After victory at Marj Rahit he joined Amr ibn al-As and at Ajnadin, between Jerusalem and Gaza, they decisively defeated the Byzantines under Theodorus. They won again at the Yarmuk (30 July 634).

Akaba ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See Aqaba

Aka Khel ❙ 1920 ❙ Waziristan Campaign

Defeated at Barari Tangi, Mahsud in Waziristan sought aid from Afghanistan, and Shah Doula arrived with reinforcements and two six-pounders. General Andrew Sheen's Strike Force routed the tribesmen at Aka Khel, destroying the guns, and the Mahsud and their allies dispersed. Tribal villages in the Makin Valley were destroyed and the main fighting was over by the end of May (1 February 1920).

Akasaka ❙ 1331 ❙ Genko War

Attempting to restore Imperial power, Japanese Emperor Go-Daigo left Kyoto and raised support from Samurai warriors under Kusunoki Masashige, who was besieged at Akasaka, in Kawachi, west of Nara, by the forces of Japanese Regent Hojo Takatoki. Most of the Imperialist garrison escaped after a bloody defence, and Kusunoki led an heroic defence two years later at Chihaya.

Akbarpur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Danchua

Aké ❙ 1528 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Yucatan

After incursions into Yucatan by Juan de Grijalva (1518) and Hernán Cortés (1519), Francisco de Monteja led an expedition which took Cozumel Island in the northeast. Monteja then advanced inland against strong resistance and battle at Aké (near Tizimin) cost many Spaniards and over 1,000 Northern Maya killed. Despite his costly victory, Monteja could not make headway and withdrew to Mexico.

Akhalkalaki ❙ 1810 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

In the Russian campaign to annexe Persian Georgia, Russian forces were driven off from the siege of Erivan in 1804. The war dragged on inconclusively until Russian General Marquis Filippo Paulucci defeated a major Persian force at Akhalkalaki, southwest of Tbilisi. However, fighting continued for another two years until the decisive Persian defeat at Aslanduz (1 September 1810).

Akhaltsikhe ❙ 1828 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

Russians under General Count Ivan Paskevich, in support of Greek independence, attacked Turkey in the Caucasus, where they captured Kars, then besieged the fortress of Akhaltsikhe, close to the modern Turkish border. Akhaltsikhe fell by assault after three weeks with heavy losses on both sides and Russian forces marched into Turkey against Adrianople (8–27 August 1828).

Akhaltsikhe ❙ 1853 ❙ Crimean War

Advancing north from Ardahan, a Turkish force of 30,000 was met near the Russian border by Prince Ivan Malkhazovich Andronikov and only 7,000 men. Outside Akhaltsikhe, the outnumbered Russians launched an immediate attack, and the Turks were defeated and dispersed. A Russian counter-offensive a few days later saw another victory further south at Bashgedikler (14 November 1853).

Akhsikath ❙ 1503 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

Driven back from Samarkand at Sar-i-Pul in 1501, the young Mughal Babur joined his uncles Sultan Mahmud of Tashkent and Sultan Ahmad Mirza of northern Mughalstan against the Uzbek conqueror Muhammad Shaybani Khan. But Babur and the Khans were defeated in a decisive action on the Syr Darya at Akhsikath, east of Tashkent and Ferghana Province was lost (June 1503).

Akhulgo ❙ 1839 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Russian Baron Pavel Grabbe was sent to destroy the Muslim Imam Shamil of Dagestan and advanced through Burtinah against the rebel stronghold at Akhulgo, on the Andi Koysu. Following two costly assaults, Grabbe was joined by General Evgeny Golovin, and Akhulgo was stormed at heavy Russian cost. Shamil escaped and eventually regained much of Dagestan (24 June–2 September 1839).

Akra ❙ 721 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

Continuing internal conflict involving the Umayyad Caliphate saw a major force raised against the Caliph Yazid II by Yazid ibn al-Muhallab, the ambitious and powerful Governor of Iraq. However, in battle at Akra, on the left bank of the Euphrates near Wasit, the rebel was defeated and killed by the Umayyad Prince, Maslama ibn Abd al-Malik (August 720).

Akraba ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

In Muslim wars of succession following the death of Mohammed (June 632), the false prophet Musaylima was massively defeated by General Khalid ibn al-Walid at Akraba in the eastern Najd Province of modern Saudi Arabia. Musaylima was killed, and the bloody victory—in the so-called Garden of Death—effectively established the authority of the caliphate in Medina (January 633).

Akroinos ❙ 739 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

The great soldier-Emperor Leo III had driven back a massive Muslim siege of Constantinople in 718, and later counter-attacked into Asia Minor, where he inflicted a terrible defeat on part of an Arab army under Suleiman at Akroinos (modern Afyonkarahisar) in west central Turkey. The victory gave Leo time to consolidate his power and rebuild the walls of Constantinople.

Akshehr ❙ 1116 ❙ Byzantine-Turkish Wars

See Philomelion

Akspoel ❙ 1128 ❙ War of Flemish Succession

See Thielt

Alabama* vs Kearsage ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (High Seas)

See Cherbourg

Alacab ❙ 1212 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Las Navas de Tolosa

Aladja Dagh ❙ 1877 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

Advancing against Turkey in the Caucasus, Russian Grand Duke Michael and General Mikhail Loris-Melikov attacked Ahmed Mukhtar Pasha holding a strongly established position on the Aladja Dagh, near Kars. Defending overextended lines, the Turks lost 6,000 casualties before 10,000 survivors surrendered. The defeat led directly to the fall of Kars (14–15 October 1877).

Alalia ❙ 535 BC ❙ Cathaginian-Greek Wars

Carthage was determined to block Greek expansion into the western Mediterranean and secured an unlikely ally in Etruria to jointly attack the Phocian Greek colony of Alalia (Aleria), on the east coast of Corsica. Defeated by the Carthaginian-Etruscan fleet, the Greeks were forced to abandon the colony to Etruria. The action has been called the first major naval engagement since ancient Egypt.

Alamana, Bridge of ❙ 1821 ❙ Greek War of Independence

See Thermopylae

Alamance Creek ❙ 1771 ❙ American Colonial Wars

When Irish-Scottish settlers in northern Carolina, calling themselves Regulators, resisted British rule, they provoked a military response and were put down at Alamance Creek, in the north of the state, by cavalry and militia sent by Governor William Tryon under General Hugh Waddell. Casualties were minor, though some of the captured rebels were subsequently hanged (16 May 1771).

Al Amarah ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

See Amara

Al Amarah ❙ 1983 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

See Amara

Alambagh ❙ 1857–1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

British General Sir Henry Havelock advanced through Mangalwar to relieve Lucknow, and overwhelmed rebels at Alambagh, two miles south of the city. General Sir James Outram then held the town against attack by mutineers under Ahmadullah Shah, Maulvi of Faizabad, throughout the siege, evacuation and eventual recapture of Lucknow (23 September 1857–March 1858).

Alamein ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See El Alamein

Alam Halfa ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Checked west of Cairo at El Alamein, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel circled south to attack Alam Halfa Ridge. A brilliant defensive action, planned by Sir Claude Auchinleck and adopted by General Bernard Montgomery, saw heavy losses on both sides. Rommel was forced to withdraw and soon began to retreat after the Allied offensive at El Alamein (30 August–5 September 1942).

Alamo ❙ 1836 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Determined to retake Texas after the loss of San Antonio (December 1835), Mexican General Antonio de Santa Anna besieged about 200 irregulars led by Colonel William Travis and James Bowie at nearby Alamo mission. When the Alamo fell by assault, every surviving male defender was murdered. This defeat and the ensuing Goliad Massacre became watchwords for the Texan cause (6 March 1836).

Alamut ❙ 1256 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

The Mongol conqueror Hulegu advanced into Persia, where he attacked the Assassins, an Ismaili Muslim religious-political sect which had been active for 200 years. Hulegu defeated the Assassins and destroyed their main mountain fortress at Alamut, near Kasvin in central Iran, ending their power in Persia. This sect in Syria was finally suppressed 15 years later by the Mamluk Sultan Baibars.

Aland ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Hango

Aland ❙ 1918 ❙ Finnish War of Independence

Landing to secure Aland, between Finland and Sweden, White forces from Turku under Colonel V. J. Forssell unexpectedly found the island defended by about 1,000 Russians. The town of Godby was taken by assault, but in a confusion over orders, the Whites surrendered their arms and were taken off by Swedish ships. Days later, they rejoined the fight at Ruovesi (14–20 February 1918).

Alarcos ❙ 1195 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

During the reconquest of southern Spain, King Alfonso VIII of Castile led a major campaign against the Almohad Caliph Yakub Almansour. Attacking without waiting for his allies—the Kings of Leon and Navarre—Alfonso's Christian army suffered a disastrous defeat at Alarcos, near Cuidad Real. Castile itself then came under direct Muslim attack (18 July 1195).

Alazán Creek ❙ 1813 ❙ Gutiérrez-Magee Expedition

To recover Spanish Texas from Republican Bernardo Gutiérrez and American "Filibusters" led by Major Henry Perry, Colonel Ignacio Elizondo and General Joaquin de Arredondo besieged San Antonio, which had fallen after Royalist defeat at Rosillo. Marching out to nearby Alazán Creek, Perry surprised and routed Elizondo, but the Republicans were later destroyed at the Medina (20 June 1813).

Alba de Tormes ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Spanish General Lorenzo Duke del Parque was withdrawing from capturing Salamanca after victory at Tamames (18 October), when he was pursued by the large French force under Generals Francois Kellermann and Jean-Gabriel Marchand. Surprised at Alba de Tormes, on the Tormes River south of Salamanca, the Spaniards were heavily defeated and scattered in retreat (28 November 1809).

Alba de Tormes ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

During the Allied retreat towards Portugal after the failed siege of Burgos, Anglo-Portuguese troops under Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington held the river crossing on the Tormes at Alba. French Marshals Nicolas Soult and Jean-Baptiste Jourdan broke off the action after two days' fighting to cross higher up the river, and Wellington was forced to pull back (10–11 November 1812).

Albania ❙ 1939 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

In the months before World War II started, Benito Mussolini decided to finally invade Albania, which was already a virtual Italian dependency. After a naval bombardment, the Albanian army was quickly overcome and King Zog went into exile in Britain. Mussolini annexed Albania, which in October 1940 provided a bridgehead for the failed Italian invasion of Greece (7 April 1939).

Albara ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

During the long Crusader siege of Antioch, Syria, a large-scale foraging party was sent south under the command of Bohemund of Taranto and Robert of Flanders. At the village of Albara, they were attacked by Duqaq of Damascus. Despite heavy losses, the Crusaders drove Duqaq's relief army back towards Hama. Another attempt to relieve Antioch was repulsed at Harenc (31 December 1097).

Al Basra ❙ 656 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

See Camel, Iraq

Al Basra ❙ 1743 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

See Basra

Al Basra ❙ 1775–1776 ❙ Turko-Persian Gulf War
See Basra

Al Basra ❙ 1982 ❙ Iraq-Iran War
See Basra

Albazin ❙ 1685–1686 ❙ Russo-Chinese Border War
With China in disorder, Russians penetrated the Amur Valley and established a fortress at Albazin (modern Albazino), where they were later attacked by a large Manchu force. Initially driven out, the Russians regained the fortress and held out against siege until the Chinese withdrew. The Russians eventually destroyed and abandoned the fort and made peace (July 1685–December 1686).

Albe ❙ 1268 ❙ Angevin Conquest of the Two Sicilies
See Tagliacozzo

Albeck ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)
See Haslach

Albermarle Sound ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
Continuing the Confederate offensive in North Carolina after the capture of Plymouth, the ram vessel Albermarle under Captain James W. Cooke attacked seven Union gunboats commanded by Captain Melancton Smith in Albermarle Sound, at the mouth of the Roanoke. Cooke inflicted heavy damage before withdrawing, and Albermarle was sunk later that year by a spar torpedo (5 May 1864).

Albert ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)
During battle at the Aisne, French General Noel de Castelnau advanced northwest against the German flank and captured Noyon (21 September). There was then a massive German counter-attack under Prince Ruprecht around Albert, southeast of Amiens. French commander Joseph Joffre was driven back and attempted another flanking attack at Arras (25–30 September 1914).

Albert ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)
General Sir Henry Rawlinson followed six days' bombardment by launching a massive offensive northeast from Albert against German commander Fritz von Below. The historic "First Day on the Somme" cost an unprecedented 58,000 British casualties—one-third killed—but Below was forced back and was replaced before the next phase of the offensive through Bazentin (1–13 July 1916).

Albert ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)
In the second phase of the offensive east from Amiens, British Generals Julian Byng and Sir Henry Rawlinson advanced around Albert, strongly held by Germans under General Georg von de Marwitz. Very heavy fighting was supported by attacks to the north on the Scarpe and further south at Bapaume, and the German forward defence eventually had to withdraw (21–29 August 1918).

Albuera ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
See Albuhera

Albufera ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
As part of his siege campaign against the Spanish eastern seaport of Valencia, French Marshal Louis Suchet defeated Spanish forces under General Joachim Blake nearby, on the coast close to the Albufera Lagoon. Valencia itself surrendered five days later. Suchet was created Duke of Albufera in recognition of his success (4 January 1812).

Albuhera ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
A bloody encounter near the Spanish border saw French Marshal Nicolas Soult's attempt to relieve the Allied siege of Badajoz driven off at nearby Albuhera by British, Spanish and Portuguese troops under General Sir William Beresford. British infantry repulsed the relief army, holding firm despite very heavy casualties, but the Allied siege eventually failed (16 May 1811).

Albulen ❙ 1457 ❙ Albanian-Turkish Wars

A third Turkish advance against Krujë in central Albania saw 80,000 men under Isa Bey Evrenos surprised at nearby Albulen by Albanian George Kastriote Skanderbeg. The Turks lost thousands of prisoners (including Skanderbeg's renegade nephew Hamza Kastriote) in a disastrous defeat and Ottoman Sultan Mehmed II agreed to a three-year truce (2 September 1457).

Albuquerque ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Setting out from Badajoz, French Marshal Édouard Mortier crossed the Portuguese border and, while besieging the bravely defended fortress of Campo Mayor, approached nearby Albuquerque, garrisoned by about 800 regular troops under General Don José Cagigal. In a notoriously shameful capitulation, Cagigal surrendered the fortress and 17 guns without a fight (15 March 1811).

Alcacer do Sol ❙ 1158 ❙ Christian Reconquest of Portugal

King Alfonso I of Portugal took advantage of internal instability among the Muslims of Portugal and Spain by making considerable advances against the Moors and taking Lisbon. Aided by Crusader forces from England, he then marched southeast against the key fortress of Alcacer do Sol on the Sado Estuary. The fortress was seized and held by Christian forces for 40 years (24 June 1158).

Alcacer do Sol ❙ 1217 ❙ Christian Reconquest of Portugal

Campaigning against the Moors in southern Iberia, King Alfonso II of Portugal attempted to recover Alcacer do Sol on the Sado River estuary, south of Lisbon, previously captured by his grandfather Alfonso I. With support from a Crusader fleet under the Counts of Holland and of Weid, the stronghold was besieged for two months before it was finally captured (18 October 1217).

Alcalá ❙ 1340 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

Soon after the Christian victory at Rio Salado, Alfonso XI of Castile advanced against other frontier positions with a large-scale siege of Alacalá de Benzaide (modern Alcalá la Real), northwest of Granada. Alcalá surrendered after Christians captured the nearby castle of Locubin and drove off a Muslim relief force under King Yusuf I of Granada. Alfonso then turned his attention to Algeciras.

Alcalá la Real ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French General Francois Sébastiani captured Jaen and Cordova, then pursued the survivors of General Carlos Areizaga's army, who had meanwhile been reinforced by cavalry units under General Manuel Freire. Sébastiani routed the Spanish forces at Alcalá la Real, northwest of Granada, inflicting over 500 casualties, and Granada surrendered to him next day (28 February 1810).

Alcañiz ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Attempting to secure Aragon, newly appointed French commander General Louis Suchet launched an ill-advised offensive from Saragossa against a Spanish army under General Joachim Blake. Attacking a strong defensive position at Alcañiz on the Guadalope River, west of Teruel, Suchet was driven back and his offensive broken up, but Blake did not pursue (23 May 1809).

Alcántara ❙ 1580 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese War

King Philip II of Spain took advantage of a disputed succession in Portugal to send an invasion force under Fernando Alvarez Duke of Alva. The rival claimant, Dom Antonio, at the head of a largely peasant army, was heavily defeated near the border at Alcántara, and Spain ruled Portugal for the next 60 years. Spain also seized the Portuguese Azores with victory off Terceira (25 August 1580).

Alcántara ❙ 1706 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

In a fresh offensive from the west, Anglo-Portuguese forces under Henri de Massue Earl of Ruvigny and Antonio de Sousa Marquis de Minas captured the Spanish border city of Alcántara held by French troops of Marshal James Duke of Berwick. The Allies then advanced to occupy Madrid, but their victory was decisively reversed a year later at Almanza (14–18 April 1706).

Alcántara ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Two days after Marshal Nicolas Soult was driven out of Portugal following defeat at Oporto, Marshal Claude Victor smashed into the Lusitania Legion and Portuguese militia holding the bridge at Alcántara, on the Tagus just inside Spain. Led by Colonel William Mayne, the Allies fought bravely but were forced back by French artillery and Victor seized the bridge (14 May 1809).

Alcantra ❙ 1839 ❙ Mexican Federalist War

General Antonio Canales Rosillon assumed command of the Federalist rebellion after the loss of Tampico in June, and, with Texan and Indian aid, attacked Centralist commander José Ignacio Pávon at Alcantra, on the Alamo River, southwest of Mier. Pávon was decisively defeated and was later replaced by General Mariano Arista, who turned the tables at Santa Rita Morelos (3–4 October 1839).

Alcazar ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

In the opening days of the war, the military academy at Alcazar in Toledo declared for the insurgent cause. While government forces quickly secured the city, the fortress held out under Colonel José Moscardó. The siege was relieved after two months by Nationalist General José Varela, who took Toledo by assault and massacred many of the defenders (20 July–27 September 1936).

Alcazarquivir ❙ 1578 ❙ Portuguese-Moroccan War

Dreaming of a Christian empire in Africa, King Sebastian of Portugal invaded Morocco to support a Moorish pretender to the throne of Fez. Sebastian was routed south of Tangier at Alcazarquivir, and the expedition failed. This was known as the "Battle of Three Kings" as it involved Sebastian, the Royal pretender and the King of Fez, all of whom were killed (4 August 1578).

Alcolea ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

At the start of Napoleon's campaign in Spain, a few Spanish regulars and a large force of peasant levies under Colonel Pedro de Echavarri attempted to make a stand at the Alcolea Bridge over the Guadalquivir in front of Cordova. The Spanish force was defeated and destroyed by General Pierre Dupont de L'Etang's French regulars, who next day stormed and sacked Cordova (6 June 1808).

Alcolea ❙ 1868 ❙ Spanish Revolution

In revolt against the despotism of Queen Isabela of Spain, rebels under General Francisco Serrano routed the Royal army under Manuel Pavía, Marques de Novaliches, at Alcolea near Cordova. Isabela fled to France and a provisional government, with Serrano as President of the Ministry, ruled until the Duke of Aosta came to the throne in 1871 as King Amadeo (28 September 1868).

Alcoraz ❙ 1096 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

When Sancho Ramirez of Aragon was killed at a failed siege of the strategic Muslim city of Huesca, in northeast Spain (1094), his son Pedro I renewed the offensive and, at nearby Alcoraz, met a large Muslim relief army led by al-Mustain. Despite support from Castilian nobles, al-Mustain was utterly defeated. Besieged Huesca surrendered to Pedro nine days later (18 November 1096).

Aldea del Ponte ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marshal Auguste Marmont advancing from Salamanca to relieve the Anglo-Portuguese blockade of Ciudad Rodrigo was repulsed at El Bodon and withdrew southwest to Aldea del Ponte, where he attacked General Sir Edward Pakenham. Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington arrived with reinforcements and the town changed hands twice before Marmont retired south (27 September 1811).

Aldenhoven ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Within months of his victories at Valmy and Jemappes, French General Charles-Francois Dumouriez was defeated at Aldenhoven by Austrian Prince Friedrich Josias of Saxe-Coburg advancing across the Roer towards Maastrich. Dumouriez negotiated an armistice after further defeats at Aix-la-Chapelle, Neerwinden and Louvain, then defected to the Austrians (1 March 1793).

Aldenhoven ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Austrian Count Charles von Clerfayt fell back from Aix-la-Chapelle and took a strong position on the River Ruhr near Aldenhoven, covering Cologne with an army of more than 75,000 men. French forces under General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan attacked along a very wide front and Clerfayt withdrew, crossing the Rhine south of Cologne four days later (2 October 1794).

Aldie ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Robert E. Lee's invasion advanced north towards Gettysburg, part of General James "Jeb" Stuart's Confederate cavalry screen to the east under Colonel Thomas Munford came under attack at Aldie, south of Leesburg, Virginia, by Union cavalry led by General Judson Kilpatrick. After an indecisive action, Munford fell back west towards Stuart, under attack at Middleburg (17 June 1863).

Alegaon ❙ 1762 ❙ Maratha Wars of Succession

Following the death of Maratha Peshwa Balaji Rao, his teenage son Madhav Rao fell out with his ambitious uncle Raghunath Rao, who established an alliance with Nizam Ali of Hyderabad. Madhav Rao was heavily defeated at Alegaon in central Maharashtra and submitted to his uncle, while Nizam Ali was rewarded with land he had lost after defeat at nearby Udgir (12 November 1762).

Alegría ❙ 1834 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Carlists Tomás Zumalacárregui and Francisco de Iturralde eluded pursuit after victory at Artaza and Peñas de San Fausto in August, then surprised Liberal Brigadier Manuel O'Doyle at Alegría, northern Spain, between Vitoria and Salvatierra. O'Doyle fled to nearby Arrieta, where a relief column from Vitoria under General Joaquín de Osma was beaten next day (27–28 October 1834).

Alegría del Pío ❙ 1956 ❙ Cuban Revolution

Amnestied from prison after a failed attack on the Moncada in 1953, Fidel Castro led a small force from Mexico, which landed at Niquero in eastern Cuba. He was attacked by Batista troops under Colonel Ramón Cruz Vidal at nearby Alegría del Pío, where the rebels suffered very heavy losses in action and the subsequent round-up. The survivors regrouped to strike back at La Plata (5 December 1956).

Aleksin ❙ 1472 ❙ Russian-Mongol Wars

With Moscow distracted by war against Novgorod, Mongol leader Ahmed Khan advanced to the Oka, where he attacked and burned Aleksin, east of Kaluga. But garrison commander Semen Beklemishev then fought a bold defensive action. Without promised Lithuanian aid and facing massive Russian reinforcements, Ahmed withdrew. In 1480, he advanced again as far as the Ugra (30 July 1472).

Aleksinac ❙ 1876 ❙ Serbo-Turkish War

See Alexinatz

Aleppo ❙ 639 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

Muslim conqueror General Khalid ibn al-Walid, captured Damascus (635) and Jerusalem (638), and later marched north to seize Aleppo, near the modern border between Syria and Turkey. However, Aleppo's citadel held out against a bloody five-month siege. The citadel finally fell by storm and the capture of Aleppo effectively ended Byzantine resistance to the Muslim invaders in Syria.

Aleppo ❙ 962 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

On a major offensive against Muslim military power, Byzantine General Nicephorus Phocas drove the Arabs out of Crete, then invaded Syria to besiege Aleppo, capital of the Hamdanid Sayf ad-Dawla. Aleppo was taken by storm, with the population killed or enslaved, and the city was razed. Nicephorus (later Emperor) then attacked Adana and Tarsus in Cilicia (December 962).

Aleppo ❙ 969 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

After driving the Arabs out of Asia Minor at Adana and Tarsus (965), Emperor Nicephorus II Phocas invaded Syria to capture Antioch, then marched to retake Aleppo from the Chamberlain Karguyah, who had overthrown the Hamdanid Sayf ad-Dawla. Although Nicephorus was assassinated, Aleppo fell to his General, Michael Burtzes, and became a Byzantine protectorate (December 969).

Aleppo ❙ 1030 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Azaz

Aleppo ❙ 1086 ❙ Byzantine-Turkish Wars

As parts of the Byzantine Empire fell after disaster at Manzikert in 1071, Sultan Malik Shah seized Anatolia, but lost it to his rival, Sulaiman ibn Kutalmish, who became the first Seljuk ruler of Rum. Sulaiman seized the last Byzantine outpost at Antioch, Syria, but outside Aleppo he was defeated and killed by the Sultan's brother Prince Tutush, securing Turkish control of Anatolia and Syria.

Aleppo ❙ 1119 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Antioch, Syria

Aleppo ❙ 1260 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

Hulegu, Mongol Il-Khan of Iran, sacked Baghdad in 1258, then invaded Syria and invested the fortress city of Aleppo, defended by Turanshah, uncle of Sultan an-Nasir Yusuf. The city fell after six days' assault (20 January), and the citadel a month later. The capture of Aleppo and its massive treasure induced the Sultan to flee Damascus, which then fell to the Mongols (January–February 1260).

Aleppo ❙ 1400 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

When Mongols under Tamerlane invaded Syria, they inflicted a devastating defeat on the Mamluks, who unwisely marched out from the city of Aleppo to meet the Mongols in the open. Having routed his enemy in the field, Tamerlane then sacked Aleppo and marched south against Damascus to complete his conquest of Syria (30 October 1400).

Aleppo ❙ 1516 ❙ Ottoman-Mamluk War

See Yaunis Khan

Aleppo ❙ 1839 ❙ 2nd Turko-Egyptian War

See Nezib

Aleppo ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Weeks after seizing Damascus, British commander Sir Edmund Allenby continued a more cautious advance further north, supported by troops of the Northern Arab Army, and attacked Aleppo. The Turks withdrew but fought a bitter defence near the city under Mustapha Kemal. However, Turkey signed an armistice just a few days later to end the war in the Middle East (24–25 October 1918).

Aleria ❙ 535 BC ❙ Carthaginian-Greek Wars

See Alalia

Alesia ❙ 52 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Despite a costly loss at Gergovia in central Gaul, Julius Caesar surrounded hilltop Alesia (modern Alise Ste. Reine), northwest of Dijon, with a double wall. In the largest campaign of the war, he fought off a huge counter-siege by Vercingetorix, Chief of the Arverni. Starving Alesia surrendered after heavy casualties and Gaul was effectively conquered. Vercingetorix was taken to Rome and executed.

Alessandria ❙ 1174–1175 ❙ Wars of the Lombard League

Emperor Frederick Barbarossa was campaigning in northern Italy for the Lombard League when he attacked Alessandria, at the junction of the Tanaro and Bormida Rivers. Frederick withdrew after a brutal six-month siege when the defenders sortied and burned his siege machines. Following fruitless truce negotiations, he was defeated a year later at Legnano (November 1174–April 1175).

Alessandria ❙ 1391 ❙ Florentine-Milanese Wars

See Castellazzo

Alessandria ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Attempting to join the French army marching from southern Italy, General Jean Victor Moreau was blocked at the northern town of Alessandria by a much larger Austrian-Russian force led by Count Heinrich von Bellegarde. Moreau defeated von Bellegarde, but his delay contributed to a French defeat at the Trebbia. Alessandria surrendered to the Austrians on 22 July (20 June 1799).

Aleutians ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As a diversion from Midway, Japanese Admiral Boshiro Hosogaya took a large fleet towards the Aleutians. While Admiral Robert Theobald manoeuvred to protect Alaska, the Japanese landed on the outer Aleutian islands of Attu and Kiska. Naval battle near the Komandorski Islands a year later blocked reinforcements for Attu, which was retaken after a bloody action (5–7 June 1942).

Alexandria ❙ 48–47 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

Julius Caesar pursued Pompey to Egypt after victory at Pharsalus (48 BC) and found his rival had been assassinated. Caesar was then besieged in part of Alexandria by General Ponthinus for Ptolemy XII, Egyptian co-ruler with his sister Cleopatra VII (Caesar's lover). The Roman garrison repulsed repeated attacks for five months before they were finally relieved after victory at the mouth of the Nile.

Alexandria ❙ 296 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

In a local rising in Egypt provoked by new tax laws and reform of the coinage, Roman General Achilleus established himself in Alexandria as Emperor in Egypt. His rebellion was put down by Emperor Diocletian after an eight-month siege of the Egyptian capital. Achilleus was subsequently executed, reputedly by being fed to lions.

Alexandria ❙ 641–642 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Egypt

Following the surrender of Babylon on the Nile in April 641, Muslim General Amr ibn al-As marched north against Byzantine Alexandria, which was captured at the cost of very heavy Greek casualties after a 14-month siege. The surrender of the Egyptian capital by Byzantine Patriarch Cyrus virtually completed the Muslim conquest of Egypt (July 641–September 642).

Alexandria ❙ 645 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Just three years after the fall of Alexandria to Muslim Arabs under Amr ibn al-As, Emperor Constans sent a fresh army under Manuel, who recovered the Egyptian city, with the assistance of the remaining Greek residents. Following a short siege, Amr once again captured Alexandria and expelled the Greeks, ending almost 1,000 years of Greco-Roman occupation.

Alexandria ❙ 1167 ❙ Crusader Invasion of Egypt

Having captured Cairo, Crusader King Amalric of Jerusalem, aided by deposed Egyptian Vizier

Shawar, recovered after El Ashmunien (18 March) and besieged Kurdish General Shirkuh and his nephew Saladin in Alexandria. Though Shirkuh escaped with much of his army, Saladin was starved into surrendering the city. In 1169, the struggle for Egypt resumed at Damietta (April–4 August 1167).

Alexandria ❙ 1365 ❙ Egyptian Crusade of Peter of Cyprus

Seventy years after the end of the principal Christian Crusades, King Peter of Cyprus launched his own campaign against Muslim Egypt. He captured and sacked Alexandria with a terrible slaughter of the population of all races and the capture of massive booty. However, his campaign stalled and was ended by his assassination in Nicosia a few years later (9–11 October 1365).

Alexandria ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Napoleon Bonaparte began his Egyptian campaign by landing his army near Alexandria, where he defeated its Mamluk defenders in a short but bloody action in which Generals Jacques Menou and Jean-Baptiste Kléber were severely wounded. Bonaparte then seized Alexandria and advanced towards Cairo where, three weeks later, he won the decisive Battle of the Pyramids (2 July 1798).

Alexandria (1st) ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

A British-Turkish army led by Sir Ralph Abercromby, which landed in Egypt through battle at Aboukir (8 March), found their way to Alexandria blocked by General Jacques Menou. The French were defeated with heavy losses, though General Abercromby was fatally wounded. The victory led to the eventual surrender of Alexandria and the French were driven out of Egypt (21 March 1801).

Alexandria (2nd) ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Following victory outside Alexandria, newly appointed British commander Sir John Hely-Hutchinson marched to seize Cairo, leaving General Sir George Eyre to blockade Alexandria. Hutchinson later returned to the attack and, after Coote captured the western fortress of Marabout against stiff opposition, General Jacques Menou surrendered the city (April–30 August 1801).

Alexandria ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

In order to undermine Turkey, which had switched to the French cause, Britain unwisely sent an expedition under General Alexander Mckenzie Fraser to North Africa to seize Turkish Egypt. Although Alexandria was attacked and captured, the small British force was insufficient for its task and, after defeat at Rosetta, they were forced to surrender and withdraw (21 March 1807).

Alexandria ❙ 1882 ❙ Arabi's Egyptian Rebellion

War Minister Arabi Pasha attempted to assert Egyptian sovereignty and began building forts at Alexandria to control the approaches to the Suez Canal. British Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour then bombarded the fortresses and occupied the city. A month later an expeditionary force under General Sir Garnet Wolseley landed at the canal and crushed the rebels at Tel-el-Kebir (11–12 July 1882).

Alexandria ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

One of Italy's most famous naval exploits saw three two-man human torpedoes enter Alexandria Harbour and place charges under units of the British fleet. The only British battleships in the Mediterranean–Queen Elizabeth and Valiant—were sunk and a tanker and destroyer damaged, briefly changing the balance of power. Both battleships were eventually repaired (18–19 December 1941).

Alexandrovsk ❙ 1919 ❙ Russian Civil War

Supporting White counter-revolutionaries in the Russian civil war, British ships based at

Persian ports fought a Bolshevik navy attempting to seize the Caspian, where battle off Alexandrovsk (modern Alexandro-Nevskaya) in the western Caspian saw a British victory. The following year, the ships were handed to the Whites, who lost them to a renewed Bolshevik offensive (21 May 1919).

Alexinatz ❙ 1876 ❙ Serbo-Turkish War

When Serbia declared war on Turkey to support Christian Bosnia-Herzogovina, a large Turkish force under Abdul Kerim advanced from Nis to Alexinatz (modern Aleksinac), southeast of Belgrade. Serbia's army, under Russian General Mikhail Chernyayev (aided by Russian volunteers), was badly defeated and a brief armistice ensued before fighting resumed at Djunis (1 September 1876).

Al Fallujah ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

See Fallujah

Alfarrobeira ❙ 1449 ❙ Portuguese War of Succession

The Regent of Portugal, Dom Pedro Duke of Coimbra, seized government from his 17-year-old nephew Alfonso V, and the young King took a large army against his uncle, whose heavily outnumbered force was entrenched along the Alfarrobeira River, near Santarem. The Duke of Coimbra and most of his supporters were killed and the war of succession came to an end (21 May 1449).

Al Faw ❙ 1986 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

While a diversionary attack went in north of Basra, Iran launched a surprise amphibious assault across the Shatt al-Arab and seized the strategic Al Faw (Fao) Peninsula to threaten the Iraqi naval base at Umm Qasr. Despite the use of chemical weapons, desperate Iraqi counterattacks failed. Iran dug in to hold the bridgehead against all assault until near the end of the war (9–14 February 1986).

Al Faw ❙ 1988 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

With Iran exhausted by war and threatened by superpower intervention in the Persian Gulf, Iraqi forces with numerous tanks, guns and chemical weapons launched a major amphibious offensive to regain the Al Faw Peninsula. The vastly outnumbered Iranians were overwhelmed, and a further Iraqi victory east of Basra at Salamcheh soon effectively ended the war in the south (17–18 April 1988).

Alford ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Scottish Covenanters under General Sir William Baillie attempted to intercept an advance on Aberdeen by Royalist commander James Graham Marquis of Montrose, but were lured into battle across the River Don. Taken in ambush at Alford, 25 miles west of Aberdeen, Baillie's Parliamentary force was heavily defeated. Baillie was beaten again a month later at Kilsyth (2 July 1645).

Algeciras ❙ 1309 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

At the same time as Aragon was besieging Almeria, a Castilian expedition attacked Algeciras, just west of Gibraltar, held by Marinid Muslims from North Africa. In an unexpected defeat, the Castilian noble Juan Manual led his Christian knights off the field of battle. Castile withdrew from the siege and, shortly afterwards, the Aragonese gave up their assault on Almeria (November 1309).

Algeciras ❙ 1340 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

In a renewed offensive in Granada, the Moors inflicted a severe defeat on King Alfonso XI of Castile at Algeciras, across the Bay of Algeciras, west of Gibraltar. Castilian Admiral Alfonso Jofre Tenorio was defeated and killed at sea and the Muslims then captured the city. It was held by the Moors until a Christian counter-offensive three years later.

Algeciras ❙ 1343–1344 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

After a fresh Muslim invasion of southern Spain, King Alfonso XI of Castile launched a major counter-offensive and, following his victory at Rio Salado in 1340, the King besieged Algeciras, west of Gibraltar. The Moroccan fleet was defeated off Algeciras by Genoese Admiral Egidio Boccanegra and Alfonso destroyed much of the city before forcing a costly Muslim surrender (26 March 1344).

Algeciras Bay ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

British ships under Admiral Sir James Saumarez attacked the French naval squadron in the Mediterranean at Algeciras Bay, off southeast Spain, and defeated Admiral Charles Durand de Linois. Six days later, Saumarez renewed the attack in a confused night action. Linois, reinforced by Spanish Admiral Don Juan Moreno, was again defeated with heavy loss of life (6 & 12–13 July 1801).

Alghero ❙ 1353–1354 ❙ Aragon's Conquest of Sardinia

King Pedro IV of Aragon resolved to capture Sardinia from Genoa and sent a naval force which utterly defeated the Genoese fleet off Alghero in the northwest of the island. The following year, Pedro led another large force, which besieged and captured Alghero itself. Mariano de Arborea, who had claimed the title of King of Sardinia, surrendered and Sardinia became a long-time Aragonese possession.

Algidus ❙ 431 BC ❙ Wars of the Roman Republic

The Republic's early years saw the Italian Aequi and Volsci tribes join forces against Rome, and the Aequi set up a fortified position southeast of Rome at Mount Algidus, controlling the key road near Tusculum. There they were attacked and dislodged by Aulus Postumius Tubertus after stubborn defence. The tribes were eventually subdued and admitted to citizenship (trad date 18 June 431 BC).

Algiers ❙ 1511 ❙ Spanish Colonial Wars in North Africa

A year after taking Bougie and Tripoli, Spanish forces sailed for Algiers and captured the offshore island of Peñon, effectively blockading the harbour. Pasha Salim al-Tumi sought aid from the Turkish Corsair Arudj, who repulsed Spanish attacks on Algiers in 1516 and 1519. In 1529, his brother Khayr al-din retook Peñon and Algiers became a key base for Muslim raids on Christian shipping.

Algiers ❙ 1541 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Emperor Charles V defeated Muslim Corsairs in Tunis in 1535 and later took a large force against Algiers, defended by Hassan Agha. However, a great storm wrecked over 150 ships, and the Emperor's attempted siege was heavily driven off by a bloody counter-attack by Algerian Turks and Arab tribesmen. Facing total failure, the starving survivors returned to Europe (24–26 October 1541).

Algiers ❙ 1620–1621 ❙ Corsair Wars

An intended action against Muslim pirates saw British Admiral Sir Robert Mansell sail to Algiers, supported by Sir Richard Hawkins and Sir Thomas Button. Forty British captives were freed after negotiations (November 1620), but a renewed attack the following year failed miserably when inadequate fireships were driven off. Mansell withdrew and was recalled to England (24 May 1621).

Algiers ❙ 1665 ❙ Corsair Wars

See Porto Farina

Algiers ❙ 1682–1683 ❙ Franco-Barbary Wars

Determined to punish the Barbary pirates of Algiers, Louis XIV of France sent Marquis Abraham Duquesne to besiege Algiers. The North African city was bombarded from 30 August to 8 September 1682, killing about 500, and again in June and August 1683, before Dey Husayn Pasha forced Duquesne to withdraw. Husayn made peace in 1684, giving up captured ships and prisoners.

Algiers ❙ 1688 ❙ Franco-Barbary Wars

When Algeria broke the peace, Louis XIV of France sent Admiral Jean d'Estrées, who bombarded Algiers for five days and caused massive damage. But with renewed war in Europe, d'Estrées was recalled (August 1688), and Corsair Admiral Husayn Pasha retaliated by attacking French shipping. In May 1689, Louis made a new peace, with further concessions (22–27 June 1688).

Algiers ❙ 1775 ❙ Spanish-Algerian Wars

With Oran secured, Charles III of Spain determined to capture Algiers and sent 500 ships and 20,000 men under Irish-born Count Alexander O'Reilly (who had led Spanish forces in crushing French rebellion in Louisiana). Despite heavy naval bombardment, the disastrous landing was driven off with over 500 killed and 2,000 wounded. A month later the expedition had to withdraw (8 July 1775).

Algiers ❙ 1783 ❙ Spanish-Algerian Wars

Spain's North African enclave at Oran came under siege by Algerian troops and Spain reacted by sending a force of 10 frigates and over 60 smaller ships against Algiers. A nine-day bombardment caused heavy damage but nothing else. A second Spanish bombardment in 1784 was driven off before much damage could be caused. Oran fell to the Algerians in 1791 (1–9 August 1783).

Algiers ❙ 1816 ❙ Corsair Wars

Responding to North African piracy, 18 British ships under Admiral Edward Pellew Baron Exmouth, supported by Dutch Admiral Theodore van Capellen, bombarded Algiers and destroyed the local fleet. Surrender by Omar Pasha, Dey of Algiers, released more than 3,000 Christian prisoners, largely Spanish and Italian, and Pellew was created Viscount Exmouth (27 August 1816).

Algiers ❙ 1824 ❙ Corsair Wars

British Captains Sir Robert Spencer (Naiad 46) and James Burton (Cameleon 12) led a renewed offensive against Barbary pirates, attacking the port of Algiers, where they destroyed the pirate corvette Tripoli. With the subsequent loss of an Algerine brig off Boma (23 May), and Admiral Sir Harry Neale threatening to bombard the city, the Dey of Algiers sued for peace (31 January 1824).

Algiers ❙ 1830 ❙ French Conquest of Algeria

After three years blockading the pirate port of Algiers, France launched a major invasion, led by Marshal Louis de Bourmont, who captured the port in a decisive action three weeks later. Hussein, Dey of Algiers, was deposed, and Algeria was gradually conquered at Mascara, Constantine, Smala and elsewhere. It remained French for the next 130 years (29 June–5 July 1830).

Algiers ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

As part of Torch in French northwest Africa, 32,000 Anglo-American troops of the Eastern Task Force landed at Algiers under US General Charles Ryder and Britain's General Kenneth Anderson. Vichy General Alphonse Juin surrendered after sporadic resistance, and the Allies went east through Bougie and Bone before entering Tunisia and stalling at Tébourba (8–9 November 1942).

Algiers ❙ 1956–1957 ❙ Algerian War

Facing increasing terrorism in Algiers, Paratroop General Jacques Massu assumed civil control of the city and began a fierce urban campaign against the FLN under Ramdane Abane and later Saadi Yacef. Both sides saw escalating brutality, and the Battle of Algiers ended only with the capture of Yacef. The military focus of war then moved to the countryside (September 1956–October 1957).

Alhama ❙ 1482 ❙ Final Christian Reconquest of Spain

In retaliation for Muslim capture of Zahara late in 1481, Rodrigo Ponce de Leon Marquis of Cadiz soon seized the fortress of Alhama, southwest of Granada, and massacred many residents. Mulei Abdul Hassan, King of Granada, immediately besieged the fortress, but was eventually driven off by the approach of a large Spanish army under King Ferdinand V of Castile (28 February–14 May 1482).

Alhandega ❙ 939 ❙ Christian-Muslim Wars in Spain
See Simancas, Vallalolid

Alhucemas ❙ 1925 ❙ Spanish-Rif War
In a final offensive against Rif rebel Abd el Krim in Morocco, a Spanish amphibious force under General José Sanjurjo landed at Alhucemas, west of Melilla. About 12,000 men required almost a month of heavy fighting to capture the Rif capital Ajdir, just seven miles from the coast. Squeezed by French attacks in the south, Abd el Krim surrendered to end the war (8 September–3 October 1925).

Alicante ❙ 1706 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession
British Admiral Sir John Leake took the Spanish port of Cartagena (13 June), then sailed north to besiege Spanish-Irish General Daniel O'Mahony at Alicante. Troops under General Richard Gorges and later Sir John Jennings eventually took the city by storm (29 July) after a naval bombardment by Sir George Byng. A month later, O'Mahony surrendered the citadel (26 June–24 August 1706).

Alicante ❙ 1708–1709 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession
When Claude Francois Bidal, Chevalier d'Asfeld, laid siege to Alicante, General John Richards refused to surrender and the French exploded a massive mine which killed Richards and about 50 others (3 March). However, the English and Huguenot garrison held out for six weeks until Admiral Sir George Byng arrived and evacuated the survivors (1 December 1708–18 April 1709).

Alicante ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
With insufficient troops available, French General Louis Montbrun attempted to storm the well-fortified port city of Alicante, on the southeast Mediterranean coast of Spain, defended by Spanish troops under General Nicolas Mahy. Montbrun was repulsed at the cost of many needless French casualties and returned northwest to Toledo (16 January 1812).

Alicudi ❙ 1676 ❙ 3rd Dutch War
See Stromboli

Aligarh ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War
General Sir Gerard Lake invaded Hindustan with British regulars and native troops and attacked the powerful fortress of Aligarh, southeast of Delhi, defended by a Maratha army under French Colonel Pedron. Aligarh was captured after heavy fighting and, with Pedron and other officers having surrendered, Lake continued his advance towards Delhi (4 September 1803).

Aligarh ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny
Marching south from the capture of Delhi, within weeks Colonel Edward Greathed secured Molaghur after victory at Bulandshahr, then approached Aligarh, which was largely evacuated at his advance. Pursuing the rebels in an extended running action, Greathed killed over 200, then pressed on to relieve the besieged British garrison 40 miles to the south at Agra (5 October 1857).

Alihuatá ❙ 1933 ❙ Chaco War
As part of a major new offensive against Bolivian forces in the Chaco Real, Paraguayan commander Colonel José Félix Estigarribia attacked Bolivia's General Hans Kundt in the vicinity of Alihuatá and Zenteno. Estigarribia occupied Alihuatá after prolonged fighting and, three days later, the retreating Bolivians surrendered further south at Campo Vía (23 October–8 December 1933).

Ali Kheyl ❙ 1984 ❙ Afghan Civil War
Following the successful government offensive against Mujahaden rebels north of Kabul in the Panjshir Valley, about 12,000 Afghan and Soviet troops relieved Soviet forces under guerrilla attack at Ali Kheyl, southeast of Kabul, in Paktia Province. Supported by an air assault flown in directly from the Soviet Union, the offensive succeeded and the rebels were driven back (August 1984).

Ali Masjid ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Concerned at Russian influence in Afghanistan, the British Army of the Indus marched from Kandahar to Ghazni to reinstate Amir Shah Shuja, while Colonel Sir Claude Wade led a second force from the east through the Khyber Pass, supported by Shuja's son Timur. As Wade advanced towards Kabul, he lost almost 200 casualties in a sharp action taking the fortress of Ali Masjid (26 July 1839).

Ali Masjid ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

After retreating British troops and civilians from Kabul were massacred at Jagdalak, Afghani commander Akbar Khan immediately sent troops against the British-held fortress of Ali Masjid in the Khyber Pass. When a relief force under Colonel Charles Wild was badly defeated and driven back at the entrance to the Pass, the British garrison withdrew and fell back on Jamrud (January 1842).

Ali Masjid ❙ 1878 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

Britain responded to Russian influence over Amir Sher Ali Khan of Afghanistan by sending General Sir Samuel Browne into the Khyber Pass towards Kabul. At the eastern entrance to the Pass, Browne shelled and captured the hill fortress of Ali Masjid held by Faiz Muhammad, while further to the south, General Sir Frederick Roberts advanced through Peiwar Kotal (21 November 1878).

Aliwal ❙ 1846 ❙ 1st British-Sikh War

A large Sikh army which crossed the Sutlej into British East Punjab was defeated at Mudki and Ferozeshah before part of the invading force under Ranjur Singh was met at Aliwal, near the Sutlej, by an Anglo-Indian army under General Sir Harry Smith. A brilliantly led action threw the Sikhs back across the river and they were defeated again two weeks later at Sobraon (28 January 1846).

Aljubarrota ❙ 1385 ❙ Portuguese-Castilian Wars

João of Aviz claimed the throne of Portugal after victory at Atoleiros (April 1384), then faced another invasion by rival claimant Juan I of Castile. With English support, João and his General, Nuno Alvares Pereira, won an overwhelming victory north of Lisbon at Aljubarotta to secure not only Portugal's independence but also England's longest standing diplomatic alliance (14 August 1385).

Alkalawa ❙ 1806 ❙ Rise of Sokoto

Leading a jihad to establish Islam east of the River Niger, Uthman ibn Fudi of the Fulani attacked the Kingdom of Gobir. After a bloody campaign, the Emir of Gobir was defeated at Alkalawa and his kingdom collapsed. Shaykh Uthman then overthrew the other major rulers of Hausaland to create the new Empire of Sokoto, which reached its zenith under his son Muhammudu Bello (September 1806).

Al Khufrah ❙ 1931 ❙ Italo-Senussi War

Determined to crush renewed Bedouin resistance to Italian occupation of Libya, General Rodolfo Graziano began a forced relocation policy, then marched on the last Senussi stronghold at Al Khufrah in southeast Cyrenaica. Sultan Omar al-Mukhtar was defeated and captured, and a reported 20,000 Bedouin were forced to witness his execution, effectively ending the war (12 September 1931).

Alkmaar ❙ 1573 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Campaigning to re-establish Spanish supremacy in the Netherlands, Don Fadrique Alvarez of Toledo (son of the Duke of Alva) captured Haarlem, then suffered heavy losses assaulting Alkmaar, defended by Jakob Cabeljau. He had to lift his siege when the Dutch opened dykes to flood the area to the east, and Spanish ships were defeated days later on the Zuyder Zee (21 August–8 October 1573).

Alkmaar ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

British and Russians under Frederick Augustus Duke of York and General Ivan Hermann, trying to take the initiative in the low country, were beaten at Bergen-aan-Zee in North Holland. Two weeks later at Egmont-op-Zee, just west of Alkmaar, they defeated French General Guillaume Brune and seized Alkmaar. However, the Allies soon lost at Castricum and had to withdraw (2 October 1799).

Allatoona ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General John B. Hood marched north from the fall of Atlanta, Georgia, and detached General Samuel G. French to attack Colonel John E. Tourtellotte at Allatoona, where Union General John M. Corse had arrived with the famous instruction to "Hold the Fort." After about 700 casualties on either side, French withdrew west to support the advance on Decatur (5 October 1864).

Alleman's Nek ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

As General Sir Redvers Buller invaded the Transvaal, Christiaan Botha tried to block him in the Drakenbergs, west of Volkrust. Attacking at Alleman's Nek, General Henry Hildyard secured the strategic pass with the bayonet, outflanking the powerful position at nearby Laing's Nek, which fell without fighting. The Boers withdrew and the next day Buller occupied Volkrust (11 June 1900).

Allen's Farm ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Savage's Station

Allen's Hill ❙ 1863 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

See Poutoko

Allerheim ❙ 1645 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Nördlingen

Allia ❙ 390 BC ❙ Gallic Invasion of Italy

While attempting to hold a line northeast of Rome on the Allia River, a tributary on the left bank of the Tiber, Quintus Sulpicius was heavily defeated near Fidenae, between the Tiber and the Anio (modern Aniene), in a wild charge by Gauls under Brennus. The invaders went on to sack and burn Rome (except the Capitol) before withdrawing after payment of a large tribute (18 July 390 BC).

Allis ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Ullais

Alltacoileachan ❙ 1594 ❙ Huntly Rebellion

See Glenlivet

Ally Ghur ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Aligarh

Ally Ghur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Aligarh

Alma ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

Defending the heights south of the Alma against the Allied advance on Sevastopol, Russian Prince Alexander Menshikov was defeated by a large Anglo-French army under General Fitzroy Somerset Lord Raglan and Marshal Armand Saint-Arnaud. Both sides suffered heavy losses, with severe British casualties in an heroic uphill bayonet-charge which carried the day (20 September 1854).

Al Madain ❙ 637 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Madain

Almaden ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Two months after Spain's disastrous defeat at Ocaña, King Joseph Napoleon marched south from Madrid to invade Andalusia. Across the Guadiana, in the Sierra Morena Mountains at Almaden, Marshal Claude Victor intercepted and smashed an outnumbered Spanish force under General Tomás de Zerain, before continuing south to meet the main Spanish army at La Carolina (15 January 1810).

Almanara ❙ 1082 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Almenar

Almanara ❙ 1710 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Almenar

Almanza ❙ 1707 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

English, Portuguese and Dutch troops under Henri de Massue Earl of Ruvigny, who invaded Spain to support Archduke Charles of Austria as King, were routed at Almanza near Valencia by the Franco-Spanish army of Marshal James Duke of Berwick. The battle reversed the Anglo-Portuguese victory at Alcántara a year earlier and substantially extended French control of Spain (25 April 1707).

Almaraz ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington secured the border fortresses of Ciudad Rodrigo and Badajoz, then despatched Anglo-Portuguese troops under General Sir Rowland Hill to seize the forts guarding the pontoon bridge on the Tagus at Almaraz. Hill overwhelmed the French garrisons, who fled east in panic.The victor was later created Baron Hill of Almaraz (19 May 1812).

Almazan ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

A large-scale guerrilla action in old Castile saw Spanish insurgent leader Father Geronimo Merino—known as El Cura—attack two battalions of French marine reinforcements on the march at Alamazan, near Soria. The outnumbered marines fought back bravely, but lost 200 men before the guerrillas were eventually driven off (10 July 1810).

Almeida ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

In support of France, Spanish troops under Don Pedro Abarca Count of Aranda invaded Portugal and besieged the key border fortress of Almeida. Before England could send aid to her ally, the town capitulated after nine days. When British reinforcements did arrive, General John Burgoyne soon dispersed the Spanish invasion at Valencia d'Alcantara and Vila Velha (August 1762).

Almeida ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Following the fall of the Portuguese border fortress of Ciudad Rodrigo, and battle at the Coa, French Marshal André Masséna besieged the nearby fortress of Almeida, garrisoned by Portuguese troops under Governor Colonel William Cox. The garrison surrendered after an enemy shell destroyed the main powder magazine and Masséna advanced to Bussaco (26 August 1810).

Almeida ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

During his siege of the key Portuguese fortress of Almeida, on the Portuguese-Spanish border, Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington marched eight miles south to defeat a relief effort by Marshal André Masséna at Fuentes d'Onoro. Meanwhile, the garrison under General Antoine Brennier blew up the fortifications and escaped to rejoin the French lines (4 April–10 May 1811).

Almenar ❙ 1082 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

In the confused alliances of the war in Spain, al-Hayib, Muslim ruler of Lerida, supported by King Sancho Ramirez of Aragon and Count Ramon II of Barcelona, besieged the fortress of Almenar, held by al-Hayib's brother, al-Mutamin, ruler of Saragossa. Spanish warrior Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid—in service with al-Mutamin, defeated the invaders and captured Count Ramon.

Almenar ❙ 1710 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Persisting in the attempt to install Archduke Charles of Austria as King of Spain, an Anglo-Austrian force under General James Stanhope and Guido von Starhemberg heavily defeated the much larger Franco-Spanish army of Philip V under Ventura de Amezaga at Almenar, just north of Lérida. The Allies also suffered badly and did not pursue as the Spaniards fled to Lérida (27 July 1710).

Almeria ❙ 1309 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

In a fresh offensive against newly crowned King Nasr of Granada, a huge siege by land and sea was launched by Aragon against Almeria, in southeast Spain. Although the Christians were able to collapse part of the wall and drive off a Granadan relief force, the final assault failed. Aragon sued for peace and played little further part in the war against Muslim Granada (August–December 1309).

Almeria ❙ 1489 ❙ Final Christian Reconquest of Spain

The strategic fortress port of Almeria in southeastern Spain was a vital Mediterranean outlet for Muslim Granada, held by Al-Zaghal (sometimes Mohammad XIII). While Al-Zaghal fought a war of disputed succession against his nephew Boabdil, the city was captured by Ferdinand V of Castile, leading directly to the siege and capture of the Muslim capital at Granada (22 December 1489).

Almodovar del Rio ❙ 1091 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

King Alfonso VI of Castile and Leon suffered a terrible and decisive defeat at Zallaka in 1086, but eventually made a belated attempt to resist the advance into Spain of the victorious Almoravids from North Africa. General Alvar Fanez was sent to relieve the siege of Seville and was routed at Almodovar del Rio, west of Cordova. The new Muslim invaders then reaffirmed their control of southern Spain.

Almolonga ❙ 1823 ❙ Mexican Civil Wars

After General Agustin de Iturbide overthrew the Spanish Viceroy and was proclaimed Emperor of Mexico, he faced Republicans under General Antonio de Santa Anna. At Almolonga, east of Chilpancingo, Imperial commander Gabriel de Armijo was defeated by Generals Vicente Guerrero (severely wounded) and Nicolás Bravo. Iturbide soon abdicated and was later shot (23 January 1823).

Almonacid ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As General Sir Arthur Wellesley began his withdrawal to Portugal after victory at Talavera de la Reina, King Joseph Bonaparte of Spain and a French force under General Francois Sébastiani met Spanish General Francisco Venegas at Almonacid, near Toledo. Venegas was heavily defeated and driven back into La Mancha, effectively ending the Talavera campaign (11 August 1809).

Almorah ❙ 1815 ❙ British-Gurkha War

Three weeks after a costly loss at Katalgarh, Britain sent reinforcements under Colonel Jasper Nicolls into the Kumaun to join Colonel William Gardner's advance on the fortified city of Almorah, held by Gurkha forces since 1790. Decisive action at nearby Sitoli led to the fall of Almorah, and Gurkha commander Brahma Shah withdrew east of the Kali into modern Nepal (25 April 1815).

Al-Mukhtara ❙ 883 ❙ Zandj Slave Rebellion

Black slaves in southern Iraq rose in revolt led by Ali ibn Muhammad (869), and won great success before a protracted offensive by Regent al-Muwaffaq and his son (later Caliph al-Mu'tadid). The decisive action was their siege and storming of the rebel capital at al-Mukhtara, southeast of Basra. Ali ibn Muhammad was killed and many survivors were executed as the rising was crushed (11 August 883).

Aln ❙ 1093 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Territorial Wars

See Alnwick

Alnwick ❙ 1093 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Territorial Wars

Malcolm III of Scotland renewed his quarrel with William II Rufus of England and led his forces across the border. He was surprised and defeated with heavy losses on the Alne near Alnwick Castle, north of Newcastle, by Robert de Mowbray Earl of Northumberland. Malcolm and his son Edward were killed in the fighting and the invasion collapsed (13 November 1093).

Alnwick ❙ 1174 ❙ Anglo-Norman Rebellion

Supporting rebellious English Barons and Henry II's son "Young King Henry," King William I of Scotland—the Lion—invaded Northumberland, besieging Alnwick Castle, north of Newcastle-upon-Tyne. He was defeated by a Royalist relief army and held captive at Falaise, in Normandy, until he acknowledged Henry's authority over Scotland, and the rebellion ended (13 July 1174).

Alnwick ❙ 1462–1463 ❙ Wars of the Roses

When Alnwick Castle, north of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, declared for Margaret of Anjou, Robert Lord Hungerford and a mainly French garrison were besieged by William Neville Earl of Kent and Anthony Woodville Earl Rivers. But when George Douglas Earl of Angus and Pierre de Brézé intervened from Scotland, the Yorkists withdrew and the garrison escaped (December 1462–6 January 1463).

Alost ❙ 1128 ❙ War of Flemish Succession

In a war of succession over Flanders, William Clito (son of Duke Robert of Normandy and grandson of William the Conqueror) defeated Theodoric of Alsace (Dietrich von Elsass) at Thielt to secure the county. Only weeks later, while besieging Alost, northwest of modern Brussels, Clito was fatally wounded in skirmishing and Theodoric became Count of Flanders as Thierry I (27 July 1128).

Alpens ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

Campaigning in Catalonia, a government column under General José Cabrinety was ambushed at Alpens, 15 miles east of Berga, by Carlists under General Francisco Savalls. Heavy fighting saw Cabrinety killed and virtually his entire column of 800 killed or captured. Savalls was created Count of Alpens, and the following year he destroyed another opposing force at Castellfullit (9 July 1873).

Alporchones ❙ 1452 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

King Muhammad IX of Muslim Granada was unwisely raiding into Christian Murcia, in southeast Spain, when Castilian General Alfonso Fajardo responded by taking a large army east from his base at Lorca. Muhammad's army was routed at the nearby village of Alporchones with heavy losses in killed and prisoners. The survivors fled into the Sierra de Almenara (16 March 1452).

Al-Rahmaniyya ❙ 1786 ❙ Mamluk-Ottoman Wars

See Rahmaniyya

Alresford ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

Despite heavy losses, Parliamentary forces under Sir William Waller and Sir William Balfour defeated the Royalists of Ralph Lord Hopton and Patrick Ruthven Earl of Forth and Brentford at Cheriton near Alresford in central Hampshire. Although Hopton managed to carry off his guns, the Parliamentarians regained most of Hampshire and Wiltshire (29 March 1644).

Alsace ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As Germany's Ardennes offensive stalled, further south General Hans von Obsterfelder advanced into Alsace, north of Strasbourg. Fighting in intense cold and mud, American General Alexander Patch halted the initial offensive and also a second attack towards the Hagenau Forest. South of Strasbourg, the Allies then crushed the Colmar Pocket (31 December 1944–25 January 1945).

Al-Salihiyya ❙ 1773 ❙ Mamluk Wars

See Salihiyya

Alsasua ❙ 1834 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Spanish Liberal commander Vicente Jenaro de Quesada, marching from Vitoria in Navarre to Pamplona with a large convoy, was attacked outside Alsasua by Carlist leader Tomás Zumalacárregui. Although saved from disaster by the arrival of Gaspar Jáuregui, Quesada suffered perhaps 200 casualties and 100 prisoners. He was later replaced by José Rodil (2 May 1834).

Alsen ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd Schleswig-Holstein War

After the fall of the Danish coastal fortress of Duppel in April 1864, the defeated garrison withdrew to the nearby island of Alsen. When an armistice expired, Prussian General Herwarth von Bittenfeld stormed the island at night and General Peter Steinmann surrendered the battery and 2,400 prisoners. The action ended the war and Prussia gained the province of Schleswig (29–30 June 1864).

Alta ❙ 1019 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

Prince Yaroslav of Novgorod recovered from defeat at the Bug in 1018 and determined to recapture Kiev from his stepbrother Sviatopolk. Abandoned by his Polish allies, Sviatopolk turned for aid to the Pecheneg Turks, but at the Alta, southeast of Kiev, his army was defeated and he was killed in the pursuit. Yaroslav regained the throne and became one of the greatest Princes of Kiev (24 July 1019).

Alta ❙ 1068 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

Pecheneg horsemen who invaded Russian territory were met at the Alta River, southeast of Kiev, by Kievan Princes Iziaslav, Sviatoslav and Vsevolod (sons of Yaroslav). The Russians were routed. Kiev's citizens then overthrew Iziaslav and elected Vseslav of Polotsk (captured at Nemiga). Iziaslav fled to Poland but soon recaptured Kiev. The Pecheneg won again 25 years later at Tripole.

Altafulla ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Six months after French capture of the major Spanish port of Tarragona, the city was blockaded by Spain. When Spanish troops under General Baron Jaime Eroles attempted to drive off a relief column under General Maurice Mathieu at nearby Altafulla, the much larger French force smashed all resistance and Tarragona was relieved (24 January 1812).

Altaku ❙ 700 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

See Eltekeh

Alt Breisach ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Breisach

Altdorf ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

See Muottothal

Altenberg ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Prussian General Johann Thielmann raided French communications along the Saale, where he took Weissenfels and Merseberg before facing General Charles Lefebvre-Desnouettes at Altenberg, near Pirna. Supported by Austrian Count Emmanuel Mensdorf and General Matvei Platov's Cossacks, Thielmann defeated the French, taking over 1,000 prisoners (28 September 1813).

Alten Fjord ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Following previous failed attempts on the battleship Tirpitz in northern Norway's Alten Fjord, six British midget submarines attacked, and Lieutenants Basil Place and Donald Cameron exploded charges under the ship. Tirpitz was disabled for six months and moved south to Tromsö Fjord, where she was bombed and sunk (12 November 1944) with over 1,200 men lost (22 September 1943).

Altenkirchen (1st) ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In a fresh invasion of Germany, French General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan crossed the Rhine, and General Jean-Baptiste Kléber defeated Prince Eugene of Württemberg at Altenkirchen, north of Coblenz, capturing 3,000 prisoners and 12 guns. The Austrians began withdrawing east, but won a victory on the same battlefield in the counter-offensive just three months later (4 June 1796).

Altenkirchen (2nd) ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Continuing his victorious counter-offensive against the French invasion of Germany, Archduke Charles Louis of Austria moved northwest from victory at Aschaffenburg to defeat General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan just days later near the Rhine at Altenkirchen. The brilliant General Francois-Severin Marceau was fatally wounded and Jourdan withdrew across the Rhine next day (19 September 1796).

Altenkirchen ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In a renewed French offensive, General Louis Lazare Hoche crossed the Rhine near Coblenz and sent his left wing under Generals Jean-Étienne Championnet and Nicolas Soult north against Altenkirchen. Austrian Field Marshal Franz Werneck was driven back on the town and, after learning of General Paul Kray's defeat east of Neuwied, he withdrew to Herborn (18 April 1797).

Alte Veste ❙ 1632 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

Having secured southern Bavaria after victory at Rain in April, Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden occupied Nuremberg, across the Regnitz, from Imperial commander Albrecht von Wallenstein camped at Furth. Crossing the river, the Swedes were repulsed near the old castle of Alte Veste and both Wallenstein and Gustavus withdrew from the area two weeks later (24 August–8 September 1632).

Altimarlach ❙ 1680 ❙ Later Scottish Clan Wars

Disputing the Earldom of Caithness, the legal claimant Sir John Campbell of Glenorchy was upheld against the heir George Sinclair of Keiss, who then took land by force. In the reputed last clan battle in Scotland, Campbell defeated Sinclair at Altimarlach, just west of Wick, inflicting heavy casualties. The courts later found for Sinclair and Campbell was instead created Earl Breadalbane.

Altmark Incident ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)

With the battleship Graf Spee sunk off the River Plate, her auxiliary transport Altmark, with prisoners from ships sunk, escaped to Jossing Fjord in neutral Norway. Captain Philip Vian in the British destroyer Cossack boarded Altmark and recovered about 300 men. The bloodless incident boosted Allied morale and helped precipitate the German invasion of Norway (16 February 1940).

Altobiscar ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Roncesvalles

Alto de la Alianza ❙ 1880 ❙ War of the Pacific

See Tacna

Alto de Leon ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

After a failed Nationalist rising in Madrid, Colonel Ricardo Serrador fought a brutal action for the strategic Alto de Leon Pass to the northwest in the Guadaramma Mountains. The war's first full battle saw Republican Colonel Enrique Castillo shot and General José Riquelme driven back to Madrid. The Nationalists held the pass and also the eastern pass at Somosierra (21–22 July 1936).

Alto de Quilo ❙ 1814 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

Spanish General Gavina Gainza took over the Royalist army after defeat at Roble (October 1813), and met Patriot commander Bernardo O'Higgins on the Heights of Quilo, outside Concepción, where he was heavily repulsed. An attack next day on Colonel Benjamin Mackenna at Membrillar, near Chillan, was also repulsed when O'Higgins arrived and Gainza had to withdraw (19 March 1814).

Alton ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Sir Ralph Hopton's Royalists advanced into Hampshire and Sussex to take Alton, then marched on Arundel, leaving a garrison under Ludovic Lindsay Earl of Crawford. Marching south from Farnham, Sir William Waller attacked Alton, where Crawford was driven off and Colonel Richard Bolle was heavily defeated, losing over 1,000 prisoners. Waller then turned east to Arundel (13 December 1643).

Altona ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

While campaigning in northern Germany, the Swedish army of General Magnus Stenbock defeated Danish and Saxon troops, but was overwhelmed at Altona, near Hamburg, by the Russian army of Tsar Peter I. Although the Tsar then withdrew to winter quarters, his victory led to Russia securing the whole of Pomerania the following year.

Alto Palacé ❙ 1813 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

See Palacé

Altopascio ❙ 1325 ❙ Guelf-Ghibelline Wars

Ten years after the great pro-Imperial Ghibelline victory at Montecatini, Castruccio Castracani of Lucca invaded Florentine territory and defeated the pro-Papal Guelf army under Raymond of Cardona at Altopascio, east of Lucca. The victory gave the Ghibellines most of Tuscany, but Castracani's death in 1328 signalled an end to Luccan power (23 September 1325).

Al-uqab ❙ 1212 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Las Navas de Tolosa

Alvsborg ❙ 1563 ❙ Nordic Seven Years War

Frederick II of Denmark resolved to re-establish the Kalmar Union and invaded Erik XIV's Sweden with a largely German mercenary army under Gunther von Schwartzburg, which besieged the port of Alvsborg. Erik Kagge surrendered after 14 days, losing Sweden's access to the North Sea (though Alvsborg was ransomed after the war). Erik later attacked Halmstad (4 September 1563).

Alvsborg ❙ 1612 ❙ War of Kalmar

Determined to regain Sweden, Christian IV of Denmark seized Kalmar, then attacked the strategic fortress at Alvsborg, guarding Goteborg. With the fortress walls smashed by artillery and the Swedish fleet nearby scuttled, garrison commander Olof Strale surrendered. After a Danish check at Vaxholm the war ended and Alvsborg was again redeemed for a crippling ransom (5–24 May 1612).

Amakusa ❙ 1638 ❙ Japanese Christian Rising

A doomed resistance against the Shogun Iemitsu saw up to 35,000 Japanese Christians, mainly peasants from the Shimbara area on Kyushu Island, besieged in the castle at Amakusa. Following the fall of Amakusa, the Shogun's men massacred the entire garrison and Christianity in Japan was largely suppressed (28 February 1638).

Amalinda ❙ 1818 ❙ Xhosa Civil War

Climaxing the great rivalry between the Xhosa Chief Ngqika and his uncle Ndlambe, their armies met on Amalinda Plain, near Debe Nek, East London, where Ndlambe's army under Nxele secured a bloody and decisive victory over Ngqika's generals Nteyi and Makoyi. British forces later attacked Ndlambe's camp, provoking a massive assault on Grahamstown (June 1818).

Amara ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

New British commander Sir John Nixon was encouraged by success over the Turks at Shaiba, and despatched General Charles Townshend up the Euphrates from Basra against Amara. Supported on the river by "Townshend's Regatta," he took the city virtually by coup and Turks arriving from Ahwaz were surprised and captured. Townshend then continued upriver to Kut-al-Amara (3–4 June 1915).

Amara ❙ 1983 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Determined to launch a "final" offensive north of Basra after losses near Musian, Iranians advanced on a 25-mile front across the plain towards Amara (Al Amarah) with good air and artillery support. But Iraq's defence was stiffened due to their air force performance, and the Iranians were repulsed with severe losses. Another attempt in April at nearby Musian also failed (6–10 February 1983).

Amarante ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Following French capture of Oporto, Portuguese Brigadier Francisco Silveira held off French General Louis Loison's repeated attempts to cross the vital bridge at Amarante on the Tamega River, northeast of Oporto. Loison eventually stormed the bridge, but Silveira's three-week delaying action helped provide time for British reinforcements to reach Portugal (12 April–2 May 1809).

Amatola Mountain ❙ 1846 ❙ 7th Cape Frontier War

See Burnshill

Amba Alagi ❙ 1895 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War

With Ethiopian rebels defeated by the Italians at Halai and Coatit, Emperor Menelik gathered an army, and his commander Ras Makonnen surprised an advance column under Major Pietro Toselli at Amba Alagi. Toselli was overwhelmed and killed and, following another unit loss at Makale, the main Italian army was utterly destroyed further north in March 1896 at Adowa (7 December 1895).

Amba Alagi ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Italian forces came under massive pressure in Ethiopia, and Amadeo Umberta Duke of Aosta determined on a last stand in mountains at Amba Alagi against British General Sir Alan Cunningham advancing north through Addis Ababa and General Sir William Platt driving south from Keren. Aosta surrendered after hard fighting, but remaining Italians held out at Gondar (4–19 May 1941).

Amba Aradam ❙ 1936 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

A month after defeating Ras Seyoum in the Tembien, Marshal Pietro Badoglio sent 70,000 men south from Makale to encircle Ras Mulugeta at Amba Aradam. Badoglio bombed and shelled the mountain stronghold until the Ethiopians had to withdraw, with perhaps 6,000 killed. Ras Mulugeta was killed in the pursuit as the survivors fled south towards Maychew (10–17 February 1936).

Ambato ❙ 1821 ❙ Ecuadorian War of Independence

See Huachi

Ambela ❙ 1863 ❙ Pathan Rising

On campaign against Pathan tribesmen in western Pakistan, General Sir Neville Chamberlain's 6,000-strong force was blocked north of Peshawar at Ambela Pass. Nearby Crag Picquet changed hands several times before the Pathans were defeated when reinforcements arrived under General Sir John Garvock. Their stronghold at Malka was later destroyed (22 October–17 December 1863).

Amberg ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

In a surprise mid-winter action, Austria invaded Bavaria and defeated her army at Amberg, east of Nuremberg. Elector Maximilian III Joseph had to abandon Munich, effectively knocking Bavaria out of the war, and he then renounced any claim to the Austrian crown. This left France and Prussia alone against the Quadruple Alliance of Austria, Saxony, England and Holland (7 January 1745).

Amberg ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

As French General Jean-Baptise Jourdan advanced across the Rhine into Germany, Archduke Charles Louis of Austria counter-attacked from the Danube, joined by General Alexander Wartensleben from the Raab. After French defeats at Deining and Neumarkt, Jourdan was heavily defeated at Amberg, east of Nuremberg, and was forced to retire towards the Rhine (24 August 1796).

Amblef ❙ 716 ❙ Rise of Charles Martel
See Ambleve

Ambleve ❙ 716 ❙ Rise of Charles Martel
Charles Martel consolidated his position as leader of the reunified Frankish kingdom after the death of his father Pepin, confirming his control of Austrasia by defeating rebel Neustrian nobles at Ambleve, near Liège. This was followed the next year by another major Frankish victory at Vincy, and Martel's position was finally secured in 719 by victory at Soissons.

Ambon ❙ 1605 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars
Dutch Admiral Steven van de Haghen sailed to the East Indies, where he defeated a Portuguese fleet off Goa, then seized the clove-growing island of Ambon, in the Moluccas, east of modern Indonesia (held by Portuguese since 1521). The island was central to the Dutch spice trade and, after being taken by the British during the Napoleonic War, was restored to Holland in 1814 (23 February 1605).

Ambon ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)
Advancing against Dutch possessions in the East Indies, British Admiral Peter Rainer took the island colony of Ambon without loss. Its vast booty made him a wealthy man, and he then took neighbouring Banda (7–9 March). Ambon was restored to Holland in 1802, then reoccupied in 1810, before being finally restored to Dutch government in 1814 (16–18 February 1796).

Amboor ❙ 1749 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War
See Ambur

Amboor ❙ 1767 ❙ 1st British-Mysore War
See Ambur

Ambracian Gulf ❙ 435 BC ❙ Corinthian-Corcyrean War
See Leucimne

Ambu Alagi ❙ 1895 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War
See Amba Alagi

Ambu Alagi ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)
See Amba Alagi

Ambuila ❙ 1665 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in West Africa
With political instability threatening the slave trade in Angola, Portuguese under Luis Lopes de Sequeira marched from Luanda against the Kongo army led by Portuguese mercenary Pedro Dias de Cabral. At Ambuila (Mbwila in northern Angola), King Antonio I was defeated and killed, ending the once-mighty African kingdom of Kongo. Angola remained Portuguese until 1975 (29 October 1665).

Ambur ❙ 1749 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War
Using local conflict to gain advantage in southeastern India, French under Colonel Louis d'Auteil and the Marquis Charles de Bussy supported Chanda Sahib as Nawab of Arcot and Muzaffar Jang as Nizam of Hyderabad. At Ambur, southwest of Vellore, the French and their allies defeated and killed Anwar-ud-din, Nawab of Arcot, who held his throne with British support (3 August 1749).

Ambur ❙ 1767 ❙ 1st British-Mysore War
Early in the war, Haidar Ali of Mysore recovered from defeat at Trinomalee to besiege Ambur on the Palar River in the Carnatic region of southeastern India, southwest of Vellore. Captain Matthias Calvert of the Madras Army was forced to withdraw to the city's upper fort, but held out until relieved by the main army under Colonel Joseph Smith (10 November–10 December 1767).

Amegial ❙ 1663 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese Wars
See Ameixial

Ameixial ❙ 1663 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese Wars
Moving to reconquer Portugal, Philip IV of Spain invaded his lost kingdom and at Ameixial, near Estremos, General Don John of Austria was defeated by an Anglo-Portuguese force under Sancho de Villa Flor and Marshal Frederick Herman Schomberg. A second invasion two years later was defeated at Montes Claros, and Spain eventually recognised Portuguese independence (8 June 1663).

Amelia Springs ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate commander Robert E. Lee was retreating west from Petersburg, Virginia, when his rearguard under Generals Thomas L. Prosser and Fitzhugh Lee met a Union force led by General George Crook at Amelia Springs, near Amelia Court House. An inconclusive fight continued south through Jetersville as the main Confederate army advanced towards Sayler's Creek (5 April 1865).

Amethyst ❙ 1949 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Yangzi Incident

Amgala ❙ 1976 ❙ Western Sahara Wars

As Spain prepared to leave Western Sahara, divided between Morocco and Mauritania, Algeria sent troops to assist refugees evacuating through the border town of Amgala, where they clashed with Moroccan regulars. The Algerians were routed and withdrew to avoid a major war, but Algeria continued to support local guerrillas, who briefly retook Amgala a few weeks later (29 January 1976).

Amida ❙ 359 ❙ Later Roman-Persian Wars

The Sassanid Shapur II ended the truce signed after Nisibis (350) and marched towards the Euphrates, then diverted to attack Amida (modern Diyabakir) on the Tigris. After a 73-day siege, the Roman garrison agreed to surrender, but was massacred. However, heavy Persian losses made Shapur withdraw. A new Roman offensive a few years later ended in disaster after Ctesiphon (6 October 359).

Amida ❙ 502-503 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Renewing Persia's campaign in Roman Mesopotamia, Sassanid ruler Kawad refused payment to withdraw. Supported by Arabs and Ephthalites, the Persian ruler advanced to the Tigris and besieged Amida (modern Diyabakir), before taking it by assault. Amida's fall was followed by three days of slaughter. Kawad later defeated the Romans again at nearby Apadna (October 502–11 January 503).

Amida ❙ 973 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

After a successful expedition against Mesopotamia, Byzantine Emperor John Tzimisces left General Mleh to rule the area. But in a campaign the following spring against the city of Amida (modern Diyabakir), Mleh was utterly defeated by the Arab Amir of Mosul. Previous Byzantine gains were lost and the wounded Mleh died in captivity (4 July 973).

Amiens ❙ 1597 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

Spanish troops of Phillip II invaded northern France from the Netherlands to seize Calais, then took Amiens (11 March). In the final major battle of the protracted French Wars of Religion, Henry IV of France took his army against Amiens and defeated the Spanish invaders. The war ended the following May with religious freedom granted to Protestants (25 September 1597).

Amiens ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Prussian troops under General Edwin von Manteuffel drove towards Paris after the fall of Metz, advancing through Rheims and Compiègne against the small Army of the North. French General Jean-Joseph Farre suffered heavy casualties just east of Amiens at Villers-Bretonneaux and was forced to withdraw north through Arras. Amiens was captured next day (27 November 1870).

Amiens ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Following success on the Marne, Allied commander Ferdinand Foch launched a new offensive east from Amiens against Generals Georg von de Marwitz and Oscar von Hutier. Attacked by Sir Henry Rawlinson, the German army suffered a decisive defeat, called its "Black Day." The Allied offensive finally stalled, but was renewed further north at Arras and Albert (8–15 August 1918).

Amjhera ❙ 1728 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

On campaign in central India against Giridhar Bahadur, the Mughal Subadar of Malwa, the Maratha Peshwa Baji Rao I and his brother Chimnaji Appa invaded Malwa, and Chimnaji met the Mughal army at Amjhera, west of Dhar. Giridhar Bahadur and his cousin Daya Bahadur were defeated and killed, and Chimnaji went on to a failed siege of Ujjain (29 November 1728).

Amman ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

In support of the great British offensive north from Jerusalem through Megiddo, New Zealand General Edward Chaytor took Colonial and Imperial forces east across the Jordan to capture Amman and reinforce the Arab offensive along the Hejaz Railway. Two previous expeditions towards Amman had been halted at Es Salt, but this time Chaytor took the city by storm (25 September 1918).

Amoafo ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd British-Ashanti War

When Ashanti Chief Amonquatia threatened British territory in modern Ghana, he was defeated at Essaman and Abakrampa in late 1873, and was then pursued inland by African auxiliaries under General Sir Garnet Wolseley. Amonquatia was defeated and killed in a large-scale action at Amoafo, 15 miles south of the Ashanti capital at Kumasi, and Wolseley advanced through Odasu (31 January 1874).

Amoneburg ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

The Prussian-British army of Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick defeated the French in Hesse at Wilhelmstahl (24 June), then continued campaigning against the French east of the Rhine. At Amoneburg, just east of Marburg in Hesse, Ferdinand suffered an unexpected and costly check. However, by the end of the year, the French had been driven back across the Rhine (21 September 1762).

Amorgos ❙ 322 BC ❙ Lamian War

Following the death of Alexander the Great, Athens and other Greek cities rose against the Macedonian Regent Antipater. With the Greek cities crushed at Crannon, the naval phase of the revolt ended later the same year when Macedonian Admiral Clitus utterly destroyed the Athenian fleet at Amorgos in the Aegean. As a result, Athens ceased to be a maritime power in the Mediterranean.

Amorha ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

After rebel defeat at Gorakhpur, Colonel Francis Rowcroft marched west to Amorha, near Faizabad, where he was blocked by a huge force under Mehndi Husain, Nizam of Sultanpur, at Belwar. An attack on Rowcroft's camp was repulsed with about 400 rebel casualties. Reinforced, he defeated the rebels twice more (17 and 25 March), then withdrew. He later won at Haraiya (5 March 1858).

Amorium ❙ 669 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

In a fresh advance against Byzantium following the death of Emperor Constans, Caliph Mu'awiyah sent a large army towards Constantinople under his son Yazid, who occupied Amorium, southwest of Ankara. But Byzantine General Andreas led a bold counter-offensive and the Arabs were defeated and driven out. A renewed Arab offensive a few years later was defeated at sea at Syllaeum.

Amorium ❙ 838 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Abbasid Caliph al-Mutasim invaded Byzantine Anatolia, where he beat Emperor Theophilus at Dazimon, then seized Ancyra and attacked Amorium (modern Hissar) near the Sakarya. After a bitter siege, with heavy losses on both sides, the Muslims seized and sacked the city, massacring large numbers of Christians. Byzantine commander Aetius was captured and later executed (1–13 August 838).

Amorium ❙ 978 ❙ Byzantine Military Rebellions

See Pancalia

Amoy ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Xiamen

Ampfing ❙ 1322 ❙ Habsburg Wars of Succession

See Mühldorf

Amphipolis ❙ 422 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

In a courageous Spartan counter-offensive against Athens, the Spartan hero Brasidas invaded Macedonia and captured Amphipolis (modern Amfipolis) at the mouth of the Struma River. Athenian General Cleon was defeated in a decisive battle outside the city and, with both Cleon and Brasidas killed in the fighting, Cleon's rival Nicias made a temporary peace with the Spartans.

Amposta ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As Lord Frederick Bentinck's abortive Anglo-Sicilian expedition to Catalonia fell back before French Marshal Louis Suchet, General Samuel Whittingham and Lorenzo Duke del Parque came under attack crossing the Ebro at Amposta. General Louis-Benoit Robert, Governor of nearby Tortosa, attacked the Allies in an unexpected sortie, causing over 400 Spanish casualties (18 August 1813).

Amritsar ❙ 1634 ❙ Early Mughal-Sikh Wars

Campaigning against Sikh Guru Hargobind near Amritsar, where he was reputedly arranging his daughter's wedding, Mughal commander Mukhlis Khan engaged in heavy fighting with the Guru's troops under Bhai Bhanno. While both sides suffered very heavy losses, Mukhlis Khan and his lieutenant Shamas Khan were killed, and the Mughals were forced to withdraw.

Amritsar ❙ 1797 ❙ Punjab Campaigns of Shah Zaman

Shah Zaman of Kabul led a renewed invasion of the Punjab after capturing Rohtas in 1795 to secure Lahore, then advanced on the Sikh Ranjit Singh near Amritsar. A terrible battle outside the city—claimed to have cost 20,000 Afghans and 15,000 Sikhs—saw Shah Zaman driven back to Lahore. When he returned to Kabul, his local Governor in India was defeated at Gujrat (12 January 1797).

Amritsar ❙ 1798 ❙ Punjab Campaigns of Shah Zaman

Despite Afghan defeat at Amritsar and Gujrat, the following year Shah Zaman of Kabul led a fresh invasion of the Punjab, then sent 10,000 men against Amritsar, where they were defeated outside the city by the Sikh leader Ranjit Singh. Besieged at Lahore, Zaman Shah returned home, where he was overthrown and blinded. Ranjit Singh was later crowned Maharaja (24 November 1798).

Amritsar ❙ 1919 ❙ Punjab Disturbances

More a massacre than a battle, Gurkha troops under General Reginald Dyer opened fire on an unauthorised assembly of rebellious demonstrators, many armed with Kirpans (daggers), in the city of Amritsar, east of Lahore. With 379 people killed and more than 1,200 wounded, the incident was significant in rousing Indian opinion against British rule (13 April 1919).

Amroha ❙ 1305 ❙ Mongol Invasions of India

Recovering from Mongol defeat in 1299 outside Delhi at Kili, 50,000 Mongols invaded northern India, led by Ali Beg (a descendant of Genghis Khan) and Tartaq. At Amroha, on the Ganges Plain east of Delhi near Moradabad, they were heavily defeated by the army of Sultan Ala-ad-din under Malik Kafur. Both the defeated Mongol generals were captured and later executed (20 December 1305).

Amstetten ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

As Prince Mikhail Kutuzov withdrew towards Vienna after the Austrian disaster at Ulm, his Russian rearguard under Prince Pyotr Bagration was mauled at Amstetten, southeast of Linz in Lower Austria, by French Marshals Joachim Murat and Nicolas Oudinot. Ten days later, Napoleon Bonaparte entered Vienna, then advanced to his great victory a month later at Austerlitz (5 November 1805).

Amur Incident ❙ 1937 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

See Kanchatzu

An ❙ 589 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

With Jin (Chin) defeated at Bi (597), Prince Qing (Ch'ing) of Qi (Ch'i) began to expand his power and invaded neighbouring Lu, where he seized the city of Long and repulsed a relief force sent by Wei. Jin then sent a large army under Xi Ke and Shi Xie, who joined with the forces of Wei and Lu to secure a crushing victory at An in Qi. Prince Qing sued for peace and Jin enjoyed renewed authority.

Anagni ❙ 1381 ❙ Neapolitan-Papal War

When the childless Queen Joanna of Naples attempted to name the King of France's brother as her heir, Pope Urban VI in Rome instead supported her cousin Charles of Durazzo. Charles defeated Joanna's fourth husband, Otto of Brunswick, at Anagni, near Naples, then seized the Neapolitan throne as Charles III. Joanna herself was captured and murdered.

Anahuac ❙ 1832 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Having arbitrarily arrested about 20 prominent Texans at Anahuac, on Galveston Bay, Mexican Colonel Juan Bradburn faced patriots under John Austin and Francis W. Johnson in a tense armed confrontation. Colonel José de las Piedras from Nacogdoches relieved Bradburn and released the prisoners without bloodshed, but there was a costly action at nearby Velasco (May–June 1832).

Anahuac ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

When Mexican officials attempted to enforce customs duties at the Texan port of Anahuac, on Galvestan Bay, William B. Travis and about 25 adherents of his hawkish "war party" forced the surrender of the local garrison under Captain Antonio Tenorio. Travis had to apologise for his rash action, but it helped trigger the subsequent Mexican surrender at San Antonio (30 June 1835).

Anaiza ❙ 1904 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

See Unayzah

Analatos ❙ 1827 ❙ Greek War of Independence

In a final effort to relieve the Acropolis, Greek forces under Yannis Makriyannis landed at night and attempted to advance at Analatos. However, Kitsos Tzavellas ignored orders for a simultaneous attack from Piraeus and the Greeks were routed on open ground by Turkish cavalry, with 700 killed and 240 captured (most later murdered), ending any hope of success (7 May 1827).

Analipsis ❙ 1897 ❙ 1st Greco-Turkish War

See Nezeros

Anandpur ❙ 1700 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

In a fresh offensive against the Sikhs of the northern Punjab, Emperor Aurangzeb sent 10,000 men under Painda Khan and Dina Beg, who joined forces with the hill Chiefs led by Raja Ajmer Chand of Bilaspur. In the course of a long action near Anandpur, northeast of Ludhiana, Painda Khan was killed—reputedly in single combat by Guru Gobind Singh—and the Imperial army fled to Ropar.

Anandpur ❙ 1701 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

The hill Rajas of the northern Punjab regrouped after defeat at Anandpur the previous year and resumed their campaign against Sikh Guru Gobind Singh, joining forces with Gujar tribesmen to besiege Anandpur, northeast of Ludhiana. Gujar leader Jagatullah was killed on the first day and the Rajas were driven off after a brilliant defence led by the Guru's son Ajit Singh.

Anandpur (1st) ❙ 1704 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

In renewed war against Sikh Guru Gobind Singh after a costly repulse at Chamkaur earlier in the year, Mughal Emperor Aurangzeb sent a fresh force into the northern Punjab under General Saiyad Khan, later replaced by Ramjan Khan. Ramjan was mortally wounded in further very heavy fighting around the Sikh stronghold at Anandpur, northeast of Ludhiana, and his force again withdrew.

Anandpur (2nd) ❙ 1704 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

Imperial troops were repulsed in northern Punjab at Basoli and Anandpur, and Emperor Aurangzeb sent Generals Wazir Khan and Zaberdast Khan to besiege Sikh Guru Gobind Singh in his stronghold at Anandpur, northeast of Ludhiana. Facing starvation, the Guru capitulated in return for safe passage, but the Sikhs were treacherously attacked at the Sarsa (20 May–20 December 1704).

Anaquito ❙ 1546 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

With reforms to control the power of the original Conquistadors, Blasco Nuñez Vela, Spanish Viceroy of Peru, provoked a rebellion led by Gonzalo Pizarro, half-brother of the former Conquistador Francisco Pizarro. At Anaquito, near Quito in modern Ecuador, Nuñez Vela was defeated and killed. Pizarro became Governor of Peru but was overthrown at Xaquixaguana in 1548 (8 January 1546).

Anas ❙ 79 BC ❙ Sertorian War

Roman General Quintus Sertorius began his rebellion against Rome by seizing much of Further Spain at the Baetis, and the following year his lieutenant Lucius Hirtuleius attacked Lucius Domitius Ahenobarbus in Nearer Spain. At the Anas (modern Guadiana) River, Domitius was defeated and killed. Sertorius soon controlled most of Nearer Spain and Hirtuleius won again a year later at Ilerda.

Anatoliko ❙ 1823 ❙ Greek War of Independence

Despite losses at Karpenision (August 1822), Mustai Pasha joined Omer Vrioni besieging Anatoliko (modern Aitolikón), five miles northwest of Missolonghi. Although virtually unfortified, Anatoliko was bravely defended by about 600 Greeks, with six old cannon under the English seaman William Martin. Mustai eventually abandoned the siege and withdrew (October–11 December 1823).

Anazarbus ❙ 1130 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Bohemund II of Antioch marched north to regain territory in Cilicia and was ambushed as he advanced towards the Ceyhan River in Armenian Cilicia. Attacked near Anazarbus (modern Anavarza) by the Roupenian Armenian Prince Leo, with support from Danishmendid Turks, Bohemund's small army was overwhelmed. Bohemund was killed and his embalmed head was sent to the Caliph.

Anbar ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Ain Tamar

Anbar ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

Two years after destroying the dangerous Assassin sect in central Iran at Alamut, Hulegu, Mongol Il-Khan of Iran and grandson of Genghis Khan, sent his army towards Baghdad. Marching out to meet the invasion, the Caliph's General Aibeg encountered Mongol General Baichu at Anbar, on the Euphrates. The Muslims were routed and the advance on Baghdad continued (11–12 January 1258).

Anchialus ❙ 708 ❙ Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars

Campaigning against Byzantium, the Bulgar Khan Tervel inflicted a heavy defeat on troops of the Byzantine army in eastern Thrace at Anchialus (modern Pomoriye), on the Black Sea, northeast of Burgas. However, a decade later, he entered into an alliance with the Byzantine Empire to defend Constantinople against a Muslim siege and defeated the Muslims at Adrianople.

Anchialus ❙ 763 ❙ Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars

After the expiry of a truce agreed in 759 following defeat at Marcellae, the Bulgars under Khan Telets resumed attacks on the Byzantine Empire and Emperor Constantine V marched to the Black Sea to meet the new threat. Northeast of Burgas at Anchialus (modern Pomoriye, Bulgaria), Telets was heavily defeated. He was later overthrown and killed by his own followers (30 June 763).

Anchialus ❙ 917 ❙ Later Byzantine-Bulgarian Wars

The Bulgar Tsar Symeon launched a successful series of attacks on the declining Byzantine Empire, inflicting a heavy loss on the Byzantines in Thrace, then defeated General Leo Phocas at Anchialus (modern Pomoriye), northeast of Burgas. The rulers in Constantinople paid Symeon off with tribute while they turned their attention to the Muslim threat from the east (20 August 917).

Ancona ❙ 1173 ❙ Wars of the Lombard League

In support of Emperor Frederick Barbarossa campaigning in northern Italy, Christian of Buch, Archbishop of Mainz, attacked the east coast city of Ancona, southernmost ally of the Lombard League. When a terrible six-month siege almost starved the population into surrender, a relief army approached from Lombardy and Bishop Christian was forced to withdraw (April–September 1173).

Ancona ❙ 1860 ❙ 2nd Italian War of Independence

A combined naval and land operation saw Piedmontese ships and troops under Admiral Carlo di Persano and General Enrico Cialdini attack Papal forces defending the Adriatic city and harbour of Ancona. Recovering from defeat to the south at Castelfidardo, the Papal garrison under French General Léon Louis Lamoricière held out for a week before surrendering (29 September 1860).

Ancre ❙ 1916–1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Though winter halted most action on the Somme, General Hubert Gough in the north launched a large-scale assault along the Ancre. Attacking in heavy mud, he broke through at Beaumont Hamel and took extensive ground. German reinforcements halted his advance but later abandoned their salient and withdrew to the Hindenburg Line (13 November 1916–24 February 1917).

Ancrum Moor ❙ 1545 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

In support of his war against France, Henry VIII attempted to impose his overlordship on the French ally, Scotland, and sent English Borderers and foreign mercenaries under Sir Ralph Evers to attack Edinburgh. However, the English army was defeated at Ancrum Moor, near Jedburgh, by Archibald Douglas Earl of Angus after the Borderers deserted during the battle (17 February 1545).

Ancyra ❙ 235 BC ❙ War of the Brothers

Seleucid King Seleucus II "Callinicus" (Victorious) had secured his throne after his mother Laodice poisoned his father Antiochus II. But he later faced rebellion by his younger brother Antiochus Heirax, aided by their mother and Galatian allies. Seleucus was defeated in battle at Ancyra (Ankara in modern Turkey) and was forced to yield part of his realm in Asia Minor to his brother.

Ancyra ❙ 1402 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

See Angora

Andalsnes ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)

To assist Norway, Anglo-French forces under General Adrian de Carton Wiart landed north of Trondheim at Namsos and south at Andalsnes, where General Bernard Paget progressed along the Gudbrandsdal towards Lillehammer. Badly beaten by Germans advancing from Oslo, the Allies evacuated central Norway, while fighting continued further north at Narvik (8 April–3 May 1940).

Anderida ❙ 491 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Following an inconclusive engagement at Mearcredesburn in 485, the Saxon warrior Aella and his son Cissa received reinforcements across the English Channel and besieged the former Roman walled fortress of Anderida, near modern Pevensey. Having captured Anderida, Aella reputedly slaughtered the entire British garrison and was established as undisputed King of the South Saxons.

Andernach ❙ 876 ❙ Carolingian Imperial Wars

In the breakup of the Carolingian Empire after the death of Charlemagne in 814, his grandson Charles the Bald attempted to reunify Germany to his French territory. But on the Rhine at Andernach, he was utterly defeated and his West Frankish army was destroyed by his nephew, who then took the throne as Louis II (8 October 876).

Andernach ❙ 939 ❙ German Imperial Wars

The German Emperor Otto I consolidated his leadership of what became the Holy Roman Empire, using French support to fight off rebellious nobles. In his defeat of the rebels at Andernach, near modern Coblenz, his half-brother Tankmar was killed, along with Duke Eberhard of Franconia and Duke Gilbert of Lorraine. Lorraine was subdued and Otto's younger brother Henry had to submit.

Andernach ❙ 1114 ❙ German Civil Wars

Despite a rebellion of nobles being ruthlessly putting down at Warmstadt, German Emperor Henry V faced renewed rebellion the following year led by Lothar Duke of Saxony and Adalbert Archbishop of Mainz. Henry was heavily defeated at Andernach, near Coblenz in Westphalia, and a further defeat at Welfesholze four months later led him to abandon Saxony (1 October 1114).

Anderson's Plantation ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

See Dunlawton

Andizhan ❙ 1876 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

Russian forces captured the Khanate of Khokand in 1875, and the self-proclaimed Khan Pulat-bey withdrew to Andizhan, where he was attacked by new Russian commander Mikhail Skobelev. Following heavy shelling the stronghold fell and, after further fighting at nearby Assake, Pulat-bey was captured and executed. In August 1879, Russia attacked the Turkomans at Geok Tepe (8 January 1876).

Andkhui ❙ 1205 ❙ Ghor-Khwarezm War

Muhammad of Ghor in Afghanistan invaded the Khwarezmian Empire in modern Turkmenistan and Uzbekistan, where he suffered a heavy defeat at the hands of Shah Ala ud-Din Mohammed of Khwarezm on the Qaisar River at Andkhui. Victory enabled Ala ud-Din to expand his empire south of the Oxus to absorb the Afghan provinces of Ghor and Ghazni. He later also conquered eastern Persia.

Andriba ❙ 1895 ❙ French Conquest of Madagascar

General Jacques Duchesne advanced into Madagascar through Tsarasoatra in June, and later met the Hova army of General Rainianjalahy in a strong position at Andriba, blocking the route onto the central plateau. The French stormed the ridge under heavy artillery fire and the Hova fled, abandoning their guns and supplies. Duchesne then led an advance party racing for Tananarive (22 August 1895).

Andros ❙ 245 BC ❙ Macedonian-Egyptian Wars

While his troops were successfully invading Seleucid-held Syria and Asia Minor, Ptolemy III of Egypt suffered a sharp setback at sea in the Aegean, where Antigonus II Gonatus of Macedon recovered Corinth, despite Egyptian ships supporting Alexander of Corinth. Antigonus then attacked and defeated the Ptolemaic fleet near Andros, most northerly of the Cyclades, and retook nearby Delos.

Anegawa ❙ 1570 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States

Oda Nobunaga established a puppet Shogun in Kyoto, then marched east against his brother-in-law Asai Nagamasa of Omi, who had allied himself with Asakura Yoshikaga of Echizen. With Tokugawa Ieyasu and Toyotomi Hideyoshi, Nobunaga attacked and routed the rebels at the Anegawa, near Odani outside Yokohama Castle. Four months later he was checked at Ishiyama Honganji (30 July 1570).

Anfao ❙ 1493 ❙ Wars of the Songhai Empire

In his bid to seize the Songhai Empire of West Africa, rebel General Muhammad Askia defeated and deposed the legitimate ruler Sonni Baru at Anfao, outside the capital of Gao, on the upper Niger, near the southern edge of the Sahara Desert. The victory ended the Sonni Dynasty and enabled Askia to impose "true Islam" on the great sub-Saharan Empire (12 April 1493).

Angamos ❙ 1879 ❙ War of the Pacific

After successfully raiding along the Chilean Coast, including the action in May off Iquique, the Peruvian gunship Huascar (Rear Admiral Miguel Grau) was hunted down by Chilean ships at Angamos Point, among southern Chile's offshore islands. A hard-fought action saw Grau killed and Huascar was forced to surrender, later entering service with the Chilean Navy (8 October 1879).

Angaur ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When American forces invaded the Palaus, 500 miles east of the Philippines, there was brutal fighting on Peliliu, but eight miles south on Angaur, General Paul Mueller managed to clear most of the island in three days, although last pockets of resistance held out for weeks. Mueller lost 265 killed, while the 1,400-strong Japanese garrison was virtually wiped out (17 September–21 October 1944).

Angers ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

The weakened and demoralised Royalist rebel army of Henri de la Rochejaquelein retreated back to the Loire, where they attempted to recapture the city of Angers. Lacking sufficient men and siege equipment, the Vendéeans were driven off, with more than 2,000 men lost. They then withdrew across the Loire in the face of an approaching relief army and were crushed at Le Mans (3–6 December 1793).

Anghiari ❙ 1440 ❙ Venetian-Milanese Wars

Facing a counter-offensive by Venice after Maderno in 1839, Milanese commander Niccolo Piccinino led a diversionary attack into Tuscany against the Venetian ally, Florence. Southeast of Florence at Anghiari, near Arezzo, Piccinino was defeated by a Florentine-Papal army under Micheletto Attendolo and Giampaolo Orsini. He was forced to withdraw and peace soon followed (29 June 1440).

Angkor ❙ 1430–1431 ❙ Thai Invasion of Cambodia

On an aggressive campaign of expansion, King Boromoraja II of Ayutthaya (north of modern Bangkok) led an invasion of the Khmer Kingdom (broadly modern Cambodia), where he besieged the capital at Angkor. The city was captured after seven months and, when the Thai were eventually driven out, Angkor was so badly damaged that the Khmer capital was moved to Phnom Penh.

Angolpo ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

Two days after a victory off southern Korea at Hansan Island, Korean Admiral Yi Sun-shin attacked 42 Japanese ships under Kuki Yoshitaka and Kato Yoshiaki off Angolpo, just west of Pusan. A brilliant action saw this second fleet also destroyed. Two months later, Yi was checked attacking Pusan itself, but his victories helped force Japan's army to abandon plans to invade China (16 August 1592).

Angora ❙ 1402 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

In his last great victory after capturing Baghdad, Tamerlane invaded Anatolia and defeated a large Ottoman Turkish army at Angora (modern Ankara). Sultan Bayazid was taken prisoner and died a few months later in captivity. Tamerlane returned to Samarkand after capturing Smyrna and receiving tribute from the Mamluk Sultan of Egypt and Syria and the Byzantine Emperor (20 July 1402).

Angostura, Paraguay ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Paraguayan President Francisco Solano López withdrew north after the fall of Humaitá in July and ordered Colonel William Thompson, a British officer in his service, to fortify and hold Angostura, on the Paraguay, just south of Asunción. Thompson defended courageously, but after the defeat further east at Ita Ybate, he surrendered and Asunción fell a few days later (28–30 December 1868).

Angostura, Venezuela ❙ 1817 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Campaigning on the Orinoco in eastern Venezuela, Revolutionary General Manuel Piar assaulted then besieged the key city of Angostura (later Ciudad Bolívar). A Royalist relief force was heavily defeated at San Felix (11 April) and, after Piar was joined by Patriot leader Simón Bolívar, the starving Spanish garrison evacuated and fled west towards Calabozo (January–17 July 1817).

Angostura Pass ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

See Buenavista, Mexico

Anholt ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Two years after British Captain Aiskew Hollis occupied the strategic island of Anholt, in the Kattegat between Denmark and Sweden (18 May 1809), Governor James Maurice and Captain Robert Torrens faced a courageous Danish landing supported by 12 gunboats. More than 500 Danes surrendered after sharp fighting, with five boats captured and one sunk (27 March 1811).

Anhui Incident ❙ 1941 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Relations between Nationalist and Communist Chinese were already strained when Chiang Kai-shek ordered Red commander Ye Ting to withdraw north of the Yangzi. Ye Ting was reluctantly complying when Nationalist Gu Zhutong attacked his camp at Maolin, in Anhui, west of Hangzhou. Ye Ting was captured and many of his men died, damaging the anti-Japanese alliance (1–7 January 1941).

Anjar ❙ 1625 ❙ Turkish-Druse War

With Ottoman support, Druse Chieftain Fakhr-al-Din returned from exile to Lebanon and united Druse and Maronite forces to defeat local tribes and Hafiz Ahmed Pasha, Beylerbey of Damascus, in a decisive action at Anjar, in the Bekaa Valley south of Zahlah. He seized much of Syria, Lebanon and Palestine but was finally defeated by Damascus and sent to Constantinople for execution.

Anjou ❙ 1421 ❙ Hundred Years War

See Baugé

Ankara ❙ 235 BC ❙ War of the Brothers

See Ancyra

Ankara ❙ 1402 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

See Angora

Anking ❙ 1853 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Anqing

Anking ❙ 1860–1861 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Anqing

Ankol ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Angolpo

An Loc ❙ 1972 ❙ Vietnam War

During the Eastertide Offensive, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces in the south crossed from Cambodia and overran Loc Ninh before driving on An Loc, just 65 miles north of Saigon. They seized part of An Loc, but after heavy attack by American bombers and desperate defence by South Vietnamese reinforcements, the invaders were finally forced to withdraw (13 April–11 July 1972).

Annagudi ❙ 1782 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

See Kumbakonam

Annam ❙ 1285 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Siming

Annan ❙ 1332 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Four months after seizing Scotland's throne with victory at Dupplin, English-backed Edward Baliol faced united opposition under Sir Archibald Douglas (Regent for young David II), Robert the Steward (later Robert II) and John Randolph Earl of Moray. Surprised at Annan, Dumfriesshire, Baliol had to flee half-dressed. He regrouped six months later to besiege Berwick (16 December 1332).

Annapolis Royal ❙ 1710 ❙ Queen Anne's War

See Port Royal, Nova Scotia

Annapolis Royal ❙ 1744 ❙ King George's War

Captain Joseph Dupont Duvivier led a French attempt to retake Acadia (modern Nova Scotia)—lost in the War of the Spanish Succession—where he took Canso, then besieged the port of Annapolis Royal, held by a small British garrison under Major Paul Mascarene. Denied promised support from Louisbourg, Duvivier had to withdraw. The next year Louisbourg itself fell (May–June 1744).

Anqing ❙ 1853 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Taiping commander Shi Dakai advanced down the Yangzi through Wuxue and quickly took Jiujiang, then attacked Anqing, bravely defended by Governor Jiang Wenqing when Imperial Commissioner Lu Jianying fled. The city fell by storm after Jiang was killed in a doomed sortie and the rebels captured massive supplies before continuing northeast to Nanjing (24 February 1853).

Anqing ❙ 1860–1861 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

On a massive offensive in Anhui Province, the great Imperial commander Zeng Guofan attempted to recover Anqing, where he eventually faced Li Xiucheng, driven back from Shanghai. After a complex campaign, with heavy losses on both sides, the Taiping garrison was inexplicably permitted to withdraw and the civilian population was massacred (June 1860–4 September 1861).

Anshan ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

See Shaho

Ansi-song ❙ 645 ❙ Sino-Korean Wars

A renewed Chinese advance on the North Korean kingdom of Koguryo after disaster at Salsu saw Tang Emperor Taizong attack the stronghold of Ansi-song, in modern Liaodong, China. A Korean counter-offensive was heavily repulsed, but Ansi held out and, after terrible Tang losses, Taizong had to withdraw. Koguryo fell 23 years later with the loss of Pyongyang (18 July–13 October 645).

Anson's Bay ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Bogue Forts

Antelope Hills ❙ 1858 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

Crossing the Red River into Indian Territory, 100 Texas Rangers led by John "Rip" Ford and 100 Indian allies attacked 300 Comanche under Iron Jacket near Antelope Hills, on the Canadian River, in the west of modern Oklahoma. Iron Jacket was shot down, and in the battle which followed, 76 Comanche were killed, with 18 women and children and 300 horses captured (12 May 1858).

Antietam ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate commander Robert E. Lee crossed the Potomac into Maryland and was driven off South Mountain. Two days later, he met General George B. McClellan's Union army on Antietam Creek near Sharpsburg, where both sides suffered about 12,000 casualties. Lee withdrew into Virginia after one of the war's bloodiest actions, and McClellan claimed strategic victory (16–18 September 1862).

Antioch, Anatolia ❙ 1211 ❙ 1st Latin-Byzantine Imperial War

With the Byzantine Theodore Lascaris established in Nicaea, the Latin Crusader rulers in Constantinople sent troops to assist former Emperor Alexius III and the Seljuq Sultan Kaykhusraw in southwest Anatolia. The Sultan was killed in a decisive battle near Antioch (modern Yalvac), and Alexius died in captivity. However, Theodore was soon defeated on the Rhyndacus and made peace.

Antioch, Syria ❙ 244 BC ❙ 3rd Syrian War

Ptolemy III Euergetes of Egypt invaded Syria in 245 BC to avenge the murder in a dynastic intrigue of his sister Berenice (widow of the Seleucid King Antiochus II) and, on the Orontes at Antioch (Antakya in modern southern Turkey), he routed Seleucid King Seleucus II "Callinicus." Victory gave Ptolemy control of the Levant and he then marched as far as Babylon, which he briefly occupied.

Antioch, Syria ❙ 218 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

See Immae

Antioch, Syria ❙ 271 ❙ Roman-Palmyrean War

See Immae

Antioch, Syria ❙ 540 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

In breach of the "Endless" Peace signed with Justinian in 533, Chosroes I campaigned up the Euphrates, where he captured Sura and Beroea, and besieged Antioch. When the city refused to surrender, it was taken by storm, then sacked and burned. Antioch's population and much of its movable wealth was relocated to build a new city near Ctesiphon. Chosroes returned home via Dara (June 540).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 611 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Having already conquered much of Syria and Mesopotamia, the Sassanid King Chosroes II used a period of Byzantine political turmoil to renew his efforts to expand the Persian Empire westward, capturing the key Byzantine city of Antioch, in Syria. While Emperor Heraclius failed to retake Antioch in 622, it was evacuated by the Persians in 628, following the overthrow of Chosroes (May 611).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 969 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Emperor Nicephorus II Phocas drove the Arabs out of central Asia Minor by 965 at Adana and Tarsus, then invaded Syria, where the fortress city of Antioch fell to General Michael Burtzes after more than three centuries of Arab rule. Aleppo was then also captured by the Byzantines, forcing Caliph al-Muti to sue for peace, although Nicephorus was assassinated before Aleppo fell (28 October 969).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 1085 ❙ Byzantine-Turkish Wars

In the years following Christian disaster at Manzikert in 1071, Turkish Sultan Malik Shah seized Byzantine Anatolia, which was lost to his rival, Sulaiman ibn Kutalmish, who became Seljuk ruler of Rum. During a large-scale offensive, Sulaiman attacked and seized Antioch, the last Byzantine fortress in the east. A year later he was killed at Aleppo by Malik Shah's brother Tutush (June 1085).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

During the long siege of Antioch, the Emir Yaghi-Siyan waited until many of the Crusaders departed on a foraging expedition and sortied against the remaining siege army under Raymond of Toulouse. The Turks inflicted heavy casualties in a brilliant night foray, before being driven back into the city. The Christian forage party was attacked two days later at Albara (29 December 1097).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 1097–1098 ❙ 1st Crusade

When Crusader forces reached Syria they besieged the fortified city of Antioch, defended by Turkish Emir Yaghi-Siyan. Led by Bohemund of Taranto, they repulsed costly sorties but lacked heavy siege equipment until reinforcements arrived by sea. The city fell by treachery just as a massive relief army appeared. Yaghi-Siyan was killed in the final bloody assault (21 October 1097–3 June 1098).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 1119 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Artuqid Turkish ruler Ilghazi of Mardin took a huge army against the Crusader Principality of Antioch, and Roger of Antioch marched out to meet the invaders at nearby Balat. On the so-called Field of Blood, Roger was defeated and killed. However, rather than taking the opportunity to seize Antioch itself, Ilghazi returned to Aleppo with his prisoners and reputedly tortured them to death (28 June 1119).

Antioch, Syria ❙ 1268 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

As the Crusader states came to an end, the Mamluk Sultan Baibars exerted inexorable pressure against the remaining Christian outposts. Raising a massive army, he captured the fortress of Antioch by storm, then massacred the garrison and demolished its defences. This disaster left only Acre and Tripoli as Crusader cities and led directly to the Eighth Crusade (18 May 1268).

Antioch-in-Pisidia ❙ 1211 ❙ 1st Latin-Byzantine Imperial War

See Antioch, Anatolia

Antium ❙ 1378 ❙ War of Chioggia

In the renewed trade war between Genoa and Venice, a Genoese squadron found itself engaged by a much larger Venetian force south of Rome off Antium (modern Anzio). Venetian Admiral Vittoria Pisani sank six Genoese galleys and captured their commander Luigi Fieschi in a major victory. Genoa never again rivalled Venice (30 May 1378).

Antoine ❙ 1652 ❙ War of the 2nd Fronde

See St Antoine

Antrain ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

See Dol-de-Bretagne

Antrim ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

At the start of the rebellion in Kildare, about 6,000 rebels under wealthy cotton manufacturer Henry Joy McCracken assembled at Donegore Hill and marched on Antrim, held by Clotworthy Skeffington Earl of Massareene. A premature charge by dragoons allowed rebels into the town, but they were then smashed by reinforcements from Belfast and driven off with heavy losses (7 June 1798).

Antwerp ❙ 1576 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

During the bloody campaign to re-establish Spanish supremacy in the Netherlands, troops under Sancho d'Avila defeated Walloon defenders and captured Antwerp, in modern Belgium. Perhaps 8,000 civilians were massacred over three days in the notorious sack which followed, subsequently known as "The Spanish Terror" (4 November 1576).

Antwerp ❙ 1584–1585 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

In the outstanding siege of the Spanish Netherlands offensive, Viceroy Alexander Farnese, later Duke of Parma, attacked Antwerp, and engineer Sebastian Baroccio constructed a fortified bridge to block the Scheldt and cut off the Dutch fleet. The bridge was rebuilt when partially destroyed by an explosive-filled fireship (5 April 1585) and Antwerp finally surrendered (June 1584–17 August 1585).

Antwerp ❙ 1830 ❙ Belgian War of Independence

Following a Belgian Declaration of Independence from Dutch rule in early October 1830, Dutch troops under General David Hendryk Chassé invaded Belgium and bombarded Antwerp. The city resisted, but Chassé seized the Citadel of Antwerp and held it for two years before it was eventually taken by storm (27 October 1830).

Antwerp ❙ 1832 ❙ Belgian War of Independence

After international recognition of Belgian independence from Dutch rule in 1830, a Dutch invasion of Belgium was repulsed by the French troops under Marshal Maurice-Étienne Gérard. However, Dutch General David Chassé held out in the Citadel of Antwerp for over two years, surrendering only after two-month assault by Gérard with British naval support (23 December 1832).

Antwerp ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

King Albert and 150,000 Belgians fell back before the German onslaught through Liège and Brussels, withdrawing to the port of Antwerp. Under attack by General Hans von Beseler with massive siege guns, Belgian General Victor Deguise eventually had to surrender, but Albert and most of his army escaped to support the Allies at Ypres and the Yser (28 September–10 October 1914).

Antwerp ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As Allied forces broke out from Normandy, British commander Sir Bernard Montgomery seized Amiens (31 August), then raced for Antwerp. While the Belgian river port was surprised and taken undamaged, Montgomery's neglect of opposing forces downstream let a German army escape through Breskens and delayed capture of the vital Scheldt Estuary (3 September 1944).

Anual ❙ 1921 ❙ Spanish-Rif War

One of Spain's most famous military disasters occurred when General Manuel Fernández Silvestre in Morocco allowed his army of 20,000 to be surrounded at Anual, southwest of Melilla, by Rif rebel Abd el Krim. A disgraceful panic saw up to 12,000 Spanish troops killed, with thousands more captured, and Silvestre later committed suicide. Spain fought back in 1923 at Tizzi Azza (21 July 1921).

Anzac ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

Opening the Gallipoli campaign, British forces landed at Helles, while further north, General William Birdwood's Australian and New Zealand Army Corps landed near Gaba Tepe, on a beach which became Anzac Cove. Later reinforced by British troops, the Anzacs suffered heavy losses in offensives such as Lone Pine and Chunuk Bair, and were evacuated 18–20 December (25 April 1915).

Anzio ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

The Anglo-American landing on the Italian coast at Anzio, south of Rome, was intended to outflank the German Gustav Line, but undue caution by General John P. Lucas permitted costly counter-attacks by General Eberhard von Mackensen. The beachhead became besieged and suffered unnecessarily heavy casualties before the final breakout towards Rome (22 January–24 May 1944).

Aong ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Henry Havelock's British and Sikh troops advanced northeast from Allahabad to recapture Cawnpore and won at Fatehpur, then met a larger rebel force entrenched at the village of Aong. The Sepoys suffered a decisive defeat, abandoning substantial stores, and were beaten again the same day at Pandu Nadi. Havelock defeated Nana Sahib next day at Cawnpore (15 July 1857).

Aornos ❙ 327 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

Having recently secured the Sogdian Rock, Alexander the Great's advance into India was blocked by the powerful fortress of Aornos (Pir-Sar) on a natural ridge near the Buner River, west of the upper Indus, in modern Pakistan. Seizing a nearby hill to threaten the use of heavy siege weapons against the stronghold, Alexander forced the defenders to retreat, when many were captured and killed.

Aous ❙ 198 BC ❙ 2nd Macedonian War

Rome declared war on King Philip V of Macedon and sent legions under Titus Quintius Flaminius to support her allies in northwestern Greece. Near Antigoneia, on the Aous River (Vijose in modern Albania), Flaminius attacked Philip in a strongly defended position and drove him from the field. Flaminius then advanced into Thessaly for an even greater victory a year later at Cynoscephalae.

Aozou ❙ 1987 ❙ Libyan-Chad War

On the offensive to recover northern Chad, forces loyal to President Hissen Habré advanced into the mineral-rich Aozou Strip, occupied by Libya since 1973. Aozou town was taken with over 600 Libyans killed, then lost in the face of massive Libyan air-strikes. Libya abandoned Aozou after defeat at Maaten-as-Sarra. In 1994 the disputed border area was awarded to Chad (8–27 August 1987).

Apache Pass ❙ 1862 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

In the one pitched battle of the war, Chiricahua Apache led by Mangas Coloradas defended Apache Pass, east of Tucson, Arizona, against a large force of Californian volunteers raised by General James Carleton. Mangas was wounded and decisively defeated by howitzer fire and was later captured. His son-in-law, Cochise, continued the war and in 1869 fought at Chiricahua Pass (15 July 1862).

Apacheta ❙ 1814 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

Leading a rising in Cuzco, the Indian Chief Mateo Pumacahua and Vicente Angulo marched towards Arequipa and were intercepted to the northeast at Apacheta by Spanish Royalists. Brigadier Francisco Picoaga y Arbiza and Intendente José Moscoso were defeated and captured. Pumacahua held Arequipa until after the defeat at Chacaltaya, and was later crushed at Umachiri (9 November 1814).

Apadna ❙ 503 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Emperor Anastasius determined to recover Mesopotamia from Shah Kawad of Sassanid Persia and sent an army to besiege Amida (modern Diyabakir in eastern Turkey). The Byzantine army was driven off and, at the nearby fortress of Apadna, General Patricius and the Emperor's nephew Hypatius were utterly defeated by a large Persian army. Kawad then moved against Edessa (August 503).

Apaneca ❙ 1876 ❙ Central American National Wars

Two years after securing a friendly government in Honduras at Comayagua, President Justo Ruffino Barrios of Guatemala turned and invaded former ally El Salvador. Outside Apaneca, near Ahuachapán, he routed Salvadoran General Francisco Menéndez. Further east, another Guatemalan column won at Pasequina, and Barrios appointed his friend Rafael Zaldivar as President (15 April 1876).

Ap Bac ❙ 1963 ❙ Vietnam War

South Vietnamese Colonel Biu Dinh Dam was determined to bring the Viet Cong to battle and, with US advisor Colonel John Paul Vann, he attacked near Ap Bac, in the Mekong Delta southwest of Saigon. Despite huge numerical superiority, the incompetent Colonel Dam was routed, with over 60 killed. The Viet Cong then slipped away, allowing the Allies to naively claim victory (1–2 January 1963).

Ap Bia ❙ 1969 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dong Ap Bia

Ap Cha Do ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dau Tieng

Ap Chinh An ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

With North Vietnamese regulars threatening a key highway north of Hue, American and South Vietnamese marines landed north and south of their opponents (Operation Jay). Counterattacking near the village of Ap Chinh An, the Communists inflicted costly losses, but they were finally defeated with the aid of naval guns and aerial attack and withdrew, with about 80 killed (25 June–2 July 1966).

Apeleg ❙ 1883 ❙ War of the Desert

Renewing the campaign in the deserts of Patagonia, Argentine General Conrado Villegas took a large force against rebellious Mapuche or Araucanos Indians. Decisive action near the Chilean border at Apeleg saw Colonel Nicolás Palacios defeat over 1,000 Indians, who were then crushed and dispersed. Chubut Province was secured and handed over for white settlement (22 February 1883).

Apennines ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

While British forces in northeast Italy attacked at Rimini, American General Mark Clark's Fifth Army attacked General Joachim Lemelsen at the Gothic Line in the Apennines. The Il Giogio and Funta Passes were taken, but the Americans lost heavily taking Monte Battaglia (27 September–1 October), and the offensive stalled south of Bologna (10 September–13 October 1944).

Aphek ❙ 1050 BC ❙ Philistine-Israel Wars

See Eben-ezer

Apollonia ❙ 220 BC ❙ Syrian Civil War

Governor Molon of Media rose against Syrian Emperor Antiochus III, launching a powerful offensive in Mesopotamia, seizing Seleucia itself. Personally leading a large army across the Tigris, Antiochus brought Molon to battle at Apollonia and crushed him. Molon and his followers were killed and the victory secured Syrian authority, allowing Antiochus to turn against the Parthians.

Apple River Fort ❙ 1832 ❙ Black Hawk Indian War

See Kellogg's Grove

Appomattox Court House ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Withdrawing west from Petersburg, Virginia, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee was surrounded at Appomattox Court House by General Ulysses S. Grant. After a failed breakout attempt by Generals John B. Gordon and Fitzhugh Lee, and with his supply train destroyed the previous day at Appomattox Station, Lee surrendered his army and the war was virtually over (8–9 April 1865).

Appomattox Station ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As defeated Confederates withdrew west from Petersburg, Virginia, Union commander Philip Sheridan sent General George A. Custer to seize a Confederate supply train and 25 guns at Appomattox Station. Confederate troops under General Lindsay Walker were driven off and Lee surrendered the following day, three miles northeast at Appomattox Court House (8 April 1865).

Aprus ❙ 1305 ❙ Wars of the Catalan Company

Byzantine Emperor Michael IX used Catalan troops to assist against the Turks in Asia Minor, then found himself at war with his former mercenaries. At Aprus, in the ancient province of Caenice near the Black Sea, the Imperial army was heavily defeated. The Catalans went on to ravage much of Thrace before they invaded Crusader-held Greece and won at Cephisus in 1311 to seize control of Athens.

Aptaat-Kalessi ❙ 251 ❙ 1st Gothic War

See Abrittus

Apulia ❙ 1155 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Sicilian War

When Byzantine Emperor Manuel I invaded southern Italy with Papal support against William I—the Bad—of Sicily, his cousin Michael Palaeologus defeated William in the southern Adriatic Sea off Apulia. While the naval victory permitted the Byzantines to gain a foothold on the Italian mainland, they were heavily defeated on land the following year at Brindisi and had to withdraw.

Aqaba ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Having secured the Red Sea port of Wejh, Arab leader Prince Feisal (supported by British Major T. E. Lawrence) marched north to attack the small port of Aqaba. In a much-exaggerated action, the Arabs attacked from the landward side and routed the small Turkish garrison, providing a base for improved Arab support to the British in Egypt and Palestine (6 July 1917).

Aqraba ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

See Akraba

Aquae Saravenae ❙ 979 ❙ Byzantine Military Rebellions

In support of Emperor Basil II against the usurper Bardas Sclerus, the Byzantine warrior Bardas Phocas was defeated at Pancalia. The next year, heavily reinforced by Armenians from Tayk, he met and decisively defeated the usurper at Aquae Saravenae, near the Halys, outside modern Yozgat, Turkey. Phocas himself later usurped the throne and was beaten in 989 at Abydos (24 March 979).

Aquae Sextiae ❙ 102 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

Three years after Roman disaster in Gaul at Arausio, the Senate sent Consul Gaius Marius against Germanic invaders, and near Aquae Sextiae (modern Aix-en-Provence), his Legions confronted the allied Teutones and Cimbri. Reversing previous victory, the Teutones were totally destroyed and King Teutobodus was captured. Marius soon returned to Italy to destroy the Cimbri at Vercellae.

Aqua Portora ❙ 742 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

During civil war between rival Muslim forces in Spain, Baldj ibn Bishr (invited from Syria to combat Berber revolt) executed Governor Abd-al-Malik ibn Qatan of al-Andalus, then defeated his sons Ummaya and Katan, at Aqua Portora, just north of Cordova. Though Baldj was killed, the victory secured government for the so-called Syrian faction under Thalaba ibn Salama (6 August 742).

Aquia Creek ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In support of the Union blockade of Chesapeake Bay following action at Sewell's Point, Union commander James H. Ward led three gunboats against the Confederate battery at Aquia Creek, on the Potomac near Stafford, held by Colonel Daniel Ruggles. While the Union bombardment produced little result, it was followed ten days later by a land attack at Big Bethel (31 May–1 June 1861).

Aquidaban ❙ 1870 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

See Cerro Corá

Aquila ❙ 1424 ❙ Condottieri Wars

The Condottiere Muzio Attendolo Sforza campaigned on behalf of Naples against Aragon, attacking his rival Braccio da Montone at Aquila, in Abruzzi. After Sforza was drowned crossing the Pescara River (4 January), his son Francesco besieged Aquila, where Montone was defeated and killed. Twenty years later, Francesco Sforza seized Milan and established a dynasty (2 June 1424).

Aquileia ❙ 166 ❙ German Invasion of Italy

Germanic tribes crossing the Alps into northeast Italy besieged the city of Aquileia, at the head of the Adriatic. Marching south into Italy they were repulsed by Roman Emperor Marcus Aurelius, who drove them back to Aquileia, where he defeated the invaders and raised the siege. However, Rome's weak military position meant the survivors were allowed to settle within the empire.

Aquileia ❙ 240 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

Following the murder of Roman Emperor Severus Alexander in 235, the Thracian Gaius Julius Maximinus was proclaimed Emperor by his soldiers. With support from the Rhine armies he marched on Rome, but at Aquileia, at the head of the Adriatic, the claimant's army was defeated by the Senate with heavy losses. His troops then mutinied and murdered Maximinus and his son.

Aquileia ❙ 340 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

Amid rivalry for Imperial control following the death of Constantine the Great, Constantine II was slain in battle at Aquileia, northwest of Trieste, at the head of the Adriatic, by his brother and co-Emperor Constans, who became Emperor in the West as Constans I. Following the death of Constans in 350, the third brother, Constantius II, became the sole Emperor.

Aquileia ❙ 388 ❙ Later Roman Military Civil Wars

Theodosius, Emperor in the East, marched against Magnus Clemens Maximus, who had advanced from Britain to usurp control in Italy, routing his forces in the Balkans at Siscia and Poetovio. He then drove Maximus into a siege at Aquileia, near the Adriatic, where his supporters murdered him in order to surrender. Theodosius restored Valentinian II as Emperor in the West (28 July 388).

Aquileia ❙ 394 ❙ Later Roman Military Civil Wars

See Frigidus

Aquileia ❙ 452 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire

The year following his defeat at Chalons by a joint Roman-Goth army, Attila the Hun invaded Italy. Attacking Aquileia, northwest of modern Trieste, he overcame the garrison before sacking and burning the city. The residents escaped to islands off the coast where they eventually founded the city of Venice. Attila then secured much of upper Italy, but died the following year.

Aquilonia ❙ 293 BC ❙ 3rd Samnite War

Despite a costly defeat at Sentinum in 295 BC and their allies suing for peace, the Samnites of the central Apennines fought on against Rome until they met Consuls Lucius Papirius and Spurius Carvilius Maximus at Aquilonia, an uncertain site near Bovianum. The Romans secured a decisive victory, storming nearby Cominium, and the Samnites eventually acknowledged the authority of Rome.

Arabah, Wadi al- ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

See Wadi al-Arabah

Arachova ❙ 1826 ❙ Greek War of Independence

Georgios Karaiskakis failed at Chaidari to relieve the besieged Acropolis and withdrew to the mountains to attack Ottoman supply lines. At a pass near Arachova, west of Levadia, he cut off 2,000 Turks under Mustapaha Bey, and bloody hand-to-hand fighting in a snowstorm saw only 300 Turks escape alive. Karaiskakis soon attacked again to the southwest at Distomo (5 December 1826).

Aragua de Barcelona ❙ 1814 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Revolutionary leader Simón Bolívar followed his defeat at La Puerta in June by retreating to Aragua on the northern Venezuelan coast, where he and José Bermudez led a final stand against Spanish General Tomás Morales. With most of his remaining force destroyed in battle, Bolívar fled into exile with a massive treasure in silver, and the revolution temporarily collapsed (18 August 1814).

Arakan ❙ 1942–1943 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

The first British counter-attack in Burma saw General Wilfred Lloyd advance into the Arakan, where he forced the Japanese to withdraw from the outpost line Maungdaw-Buthidaung. New commander Takashi Koga then stopped the advance at Donbaik-Rathedaung, and hooked behind the outnumbered British to cripple them and drive them back into India (23 October 1942–12 May 1943).

Arakan ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

Despite previous British losses in the Arakan, General Alexander Christison advanced down the Mayu Peninsula against General Tadishi Hanaya. Very heavy fighting saw General Harold Briggs seize Maungdaw (9 January) before Hanaya was reinforced and counter-attacked at Admin Box. Hanaya was finally driven off and British forces went north to Imphal (December 1943–April 1944).

Arakan ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

On a final offensive in southwestern Burma, General Alexander Christison launched a fresh advance down the Arakan coast towards strategic Akyab Island. Supported by amphibious landings on the mainland and on nearby Ramree and Chedube Islands, Christison slowly forced General Shozo Sakurai to withdraw. Rangoon itself then fell without resistance (12 December 1944–April 1945).

Araquil ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Irurzun

Arar ❙ 58 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Defending Gaul against a massive Helvetian migration from the area approximating modern Switzerland, Julius Caesar surprised the invaders in a night attack as they attempted to cross the Arar (modern Saone) River. Despite heavy casualties, the Helvetians recovered for a major confrontation at Bibracte a month later, where they were decisively defeated (June 58 BC).

Aras ❙ 1775 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

See Adas (2nd)

Aratoca ❙ 1841 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

With rebel forces under Colonel Manuel Gonzáles repulsed outside Bogotá at Culebrera, General Tomás Cipriano de Mosquera for the government marched north and, supported by Colonel Joaquín Barriga, met the rebels at Aratoca, south of Floridablanca. A major action saw González decisively defeated and Mosquera soon won again at Tescua (9 January 1841).

Araure ❙ 1813 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Patriot leader Simón Bolívar recovered from defeat near Barquisimeto in western Venezuela to check a Royalist army at Vigirima, then he met Juan Domingo Monteverde's forces under Colonels José Ceballos and José Yáñez southeast of Cartagena at Araure. Bolívar secured a brilliant and decisive victory, but had to flee after a defeat six months later at La Puerta (5 December 1813).

Arausio ❙ 105 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

After reaching Gaul from central Europe, the Cimbri and Teutone tribes won in Provence and at Aginnum (107 BC), before King Boiorix destroyed Consul Mallius Maximus on the Rhone north of Avignon at Arausio (modern Orange). Followed by massive non-combatant deaths, it was one of Rome's worst defeats. Within three years, Rome was avenged in Gaul at Aquae Sextiae and in Italy at Vercellae.

Arawe ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As part of the campaign to isolate Rabaul, Americans under General Julian Cunningham landed around the Arawe Peninsula on the southwest coast of New Britain in New Guinea as a diversion from the subsequent main assault at Cape Gloucester. After struggling for the local airfield against Major Shinjiro Komori, further troops arrived to help secure the area (15 December 1943–16 January 1944).

Araxes ❙ 589 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Persian General Bahram Chobin beat the Turks on behalf of the Sassanid King Hormizd IV at Hyrcanian Rock, and a year later turned against the Romans in Lazica. At the Araxes (modern Aras) River, on the northern border of modern Iran, he suffered a decisive defeat at the hands of Byzantine General Romanus. In 590

Bahram overthrew Hormizd, but was then defeated at Ganzak.

Arbadil ❙ 1618 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

See Erivan

Arbedo ❙ 1422 ❙ Swiss-Milanese Wars

Duke Filippo Maria Visconti of Milan intervened in Swiss politics and attempted to seize the city of Bellinzona near Lake Maggiore. At nearby Arbedo, Swiss halberdiers and pikemen were defeated by Milanese cavalry under the soldier of fortune Francesco Bussone (known as the Count Carmagnola), and Bellinzona was given up by treaty (30 June 1422).

Arbela ❙ 331 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

See Gaugamela

Arbroath ❙ 1446 ❙ Scottish Clan Wars

In a clan dispute over the post of Ballie of Arbroath, Alexander Lindsay, Master of Crawford, led an army against Alexander Ogilvie of Inverquharity. When the two forces met outside Arbroath, northeast of Dundee, Lindsay's father, David Earl of Crawford, was killed attempting to prevent fighting. The Ogilvies were routed in the ensuing battle, triggering a prolonged feud (13 June 1446).

Arcadiopolis ❙ 970 ❙ Byzantine-Russian Wars

A Russian army under Prince Sviatoslav of Kiev was marching towards Constantinople when they were met and heavily defeated west of the capital near Arcadiopolis (modern Lüleburgaz) by Byzantine General Bardas Sclerus. The invaders were driven out of Thrace and, after a further defeat on the Danube at Dorostalon in 971, Sviatoslav was killed while returning home to Kiev.

Arcadiopolis ❙ 1194 ❙ Bulgarian Imperial Wars

With Byzantine Emperor Isaac II defeated in 1190 at Berroea, Tsar Ivan Asen of Bulgaria expanded south into the Balkans and was met by Isaac at Arcadiopolis (modern Lüleburgaz). The Bulgarians secured a decisive victory and, when Isaac tried to raise yet another army, he was overthrown and blinded by his brother, Alexius III, who eventually persuaded the Bulgarians to make peace.

Arcesh ❙ 625 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Following success in Armenia at Dwin, Byzantine Emperor Heraclius faced three separate Persian armies in the Armenian Highlands where he defeated two then attacked the main Persian camp at Arcesh, north of Lake Van. Persian General Shahbaraz escaped with his life, though most of his army was destroyed. King Chrosroes II was finally overthrown after Heraclius won at Nineveh (February 625).

Arcis-sur-Aube ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

In the last substantial battle he was personally involved in before abdication, Napoleon Bonaparte marched south from Rheims to challenge a much larger Austrian force under Prince Karl Philipp Schwarzenberg advancing towards Paris. Although the battle near Troyes at Arcis-sur-Aube was tactically a victory for Bonaparte, he was forced to withdraw (20–21 March 1814).

Arcola ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Facing another Austrian attempt to relieve the French siege of Mantua, Napoleon Bonaparte was checked at Caldiero but a few days later met Baron Josef Alvinzi in a marshy area near the Alpone and Adige Rivers, southeast of Verona. While Bonaparte suffered heavy losses in a bloody three-day battle around the village of Arcola, he forced the Austrians to retreat (15–17 November 1796).

Arcos de Valdevez ❙ 1140 ❙ Portuguese-Castilian Wars

A year after defeating the Muslims at Ourique, Afonso Henriques of Portugal pursued his late mother's claim to Galicia and provoked an invasion by Alfonso VII of Castile. It was agreed to settle the matter by tournament, and at Arcos de Valdevez, north of Braga, the Portuguese knights prevailed. The Castilian King conceded Galician land and recognised his cousin as King Afonso I of Portugal.

Arcot ❙ 1751 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

To distract the French siege of Trichinopoly, Englishman Robert Clive and a small force seized Arcot in eastern Madras, capital of the French-appointed Nawab Chanda Sahib. Besieged by a massive Indian force led by the Nawab's son, Raza Sahib, the British-Indian garrison inflicted heavy casualties and Arcot held out until they were finally relieved (11 September–25 November 1751).

Arcot ❙ 1780 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

Soon after the Nawab of Arcot attacked Mysore in southeast India, Haidar Ali of Mysore struck back against the Nawab and his British allies. Having secured a victory at Perambakam (10 September), he besieged Arcot in eastern Madras and took the city by storm. He then went on to besiege Wandewash and Vellore, but was defeated at Porto Novo (31 October 1780).

Ardahan ❙ 1877 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

Russian commander Mikhail Loris-Melikov advanced into the Caucasus shortly after war was declared and attacked the fortress of Ardahan on the River Kura, defended by the incompetetent Hasan Sabri Pasha. Hasan fled after the Russians seized the Guylaberti Heights to the southeast and Ardahan fell with the loss of over 1,000 prisoners (16–17 May 1877).

Ardennes ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Just as German forces launched a counter-attack in Lorraine, further northwest French Generals Pierre Ruffey and Fernand de Langle de Cary attacked in the Ardennes against Duke Albrecht and Prince Wilhelm. Despite local success at Virton, confused fighting in thick fog saw the French badly defeated and they retreated south to stabilise the line at Verdun (21–23 August 1914).

Ardennes ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

While the Allies marched north to face the German advance through Belgium, seven Panzer divisions under General Gerd von Rundstedt invaded France through the supposedly impassable Ardennes Forest. French Generals André Corap and Charles Huntziger were crushed, and the Germans seized the Meuse along a 50-mile front north from Sedan, then raced for the coast (12–15 May 1940).

Ardennes ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Marshal Walther Model led the last great German offensive in the west, striking through the Ardennes towards Antwerp and creating the so-called Bulge. Undermanned American forces were badly surprised, but after losses including Schnee Eifel and St Vith, they held the line at Bastogne. The Allies then regained the initiative and halted the offensive (16 December 1944–25 January 1945).

Ardscull ❙ 1316 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Extending the Scottish War to Ireland, Edward Bruce, brother of Robert the Bruce, invaded against a large but poorly co-ordinated Anglo-Irish force under the Justiciar Edward Butler, John Fitzthomas of Ofally and Arnold le Poer of Kilkenny. At Ardscull, near Athy in Kildare, Edward drove his enemy from the field. In 1318 he was crowned King of Ireland at Dundalk (26 January 1316).

Arequipa ❙ 1857–1858 ❙ Peruvian Civil Wars

Former Dictator Manuel Ignacio de Vivanco returned from exile after defeat at Carmen Alto in 1844 and tried to raise a fresh Conservative revolt against President Ramón Castilla. Driven back to his power base at Arequipa, Vivanco withstood an eight-month siege. After a bloody assault, Castilla eventually took the town by storm, and Vivanco returned to exile (August 1857–5 March 1858).

Argaum ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

Two months after his decisive victory over the Marathas at Assaye in Deccan India, General Arthur Wellesley inflicted a further defeat on Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior and Raja Raghuji Bhonsle of Berar at the village of Argaum, north of Akola. He then pursued the defeated Marathas into the mountains, and weeks later attacked their fortress at Gawilgarh (28 November 1803).

Argentan ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

See Falaise

Argentoratum ❙ 357 ❙ Alemannic Invasion of Roman Gaul

Appointed to lead Roman forces in Gaul, the Caesar Julian, cousin of Emperor Constantius, advanced into the Rhine Valley against the invading German Alemanni under King Chnodomar. Although heavily outnumbered, Julian inflicted heavy losses near Argentoratum (modern Strasbourg) and chased the invaders beyond the Rhine, capturing their King.

Argentoratum ❙ 378 ❙ Alemannic Invasion of Roman Gaul

Resisting renewed tribal invasion across the Rhine, the young Western Roman Emperor, Flavius Gratianus, son of Valentinian, sent his army against the German Alemanni at Argentoratum (modern Strasbourg). A decisive action saw his Generals Nannienus and Mellobaudes the Frank virtually destroy the invaders. The Alemanni ruler Priarius was killed in the fighting.

Arges ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

Romanian commander Alexandru Averescu was driven back on all fronts and concentrated his forces on the Arges, west of Bucharest, against Erich von Falkenhayn advancing from the north and west and August von Mackensen from the south. Despite heroic defence, the Romanians were forced to withdraw northeast through Rimnic Sarat and Bucharest fell two days later (1–4 December 1916).

Argesul ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

See Arges

Arginusae ❙ 406 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

A decisive naval engagement off the coast of Asia Minor near the island of Arginusae saw Peloponnesian triremes led by Spartan Admiral Callicratidas engage the Athenian fleet which was trying to raise the blockade of Conon in Mytilene on Lesbos. Callicratidas was killed and the Peloponnesian fleet was destroyed, but was quickly rebuilt to win a year later at Aegospotami (August 406 BC).

Argoan ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Argaum

Argonne ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Soon after the French offensive in Artois died down, Crown Prince Wilhelm launched his own offensive further south in the Argonne against General Maurice Sarrail. General Bruno von Modra's Corps took some territory but was eventually repulsed and the attack eased after their failure to break the French line. In September the French struck back in Champagne (26 June–4 July 1915).

Argonne ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Meuse-Argonne

Argos ❙ 272 BC ❙ Pyrrhic War

Repulsed in Italy at Beneventum in 275 BC, King Pyrrhus of Epirus invaded the Peloponnese against Antigonus II of Macedonia. Repulsed at Sparta by King Areus, who ambushed and killed his son Ptolemaeus, Pyrrhus marched on Antigonus at Argos. Pyrrhus was killed in heavy street fighting and his army surrendered. Areus soon fell out with Antigonus, who killed him seven years later at Corinth.

Argos ❙ 195 BC ❙ Spartan-Achaean Wars

The Tyrant Nabis led a fresh Spartan offensive against the Achaean League, whose leader

Philopoemen sought aid from Roman General Titus Quinctius Flamininus, victor two years before at Cynoscephalae. Near Argos, the combined Roman-Pergamene-Rhodian force inflicted a heavy defeat on the Spartan Tyrant's son-in-law Pythagorus of Argos. The Allies soon won again at Gytheum.

Argus vs _Pelican_ ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812
See St George's Channel

Arica ❙ 1880 ❙ War of the Pacific
After Chilean forces invaded Peru and secured a decisive victory at Tacna in May, Bolivia effectively withdrew from the war, and the Peruvians fell back on the port of Arica. The fortress at Morro was taken by infantry assault following heavy bombardment by land and sea, and Arica fell. When peace talks failed, Chile resumed the offensive early the next year and advanced on Lima (16–17 June 1880).

Arichit ❙ 860 ❙ Later Indian Dynastic Wars
See Arisil

Arikera ❙ 1791 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War
When Tipu Sultan of Mysore renewed war against the British, Indian Governor-General Earl Cornwallis took personal command and, two months after capturing Bangalore, advanced towards Seringapatam and attacked Tipu's army at night a few miles away at Arikera. Although Cornwallis inflicted heavy losses, the rainy season forced him back to Bangalore (13–14 May 1791).

Arinsol ❙ 1126 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain
King Alfonso I of Aragon established his reputation against Muslim Spain to become known as El Batallador—the fighter. When he had liberated Moorish Saragossa, Alfonso campaigned through Valencia and eastern Andalusia and, at Arinsol south of Lucena, inflicted a major defeat on a Muslim army under Abu Bakr, son of the local Emir Ali (10 March 1126).

Arisil ❙ 860 ❙ Later Indian Dynastic Wars
Amid one of the great dynastic rivalries in medieval India, Crown Prince Nripatunga of the Pallavas took an army against Srimara of Pandya. On the banks of the Arisil (Arichit), a tributary of the Kaveri, Nripatunga secured a bloody and decisive victory. Pallava's ally Sena II of Ceylon later launched an attack on the Pandyan capital Madura, where Srimara was defeated and killed.

Arius ❙ 208 BC ❙ Early Syrian-Parthian War
Re-establishing the powerful Seleucid Empire, King Antiochus III the Great invaded Parthia to confront King Arsaces III. At the Arius (Harirud) River, west of Herat in modern Afghanistan, Antiochus won a crushing victory over a Parthian-Bactrian army. However, he was unable to secure the whole country and made peace with Arsaces, recognising him as King of Parthia.

Arizpe ❙ 1852 ❙ Apache Indian Wars
To avenge the Mexican attack at Janos (5 March 1851), 200 Chiricahua Apache advanced on Arizpe in northwest Mexico and killed a patrol of eight. The garrison of 100 Mexican cavalry then rode out to meet the Indians and were routed with 26 dead and 46 wounded. During this action the Apache leader (whose family were massacred at Janos) won the nom de guerre Geronimo (January 1852).

Arkansas Post ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
With Union forces beaten on the Mississippi at Chickasaw Bluffs in December 1862, General John A. McClernand led a land and naval assault upstream in Arkansas against Confederate Arkansas Post, held by General Thomas J. Churchill. McClernand lost over 1,000 men taking the fort, but it had no strategic value to the assault on Vicksburg, and he was ordered to withdraw (11 January 1863).

Arkinholm ❙ 1455 ❙ Douglas Rebellion
As James II of Scotland moved to crush a rebellion by James Earl of Douglas, the Earl's brothers were defeated at Arkinholm, near Langholm, by Royalists under their kinsman Archibald Earl of Angus. Archibald Earl of Moray was killed, Hugh Earl of Ormonde was captured and executed, and the third brother, John Lord Balvenie, fled to join Earl Douglas in England (May 1455).

Arklow ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

Four days after the disastrous rebel defeat at New Ross, up to 20,000 poorly armed peasants led by Father John Murphy of Boulvogue seized Wexford and marched against Arklow on Ireland's southeast coast. However, they were repulsed with heavy losses by about 1,600 militia under General Francis Needham. Dublin was saved and the rising in the north was effectively over (9 June 1798).

Arkona ❙ 1168 ❙ Danish Wars of Expansion

Waldemar I secured the Danish throne in 1157 at Grathe Heath, then fought an indecisive campaign against the Wends (of modern northeast Germany). Eventually, Bishop Absalon took a large force against their stronghold on Rügen Island, where he seized the key port of Arkona, after which Garz town surrendered. Denmark subsequently held Rügen under treaty with Duke Henry the Lion of Saxony.

Arlaban ❙ 1836 ❙ 1st Carlist War

On a fresh advance in Navarre, Liberal General Baldomero Espartero, supported by the British Legion of General Sir George de Lacy Evans, marched northeast from Vitoria against the Carlists near Arlaban. Heavy fighting secured the village of Mendijur for the Allies, but Carlist General Bruno de Villareal counterattacked and forced Espartero to withdraw to Vitoria (17–18 January 1836).

Arles ❙ 411 ❙ Later Roman Wars of Succession

Having claimed recognition as joint Roman Emperor, usurper Flavius Claudius Constantinus unsuccessfully invaded Italy from Gaul and was driven back to Arles, where he was besieged by the Imperial General Constantius. With his son Constans killed at Vienne and a Frank relief army under Edobic repulsed, Constantinus surrendered and was put to death (September 411).

Arles ❙ 425 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

Theodoric the Visigoth, King of Toulouse, broke his peace with Rome and invaded Gaul to besiege Arles, in modern Provence—known as the "Little Gallic Rome." However, after he was defeated and driven off by the Roman General Flavius Aetius and his Hunnic allies, Theodoric made peace again and turned instead against the Vandals in Spain. He was finally defeated in 437 near Narbonne.

Arles ❙ 435 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

Once more breaking the peace with Rome after his defeat ten years earlier at Arles, Theodoric the Visigoth made a fresh advance on Arles, in Provence. For a second time, he was repulsed by the Roman General Flavius Aetius and his largely Hun army. Two years later, Theodoric was again defeated in an even more decisive battle to end the Visigoth siege of Narbonne.

Arles ❙ 471 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

Alarmed at Visigoth expansion from Aquitaine after victory over the Bretons at Deols in 469, Western Emperor Anthemius sent a fresh army across the Alps against Euric the Visigoth, who was besieging Arles. The Imperial army was crushed in battle nearby and Euric then captured Arles and secured much of southern Gaul. Defeat in Gaul for Anthemius led directly to his overthrow in Rome.

Arles ❙ 508–510 ❙ Visigothic-Frankish Wars

A year after Visigoth leader Alaric died at Vouillé, Clovis, King of the Salian Franks, advanced through Gaul to besiege Arles, west of Marseilles. An Ostrogoth relief force under Tuluin was driven off (24 June 508), and Clovis continued his siege. The Franks were eventually defeated by Ibbas, General of the new Ostrogoth ruler, Theodoric, who secured control of Provence (June 508–510).

Arleux ❙ 1711 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

John Churchill Duke of Marlborough attempted to penetrate the French Ne Plus Ultra lines—protective fortifications and flooded swamps south of Paris—where he first captured the Sensee Valley causeway at Arleux. The town was then lost and regained as Marlborough manoeuvred to deceive Marshal Claude Villars and to capture the important fortress further west at Bouchain (21 June 1711).

Armada, Spanish ❙ 1588 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

See Spanish Armada

Armageddon ❙ 609 BC ❙ Egyptian Conquest of Judah

See Megiddo

Armentières ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

While British forces attacked the Germans in Flanders at La Bassée, just to the north General William Pulteney drove east from Armentières against the Sixth Army of Prince Ruprecht. The British were eventually driven back, but the line stabilised in front of Armentières. Further north, fighting around Messines spread into the actions around Ypres (13 October–2 November 1914).

Arnala ❙ 1780–1781 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

General Thomas Goddard was besieging Bassein, off Bombay, when he sent forces north against the small Maratha island fortress of Arnala. Even after the fall of Bassein, Madhav Rao Belose held out and repulsed a very costly assault. But he had run out of ammunition and was forced to surrender. The other nearby land forts quickly followed suit (November 1780–18 January 1781).

Arnay-le-Duc ❙ 1570 ❙ 3rd French War of Religion

Six months after the Protestant disaster at Moncontour, Huguenot Admiral Gaspard de Coligny led a fresh offensive into south and central France, repulsing a Catholic attack by Marshal Artus de Cosse at Arnay-le-Duc, southwest of Dijon. However, as Coligny advanced towards Paris, Queen Mother Catherine de Medici negotiated a new treaty, and war was again suspended (25 June 1570).

Arnee ❙ 1751 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

See Arni

Arnhem ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Attempting to outflank the Siegfried Line, Sir Bernard Montgomery sent British, Polish and American airborne troops to seize key bridges in Holland on the canals near Eindhoven, on the Waal at Nijmegen and the Rhine at Arnhem. Meeting unexpected resistance at Arnhem, British paratroopers briefly held the bridge, then withdrew with over 7,000 killed or captured (17–24 September 1944).

Arni ❙ 1751 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Following the relief of Arcot in southeast India, British East India Company troops under Robert Clive, with Maratha cavalry in support, pursued the French-Indian force led by Raza Sahib 20 miles further south to Arni. The Indians and their French allies attempted to make a stand but were driven out with over 200 casualites and withdrew towards Pondicherry (3 December 1751).

Arni ❙ 1782 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

A year after inflicting heavy defeats on Haidar Ali of Mysore at Porto Novo, Pollilore and Sholinghur, British troops under Sir Eyre Coote clashed with him again in an inconclusive engagement at Arni in central Madras. Haidar died six months later, though his less able son, Tipu Sultan, fought on until January 1784 at Bednur and Mangalore (7 June 1782).

Arogee ❙ 1868 ❙ British Expedition to Ethiopia

See Arogi

Arogi ❙ 1868 ❙ British Expedition to Ethiopia

Leading a punitive expedition against Emperor Theodore (Tewodros) of Ethiopia, General Sir Robert Napier and an Anglo-Indian army marched inland from the Red Sea and were attacked by the Ethiopian army near the Beshlio at Arogi. Napier inflicted a decisive defeat, with 700 killed and about 1,200 wounded, then stormed the nearby mountain fortress of Magdala (10 April 1868).

Aros ❙ 1886 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Captain Emmet Crawford crossed into Mexico in pursuit of Geronimo and captured the Apache camp on the Aros River, near Nacori, where he was attacked by Mexican Federal troops, allegedly mistaking his scouts for hostiles. Crawford was fatally wounded and the Federals lost four killed. Mexico later claimed the attack was a response to American border infringements (11 January 1886).

Arqa ❙ 1098 ❙ 1st Crusade

Advancing from Antioch towards Jerusalem, Raymond of Toulouse besieged Arqa, north of Tripoli. But even when reinforced by the main army under Godfrey of Bouillon, the Crusaders were unable to capture the town. They abandoned the siege after three months, marching directly against Tripoli, where the Emir sued for peace and opened their route south (14 February–13 May 1098).

Arques ❙ 1589 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

Soon after the assassination of Henry III of France, the Huguenot Henry of Navarre claimed the throne and at Arques, near Dieppe, was challenged by Duke Charles of Mayenne, leader of the Holy League. Ambushing the much larger Catholic army on marshy ground near the Bethune River, Henry achieved a great victory and secured his claim to the throne (21 September 1589).

Arquijas ❙ 1834 ❙ 1st Carlist War

The Spanish Liberal army of General Luis Fernández de Córdova pursued Carlist commander Tomás Zumalacárregui through Navarre and secured a hard-fought victory at Mendaza, northeast of Logroño. Three days later, when Córdova attempted to force the pass at Arquijas, five miles to the northwest, he suffered a costly repulse and fell back towards Los Arcos (15 December 1834).

Arquijas ❙ 1835 ❙ 1st Carlist War

In a renewed attack on Carlist commander Tomás Zumalacárregui, northeast of Logroño in Navarre near Mendaza, Spanish Liberal forces under General Manuel Lorenzo made a second attempt to force the pass at Arquijas. With only half as many men, Zumalacárregui dealt the Liberals a very costly defeat. He soon took the offensive at Villafranca de Oria and Bilbao (5 February 1835).

Arrah ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Besieged by Kunwar Singh, Raja of Jagdispur, a small British force defended a fortified compound at Arrah (modern Ara), west of Patna, belonging to railway engineer Vicars Boyle. When a relief attempt by General George Lloyd was repulsed, Major Vincent Eyre defeated the mutineers at nearby Gujraganj to relieve the town and drove them towards Jagdispur (25 July–3 August 1857).

Arras ❙ 1654 ❙ Franco-Spanish War

While campaigning in northern France at the head of a Spanish army with French support, renegade nobleman Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé attempted to besiege Arras, 100 miles north of Paris, but was attacked at night by a French relief army under Marshal Henri de Turenne. The Spanish troops suffered heavy casualties and Condé was driven off (24–25 August 1654).

Arras ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Days after action at Albert, French commander Joseph Joffre sent General Louis de

Maud'huy on a fresh attempt to outflank the Germans between Arras and Lens. A German counter-attack under Prince Ruprecht retook Lens, and the French withdrew on Arras. The "Race to the Sea" soon ended at the Channel port of Nieuwport and the battle for Flanders began (1–4 October 1914).

Arras ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

British Generals Edmund Allenby and Henry Horne began the Nivelle Offensive by attacking east from Arras against German commander Ludwig von Falkenhausen. While Vimy Ridge was taken, the action cost 150,000 British and 100,000 German casualties before stalling with the capture of Bullecourt (17 May). Further south, the French were defeated on the Aisne (9–14 & 23–25 April 1917).

Arras ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In the second phase of the offensive from Amiens, British commander Sir Douglas Haig opened a new attack in the north from Arras along the Scarpe. With heavy fighting further south around Albert and Bapaume, the offensive secured extensive ground and about 34,000 prisoners in just two weeks, opening the way for the advance on Cambrai (26 August–2 September 1918).

Arras ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Counter-attacking against the German Panzer sweep across France, British tanks and infantry under General Harold Franklyn struck back at General Erwin Rommel at Arras. Briefly surprised, Rommel used 88-mm anti-aircraft guns to repulse the British armour, but the action is claimed to have helped delay the advance of German tanks towards Dunkirk (21–23 May 1940).

Arrazola ❙ 1827 ❙ Central American National Wars

After election as first President of the Central American Confederation, Manuel José Arce began to exercise dictatorial powers and faced an advancing Liberal army from El Salvador under Mariano Prado. President Arce secured a bloody victory at Arrazola, outside Guatemala City, but his subsequent counter-offensive into El Salvador in May was heavily repulsed at Milingo (23 March 1827).

Arretium ❙ 283 BC ❙ Later Roman-Etruscan War

With Senonian Gauls besieging the Etruscan fortress of Arretium (near modern Arezzzo) in central Italy, Rome sent a relief army under Consul Lucius Caecilius Metellus. The Roman force was utterly destroyed, with over 13,000 men killed, including Metellus. The defeat encouraged the Etruscans to abandon their former ally and they joined the Senones against Rome at Lake Vadimo.

Arriverayte ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As the Allies closed in on Bayonne in southwestern France, General Jean Isidore Harispe withdrew north from the Bidouse at Garris, and left General Jean-Baptiste Paris to defend the River Saison at Arriverayte, southeast of Sauveterre. However, General Sir Rowland Hill advanced in time to prevent Paris destroying the bridges, and the French were forced to retreat next day (17 February 1814).

Arroyo de la China ❙ 1814 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Spanish naval commander Jacinto de Romarate was defeated off Buenos Aires near Martín García, then immediately pursued north up the Uruguay River by Argentine Patriot ships under Tomás Notter (the American Thomas Nother). Notter was defeated and killed in action at Arroyo de la China, near Concepción del Uruguay, but his officers effected a courageous withdrawal (28 March 1814).

Arroyo del Sauce ❙ 1844 ❙ Argentine-Uruguayan War

Marching into Uruguay against President Fructuoso Rivera, Argentine General Justo José

Urquiza crossed the Yi, and Colonel Manuel Antonio Urdinarrain attacked Rivera's vanguard under General Anacleto Medina at Arroyo del Sauce. Urquiza's cavalry arrived to secure the victory, and Rivera withdrew towards Tacuarembo. Months later he lost again at India Muerta (24 January 1844).

Arroyo Grande ❙ 1842 ❙ Argentine-Uruguayan War

Argentine Dictator Juan Manuel de Rosas intervened in Uruguay and sent former Uruguayan President Manuel Cerefino Oribe against Fructuoso Rivera, who had forced him out of office. At Arroyo Grande, northwest of Montevideo, supported by Argentine Generals Angel Pacheco and Justo José Urquiza, Oribe defeated Rivera, who withdrew to siege in Montevideo (5–6 December 1842).

Arroyo Molinos ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

While most fighting was taking place in the south and east of Spain, General Sir Rowland Hill surprised a French division under General Jean-Baptiste Girard at Arroyo Molinos, near the Spanish frontier northwest of Merida in Estremadura. In a one-sided diversionary engagement, Girard's massively outnumbered force lost over 1,000 casualties (28 October 1811).

Arsanias ❙ 62 ❙ Later Roman-Parthian Wars

The Roman General Caesennius Paetus was sent to repulse a Parthian invasion of Armenia but allowed himself to be surrounded and forced to surrender on the Arsanias (modern Murat) River in eastern Turkey. Victory over the Roman army enabled Parthian leader Vologesus I to make his brother Tiridates King of Armenia, while recognising Roman Emperor Nero as overlord.

Arsilah ❙ 1471 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in North Africa

Determined to avenge a disastrous Portuguese repulse at Tangier in 1437, and again in 1464, King Alfonso V took a large-scale expedition against the Muslim fortress of Arsilah, on the Atlantic coast of Morocco. Arsilah fell, followed by a deliberate massacre, which induced the Muslims to abandon nearby Tangier. Alfonso then seized Tangier and his courtiers hailed him "Africanus."

Arsissa ❙ 625 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

See Arcesh

Arsouf ❙ 1191 ❙ 3rd Crusade

Crusaders led by King Richard I of England advancing along the Palestine coast towards Jerusalem were met at Arsouf, north of Jaffa, by a huge Syrian-Egyptian force under Saladin. Despite initial losses, a Crusader charge scattered their enemy, causing massive casualties. Saladin evacuated Jaffa and Richard set to restore it, losing a chance to advance and seize Ascalon (7 September 1191).

Artah ❙ 1105 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

In a renewed Crusader offensive in northern Syria, Tancred, Regent of Antioch, attempted to recover the fortress of Artah, between Antioch and Aleppo. At the nearby village of Tizin, he destroyed a large Turkish army under Ridwan of Aleppo, inflicting massive casualties. Ridwan quickly sued for peace and Tancred consolidated his authority in the Orontes Valley (20 April 1105).

Artah ❙ 1164 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

After Nur ed-Din, Emir of Aleppo, was driven off from besieging Harenc, east of Antioch, he was pursued north by Bohemund III of Antioch, Raymond of Tripoli and Constantine Coloman, Byzantine Governor of Cicilia. Aided by the army of Mosul, he ambushed and destroyed the pursuing army at Artah. All three Christian leaders were captured and later ransomed (10 August 1164).

Artaxata ❙ 68 BC ❙ 3rd Mithridatic War

With Pontus secured at Cabira in 72 BC, Roman commander Lucius Licinius Lucullus invaded Armenia, pursuing Mithridates VI of Pontus, who fled to his son-in-law Tigranes.

Following victory at Tigranocerta, Lucullus marched northeast and defeated Tigranes again at Artaxata (modern Artashat), ancient capital of Armenia. Lucullus was replaced by Gnaeus Pompey, who won in 66 BC at Lycus.

Artaxata ❙ 58 ❙ Later Roman-Parthian Wars

Vologeses of Parthia overthrew the Roman-supported ruler of Armenia in favour of his brother Tiridates, and veteran General Gnaeus Domitius Corbulo was sent to re-establish Roman authority. Advancing into Armenia, Corbulo defeated Tiridates and captured and burned Artaxata (modern Artashat), the ancient capital of Armenia, south of Yerevan near Lake Sevan.

Artaza ❙ 1834 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Soon after Don Carlos V arrived in Spain, Liberal General José Ramon Rodil led perhaps 8,000 men into the rugged Améscoa Valley, where he was attacked at Artaza by just 2,000 Carlists under General Tomás Zumalacárregui. Rodil suffered heavy losses in a one-sided action before the Carlists withdrew, but he continued his campaign in pursuit of the pretender (31 August 1834).

Artemisa ❙ 1896 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

Driven off from Candelaria by troops sent by acting Spanish commander Sabás Marín, insurgent leader Antonio Maceo determined to ambush the Spanish column at Artemisa, 35 miles southwest of Havana. Despite initial success, the Cubans suffered costly losses when reinforcements arrived, but Maceo stubbornly refused to withdraw until fighting ended at nightfall (30 January 1896).

Artemisium ❙ 480 BC ❙ Greco-Persian Wars

In support of the famous defence at Thermopylae against Persian invaders, the Greek fleet anchored at Artemisium was attacked by Persian ships. The two fleets clashed indecisively for three days off Euboea until Thermopylae fell. However, severe storms caused heavy Persian losses, as they had no safe harbour. The Greeks withdrew to later support the great victory off Salamis (August 480 BC).

Artenay ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

During the Prussian advance towards Paris, Baron Ludwig von der Tann led his Bavarian Corps of 28,000 men and 160 guns against the French Army of the Loire under General Joseph Edouard de la Motterouge. Smashing through the French defences north of Orleans at Artenay, the Germans captured Orleans next day, along with its crucial supplies and rolling stock (10 October 1870).

Arthuret ❙ 573 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

When King Peredur of York united with Dunaut of the Pennines against their Royal kinsman Gwendolou of Carlisle, Gwendolou was defeated and killed at Arderydd (modern Arthuret or Longtown) on the Esk, north of Carlisle. In the ensuing struggle for power, the semi-legendary Urien of Rheged became Lord of Carlisle and eventually the most powerful northern Prince.

Artois (1st) ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

The so-called Second Battle of Artois saw French General Henri Pétain attack between Lens and Arras towards Vimy Ridge, supported by the British in the north at Aubers. After initial French success, German reinforcements created a battle of attrition, with heavy fighting around Souchez. The failed offensive cost 100,000 French and 75,000 German casualties (9 May–18 June 1915).

Artois (2nd) ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

While French forces attacked in Champagne, further north in Artois, General Auguste Dubail advanced towards Vimy Ridge, aided by the British attacking at nearby Loos. The so-called Third Battle of Artois saw a powerful German counter-attack under Crown Prince Rupprecht and the French were eventually driven back with about 120,000 casualties (25 September–15 October 1915).

Arundel ❙ 1102 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

In the face of renewed rebellion by the powerful Robert of Beleme, Earl of Salisbury, Henry I took a large force against the Norman Earl's castle at Arundel in Sussex. In a siege noted for the use of major works known as counter-castles, Salisbury was unable to send aid to his captains and, after three months, he allowed the garrison to surrender in return for safe conduct back to Normandy.

Arundel ❙ 1643–1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

Sir Ralph Hopton's Royalists believed that Sussex was preparing to rise for the King and marched south to seize Alton and Arundel. But Parliamentary General Sir William Waller retook Alton and marched east to besiege the great castle, which was badly damaged by heavy bombardment. When Arundel finally fell, half the 1,000 prisoners changed sides (20 December 1643–6 January 1644).

Arvenanmaa ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Hango

Arzila ❙ 1471 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in North Africa

See Arsilah

Arzobispo ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Withdrawing into Portugal after Talavera de la Reina, British General Sir Arthur Wellesley and Spanish forces under General Gregorio Cuesta crossed the Tagus at Arzobispo, pursued by Marshal Nicolas Soult. The French Marshal defeated Cuesta's rearguard under General Louis Bassecourt and seized the bridge, but King Joseph Bonaparte refused permission to invade Portugal (4 August 1809).

Arzu ❙ 1880 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

See Urzu

Asal Uttar ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

See Khem Karan

Asan ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

See Phung-tao

Asarta ❙ 1833 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Early in war against Spanish Regent Maria Cristina, Carlist commander Tomás Zumalacárregui tried to hold a position between Asarta and Nazar against General Manuel Lorenzo and Colonel Marcelino Oráa. In his first major victory, Zumalacárregui's half-trained Carlists inflicted heavy Cristino casualties before withdrawing. He soon fought again at Alsasua (29 December 1833).

Ascalon ❙ 1099 ❙ 1st Crusade

When Crusaders seized Jerusalem, the Fatimid Caliphate of Egypt felt threatened and sent a large army north under the Vizier al-Afdal Shahinshah. On the plain of al-Majdal, outside the coastal city of Ascalon, the outnumbered Crusader army, led by Godfrey of Bouillon, utterly defeated the Fatimid Egyptians and seized massive treasure, but was unable to capture Ascalon (12 August 1099).

Ascalon ❙ 1123 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

In return for promised commercial advantage, Venice despatched a large squadron of galleys to assist the Crusaders in Palestine. Her ships intercepted a large Egyptian fleet off the Muslim fortress of Ascalon, in southern Palestine, and sank or captured virtually every vessel. The Venetians then sailed on to support the siege of Tyre (May 1123).

Ascalon ❙ 1153 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Egyptian forces were defeated by Crusaders near Ascalon in 1099, but they held the strategic coastal fortress until besieged by a large Crusader army under King Baldwin III of Jerusalem. Despite heavy losses—especially among his Knights Templar—Baldwin seized the city, the last Fatimid Egyptian possession in Syria, and gave it to his brother Amalric (25 January–19 August 1153).

Ascalon ❙ 1247 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

Following Crusader defeat at La Forbie near Gaza in 1244 by Khwarezmian Turks supported by Ayyubid Mamluks, the Egyptians turned on the Turks and drove them out of Jerusalem before launching a massive siege of the Crusader fortress at Ascalon. A bloody assault saw Ascalon taken by storm with heavy Crusader losses, and the city's defences were dismantled (August–October 1247).

Aschaffenburg ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

With French General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan defeated at Amberg and Würzburg, Archduke Charles Louis of Austria pursued the French west to Aschaffenburg, in modern Bavaria, where the Austrians achieved their third victory in just three weeks. Archduke Charles then drove northwest towards the Rhine for further victory within days at Altenkirchen (13 September 1796).

Aschaffenburg ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

Attacking Austria's German allies, Prussian General August von Goeben marched through Laufach towards Aschaffenburg, southeast of Frankfurt, held by Count Erwin von Neipperg with Federal troops and some Hessians. While Alexander of Hesse remained with his army at Seiligenstadt, Aschaffenburg fell with over 2,000 prisoners taken. Frankfurt fell two days later (14 July 1866).

Aschersleben ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Juterbog

Ascoli ❙ 1190 ❙ Imperial Invasion of Sicily

Tancred, the illegitimate grandson of Roger II, seized Sicily's throne and was challenged by Henry VI of Germany, who sent an Imperial army under Marshal Henry of Kalden to support Count Roger of Andria. At Ascoli Satriano, south of Foggia in Apulia, Tancred defeated and later killed Andria, but could not sustain his success. On Tancred's death in 1194, Henry overran Sicily.

Asculum, Apulia ❙ 279 BC ❙ Pyrrhic War

Campaigning in southern Italy against a large Roman army, King Pyrrhus of Epirus won a costly victory at Heraclea, then another hard-fought battle on the Aufidus, south of Foggia, at Asculum (modern Ascoli Satriano). However, because his casualties were much harder to replace than the Roman losses, the costly tactical wins spelled strategic defeat, hence the expression "Pyrrhic Victory."

Asculum, Apulia ❙ 209 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

With Hannibal besieging Canusium (modern Canosa), his Roman rival Marcus Marcellus approached, and Hannibal withdrew up the Aufidus, where Marcellus attacked the Carthaginian camp at Asculum (modern Ascoli Satriano). Initially repulsed, Marcellus renewed his attack next day, and Hannibal suffered terrible losses and withdrew. A year later Marcellus died in ambush at Venusia.

Asculum, Marche ❙ 89 BC ❙ Roman Social War

When the Marsi and Samnites of central Italy revolted against Roman rule over citizenship, a Roman force was routed at Fucine Lake, and the Italian allies under Judacilius seized Asculum (modern Ascoli Piceno), northwest of Pescara, and massacred its inhabitants. However, Gnaeus Pompeius Strabo routed the rebels in battle, and a further victory in the south at Pompeii soon ended the revolt.

Asemus ❙ 443 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire

While Attila the Hun campaigned near Constantinople, the local garrison at Asemus (modern Osma) surprised a group of Huns escorting booty back to the Hungarian Plain. Roman defeat at Chersonesus soon led Emperor Theodosius to sue for peace, but the people of Asemus refused Attila's demands to return the liberated captives, even though Emperor Theodosius II supported the demand.

Ashanti ❙ 1900 ❙ Ashanti Rising

In a final show of independence after defeat at Odasu in 1874, Ashanti tribesmen in modern Ghana supporting King Prempeh rebelled against British efforts to suppress the Royal cult of the Golden Stool. The revolt was put down by General Sir William James Willcocks, who eventually seized the Ashanti capital at Kumasi, and the northern provinces were formally annexed (15 July 1900).

A Shau ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

Crossing the demilitarized zone, three North Vietnamese battalions attacked the small special forces base in the A Shau Valley, near the Laotian border southwest of Hue. Following heroic defence, the South Vietnamese irregulars, with American support, were boldly evacuated by air. Communist forces built up in the valley until an Allied offensive two years later at Dong Ha (9–10 March 1966).

A Shau ❙ 1968 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dong Ha

Ash Creek ❙ 1864 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

Following an army victory at Cedar Canyon, Lieutenant George Eayre marched southeast from Denver towards Fort Larned, Kansas. To the north at Ash Creek, he met a large Cheyenne group hunting buffalo. Chief Lean Bear attempted a parley but was killed and, when Eayre opened fire with mountain howitzers, 28 Indians and four soldiers died, triggering war on the Arkansas (May 1864).

Ashdod ❙ 659–630 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

See Azotus

Ashdown ❙ 871 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Defeated by Viking invaders at Reading, King Aethelred of Wessex and his brother Alfred regrouped northwest of Reading at Ashdown, on the Ridgeway near Lowbury Hill. Danish leader Bagsecq was defeated and killed in a decisive engagement and King Halfdan and his Viking survivors fled to Reading. However, within weeks the Saxons lost at Basing and Merton (8 January 871).

Ash Hollow ❙ 1855 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

In retribution for the destruction of Lieutenant John Grattan's platoon near Fort Laramie, reputedly in a dispute over a stolen cow, a large cavalry column from Fort Leavenworth under General William S. Harney cornered and defeated Brulé Sioux warriors under Little Thunder at Ash Hollow, Nebraska. More than 130 Indians were killed, virtually the entire fighting force (3 September 1855).

Ashingdon ❙ 1016 ❙ Danish Conquest of England

King Edmund Ironside attempted to resist the Danish conquest of England and met Knut, son of Sweyn Forkbeard, at Penselwood and Sherston. Later in the year at Ashingdon (Assunden), north of Southend in Essex, Edmund was heavily defeated following the desertion of his brother-in-law Edric. When Edmund died soon after making peace, Knut became King of England (18 October 1016).

Ashkelon ❙ 1099 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Ascalon

Ashkelon ❙ 1153 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Ascalon

Ashkelon ❙ 1247 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Ascalon

Ashmoun Canal ❙ 1221 ❙ 5th Crusade

Having captured Damietta at the eastern mouth of the Nile in late 1219, Franks of the Fifth Crusade, under Papal Legate Cardinal Pelagius, attempting to march on Ayubbid Cairo, were heavily defeated at the Ashmoun Canal. Cut off from Damietta as the Nile flooded, they sued for peace. After being forced into surrender, the Crusade was abandoned, having achieved nothing (July–August 1221).

Ashmoun Canal ❙ 1249 ❙ 7th Crusade

In a reprise of the Fifth Crusade, King Louis IX of France took Damietta on the eastern Nile Delta and quickly advanced towards Cairo.

A large Ayyubid Muslim army under the Emir Fakr-ed-din repulsed the Crusaders in a brilliant defensive victory on the Ashmoun Canal. The Arabs held out for two months against continuous attack until the Crusader defeat at nearby Mansura (20 November 1249).

Ashmunien ❙ 1167 ❙ Crusader Invasion of Egypt

See El Ashmunien

Ashraf ❙ 1759 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

Mohammad Hasan Khan of Qajar recovered from defeat at Shiraz in 1758 and advanced south of the Caspian towards Ashraf (modern Bihshahr) to attack Shaykh Ali Khan's Zand army before Regent Karim Khan Zand could bring reinforcements from Tehran. Mohammad Hasan was routed, then killed in the pursuit towards Asterabad, which quickly surrendered to Karim (14 February 1759).

Ashrafieh ❙ 1978 ❙ Lebanon Civil War

See Beirut

Ashtee ❙ 1818 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

See Ashti

Ashti ❙ 1818 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

With Peshwa Baji Rao II routed near Poona at Koregaon (6 January), British General Michael Smith advanced towards Bombay and met the Maratha army to the east at Ashti. The Peshwa fled before the battle, which saw his cavalry defeated and his commander Bapu Gokla killed. Later that year, the Peshwa suffered one further defeat at Seoni before he started negotiating peace (25 February 1818).

Asiago ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

Austrian General Conrad von Hotzendorf launched an offensive from the Trentino Bulge, attacking towards Padua to overrun General Roberto Brusati. Asiago and Arserio fell (31 May), but Italian commander Luigi Cadorna brought reinforcements from the Isonzo and drove the Austrians almost back to their starting point with about 80,000 casualties on each side (15 May–25 June 1916).

Asirgarh ❙ 1600–1601 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

On his last great campaign, Mughal Emperor Akbar captured Burhanpur in Khandesh, then besieged the nearby fortress of Asirgarh, said to be the most powerful of its age. Akbar treacherously seized commander Bahadur Shah after eight months with a false promise of safe negotiations, but the garrison held out until starvation and bribery produced surrender (9 April 1600–6 January 1601).

Asirgarh ❙ 1819 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

After the apparent end of the hostilities, deposed Raja Appa Sahib of Berar and Maharaja Mulhar Rao Holkar of Indore renewed the fighting. Asirgarh, north of Burhanpur, the last stronghold of the Maratha Confederacy, was besieged by British forces under Generals Sir John Malcolm and Sir John Doveton (1768–1847) and fell after three weeks, finally concluding the war (18 March–6 April 1819).

Askalon ❙ 1099 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Ascalon

Askalon ❙ 1153 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Ascalon

Askalon ❙ 1247 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Ascalon

Askultisk ❙ 1828 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

See Akhaltsikhe

Aslanduz ❙ 1812 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

Following annexation of Persian Georgia, Russia invaded to support its claim and met mixed success at Echmiadzin (1804) and Akhalkalaki (1810). After years of confused warfare, Russian General Pyotr Kotliarevski crossed the Aras and decisively defeated a much larger army under Crown Prince Abbas Mirza at Aslanduz. He then captured the key fortress at Lenkoran (19–20 October 1812).

Asluj ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Israeli commander Ygal Allon seized Beersheba, then feinted towards the coast at Rafa while launching his main armoured attack inland towards Asluj. Heavy fighting saw Asluj and nearby El Auja fall on the same day. There was further action around Rafa and south towards the Gulf of Aqaba, but the Egyptians were effectively defeated, and the war soon came to an end (22–27 December 1948).

Asmara ❙ 1990–1991 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

See Dekemhare

Asosa ❙ 1990 ❙ Ethiopian Civil War

Oromo rebels took the offensive in the west, joining with Eritrean forces in a major attack on Asosa, near the Sudanese border. The Ethiopian army was driven out but retaliated with aerial bombing, and the rebels withdrew. However the attack helped establish the Oromo as a viable military force. In May 1991, they would help topple the government in Addis Ababa (5–10 January 1990).

Aspendus ❙ 190 BC ❙ Roman-Syrian War

See Eurymedon

Aspern-Essling ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Driving back the Austrian invasion of Bavaria, Napoleon Bonaparte crossed the Danube near Vienna, and attacked Aspern and Essling on the Plain of Marchfeld. The French were repulsed after extreme casualties on both sides by a huge Austrian army under Archduke Charles and withdrew to the mid-river island of Lobau. The battle is regarded as Bonaparte's first major defeat (21–22 May 1809).

Aspromonte ❙ 1862 ❙ Garibaldi's First March on Rome

When French-supported Rome held out against the unification of Italy, revolutionary leader Giuseppe Garibaldi crossed from Sicily to lead his Red-Shirts against the Papacy. Concerned about the possibility of French intervention, newly proclaimed King Victor Emmanuel II defeated the rebels in the extreme south of Italy at Aspromonte, capturing Garibaldi and many others (29 August 1862).

Assab ❙ 1991 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

As rebels advanced on the Eritrean capital Asmara, a new rebel offensive began south along the Red Sea coast, towards the port of Assab. After a fierce tank battle at Bera'isole (2 April) and severe fighting at Beylul (4 April), Ethiopian forces attempted a counter-offensive north of Assab but were driven back with costly losses. The port then fell by storm and the war came to an end (25 May 1991).

Assake ❙ 1876 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

See Andizhan

As-Salman ❙ 1991 ❙ 1st Gulf War

On the eve of the Allied offensive into Iraq, French General Bernard Janvier on the western flank, with American support, crossed the border and raced for the strategic As-Salman airfield. Advancing rapidly with helicopters against tanks, the French overwhelmed the defence and seized the airfield, choking air support for the Republican Guard at Wadi al-Batin (23–26 February 1991).

Assaye ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

In the decisive battle of the British campaign in Deccan India, General Sir Arthur Wellesley advanced from victory at Ahmadnagar to Assaye on the Kelna, where he utterly routed the Maratha army of Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior and Raja Raghuji Bhonsle of Berar. Many years later, as Duke of Wellington, Wellesley nominated Assaye as his bloodiest battle (24 September 1803).

Asseiceira ❙ 1834 ❙ Miguelite Wars

Dom Miguel, brother of the King, seized the throne of Portugal against the interests of his niece Maria da Gloria. However, he was eventually defeated at Asseiceira, near Santarem in Portugal, by General Antonio de Souza Duke of Terceira. Threatened by a large Portuguese-Spanish army at Evora, Dom Miguel capitulated two weeks later, relinquishing his claim to the throne (12 May 1834).

Assens ❙ 1535 ❙ Danish Counts' War
See Oksnebjerg

Assiette ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession
See Exilles

Assinarus ❙ 413 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War
See Syracuse Harbour

Assunden ❙ 1016 ❙ Danish Conquest of England
See Ashingdon

As Suwayda ❙ 1925 ❙ Druze Rebellion
See Suwayda

Asta ❙ 402 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

Marching through the Alps from Gaul to raise the Goth siege of Milan, the Roman-Vandal General Flavius Stilicho clashed with the Goth leader Alaric at Asta (modern Asti) on the Tanarus, southeast of Turin. While the outcome was inconclusive, Alaric was forced to withdraw and, within months, the battle was followed by major defeats for the Goth leader at Pollentia and Verona.

Asta's Creek ❙ 1844 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars
See Walker's Creek

Asterabad ❙ 1752 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

Amid struggle for control of Persia after the assassination of Nadir Shah, Regent Karim Khan Zand defeated Ali Mardan Khan in 1751 at Chahar Mahall, then blockaded the Qajar Mohammad Hasan Khan, at Asterabad (modern Gorgan), southeast of the Caspian. Aided by Turkoman allies, Mohammad Hasan Khan heavily defeated the Zands in a powerful sortie, and they withdrew to Tehran.

Astorga ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French General Androche Junot was repulsed from Astorga, on the Tuerto River in northwestern Spain (11 February), then returned with a force of 26,000 infantry and 8,000 cavalry, as well as substantial artillery. Spanish commander José Maria Santocildes held out for a month, but the city finally fell by storm. It was retaken by Santocildes in August 1812 (21 March–21 April 1810).

Astrakhan ❙ 1554 ❙ Russia's Volga Wars

Expanding Russia's empire southwards, Tsar Ivan IV—the Terrible—conquered Kazan in 1552, then sent a large force against the Tatar fortress of Astrakhan, at the mouth of the Volga. The city fell to prolonged siege, after which Khan Yamgurchi was deposed and replaced by the Russian vassal Khan Darwish Ali. Darwish was soon overthrown by Yamgurchi, and Russia returned to seize control.

Astrakhan ❙ 1569 ❙ Russia's Volga Wars

In support of his scheme to cut a canal between the Volga and Don Rivers to allow Turkish naval access from the Black Sea to the Caspian, Ottoman Sultan Selim II attacked Astrakhan. The Russian garrison held out until a relief force sent by Tsar Ivan IV—the Terrible—drove off the Turkish siege army under Grand Vizier Sokollu Mehmet Pasha. Selim then withdrew.

Asuncion ❙ 1947 ❙ Paraguayan Civil War

Six years after seizing power, Paraguayan Dictator Higinio Morinigo faced armed rebellion by former President Rafael Franco and the Febrersista Party, who marched on Asuncion. The capital held out in fierce fighting until Loyalist reinforcements arrived and the rebels were routed with over 1,600 killed. Morinigo was himself overthrown in a coup the following year (20 August 1947).

Aswan ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Having routed General Murad Bey near the Pyramids (July 1798), Napoleon Bonaparte sent General Louis Desaix to defeat the Mamluk leader on the Upper Nile at Sediman. Desaix then marched south and at Aswan, reinforced by cavalry under General Louis-Nicolas Davout, destroyed the last remnants of the Mamluk army and drove Murad Bey beyond the First Cataract (1 February 1799).

Atapuerca ❙ 1054 ❙ Spanish Territorial Wars

Garcia III of Navarre was determined to extend his territory and marched against his younger brother, Ferdinand I, King of Leon and Castile. Garcia was killed in a decisive battle at Atapuerca, near Burgos in northern Castile, and his Navarrese army and its Muslim auxiliaries were routed. Ferdinand seized part of Navarre and gave the rest to Garcia's son, Sancho III (15 September 1054).

Atbara ❙ 350 ❙ Axum-Meroite War

King Ezana of Aksum, on the upper reaches of the Nile, progressively defeated his neighbours, then marched north against the declining Nubian kingdom of Meroe, about 100 miles downstream of modern Khartoum. In a decisive battle near Atabara, Ezana defeated the army of Meroe and overthrew the kingdom. His adoption of Coptic Christianity established a lasting Christian tradition in Ethiopia.

Atbara ❙ 1898 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Advancing up the Nile to recapture the Sudan, General Sir Herbert Kitchener's Anglo-Egyptian force turned up the Atbara and met a much larger Mahdist army under Emir Mahmoud. Attacking against a thorn-bush stockade near Nakheila, Kitchener inflicted a major defeat—with over 2,000 Dervishes killed—and continued his march towards Omdurman (8 April 1898).

Atchoupa ❙ 1890 ❙ 1st Franco-Dahomean War

Reinforced after costly actions in Dahomey at Cotonou, Colonel Sébastien Terrillon advanced northwest to Atchoupa, where he was attacked by King Behanzin himself with 9,000 troops (including 2,000 Amazons). French rifles inflicted terrible losses, but Terrillon had to withdraw when his native auxiliaries broke. A truce was soon agreed ceding Cotonou and Porto Novo to France (20 April 1890).

Atella ❙ 1496 ❙ Italian War of Charles VIII

See Aversa

Atenquique ❙ 1858 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Liberal Generals Leandro Valle and Santos Degollado recovered from early set-backs and attempted to retake Guadalajara, which had been lost at Salamanca (10 March). In a ravine at Atenquique, to the south near Ciudad Guzmán, they were driven off by a larger Conservative force under General Miguel Miramón, who won decisively three months later at Ahualalco (2 July 1858).

Athenry ❙ 1316 ❙ English Invasion of Ireland

Consolidating the English presence in Ireland, Anglo-Irish troops under William de Burgh and Richard de Bermingham destroyed the undisciplined peasant army of Feidlim O'Connor, King of Connaught, at Athenry in County Galway. A reputed 11,000 men were slaughtered, including 29 Chiefs of the clan, and the O'Connors never again exercised power in Ireland (10 August 1316).

Athens, Alabama ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate cavalry Colonel Moses W. Hannon led a fresh offensive in northern Alabama, where he crossed the Tennessee River to attack Athens, northwest of Huntsville, held by Captain Emil Adam for General Grenville M. Dodge. The early morning attack was driven off after a brief, sharp action, and the Confederates were forced to withdraw (26 January 1864).

Athens, Greece ❙ 404 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

With the Athenian fleet destroyed at Aegospotami, Athens itself was besieged by Spartan commander Lysander. Facing starvation after six months, the Athenian Council deposed and executed the hawkish leader Cleophon and surrendered the city. Its defensive long walls were destroyed and the fall of Athens ended the war. Lysander set up an oligarchy but was soon overthrown after Munychia.

Athens, Greece ❙ 264–262 BC ❙ Chremonidian War

In a revolt against Antigonus II of Macedonia, Athenians led by Chremonides and his brother Glaucon formed an alliance with Sparta and Egypt. However, Antigonus routed the Spartans at Corinth (265 BC), then laid siege to Athens. Following an heroic two-year resistance, Athens was starved into surrender. Glaucon and Chremonides fled to Egypt and Athens became a Macedonian province.

Athens, Greece ❙ 87–86 BC ❙ 1st Mithridatic War

See Piraeus

Athens, Greece ❙ 1821–1822 ❙ Greek War of Independence

See Acropolis

Athens, Greece ❙ 1827 ❙ Greek War of Independence

See Acropolis

Athens, Greece ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ Greek Civil War

As German forces evacuated Greece, Communists seized most of the north, then attacked Athens, defended by British General Sir Reginald Scobie. Within days, General Manolis Mandakas (later Aris Veloukhiotis) took police stations, the Town Hall, and the road to Piraeus. When British reinforcements arrived, the insurgents accepted a ceasefire (5 December 1944–15 January 1945).

Atherton Moor ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Adwalton Moor

Athlone ❙ 1691 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution

Despite a decisive Protestant victory at the Boyne in July 1690, Catholic Athlone in County Roscommon held out for James II under Governor Colonel Richard Grace. However, Grace was killed during the siege and the city fell by assault to William III's General Godert de Ginkel. After completing the conquest of Ireland, Ginkel was created Earl of Athlone and Baron Aughrim (19–30 June 1691).

Ati ❙ 1978 ❙ Chad Civil Wars

Northern rebels united under Ahmat Acyl, who led an offensive into the south. President Félix Malloum called for aid from France, which sent troops and fighter-bombers. Northeast of the capital at Ati, on the road to Abéché, French and Chadian government forces launched a severe attack, which halted the rebel advance. A year later, Malloum was overthrown in N'Djamena (May 1978).

Atlanta ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Two days after a failed sortie north of Atlanta, Georgia, at Peachtree Creek, Confederate commander John B. Hood sent General William J. Hardee on a second sortie to the east. Although Union General James A. McPherson was killed, commander William T. Sherman secured a bloody victory. Atlanta was under virtual siege until the decisive action at Jonesborough (22 July 1864).

Atlantic ❙ 1915–1917 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

In the first great underwater campaign, Germany blockaded Britain and attacked shipping in the Atlantic. Unrestricted submarine warfare was declared on 1 February 1917, but by late that year American intervention and effective implementation of the convoy system largely ended the offensive. The Germans had sunk over 8 million tons of shipping at a cost of more than 50 U-boats lost.

Atlantic ❙ 1939–1945 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Attempting to repeat the nearly successful blockade of Britain in World War I, German U-boats, supported by surface raiders and aircraft, waged a bitter campaign against merchant shipping. Allied convoys, anti-submarine measures and closing the air gap virtually won the battle in mid-1943. By war's end, U-boats sank 14 million tons of shipping, mainly in the Atlantic, for 780 U-boats lost.

Atlixco ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

American General Joseph Lane relieved the siege of Puebla, then pursued General Joaquin Rea 18 miles southwest to Atlixco, where Rea's large Mexican force attempted to make a stand. The hillside town surrendered following a heavy artillery bombardment and the guerrillas dispersed with over 200 killed. They were defeated again next month at Izúcar de Matamoros (19 October 1847).

Atoleiros ❙ 1384 ❙ Portuguese-Castilian Wars

During a disputed succession in Portugal, João of Aviz and his General Nuno Alvares Pereira seized key cities, provoking an invasion by Juan I of Castile, who claimed the throne through his wife Beatrice. North of Sousel at Atoleiros, the Castilians were defeated and withdrew. When João later formally claimed the throne, Juan invaded again and was routed in 1385 at Aljubarrota (6 April 1384).

Atra ❙ 199 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus

A year after the great Roman victory at Ctesiphon, Emperor Septimius Severus attacked the Parthian city of Atra (Al Hathr), famous for its wealthy sun temple, in the desert west of the Tigris. The Roman siege train was destroyed during the three-week siege and Severus withdrew after two major assaults were repulsed with heavy losses. This was a major blow to Roman prestige.

Attleboro ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dau Tieng

Attock ❙ 1813 ❙ Afghan-Sikh Wars

Afghan Vizier Fateh Khan captured Kashmir, then advanced towards Attock, which had been occupied by the great Sikh leader Ranjit Singh. At Haidru, on the Mansur Plain northeast of the fort, General Dewan Mokham Chand routed the Afghans with a decisive cavalry charge and Fateh Khan returned to Kabul. It was the first significant Punjabi victory over the Afghans (13 July 1813).

Attu ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When battle at the Komandorski Islands blocked Japanese reinforcements to the Aleutians, American General Albert Brown landed 11,000 men to retake Attu, held by 2,400 men under Colonel Yasuyo Yamazaki. Only 29 Japanese survived fierce fighting and a suicide charge and the Americans lost 600 killed and 1,200 wounded. The Japanese then evacuated Kiska (11–30 May 1943).

Atulapa ❙ 1853 ❙ Central American National Wars

A stubborn border dispute between President José Trinidad Cabañas of Honduras and President Rafael Carrera of Guatemala saw Honduran forces cross into eastern Guatemala. Near Esquipulas at Atulapa, they were defeated and driven back across the border by General Vicente Cerna. Guatemalan forces then launched an unexpected assault in the west at Omoa (July 1853).

Auberoche ❙ 1345 ❙ Hundred Years War

After English forces seized the powerful castle of Auberoche, east of Perigueux, it was held against French siege by Alexander de Caumont from English-ruled Gascony. Marching with a relief force from Bordeaux, Henry Duke of Lancaster routed the besiegers. Louis of Poitiers was fatally wounded and many other French nobles were captured for ransom (21 October 1345).

Aubers ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In support of the British in the north around Ypres, and the French in the south in Artois, General Sir Douglas Haig again advanced against Aubers Ridge, south of Lille. Prince Rupprecht's Sixth Army had been heavily reinforced after Neuve Chappelle and Haig lost over 11,000 men in two failed assaults. Four days later he attacked further south at Festubert (9–10 May 1915).

Auburn ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate commander Robert E. Lee manoeuvred in Virginia after Gettysburg, trying to outflank the Union army of General George G. Meade, and sent General James "Jeb" Stuart against his rearguard under General Gouvernor K. Warren. After an inconclusive action near Auburn, Meade kept withdrawing north and repulsed the Confederates at Bristoe Station (14 October 1863).

Audaghost ❙ 1054 ❙ Fall of Ghana

When the great West African Empire of Ghana seized the Berber trading city of Audaghost (in modern Mauretania) in 1050, the Almoravid leader Abu Bakr ibn Umar marched south from Morocco, determined to spread Islam. Crossing the Sahara, he captured Audaghost after heavy fighting, then continued a long campaign into Ghana, culminating in the capture of Kumbi in 1076.

Auerstadt ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

As Napoleon Bonaparte's army converged on Prussia, Marshal Louis Davout met Karl Wilhelm Ferdinand Duke of Brunswick at Auerstadt, near Weimar. Despite terrible casualties, Davout's outnumbered French Corps won a decisive victory and Brunswick was killed. Bonaparte's victory the same day 15 miles away at Jena virtually knocked Prussia out of the war (14 October 1806).

Aughrim ❙ 1691 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution

A year after the decisive Irish loss at the Boyne, the Irish-French army of Patrick Sarsfield Lord Lucan and Charles Marquis de Saint-Ruth renewed the struggle against William III in County Galway, western Ireland. At Aughrim, west of Ballinasloe, the Allies were routed by General Godert de Ginkel's Protestant army. Saint-Ruth was killed and Lucan fled to Limerick (12 July 1691).

Augsburg ❙ 910 ❙ Magyar Invasion of Germany

Having secured victory at Pressburg in 907, Magyar invaders continued to ravage Germany, culminating in a decisive battle against a large Christian army under the nominal leadership of German King Ludwig III—The Child. The Hungarian cavalry won a crushing victory at Augsburg, on the Lech, west of Munich, and the 17-year-old King was forced into a peace treaty, paying tribute for ten years.

Augsburg ❙ 955 ❙ Magyar Invasion of Germany

See Lechfeld

Augsburg ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Advancing against the forces of Archduke Charles Louis of Austria, French General Jean Victor Moreau sent General Laurent Gouvion Saint-Cyr against Austrian forces at Augsburg. When the Bavarian city closed its gates, Austrian General Maximilian Latour was defeated and driven back across the Lech. He was heavily defeated two days later at Friedberg (22 August 1796).

Augusta, Georgia ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

American commander Nathanael Greene pursued the British into South Carolina after battle at Guildford Courthouse, and sent General Andrew Pickens and Colonel Henry Lee west to besiege Augusta, Georgia, boldly defended by Colonel Thomas Brown at Fort Cornwallis. Brown had to surrender after continuous bombardment, and Lee marched to Fort Ninety-Six (16 April–5 June 1781).

Augusta, Sicily ❙ 1676 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

Three months after indecisive naval action off Stromboli, French Admiral Abraham Duquesne, sent to support Sicilian rebellion against Spain, engaged the Dutch-Spanish fleet of Michiel de Ruyter and Don Franscisco de la Cerda in the Gulf of Augusta off Syracuse. Duquesne broke off the action but, due to Spanish irresolution, de Ruyter could not secure victory and later died of wounds (22 April 1676).

Augustovo ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

Despite massive losses at the Masurian Lakes, General Paul von Hindenberg checked the advancing Russians at Augustovo, and General Pavel Rennenkampf withdrew behind the Nieman to regroup. Rennenkampf then launched a massive counter-attack and the Germans fell back through Augustovo, abandoning East Prussia with about 60,000 casualties (26 September–9 October 1914).

Auldearn ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

After a raid on Dundee, Scottish Royalist James Graham Marquis of Montrose marched towards the east coast, pursued by Covenanters under Colonel Sir John Hurry. Instead of waiting for the main army under General Sir William Baillie, Hurry accepted battle near Nairn at Auldearn and was heavily defeated, leaving the Highlanders to meet Baillie two months later at Alford (9 May 1645).

Aumâle ❙ 1592 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

Alessandro Farnese Duke of Parma was advancing through Amiens to relieve the siege of Rouen, when he met the Royalist forces of Henry of Navarre to the northeast at Aumâle. The King was wounded in a sharp action, but Henry was saved by his reserves under Louis Gonzaga Duke of Nevers. The over-cautious Parma allowed the Spanish advance to be delayed (3 February 1592).

Auneau ❙ 1587 ❙ 8th French War of Religion

Just weeks after the Catholic defeat at Coutras, northeast of Bordeaux, the leader of the Catholic cause, Duke Henry of Guise, defeated German Protestants marching to assist the French Huguenots at Aneau, east of Chartres. King Henry III fled after the battle, and the ambitious Guise seized Paris. He was soon assassinated (24 November 1587).

Aurangabad ❙ 1724 ❙ Mughal-Hyderabad War

See Shakarkhelda

Auray ❙ 1364 ❙ Hundred Years War

Supporting John IV de Montfort's claim for the Duchy of Brittany, an Anglo-Gascon army under de Montfort, and Sir John Chandos besieged Auray, east of Lorient. Bertrand de Guesclin and rival claimant, Charles of Blois, attempted to relieve the port, but Blois was killed and Guesclin was captured. De Montfort became Duke, ending the disputed Breton Succession (29 September 1364).

Aussa ❙ 1875 ❙ Egyptian-Ethiopian War

An Egyptian force of about 350 under the Swiss officer Johann Munzinger Pasha, on campaign in eastern Ethiopia against Yohannes IV, marched inland from Tajoura in modern Djibouti towards Aussa near Lake Assal. Betrayed by the local Governor Walad Lehata, the Egyptians were attacked by Danakil tribesmen and over 200 were killed, including Munzinger (14 November 1875).

Aussig ❙ 1426 ❙ Hussite Wars

Facing a threatened invasion of Moravia by Hussite heretics, a fresh crusade of Catholic Germans marched into northwest Bohemia (in the modern Czech Republic) against former priest, Prokob the Bald, who commanded following the death of the great leader Jan Zizka. Prokob achieved a decisive victory on the Elbe at Aussig (modern Usti nad Labem) and won again next year at Tachov.

Austerlitz ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

One of Napoleon Bonaparte's greatest victories saw him destroy a Russian-Austrian attempt to cut off his advance from Vienna. On the Pratzen Plateau near Brno at Austerlitz (modern Slavkov), Bonaparte's outnumbered army stormed the heights and inflicted massive casualties on the Allies. Francis II of Austria sued for peace and Tsar Alexander I of Russia withdrew (2 December 1805).

Autossee ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

General John Floyd built on victory at Talladega and Hillabee by leading 950 Georgia militia and 400 Indian allies against the Creek at Autossee, on the Tallapoosa in Alabama. Floyd fell on the town, with 250 Creek Indians killed and 400 houses destroyed in a virtual massacre. Further decisive actions soon followed at Holy Ground and Horseshoe Bend (29 November 1813).

Autun ❙ 58 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

See Bibracte

Autun ❙ 532 ❙ Burgundian-Frankish War

Despite defeat at Vézeronce in 524, Godomar of Burgundy recovered his kingdom, then faced a third Frankish invasion, led by Childebert and Clotaire (who had killed the sons of their late brother Clodomir and divided the kingdom with their brother Theodoric). The Franks won a decisive victory near besieged Autun, northwest of Chalons, then annexed the Kingdom of Burgundy.

Ava ❙ 1527 ❙ Burmese Dynastic Wars

Campaigning south along the Irriwaddy, the Shan State of Mohnyin in northern Burma attacked the independent kingdom of Ava, where King Shwenankyawshin was defeated and killed in a final massive assault. The Shan then seized and sacked Ava, causing terrible destruction, and installed Prince Thohanbwa as King. They held Ava until it fell in 1555 to Bayinnaung of Burma.

Ava ❙ 1555 ❙ Burmese Dynastic Wars

King Bayinnaung of Burma defeated Mon rebels at Pegu and Prome (1552), then determined to crush the Shan Chiefs, who had advanced down the Irriwaddy and sacked the ancient capital of Ava. With a powerful force, he seized Ava and forced the Shan to submit, dismissing King Sithkyawhtin and securing Burmese overlordship until 1599. Bayinnaung then invaded Siam and won at Ayutthaya.

Ava ❙ 1752 ❙ Burmese Civil Wars

Climaxing a prolonged campaign to conquer northern Burma, the Mon King Binnya Dala, with French aid, seized Pegu (1751), then led a final massive offensive against the capital, Ava. The city was captured, with the last Toungoo King taken and later executed, marking the end of the 250-year Toungoo Dynasty. Binnya Dala himself was overthrown in 1757 after the fall of Pegu (April 1752).

Avaí ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Falling back from the courageous defence of the Ytororó, Paraguayan General Bernadino Caballero turned on the advancing Brazilians under General Manuel Osório. Despite costly Brazilian losses in battle at Avaí, on the Paraguay, south of Asunción near Villeta, Caballero was defeated. His survivors withdrew towards the defensive position near Angostura at Ita Ybate (11 December 1868).

Avarayr ❙ 451 ❙ Christian Rising in Armenia

When Persian Shah Yazdgard II tried to impose Zoroastrianism on Christian Armenia, he sparked revolt led by hereditary leader Vardan Mamikonean. But without Roman support, the revolt was doomed. On the Plain of Avarayr, in northeastern Iran near modern Maku, the Armenians were crushed with terrible losses, including Vardan killed. He was later honoured as a saint (2 June 451).

Avaricum ❙ 52 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Julius Caesar was determined to put down rebellion against Rome and advanced into central Gaul to besiege the key rebel city of Avaricum (modern Bourges). Driving back relief efforts by Arverni chieftain Vercingetorix, Caesar stormed the city and massacred its inhabitants. Caesar then marched south against Vercingetorix at Gergovia, where he suffered a costly repulse (March 52 BC).

Avein ❙ 1635 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Marching through Liège to join with the Dutch against Spain in the Netherlands, Armand du Plessis Cardinal Richelieu sent the French army under Marshal Urbain de Maillé-Brézé. The Spanish, led by Prince Thomas of Savoy, suffered a heavy defeat at Avein, north of the Mehaigne near Wasseiges, and the French went on to temporarily threaten Brussels (20 May 1635).

Averasborough ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Union commander William T. Sherman marched east across North Carolina, his left flank was checked at Averasborough, northeast of Fayatteville, by Confederate General William Hardee. Heavily reinforced by General Henry Slocum, the Union army renewed the advance, driving back a Confederate counter-attack, then marching east to a decisive action at Bentonville (16 March 1865).

Aversa ❙ 1496 ❙ Italian War of Charles VIII

After invading Italy in support of his claim for the throne of Naples, Charles VIII of France ravaged much of the country before leaving control with his kinsman, Gilbert Duke of Montpensier, Viceroy at Naples. Montpensier was utterly defeated at Aversa, just north of Naples, by a Spanish-Italian alliance under Gonsalvo de Cordoba and France was temporarily driven out (23 July 1496).

Avesnes-le-Sec ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In a brilliant unsupported cavalry action in northern France, Austrian squadrons under Prince Johann Liechtenstein and Count Heinrich von Bellegarde attacked a French force of infantry and artillery at Avesnes-le-Sec, just northeast of Cambrai. The French under General Nicolas Declaye were routed with costly casualties and most of their guns were captured (12 September 1793).

Avigliana ❙ 1630 ❙ Thirty Years War (Mantuan War)

When Savoy intervened in the Mantuan succession, Cardinal Richelieu sent Duke Henry of Montmorency against Savoy and its Imperial allies. West of Turin at Avigliana, the French army routed the Spanish, inflicting 700 casualties and taking 600 prisoners including commander Don Carlo Doria. However, Montmorency could not stop the Imperials taking Mantua a week later (10 July 1630).

Avignon ❙ 121 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

At the start of the Roman campaign in Transalpine Gaul, Consul Domitius Ahenobarbus took a large army, including elephants, against the powerful Allobroges people. The two forces met during the spring on the Rhone, apparently near modern Avignon, where the Gauls suffered a terrible defeat. Later the same year, Rome sent a fresh force to join Ahenobarbus against the Arverni people at the Isara.

Avignon ❙ 500 ❙ Burgundian-Frankish War

Frankish King Clovis intervened in Burgundian affairs and defeated King Gundobad at Dijon on the River Ouche before pursuing him to a long siege at Avignon on the River Rhone. However, Gundobad resisted so effectively that Clovis eventually recognised his authority and withdrew from Burgundy. A fresh offensive by the next generation of Franks won in 524 at Vézeronce.

Avignon ❙ 1226 ❙ Albigensian Crusade

The resumed Crusade against the Albigensian heretics of southern France saw King Louis VIII of France—the Lion—send a large army into the Languedoc to besiege the city of Avignon on the River Rhone. Despite Louis losing a reported 20,000 men to disease and enemy action, the city surrendered after three months and the sect was suppressed. Louis died soon afterwards.

Avranches ❙ 1426 ❙ Hundred Years War

As England completed its conquest of northern France, John Duke of Bedford, Regent in France for Henry VI, defeated Arthur de Richemont, Constable of France, near the village of St James, south of Avranches on the Bay of St Michel. The defeat forced Richemont's brother, Jean V Duke of Brittany, to submit to England (6 March 1426).

Avranches ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

In the breakout from Normandy, with German armour diverted by the British at Caen, American General Omar Bradley attacked southwest from St Lo towards Avranches. Despite costly losses to their own bombing, the Americans took 20,000 prisoners in six days and seized Avranches, opening the way to St Malo and Brest. The Germans struck back at Mortain (25–31 July 1944).

Awah ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Kusal Singh, rebel Thakur of Awah, defeating Jodhpur's army at Pali but failed in a siege of Nimach (November 1857) and fell back on Awah, east of Mandasur, where he was later attacked by 1,100 men under Colonel John Holmes. Just as an assault was about to be launched after a five-day bombardment, the rebels fled, abandoning guns and extensive military stores (19–24 January 1858).

Awan Erigo ❙ 1902 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

See Erego

Awazu ❙ 1184 ❙ Gempei War

Determined to punish his rebellious cousin Minamoto Yoshinaka in Kyoto, Yoritomo in Kamakura sent his brothers Yoshitsune and Noriyori who routed Yoshinaka at the Uji, then pursued him to the Awazu, near Otsu, east of Kyoto. Yoshinaka committed seppuku after a brutal final stand and the Minamoto brothers then marched west against the Taira clan at Ichinotani (February 1184).

Axarquia ❙ 1483 ❙ Final Christian Reconquest of Spain

A Spanish force under Rodrigo Ponce de Leon Marquis of Cadiz marching towards Malaga was ambushed to the north in the pass at Axarquia by Moorish commander Abdul Hassan, former King of Granada. The destruction of the flower of Spanish chivalry encouraged the new King Abu Abdallah (Boabdil) on a disastrous invasion of Christian territory, leading to defeat at Lucena (20 March 1483).

Axholme ❙ 1265 ❙ 2nd English Barons' War

Prince Edward, son of Henry III, defeated and killed Simon de Montfort Earl of Leicester at Evesham, then pursued the rebel Barons to siege on the Isle of Axholme in the Fens of Lincolnshire. Some rebels eventually surrendered when Edward promised to spare their lives, but de Montfort's son Simon the Younger fled into exile and others escaped to Ely (28 December 1265).

Axone ❙ 57 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

See Aisne

Axtorna ❙ 1565 ❙ Nordic Seven Years War

Withdrawing from Varberg in Danish Halland, 8,000 Danes and Germans led by Daniel Rantzau were attacked near Axtorna by 12,000 Swedish reinforcements under Jakob Henriksson Hästesko. Despite initial Swedish success in the war's largest action, their cavalry were badly handled and a bold Danish counter-attack saw the Swedes flee, abandoning all their guns (20 October 1565).

Ayacucho ❙ 1824 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

Five months after victory at Junín, Patriot leader General José de Sucre led Peruvians and Colombians against Spanish Viceroy José de la Serna and General José Canterac in Peru's Ayacucho Valley, near Huamanga. De la Serna was routed and surrendered, along with his entire army, securing Peruvian independence and virtually ending Spanish rule in South America (9 December 1824).

Ayerbe ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

When a French-Italian column of fewer than 1,000 men under Colonel Luigi Ceccopieri was marching to relieve the town of Ayerbe, near Huesca in northeastern Spain, it was attacked and overwhelmed by a large force of Spanish guerrillas. The unfortunate Ceccopieri was killed and his entire force was killed or captured (11 October 1811).

Aylesford ❙ 456 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Aegelsthrep

Ayohuma ❙ 1813 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Royalist General Joaquín de la Pezuela regained the initiative in Spanish Upper Peru (modern Bolivia) to defeat Patriot General Manuel Belgrano at Vilcapugio, then pursued him south towards Potosi. To the northeast at Ayohuma, Belgrano suffered another terrible defeat and was replaced in command of Argentina's Army of the North by General José de San Martin (14 November 1813).

Ayubale ❙ 1703 ❙ Queen Anne's War

In order to punish the Spanish for inciting Indian attacks against English settlers, a force of whites and Indians under James Moore, the former Governor of South Carolina, attacked Spanish troops at the Ayubale Mission, near Tallahassee, Alabama. The capture of the mission and devastation of nearby country constituted a major setback for Spanish Florida (14 December 1703).

Ayutthaya ❙ 1548 ❙ Burmese-Siamese Wars

King Tabinshwehti united the kingdoms of Burma at Pegu in 1539, then invaded Siam, aided by Portuguese mercenaries. After withdrawing from a failed offensive against Arakan, he returned east with a massive force and besieged the capital Ayutthaya, north of modern Bangkok. Despite heavy Siamese losses, Tabinshwehti was forced into an ignominious withdrawal. He was assassinated in 1550.

Ayutthaya ❙ 1568–1569 ❙ Burmese-Siamese Wars

After crushing rebellion in Burma at Ava (1555), King Bayinnaung invaded Siam, seizing the capital Ayutthaya and taking the royal family hostage (1564). Facing rebellion, he later returned in force to besiege Ayutthaya, which fell after heavy fighting. Thousands were deported to slavery and Siam became a virtual vassal state until victory in 1593 at Nong Sarai (November 1568–30 August 1569).

Ayutthaya ❙ 1760 ❙ Burmese Invasions of Siam

On a campaign to conquer Siam, King Alaungpaya of Burma led a massive force which besieged the capital Ayutthaya, 50 miles north of modern Bangkok, held by Prince Uthumphon for King Borommaracha. Unable to breach the city's defences in the wet season, Alaungpaya was mortally hit and died on the march home.

His son Hsinbyushin took the city seven years later (April 1760).

Ayutthaya ❙ 1766–1767 ❙ Burmese Invasions of Siam

When King Hsinbyushin of Burma besieged Siam's capital of Ayutthaya, north of Bangkok, Prince Uthumphon defended the city, and Burmese commander Maha Nawrahta was killed. But Ayutthaya fell and was destroyed. King Suriyamurin died and Uthumphon was exiled, ending a 400-year dynasty. Siamese General Phya Taksin soon retook the city (February 1766–7 April 1767).

Azagal ❙ 1086 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Zallaka

Azamgarh ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

British and Sikh troops under General Sir Edward Lugard, advancing from Lucknow to relieve the garrison at Azamgarh, north of Benares, dispersed a rebel force near Jaunpur, then routed Kunwar Singh's Danapur mutineers outside Azamgarh. Kunwar Singh's badly mauled force managed to slip away to the east but was soon defeated again at Maniar and Jagdispur (15 April 1858).

Azaz ❙ 1030 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Resolved to achieve military success in Syria, Emperor Romanus III Argyrus led a large expedition to secure Antioch, then marched east against Aleppo. In a disastrous defeat just north of Aleppo at Azaz, the Byzantine army was routed by Mirdasid Arabs and fled with perhaps 10,000 killed. The Emperor escaped to Constantinople and Byzantine prestige was soon restored by capture of Edessa.

Azaz ❙ 1125 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

When Aqsonqor Il-Bursuqi, Governor of Mosul, unified Muslim rulers and launched a major offensive in northern Syria, King Baldwin II of Jerusalem took the combined forces of Antioch, Tripoli and Edessa to relieve the siege of Zerdana. Baldwin then destroyed the Muslim army in a decisive battle at Azaz, north of Aleppo. Bursuqi sued for peace and withdrew to Mosul (May 1125).

Azcapotzalco ❙ 1428 ❙ Aztec Wars of Conquest

During a disputed Tepanec succession, Maxtla killed his brother and usurped the throne then laid siege to Tenochtitlan. An alliance of opponents under Nezahualcoyotl drove Maxtla back to siege at Azcapotzalco, which fell after 114 days, and the tyrant was executed. Tenochtitlan, Texcoco and Tacuba then created the Triple Alliance, which became the foundation of the powerful Aztec Empire.

Azimghur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Azamgarh

Azores ❙ 1591 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

Sent to the Azores to intercept the Spanish treasure fleet, British commander Lord Thomas Howard was surprised by warships under Admiral Don Alonso de Bassan. When Howard was forced to withdraw, Sir Richard Grenville in Revenge was cut off and tried to fight. In a classic action, he resisted until fatally wounded. Revenge surrendered, but was lost in a storm (31 August 1591).

Azotus ❙ 659–630 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

King Psammetichus (Psamthek) of Egypt freed Egypt of Assyrian rule, then used Greek mercenaries to attack Azotus, 22 miles north of Gaza in Palestine, to protect his northern border. The strategic city (Greek Ashdod) was taken from the Assyrians after a 29-year siege, one of the longest ever recorded. Egypt was later driven out of Palestine at Carchemish (trad date c 659–630 BC).

Azov ❙ 1695–1696 ❙ Russian Invasion of the Crimea

Having failed with a siege in 1695, Tsar Peter I of Russia launched a large-scale land and naval siege of the Crimean fortress of Azov, controlling the southern mouth of the Don River and access to the Black Sea. Despite stubborn Turkish resistance and heavy Russian casualties, General

Boris Sheremetev captured the fort and the Tsar set about improving its defences (28 July 1696).

Azov ❙ 1736 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War

In Russia's renewed campaign against the Crimean Tatars, Perekop fell (May 1736), then Irish-born General Count Peter Lacy and Admiral Pyotr Bredal attacked the strategic city of Azov, defended by the Seraskier Tiagya. It fell after a brutal seven-week siege, but the victory led to war with Turkey, at the end of which Russia retained Azov but agreed to demolish its fortifications (1 July 1736).

B

Babadag ❙ 1791 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

Russian General Mikhail Kutuzov led a spring offensive at the mouth of the Danube, where he advanced south from Izmail and crossed the delta with 12,000 men to attack the Turks at Babadag, in modern Romania. The Turks were driven out of their camp with costly losses and Kutuzov then marched northwest to join the main Russian army in its victory at Matchin (3 June 1791).

Bab el Wed ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

See Latrun

Babi Wali Kotal (1st) ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

While Akbar Khan, son of deposed Amir Dost Muhammad, besieged Kabul, other Afghans besieged Kandahar, defended by British General William Nott, who sent Colonel (later Sir) George Wymer on a sortie to Babi Wali Kotal, three miles to the northwest. Wymer heavily defeated the Shahzada Saftar Jang, and Nott himself led a larger sortie two months later (25 March 1842).

Babi Wali Kotal (2nd) ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

After being reinforced in Kandahar by Brigadier Sir Richard England, who overcame defeat at Haikalzai, British General William Nott attacked the besieging Afghans just to the northwest at Babi Wali Kotal. With just 1,500 men against a claimed 8,000, Nott repulsed the Afghans with heavy losses and drove them across the Argand-ab River. But he later evacuated Kandahar (29 May 1842).

Babi Wali Kotal ❙ 1880 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

See Kandahar

Bábolna ❙ 1437 ❙ Transylvanian Peasant Revolt

Romanian serfs in Transylvania, led by the poor nobleman Antal Budai Nagy, rebelled against Sigismund of Hungary and the avaricious Bishop Gyorgy Lépes, decisively defeating the forces of the Hungarian Governor near Bábolna (modern Bana, east of Gyor). Victory won the peasant army restored rights, though the church and nobility eventually forced them to accept less (6 June 1437).

Baby 700 ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

Determined to break out from Anzac, Australian and New Zealand forces under General Alexander Godley attacked up Monash Valley towards a hill known as Baby 700. Despite massive naval bombardment of the Turkish positions, the Allies were driven off with terrible losses. Many Anzacs were then transferred down the coast to support an attack at Krithia (2–3 May 1915).

Babylon, Egypt ❙ 640–641 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Egypt

Muslim General Amr ibn al-As defeated the Byzantine army at Heliopolis, then besieged the heavily fortified citadel of Babylon, near modern Cairo. Despite treacherous negotiations between the Arabs and Cyrus, Patriarch of Alexandria, the citadel held out until the death of Emperor Heraclius ended hope of relief and fell after seven months (October 640–9 April 641).

Babylon, Iraq ❙ 650–648 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

With Crown Prince Shamash-shum-ukin of Babylon leading a revolt against his brother, King Ashurbanipal of Assyria, the Assyrian King sent a large force to besiege the city. Starved into surrender, Shamash-shum-ukin killed himself and Assyria regained control. Within a few years the Chaldean Nabopolassar seized Babylon, and in 612 BC he overthrew Assyria itself at Nineveh.

Babylon, Iraq ❙ 541–539 BC ❙ Persian-Babylonian War

As King Cyrus "The Great" of Persia marched his army east against the decaying kingdom of Babylonia, King Nabonidus withdrew his troops behind the massive walls of Babylon. Cyrus reputedly diverted the Euphrates after a two-year siege, and his troops stormed the city along the riverbed. The fall of Babylon made the Persian Empire the largest then known (541–539 BC).

Babylon, Iraq ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

When Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid returned to Syria after Firadz, leaving Muthanna in command in Mesopotamia, a fresh Persian army under Hormuz was sent to recover lost territory on the Euphrates. Near Babylon, the outnumbered Muslims nearly panicked against Persian war-elephants, but eventually won. Later that year they met new Persian commander Rustam at Nimaraq (July 634).

Bacacay ❙ 1827 ❙ Argentine-Brazilian War

Just days after a Brazilian naval defeat in the Rio de la Plata at Juncal, a Brazilian column of 1,200 men led by Colonel Bentos Manuel Ribiero was attacked at Bacacay, near Neuvo de Julio, by Argentine Colonels Juan Galo Lavalle and José Maria Videla. Lavalle secured a decisive victory and was promoted to General. Argentina soon won again in the north at Ituzaingó (13 February 1827).

Bach Dang ❙ 938 ❙ Sino-Annamese War

When the northern Vietnamese province of Giao Chau rebelled, Liu Gong of the Southern Han sent a massive expedition under his son Hong Cao, who was met on the Bach Dang, near Haiphong, by General Ngo Quyen (founder of the Ngo Dynasty). With his ships impaled on stakes in the riverbed, Hong Cao was routed and killed, the defeat ending over 1,000 years of Chinese rule.

Bach Dang ❙ 1288 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

To avenge defeat at Siming in 1285, Kubilai Khan sent his son Toghon and grandson Esen Temur with perhaps 300,000 men to finally subdue the Vietnamese. After initially falling back, General Tran Hung Dao attacked and destroyed General Omar's Mongol fleet at the mouth of the Bach Dang, north of Haiphong. The invaders withdrew, routed at Noi Bang as they fled in defeat (3 April 1288).

Bac Le ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War

General Charles Millot campaigned northeast from Hanoi to secure Bac Ninh, then unwisely sent Captain Alphonse Dugenne with 800 men on towards Lang Son. Advancing through terrible rain and mud, the French crossed a river near the hamlet of Bac Le and were attacked by a large Chinese force. They lost 22 killed and 60 wounded in a humiliating defeat and had to retreat (23 June 1884).

Bac Ninh ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War

Following French victory west of Hanoi at Son Tay, new commander General Charles

Millot attacked northeast towards the Chinese Guangxi Army at Bac Ninh. Millot secured high ground nearby after heavy fighting, and the Chinese withdrew northeast towards Lang Son, abandoning 10 modern cannon. Three months later the French were bloodily checked at Bac Le (16–19 March 1884).

Bacolod ❙ 1903 ❙ American-Moro Wars

A year after Muslim Moros in the southern Philippines were defeated at Bayan, Captain John Pershing led a fresh campaign and attacked Bacolod fortress, overlooking Lake Lanao in central Mindanao. About 70 Moros died in a three-day bombardment, but the Sultan of Bacolod escaped before the fortress fell. Fighting on Mindanao soon resumed at Kudarangan (5–8 April 1903).

Badajoz ❙ 1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

An Anglo-Dutch army advancing into southwestern Spain under Henri de Massue Earl of Ruvigny and Baron Nicolas Fagel besieged Badajoz, but withdrew when Marshal Count René de Tessé sent cavalry reinforcements. In a second siege, Galway lost an arm and Fagel was recalled to Holland after he withdrew, allowing the French to pull back with all their guns (June and October 1705).

Badajoz (1st) ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In the first modern siege of the strategic Spanish border fortress of Badajoz, the garrison under General Rafael Menacho held out against French Marshal Nicolas Soult until Menacho was killed on a sortie. Even though he knew relief was on the way, his successor General José Imaz surrendered a week later, along with a large quantity of stores (26 January–10 March 1811).

Badajoz (2nd) ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Following French capture of the frontier fortress of Badajoz, a costly Anglo-Portuguese siege under Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington and General Sir William Beresford was repulsed by General Armand Phillipon. Although a French relief attempt by Marshal Nicolas Soult was driven off at Albuhera (16 May), the poorly equipped Allied siege was abandoned (20 April–10 June 1811).

Badajoz ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Despite previous failure, Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington determined to capture the Spanish fortress of Badajoz. Breaching the walls with improved siege equipment, his Anglo-Portuguese army launched a bloody night-time assault. French General Armand Phillipon surrendered next morning, after which Badajoz was subjected to a notorious sack by the victors (16 March–7 April 1812).

Badajoz ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Nationalist Colonel Juan Yagüe and forces from the Army of Africa secured Merida, and just days later marched north against Badajoz. Despite costly losses, the outnumbered Nationalists captured the city, after which hundreds of Republicans were brutally executed. The fall of the last remaining Republican city on the border effectively cut off reinforcement through Portugal (14 August 1936).

Badara ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Chinsura

Bad Axe ❙ 1832 ❙ Black Hawk Indian War

Soon after being driven back at Wisconsin Heights, the Sauk Chief Black Hawk was attacked on the Mississippi at the mouth of the Bad Axe, near modern Victory, Wisconsin, by 1,300 regulars and volunteers under General Henry Atkinson. Black Hawk was decisively defeated, with about 300 killed, including women and children, and he was later captured, bringing an end to the war (3 August 1832).

Baddowal ❙ 1846 ❙ 1st British-Sikh War

When a large Sikh army crossed the Sutlej into British East Punjab, they lost at Mudki and Ferozeshah. As Anglo-Indian troops under General Sir Harry Smith marched through Dharmkot to relieve Ludhiana, their rear was attacked at nearby Baddowal by Ranjur Singh. Smith lost his baggage and stores in a sharp action, but a week later he routed the Sikhs at Aliwal (21 January 1846).

Badenoch ❙ 1429 ❙ MacDonald Rebellion
See Lochaber

Badli-ki-Serai ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny
At the outbreak of the mutiny rebels seized Delhi, and a small British force under General Sir Henry Barnard was quickly despatched to restore control. About five miles away at the village of Badli-ki-Serai, the greatly outnumbered British drove out a large force of mutineers, enabling Barnard to take position next day on the strategic ridge commanding the northwestern approach to Delhi (8 June 1857).

Badme ❙ 1998 ❙ Ethiopian-Eritrean War
Economic differences between Eritrea and Ethiopia triggered war in 1998, and Eritrean troops seized the small town of Badme, in disputed territory on the Ethiopian border southwest of Asmara. Fighting soon died down to border skirmishing, but Ethiopia later launched a massive attack at Badme, beginning one of the largest wars in Africa, involving over half a million men (6 May 1998).

Badme ❙ 1999 ❙ Ethiopian-Eritrean War
In a dramatic escalation of their border war, Ethiopia launched a massive offensive to retake disputed territory around Badme southwest of Asmara, seized by Eritrea in May 1988. While an initial assault was repulsed with heavy losses on both sides, a second Ethiopian attack with tanks and aircraft broke through after human-wave assaults. The Eritreans then withdrew (6–10 & 25–26 February 1999).

Badoeng Strait ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
See Lombok Strait

Badon ❙ 497 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain
See Mons Badonicus

Badon ❙ 665 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars
After defeating Wessex at Pontesbury, the Welsh Prince Morgan Mwynfawr ap Arthrwys of Glevissig (modern Glamorgan) joined with Dunnonia (modern Devon and Cornwall) and crossed the Severn to meet the Saxons at Badon, probably Caer Vadon near Bath. While Morgan was killed, the outcome of the battle is not recorded, though the expansion of Wessex appears to have been checked.

Badr ❙ 624 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed
Just two years after fleeing from Mecca (the Hegira), the Prophet Mohammed attacked a wealthy caravan from Syria at Badr, near Medina in modern Saudi Arabia, where his Meccan refugees utterly defeated the escorting army of Abu Sufyan. The battle is regarded as the first great military exploit in founding Islam. The victors became known as Badriyun (13 January 624).

Badshahganj ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny
Campaigning against Mehndi Husain, self-proclaimed Nizam of Sultanpur, General Thomas Franks won at Chanda (Uttar Pradesh) and Hamirpur, then advanced northwest on Sultanpur itself. Two miles from the city at Badshahganj, Mehndi Husain took a strong position, supported by artillery under Mirza Gaffar Beg. However, he was routed and fled, opening the road to Lucknow (23 February 1858).

Badshahpur ❙ 1737 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars
See Delhi

Badung Strait ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
See Lombok Strait

Baecula ❙ 208 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Sent by Rome to restore order in Spain, Publius Scipio the Younger captured New Carthage, then won a brilliant tactical victory over the Carthaginian army of Hasdrubal Barca at Baecula (probably modern Bailen, Andalusia). However, casualties were not heavy and Hasdrubal slipped away with his army through Gaul and across the Alps in a failed attempt to reinforce his brother Hannibal in Italy.

Baecula ❙ 206 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Ilipa

Baetis ❙ 211 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Publius Scipio campaigning against the Carthaginian Hasdrubal in Andalusia had no choice but to split his force against three separate Carthaginian armies. Publius was defeated and killed in battle on the Upper Baetis (Guadalquivir). Shortly afterwards, his brother Gnaeus Scipio was killed in the same region at Ilurci, after which Rome withdrew north of the Ebro, effectively ceding southern Spain.

Baetis ❙ 80 BC ❙ Sertorian War

In support of his former commander Gaius Marius against Lucius Cornelius Sulla in civil war in Rome, veteran General Quintus Sertorius raised a rebellion in Spain and attacked Sulla's appointee Lucius Fufidius in Further Spain. Fufidius was heavily defeated in battle at the Baetis (modern Guadalquivir) River and, the following year, Nearer Spain was secured with victory at the Anas.

Bagamoyo ❙ 1889 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

When Arab slave traders in German East Africa (now Tanzania) rebelled under Abushiri ibn Salim and attacked Bagamoyo (September 1888), Commissioner Hermann von Wissmann and a force of 600 Sudanese troops attacked and stormed the rebel stronghold at nearby Jahazi. The rebels were then driven out of Sadani and were defeated at their northern stronghold at Pangani (8 May 1889).

Bagbag ❙ 1899 ❙ Philippine-American War

Two days after the setback at Quinqua, American commander Arthur MacArthur advanced north from Malolos, and Colonel Irving Hale's Brigade on his right wing met Philippine General Antonio Luna defending the Bagbag River, where he had cut an important bridge. While both sides suffered heavy losses in fierce fighting, Luna eventually fell back on Calumpit (25 April 1899).

Bagbrades ❙ 203 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Bagradas

Bagh ❙ 1919 ❙ 3rd British-Afghan War

Weeks after the incident at Amritsar in the Punjab, Amir Amanullah of Afghanistan sent Saleh Mohammad across the "Durand Line" to occupy the Indian village of Bagh, which controlled water supply for Landi Kotal. British troops under General George Crocker advancing from Landi Kotal were driven off by a strong Afghan defence, but succeeded in a second assault (9–11 May 1919).

Baghavand ❙ 1735 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

Regent Nadir Kuli fought to recover Persian territory from Turkey and won a great victory at Leilan in 1733, then made peace with Baghdad. However, Sultan Mahmud I assembled a fresh army at Kars, in modern Armenia, and on the nearby Plain of Baghavand near Erivan, Nadir defeated and killed Turkish commander Abdula Koprulu. Threatened by Russia, Turkey quickly made peace (19 June 1735).

Baghdad ❙ 809–811 ❙ Muslim War of Succession

Following the death of the Abbasid Caliph Harun al-Rashid, civil war broke out between his sons—al-Amin, the new Caliph, and al-Ma'mun, subordinate ruler of Khorasan. The rebel Khorasan army, under Tahir ibn Husain, besieged Baghdad for two years, and, when it fell, al-Ma'mun replaced his brother as Caliph. The deposed al-Amin was later killed attempting to escape.

Baghdad ❙ 1055 ❙ Seljuk Wars of Expansion

When his offensive into Byzantine Armenia failed at Manzikert (1054), the Seljuk Toghril Beg turned west against the key city of Baghdad, which had seen civil unrest by Sunni demonstrators. After minor fighting against Abbasid forces outside the city, Toghril was invited in and ended the Buwayid Dynasty. A brief attempt to establish Shi'ite rule was later crushed at Kufah (December 1055).

Baghdad ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

Within days of the Caliph's army being destroyed at Anbar, Hulegu, the Mongol Il-Khan of Iran (grandson of Genghis Khan) struck at the heart of Islam by seizing and sacking Baghdad. The deliberate devastation and impoverishment of the city after a month-long siege is regarded as one of history's most destructive assaults on Islamic learning and culture (18 January–15 February 1258).

Baghdad ❙ 1401 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

The Turko-Mongol Tamerlane captured Baghdad in 1393 as part of his massive campaign of conquest in the west. But shortly after his conquest of Syria following victory at Aleppo in October 1400, Baghdad rose in revolt. In a terrible retribution, Tamerlane returned to Baghdad and reconquered it in a violent assault. He then massacred the population as punishment and destroyed the city (July 1401).

Baghdad ❙ 1534 ❙ Ottoman Conquest of Persia

While Ottoman Sultan Suleiman I of Turkey campaigned in central Europe, Shah Tahmasp of Persia seized Tabriz and Baghdad. Returning to put down the rebellion, Suleiman and his commander Ibrahim Pasha, defeated the Safavid Persians. Although the war continued sporadically for 20 years, the fall of Baghdad marked the start of almost continuous Turkish rule until 1917 (December 1534).

Baghdad ❙ 1587 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Following up the costly Turkish capture of Tabriz (23 September 1585), the new Turkish commander Ferhad Pasha led a fresh invasion and advanced towards Baghdad, where he surprised and defeated a 15,000-strong Persian army in a bloody three-day battle. This decisive victory and the prior fall of Tabriz gave Turkey effective control of western Persia.

Baghdad ❙ 1625–1626 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Ottoman Grand Vizier Hafiz Ahmed Pasha attempted to recapture Baghdad twenty years after Persians under Shah Abbas had routed the Turkish army at Sufiyan to take the city and also Tabriz. But Hafiz was hampered by internal dispute and lack of artillery and, when a large Persian relief army approached after six months, he withdrew with heavy losses (November 1625–4 July 1626).

Baghdad ❙ 1630 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Five years after Turkish forces were repulsed outside Baghdad, Grand Vizier Khuzrev Pasha led a fresh invasion into western Persia where he captured Hamadan, then made another attempt to recapture Baghdad. However, a shortage of supplies and Persian raids forced him to again abandon the siege. The city did not fall until eight years later (6 October–14 November 1630).

Baghdad ❙ 1638 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Following years of inconclusive fighting, the great Sultan Murad IV resolved to recover lost Turkish territory occupied by the Persians. With a mighty and well-equipped expedition, the Sultan marched east against Baghdad. The city fell to a brutal assault after a siege and devastating artillery bombardment and the war was virtually over (15 November–24 December 1638).

Baghdad ❙ 1733 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

When Tahmasp II of Persia was routed by the Turks in 1731 at Hamadan, General Nadir Kuli deposed the Shah and declared himself Regent for the infant Abbas III. Nadir then invaded Ottoman territory and defeated Ahmad Pasha, Governor of Baghdad, at nearby Adana. His siege was driven off after defeat at Karkuk and Baghdad did not fall until after victory at Leilan (January–July 1733).

Baghdad ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Anglo-Indian General Sir Frederick Maude recaptured the Tigris city of Kut-al-Amara, then advanced upriver against Baghdad with 42,000 infantry, 4,000 cavalry and 174 guns. After attempting to hold entrenchments across the Diyala, outnumbered Turkish commander Khalil Pasha withdrew north from Baghdad through Mushahida and Istabulat (5–11 March 1917).

Baghdad ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

See Iraq

Baghdad ❙ 1991 ❙ 1st Gulf War

On the first day of Desert Storm against Iraq, American aircraft began a prolonged air campaign against Baghdad. Hoping to force President Saddam Hussein to the negotiating table, the bombing continued throughout the war, with over 100,000 sorties against Baghdad and other cities. The reputed heaviest raid on Baghdad was on the last night of the war (17 January–28 February 1991).

Baghdad ❙ 2003 ❙ 2nd Gulf War

War began with the "shock and awe" bombardment of Baghdad, which continued as Allied ground forces converged on the Iraqi capital. By 3 April, Americans seized the airport, then raided into the city two days later. Toppling of Saddam Hussein's statue in the city centre symbolised the fall of Baghdad, and the subsequent capture of Tikrit effectively ended the war (20 March–9 April 2003).

Bagh Dera ❙ 1788 ❙ Mughal-Maratha War of Ismail Beg

The Maratha army of Rana Khan Bai and Benoit de Boigne advancing to relieve the Mughal siege of Agra, in northern India, faced the renegade Ismail Beg Hamadani, who was alone after his Pathan allies had withdrawn a month earlier following battle at Chaksana. Ismail was routed in a decisive action at Bagh Dera, a suburb of Agra, then fled by swimming the Jumna (18 June 1788).

Ba Gia ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

Following actions at Binh Gia and Pleiku, Viet Cong forces attacked in the north against Ba Gia, near Quang Ngai, where government troops panicked and fled. After heavy fighting, the Viet Cong were eventually driven off by American air attack, but further failure at Dong Xoai helped convince the United States that only major military intervention would save South Vietnam (29 May–14 July 1965).

Bagneux ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Two weeks after being repulsed at Chevilly, French General Joseph Vinoy led a renewed reconnaissance in force south from besieged Paris. His force of 25,000 men and 80 guns surprised the Prussians at Bagneux, but after the loss of about 400 men on either side, Vinoy was forced to withdraw. The next major sortie from Paris was a week later towards Malmaison (13 October 1870).

Bagradas ❙ 240 BC ❙ Truceless War

When Carthaginian General Hanno was defeated outside Utica by former mercenaries now in revolt, his rival Hamilcar Barca was soon appointed to lead another relief force from Carthage towards the besieged city. A large-scale action at the Bagradas saw rebel leader Spendius heavily defeated, forcing him to raise the siege, and Hamilcar pursued the rebels into the interior.

Bagradas ❙ 203 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Having defeated the Numidians outside Utica in modern Tunisia, the Roman General Publius Scipio the Younger pursued Carthaginian Hasdrubal Gisco and King Syphax of Numidia southwest along the Bagradas (modern Medjerda) River. In a classic cavalry action at an area known as Great Plains, Hasdrubal and his Numidian allies were defeated and Scipio marched to attack Carthage itself.

Bagradas ❙ 49 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

While Julius Caesar fought the armies of his rival Pompey in Spain at Ilerda, Gaius Curio defeated Publius Atius Varus outside Utica in modern Tunisia, then ill-advisedly marched inland against a relief force under Pompeian ally Juba of Numidia. At the Bagradas (modern Medjerda), Curio was killed and his army crushed. His forces then abandoned the siege of Utica (24 July 49 BC).

Bahadurpur ❙ 1658 ❙ War of the Mughal Princes

In bitter conflict between the sons of the ailing Mughal Emperor Shahjahan, Dara Shikoh the eldest sent his son Sulaiman Shikoh against the second brother Shuja. Aided by the Rajput General Jai Singh, the Imperial army met and routed Shuja near Benares at Bahadurpur. However, Imperial forces were much less successful two months later at Dharmat (24 February 1658).

Bahia ❙ 1624–1625 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars

See Salvador

Bahia ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

The American frigate Constitution (Captain William Bainbridge) met the British frigate Java (Captain Henry Lambert) and the prize William in action off Bahia in Brazil. Lambert was fatally wounded in a classic and bloody ship-to-ship duel, which cost about 150 British casualties. The utterly wrecked British ship had no choice but to surrender (29 December 1812).

Bahia ❙ 1822–1823 ❙ Brazilian War of Independence

See Salvador

Bahía de Cochinos ❙ 1961 ❙ Bay of Pigs Incident

See Bay of Pigs

Bahia de Nipe ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

See Nipe

Bahrain ❙ 1521 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia

When Portuguese forces took Hormuz in the Persian Gulf (1515), commander Diogo Lopes de Sequeira determined to enforce tribute from Mocrin, King of Lasah (modern El-Hassa), and sent Antonio Correa west against Bahrain. Supported by troops from Hormuz under Raez Zarafa, Correa won a bloody victory after Mocrin fell wounded and Portugal held the strategic island for 80 years.

Bahrain ❙ 1602 ❙ Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia

Having secured the strategic Persian Gulf island of Bahrain, the Portuguese ruled with difficulty over years of unrest until there was a full-scale rising by the trader Rukn-el-Din, whose brother had been executed by the Portuguese Governor. Defeated by Persian troops sent by Shah Abbas, the Portuguese were expelled. Twenty years later Shah Abbas sought British aid to also capture Hormuz.

Bahur ❙ 1752 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Following defeat at Trichinopoly in April, French forces advancing on Fort St David, on the coast south of Madras, were intercepted at the nearby village of Bahur by Major Stringer Lawrence and a British-Sepoy force. The French fled after a fierce hand-to-hand struggle, with commander Jacques Kerjean captured. France soon lost again at Covelung and Chingleput (6 September 1752).

Baia, Italy ❙ 1693 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

French Admiral Victor Marie Comte d'Estrées and a squadron of 20 ships moved the focus of the naval campaign from the Atlantic to the Mediterranean, where they surprised the Spanish fleet refitting at Baia, near Pozzuoli in southern Italy. Although they inflicted heavy damage, the French ships were driven off and failed to completely disable the Spanish fleet (June 1693).

Baia, Romania ❙ 1467 ❙ Hungarian National Wars

Shortly after becoming Hopsodar of Moldavia, Stephen the Great was attacked by a greatly superior Hungarian army and fell back into modern northeast Romania. Stephen's largely peasant army won a decisive victory in a brilliant night-time assault on the Hungarian camp at Baia, near Falticeni. Ten years later he was strong enough to defeat the Turks at Rakhova (14 December 1467).

Bailen ❙ 208 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Baecula

Bainsizza ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

See Isonzo (2nd)

Bairen ❙ 1097 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Spanish General Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid—seized Valencia as his personal fief in 1094 and, after defeating a Muslim counter-attack at nearby Cuarte, faced another major offensive 40 miles to the south, on the coast at Bairen. The Almoravid army of King Yusuf ibn Tashfin was again defeated, but El Cid died two years later and Valencia was re-occupied by the Muslims.

Baisieux ❙ 1792 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In the first weeks of the war, Irish-born French General Theobald Comte de Dillon, leading over 2,000 men southeast from Lille towards Tournai, was met by Austrian troops near the Pas de Baisieux. Dillon ordered a retreat which degenerated into a panicked rout and he was killed by his own troops, reportedly while attempting to rally them. Austrians later invaded to besiege Lille (29 April 1792).

Bajhura ❙ 1575 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Tukaroi

Bajo Palacé ❙ 1811 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

See Palacé

Bakdura ❙ 741 ❙ Berber Rebellion

After disastrous defeat at the hands of the Berber Khalid ibn Hamid al-Zanatai at El Asnam in 740, the Umayyad Caliph sent a 30,000-strong Arab army under Kulthum ibn Iyad al-Kushayri and his nephew Baldj ibn Bishr. At Bakdura on the Wadi Sebou in northern Morocco, Kulthum was defeated and killed, along with about 10,000 of his army, and Baldj's cavalry fled to Ceuta.

Bakenlaagte ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

In response to the experienced Colonel George Benson implementing a scorched-earth policy in the Transvaal highveld, south of Middelburg, his convoy was attacked by Louis Botha's commando at Bakenlaagte, just west of Bethal. The British lost 66 killed (including Benson) and 165 wounded in a courageous rearguard action, but the main column managed to withdraw (30 October 1901).

Baker Massacre ❙ 1870 ❙ Piegan Indian Expedition

See Marias

Baker's Cabin Massacre ❙ 1774 ❙ Cresap's War

See Yellow Creek

Baker's Zareba ❙ 1884 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See El Teb (1st)

Bakhamra ❙ 763 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

The Abbasid Caliph's General, Isa ibn Musa, killed Shi'ite rebel Muhammad ibn Abd'Allah at Medina, Saudi Arabia, then turned east against his brother Ibrahim, who had raised a larger revolt at Basra. In battle south of Kufa at Bakhamra, Ibrahim repulsed the Abbasid vanguard before he was thoroughly defeated. Ibrahim was seriously wounded and, when he died a month later, the rebellion ended (21 January 763).

Baksar ❙ 1539 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Chausa

Baksar ❙ 1764 ❙ Bengal War

See Buxar

Baku ❙ 1723 ❙ Russian Invasion of the Caspian

Tsar Peter I wanted to secure the western Caspian and, after seizing Derbent without resistance in 1722, sent a flotilla from Astrakhan under General Mikhail Matyushkin against Baku. The city had to surrender following a four-day bombardment by land and sea, but the financial burden of the settlement eventually became too great and in 1735 Baku was returned by treaty to Persia (26 June 1735).

Baku ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

With Armenian independence declared after Sardarapat, local nationalists seized the Caspian city of Baku and British General Lionel Dunsterville marched northeast from Baghdad to support them against the Turkish "Army of Islam." Dunsterville withdrew after bloody fighting, though armistice in November forced Turkey to give up Baku and most of the Caucasus (4 August–14 September 1918).

Balad Bani Bu Ali ❙ 1821 ❙ Anglo-Arab Wars

To avenge Britain's defeat in a rash attack against the Banu Bu Ali at Sur in November, a fresh expedition under General Lionel Smith was sent against the Arabs in northeast Oman. Battle at Balad Bani Bu Ali, southwest of Sur, saw costly losses on both sides before the Arabs were heavily defeated. Smith razed their fortress and more prominent prisoners were sent in captivity to India (2 March 1821).

Balaga ❙ 1815 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

A month after defeat at Chire, Spanish Colonel Sebastián Calzada advanced with 1,800 infantry and a cavalry corps on the Rio Chitagá, east of Bucaramanga, held by Patriot forces of Governor Custodio García Rovira under General Rafael Urdaneta. Heavy fighting at nearby Balaga saw Urdaneta decisively defeated and Calzada soon met García Rovira in battle at Cachirí (25 November 1815).

Balaguer ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Fort Balaguer

Balaklava ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

Russian Prince Alexander Menshikov attempted to break the Anglo-French siege of Sevastopol at nearby Balaklava, where his cavalry was repulsed by the Heavy Brigade (General Sir James Scarlett) and the infantry stand of the 93rd Highlanders (Sir Colin Campbell). However, British cavalry (Lord Cardigan) were destroyed in the pointless Charge of the Light Brigade (25 October 1854).

Balane ❙ 1594 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

Attempting to influence the succession in Kandy, in central Ceylon (modern Sri Lanka), Portuguese Pedro Lopes de Sousa enthroned Sinhalese Princess Kusumasana Devi (the Catholic convert Dona Catherina). However, the legitimate ruler Konappu Bandara repulsed the Portuguese and de Sousa was defeated and killed near Balane. Konappu then married Devi and ruled as Vimala Dharma.

Balangiga ❙ 1900 ❙ Philippine-American War

As guerrilla war dragged on, Philippine General Vicente Lukban surprised the American garrison at Balangiga, on Samar, where Captain Thomas W. Connell and 48 men were hacked to death. Only 23 survived, most wounded. Captain Edwin V. Bookmiller then arrived to avenge the "Balangiga massacre" and General Jacob H. Smith inflicted bloody retaliation (28 September 1900).

Balapur ❙ 1720 ❙ Mughal-Hyderabad War

Following his victory at Ratanpur (19 June), the ambitious Nizam-ul-Mulk faced another Imperial army under Alam Ali Khan, nephew of king-maker Husain Ali Khan. Near Balapur, southwest of Akola, the Imperials fled after Alam Ali Khan was killed. The Mughal Governor of Hyderabad submitted to Nizam-ul-Mulk, who founded the independent state of Hyderabad (10 August 1720).

Balarath ❙ 591 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars
See Ganzak

Balat ❙ 1119 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars
See Antioch, Syria

Balathista ❙ 1014 ❙ Byzantine Wars of Tsar Samuel

Bulgarian Tsar Samuel again invaded Byzantine territory after a repulse at Spercheios in 996, and Emperor Basil II launched a decisive counter-offensive, crushing Bulgaria's army at Balathista in the Struma Valley. A claimed 15,000 Bulgarian prisoners were blinded and sent home to Tsar Samuel, who reputedly died of shock. Bulgaria was soon absorbed into the Byzantine Empire (29 July 1014).

Balaton ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
See Lake Balaton

Balbergkamp ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)
See Andalsnes

Balbriggan ❙ 1920 ❙ Anglo-Irish War

When two Royal Irish Constabulary officers were murdered by Republicans, their "Black and Tan" colleagues from Gormanston Barracks attacked Balbriggan, 20 miles north of Dublin, where it had happened. The notorious "Sack of Balbriggan" saw the small town virtually destroyed and, three months later, similar punishment was meted out to the Sinn Fein city of Cork (20 September 1920).

Baler ❙ 1898–1899 ❙ Philippines War of Independence

Despite Spain ceding the Philippines to America, a tiny Spanish garrison at Baler, in eastern Luzon, held out under Captain Enrique de las Morenas and, later, Lieutenant Saturnio Martin Cerezo. When a relief party under American naval Lieutenant James C. Gillmore was captured by Filipino troops, Cerezo finally surrendered with the full honours of war (1 July 1898–2 June 1899).

Balikpapan ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
See Macassar Strait

Balikpapan ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

In the last Allied landing of the war, Australian General Edward Milford took 32,000 men against Balikpapan in eastern Borneo, where there was severe fighting to secure the port and the "Milford highway" inland. Australia's largest operation cost 221 Australians and about 1,800 Japanese dead and Admiral Shoichi Kamada held out until the end of the war (1 July–15 August 1945).

Baliqiao ❙ 1860 ❙ 2nd Opium War

With the Dagu Forts secured, British General Sir James Hope Grant and French General Charles Cousin-Montauban were blocked southeast of Beijing near Tongzhou by Prince Senggelinqin. A brilliant action at the Baliqiao (Palikao) Bridge saw the Chinese routed. Beijing surrendered, conceding foreign trade to end the war, and the French commander became Comte de Palikao (21 September 1860).

Balkans ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

Marshal Wilhelm List was sent to secure Germany's Balkan flank before invading Russia, and launched a brilliant campaign against Yugoslavia and Greece. The Yugoslav capital Belgrade fell within a week. German Panzers then swept though Greece, forcing British and Commonwealth forces to withdraw to Crete, where they were defeated by an airborne assault (April–May 1941).

Balkans ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

With Soviet forces sweeping across the Dnieper at Jassy-Kishinev, Romania changed sides and Bucharest was occupied (31 August). Bulgaria did the same with the fall of Sofia (8 September) and Marshal Fedor Tolbukhin invaded Yugoslavia. Aided by partisan forces, Tolbukhin took Belgrade after heavy fighting (20 October). The Germans soon evacuated Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece.

Balkh ❙ 1008 ❙ Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars

Ilek Nasr bin Ali of the Karakhan Dynasty invaded northern Afghanistan to capture Balkh and Herat and, in response, Mahmud of Ghazni took a force of Afghans to the Oxus. Ilek Khan's General, Subashi-Tagin, and Qadir Khan of Khotan were routed in a decisive defeat at the Sharkiyan Bridge, on the Plain of Katar near Balkh, and Ilek Nasr did not cross the Oxus again during Mahmud's reign (4 January 1008).

Balkh ❙ 1153 ❙ Wars of the Great Seljuk Sultanate

Forced out of their traditional land in Turkestan by the Kara Khitai, the Ghuzz (Oghuz Turks) took land south of the Oxus near Balkh, where they later rebelled against the Seljuk Sultan Sanjar of Khorasan in a dispute over tribute. Sanjar took a reported 100,000 men against the rebels, but near Balkh he was defeated and captured. The Sultan escaped after two years and died soon afterwards.

Balkh ❙ 1370 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

In the early struggle for Mongol domination, Tamerlane turned against his brother-in-law and former ally Husayn at Balkh in northern Afghanistan. The city fell by storm after a terrible assault and its citadel and palace were destroyed. Tamerlane offered Husayn safe surrender but allowed his rival to be murdered. Tamerlane was then enthroned as Khan of the local Mongol tribes.

Balkh ❙ 1646 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

When the Uzbek leader Imam Kuli was deposed by Nazr Muhammad, Mughal Emperor Shahjahan marched on Balkh and beat Nazr Muhammad, who was defeated again to the west at Shirbarghan and fled to Persia. The following year, Nazr Muhammad's son Abdul Aziz was beaten trying to retake the city from Mughal Prince Aurangzeb, but the Emperor made peace and withdrew.

Ballinamuck ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

General Joseph Humbert—now with fewer than 850 French and about 1,000 Irish—continued his advance through Sligo and was trapped at Ballinamuck, near Longford, between General Charles Earl Cornwallis (Lord Lieutenant of Ireland) and General Gerard Lake. Humbert surrendered at nearby Cloone after a brief resistance, ending French intervention on British soil (8 September 1798).

Ballivian ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War

Commander General José Félix Estigarribia continued Paraguay's offensive through the Chaco Boreal against Bolivia, with a decisive victory at Cañada el Carmen, then advanced on the nearby strategic fortress at Ballivian. The fortress fell early next day after a brief assault, and retreating Bolivians fled across the nearby Pilcomayo into Argentine territory (17 November 1934).

Ballon ❙ 845 ❙ Breton Rebellion

With Norse Vikings raiding up the rivers of western Europe, Bretons under Nomenoe took the opportunity to rise against Frankish Emperor Charles the Bald. Nomenoe's rebels crushed an Imperial army on the plain of Ballon, near the Vilaine River in Brittany, and the hard-pressed Charles was forced to recognise Brittany as an independent kingdom (22 November 845).

Ball's Bluff ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union General Charles F. Stone and Senator Colonel Edward D. Baker led an unwise offensive in northern Virginia following defeat at Bull Run, attempting to cross the Upper Potomac and march on Leesburg. But at Ball's Bluff they were ambushed and routed by General Nathan G. Evans, with 50 killed (including Baker), 160 wounded and about 700 captured (21 October 1861).

Ballycastle ❙ 1565 ❙ O'Neill Rebellion

Campaigning against Anglo-Scots colonisation of Ulster, Shane O'Neill Lord of Tyrone routed the outnumbered MacDonnells at Ballycastle, Antrim, capturing James MacDonnell and his brother Sorley Boy. The victory made O'Neill master of the north, and while James died a few months later, Sorley Boy remained a prisoner for two years until O'Neill's defeat at Letterkenny (2 May 1565).

Ballygullen ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

Ending the Irish Rising, Wexford rebels gathered at Whiteheaps, near Gorey, came under attack by Loyalist Generals Francis Needham and Sir Thomas Duff. The rebels were driven out of nearby Ballygullen with about 300 killed and the United armies soon officially surrendered. Rebel leaders Anthony Perry and Father Mogue Kearns were later captured and hanged (5 July 1798).

Ballymore ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

See Tubberneering

Ballynahinch ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

As the Irish Rising continued, rebels under a draper named Henry Munro occupied Ballynahinch, south of Belfast, in County Down. Loyalist General Sir George Nugent marched from Belfast through Saintfield with 1,600 men and eight guns and drove the rebels out. The town was pillaged and fired, and Munro was later court-martialled and hanged (13 June 1798).

Balochpur ❙ 1623 ❙ Rebellion of Prince Shahjahan

At a time of war against Persia in Afghanistan, Mughal Prince Shahjahan rebelled against his father Emperor Jahangir and raised an army of dissident nobles. However, at Balochpur, south of Delhi, the rebel army was heavily defeated by Imperial General Mahabat Khan. After further defeat at Damdama, Shahjahan later made peace with his father and succeeded to the throne (March 1623).

Baltimore ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

British General Robert Ross burned Washington after Bladensburg, then sailed east to capture Baltimore from General Samuel Smith. General John Stricker blocked his advance and, after Ross was mortally wounded, Colonel Arthur Brooke was beaten at North Point. A naval bombardment next day of Baltimore's defence at Fort McHenry failed and the entire force withdrew (12 September 1814).

Bamako ❙ 1883 ❙ Franco-Mandingo Wars

Continuing the French offensive against Mandingo leader Samory Touré after a narrow victory in 1882 at Kéniéra, French Colonel Gustave Borgnis-Desbordes attacked Samorian forces at Bamako, in modern Mali. With just 242 men against about 5,000, Borgnis-Desbordes won a remarkable victory to secure French presence on the Niger. Samory agreed to withdraw east of the river (2–5 April 1883).

Bamburgh ❙ 1095 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

Facing rebellion by Robert de Mowbray Earl of Northumberland, William II Rufus captured Newcastle and Tynemouth, then besieged the coastal fortress of Bamburgh. Mowbray was captured after a false offer of negotiation and his wife Mothilde de Laigle surrendered the castle after a threat to blind her husband in front of her. The Earl was dispossessed and imprisoned for 30 years.

Bamburgh ❙ 1464 ❙ Wars of the Roses

With the Lancastrians recently defeated at Hedgeley Moor and Hexham, Richard Neville Earl of Warwick and his brother John Lord Montagu (now Earl of Northumberland) besieged the last Yorkist stronghold at Bamburgh, held by Sir Ralph Grey and Sir Humphrey Neville. The castle surrendered after heavy bombardment and Grey was executed, ending the war in the north (25 June–10 July 1464).

Bamian ❙ 1221 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

The Mongol Genghis Khan marched into Afghanistan to meet a counter-offensive by Prince Jalal-ud-din of Khwarezm and was blocked at the once-important Bhuddist centre of Bamian, northwest of Kabul. When the Khan's grandson Moetuken was killed after taking Bamian by storm, the city and its population were destroyed. Genghis Khan pursued Jalal-ud-din to battle months later at the Indus.

Bamian ❙ 1840 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Campaigning against deposed Amir Dost Muhammad and the Wali of Khulum, Brigadier William Dennie and about 1,000 men defeated a reported 10,000-strong Afghan army near Bamian, about 80 miles northwest of Kabul. Dost Muhammad and his son Afzal Khan escaped the defeat, but a further loss at Parwan soon persuaded the former Amir to surrender in Kabul (18 September 1840).

Banbury ❙ 1469 ❙ Wars of the Roses

See Edgecote

Banda, India ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Advancing northeast from the capture of Sagar in February, a force of only about 1,000 under General Sir George Whitlock met the rebel Nawab of Banda and 7,000 men outside Banda, 50 miles south of Cawnpore. Nawab Ali Bahadur was routed, losing 17 guns and over 400 killed, and fled with his army to Kalpi, abandoning Banda and its palace for Whitlock's army to plunder (19 April 1858).

Banda, Indonesia ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Ambon

Bandera Pass ❙ 1841 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

Ambushed by Comanche northwest of San Antonio at Bandera Pass, a badly outnumbered Texas Ranger patrol under Captain Jack Coffee Hayes drove off the Indians with heavy losses, perhaps the first success with the newly introduced five-shot Patterson Colt revolvers. This semi-legendary action was later immortalised as an engraving on the new six-shot Walker revolvers (June 1841).

Bandoeng Strait ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Lombok Strait

Bangalore ❙ 1791 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War

When Tipu Sultan of Mysore renewed war against Britain, Governor-General Charles Earl Cornwallis took command and besieged Bangalore on the Deccan Plateau. After capturing the town and killing Bahadur Khan, Earl Cornwallis attacked and stormed Tipu's nearby camp, inflicting heavy casualties. He then advanced towards Seringapatam and Arikera (5–21 March 1791).

Bang Bo ❙ 1885 ❙ Sino-French War

See Lang Son

Bangil ❙ 1706 ❙ Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Intervening in a Javanese war, Dutch forces won at Kartosuro in 1705 to install the pliant Pakubuwana and pursued his dethroned nephew Amangkurat II into eastern Java, where he had fled to the warrior Surapati. When Surapati was killed in battle at Bangil, south of Surubaya, Amangkurat was eventually pardoned. But he was later treacherously arrested and exiled (16 October 1706).

Bangor ❙ 1282 ❙ English Conquest of Wales

Attempting to subdue Llewellyn ap Gruffydd of Wales, who had supported Simon de Montfort against him, Edward I attacked the Welsh Prince in Anglesea. Royal forces built a bridge of boats across the Straits of Menai near Bangor, but commander Lord Luke de Tany was killed in a disastrous attack when the bridge broke. Edward withdrew, then attacked next month at Aber Edw (6 November 1282).

Baniyas ❙ 198 BC ❙ 5th Syrian War

See Paneas

Baniyas ❙ 1157 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Having captured Damascus, Sultan Nur-ed-Din of Aleppo marched southwest to besiege the Crusader fortress at Baniyas, in the upper Jordan Valley. A Christian army was heavily defeated in a major battle nearby and Baniyas Township fell three days later. The Muslims then withdrew before a Crusader army under Baldwin III of Jerusalem and the citadel held out for seven years (18 May 1157).

Baniyas ❙ 1179 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Sultan Saladin was campaigning west from Damascus when he was challenged in the Jordan Valley by Baldwin IV of Jerusalem and Raymond of Tripoli. Near the Templar fortress of Baniyas, Saladin put the Crusaders to flight with heavy losses. King Baldwin and Count Raymond escaped, but Templar Grandmaster Odo de Saint-Armand was captured. He died soon after in prison (10 June 1179).

Banki ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Concluding his campaign north of the Gaghara, British commander Sir Colin Campbell drove the rebels out of Musjidiah, then attacked northeast of Nanpara at Banki (near modern Nepalganj) on the Nepal border. After a brief action, with further losses at nearby Sidonia Ghat, Nana Sahib fled across the river into Nepal. Rebel leader Mehndi Husain surrendered a week later (31 December 1858).

Ban Me Thuot ❙ 1975 ❙ Vietnam War

After preliminary success in the south at Phuoc Binh in January, North Vietnam began its final offensive to conquer the south, with General Van Tien Dung's men and tanks storming into the central highlands to converge on Ban Me Thuot. The Darlac provincial capital fell in two days of heavy fighting and the main Communist force swung south through Xuan Loc towards Saigon (10–11 March 1975).

Bannikatti ❙ 1565 ❙ Wars of the Deccan Sultanates

See Talikota

Bannockburn ❙ 1314 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Edward II marching north to relieve the Scots siege of Stirling was defeated two miles away by Robert the Bruce, whose spearmen destroyed the English cavalry in marshy ground as they attempted to cross the stream at Bannock (Bannockburn). It was England's worst defeat against Scotland and war dragged on with further Scots victories in 1319 at Myton and in 1322 at Byland (24 June 1314).

Banos ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marching west from Talavera de la Reina towards Portugal, a small Anglo-Portuguese force led by General Sir Robert Wilson crashed into French Marshal Michel Ney returning to Salamanca after supporting Marshal Nicolas Soult pursuing the British out of Spain. Attempting to hold the mountain pass at Banos, north of the Tagus, Wilson's Lusitania Legion was utterly routed (12 October 1809).

Bantam ❙ 1601 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars

Portuguese Admiral Andre Furtado de Mendonça launched an effort to secure western Java and blockaded the new Dutch factory at Bantam, where his 28-strong fleet was attacked by just five Dutch ships from Sumatra under Admiral Wolphert Harmensz. A prolonged action saw the Portuguese driven off with two ships lost and Harmensz sailed on to the Moluccas (27–30 December 1601).

Bantam ❙ 1618 ❙ Early Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Determined to capture the spice trade, Dutch forces attacked the British trading outpost at Bantam, in northwest Java. However, a British fleet under Sir Thomas Dale arrived to save Bantam, and Dutch Governor Jan Pieterszoon Coen was defeated in a three-day naval action and withdrew to the Moluccas. In May 1619 Coen returned to attack nearby Jakarta (27–30 December 1618).

Banten Bay ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Sunda Strait

Bantia ❙ 208 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

With the war in Italy stalling, Consuls Titus Crispinus and Marcus Marcellus were marching south to support the siege of Locri, when Hannibal sent a Carthaginian force which ambushed the Romans near their camp at Bantia, southeast of Venusia. In sharp fighting, Marcellus was killed, depriving Rome of one of its most effective Generals, and Crispinus was mortally wounded.

Bantry Bay ❙ 1689 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

In support of deposed James II of England, Louis XIV of France sent a large fleet to Ireland with supplies and reinforcements. While Marquis Francois de Chateaurenault was unloading in Bantry Bay, County Cork, he was attacked by Admiral Arthur Herbert Earl of Torrington. The English squadron was badly mauled and the French returned safely to Brest (1 May 1689).

Bantry Bay ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

Attempting to land French troops in Ireland, Commodore Morard de Galles sailed from Brest with 43 ships and about 15,000 troops under General Lazare Hoche, supported by Irish rebel Wolfe Tone. In heavy weather, the fleet took refuge in Bantry Bay, southwestern Ireland, then abandoned the invasion. Eleven ships were lost to further storms and British naval action (24–27 December 1796).

Banyaluka ❙ 1737 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War

While Austrian commander Count Friedrich von Seckendorff marched down the Morava against Nish, Prince Joseph Hildberghausen took a second force and overran Bosnia. But when the Prince attempted to besiege Banyaluka he was heavily defeated by Bosnian Vizier Ali Pasha Hekimoghlu. Seckendorff came to his aid and was soon defeated at Valjevo (4 August 1737).

Banyas ❙ 1157 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Baniyas

Banyas ❙ 1179 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Baniyas

Banyuls ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Figueras

Baoding ❙ 1928 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

As Chiang Kai-shek conquered northern China, Manchurian warlord Zhang Zuolin in Beijing arrayed his armies to defend the capital. To the southwest, Nationalist General Feng Yuxiang besieged Baoding. He was driven off by a massive counter-attack by Zhang's army and reinforcements from Li Zongren restored the front. Beijing soon fell (17–25 May 1928).

Baoji ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Two months after victory at Yichuan, Communist General Peng Dehuai's over-ambitious advance towards Sichuan was blocked in southern Shaanxi near Baoji (Paoki) by Muslim cavalry under General Ma Pufang, while pursuing Nationalist divisions from Yan'an attacked his rear. Peng lost almost half his force, but had his revenge against Ma a year later near Xi'an (27–28 April 1948).

Bapaume ❙ 1870–1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

General Louis Léon Faidherbe led a mid-winter French offensive on the Somme to secure a tactical victory on the Hallue in December and later advanced to relieve besieged Péronne. At nearby Bapaume, he outnumbered and defeated General August von Goeben (3 January). But facing German reinforcements he abandoned Péronne, which fell five days later (26 December 1870–9 January 1871).

Bapaume ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In the main attack of the Allied offensive east from Amiens, British Generals Julian Byng and Sir Henry Rawlinson crossed the Ancre to outflank Albert and attacked Bapaume, southeast of Arras. After the fall of Bapaume (29 August), German forces tried to make a stand and were driven off in very heavy fighting, then fell back to the Hindenburg Line (22 August–2 September 1918).

Baphaeum ❙ 1301 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Expanding rapidly west along the Black Sea's southern shore, the Ottoman ruler Osman's horsemen attacked outlying possessions of Emperor Andronicus II, whose son Micheal was commander in Asia. At Baphaeum (near Nicomedia) an Imperial army under General Muzalon was crushed and fled before the Turks, who advanced to the Asian shore of the Bosphorus (27 July 1301).

Baran ❙ 1920 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

Determined to crush Muhammad Abdullah Hassan of Somaliland, a large British force attacked his northern forts. Although Medishe was abandoned after heavy bombing, Dervishes held firm at Baran. Colonel John Wilkinson took the key fort at bayonet point, and Jidali to the west also fell. Access to the coast was then cut off at Galiabur, and the Mullah withdrew south to Taleh (23–24 January 1920).

Baranovitchi ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

Russian General Aleksei Evert opened the second phase of the Brusilov Offensive by attacking the salient north of Pinsk around Baranovitchi. Despite unprecedented artillery bombardment, the Austro-German Divisions held firm and, after the failed action had cost 80,000 Russian casualties, General Aleksei Brusilov moved the offensive south towards Brody and Kovel (2–9 July 1916).

Barari Ghat ❙ 1760 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

As Afghans moved into the decaying Mughal Empire, Afghan General Ahmed Shah Durrani—on his fifth invasion—was checked at Lahore, then met Maratha Chief Dattaji Sindhia at Barari Ghat on the Jumna River north of Delhi. The Maratha army was destroyed in a surprise attack and Dattaji was killed. The victory led directly to the great Afghan triumph a year later at Panipat (9 January 1760).

Barari Tangi ❙ 1920 ❙ Waziristan Campaign

Following failed peace talks after defeat at Ahnai Tangi, Mahsud in Waziristan reinforced a position on the Tank Zam River at Barari Tangi, including the strong bluff "Gibraltar." General Andrew Sheen launched two night assaults under General Frederic Lucas, who drove the tribesmen off. They turned for aid to Afghanistan, but were soon beaten again at Aka Khel (23–25 January 1920).

Barataria ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

Concerned by British overtures to the pirates and smugglers of Barataria, on Grand Terre off the Mississippi Delta, Louisiana Governor William Claiborne sent a combined force under Commodore Daniel Patterson and Colonel George Ross. The pirate stronghold fell after a brief bombardment and their Chief Jean Lafitte later supported the Americans at New Orleans (16 September 1814).

Barbacoas ❙ 1824 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

Despite defeat in 1823 at Ibarra and Catambuco, Colonel Augustín Agualongo renewed the Royalist rebellion in Pasto against Governor Juan José Flores. West of Pasto at Barbacoas, the rebels were routed by Patriot Colonel Tomas Cipriano de Mosquera (who was badly wounded). Agualongo was captured and executed and the Royalist rising was finally crushed (1 June 1824).

Barba de Puerco ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

With British forces under General Robert "Black Bob" Craufurd defending the Agueda, northwest of Ciudad Rodrigo, General Claude-Francois Ferey took 600 men across the bridge at San Felice de los Gallegos to surprise the British at Barba de Puerco. Colonel Sydney Beckwith repulsed Ferey after costly losses, but within months Ciudad Rodrigo fell to the French (19–20 March 1810).

Barbastro ❙ 1837 ❙ 1st Carlist War

A week after defeat at Huesca, new Spanish commander General Marcelino Oráa and French Foreign Legion Colonel Joseph Conrad attacked Spanish pretender Carlos V northwest of Monzón at Barbastro. Despite massive superiority, Oráa was repulsed with very heavy losses, including Conrad killed. The "old" Legion was effectively destroyed as a fighting force (2 June 1837).

Barbosthene Mtns ❙ 192 BC ❙ Spartan-Achaean Wars

See Mount Barbosthene

Barbourville ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Advancing into southeastern Kentucky from Cumberland Ford, Confederate General Felix K. Zollicoffer sent Colonel Joel A. Battle against Union forces training near Barbourville. After the recruits withdrew, a rearguard of 300 militia under Captain Isaac J. Blacks attempted to block Battle. However, the militia were dispersed and he destroyed the Union camp (19 September 1861).

Bárbula ❙ 1813 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Loosely blockaded in Puerto Cabella after defeat in July at Taguanes, Spanish General Juan Domingo Monteverde received 1,300 reinforcements under Colonel José Miguel Salomón and counter-attacked Simón Bolívar's Republicans. At Bárbula, north of Valencia, Monteverde was defeated and wounded. Salomón's regulars lost three days later at Las Trincheras (30 September 1813).

Barbury ❙ 556 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Beranbyrg

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1641 ❙ Catalonian Uprising

Pedro Santa Coloma, Spanish Viceroy in Catalonia, arrested one of the Catalonian deputies and was murdered in the riots and uprising which followed (sometimes known as the Reapers War for the agricultural workers who took part). A Royalist army under the Marques de los Velez sent to suppress the rebels was defeated outside the walls of Barcelona.

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1642 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Cruising off Catalonia, French Admiral Jean-Armande de Maillé-Brézé and Chevalier de Cangé met a slightly smaller Spanish fleet near Barcelona under Admiral Sancho de Urdanivia. A confused and indecisive action ensued, in which the Spanish lost two vessels and Cangé went down with his ship. The Spanish withdrew to Minorca and Brézé eventually returned to Toulon (30 June 1642).

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1652 ❙ Catalonian Uprising

Following years of peasant rebellion in Catalonia, King Philip IV took advantage of the devastation caused when the area was struck by famine and plague, to recapture Barcelona. After a terrible siege, the city was starved into surrender. Against the advice of his counsellors, the Spanish King then wisely granted a general amnesty and the area returned to allegiance to the Crown.

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1695 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

Louis Duke de Vendôme took French command in Spain from Marshal Anne-Jules de Noailles and laid siege to Barcelona, supported at sea by Admiral Jean d'Estrées. The city was well provisioned and strongly garrisoned, but after a large Spanish relief force under Viceroy Francisco de Velasco was surprised and heavily defeated, Barcelona quickly capitulated (4 June–10 August 1695).

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

When an Anglo-Dutch fleet under Admiral Sir George Rooke arrived off Barcelona, a small marine force led by Prince George of Hesse landed and demanded the city's surrender. However, Governor Francisco de Velasco refused to yield. The inadequate force re-embarked after a half-hearted bombardment and the Allies withdrew, returning to try again a year later (17–30 May 1704).

Barcelona, Spain (1st) ❙ 1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Despite previous Allied failure, Admiral Sir Clowdesley Shovell and Charles Mordaunt Lord Peterborough besieged Barcelona, where Prince George of Hesse was killed capturing the nearby fortress of Montjuich (2 September). Governor Francisco de Velasco surrendered Barcelona after some bombardment and Archduke Charles was proclaimed King (11 August–28 September 1705).

Barcelona, Spain (2nd) ❙ 1705–1706 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Following the fall of Barcelona in September 1705 to Charles Mordaunt Lord Peterborough, the city suffered a renewed siege by Philip V of Spain and Marshal Count René de Tessé. With Admiral Louis de Bourbon Comte de Toulouse repulsed by Admiral Sir John Leake, and a threatened English invasion from Portugal, Philip abandoned the siege (November 1705–30 April 1706).

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1713–1714 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

As hostilities came to an end, the Catalans continued fighting and a large Franco-Spanish Royalist army, led by General Antonio de Villaroel, was sent against Barcelona. Following a 13-month siege, with terrible losses and no quarter on either side, Marshal James Duke of Berwick took command and stormed the city, forcing a surrender to end the war in Spain (August 1713–11 September 1714).

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Cardedeu

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

When Nationalist forces attempted to secure the key cities of Spain, cavalry General Fernández Burriel met strong opposition trying to seize Barcelona. He was then reinforced by General Manuel Goded from Majorca, but very heavy urban fighting against militia and anarchists saw the rebels overrun, with Goded captured and executed. The rising also failed in Madrid (18–19 July 1936).

Barcelona, Spain ❙ 1938–1939 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Having blunted the Republican offensive on the Ebro in November, about 350,000 Nationalist troops counter-attacked across the river into Catalonia. General Juan Yagüe seized Tortosa after heavy fighting (13 January), then advanced on Barcelona, where Prime Minister Juan Negrín fled. The city fell two days later, and within two months the war was over (23 December 1938–26 January 1939).

Barcelona, Venezuela ❙ 1817 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Patriot leader Simón Bolívar returned to Venezuela and fortified the city of Barcelona, which successfully held off a siege by the forces of Spanish commander Pablo Morillo under General Pascual del Real and later General Juan Aldama. Bolívar later departed to besiege Angostura, and General Raimundo Freites was left to eventually surrender the city (January–5 August 1817).

Bard ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

As Napoleon Bonaparte crossed the Alps into northern Italy, he was held up leaving the St Bernard Pass by the stubbornly defended fortress of Bard. While the village fell on 22 May and some troops were able to pass, the Austrian garrison continued to delay the advance of Bonaparte's main army and heavy equipment, until the fortress was forced to surrender (21 May–1 June 1800).

Bardia ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

General Richard O'Connor crushed Italy's invasion of Egypt at Sidi Barrani, then pursued Marshal Rudolfo Graziano into Libya and attacked General Annibale Bergonzoli at Bardia. Following land and naval bombardment, Bardia was stormed by General Iven Mackay's Australians, who took almost 40,000 prisoners, and O'Connor raced west towards Tobruk (3–5 January 1941).

Bareilly ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

With Lucknow secured in March, General Sir Colin Campbell marched into Rohilkhand, where the rebels had appointed Khan Bahadur Khan as viceroy. In an early morning attack on Bareilly, Campbell defeated Khan outside the city. The rebel leader fled during the night, ending his rule in Rohilkhand, and Bareilly was captured next day after a brief bombardment (5–6 May 1858).

Barents Sea ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

When Admiral Oskar Kummetz led the heavy cruiser Hipper, pocket battleship Lützow and six destroyers against convoy JW51B in the Barents Sea near Bear Island, he met fierce resistance from the destroyer escort (Captain Robert Sherbrooke) and Admiral Robert Burnett's cruisers. The timid Kummetz withdrew with heavy damage and one destroyer lost (31 December 1942).

Barentu ❙ 1985 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

On a fresh offensive in southwest Eritrea, rebel forces used captured Ethiopian tanks and artillery to help storm the strategic stronghold of Barentu. Responding with huge reinforcements, the Ethiopians suffered perhaps 2,000 killed in repeated failed assaults, before air-strikes forced the Eritreans to withdraw. However, Ethiopia then failed yet again to take Nakfa (6 July–25 August 1985).

Barentu ❙ 2000 ❙ Ethiopian-Eritrean War

In order to break a stalemate in their bloody border war, Ethiopia launched a massive offensive, reportedly with over 100,000 men, southwest of Asmara. Pushing deep into Eritrea, they stormed the strategic town of Barentu and bombed the capital. Within days, Eritrea pledged to withdraw from disputed border territory and, after further scattered action, war came to an end (17–18 May 2000).

Barfleur ❙ 1692 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

See La Hogue

Bari ❙ 871 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Although Muslim forces had long been active in southern Italy, an attack on Rome provoked a joint intervention by Western Emperor Louis II and Byzantine Emperor Basil I. Driven back under siege to the Adriatic port of Bari, the Arabs reputedly resisted for three years until a fresh expedition by Louis, supported by the Byzantine navy, finally took the city by storm (2 February 871).

Bari ❙ 1068–1071 ❙ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy

With the Byzantine Empire distracted by a Turkish invasion, the fortified Adriatic port of Bari was subjected to a three-year siege and naval blockade by Norman leader Robert Guiscard. The Emperor Romanus IV Diogenes had already left the campaign and, when the city was finally forced to submit, its surrender marked the end of Byzantine presence in Italy (5 August 1068–April 1071).

Bari ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

A German air-raid on the port of Bari, being used to support the Allied invasion of Italy, triggered a bizarre incident involving the military use of poison gas. Among 16 Allied ships destroyed was the ammunition carrier John Harvey, which blew up with its cargo of 2,000 mustard gas bombs. Hundreds were killed or injured by the gas, including many Italian civilians (2 December 1943).

Bar-le-Duc ❙ 1037 ❙ French Barons' War

After failing in an attempt to gain the throne of Burgundy, the military adventurer Odo (Eudes) II, Count of Blois and Champagne, marched against the principality of Lorraine. Near the city of Bar-le-Duc, on the river Ornain in northeastern France, Odo's army was destroyed by Gozelo (Gothelon) Duke of Upper Lorraine. Odo himself was killed on the battlefield (15 November 1037).

Barletta ❙ 1502–1503 ❙ Italian War of Louis XII

When France and Spain resumed war over Naples, Spanish General Gonsalvo de Cordoba was driven back to Barletta by Louis d'Armagnac Duke of Nemours. The outnumbered Cordoba defeated the French and their Swiss mercenaries in repeated engagements, though Barletta remained under loose blockade for eight months until reinforcements arrived, leading to Spanish victory at Cerignola.

Barnet ❙ 1471 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Returning to England after escaping his ambitious younger brother George Duke of Clarence and Richard Neville Earl of Warwick, Edward IV landed at Ravenspur. When Clarence came over to his side, the brothers attacked Warwick just north of London at Barnet, where Warwick was defeated and killed. After victory at Tewkesbury, Edward had Clarence murdered to secure the throne (14 April 1471).

Barodia ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Hugh Rose and about 3,000 men advancing into central India to relieve the small British garrison at Sagar defeated the army of the Rajah of Banpur at Rahatgarh. However, most of the rebels escaped to a new defensive position at Barodia, northwest of Sagar. The rebels were driven out in a sharp action, but again most escaped, and Rose advanced to Sagar (30 January 1858).

Barquilla ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Two days after Ciudad Rodrigo fell, French General Roch Godart sent a raid west to where General Robert "Black Bob" Craufurd attempted an ambush on the heights of Barquilla, north of Villar de Puerco. The badly outnumbered French under Captain Pierre Gouache repulsed the attack, inflicting costly losses, though Craufurd's reputation was restored two weeks later at the Coa (11 July 1810).

Barquisimeto ❙ 1813 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

After victory at Mosquiteros in October, Republican General Vicente Campo Elías sent Colonel Rafael Urdaneta towards Barquisimeto, where he was blocked by Royalists under Colonel José Ceballos. Revolutionary leader Simón Bolívar himself joined Urdaneta for the attack, but they were heavily defeated—losing 400 killed and 400 captured—and retired on San Carlos (10 November 1813).

Barra ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce
See Inverurie

Barranca de Atenquique ❙ 1858 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform
See Atenquique

Barrancas ❙ 1819 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars
In a fresh government offensive against Estanislao López of Sante Fe, beaten in February at La Herradura, General Juan José Viamonte sent Colonel Rafael Hortiguera, who was met at Barrancas, west of the Parana near Galvez, by the Sante Fe vanguard under Irish-born Pedro Campbell. Hortiguera was badly defeated and the troops of Buenos Aires withdrew from Santa Fe (10 May 1819).

Barraza ❙ 1817 ❙ Chilean War of Independence
See Salala

Barren Hill ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution
Preparing to evacuate Philadelphia, British General Sir Henry Clinton marched against an American force under the Marquis Marie de Lafayette about 12 miles away at Barren Point. Despite an attempted flanking movement by Generals James Grant and Charles Grey, Lafayette slipped away with little fighting. A month later Clinton defeated the Americans at Monmouth (20 May 1778).

Barrier Field ❙ 1600 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States
See Sekigahara

Barriers ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)
See Paris

Barrosa ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
British General Thomas Graham marched west from Gibraltar to relieve the French siege of Barrosa and attacked Marshal Claude Victor's blockade, while the besieged garrison led a powerful sortie. Graham's outnumbered Anglo-Portuguese force won a brilliant victory, but Spanish General Manuel la Pena failed to provide support and the blockade continued (5 March 1811).

Barros Negros ❙ 1851 ❙ 1st Chilean Liberal Revolt
See Loncomilla

Bar-sur-Aube ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)
After victory at Montereau, Napoleon Bonaparte marched north against General Gebhard von Blucher, leaving Marshal Nicolas Oudinot to face Prince Karl Philipp Schwarzenberg and the Allies southeast of Paris near Troyes. Advancing through Bar-sur-Aube, Prince Ludwig Wittgenstein outnumbered and defeated Oudinot, who fell back through Troyes towards Paris (27 February 1814).

Bartow ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Greenbrier River

Basain ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria
See Fihl

Basawapatna ❙ 1696 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars
During the epic siege of the Maratha fortress of Gingee, west of Pondicherry, the Mughal army was in turn besieged by Santaji Ghorpade. Emperor Aurangzeb sent a fresh force under Himmat Khan and, near Basawapatna, Himmat Khan and his son were defeated and killed. However, the ambitious Santaji soon fell out with King Rajaram and was dismissed from service (20 January 1696).

Bashgedikler ❙ 1853 ❙ Crimean War
Advancing into eastern Turkey from Alexandropol following Russian victory at Akhaltsikhe (14 November), Prince Vassily Osipovich Bebutov and about 10,000 veteran troops reached Bashgedikler, near the Armenian border, where they met a Turkish force of about 30,000. The Turks were utterly routed and fled to Kars, leaving behind 26 of their guns (1 December 1853).

Bashiratganj (1st) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

After relieving Cawnpore, General Sir Henry Havelock crossed the Ganges towards besieged Lucknow, and after a costly victory at Unnao, met a strong rebel force later the same day holding the fortified town of Bashiratganj. While the rebels fled following further heavy fighting, Havelock was forced to withdraw west to Cawnpore with heavy losses in casualties and to cholera (29 July 1857).

Bashiratganj (2nd) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Crossing the Ganges from Cawnpore north-east towards besieged Lucknow, General Sir Henry Havelock made a renewed advance on the fortified town of Bashiratganj, where he again drove the rebels out. However, with no cavalry to pursue and Cawnpore itself threatened by fresh mutineer forces, he overruled his impetuous son Major Henry Havelock and fell back on Mangalwar (5 August 1857).

Bashiratganj (3rd) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Henry Havelock led a renewed attempt to decisively defeat rebel forces besieging Lucknow, once more crossing the Ganges towards Bashiratganj, just east of the city. Advancing through waist-deep swamp, his outnumbered force drove the rebels out anew, but casualties and cholera again forced his withdrawal to Cawnpore to meet a fresh rebel threat from Bithur (12 August 1857).

Bashkent ❙ 1473 ❙ Ottoman-Turkoman War

See Erzincan

Basing ❙ 871 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Only two weeks after Aethelred of Wessex led the great Saxon victory northwest of Reading at Ashdown, the defeated Vikings under King Halfdan resumed the offensive south of Reading at Basing. The army of the West Saxons was heavily defeated and lost again within a year at Merton and Wilton (22 January 871).

Basing House ❙ 1643–1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Blocking the road west from London, massive Basing House was held by Royalist John Paulet Marquis of Winchester against brutal attacks by Sir William Waller and Colonel Richard Norton. Oliver Cromwell then led a third siege and Basing was taken by ferocious assault, looted and burned to the ground (7–12 November 1643, June–November 1644 & 8–14 October 1645).

Basoli ❙ 1702 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

With a Mughal Imperial army repulsed in bloody battle on the Sutlej at Nirmohgarh, Sikh Guru Gobind Singh withdrew to Basoli, west of Chamba, where he was supported by the Raja Dharampul of Basoli. An alliance of rival hill Rajas under Ajmer Chand of Kahlur launched a heavy attack on the Sikhs, but they were driven off and Ajmer Chand made a tactical peace with the Guru.

Basque Roads ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

See Aix

Basra ❙ 656 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

See Camel, Iraq

Basra ❙ 1743 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

Nadir Shah of Persia campaigned in northern Mesopotamia, where he laid siege to Mosul, then sent Qoja Khan Shaikhanlu against Basra, near the mouth of the Tigris, defended by Deputy Governor Rustam Aqa. Lacking sufficient artillery, the Persians' assaults were repulsed and, when Nadir Shah faced a rising at home and made peace, the siege was withdrawn (28 August–8 December 1743).

Basra ❙ 1775–1776 ❙ Turko-Persian Gulf War

Jealous of the Turkish port of Basra, Persian Regent Kharim Khan sent a siege force under his brother Sadiq Khan. An Omani fleet broke the blockade, but a relief force from Baghdad was repulsed and Governor Sulaiman Aqa was finally starved into surrender. When Kharim Khan died, Sadiq withdrew in order to claim the throne and the Persian Gulf Port was lost (8 April 1775–16 April 1776).

Basra ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

See Sahil

Basra ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

See Shaiba

Basra ❙ 1982 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Iran refused peace feelers after defeating Iraq at Khorramshahr in May and determined to invade Iraq itself, launching the massive Operation Ramadan offensive towards Basra. In the claimed largest land battle since World War II, three separate "human wave" assaults were driven off by Iraqi artillery and poison gas. The Iranians lost perhaps 30,000 casualties for no real gain (13 July–3 August 1982).

Basra ❙ 1984 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

In a massive campaign to cut the Basra-Baghdad Road and secure the oil complex at Majnoon, Iran launched overlapping offensives north of Basra, which developed into a giant battle of attrition in the Hawizeh Marshes. Iranian forces seized considerable territory but suffered terrible casualties, many to chemical attack, and Iraq's defence finally exhausted the offensive (15 February–19 March 1984).

Basra ❙ 1985 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

After its costly "human wave" offensives of 1984, Iran launched a smaller attack north of Basra. Well protected against chemical attack, the Iranians advanced out of the Hawizeh Marshes behind heavy artillery fire and reached the strategic Basra-Baghdad Road. Stubborn Iraqi defence, aided by powerful air support, eventually drove them back with further costly losses (11–18 March 1985).

Basra ❙ 1987 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Having failed south of Basra around Khorramshahr in December 1986, Iran launched another massive offensive north of the city, which inflicted heavy Iraqi losses and almost reached Basra itself before being driven off with shocking Iranian casualties. A second, smaller attack was also a costly failure and proved to be Iran's last "human wave" assault (8 January–26 February & 6–9 April 1987).

Basra ❙ 2003 ❙ 2nd Gulf War

With the fall of Umm Qasr, more British troops advanced on Iraq's southern city of Basra. While fierce fighting outside Basra saw heavy Iraqi losses in tanks and prisoners, a direct assault was delayed to allow a supposed popular rising. But amid reports of the rising crushed and a humanitarian crisis, the British stormed the city in their largest single attack of the war (21 March–7 April 2003).

Bassano ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Facing a renewed Austrian attempt to relieve the French siege of Mantua, Napoleon Bonaparte won at Calliano, then immediately turned against General Dagobert Wurmser advancing down the Brenta Valley. After an initial loss at Primolano, Wurmser was routed next day at Bassano de Grappa. He then fought his way into Mantua, where he surrendered five months later (8 September 1796).

Bassano ❙ 1866 ❙ 3rd Italian War of Independence

Archduke Albert of Austria defeated the Italians at Custozza (24 June) but withdrew north to defend Vienna from the advancing Prussians. Pursued across the Po at Borgoforte by Enrico Cialdini Duke of Gaeta, the Austrians were attacked near Bassano del Grappa, northwest of Venice. Suffering heavy losses they continued withdrawing and peace with Italy soon followed (21 July 1866).

Bassein, Burma ❙ 1825 ❙ 1st British-Burmese War

When Burma conquered Arakan and attacked British India, General Sir Archibald Campbell defeated Maha Bundoola at Rangoon, then sent Major Robert Sale west against the river port of Bassein. Supported by naval commander Captain Frederick Marryat, Sale stormed the stockade and seized the town, then marched north to join the advance against Danubyu (26 February 1825).

Bassein, Burma ❙ 1852 ❙ 2nd British-Burmese War

After Britain resumed war with Burma for commercial gain, General Henry Thomas Godwin captured Martaban and Rangoon, and within days advanced west against the river port of Bassein. With naval forces under Commodore George Robert Lambert in support, he captured fortresses on both sides of the river following strong resistance, then advanced north against Pegu (19 April 1852).

Bassein, India ❙ 1737–1739 ❙ Portuguese-Maratha War

Maratha forces besieging the Portuguese island fortress of Bassein (modern Vasai) near Bombay gradually captured the outlying positions and repulsed a counter-attack at Thana. Reinforced by Chimnaji Appa, the final attack went in after destruction by massive mines. The four-day battle cost over 5,000 Maratha lives before the Portuguese finally surrendered (March 1737–5 May 1739).

Bassein, India ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

British General Thomas Goddard attempted to secure the approaches to Bombay Harbour, besieging the former Portuguese coastal fortress of Bassein (modern Vasai) seized by the Marathas in 1739. Visaji Pant Lele's 4,000-strong garrison held out against terrible bombardment but surrendered when a massive Maratha relief force was defeated at Doogaur (November–12 December 1780).

Bassianae ❙ 468 ❙ Hun-Ostrogoth Wars

Recovering from the terrible Hun defeat at the Nedao in 454, Attila's son Dengizich crossed the Danube with a large Hun-Goth force and attempted to capture Bassianae, between Belgrade and Sremska Mitrovica. According to Gothic tradition, he suffered a heavy defeat at the hands of the Ostrogoth Walamer and was killed a year later on the lower Danube by the Roman-German General Anagastes.

Bassignano ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Spanish General Count Juan de Gages and French Marshal Jean-Baptiste Desmarets Marquis de Maillebois joined forces in northern Italy to meet an Austro-Sardinian army led by Prince Johann Christian von Lobkowitz at Bassignano, south of Piacenza. Lobkowitz was decisively defeated and was replaced before Austria turned the tables on Maillebois (June 1746) at Piacenza (27 September 1745).

Bastia ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

With the British navy forced out of Toulon in late 1793, Admiral Sir Samuel Hood (1724–1816) invaded Corsica, where he captured San Fiorenzo, then sent seamen and marines under Captain Horatio Nelson against the northeastern port of Bastia. Bastia surrendered after a seven-week siege, along with a French frigate in the port, and Hood moved west to attack Calvi (4 April–21 May 1794).

Bastogne ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As German Panzer forces advanced into the Ardennes, General Heinrich von Lüttwitz besieged the strategic Belgian road and rail centre at Bastogne, defended by American General Anthony McAuliffe. Refusing to surrender with the famous reply "Nuts," McAuliffe held out in bitter cold until relieved by American tanks, and the Germans eventually withdrew (20–26 December 1944).

Bataan ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When General Masaharu Homma invaded the Philippines and seized Manila, Filipino and American forces withdrew west to the Bataan Peninsula and held off initial assaults. After a renewed attack, General Edward King surrendered 77,000 men, of whom up to 10,000 died on the "Death March" to prison camp. After the war, Homma was executed for war crimes (7 January–9 April 1942).

Bataan ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

With Americans facing fierce resistance on Luzon, General Charles Hall landed in the southwest (29 January) to isolate the Bataan Peninsula, aided by Filipino guerrillas under Captain Ramon Magsaysay. A small Japanese force under Colonel Sanenobu Nagayoshi resisted strongly as Hall secured Bataan, while also moving against nearby Corregidor (15–21 February 1945).

Batavia ❙ 1628 ❙ Early Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Sultan Agung of Mataram was determined to regain central Java and sent a large army against the new Dutch city of Batavia (modern Jakarta), defended by Governor Jan Pieterszoon Coen. At the end of a long siege, the Javanese were driven off with terrible losses. General Suriangalaga was forced to return to Mataram, where he was executed for his costly failure (28 August–27 November 1628).

Batavia ❙ 1629 ❙ Early Dutch Wars in the East Indies

In a renewed offensive in central Java, Sultan Agung of Mataram sent a reported 120,000 men against the Dutch city of Batavia (modern Jakarta). While Governor Jan Pieterszoon Coen died during the siege, Antonie van Diemen drove off repeated assaults with very heavy losses. The shattered Javanese withdrew, devastated by starvation and disease (21 August–20 October 1629).

Batavia ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

A British force under General Sir Samuel Auchmuty landed on the Dutch island of Java, where they captured the city of Batavia (modern Jakarta) after storming the nearby position at Fort Cornelius, held by Dutch General Jan Willem Janssens. Java and the neighbouring islands were surrendered to Britain but were returned to Holland at the end of the war (4–28 August 1811).

Batin ❙ 1810 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

Returning to the Danube, Russian General Nikolai Kamenskoi captured Silistria and besieged Ruschuk and Giurgiu, then attacked a large Turkish relief force under Mukhtar Pasha, entrenched at the mouth of the Yantra, east of Svistov at Batin. The Turks were heavily defeated, with their cannon and 5,000 men captured, and Ruschuk and Giurgiu fell three weeks later (7 September 1810).

Batoche ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

General Frederick Middleton led Canadian forces against rebellion in Saskatchewan, advancing north through Fish Creek to besiege the Méti at Batoche, southwest of Prince Albert. When the government forces were reinforced, Batoche was seized with costly losses on both sides. Gabriel Dumont fled to the United States, but Louis Riel surrendered and was hanged (9–12 May 1885).

Batoh ❙ 1652 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

Renewing war in the Ukraine after Bila Tserkva (1651), Polish Hetman Martin Kalinowsky tried to prevent Cossack leader Bogdan Chmielnicki and his Tatar allies joining Moldavia. However, at Batoh, west of Uman, Kalinowksy was routed and killed along with most of his staff. The Tatars changed sides and the Cossacks made peace, placing the Ukraine under Tsar Alexis II (23 May 1652).

Baton Rouge ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When Spain entered the war against Britain in June 1779, Don Bernardo de Galvez, Spanish Governor of Louisiana, secured Manchac (7 September), then attacked and defeated the British garrison at Baton Rouge. He later secured Natchez (30 September) and, the following year, Mobile in British West Florida. Louisiana remained Spanish until sold to France in 1800 (21 September 1799).

Baton Rouge ❙ 1810 ❙ West Florida Revolution

Although the United States purchased Louisiana from France in 1803, Spain refused to give up the fortress at Baton Rouge. Residents and frontiersmen from nearby American territory defeated the garrison in a sharp engagement and proclaimed the independent State of West Florida. The disputed area was annexed into the United States a few weeks later (23 September 1810).

Baton Rouge ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Confederate forces under General John C. Breckinridge advanced on Baton Rouge in an attempt to recover Louisiana, supported by the ram vessel Arkansas. The Union troops initially fell back with General Thomas Williams killed, then regrouped under Colonel Thomas W. Cahill. After scuttling their disabled ship, the Confederates withdrew with almost 500 casualties (5 August 1862).

Battleaxe ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See Sollum-Halfaya

Battle Creek, Idaho ❙ 1878 ❙ Bannock Indian War

When the Bannock Chief Buffalo Horn led his starving people west off the Fort Hall Reservation in southeast Idaho, he was attacked at Battle Creek, south of Boise, by a small force of volunteers from Silver City under Captain Joel Harper. The ill-trained volunteers were driven off, but Buffalo Horn was killed. His people were soon defeated at Silver Creek, Oregon (8 June 1878).

Battle Creek, Texas ❙ 1838 ❙ Kickapoo Indian Wars

In an outbreak of warfare in eastern Texas, a band of about 300 mainly Kickapoo warriors and followers under Chief Benito attacked a survey party of 23 at Richland Creek (renamed Battle Creek) near modern Dawson, northeast of Waco. Seventeen Texans were killed and five injured, and a month later the Kickapoo joined Mexican forces in the Killough Massacre (8 September 1838).

Battleford ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

Encouraged by the success of Métis (Canadian half-breeds) at Duck Lake, Cree Chief Poundmaker (Pitikwahanapiwiyin) took 200 warriors against Battleford on the North Saskatchewan River. With the residents besieged in a fortified stockade, the Cree looted the town before withdrawing when a substantial force approached under Colonel William Otter (30 March–24 April 1885).

Battle Ground ❙ 1811 ❙ Tecumseh's Confederacy

See Tippecanoe

Battle Mountain ❙ 1878 ❙ Bannock Indian War

See Birch Creek

Batu Pahat ❙ 1456 ❙ Thai-Malacca War

A Thai offensive overland against Melaka (modern Malacca) was routed at Ulu Muar (1445) and, eleven years later, Siamese General Awi Dichu led a fresh offensive by sea. An epic naval battle off Batu Pahat saw the forces of Melaka under Bendahara (Chief Minister) Tun Perak secure a decisive victory. Tun Perak served under four Sultans and helped establish Melaka as a maritime power.

Baturin ❙ 1708 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Charles XII of Sweden invaded Russia for victory at Holowczyn in July then turned to the Ukraine, where Cossack leader Ivan Mazeppa declared for the Swedish King. Russian Prince Alexander Menshikov immediately stormed the Cossack capital of Baturin, with its vital stores, destroying the city and its population. Six months later Mazeppa was defeated at Poltava (3 November 1708).

Bau ❙ 1965 ❙ Indonesian-Malaysian Confrontation

Indonesian forces attempting to establish a guerrilla base inside Borneo at Bau, southwest of Kuching, were attacked by Gurkhas under Captain Charles Maunsell. Very heavy fighting saw at least 24 Indonesians killed before they withdrew across the border. Three Gurkhas were also killed and Lance Corporal Rambahadur Limbu won the only Victoria Cross of the war (21 November 1965).

Bauds ❙ 961 ❙ Later Viking Raids on Britain

See Invercullen

Baugé ❙ 1421 ❙ Hundred Years War

When Henry V of England was recognised by Charles VI of France as his heir, the disinherited son—the Dauphin Charles VII—gathered troops (including Scottish mercenaries) and at Baugé, in Anjou, attacked an English force led by Henry's brother Thomas Duke of Clarence. The Duke was defeated and killed and the victory rallied support for the Dauphin (22 March 1421).

Bautzen ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Following Lützen and the capture of Dresden, Napoleon Bonaparte pursued the Allies to the Spree and attacked them at Bautzen. While lacking cavalry for a decisive victory, Bonaparte defeated General Gebhard von Blucher's Prussians and Prince Ludwig Wittgenstein's Russians, driving them into Bohemia. However, the costly French victory yielded neither guns nor prisoners (20–21 May 1813).

Bavay ❙ 57 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

See Sambre

Baxar ❙ 1539 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Chausa

Baxar ❙ 1764 ❙ Bengal War

See Buxar

Baxter Springs ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

On a fresh raid into Kansas after his outrage in August at Lawrence, Confederate guerrilla Colonel William C. Quantrill was driven off from the stockade at Baxter Springs, east of Hopefield, then intercepted a headquarters column nearby under Union commander James G. Blunt. While Blunt and a handful escaped, 80 of his escort were killed, some reportedly in cold blood (6 October 1863).

Bayamo ❙ 1869 ❙ 1st Cuban War of Independence

Opening the Ten Years War, Cuban revolutionaries seized Bayamo, and Donato Mármol was later attacked further north at Saladillo by a large Spanish force under Blas Villate Conde de Valmaseda and Colonel Valeriano Weyler. The rebels lost a reported 2,000 casualties, then burned and evacuated Bayamo. However, war did not end until 1878 with false promises of reform (7 January 1869).

Bayan ❙ 1902 ❙ American-Moro Wars

When Muslim Moros attacked American planters on Mindanao, in the southern Philippines, Colonel Frank Baldwin took 500 men to Bayan on the southern shore of Lake Lanao and captured Fort Bindayan. Next day, the Sultan of Bayan was defeated and killed at Fort Pandapatan. Over 300 Moros died and, a year later, another force defeated them again at nearby Bacolod (2–3 May 1902).

Bayazid ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

In a fresh invasion of Armenia, Russian forces under Prince Vassily Osipovich Bebutov attacked a Turkish division at Bayazid (modern Dogubayazit), southwest of Mount Ararat. The Turks were defeated, with heavy losses in men and equipment, and fell back on the great fortress at Kars. An unwise Turkish counter-offensive from Kars a week later was defeated at Kürük-Dar (29 July 1854).

Bayburt ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

Russian commander Nikolai Yudenich resumed his advance across the Caucasus from Erzurum in February, determined to attack through Bayburt, and split the Turkish forces in front of Erzincan. After very heavy fighting on his left flank around Dumanli Dag, Yudenich drove Turkish General Abdul Kerim back to defeat at Erzincan, then turned south towards Bitlis (2–8 July 1916).

Baylen ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Repulsed south of the Guadalquivir at Mengibar, French General Dominique Vedel fell back on Baylen to join commander General Pierre Dupont de L'Etang against the offensive by Spanish General Francisco Castanos. Outnumbered and disorganised, Dupont could not break through, and four days later he surrendered 20,000 men, a third of Napoleon Bonaparte's force in Spain (16–19 July 1808).

Bay of Bengal ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Cuddalore

Bay of Biscay ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Ushant

Bay of Pigs ❙ 1961 ❙ Bay of Pigs Incident

Concerned over Communist influence in Cuba, US President John Kennedy supported about 1,500 Cuban exiles to land at Bahía de Cochinos (Bay of Pigs). Facing massive opposition, and denied adequate Amercan aid, the ill-advised expedition lost 114 killed and the others captured. While Cuba's army suffered several hundred killed, America bore a humiliating political defeat (17–20 April 1961).

Bayonne ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Two months after Allied forces defeated Marshal Nicolas Soult on the Nive, near Bayonne, British General Sir John Hope crossed the Adour to encircle the French fortress. Governor Pierre Thouvenot stubbornly held out and a sortie on 14 April (after Napoleon Bonaparte had abdicated) cost 800 casualties on each side before the city finally surrendered (27 February–26 April 1814).

Bayou Fourche ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Advancing into eastern Arkansas towards Little Rock, Union Generals John W. Davidson and Frederick Steele were blocked five miles away at the Bayou Fourche by Confederate forces under General John S. Marmaduke. Davidson captured Little Rock that night after heavy fighting, and Marmaduke withdrew southeast down the Arkansas River towards Pine Bluff (10 September 1863).

Baza ❙ 1489 ❙ Final Christian Reconquest of Spain

Ferdinand of Castile and Aragon led the final drive into Muslim Granada, where he laid siege to the key fortress of Baza, west of Granada, held by Sidi Yahya for Abdallah el Zagal, uncle and bitter rival of King Abu Abdallah. Baza surrendered on honourable terms after six months, removing Zagal's forces from the war and permitting Ferdinand to advance on Granada (June–December 1491).

Baza ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In a fresh offensive against General Francois Sébastiani in Granada, Spanish forces under General Joachim Blake advanced as far as Baza in eastern Granada Province before being surprised by French Dragoons and Polish Lancers led by General Édouard Milhaud. Blake was routed with over 1,000 casualties and rapidly withdrew northeast into Murcia (4 November 1810).

Bazavluk ❙ 1648 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

At the start of a Cossack rebellion in the Ukraine against John II Casimir of Poland, Bogdan Chmielnicki led a small force against Bazavluk, on the Dnieper, northwest of Nikopol, where the Polish garrison was overwhelmed. Following this success, Chmielnicki was elected Hetman, and he was joined by Crimean Tatars for victories later that year at Zolte Wody and Pilawce (21 January 1648).

Bazeilles ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Marshal Marie MacMahon withdrawing along the Meuse from Beaumont-en-Argonne was attacked at Bazeilles by Baron Ludwig von der Tann's Bavarians. Next day, the village was abandoned in flames and the French fell back on Balan. MacMahon was severely wounded and General Auguste Ducrot took command for the decisive battle later the same day at Sedan (31 August–1 September 1870).

Bazentin ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Recovering from unprecedented losses east of Albert at the start of the battle of the Somme, General Sir Henry Rawlinson launched a rare night attack towards Bazentin-le-Petit. Advancing after minimal bombardment, the British surprised the Germans and captured Bazentin and 2,000 prisoners. Further east, other forces advanced through Delville Wood (14–17 July 1916).

Beachy Head ❙ 1653 ❙ 1st Dutch War

See Portland, Dorset

Beachy Head ❙ 1690 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

When French Admiral Anne Comte de Tourville entered the English Channel with a powerful fleet, outnumbered English-Dutch ships under Arthur Herbert Earl of Torrington were ordered out to battle. Off Beachy Head, in Sussex, Torrington had 12 ships destroyed for no French losses before de Tourville broke off the pursuit. The English Admiral never again served at sea (30 June 1690).

Beachy Head ❙ 1707 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Cruising close to the English coast, French Admiral Claude Chevalier de Forbin attacked a Portugal convoy west of Beachy Head, escorted by three warships led by Captain Baron Wyld. During a fierce action two British captains died and their ships were captured, along with 22 merchantmen. Wyld's ship was heavily damaged, but later that year he met Forbin again off the Lizard (1 May 1707).

Beacon Hill ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Launceston

Beacon Hill ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

Following victory at Cropredy Bridge (29 June), Charles I pursued Robert Devereux Earl of Essex to siege at Lostwithiel in Cornwall. Partway through the siege Royalist forces under Prince Maurice and Patrick Ruthven Earl of Forth launched a brilliant attack from the east and captured the strategic Beacon Hill. This action led directly to the fall of Lostwithiel (21 August 1644).

Beal na mBlath ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

Soon after the strategic capture of Cork, General Emmet Dalton and Free State commander Michael Collins were ambushed by Republicans to the west at Beal na mBlath, between Macroom and Bandon. Confused fighting saw Collins killed—possibly by "friendly fire." While the Republican cause in the field had been lost, bitter guerrilla war continued until May 1923 (22 August 1922).

Beandun ❙ 614 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Facing an advance across the Cotswolds by a strong British-Welsh force, Cynegils of Wessex and his son Cwichelm met the invaders at a site identified as Beandun (possibly modern Bampton just west of Oxford, or Bindon near Axmouth on the Devon-Dorset border). The Britons were defeated with more than 2,000 killed and were forced to withdraw.

Bean's Station ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General James Longstreet withdrawing northeast from Knoxville, Tennessee, after defeat at Fort Sanders reached Rogersville, then turned against pursuing Union forces under General James M. Shackelford. Heavy fighting on the Holston at Bean's Station forced Shackelford to retire, and Longstreet went into winter quarters further east at Russellville (14 December 1863).

Bear Paw Mountains ❙ 1877 ❙ Nez Percé Indian War

Leading the Nez Percé people across Montana from Canyon Creek towards Canada, Chief Joseph was intercepted short of the border in the Bear Paw Mountains by a large force under General Nelson Miles. After very heavy fighting, Joseph was forced to surrender at the end of his epic march of almost 2,000 miles. He died on a reservation in 1904 (30 September–4 October 1877).

Bear River ❙ 1863 ❙ Bear River Indian War

Resisting Mormon expansion in northern Utah, Shoshoni under Bear Hunter made a stand on the Bear River against 300 California volunteers led by Colonel Patrick E. Connor. In deep snow near Preston, Idaho, the soldiers lost almost 70 casualties. But Bear Hunter and more than 200 Shoshoni were killed, with about 160 women and children captured, virtually ending the war (29 January 1863).

Beattie's Prairie ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Old Fort Wayne

Beaufort ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Facing American commander Benjamin Lincoln on the Savannah, British General Augustine Prevost sent 200 men under Colonel Thomas Gardiner to land in the American rear at Beaufort, on Port Royal Island, South Carolina. Met by militia under Colonel William Moultrie, Gardiner was repulsed with heavy losses. Three months later, Prevost attacked Charleston itself (3 February 1779).

Beaugé ❙ 1421 ❙ Hundred Years War

See Baugé

Beaugency ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Grand Duke Friedrich Franz II of Mecklenburg retook Orleans just days after victory near Loigny, then marched southwest against General Antoine Eugène Chanzy near Beaugency. The outnumbered Germans took Beaugency despite a costly initial repulse, and the French withdrew towards Le Mans when Prince Friedrich Karl approached with reinforcements (7–10 December 1870).

Beaumont-en-Argonne ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Manoeuvring near the Meuse, southeast of Sedan, French Marshal Marie MacMahon moved north through Bazeilles, leaving General Pierre-Louis de Failly to cover his movement. At Beaumont-en-Argonne, de Failly was surprised and heavily defeated by German troops under the Crown Prince Albert of Saxony, losing more than 7,000 men before falling back through Mouzon (30 August 1870).

Beaumont-en-Cambresis ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

During the French attempt to drive off the Anglo-Austrian siege of Landrécies, a French infantry column under General Renee-Bernard Chapuis was defeated to the west near Troisville and Beaumont-en-Cambresis by British and Austrian cavalry under Major General Karl Ott. Following a similar loss at Villers-en-Cauchies, the defeat helped ensure the fall of Landrécies (26 April 1794).

Beaumont Hamel ❙ 1916–1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Ancre

Beaune-la-Rolande ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Following French recapture of Orleans after victory at Coulmiers, General Joseph-Constant Crouzat was immediately sent northeast against Beaune-la-Rolande, held by outnumbered Hanoverians under General Constantin von Voigts-Rhetz. When Prince Friedrich Karl arrived with reinforcements, Crouzat had to withdraw with heavy losses. Orleans itself fell a week later (28 November 1870).

Beauport ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Montmorency Gorge

Beauséjour ❙ 1755 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Threatened by increased French presence on the St Lawrence, an expedition of British regulars and colonials under Colonels Robert Monckton and John Winslow was sent from Boston to besiege Beauséjour, at the head of the Bay of Fundy. Captain Louis Dupont de Duchambon de Vergor surrendered after four days and Britain secured Acadia, part of modern Nova Scotia (13–16 June 1755).

Beaver Creek ❙ 1868 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

Three weeks after relieving Beecher Island, a squadron of Buffalo Soldiers under Captain Louis Carpenter, escorting Major Eugene Carr, were ambushed on Beaver Creek, just inside the border of northwest Kansas. The black troopers held off the attackers for eight hours of courageous action before relief arrived. Carpenter and Carr later disputed who was due the credit (17 October 1868).

Beaver Dam Creek ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In the second of the Seven Days' Battles east of Richmond, Virginia, General Robert E. Lee followed the inconclusive action at Oak Grove by a bold assault on the Union flank north of the Chickahominy at Beaver Dam Creek. The Confederates were repulsed in a costly defeat with over 1,300 men lost, but Union General Fitz-John Porter had to withdraw to Gaines' Mill (26 June 1862).

Beaver Dams ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

With his forces driven back to the Niagara after defeat at Stoney Creek (6 June), American General John Boyd sent Colonel Charles Boerstler southeast from Fort George, Quebec, towards the British outpost at Beaver Dams, held by Lieutenant James Fitzgibbon. Ambushed by Indians under Captain Dominique Ducharme, Boerstler and 450 men surrendered to Fitzgibbon (24 June 1813).

Bécherel ❙ 1363 ❙ Hundred Years War

Having driven the English out of Normandy, the Breton champion Bertrand du Guesclin, in support of Charles of Blois, marched to the siege of Bécherel, northwest of Rennes, and defeated John IV de Montfort, who was contesting the Duchy of Brittany. Despite being driven off, de Montfort was later recognised as Duke, his title confirmed after the death of Blois in battle a year later at Auray.

Beda Fomm ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Driving southwest from Tobruk, General Richard O'Connor crossed Cyrenaica through Mechili to trap the retreating Italians south of Benghazi at Beda Fomm. Marshal Rudolfo Graziani tried to break through, but had to surrender 25,000 men, about 100 tanks and over 1,000 trucks. The British were then diverted to Greece, and the Germans struck back at El Agheila (5–7 February 1941).

Bedcanford ❙ 571 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

After Ceawalin of the West Saxons and his brother Cutha defeated Aethelbert of Kent at Wibbandun in 568, another brother, Cuthwulf, took a force north of the Thames and defeated the Britons at Bedcanford (modern Bedford). The Saxons then captured Limbury, Aylesbury, Bensington and Eynsham. Cuthwulf died later the same year.

Bedford ❙ 571 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Bedcanford

Bedford ❙ 1224 ❙ 1st English Barons' War

Following the decisive Baronial defeat in 1217 at Lincoln, further rebellion flared at Bytham and later at Bedford, where the King's Justiciar Hubert de Burgh besieged Bedford Castle, held by William de Breaute for his brother, the rebel leader Falke. William was hanged when the castle fell after two months, while Falke de Breaute was later dispossessed and banished (20 June–14 August 1224).

Bednur ❙ 1783 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

When Tipu Sultan of Mysore continued his father's war against Britain, General Richard Mathews recaptured the South Indian towns of Bednur and Mangalore, but was besieged at Bendur (modern Nagar) by a massive Mysorean army. Mathews was forced to surrender after ten days' fighting and died in prison, while Tipu went on to besiege Mangalore (17–30 April 1783).

Bedr ❙ 624 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed

See Badr

Bedriacum (1st) ❙ 69 ❙ Vitellian Civil War

After overthrowing Galba, new Roman Emperor Otho faced Vitellius invading from the Rhineland and attempted to block him at the Po, south of Cremona near Bedriacum. The Vitellian Marshals Aulus Caecina Alienus and Fabius Valens secured a decisive victory and Otho killed himself, ending just eight weeks' reign. Vitellius himself was soon defeated at the same location (14 April 69).

Bedriacum (2nd) ❙ 69 ❙ Vitellian Civil War

Vitellius overthrew Otho at Bedriacum in April, then faced rebellion from his own troops, with Marcus Antonius Primus invading from the Danube. The Vitellians were defeated at Bedriacum, near Cremona, and Primus reached Rome, where Vitellius was discovered in hiding and killed. The instability of the "Year of the Four Emperors" ended with the accession of Vespasian (24 October 69).

Beecher Island ❙ 1868 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

Advancing from Kansas into eastern Colorado, a scouting party under Major George Forsyth was attacked by a large war party under the Cheyenne Roman Nose on the dry Arikaree River. Besieged on a mid-stream island, Forsyth held out until relieved for nine days, with 23 casualties including Lieutenant Frederick Beecher killed. Roman Nose was also killed (17–25 September 1868).

Beersheba ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Rebuilding losses suffered at Gaza, new British commander Sir Edmund Allenby ordered a diversionary bombardment of Gaza, then attacked the other end of the line at Beersheba, now under General Erich von Falkenhayn. Mounted infantry circled north and came from the rear to take the town and 2,000 Turkish prisoners, while further west, Allenby advanced through Sheria (31 October 1917).

Beersheba ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Egyptian forces driven out of Huleiquat fought a stubborn defence further east around Suweidan and Faluja, while Israeli commander Ygal Allon swung south against Beersheba, capital of the Negev. The 500-strong garrison was overwhelmed after five hours of intense action, cutting off supplies to Egyptians in the north and opening the way south towards Asluj (20–21 October 1948).

Bees ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)
See Tanga

Beicang ❙ 1900 ❙ Boxer Rebellion
With the legations in Beijing besieged by anti-foreign Boxers, a fresh 20,000-strong international relief force set out from Tianjin and was blocked next day by 25,000 Chinese under General Song Qing on the Bei He at Beicang (Pei-ts'ang). Fighting in flooded fields, the Allies lost almost 300, mainly Japanese, before Song fell back upriver to Yangcun (5 August 1900).

Beijing ❙ 1214–1215 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan
After Genghis Khan besieged Beijing (then called Zhongdu), he accepted a massive tribute and withdrew. However, when Jin Emperor Xuan Zong moved his capital south, Genghis and the Khitan defector Shimo Mingan renewed the siege. When a relief army was defeated near Hejian, the starving city surrendered and was sacked, securing northern China for the Mongols (April 1214–May 1215).

Beijing ❙ 1644 ❙ Manchu Conquest of China
As the Ming Dynasty stumbled towards its end, rebel leader Li Zicheng seized much of Henan, Hubei and Shanxi Provinces before marching on Beijing itself. When Li captured the capital, the last Ming Emperor Chongzhen committed suicide. A month later, after defeat at Shanhaiguan by Ming and Manchu forces, Li burned part of Beijing and abandoned the city to the Manchu (25 April 1644).

Beijing ❙ 1900 ❙ Boxer Rebellion
In a campaign against foreigners, Boxers in Beijing murdered German Minister Klemens von Ketteler, then besieged the legations, where British Minister Sir Claude MacDonald led a defence force of troops and volunteers. They held out against heavy attack for two months until a relief force arrived from Tianjin. China was forced to make peace and pay reparations (20 June–14 August 1900).

Beijing ❙ 1917 ❙ Manchu Restoration
Chinese warlord Zhang Xun took advantage of confusion after Russia's revolution to seize Beijing, and restored 11-year-old Manchu Emperor Puyi (Xuan Tong), overthrown in 1912. General Duan Qirui (with American, Japanese and British aid) took Beijing by assault and the Emperor abdicated again. The Republic then formally declared war on Germany and Austria (1–12 July 1917).

Beijing ❙ 1920 ❙ Anhui-Zhili War
See Zhuozhou

Beijing ❙ 1922 ❙ 1st Zhili-Fengtian War
See Changxindian

Beijing ❙ 1928 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War
Recovering from Nationalist losses at Baoding, Chiang Kai-shek and Feng Yuxiang advanced on Beijing, held by warlord Zhang Zuolin and General Sun Zhuanfang. After nearby cities fell, Zhang fled and was killed when Japanese forces mined his train to Mukden. Beijing was occupied, effectively ending the war with northern and southern China united under Chiang (9 April–3 June 1928).

Beijing ❙ 1937 ❙ Sino-Japanese War
Days after the incident at Marco Polo Bridge, Japanese forces under General Kanichiro Tashiro launched a large offensive on the axis Beijing-Tianjin (Tientsin). Very heavy fighting saw Tianjin and Dagu fall (30 July) and General Zhang Zizhong soon abandoned Beijing. The Japanese then advanced southwest into Shanxi towards Taiyuan (10 July–4 August 1937).

Beijing ❙ 1949 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War
During the great offensive by Generals Lin Biao and Nie Rongzhen, up to 200,000

Nationalists under General Fu Zuoyi were besieged in Beijing (then called Peiping). Following the loss of Zhangjiakou to the north and the violent fall of Tientsin to the southeast, Fu surrendered to save the city from destruction, giving the Communists virtually all of China north of the Yangzi (22 January 1949).

Beijing-Tianjin ❙ 1948–1949 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

General Lin Biao secured Manchuria with the Liaoshen offensive, then crossed the Great Wall to join General Nie Rongzhen in a Communist offensive in northern China. Following capture of besieged Zhanjiakou (Kalgan), Tianjin was taken by storm and Beijing surrendered, leaving Taiyuan the only Nationalist stronghold in the north (5 December 1948–31 January 1949).

Beirut ❙ 1110 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Following Crusader capture of the Lebanese port of Tripoli in July 1109, King Baldwin I of Jerusalem besieged the port of Beirut in modern Lebanon, supported by ships from Pisa and Genoa. Although the Italian naval blockade prevented aid arriving, Beirut held out for four months before it fell by assault. The Governor was executed and the city was sacked (February–13 May 1110).

Beirut ❙ 1840 ❙ 2nd Turko-Egyptian War

When Egyptian Viceroy Mohammed Ali defeated Turkey at Nezib in Syria and accepted the surrender of the Turkish fleet (24 June 1839), the European powers intervened to prevent danger to Allied shipping. A British-Austrian naval force under Admiral Sir Robert Stopford bombarded Beirut and, after a further attack on Acre, Ali gave up the Turkish fleet and evacuated Syria (10 October 1840).

Beirut ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

See Lebanon

Beirut ❙ 1978 ❙ Lebanon Civil War

Amid confused alliances in Lebanon, Syria turned on Christian militias they had helped at Tel-el-Zataar and attacked Christian positions in East Beirut. Fighting began in July, before Syria launched a massive offensive with devastating artillery fire. Perhaps 1,200 militia were killed, as well as up to 200 Syrians, before Syria withdrew when Israel threatened to intervene (27 September–7 October 1978).

Beirut ❙ 1982 ❙ Lebanon Civil War

On 6 June about 60,000 Israeli troops with tanks invaded Lebanon in a strike against the Palestine Liberation Organisation. After brief action with Syrian forces a cease-fire was agreed and the Israelis besieged Beirut. Severe action caused heavy guerrilla and civilian losses before the PLO went into exile. Israel withdrew from southern Lebanon in June 1985 (13 June–13 August 1982).

Beirut ❙ 1990 ❙ Lebanon Civil War

Christian militia General Michael Aoun declared war on Syrian forces in Lebanon and their Lebanese allies (14 March 1989). The ensuing struggle tore Beirut apart. Aoun later turned on rival militias, before a massive Syrian offensive beat him in a day of terrible fighting to end the 15-year war. In May 1991 Syria and Lebanon signed a treaty confirming Lebanese independence (13 October 1990).

Beisan ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

See Fihl

Belasitza ❙ 1014 ❙ Byzantine Wars of Tsar Samuel

See Balathista

Belaya Glina ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War

On the offensive in the Kuban, White commander Anton Denikin captured Torgovaya (25 June), then advanced on Belaya Glina, held by Bolshevik General Dmitrii Zhloba. Splitting his army into converging columns, Denikin secured a brilliant victory, taking 5,000 prisoners (most drafted into the White Army). Red commander Ivan Sorokin then fell back on Ekaterinodar (6 July 1918).

Belaya Tserkov ❙ 1651 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

See Bila Tserkva

Belchite ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Three days after his advance on Saragossa was repulsed at Maria, Spanish General Joachim Blake made a stand south of the Ebro at Belchite, supported by Asturian General Carlos Areizaga. Attacked by General Louis Suchet, Blake's force was again defeated and fled, effectively conceding Aragon and the Ebro Valley to French control (18 June 1809).

Belchite ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

As part of the Republican offensive into Aragon towards Saragossa, the fortified town of Belchite to the southeast became a key position behind the battlefront. Nationalist Generals Eduardo Buruaga and Fernando Barrón were driven off attempting to relieve the besieged garrison and the ruined town eventually fell by storm. It was retaken six months later (24 August–6 September 1937).

Belchite ❙ 1938 ❙ Spanish Civil War

General Fidel Dávila started a Nationalist offensive on the Ebro by sending a large force with aircraft and tanks against the strategic town of Belchite, lost six months earlier. General José Solchaga retook Belchite after heavy fighting and the International Brigade withdrew towards the coast as the Nationalists advanced through Lerida and Vinaroz towards Castellón de la Plana (10 March 1938).

Belen ❙ 1832 ❙ 1st Turko-Egyptian War

When Egyptian forces under Ibrahim Pasha seized Acre in Turkish Syria and defeated the Pasha of Aleppo at Homs (8–9 July), Ottoman Sultan Mahmud II sent a fresh force under Aga Hussein Pasha. At Belen, south of Alexandretta on the Pass into Anatolia, the Ottoman army was routed. The Sultan then sent a further force against Ibrahim in Anatolia at Konya in December (29 July 1832).

Belfast ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

In a fresh offensive east from Pretoria, General Sir Redvers Buller advanced against Louis Botha defending the railway between Belfast and Machadodorp. After early action at Dalmanutha, General Neville Lyttleton attacked the salient at Bergendal, outside Belfast. Lyttleton breached the line in a bloody action and President Paul Kruger fled east to Delagoa Bay (22–28 August 1900).

Belfast ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

After attacks in eastern Transvaal in December at Vryheid and Helvetia, Boer commanders Louis Botha and Ben Viljoen led an ambitious attack on the Delagoa Railway defended by General Horace Smith-Dorrien. Heavy fighting at Belfast and neighbouring stations cost 100 British killed and 70 prisoners, but the Boers were repulsed and later invaded Natal (7 January 1901).

Belfort ❙ 58 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

See Mühlhausen

Belfort (1st) ❙ 1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Campaigning in eastern France, German General Karl August von Werder besieged Belfort, heroically defended by Colonel Pierre-Philippe Denfert-Rochereau. A French relief force under General Charles-Denis Bourbaki, which had won at Villersexel, was routed at nearby Héricourt. But Belfort held out until the war's end and capitulated with honour (3 November 1870–17 February 1871).

Belfort (2nd) ❙ 1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

See Héricourt

Belgium ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Faced by an overwhelming German invasion of Belgium, and loss of the key fortress at Eben Emael, Belgian forces fell back to the Dyle Line. Despite British and French aid, they were driven back towards the coast and Brussels fell (17 May). King Leopold surrendered his army (about 225,000 troops) and capitulated, though a few thousand troops escaped through Dunkirk (10–28 May 1940).

Belgrade ❙ 1440 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

Ottoman Sultan Murad II led a fresh invasion of Serbia and seized most of the country, though Belgrade held out under Zovan Thallóczi, Hungarian Military Governor of Croatia. Although Murad laid siege by land and water, the fortress was well equipped with artillery, which caused heavy Turkish losses. The Sultan withdrew his army and flotilla after six months, returning 16 years later.

Belgrade ❙ 1456 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

Having captured Constantinople in 1453, Sultan Mehmed II took 150,000 men against Belgrade, defended by Janos Hunyadi. A week after Hunyadi defeated a Turkish flotilla on the Danube (14 July), reinforcements raised by Giovanni de Capistrano helped defeat the Turks. Mehmed lifted his siege and Hungary was temporarily saved, though Hunyadi died a few days later (2–22 July 1456).

Belgrade ❙ 1521 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

Determined to invade Hungary against Louis II, Sultan Suleiman I and Grand Vizier Mehmed Piri Pasha had first to seize the Balkan fortresses, and laid siege to Belgrade. When reinforcements arrived from the fall of Sabac, mining breached the walls and Belgrade fell by storm. However, the invasion of Hungary was delayed five years until the advance through Mohacs (July–29 August 1521).

Belgrade ❙ 1688 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Campaigning in Hungary after victory at Vienna (1683), Charles V of Lorraine won again at Harkany (1687) before Maximilian Emanuel, Elector of Bavaria, took command and marched against the Turkish stronghold of Belgrade, abandoned by General Yegen Osman. The citadel fell after a 21-day bombardment and most of Serbia and Transylvania fell to the Habsburg army (20 August 1688).

Belgrade ❙ 1690 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Despite Turkish defeats over five years at Vienna, Harkany and Belgrade, Grand Vizier Fazil Mustafa Pasha led a renewed Turkish offensive in Europe and, after recapturing Nish (1689), marched against the key city of Belgrade. At the end of a six-day siege, a Turkish shell destroyed the main Austrian powder magazine and the Serbian capital returned to Turkish hands (8–14 October 1690).

Belgrade ❙ 1717 ❙ Austro-Turkish War

A year after beating Turkey on the Danube at Peterwardein, Austrian Prince Eugène of Savoy marched into the Balkans and besieged Belgrade. When a huge relief army approached under Grand Vizier Khalil Pasha, it was defeated with massive losses (16 August). Belgrade's Turkish garrison of 30,000 quickly surrendered and Sultan Ahmed III soon sued for peace (July–21 August 1717).

Belgrade ❙ 1739 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War

In a Turkish offensive on the Danube, Grand Vizier Al-Haji Mohammed routed Austrian Marshal Count Georg Oliver von Wallis at Kroszka (22 July), then besieged Belgrade, defended by General Jakob von Succow. Wallis manoeuvred outside the city, but after months of negotiation, Austria made peace, yielding Belgrade, Serbia and Wallachia to the Turks (26 July–18 September 1739).

Belgrade ❙ 1789 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

Austrian Baron Gideon Ernst von Laudon supported Russia against Turkey by invading Bosnia to besiege Belgrade, which had been seized by Turks. The city fell after three weeks, but Emperor Leopold, faced by threats in the west, eventually made a separate peace with Turkey and returned Belgrade in exchange for a small part of Bosnia (15 September–8 October 1789).

Belgrade ❙ 1807 ❙ 1st Serbian Rising

When Belgrade fell to Serbian patriot George Kara in 1805, the citadel held out under the Turkish Governor Pasha Suleiman. The Pasha was abandoned by his own forces following the defeat at nearby Misar (August 1806) and finally surrendered the city on condition of free passage. He was however shamefully attacked and killed nearby, along with all his followers (7 March 1807).

Belgrade ❙ 1862 ❙ Serbo-Turkish Wars

Prince Michael III of Serbia attempted a rebellion against his Turkish overlords and led a revolt in the capital Belgrade. The Turkish garrison withdrew into the citadel but re-established control after bombarding the city for four hours. Michael was murdered a few years later, apparently at Turkish instigation, to be succeeded by his 14-year-old cousin Milan (15–16 June 1862).

Belgrade ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

See Kolubara

Belgrade ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

With an Austrian advance into Serbia repulsed at Kolubara in December 1914, forces under General August von Mackensen led a fresh invasion and Austrian General Herman Kovess von Kovesshaza fought his way into Belgrade. The capital fell after bloody fighting and, despite an Anglo-French intervention at Salonika, the Serbians fell back south towards Kossovo (7–9 October 1915).

Belgrade ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

At the start of Germany's lightning campaign into the Balkans, Generals Maximilian von Weich and Ewald von Kleist stormed into Yugoslavia. Massive aerial bombing of Belgrade caused terrible casualties, and the capital fell within a week (12 April). With its airforce crushed and 300,000 troops captured, Yugoslavia capitulated and the Axis focussed on Greece (6–17 April 1941).

Belgrade ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

When Romania and Bulgaria defected to the Allies after Jassy-Kishinev, Soviet Marshal Fedor Tolbukhin invaded Yugoslavia, defended by General Maximilian von Weichs. Aided by Yugoslav partisans under Tito, the Russians liberated much of the country, then attacked Belgrade. The capital fell after heavy fighting and the Germans evacuated the Balkans (14–20 October 1944).

Belkesheim ❙ 983 ❙ Later German Imperial Wars

German Emperor Otto II was campaigning in Italy when heathen Bohemians and Slavs in his eastern territories rebelled against German authority and destroyed a number of churches. At Belkesheim, near the Elbe, Saxon Princes under the Margrave Dietrich defeated and drove back the heathen tribes. However, Christianity was virtually extinguished east of the Elbe.

Belle Alliance ❙ 1815 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (The Hundred Days)

See Waterloo

Belleau Wood ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Two days after the German offensive across the Aisne halted on the Marne at Chateau-Thierry, American General Omar Bundy launched a major counter-attack further west at Belleau Wood, which was seized by his Marine Brigade. The Americans fought off repeated

German attacks, before the area was secured at a cost of over 1,800 killed and another 7,000 wounded (6–26 June 1918).

Bellegarde ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

A Spanish army under Don Antonio Ricardos invaded southeastern France, where he captured the powerful frontier fortress of Bellegarde (22 June 1793), before a counter-offensive the following year by General Jacques Dugommier. The Marquis Dominique de Perignon recaptured Bellegarde after a five-month siege, and Dugommier advanced into Spain (May–17 September 1794).

Belle Grove ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Cedar Creek

Belle Isle, Brittany ❙ 1761 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

In a large-scale assault on the fortress at Belle Isle, off the coast of Brittany, Britain sent a naval squadron under Commodore Augustus Keppel, supported by 10,000 troops under Major General Studholme Hodgson. After an initial repulse (7 April), a fresh assault settled into an heroic siege before the citadel finally surrendered, securing the strategic island for the Allies (22 April–7 June 1761).

Belle Isle, Canada ❙ 1755 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Admiral Sir Edward Boscawen attempted to interdict massive French reinforcements for Canada, capturing three transports near Belle Isle, off Newfoundland. However, the remaining ships—with Governor Pierre Rigaud Marquis de Vaudreuil and General Louis de Montcalm—arrived safely. Admiral Emmanuel de Cahideuc Comte Dubois de la Motte returned unscathed to Brest (10 June 1755).

Bellevue ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Determined to secure food for his besieged army at Metz, French Marshal Achille Bazaine sent a large-scale sortie north towards Bellevue, where the Moselle harvest was stored. Both sides lost over 1,000 casualties in heavy fighting near Maizières and the French were driven back to Metz empty-handed. Metz capitulated three weeks later (7 October 1870).

Bellewaarde (1st) ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In the final assault of the Second Battle of Ypres, Germans under Duke Albrecht, checked east of the city at Frezenberg (13 May), attacked further south around Bellewaarde. Advancing behind the largest gas attack to date, the Germans made progress in the north around Mouse Trap Farm, but the Allied line at Bellewaarde held firm and the great German offensive came to an end (24–25 May 1915).

Bellewaarde (2nd) ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Coinciding with a British attack at Givenchy to support the French in Artois, further north British General Edmund Allenby led a smaller supporting attack north from Hooge against Bellewaarde Ridge, east of Ypres. Despite initial success, Allenby's assault stalled and the Second Battle of Artois soon came to an end (16 June 1915).

Belmont, Missouri ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union General Ulysses S. Grant advancing down the Mississippi towards Columbus, Kentucky, attacked the Confederate garrison under General Gideon T. Pillow across the river at Belmont, Missouri. The Confederates were driven out, but in the face of a counter-attack by General Leonidas Polk, Grant withdrew from Columbus for little tactical advantage (7 November 1861).

Belmont, South Africa ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

Attempting to relieve besieged Kimberley, British General Lord Paul Methuen attacked a strong Boer position to the southwest at Belmont under Jacobus Prinsloo. The Boers were driven off with a disciplined frontal assault, which cost about 300 British casualties and about 100 Boers. The Boers then fell back through Graspan, and across the Modder to Magersfontien (23 November 1899).

Belorussia ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

On a massive summer offensive against German Army Group Centre, four Soviet armies advanced into Belorussia. Decisive victories including Vitebsk, Mogilev, Bobruysk, Minsk and Vilna opened the way to East Prussia and the Baltic, while the fall of Lublin threatened Warsaw. The Germans suffered shocking losses and Marshal Ernst Busch was dismissed (22 June–24 July 1944).

Bemaru ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

More than two years after Amir Dost Muhammad of Afghanistan was deposed following defeat at Ghazni, his son Akbar Khan besieged the British in Kabul. Colonel John Shelton drove the Afghans from the nearby village of Bemaru, but on a second sortie ten days later, Shelton was routed with heavy losses, helping trigger the disastrous evacuation of Kabul (13 & 23 November 1841).

Bembesi ❙ 1893 ❙ Matabele War

Advancing into Matabeleland (in modern Zimbabwe) through victory at the Shangani, British Major Patrick Forbes was attacked days later at Bembesi, 30 miles northeast of Bulawayo, by an even larger force under Mjaan. The Matabele were again routed by cannon and Maxim guns and King Lobengula fled. His capital quickly fell and he died of fever while escaping north (1 November 1893).

Bemis Heights (1st) ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Saratoga, New York (1st)

Bemis Heights (2nd) ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Saratoga, New York (2nd)

Benavente ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French cavalry under General Charles Lefebvre-Desnouettes pursuing Sir John Moore's British army towards Corunna in northwest Spain caught up with the Allied rearguard on the Esla at Benavente. General Henry Paget's cavalry turned to savage the French advance units, capturing Lefebvre-Desnouettes and permitting Moore to reach Corunna (26 December 1808).

Benavides ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

General Jean-Andre Valletaux advanced north from Benavente into Galicia, where he unwisely attacked Spanish commander José Maria Santocildes at Benavides, nine miles northeast of Astorga. The French were taken in the flank by fresh Spanish forces under General Frederico Castanon. In the resulting defeat Vellataux was killed, along with about 300 of his men (23 June 1811).

Benburb ❙ 1646 ❙ British Civil Wars

Renewing the rebellion of his uncle Hugh O'Neill (crushed at Kinsale in 1601), Owen Roe O'Neill faced an offensive by a Scottish Puritan army under Sir Robert Monroe, which landed to support the Protestant colonists of Ulster. O'Neill routed Monroe on the Blackwater at Benburb and Dublin later fell. The rising was eventually crushed as part of the British Civil Wars (5 June 1646).

Bender ❙ 1738 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War

Russian Marshal Count Burkhard Christoph von Münnich advanced into Turkish Moldavia and was heavily repulsed attempting to cross the Dniester at Bender (modern Bendery). Thwarted by poor supplies and lack of support he withdrew, with his army decimated by casualties, disease and starvation. The Count returned the following year for a decisive victory at Stavuchany.

Bender ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

While the invading Russian army under General Pyotr Rumyantsev established a strong defensive position on the Pruth, General Pyotr Panin was sent east to the Dniester against the fortress of Bender (modern Bendery). The Turkish stronghold fell by storm after a three-month siege, followed by a bloody massacre of the garrison (28 July–16 September 1770).

Benevento ❙ 1266 ❙ Angevin Conquest of the Two Sicilies

Encouraged by successive Popes, Charles I of Anjou led a French army into the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies, held by Manfred, illegitimate son of Emperor Frederick II. On the Plain of Grandella, near Benevento northeast of Naples, Manfred's largely German and Saracen army was crushed and Manfred was killed. Charles then seized the twin throne for Anjou (26 February 1266).

Beneventum ❙ 275 BC ❙ Pyrrhic War

King Pyrrhus of Epirus returned to Italy from Sicily after failure at Lilybaeum and met Roman General Manius Curius Dentatus at Beneventum, where Pyrrhus was defeated and withdrew south to Tarentum (modern Taranto). Threatened by a reinforced Roman attack, he abandoned Italy, confirming Rome as the principal power, and returned to Greece, where he was killed in 272 BC at Argos.

Beneventum ❙ 214 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Marching north to join his brother Hannibal northeast of Naples near Nola, Carthaginian General Hanno was intercepted further east near Beneventum (modern Benevento) by a slightly larger force under Tiberius Gracchus. Hanno's army of 18,000, comprising mainly native Italian troops with some Numidian cavalry, suffered a terrible defeat and he was driven back to Bruttium (Calabria).

Beneventum ❙ 212 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Two years after a previous defeat at Beneventum, the Carthaginian General Hanno was attempting to escort supplies to Capua, when he was attacked in camp northeast of Naples near Beneventum (modern Benevento) by Roman Consul Quintus Fulvius Flaccus. Hanno was heavily defeated and Flaccus and Consul Appius Claudius then moved west to besiege Capua.

Benghazi ❙ 1911 ❙ Italo-Turkish War

With Tripoli secured, Italy sent Admiral Augusto Aubry east against Benghazi, which refused to surrender to General Ottavio Briccola. General Giovanni Ameglio landed after an early morning bombardment and lost over 100 men to hot resistance before a second bombardment forced the surrender. Heavy fighting took place in March 1912 outside Benghazi at Two Palms (19 October 1911).

Beni Boo Ali ❙ 1821 ❙ Anglo-Arab Wars

See Balad Bani Bu Ali

Benin ❙ 1897 ❙ British Conquest of Nigeria

Avenging the massacre at Ugbine (4 January), a 1,200-strong British Punitive Expedition under Admiral Harry Rawson converged on King Oba at Benin City in modern Nigeria, whose army was destroyed by Maxim guns and artillery. King Oba's capital was razed and he was exiled. His son-in-law Ologbosheri was eventually captured and executed for the attack at Ugbine (18 February 1897).

Benin ❙ 1967 ❙ Biafran War

When Colonel Chukwuemeka Ojukwu declared independent Biafra in southeast Nigeria, his ally Colonel Victor Banjo launched a rash offensive across the Niger into Midwest State and seized the capital Benin. Further west at Ore, the Biafrans were checked by Federal Colonel Murtala Mohammed and driven back to Onitsha. Banjo was later executed for abandoning Benin (August–October 1967).

Bennington Raid ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Over-confident after victory at Hubbardton, British General John Burgoyne sent Colonels Friedrich Baum and Heinrich Breymann against Bennington, on the Vermont-New York border. The Brunswickers were routed after Baum was defeated and killed by General John Stark, and Breymann was defeated by Colonel Seth

Warner. Burgoyne soon lost again at Saratoga (16 August 1777).

Bensington ❙ 779 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

King Offa of Mercia determined to rebuild the power of Mercia, which had lost land north of the Thames after defeat at Burford in 752. Attacking the West Saxons in Oxfordshire at Bensington (modern Benson) near Wallingford, Offa inflicted a heavy defeat on King Cynewulf of Wessex. Mercia expanded to dominate southern England until the decisive battle in 825 at Ellandun.

Ben Suc ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

See Iron Triangle

Bentonville ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Union commander William T. Sherman marched east across North Carolina, he was checked at Averasborough, then advanced three days later against the main Confederate army of General Joseph E. Johnston further east at Bentonville, near Goldsborough. Johnston suffered a costly defeat in the decisive action of the campaign and, a month later, he surrendered his army (19–21 March 1865).

Beorora ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Rajgarh

Beranbyrg ❙ 556 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Consolidating his control in the area of modern Wiltshire following victory at Searobyrg in 522, King Cynric of the West Saxons attacked the Britons at Beranbyrg (Barbury Castle), just south of Swindon. Supported by his son Ceawlin, Cynric defeated the Britons and, a few years later, Ceawlin succeeded to the Saxon crown of Wessex.

Berat ❙ 1281 ❙ Neapolitan-Byzantine War

Charles of Anjou, King of Naples, entered an alliance with Venice to capture Constantinople, but before their full expedition could be assembled, a smaller Neapolitan force under Solimon Rossi attacked the Adriatic coast and besieged Berat, south of Tirana. A relief army sent by Emperor Michael VIII crushed Rossi's force, though a rising in Sicily aborted the great enterprise.

Berat ❙ 1455 ❙ Albanian-Turkish Wars

George Kastriote Skanderbeg attempted to resume the initiative in central Albania and besieged Berat, south of Tirana, supported by about 1,000 men supplied by Alfonso V of Naples. However, he was surprised by a Turkish army under Isa Bey Evrenos and the Neapolitan troops were killed almost to a man. Skanderbeg had his revenge two years later at Albulen (26 July 1455).

Beraun ❙ 1394 ❙ German Towns War

When battle at Doffingen in 1388 settled war between the Princes and the cities, the weak German King Wenceslas faced continued opposition from dissident nobles, including his cousin Jobst, Margrave of Moravia and Brandenburg. Jobst defeated the Imperial army in battle at Beraun, southwest of Prague, and held Wenceslas prisoner until he agreed to make Jobst Regent of Bohemia.

Berea Mountain ❙ 1852 ❙ 8th Cape Frontier War

Determined to chastise Basutho Chief Moshoeshoe after defeat at Viervoet in 1851, Governor Sir George Cathcart led 2,500 British troops north into the Orange River Sovereignty. Outnumbered and surrounded at Berea Mountain, Cathcart narrowly escaped defeat by withdrawing west to the Caledon. Britain later yielded the territory to the Boers as the Orange Free State (20 December 1852).

Beresteczko ❙ 1651 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

On a fresh Ukraine offensive against Cossack leader Bogdan Chmielnicki, Polish General Stefan Czarniecki attacked a much larger rebel force at Beresteczko, on the Styr, northeast of Lvov. As at Zborov, Chmielnicki's Crimean Tatar allies deserted him and he was decisively beaten. Another action at Bila Tserkva soon forced the Cossacks to accept a disadvantageous peace (28–30 June 1651).

Berezina ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

Retreating from Moscow, Napoleon Bonaparte's army was attacked by Prince Mikhail Kutuzov and Admiral Paul Tchitchakov at the Berezina near Borisov. Despite the courage of Marshal Michel Ney, and a desperate rearguard action by Marshal Claude Victor, the French passage across the icy river was a disaster, with perhaps 25,000 killed or drowned (26–28 November 1812).

Berezina ❙ 1920 ❙ Russo-Polish War

With Kiev secured (7 May), Polish commander Josef Pilsudksi was preparing a fresh advance when Russian General Mikhail Tukhachevski struck in a brilliant offensive across the Berezina, supported in the south by 18,000 Cossack cavalry under Semyon Budenny. The Polish army was nearly destroyed west of Kiev around Zhitomir before retreating towards Warsaw (14 May–4 June 1920).

Bergamo ❙ 464 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

The Alan King Beorgor led a fresh invasion of northern Italy and marched his force onto the Plain of Lombardy. At Bergamo, northeast of Milan, Beorgor was met by troops under the Suevic-Roman kingmaker Ricimer. The King of the Alans was defeated and killed in fierce fighting and his invasion was repulsed (6 February 464).

Bergen, Hainault ❙ 1572 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

See Mons

Bergen, Hesse ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

On the offensive in Hesse after victory during 1758 at Sandershausen and Lutterberg, French Duke Victor-Francois of Broglie occupied Bergen, northeast of Frankfurt, and came under attack by Prussians, Brunswickers and British led by Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick. However, the Allies were repulsed with heavy losses and the French advanced through Westphalia to Minden (13 April 1759).

Bergen, Norway ❙ 1665 ❙ 2nd Dutch War

Following success in June off Lowestoft, Edward Montagu Earl of Sandwich sent Admiral Sir Thomas Teddeman to pursue a Dutch convoy under Commodore Pieter de Bitter into neutral Bergen, Norway. Shore batteries opened fire, and after two hours Teddeman was driven off. A month later after refit, Teddeman and Sandwich captured nine Dutch East Indiamen in just two days (13 August 1665).

Bergen-aan-Zee (1st) ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

After the British expedition to northern Holland repulsed the French at Groote Keeten and Zuyper Sluys, Frederick Augustus Duke of York arrived with the main force and joined General Ivan Hermann's Russians against General Guillaume Brune outside Bergen, near Alkmaar. The Allies were repulsed, with the Russian division suffering very heavy losses in men and guns (19 September 1799).

Bergen-aan-Zee (2nd) ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

See Castricum

Bergendal ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Belfast

Bergen-op-Zoom ❙ 1588 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Alexander Farnese Duke of Parma followed destruction of the Spanish Armada in July by besieging Bergen-op-Zoom, the last major town in Brabant still held for the United Provinces, defended by commander Peregrine Bertie Lord Willoughby. Parma was forced to abandon the siege after a brilliant counter-assault by Francis Vere, who won a knighthood (14 September–12 November 1588).

Bergen-op-Zoom ❙ 1622 ❙ Thirty Years War (Palatinate War)

See Fleurus

Bergen-op-Zoom ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Ekeren

Bergen-op-Zoom ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Two weeks after crushing the Anglo-Austrian army at Lauffeld, French Marshal Maurice de Saxe sent General Ulrich de Lowendahl against the powerful Dutch fortress of Bergen-op-Zoom, held by 86-year-old Isaac Kock Baron Cronstrom. Bergen fell by storm after a bitter and very costly siege, and was subjected to a terrible pillage and destruction (15 July–18 September 1747).

Bergen-op-Zoom ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

While the European Allies were crumbling before a French offensive east of Paris, British General Sir Thomas Graham commanding in Holland launched an unwise night-time attack on the fortress of Bergen-op-Zoom (in French hands since 1795). Having forced their way in, the British started plundering, and at dawn most of them were killed or captured (8 March 1814).

Bergfriede ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

At the start of Russia's mid-winter offensive against Napoleon Bonaparte in eastern Prussia, part of General Levin Bennigsen's army was attacked by Marshal Nicolas Soult at the Bergfriede crossing of the Alle, north of Ionkovo. Having withstood a large-scale assault, the Russians slipped away during the night north to Königsberg, ready for Eylau five days later (3 February 1807).

Beringia ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Encouraged by Turkey, Sultan Ali Dinar of Darfur, in western Sudan, raised rebellion and threatened Khartoum. Pursued by British and Egyptians under Colonel Philip Kelly, the Sultan's entrenched army was defeated at Beringia, north of El Fasher, which fell next day. Darfur was annexed to Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Ali Dinar was pursued and killed in November at Guiba (22 May 1916).

Berlin ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

The British attacked Berlin as early as August 1940, but their first sustained air offensive on the German capital saw 16 major raids from November 1943 to March 1944, with more than 1,000 British bombers lost. American forces joined in and lost 200 bombers in just three raids in March–April 1944. While attacks continued into 1945, the Battle of Berlin proved the costliest air campaign of the war.

Berlin ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Soviet Marshals Georgi Zhukov and Ivan Konev drove deep into eastern Germany, advancing on Berlin itself against intense resistance. Russian losses are estimated at up to 100,000 dead, along with perhaps 150,000 German soldiers killed and maybe as many civilians. After Hitler shot himself, General Karl Weidling finally surrendered the shattered city (16 April–2 May 1945).

Bern ❙ 1339 ❙ Burgundian-Swiss Wars

See Laupen

Bern ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Facing threatened insurrection in Switzerland, Napoleon Bonaparte sent General Guillaume Brune with troops from Italy and the Rhine. Supported by General Alexis Schauenbourg, Brune defeated Swiss General Karl von Erlach at Bern, which was captured next day along with massive booty. Brune then proceeded to establish a single Swiss Republic (5 March 1798).

Berroea ❙ 250 ❙ 1st Gothic War

See Philippopolis

Berroea ❙ 1190 ❙ Bulgarian Imperial Wars

Byzantine Emperor Isaac II defeated rebel Serbs at the Morava, and later that year marched against Tsar Ivan Asen of Bulgaria and besieged Trnovo. Facing a large Kipchaq Turkish army, Isaac withdrew and was ambushed and routed in the Balkan Mountains near Berroea (modern Stara Zagora). Isaac had to concede Bulgaria and Wallachia and in 1194 he was defeated again at Arcadiopolis.

Berryville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Marching east from Winchester in the Shenandoah Valley, Confederate General Richard H. Anderson was met near Berryville, Virginia, by part of Union commander Philip Sheridan's army under General George Crook. Confederate commander Jubal A. Early arrived to reinforce Anderson, but after inconclusive fighting they withdrew west behind the Opequon (3–4 September 1864).

Berwick ❙ 1296 ❙ English Invasion of Scotland

When Scotland allied herself with France and invaded Cumberland, Edward I advanced over the border and stormed the Scots-held city of Berwick-on-Tweed, followed by a terrible sack and massacre. Edward then sent his army further north to meet the Scots at Dunbar. Berwick remained in English hands for twenty years (28–30 March 1296).

Berwick ❙ 1318–1319 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

In the aftermath of Bannockburn, Robert the Bruce blockaded the remaining English stronghold at Berwick, which fell to Sir James Douglas in 1318. Facing a renewed invasion a year later by Edward II, the Scottish King's son-in-law Walter Stewart defended Berwick against a massive siege, until the English had to withdraw after defeat at Myton (28 March 1318 & 24 July–September 1319).

Berwick ❙ 1333 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Advancing into Scotland, Edward III joined his ally Edward Baliol besieging Berwick, held for young David II by Sir Alexander Seton, while the castle was defended by Patrick Dunbar Earl of March. Regent Sir Archibald Douglas approached to relieve the siege but was defeated and killed at nearby Halidon Hill (18 July), and both city and castle fell into English hands (June–July 1333).

Berwick ❙ 1482 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

Edward IV ordered a fresh invasion of Scotland, despatching his brother Richard of Gloucester and Alexander Duke of Albany, brother of James III of Scotland. The invaders captured the key fortress of Berwick and went on to seize Edinburgh but eventually withdrew, though Berwick remained permanently English. Duke Alexander was defeated two years later at Lochmaben (24 August 1482).

Besançon ❙ 1674 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

On a renewed offensive against the Spanish Netherlands, Louis XIV of France and Marshal Sebastien Vauban returned to Franche-Comte, which they had conquered in 1668 and then conceded by treaty. Besançon, near the Swiss border, which previously capitulated without fighting, held out against siege for nine days. The entire province was captured in under six weeks (April–May 1674).

Bethel Church ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Big Bethel

Beth Horon ❙ 166 BC ❙ Maccabean War

Hebrew rebel Judas Maccabeus defeated the Seleucid army of Apollonius in the mountains at Gophna, then faced a larger force later that year under General Seron, who avoided the dangerous hills by marching down the Mediterranean coast before turning towards Jerusalem. Coming under attack while crossing the low pass at Beth Horon, Seron's army was routed and driven back towards the sea.

Beth Horon ❙ 66 ❙ Jewish Rising against Rome

When Zealots massacred the garrison in Jerusalem, Governor Cestius Gallus of Syria took a legion to Judea but was driven off trying to take the Temple in Jerusalem. Attacked in the northern suburb of Bezetha, Gallus retreated through Gabaon to Beth Horon, losing up to 6,000 men and his siege train. He withdrew to Syria, but fresh Roman troops soon arrived to storm Jotapata and later Jerusalem.

Beth Zachariah ❙ 164 BC ❙ Maccabean War

In a final attempt to suppress the Hebrew rebellion of Judas Maccabeus, Seleucid King Antiochus V Eupator and General Lysias took a huge army, supported by war-elephants, and besieged Beth Zur, south of Jerusalem. Maccabeus rashly accepted a set-piece battle at nearby Beth Zachariah and was badly defeated. Seleucid forces occupied Jerusalem, but civil war forced them to return home.

Beth Zur ❙ 166 BC ❙ Maccabean War

Soon after Seleucid defeats at Beth Horon and Emmaus at the hands of the Hebrew Judas Maccabeus, Seleucid Viceroy Lysias personally led a large army circling south of Judea to take the rebels in the rear. But he faced a greatly reinforced Maccabean army at Beth Zur, near modern Hebron, and after suffering severe losses was driven back towards the coast. Judas went on to capture Jerusalem.

Betio ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Tarawa

Betwa ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

While besieging the great rebel stronghold at Jhansi, General Sir Hugh Rose turned west to meet a massive relief army of perhaps 20,000 under Tantia Topi. A brilliant action at the Betwa saw Rose and Brigadier Charles Stuart rout the much larger rebel force, which fled across the Betwa to Kalpi. Two days later, the British launched their final assault on Jhansi (1 April 1858).

Beverly Ford ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Brandy Station

Beveziers ❙ 1690 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

See Beachy Head

Bexar ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

See San Antonio

Beylan ❙ 1832 ❙ 1st Turko-Egyptian War

See Belen

Beymaroo ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Bemaru

Bezetha ❙ 66 ❙ Jewish Rising against Rome

See Beth Horon

Beziers ❙ 1209 ❙ Albigensian Crusade

When Pope Innocent III proclaimed a Crusade against Albigensian heretics in southern France, the warrior Arnaud Amalric attacked the city of Beziers, defended by Raymond Roger Viscount of Beziers and Carcassonne. A major counter-attack by the garrison was routed, and the city fell, followed by large-scale massacre of the population. The Viscount then fled to Carcassonne (22 July 1209).

Bezzecca ❙ 1866 ❙ 3rd Italian War of Independence

Despite being wounded near Lake Garda at Monte Suella (3 July), Giuseppe Garibaldi sent his forces on a resumed offensive in the Tyrol against Austrian General Franz Kuhn. At Bezzecca, northeast of Storo, the Garibaldini under General Giuseppe Avezzano fought a fierce action before both sides withdrew with about 500 casualties. The war ended a few days later (21 July 1866).

Bhamo ❙ 1885 ❙ 3rd British-Burmese War

British General Sir Harry Prendergast defeated the Burmese at Minhla on the Irriwaddy (17 November) and captured Mandalay. King Thebaw then surrendered, ending Burmese independence. However, some troops and tribal groups continued the struggle. Prendergast eventually beat them near the Chinese border at Bhamo, though guerrilla war continued for some years (28 December 1885).

Bhamo ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

With Myitkyina secured in August, Chinese divisions under General Daniel Sultan advanced north and besieged about 1,200 Japanese at Bhamo. General Masaki Honda sent a large-scale relief column, but it was driven off (9 December), and the garrison later broke out. The capture of Bhamo, along with Wanting to the east, reopened the land route to China (14 November–15 December 1944).

Bhangani ❙ 1688 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

When Sikh Guru Gobind Singh was invited into the Nahan in northern Punjab, he found himself in conflict with the hill Rajas, including Raja Fateh Khan of Srinagar and Raja Bhim Chand of Kahlur. Despite the desertion of his Pathans, the greatly outnumbered Guru achieved a decisive victory in battle near Bhangani, seven miles east of Paonta on the Jumna (18 September 1688).

Bharatpur ❙ 1805 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

Having captured Dieg (December 1804), British General Sir Gerard Lake besieged the Maratha fortress of Bharatpur, west of Agra, defended by a garrison and field army under Jaswant Rao Holkar of Indore and Jat infantry. Lake had insufficient guns, and after four assaults cost him over 3,000 men, he withdrew, ending the war. The stronghold was finally taken 20 years later (7 January–10 April 1805).

Bharatpur ❙ 1825–1826 ❙ British-Maratha Wars

Twenty years after General Sir Gerard Lake was repulsed at the Jat fortress of Bharatpur, west of Agra, the siege was renewed by a much better equipped force under Stapleton Cotton Lord Combermere. The town fell by storm after heavy bombardment and destruction of part of the bastion by mines. The usurper Durgan Sal surrendered, ending the war (11 December 1825–18 January 1826).

Bhatavadi ❙ 1624 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

Emperor Jahangir resolved to prevent external involvement in a Mughal civil war and sent Prince Parwiz to join Adil Shah of Bijapur against Ahmadnagar. In a famous battle at Bhatavadi, 10 miles east of Ahmadnagar, Malik Ambar and General Shahji utterly routed the Imperial army, avenging the defeat in 1616 at Roshangaon. Ambar soon died, and Ahmadnagar was eclipsed (November 1624).

Bhatgiran ❙ 1947 ❙ 1st Indo-Pakistan War

Advancing north from Srinagar after victory at Shalateng (7 November), Indian regular forces repulsed the Pakistan-backed tribal invaders of southwest Kashmir and retook the key city of Uri. At nearby Bhatgiran, a large-scale Indian patrol was ambushed, and heavy fighting cost the Sikhs 63 killed and 60 wounded. India's advance stalled and the war dragged on for another year (12 December 1947).

Bhera ❙ 1006 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Northern India

As he crossed the Indus for the first time, the Muslim ruler Mahmud of Ghazni attacked Bhera on the Jhelum, northwest of Lahore. Raja Biji Rai withdrew into Bhera under siege after a four-day battle outside the fortress. But he was later cornered attempting to flee and killed himself to avoid capture. Bhera was annexed and Mahmud captured massive treasure, including 280 elephants.

Bhogniwala ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny
See Nagal

Bhopal ❙ 1737–1738 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars
Nizam-ul-Mulk of Hyderabad invaded Malwa at the head of a large Imperial army, but allowed himself to be besieged at Bhopal by a massive army of about 80,000 Marathas under Baji Rao I. When a Mughal relief force under Safdar Jang was driven off by Mulhar Rao Holkar, the Nizam sued for peace and granted Baji Rao the whole of Malwa (14 December 1737–7 January 1738).

Bhorghat ❙ 1781 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War
Having captured Bassein, north of Bombay, General Thomas Goddard attempted to march southeast against the Marathas at Poona with about 6,000 European and Indian troops. After being harried and cut off at Bhorghat Pass by superior Maratha forces under Hari Pant Phadke, Goddard's advance was halted and he was forced to retreat with over 500 casualties (18 January–23 April 1781).

Bhupalgarh ❙ 1679 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars
Aided by Sambhuji, rebel son of Maratha King Shivaji, Mughal Viceroy Dilir Khan attacked Bhupalgarh (modern Banur), near Khanapur, south of Poona, defended by Phirangoji Narsala. After terrible fighting, the Mughals captured the fortress and its stores and enslaved the garrison. Dilir Khan then defeated Maratha reinforcements nearby and razed the fort to the ground (2 April 1679).

Bhurtpore ❙ 1805 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War
See Bharatpur

Bhutan ❙ 1865 ❙ British-Bhutanese War
See Dewangiri

Bi ❙ 597 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era
When King Zhuang of Chu attacked the small state of Zheng, just south of the Yellow River, Jin (Chin) sent a relief army under Xun Linfu. The Jin arrived too late to save Zheng, but Jin General Xiangu impulsively crossed the river and the main army had to follow. Caught unprepared by the Chu on the battlefield at Bi, the Jin were routed and the survivors fled in disorder back across the river.

Biak ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
A week after securing Wakde, off northern New Guinea, American General Horace Fuller leapfrogged west to seize Biak Island and its key airfield from Colonel Kuzume Naoyuki. In some of the hardest fighting of the war, the Americans lost 430 killed and 2,000 wounded for 7,000 Japanese killed. Fierce resistance dragged on for months and Fuller was dismissed (27 May–29 July 1944).

Biala Cerkiew ❙ 1651 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars
See Bila Tserkva

Bialy Kamien ❙ 1604 ❙ 1st Polish-Swedish War
See Weissenstein

Bialystok ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
Opening the German invasion of Russia, Army Group Centre under Marshal Fedor von Bock sent forces north through Grodno and from the south to surround the Russians at Bialystok and Volkovysk. Two entire Soviet armies were encircled and destroyed in the Bialystok Pocket, while an overlapping encirclement further east trapped more Russians at Minsk (22 June–3 July 1941).

Biar ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
During a new offensive in Valencia, Marshal Louis Suchet routed a Spanish force at Yecla, then next day attacked the rearguard of the withdrawing Allies in the pass at Biar, east of Villena. British, Italian and German forces under General Frederick Adam held Suchet for five hours in a courageous defensive action, before falling back to the Allied position at Castalla (12 April 1813).

Bias Bay ❙ 1938 ❙ Sino-Japanese War
See Guangzhou

Biberach ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Having defeated General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan's invasion of northern Germany, Archduke Charles Louis of Austria turned his counter-offensive south against General Jean Victor Moreau. On the Lahn at Biberach, south of Ulm, Moreau checked General Maximilian Latour but continued falling back before the Austrians and was defeated two weeks later at Emmendingen (2 October 1796).

Biberach ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Pursuing the Austrians after their twin defeats at Engen and Stockach, French General Jean Moreau continued his offensive across the Rhine by sending General Laurent Gouvion Saint-Cyr pursuing the Austrians withdrawing east towards the River Riss. St-Cyr marched down-river after cutting up the Austrians at Oberndorf and defeated a counter-offensive at Biberach (9 May 1800).

Bibracte ❙ 58 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Julius Caesar defended Gaul against a massive Helvetian migration across the Jura, defeating the invaders at the Arar, then a month later renewed the attack near Bibracte, on Mount Beuvray near Autun. Caesar inflicted a crushing defeat—slaughtering perhaps 130,000 including warriors and their families—and forced the Helvetii back to their home in modern Switzerland (July 58 BC).

Bicocca ❙ 1522 ❙ 1st Habsburg-Valois War

Following defeat at Marignano in 1515, French Marshal Odet de Lautrec renewed the offensive in northern Italy after Milan was lost to Francesco Sforza. Lautrec's Swiss mercenaries insisted on attacking Spanish General Prospero Colonna at Bicocca, just outside Milan, and were repulsed with humiliating losses. Their defeat led to a complete French withdrawal from Lombardy (27 April 1522).

Bida ❙ 1897 ❙ British Conquest of Northern Nigeria

In order to impose a British protectorate on northern Nigeria, Sir Charles Goldie of the Royal Niger Company took 500 African troops and 30 British officers against Emir Abubakr of Nupe. Some towns quickly fell, but outside Bida he faced a determined Nupe army. The ill-armed warriors were routed by Maxim guns and artillery, and Goldie then turned against Ilorin (27 January 1897).

Bidassoa ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington captured the vital northern Spanish port of San Sebastian in September, then began advancing against the French defences along the Bidassoa. A massive assault across the Bidassoa estuary saw Wellington defeat General Antoine-Louis Maucune to outflank the French lines, and Marshal Nicolas Soult began to fall back towards the Nivelle (7 October 1813).

Biddulphsberg ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

On campaign northeast of Bloemfontein, General Sir Leslie Rundle occupied Senekal after a sharp skirmish (25 May), then led 4,000 men against Andries de Villiers at Biddulphsberg on the Senekal-Bethlehem road. Fighting in the midst of a bush fire, the British were driven off with about 180 casualties, while the Boers lost just two men killed, one of them de Villiers himself (29 May 1900).

Biderra ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (India)
See Chinsura

Biedenheafde ❙ 674 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

In a dispute over the Kingdom of Lindsey, Wulfhere of Mercia invaded Northumbria against Ecgfrith, son of Oswy (who killed Wulfhere's father Penda in 655 at Winwaed). Wulfhere was repulsed at Biedenheafde by the smaller Northumbrian army and was forced to yield Lindsey. However, his brother Aethelred defeated Ecgfrith on the Trent five years later and recovered the disputed kingdom.

Bien Hoa ❙ 1964 ❙ Vietnam War

When B-57 bombers arrived at Bien Hoa airbase, north of Saigon, the Viet Cong launched their first major attack on an American facility. The predawn assault saw six bombers destroyed and 20 aircraft damaged, with five Americans and two Vietnamese killed and nearly 100 injured. A further attack on the airbase at Pleiku led directly to US retaliation against North Vietnam (1 November 1964).

Big Bethel ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Supported by blockade in Chesapeake Bay, Union Generals Ebenezer Pierce and Benjamin F. Butler converged on Confederate Colonels John B. Magruder and Daniel H. Hill at Big Bethel, Virginia, northwest of Newport News. In the claimed first land battle of the war, the larger Union force was driven off with 80 casualties, including Major Theodore Winthrop killed (10 June 1861).

Big Black River ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

In a failed offensive east from besieged Vicksburg, on the Mississippi, Confederate General John C. Pemberton fell back from Champion Hill, and his rearguard under General John S. Bowen attempted to defend the Big Black River, Mississippi. Overwhelmed by General John A. McClernand, who captured 1,800 men and 18 guns, the Confederates retreated to Vicksburg (17 May 1863).

Big Blue River ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Confederate General Sterling Price crossed Missouri to reach Independence, then found himself between two Union armies southeast of Kansas City. While he attacked Westport, Generals Joseph O. Shelby and John S. Marmaduke failed in an attempt to hold the Big Blue River against Generals James G. Blunt and Alfred Pleasanton, and retreated south (22–23 October 1864).

Big Cypress Swamp ❙ 1855 ❙ 3rd Seminole Indian War

When a survey patrol under Lieutenant George L. Hartsuff entered the Big Cypress Swamp, in southwest Florida, there was a confused dispute with the Seminole leader Billy Bowlegs, and the troops were attacked. Four soldiers were killed and three wounded, including Hartsuff, before the survivors returned north to Fort Myers, triggering renewed war with the Seminole (19 December 1855).

Big Dry Wash ❙ 1882 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Refusing to surrender after defeat at Cibecue (August 1881), 60 Apache under Natiotish ambushed Captain Adna Chaffee in the Big Dry Wash, on the East Clear Creek near the Verde River in Arizona. Reinforced by Major Andrew Evans, the troops outflanked and defeated the Indians, killing Natiotish and about 25 others. The shattered survivors fled back to the reservation (17 July 1882).

Big Hole River ❙ 1877 ❙ Nez Percé Indian War

Nez Percé Chief Joseph leading the epic retreat from the Clearwater River was attacked at the Big Hole River, near Wisdom, Montana, by General John Gibbon advancing from the east. Joseph boldly besieged Gibbon but, with almost 90 killed and General Oliver Howard's force approaching, the Indians continued east through Yellowstone Park towards Canyon Creek (9–11 August 1877).

Big Meadow ❙ 1856 ❙ Rogue River War

In an attempt to intervene between warring settlers and Indians on the Rogue River in southern Oregon, 350 troops under Captain Andrew Jackson Smith were ambushed by Takelma Chief Old John at Big Meadow. When Smith was reinforced next day by Captain Christopher Augur, the Indians were routed and sent to reservations. Old John was imprisoned on Alcatraz (27–29 May 1856).

Big Mound ❙ 1863 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

Marching into central North Dakota after defeating the Santee Sioux at Wood Lake, General Henry Hastings Sibley repulsed an attack on his camp by a joint force of Santee and Teton under Inkpaduta, then counter-attacked at Big Mound in modern Kidder County. Driven out by artillery fire, the Indians withdrew and were beaten again two days later at Dead Buffalo Lake (24 July 1863).

Big Sandy ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

See Sandy Creek

Bihac ❙ 1992–1995 ❙ Bosnian War

When Serbs attacked the largely Muslim Bihac Pocket in northwest Bosnia, a long siege saw massive shelling and costly fighting. In a perceived failure of international policy, much of the UN "safe haven" was over-run by Serbs and renegade Muslim Fikret Abdic. Bihac town held out under General Artif Dudakovic until relieved by Croatia's offensive towards Knin (21 April 1992–6 August 1995).

Bihar ❙ 1761 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Suan

Bijapur ❙ 1679 ❙ Mughal Conquest of the Deccan Sultanates

Having captured the Maratha fortress of Bhupalgarh in April, Mughal Viceroy Dilir Khan attacked Muslim Bijapur, held by his former ally Regent Sidi Mas'ud, who had joined forces with the Marathas. After a failed bombardment, and with Shivaji attacking the Mughal forces in the rear, Dilir Khan was forced to retire, ravaging the region as he withdrew (18 August–15 November 1679).

Bijapur ❙ 1685–1686 ❙ Mughal Conquest of the Deccan Sultanates

Imperial forces advancing against the Muslim sultanates of central India again besieged the powerful fortress of Bijapur, which had resisted them five years earlier. Sultan Sikander Adil Shah, who had hired Maratha auxiliaries, was finally forced to surrender after Emperor Aurangzeb himself arrived to take command, ending the independent kingdom of Bijapur (27 March 1685–12 September 1686).

Bijapur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

At war with rebel forces in Gwalior after victory at Kankrauli (14 August), Major George Robertson pursued Ajit Singh (uncle of Man Singh, Rajah of Narwar) to Bijapur, on the Parbati, 25 miles west of Guna. Roberston surprised the rebel camp after forced marches, and the force of about 600 mutineers was destroyed, with more than 400 reported killed or wounded (4 September 1858).

Bila Hora ❙ 1620 ❙ Thirty Years War (Bohemian War)

See White Mountain

Bila Tserkva ❙ 1651 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

Just months after disaster at Beresteczko, Cossack leader Bogdan Chmielnicki gathered about 50,000 men for a fresh offensive in the Ukraine. After a bloody yet indecisive action against Poles led by Mikolaj Potocki just south of Kiev at Bila Tservka, both sides withdrew exhausted. Chmielnicki accepted an unfavorable truce until renewing the war in May 1652 at Batoh (24–25 September 1651).

Bilbao ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

French General Bon Adrien de Moncey renewed the offensive in Spain, marching into the Province of Biscay against forces under General Joachim Crespo. A week of hard fighting, culminating in victory at Irurzun, drove Crespo beyond the Ebro, and Bilbao fell on 17 July. A few days later, on 22 July, peace was concluded with Spain and the campaign ended (12–18 July 1795).

Bilbao ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Facing rebellion by Basques, Marshal Jean-Baptiste Bessières sent General Christophe-Antoine Merlin to Bilbao, where he drove off the rebels, with over 1,000 killed, while English ships in the harbour only just eluded capture. The sacked city was recovered by Spanish General Joachim Blake early in October, then promptly retaken by Marshal Francois Lefebvre (16 August 1808).

Bilbao ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Admiral Sir Home Popham campaigned in northern Spain to relieve pressure on the Allied campaign around Salamanca, attacking Portugalete and Lequeitio, while Spanish General Gabriel Mendizabal captured Bilbao from General Claude-Pierre Rouget. A French counter-attack by Generals Rouget and Louis Caffarelli two weeks later recaptured the town (13 & 27–29 August 1812).

Bilbao ❙ 1835 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Over-confident after the capture of Villafranca de Oria in Navarre, Spanish pretender Don Carlos V sent Tomás Zumalacárregui against Bilbao, where he was badly wounded and died ten days later. The siege was continued by Juan Benito Eraso until he was driven off by approaching Liberals under General Jéronimo Valdés. The Carlists were soon routed at Mendigorría (13 June–1 July 1835).

Bilbao ❙ 1836 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Leading a fresh Carlist siege of Bilbao in Navarre, Fernando Modet Count of Casa Eguía eventually came under attack at nearby Luchana by the new Liberal Commander-in-Chief General Baldomero Espartero. When the Carlists were routed and raised their siege, Espartero entered Bilbao next day. He was later created Count of Luchana (9 November–23 December 1836).

Bilbao ❙ 1873–1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

On campaign in Navarre, pretender Don Carlos VII and General Joaquín Elío besieged Bilbao, held by General Ignacio del Castillo. Despite defeat at nearby Somorrostro, Republican commander Marshal Francisco Serrano, supported by Generals Manuel de la Concha and Arsenio Martínez Campos, broke the siege and de la Concha marched on Estella (27 December 1873–2 May 1874).

Bilbao ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Having crushed a Basque offensive at Villarreal de Alava in late 1936, Nationalist forces under Generals Emilio Mola (killed in an air crash), and later Fidel Dávila, launched a massive attack on the Basque capital at Bilbao, held by General Francisco Llano de la Encomienda. With the defensive "Ring of Iron" broken, the city fell and Dávila turned west against Santander (1 April–19 June 1937).

Bilgram ❙ 1540 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Kanauj

Bilin ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

As the Japanese swept into Burma, General Shozo Sakurai advanced from Kuzeik towards Yinon, on the Bilin, while General Hiroshi Takeuchi drove north from Moulmein. British General John Smythe sent in his last reserves to try and hold the river but, after delaying the invaders for four days, the badly outnumbered British fell back towards the Sittang (17–21 February 1942).

Binakayan ❙ 1896 ❙ Philippines War of Independence

Spanish Governor Ramon Blanco recovered from defeat at Imus (5 September), and personally led a large force against the outer defences of Cavite, held by Emilio Aguinaldo.

Despite a bold bayonet assault, Colonel José Marino was repulsed from the strong trenches at Binakayan and, after General Diego de los Rios was driven off at Noveleta, Blanco had to retire (9–11 November 1896).

Binh Gia ❙ 1964–1965 ❙ Vietnam War

After success at Bien Hoa in November, Viet Cong Colonel Ta Minh Kham turned to Binh Gia, 40 miles southeast of Saigon, where an undermanned assault was driven off. A larger attack took the village, and government reinforcements suffered very heavy losses before the Viet Cong withdrew. Actual losses on both sides remain hotly disputed (2–9 & 28–31 December 1964–3 January 1965).

Birch Coulee ❙ 1862 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

Having relieved Fort Ridgely, Minnesota (22 August), Colonel Henry Hastings Sibley sent Major John Renshaw Brown to bury bodies at the nearby Sioux agency overrun by Santee Chief Little Crow. Camped at Birch Coulee, Brown was attacked by Big Eagle and Mankato. By the time Sibley arrived and drove the Indians off, the soldiers had suffered 24 dead and 76 wounded (2–3 September 1862).

Birch Creek ❙ 1878 ❙ Bannock Indian War

Soon after Buffalo Horn was killed at Battle Creek, Idaho, his Bannock people marched into Oregon and joined the Paiute under Chief Egan and medicine man Oytes. After action at Silver Creek, they were heavily defeated by General Oliver Howard and Captain Reuben Bernard north of the Blue Mountains at Birch Creek (Battle Mountain) and soon lost again near Pendleton (8 July 1878).

Bird Creek ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Confederate Colonel Douglas H. Cooper pursued Chief Opothleyahola and his pro-Union Creeks and Seminoles after action at Round Mountain (19 November), and attacked again at Chusto-Talasah, on the Horsehoe bend of Bird Creek, eastern Oklahoma. Cooper finally drove Opothleyahola across the river, followed by a decisive action a few weeks later at Shoal Creek (9 December 1861).

Bir Gafgafa ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

With Rafa secured, General Israel Tal turned inland through Jebel Libni and advanced west on major Egyptian concentrations around Bir Gafgafa. Tal's small force intercepted and destroyed Arab tanks withdrawing from the Sinai, then faced fresh Egyptian armour arriving from Ismaili to counter-attack. The modern Russian tanks were also destroyed and Tal raced for the Suez Canal (7 June 1967).

Bir Hacheim ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

As Axis commander Erwin Rommel launched a massive attack on the British line at Gazala, a powerful encircling movement swung inland around the desert flank at Bir Hacheim. A Free French brigade under General Marie-Pierre Koenig fought a bold defence before they were forced to withdraw and the Germans swept into the British rear to establish the Cauldron (28 May–11 June 1942).

Bir Lahfan ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

See Jebel Libni

Birpur ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Hajipur

Birten ❙ 939 ❙ German Imperial Wars

See Andernach

Biskra ❙ 683 ❙ Muslim Conquest of North Africa

In the Arab conquest of North Africa, the Umayyad General Uqbah ibn Nafi conquered as far west as the Atlantic coast of Morocco. On his return, part of his army was ambushed south of Biskra at Tahuda, in northeastern Algeria, by the Berber "King" Kusayla, supported by Byzantine troops. Uqbah was defeated and killed and the Berbers expelled the Arabs from Ifrikiya (roughly modern Tunisia).

Bismarck* ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

The German battleship Bismarck and heavy cruiser Prince Eugen sank the British battle-cruiser Hood and damaged the battleship Prince of Wales in the Denmark Strait. Subsequently damaged by a torpedo and heading for Brest, Bismarck was dramatically pursued by a large force under Admiral Sir John Tovey and sunk with heavy loss of life, including Admiral Günther Lütjens (23–27 May 1941).

Bismarck Sea ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Sailing from Rabaul to reinforce the garrison at Lae in Papua, 7,000 Japanese soldiers were intercepted in the Bismarck Sea by Australian and American aircraft under US Air Force General George Kenney and by American PT boats. The three-day action saw four destroyers and all eight transports sunk, with 3,000 troops drowned. Only 1,000 reached Lae (2–4 March 1942).

Bithur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Henry Havelock secured victory east of the Ganges at Bashiratganj and four days later had to march northwest from Cawnpore against a fresh rebel force of over 4,000 under Tantia Topi at Bithur. The rebels were driven from the field following very heavy fighting, and Havelock returned to Cawnpore to find he had been superseded by General Sir James Outram (16 August 1857).

Bitlis ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

While Russian General Nikolai Yudenich seized Erzincan, Ahmet Izzet Pasha's Second Army advanced against the Russian left flank, where his corps commander Mustafa Kemal seized Bitlis and Mus. Yudenich counter-attacked and, after prolonged combat west of Lake Van, he retook Bitlis and the Turks abandoned Mus before winter ended the fighting (2 & 23 August 1916).

Bitonto ❙ 1734 ❙ War of the Polish Succession

In support of France against Austria, Don Carlos, son of Philip V of Spain, invaded Austrian-held southern Italy. Having seized Naples he advanced towards Bari, and at nearby Bitonto, General José Carrillo de Albornoz narrowly defeated Austrian forces under General Otto von Traun. Following the war, the Infanta received the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies as Charles III (25 May 1734).

Biyang ❙ 563 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

The small state of Biyang in southern Shandong, traditionally an ally of Chu, came under attack by Chu's enemy Jin (Chin), which attacked the capital to create it as a fief. After an unsuccessful siege by Jin commander Xun Ying, the feudal Lords of Jin's allies wanted to withdraw and return home. However, Xun Ying forced them to make a direct bloody assault, and Biyang fell by storm.

Bizani ❙ 1913 ❙ 1st Balkan War

When Greek General Constantine Sapountzakis advanced into Turkish Macedonia to besiege Jannina, he was blocked by surrounding fortresses, including the key position, 10 miles away at Bizani. A costly assault saw the Greeks driven off with very heavy losses, but Prince Constantine later regrouped his forces for the subsequent successful assault on Jannina (20–23 January 1913).

Bizerte ❙ 1961 ❙ Franco-Tunisian Crisis

With France at war in Algeria, Tunisia demanded France abandon her last naval base, at Bizerte, and besieged the port. Over 10,000 paratroops, Legionnaires and marines, supported by naval bombardment, landed to break the blockade, and heavy fighting killed 1,370 Tunisians (including 700 civilians) and wounded over 2,000. France abandoned Bizerte in October 1963 (19–21 July 1961).

Bizerte-Tunis ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Despite heavy reinforcements from Sicily, Axis forces in Tunisia were cornered in the north by Allied armies converging under British General Harold Alexander. In the final costly fighting, American troops took Bizerte and the British captured nearby Tunis, effectively ending the campaign. General Jürgen von Arnim surrendered 120,000 Italians and 130,000 Germans (6–7 May 1943).

Blaauwberg ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Blueberg

Black and Yellow Offensive ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

See Lutsk

Blackburn's Ford ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Sent west from Washington, D.C., against the Confederates concentrating around Manassas, Union General Irvin McDowell led a reconnaissance in force attempting to cross the Bull Run at Blackburn's Ford, Virginia, guarded by General Pierre G. T. Beaureguard. Despite superior numbers, McDowell was driven off in a prelude to his disaster three days later at Bull Run (18 July 1861).

Blackheath ❙ 1497 ❙ Flammock's Rebellion

In protest against taxes for a Scottish War, Cornish rebels led by Thomas Flammock and Michael Joseph marched towards London, later joined as leader by James Touchet Baron Audley. The Royal army under Giles Lord Daubeney and John de Vere Earl of Oxford crushed the rebels at Deptford Strand, near Blackheath, and Audley, Flammock and Joseph were executed (22 June 1497).

Black Mango Tree ❙ 1761 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

See Panipat

Black Mountain ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Figueras

Black Point ❙ 1835 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

While convoying a wagon train south of Newnansville, Florida, Colonel John Warren of the Florida militia was attacked by Seminole Indians at Black Point near Hogtown (later Gainesville). After the troops were driven off, with eight killed and eight wounded, the Indians looted and burned the wagon train, helping trigger the Dade Massacre and the Second Seminole War (18 December 1835).

Black Rock (1st) ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

British Colonel Cecil Bisshop and 250 men raiding in force across the southern Niagara River into New York State attacked Black Rock, just north of Buffalo, on Lake Erie. They destroyed a barracks, a naval yard and a schooner, and captured valuable supplies. However, they suffered 40 casualties in a sharp American counter-attack and Bisshop was fatally wounded (11 July 1813).

Black Rock (2nd) ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Buffalo

Black Sea ❙ 1993 ❙ Somalian Civil War

See Mogadishu

Blackstocks ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Pursuing General Thomas Sumter after his defeat at Fishing Creek and Fishdam Ford, Tory cavalry leader Colonel Banastre Tarleton attacked Sumter's guerrillas at Blackstock's Plantation, south of Spartanburg, near Enoree, South Carolina. Tarleton's outnumbered force was mauled with greater losses, but Sumter was badly wounded and his force temporarily dispersed (20 November 1780).

Blackwater ❙ 1598 ❙ Tyrone Rebellion

Hugh O'Neill Earl of Tyrone renewed the rebellion of his uncle Shane O'Neill (crushed in 1567 at Letterkenny), and joined Hugh O'Donnell against the English at Yellow Ford on the Blackwater near Armargh. One of England's worst defeats in Ireland saw Lord Lieutenant Sir Henry Bagenal killed along with 2,000 of his men. O'Neill was beaten in December 1601 at Kinsale (14 August 1598).

Bladensburg ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

Advancing up the Patuxent River against Washington, D.C., British forces under General Robert Ross were met just outside the capital at Bladensburg by mainly American militia under the incompetent General William Winders. Despite a courageous defence by Commodore Joshua Barney, the British entered and burned Washington, then sailed against Baltimore (24 August 1814).

Blair's Landing ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Soon after action at Pleasant Hill, Louisiana, Confederate General Tom Green attacked the supporting Union flotilla to the east on the Red River at Blair's Landing. A well-managed defence by General Thomas Kilby Smith and Admiral David D. Porter saw the Confederates repulsed with Green killed. The Union army then withdrew through Monett's Ferry (12–13 April 1864).

Blakely ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On an expedition east from New Orleans, Union General Edward R. S. Canby led an assault on Mobile Bay and laid siege to Fort Blakely, Alabama, northeast of Mobile. With the fall of nearby Spanish Fort, Canby was able to concentrate his forces, and the following day garrison commander General St John R. Liddell surrendered 3,400 men and over 40 guns (2–9 April 1865).

Blanco Canyon ❙ 1871 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

In warfare against Comanche in West Texas after the massacre at Salt Creek (17 May), Colonel Ranald Mackenzie reached the Blanco Canyon, near modern Crosbyton, where a detachment was ambushed by Quanah Parker. Mackenzie arrived to save his men, but heavy snow prevented pursuit. He was later wounded in skirmish (15 October) and the expedition withdrew (10 October 1871).

Blar-na-Leine ❙ 1544 ❙ Scottish Clan Wars

See Shirts

Bleichfeld ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

The French rearguard under General Paul Grenier withdrawing towards the Rhine after defeat at Würzburg attempted to stall General Paul Kray's victorious Austrians just to the southeast at Bleichfeld. The French division escaped under cover of dark after heavy losses in casualties and prisoners and commander General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan sought an armistice (3 September 1796).

Blenau ❙ 1652 ❙ War of the 2nd Fronde

Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé, leading a rebellion against Cardinal Jules Mazarin during the minority of Louis XIV, surprised and defeated part of the Royal army under Marshal Charles d'Hocquincourt at Blenau, near Gien on the Loire. However, Marshal Henri de Turenne rescued the Royal Court at Gien and within months defeated Condé at Etampes and St Antoine (7 April 1652).

Blenheim ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

After victory on the Danube at Donauwörth (2 July), Allied commander John Churchill Duke of Marlborough joined Prince Eugène of Savoy to attack Elector Maximilian Emanuel of Bavaria and Marshal Count Camille de Tallard at nearby Blenheim, east of Höchstädt. The Franco-Bavarian army was shattered, Vienna was saved, and France withdrew behind the Rhine (13 August 1704).

Block Island ❙ 1636 ❙ Pequot Indian War

When Pequot Indians murdered John Oldham near Block Island, off southern New England, Massachusetts Governor Sir Henry Vane sent Captains John Endecott and John Underhill with a punitive expedition against Block Island. There they massacred every male and destroyed the village, which proved to be Narragansett. The Pequot were routed the next year at Mystic (24 August 1636).

Bloemfontein ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Driefontein

Blood River ❙ 1838 ❙ Boer-Zulu War

Boer leader Andries Pretorius recovered from loss at Ethaleni and Tugela and led 500 men against King Dingane. Intercepted at the Ncome, east of Dundee in northern Natal, the Boers inflicted a terrible and decisive defeat with perhaps 3,000 Zulus killed. The Ncome reportedly ran red and was renamed Blood River. Dingane was overthrown later two years at Maqonqo (16 December 1838).

Blood River Poort ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

A guerrilla raid into Natal by Louis Botha was met at Blood River Poort, near the junction with the Buffalo, by a column from nearby Dundee under Major Hubert Gough. Botha attacked and routed Gough, inflicting 50 casualties and taking 240 prisoners, 180 rifles, 30,000 rounds and 200 horses. He then continued into Natal to attack the British position a week later at Fort Itala (17 September 1901).

Bloody Angle ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Spotsylvania Court House

Bloody Bay ❙ 1480 ❙ MacDonald Rebellion

John MacDonald Lord of the Isles made peace with the government and relinquished his Earldom of Ross, but his illegitimate son Angus Og declared war on his father and the King. At Bloody Bay, off Mull, Angus defeated and captured his father, then attempted to continue the rebellion. However, he was murdered in 1490 and the title and Kingdom of the Isles was soon forfeited.

Bloody Brook ❙ 1675 ❙ King Philip's War

See Deerfield

Bloody Meadow ❙ 1471 ❙ Wars of the Roses

See Tewkesbury

Bloody Nose Ridge ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When Americans invaded Peliliu, brutal resistance at the Umurbrogol (Bloody Nose) Ridge cost Colonel Lewis "Chesty" Puller 56 percent of his marines in a week, America's highest ever regimental casualties. He was replaced by army units and the summit was seized, but Japanese Colonel Nunio Nagakawa fought on for months before committing suicide (15 September–25 November 1944).

Bloody Ridge, Guadalcanal ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Recovering from defeat at the Tenaru, Japanese forces on Guadalcanal were reinforced by General Kiyotake Kawaguchi, who attacked with 3,000 men south and east of Henderson Field, supported by heavy naval and aerial bombardment. Colonel Merritt Edson led a decisive defence on Bloody Ridge and Kawaguchi finally withdrew with 1,200 killed (12–14 September 1942).

Bloody Ridge, Korea ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

In the wake of failed truce talks, South Korean and United Nations forces launched a fresh offensive in the east, northeast of Yangu. Very heavy fighting around Bloody Ridge cost perhaps 3,000 Allied and 15,000 Communist casualties. The North Koreans eventually risked being outflanked and withdrew a few miles north to new positions on Heartbreak Ridge (18 August–5 September 1951).

Bloody River ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

See Rapido

Bloody Run ❙ 1763 ❙ Pontiac's War

Captain James Dalyell reached besieged Detroit with 280 men and 22 barges of supplies, then led an impulsive night attack on Ottawa Chief Pontiac's nearby camp. Ambushed at Parent's Creek, in the war's fiercest action, Dalyell and 19 others were killed and 40 were wounded. However, supplies still got through and Pontiac later withdrew. The creek was renamed Bloody Run (31 July 1763).

Bloody Sunday ❙ 1920 ❙ Anglo-Irish War

One of the most notorious incidents of the largely guerrilla campaign against Britain in Ireland saw troops of the Royal Irish Constabulary (Black and Tans) open fire with machine-guns into a football crowd at Croke Park, Dublin (later claiming they were returning fire from Republicans). The incident left 12 dead and 60 wounded, and the bitter war continued until July 1921 (21 November 1920).

Bloody Swamp ❙ 1742 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Invading British colonial Georgia from Florida and Cuba, 3,000 Spanish troops under Antonio Anedondo and Governor de Montiano landed on St Simons Island, at the mouth of the Altamaha. The Spaniards were heavily repulsed in a fierce action at the nearby Bloody Swamp by James Oglethorpe, founder of the new colony, and re-embarked, securing the future of Georgia (June 1742).

Bloody Tanks ❙ 1864 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

When the Rancher King S. Woolsey set out with 30 Americans and 14 Maricopa and Pima Indians in pursuit of stolen cattle, he met about 250 Apache at Bloody Tanks, in the Aravaipa Canyon in southeast Arizona. With the Indians lured to a false parley, Woolsey opened fire and 24 died, including Chief Parramucca. Cyrus Lennon of Woolsey's party was also killed (24 January 1864).

Blore Heath ❙ 1459 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Richard Neville Earl of Salisbury was marching south from Yorkshire to join his son-in-law Richard Duke of York when he was intercepted in Shropshire by a larger Lancastrian force under James Baron Audley. At Blore Heath, three miles east of Market Drayton, Lord Audley was defeated and killed and his army was virtually destroyed, with perhaps 4,000 dead (3 September 1459).

Blouberg ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Blueberg

Bloukranz ❙ 1838 ❙ Boer-Zulu War

At war with the Boers in Natal after ordering the Retief Massacre, Zulu King Dingane sent his forces against Trekkers encamped near the Tugela. In a night attack at Bloukranz, the entire camp was killed, but the Zulus were eventually driven off at nearby Saailaager, outside modern Estcourt. An attempted Boer counter-offensive was routed two months later at Ethaleni (17–18 February 1838).

Blountsville ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Campaigning in the far northeast of Tennessee, Union commander Ambrose Burnside sent Colonel John W. Foster, who captured Bristol, then attacked Blountsville on the Watauga, held by Colonel James E. Carter. After an artillery duel destroyed much of the town, Carter withdrew. The following month Foster supported an attack to the southwest at Blue Springs (22 September 1863).

Blueberg ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

In response to renewed French occupation of Holland, Britain again sent a force to occupy the Dutch Cape of Good Hope, seized in 1795, and returned to Holland in 1803. General Sir David Baird landed a force on 5 January and, three days later at Blueberg, defeated Dutch General Jan Willem Janssens. Within ten days he had captured Capetown and the entire colony (8 January 1806).

Blue Licks ❙ 1782 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Simon Girty led Canadians and Indians into Kentucky against Bryan's (Bryants') Station and nearby Fort Lexington before withdrawing before pursuing militia under Colonel Daniel Boone and Major Hugh McGary. Forty miles away on the Licking at Blue Licks, in the "last battle of the war," the outnumbered militia rashly attacked and 70 died, including Boone's son Israel (19 August 1782).

Blue Mills Landing ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

With Confederate forces besieging Lexington, Missouri, "General" David R. Atchison moved south against a Union column under Colonel John Scott near the town of Liberty. Crossing the Missouri at Blue Mills Landing, Atchison marched towards Liberty and soon met Scott's approaching force, which was defeated and fled. Lexington surrendered three days later (17 September 1861).

Blue Mounds ❙ 1832 ❙ Black Hawk Indian War

See Wisconsin Heights

Blue Springs ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

While campaigning in northeast Tennessee, Union forces captured Blountsville, and General Samuel P. Carter later advanced on Greeneville against Confederate General John S. Williams. Williams suffered heavy losses in battle just to the west at Blue Springs (modern Mosheim) and, threatened in the rear by General John W. Foster, he withdrew into Virginia (10 October 1863).

Blue Water ❙ 1362 ❙ Russian-Mongol Wars

See Syni Vody

Blue Water Massacre ❙ 1855 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

See Ash Hollow

Blumenau ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

Prince Friedrich Karl of Prussia followed his great victory at Königgratz by sending Generals Eduard von Fransecky and Julius von Bose across the Main to prevent the Austrians reaching Vienna. Unaware an armistice was imminent, the Prussians attacked at Blumenau, northwest of Pressburg, and there was costly fighting before news of the armistice brought the battle to an end (22 July 1866).

Boadilla del Monte ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

As part of the major campaign against Madrid along the Corunna Road, severe fighting focussed on the small town of Boadilla del Monte, 20 miles west of the capital. Nationalists seized the town in heavy hand-to-hand fighting against International Brigades, lost it to Republican Regulars under Major Luis Barcelo, then took it again in a bloody counter-attack (14–19 December 1936).

Boa Ogoi Massacre ❙ 1863 ❙ Bear River Indian War

See Bear River

Bobe ❙ 1906 ❙ Bambatha Rebellion

Squeezed from their land, and with their crops and cattle decimated by pests, Zulus in Natal under the minor Chief Bambatha rebelled against a new poll tax and gathered in the Nkandla Forest. In the first major action of the rising, advancing government troops were ambushed near the Bobe Ridge by rebels under Sigananda. He was driven off and withdrew towards the Mome Gorge (5 May 1906).

Böblingen ❙ 1525 ❙ German Peasants' War

After victory at Leipheim (4 April), Georg Truchsess von Waldburg fought across Würtemberg against a combined peasant force under Matem Feuerbacker, Theus Gerber and Jaecklein Rohrbach. On marshy ground at Böblingen, southwest of Stuttgart, the peasant army was utterly routed. Rohrbach, who had instigated the massacre at Weinsberg in April, was captured and roasted alive (12 May 1525).

Bobruysk ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

General Konstanin Rokossovsky on the left of the Russian offensive into Belorussia rapidly encircled five divisions of the German Ninth Army at Bobruysk on the main railway to Minsk. Aided by devastating air support, Rokossovsky rapidly crushed the pocket, with perhaps 30,000 Germans killed and 20,000 captured. The Russians then drove northwest towards Minsk (24–29 June 1944).

Bocairente ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

Campaigning in Valenica, Spanish Republican General Valeriano Weyler was attacked at Bocairente, northwest of Alcoy, by a greatly superior Carlist force under General José Santés. Weyler was intially driven back, losing some of his guns. But a brilliant counter-attack turned defeat into victory. Santés was heavily repulsed and forced to withdraw (22 December 1873).

Bodegas ❙ 1860 ❙ Ecuadorian Civil Wars

In war between rival Presidents Guillermo Franco in Guayaquil and Gabriel García Moreno in Quito, the old hero General Juan José Flores returned from exile in Peru to support García Moreno and led his Conservative army to decisive victory at Bodegas on the Guayas. When Flores advanced on Guayaquil, Franco fled into exile and Ecuador was unified under García Moreno (7 August 1860).

Bodrum ❙ 1824 ❙ Greek War of Independence

As Turkish Admiral Khosrew Pasha and Egyptian Ibrahim Pasha assembled at Bodrum in Turkey, opposite Cos, Greek Admiral Andreas Miaoulis twice lured their fleet out to fight. After an initial indecisive action, the Greeks destroyed two Turkish vessels with fireships, forcing an Ottoman withdrawal. However, Miaoulis was unable to prevent the invasion of Crete (5 & 10 September 1824).

Boffalora ❙ 1636 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Tornavento

Bogesund ❙ 1520 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

Opposed to the pro-Danish Stolle faction in Sweden, Regent Sten Sture the Younger repulsed Christian II of Denmark at Brännkyrka in 1518, but was defeated and mortally wounded at Bogesund near Lake Asunden in southeast Sweden by Danish General Otte Krumpen. The subsequent suppression of the Sture party in the "Stockholm Bloodbath" led to the rise of Gustav Vasa (20 January 1520).

Bogotá ❙ 1813 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

See Santa Fé de Bogotá

Bogotá ❙ 1814 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

Entering Colombia to support the revolutionary government in Tunja, Simón Bolívar and a largely Venezuelan force besieged Bogotá, held by local Dictator Manuel Bernardo Alvarez and General José Ramón de Leiva against the new national union. The city fell by storm after two days, with much needless bloodshed, and Bolívar marched north against Cartagena (8–10 December 1814).

Bogotá ❙ 1854 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

When General José Maria Melo seized power in a coup (17 April 1854), his forces met with initial success. But after defeat at Pamplona, Palmira and Bosa Bridge, Melo was finally defeated at Bogotá by forces of the legitimate government under General Pedro Alcántara Herrán. Melo fled into exile and was later killed in a Mexican rebellion (4 December 1854).

Bogotá ❙ 1861 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

Former President General Tomás Cipriano de Mosquera resumed war against the government of Mariano Ospina, eventually advancing on the Colombian capital to win at nearby Subachoque. Mosquera then defeated General Ramón Espina at Bogotá itself to overthrow acting President Bartolomé Calvo. In 1863 he defended his country against Ecuador at Cuaspud (18 July 1861).

Bogowonto ❙ 1751 ❙ Later Dutch Wars in the East Indies

See Jenar

Bogue Forts (1st) ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

In a fresh offensive against China, British Superintendent Captain Charles Elliot led an expeditionary force against the Bogue (Boca Tigris) Forts at the mouth of the Zhujiang River, supported by troops under Major Thomas Pratt. After Chuanbi and Taikok were captured in heavy fighting, Admiral Guan Tianpei was defeated and driven off in a naval action nearby (7 January 1841).

Bogue Forts (2nd) ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

British Superintendent Captain Charles Elliot renewed his offensive against the Bogue Forts guarding the Zhujiang River, leading a larger force of 26 warships against Chinese commander Qishan. Forty war junks were routed, with Admiral Guan Tianpei killed. Wangtong and Anunghoy (Weiyuan) were taken, opening the river to advance on Guangzhou three months later (26 February 1841).

Bois le Duc ❙ 1629 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

See Hertogenbosch

Bois-le-Duc ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

As a French Republican army under General Charles Pichegru advanced into southern Holland, British and Dutch forces led by Prince Frederick Augustus Duke of York were defeated at Bois-le-Duc (Hertogenbosch or Den Bosch). York was forced to abandon the position and, after a failed counter-attack at Boxtel next day, he retreated back across the Meuse (14 September 1794).

Boju ❙ 506 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

King He-lü built up the military power of Wu and, when Chu attacked the small state of Cai (Ts'ai), He-lü united with Cai and Tang to invade Chu. At Boju, on the Han, the Allies routed the Chu army of General Nang Wa and Marshal Shenyin Xu and advanced to briefly occupy the capital at Ying. But in the face of Qin (Ch'in) intervention and an attempted coup at home, He-lü withdrew to Wu.

Bokhara ❙ 1220 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

Launching his western offensive against the Khwarezmian Empire, the Mongol Genghis Khan left his sons to besiege Otrar and continued west against Bokhara, defended by a Khwarezmian Turk garrison after Sultan Mohammad II fled. When Bokhara fell, it was destroyed. Thousands of prisoners were then used as a human shield for the advance east against Samarkand (February–March 1220).

Bokhara ❙ 1868 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

When Russian troops captured Tashkent in the Khanate of Bokhara, General Konstantin von Kaufmann took a fresh force against Bokhara itself, where Amir Muzaffar al Din's army was rapidly crushed. The Amir signed a peace treaty with von Kaufmann (18 June 1868), and within a few years the Russian commander turned his attention against the neighbouring Khanates of Khiva and Khokand.

Bolia ❙ 469 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

Campaigning in Pannonia, a Roman and tribal coalition under the Suevic King Hunimond, supported by Gepids and others, met the Ostrogoth Theodimer at the River Bolia (probably the Ipel, north of Budapest). When the Goths secured a decisive victory, an approaching Roman army under Aspar turned back, and Emperor Leo made peace with Theodoric of the Thracian Goths.

Bolimov ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

German General August von Mackensen took the offensive in northern Poland with a winter advance southwest of Warsaw at Bolimov against General Vasili Gurko, including the first reported use of gas. While the German attack was driven off with about 20,000 casualties, it created a diversion from the main advance further north at the Masurian Lakes (31 January–2 February 1915).

Bolingbroke ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars
See Winceby

Bolkhov ❙ 1608 ❙ Russian Time of Troubles
Supported by a Polish-Cossack army, a pretender claiming to be Dimitri—murdered son of former Tsar Ivan IV—marched from Orel to Bolkhov and met the army of Tsar Basil Shuiski under his brother Prince Dimitri Shuiski. Led by Prince Roman Rozynski, the army of the "Second False Dimitri" achieved a remarkable victory, then advanced towards Khodynka near Moscow (24 April 1608).

Bologna ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)
Assaulting the Gothic Line across northern Italy, Americans attacked from the Apennines and the British from Rimini. Heaviest fighting was south of Bologna, where American General Mark Clark was halted by a counter-offensive under Field Marshal Albert Kesselring. The British took Ravenna, but the advance stalled until the attack into the Po Valley in April 1945 (19 October–7 December 1944).

Bolshoi-Stakhov ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)
After Napoleon Bonaparte's disaster crossing the Berezina on his retreat from Moscow, Russian Admiral Paul Tchitchakov and cavalry of General Sergei Lanskoi tried to cut off the defeated French west of the Berezina at Bolshoi-Stakhov. Troops under Marshals Michel Ney and Nicolas Oudinot managed to repulse the attack, and the terrible withdrawal continued (29 November 1812).

Bolton ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars
As a Parliamentary outpost in Royalist Lancashire, Bolton withstood attacks in February 1643 and January 1644, before Prince Rupert and James Stanley Earl of Derby led a third massive assault. Following a brief siege, Colonel Alexander Rigby escaped when the city fell by storm, with up to 1,500 Puritans killed. Derby was later executed for the so-called Bolton Massacre (28 May 1644).

Bomarsund ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War
An Anglo-French expedition under Admiral Sir Charles Napier (1786–1860) attacked Russia in the Baltic, where they bombarded Bomarsund on the Aland Islands, at the mouth of the Gulf of Bothnia. French Marshal Achille Baraguay d'Hillier then landed a strong force, and the Russian garrison surrendered. Another Baltic diversion was attempted a year later at Sveaborg (7–16 August 1854).

Bombino ❙ 1822 ❙ Colombian War of Independence
See Bomboná

Bomboná ❙ 1822 ❙ Colombian War of Independence
Patriot leader Simón Bolívar marched into modern southwestern Colombia, advancing on Pasto, defended by Spanish Colonel Don Basilio García in mountains to the south at Bomboná. Bolívar lost very heavy casualties in a rash attack on entrenched positions and was forced to withdraw. However, Garcia surrendered Pasto after Patriot victory in Ecuador at Pichincha (7 April 1822).

Bomdila ❙ 1962 ❙ Sino-Indian War
Renewing their offensive in the border war in northeast India, Chinese forces took Se La, then drove south through Dirang Dzong towards the last major Indian position at Bomdila, where troops under General Anant Singh Pathania were badly beaten in a major defeat. China declared a unilateral ceasefire and partly withdrew, but retained some key strategic conquests (18–19 November 1962).

Bomischbrod ❙ 1434 ❙ Hussite Wars
See Lipany

Bone ❙ 430–431 ❙ Roman Vandal Wars
See Hippo Regius

Bonn ❙ 1673 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

After invading Alsace and Lorraine, Louis XIV of France faced increasingly united enemies, and Marshal Henri de Turenne was unable to prevent Imperial commander Count Raimondo Montecocculi marching from Bohemia to join William of Orange besieging Bonn. The city fell to overwhelming forces and France's German allies were forced out of the war (7–12 November 1673).

Bonsaso ❙ 1824 ❙ 1st British-Ashanti War

Marching west of Accra, in Gold Coast (Ghana), to resist the Ashanti moving towards the coast, a small force of Royal African regulars and local militia led by General Sir Charles McCarthy crossed the Pra and were then surrounded at Bonsaso by a reputed 10,000 warriors. The British lost 178 men killed, including McCarthy, but the Ashanti were eventually repulsed in 1826 at Dodowa (21 January 1824).

Bon Son ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

Up to 20,000 Americans, South Vietnamese and South Koreans supported the coastal offensive at Tuy Hoa with a massive offensive further north in Bin Dinh to secure the rice bowl Bon Son Plain. The huge action—Operations Double Eagle and Masher (renamed White Wing)—saw severe losses on both sides before the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars withdrew (24 January–6 March 1966).

Boomah Pass ❙ 1850 ❙ 8th Cape Frontier War

In renewed war against the Xhosa Chief Sandile, Colonel George Mackinnon took 700 regulars and Colonials from Fort Cox across the Wolf River towards the Amatola Mountains. Ambushed at Boomah Pass, near the Keiskamma River, they lost 23 killed and 23 wounded and withdrew to Fort White. An outlying picket of 15 men was killed next day (24 December 1850).

Boomplaats ❙ 1848 ❙ Orange Free State War

Resisting British annexation of the Orange River Valley, Boers under Andries Pretorius took up arms. When they attacked Bloemfontein, British General Sir Harry Smith marched north from Cape Colony and at Boomplaats, south of Hopetown, the Boers were defeated. A few years later, after defeat at Viervoet and Berea, the British withdrew from north of the Orange (29 August 1848).

Boonsboro ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As General Robert E. Lee's defeated Confederate army fell back to the Potomac after defeat at Gettysburg, cavalry under General James "Jeb" Stuart attempted to delay the pursuing Union army of General George G. Meade at Boonsboro, Maryland, west of South Mountain. Stuart fell back after inconclusive action and, a week later, Lee crossed into Virginia at Williamsport (8 July 1863).

Boonville ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Determined to prevent Missouri joining the Confederacy, Union General Nathaniel Lyon secured Jefferson City, then pursued secessionist Governor Claiborne Price up the Missouri towards Boonville, where Lyon defeated Confederates led by Colonel John S. Marmaduke under General Sterling Price. Claiborne's forces were defeated again to the southwest at Carthage (17 June 1861).

Boquerón, Gran Chaco ❙ 1932 ❙ Chaco War

When war broke out between Paraguay and Bolivia in the Chaco Boreal over the incident at Carlos Antonio López in June, 8,000 Paraguayans under Colonel Carlos José Fernández besieged Boquerón. Outnumbered Bolivian Colonel Manuel Marzana was forced to surrender after three weeks' heavy fighting, but Bolivia soon attacked further south at Nanawa and Gondra (9–29 September 1932).

Boquerón, Nhembucu ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

A week after action at Yataití-Corá, Paraguayan President Francisco Solano López attacked Argentine General Venancio Flores and Brazilian Marshal Polidoro to the southwest at Boquerón, at the junction of the Paraguay and the Upper Parana. The Allies broke off the action after about 5,000 casualties—twice the Paraguayan losses—and López claimed a great victory (16–18 July 1866).

Bordeaux ❙ 732 ❙ Muslim Invasion of France

Abd-ar-Rahman, Umayyad Muslim Governor of Spain, crossed the Pyrenees into France and invaded Aquitaine to avenge the Arab defeat at Toulouse ten years earlier at the hands of Duke Eudo of Aquitaine. At Bordeaux, Eudo once again confronted the invaders and was heavily defeated. He then made peace with Charles Martel of the Franks and joined him for the decisive battle at Tours.

Bordeaux ❙ 1453 ❙ Hundred Years War

After destroying an English army at the siege of Castillon in July, French Master of Artillery, General Jean Bureau, marched west to besiege the remaining English garrison at Bordeaux. Cut off by a naval blockade of the River Gironde, the starving garrison surrendered, bringing the war to an end and leaving Calais as England's only remaining foothold in France (19 October 1453).

Bordeaux ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington defeated Marshal Nicolas Soult at Orthez, then ordered General Sir William Beresford north to capture the great French port of Bordeaux. The Bonapartist garrison fled after a military demonstration rather than a battle, and local Royalists surrendered the city. Beresford then returned southeast to support Wellington in battle at Tarbes (12 March 1814).

Borghetto ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Two weeks after capturing Milan, Napoleon Bonaparte continued pursuing Austrian General Jean-Pierre de Beaulieu, who attempted to make a stand on the Mincio. Defending a partially demolished bridge at Borghetto, near Peschiera, the Austrians were again defeated and driven north into the Tyrol. Bonaparte meanwhile besieged the powerful fortified city of Mantua (30 May 1796).

Borghetto ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

In support of the campaign in France, Austrian forces in northern Italy under Count Heinrich von Bellegarde advanced from Borghetto across the Mincio. On the heights of nearby Vallegio, Prince Eugène de Beauharnais, supported by Generals Paul Grenier and Jean-Antoine Verdier, forced the Austrians back. He was later forced to sign an armistice, ending the war in Italy (8–10 February 1814).

Borgomanero ❙ 1449 ❙ Milanese War of Succession

Amid confusion following the death of Filippo Visconti Duke of Milan, his son-in-law Francesco Sforza secured Borgomanero, northwest of Milan, which was then attacked by his rival, Duke Ludovico of Savoy. In a famous defence by Bartolomeo Colleoni, the army of Savoy was badly beaten, and Ludovico had to withdraw. Sforza then besieged Milan and later became Duke (22 April 1449).

Borisov ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

As Napoleon Bonaparte's retreat from Moscow approached the Berezina, Polish forces under General Jean Henri Dombrowski fell back to Borisov to secure a bridgehead for the retreating army. Russian forces under General Karl de Lambert drove Dombrowski across the bridge with heavy losses, and that night Admiral Paul Tchitchakov had reached Borisov (21 November 1812).

Borneo ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Overshadowed by major campaigns in Okinawa and the Philippines, Australian forces under General Leslie Morshead attacked Japanese troops isolated in northern Borneo. Landings at Tarakan, Brunei Bay and Balikpapan saw over 600 Australians and about 4,500 Japanese killed in a campaign regarded by some as wholly unnecessary in the twilight of the war (1 May–15 August 1945).

Bornholm ❙ 1535 ❙ Danish Counts' War

When Count Christopher of Oldenberg intervened in the Danish succession, his army was beaten at Oksnebjerg, and at the same time his Lubeck navy was decisively defeated off Bornholm by a combined Danish-Swedish fleet under Peder Skram. A few days later, Skram defeated a smaller squadron off Svendborg, on Funen, then sailed to support the siege of Copenhagen (9 & 14 June 1535).

Bornholm ❙ 1676 ❙ Scania War

See Oland

Bornholm ❙ 1789 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

In war with Russia over Finland, Swedish naval forces withdrew to Sveaborg near Helsinki after battle near Hogland (July 1788). Swedish Admiral Karl Ehrensward broke Russia's blockade and met Admiral Paul Vasili Tchitchakov off southern Sweden near Bornholm. The Swedes were forced back to nearby Karlskrona, and a month later met the Russians again off Oland (26 June 1789).

Bornhoved ❙ 1227 ❙ Danish Wars of Expansion

Waldemar II of Denmark was ransomed from captivity in Schwerin and later took a large force to Schleswig Holstein to punish Heinrich of Schwerin and his allies Adolf of Holstein and Albert of Saxony. At Bornhoved, east of Neumunster, Waldemar lost heavily to the Germans, ending Danish dominance in northern Europe until 150 years later under Waldemar IV (22 July 1227).

Bornos ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marching out from Gibraltar, Spanish General Francisco Ballesteros surprised French forces under General Jean-Baptiste Semele, who had been campaigning northeast from Cadiz. Ballesteros attacked Semele near the Guadalete River at Bornos, but the outnumbered French cut their way through for the loss of about 100 prisoners and made it safely back to Cadiz (5 November 1811).

Bornos ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Spanish General Francisco Ballesteros unwisely advanced from Gibraltar and took 8,000 men to attack General Baron Nicolas-Francois Conroux, who had occupied an entrenched position at Bornos, northeast of Cadiz. An unexpected sortie saw the French kill or capture 1,500 Spaniards, then drive Ballesteros back to San Roque (1 June 1812).

Borny ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

See Colombey

Borodino ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

Advancing into Russia past Smolensk, Napoleon Bonaparte met Prince Mikhail Kutuzov at Borodino on the Moskva, west of Moscow. In one of his bloodiest battles, Bonaparte inflicted over 40,000 Russian casualties—including Prince Pyotr Bagration fatally wounded—then seized Moscow. Loss of up to 20,000 French soldiers was however a critical blow to his campaign (7 September 1812).

Boroughbridge ❙ 1322 ❙ Rebellion of the Marches

Threatened by rebellion among northern Barons led by Thomas Earl of Lancaster and Humphry de Bohun Earl of Hereford, King Edward II sent an army into Yorkshire under Sir Andrew Harclay. At Boroughbridge, on the Ure southeast of Ripon, the Lancastrians were defeated, with Hereford killed. Lancaster was captured and beheaded, while Harclay was created Earl of Carlisle (16 March 1322).

Borough Hill ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

When Leicester fell to Charles I (31 May), General Sir Thomas Fairfax abandoned the Parliamentary siege of Oxford and pursued the King into Northamptonshire. Fairfax routed outlying Royalists units in a preliminary action near Kislingbury at Borough Hill, east of Daventry. Two days later his Ironsides destroyed the King's main army at Naseby (12 June 1645).

Boroughmuir ❙ 1335 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Pro-English Flemish mercenaries under Count Guy of Namur, who landed at Berwick and advanced on Edinburgh, were attacked at nearby Boroughmuir by Scottish Royalists led by John Randolph Earl of Moray, Sir Alexander Ramsay and Sir William Douglas of Liddesdale. The Flemings were heavily defeated, then escorted across the border to England (August 1335).

Borovitsa ❙ 1625 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

Polish commander Stanislas Koniecpolski beat Tatars in the southern Ukraine at Martynow (June 1624), then attacked unruly Cossacks further east at Borovitsa, near Chigirin, under Hetman Marko Zhmailo, but failed to secure victory. Poland made the compromise Peace of Kurukove with Zhmailo's successor Mikhail Doroshenko and Koniecpolski marched to Prussia to fight the Swedes.

Bor Pansky ❙ 1420 ❙ Hussite Wars

Continuing war against Sigismund of Hungary after victory at Vitkov (14 July), the Hussite Jan Zizka besieged Bor Pansky (modern Bor Maly) west of Strakonice, held for the Royalist Baron Ulrich of Rosenberg, who arrived too late to save the town. Rosenberg was defeated in battle nearby after heavy losses on both sides and was thus unable to support Sigismund at Vysehrad (12 October 1420).

Boshof ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

While attacking Lord Paul Methuen's communications east of Kimberley, French commander Georges Henri Comte de Villebois-Mareuil and his pro-Boer foreign contingent were intercepted and surrounded by Methuen at Boshof near Tweefontein. Heavy shell-fire killed 10 (including Villebois-Mareuil) and wounded 11, and the 51 survivors surrendered (5 April 1900).

Bosra ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

Soon after Khalid ibn al-Walid beat a Byzantine force east of Damascus at Marj Rahit, local Muslim commander Abu Ubayd sent Shurahbil against Bosra, south of Damascus. The garrison marched out, and fierce fighting ensued before Khalid arrived with reinforcements. The Byzantines withdrew under siege and Bosra soon surrendered, the first major Syrian town to fall to Islam (July 634).

Boston ❙ 1775–1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Withdrawing after skirmishes at Lexington and Concord, which triggered the war, British forces fell back on Boston, initially led by General Thomas Gage. After a long American siege, commanded by General Artemus Ward and later George Washington, and action at Bunker Hill, the British were eventually permitted to evacuate and sailed for Halifax (19 April 1775–17 May 1776).

Boston Harbour ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

The American frigate Chesapeake (Captain James Lawrence) emerging from Boston was met by the British frigate Shannon (Captain Philip Broke). After a brief ship-to-ship action, Chesapeake was captured with heavy casualties and entered British service. The last words of the mortally wounded Lawrence—"Don't give up the ship"—became a rallying cry for the American cause (1 June 1813).

Bosworth Field ❙ 1485 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Henry Tudor invaded England against the Yorkist usurper Richard III and gathered Lancastrian support. He marched to meet the King at Bosworth, west of Leicester and, when Henry Percy Earl of Northumberland deserted and Lord Thomas and Sir William Stanley charged sides, Richard was defeated and killed. The war ended and Tudor was crowned as Henry VII (22 August 1485).

Boteler's Ford ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Shepherdstown

Bothaville ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

In a remarkable coup, British General Charles Knox surprised a commando under General Christiaan de Wet at Bothaville, on the Valsch, west of Roodewal. Attacked at dawn, de Wet was routed and fled, along with Marthinus Steyn, President of the Orange Free State. A bloody rearguard action allowed the main force to escape, but the Boers lost all their field guns (6 November 1900).

Bothwell Bridge ❙ 1679 ❙ Scottish Covenanter Rebellion

Rising against Episcopalianism, non-conformist Covenanters repulsed a small government force at Drumclog (1 June), then soon faced an army under James Duke of Monmouth and John Graham of Claverhouse. At Bothwell Bridge, on the Clyde southeast of Glasgow, the rebels were crushed, with heavy losses. Two leaders were hanged and about 250 others were transported (22 June 1679).

Bou Denib ❙ 1908 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Determined to avenge French losses on the western Algerian border at El Menabba in April, a punitive expedition under General Charles Vigy attacked more than 6,000 Moroccans further west at Bou Denib, just inside modern Morocco. Very heavy fighting saw the Moroccans defeated and a garrison was established. A Moroccan attack in September was repulsed at nearby Djorf (13 May 1908).

Boudicca ❙ 61 ❙ Roman Conquest of Britain

When King Prasutagus of the Iceni died, Rome tried to increase control, and his widow Queen Boudicca attacked Camulodunum (Colchester) and Londinium before her army was utterly defeated by Governor Suetonius Paulinus at an uncertain site, possibly near Verulamium (St Albans) or modern Towcester or perhaps Mancetter. Boudicca escaped the ensuing massacre and reputedly took poison.

Bougainville ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Allied forces secured Guadalcanal, then attacked Bougainville, held by 35,000 under General Haruyoshi Hyakutake. Landing at Empress Augusta Bay, the marines defended their perimeter at Piva Forks, followed by months of Japanese counter-attacks. The final Japanese assault (8–25 March) was driven off with up to 5,000 killed, but Japanese resistance continued (1 November 1943–March 1944).

Bougie ❙ 1510 ❙ Spanish Colonial Wars in North Africa

A year after taking Oran in Algeria, Spanish commander Pedro Navarro led a fresh expedition against the once-powerful port of Bougie, 120 miles east of Algiers. The Spanish captured and fortified Bougie and held it against counter-attacks from Algiers by the Corsair Arudj in 1512 and 1515. In 1555, the port was retaken by Salah Rais, Pasha of Algiers, and soon fell into decay (January 1510).

Bougie ❙ 1671 ❙ Corsair Wars

Admiral Sir Edward Spragge continued war against the Barbary pirates, taking the English Mediterranean fleet against the Corsair anchorage at Bougie in northeast Algeria. Breaking the protective boom, he destroyed the entire pirate fleet, sinking seven ships and capturing three. The Algerians then killed their Dey and forced his successor to make peace (8 May 1671).

Boulay ❙ 1635 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Withdrawing from Mainz on the Rhine, French under Louis de Nogaret Cardinal de la Valette and Bernard of Saxe-Weimar suffered heavy losses retreating southwest across the mountains, pursued by Imperial commander Count Matthias Gallas. Crossing the Saar at Wallerfangen, Bernard routed a rearguard attack at nearby Boulay and the French army safely reached Metz (September 1635).

Boulcott's Farm ❙ 1846 ❙ 1st New Zealand War

With Maori war parties raiding settlements outside Wellington, about 200 men under Topine Te Mamaku attacked Lieutenant George Page's remote British garrison at Boulcott's Farm, in the Hutt Valley. The Europeans lost eight killed before Te Mamaku was driven off and withdrew to Wanganui. Another action at Horokiri soon ended fighting around Wellington (16 May 1846).

Boulogne ❙ 1544 ❙ French War of Henry VIII

Henry VIII of England took a huge force to Calais in support of Emperor Charles V against Francis II of France. He then marched against Boulogne to assist the siege of the city by John Dudley Lord Lisle. Boulogne fell after two months, but within days the Emperor made a separate peace. Six years later, England sold the city back to France (19 July–14 September 1544).

Boulogne ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

With France developing plans for a cross-channel invasion, English Admiral Horatio Nelson was sent to bombard the fleet of gunboats and barges assembling at Boulogne. Following a failed attempt (4 August), Nelson made a second larger-scale assault. With the port defended at sea by Admiral René La Touche-Treville, the attack was a complete failure (15–16 August 1801).

Boulogne ❙ 1804 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

In a night attack against up to 150 French craft at Boulogne, English Admiral Sir George Keith Elphinstone sent four fireships and five explosive-packed floating torpedoes—which all exploded with minimal damage. French commander Admiral Jean Raimond Lacrosse drove off the attack at the cost of just 14 killed and Elphinstone withdrew without loss, but with nothing achieved (1–2 October 1804).

Boulogne ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Leading a rapid Panzer advance through France from the Ardennes, General Heinz Guderian reached the coast at Abbeville (19 May), then raced north for the strategic port at Boulogne. After heavy fighting and German dive-bombing, some Allied troops were evacuated by sea before the citadel fell by storm. About 5,000 British and French surrendered and Guderian drove on for Calais (22–25 May 1940).

Boulou ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

When Spanish forces invaded the Rousillon in southeastern France, General Jacques Dugommier attacked his enemy's rear at Boulou, south of Perpignan, while Spanish commander General Amarillas Comte de la Union attempted to hold the bridge on the Tech at Céret. The Spanish were crushed, losing over 1,500 men and 150 guns, and fled across the border (30 April–1 May 1794).

Bou Nouala ❙ 1908 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Soon after indecisive actions east of Casablanca at Wadi M'Koun and R'Fakha, French General Albert d'Amade marched south to attack the Moroccan army in camp at Bou Nouala. Offering no quarter in a virtual massacre, the French slaughtered the Moroccans with artillery then killed every man they found, effectively ending resistance in the Chaouia region (15 March 1908).

Bourbon ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)
See Réunion

Bourgtherolde ❙ 1126 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars
Facing rebellion in France against Henry I, Royal forces under Ralph of Bayeaux, supported by Odo Borleng, attacked the rebels led by Amaury de Montfort near Bourgtherolde, southwest of Rouen. In a well-executed action, Ralph attacked with dismounted knights, supported by archers and a reserve of mounted cavalry, and the rebels were utterly routed (26 March 1126).

Bouvines ❙ 1214 ❙ Anglo-French Wars
King John of England took an army to France to recapture lost land from Philip II Augustus, and won support from Count Ferdinand of Flanders and German Emperor Otto IV. But at Bouvines, near Lille, Otto fled, and his allies were overwhelmed. The battle secured the French monarchy and prompted John's Barons into rebellion, leading to the eventual signing of Magna Carta (26 July 1214).

Bov ❙ 1848 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War
Encouraged by Prussia, the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein rose against Frederick VII of Denmark, and Danish troops immediately marched into Schleswig. The poorly led rebels were heavily defeated just north of Flensburg at Bov, and Danish troops occupied Schleswig. Just weeks later they were driven out by Prussian intervention and defeat at the Dannevirke (9 April 1848).

Bovianum ❙ 305 BC ❙ 2nd Samnite War
Despite Etruscan defeat at Lake Vadimo, the Samnites of central Italy sustained resistance against Rome for five years, until a large force under Marcus Fulvius Paetinus and Lucius Postumius Megellus was sent to besiege the principal rebel fortress at Bovianum (modern Boiano), north of Caserta. A Samnite relief force under Statius Gellius was routed and Bovianum fell, effectively ending the war.

Bowers Hill ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Winchester, Virginia

Bowling Alley ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War
See Naktong Bulge (1st)

Boxtel ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)
As French General Charles Pichegru advanced into southern Holland, British and Dutch forces led by Prince Frederick Augustus Duke of York were driven out of Bois le Duc, east of Tilburg. An attempted counter-attack next day by Lieutenant Colonel Arthur Wellesley was repulsed at nearby Boxtel. This is regarded as the later Duke of Wellington's first battle (15 September 1794).

Boyacá ❙ 1819 ❙ Colombian War of Independence
Republican leader Simón Bolívar advancing through western Colombia captured Tunja after action at Pantano de Vargas, then routed Spanish Colonel José María Barreiro at nearby Boyacá. Bolívar took 1,600 prisoners, including Barreiro and his staff (later executed). He then marched southwest to occupy Bogotá and establish a Republic with himself as President (7 August 1819).

Boydton Plank Road ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Hatcher's Run

Boyne ❙ 1690 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution
Invading Ireland to put down Catholic opposition, William III of England and Duke Friedrich of Schomberg led a 35,000-strong force towards Dublin and encountered the Jacobite army under James II and Comte Antonin de Lauson near Drogheda at the River Boyne. Although Schomberg was killed, William won a decisive victory and went on to capture Dublin and besiege Limerick (1 July 1690).

Boyuibé ❙ 1935 ❙ Chaco War

Paraguayan Colonel Eugenio Garay advanced north into the Chaco Boreal through victory at Ybibobo and crossed the Parapití to seize Charagua in southeastern Bolivia. But in a new Bolivian offensive, 15,000 men under General Arturo Guillén attacked and defeated the overextended Paraguayans at Boyuibé. A final action further east at Ingavi soon ended the war (17 April 1935).

Braddock Down ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Royalist commander Sir Ralph Hopton rallied local forces in Cornwall and marched against Parliamentary Colonel William Ruthin, who had advanced to occupy Liskeard. Supported by infantry under Sir Bevil Grenville at nearby Braddock Down, east of Lostwithiel, Hopton defeated Ruthin, who withdrew from Cornwall after losing 1,200 prisoners and all his guns (19 January 1643).

Braddock's Defeat ❙ 1755 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Monongahela

Bradford ❙ 652 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Attempting to expand the power of Wessex, King Cenwalh (Coenwalch), son of Cynegils, advanced west and defeated a force of Britons at Bradford on Avon, in Wiltshire, southeast of Bath. The victory secured land for Wessex as far as Malmesbury, and was followed by a further victory for Cenwalh over the Welsh in 658 at Penselwood.

Braga ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French Marshal Nicolas Soult invaded Portugal from the north to capture Chaves (11 March), then advanced through Lanhozo to Braga, where he met a peasant army which had murdered its cowardly commander General Bernadim Freire. Fighting under Prussian Colonel Frederick Eben, the ill-armed Portuguese levies were destroyed, and Soult advanced towards Oporto (17–20 March 1809).

Bramham Moor ❙ 1408 ❙ Percy's Rebellion

Renewing rebellion against Henry IV after defeat at Shrewsbury, Henry Percy Earl of Northumberland marched into Yorkshire, aided by Scots under Lord Thomas Bardolph. On Bramham Moor near Tadcaster, they encountered a large force led by Sir Thomas Rokeby, Sheriff of Yorkshire, who defeated and killed both Percy and Bardolph, ending the rebellion (19 February 1408).

Bramham Moor ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Seacroft Moor

Brandeis ❙ 1639 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Swedish commander Johan Banér advancing towards Prague after his victory at Chemnitz (14 April) found himself being pursued by an Imperial force under Count Raimondo Montecuccoli. Turning on the Imperials at Brandeis, on the Elbe, 10 miles northeast of Prague, Banér routed his pursuers. Montecuccoli was captured and held prisoner for almost three years (19 May 1639).

Brandenburg ❙ 928 ❙ German Imperial Wars

See Brennaburg

Brander ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Robert the Bruce secured his position with victory at Loudon Hill in 1307, then marched into Argyle, where the Pass at Brander was held for Edward II by John MacDougall of Lorne (who had defeated Bruce in 1306 at Dalry). Aided by a flank attack from the heights of Cruachan by Sir James "Black" Douglas, Bruce routed MacDougall and seized nearby Dunstaffnage Castle (August 1308).

Brandy Station ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Confederate commander Robert E. Lee began to march north towards Gettysburg,

Union General Alfred Pleasonton crossed the Rappahannock and attacked Lee's screening forces under General James "Jeb" Stuart. On the railway east of Culpeper at Brandy Station, Virginia, in the war's largest cavalry action, Pleasonton was driven off, though Union cavalry was finally proved (9 June 1863).

Brandywine ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

On a fresh offensive into Pennsylvania, British General Sir William Howe advanced through Cooch's Bridge to the Brandywine, where General George Washington made a stand. With Generals Charles Earl Cornwallis and Wilhelm von Kniphausen, Howe secured a decisive victory in a large-scale action, and continued through Paoli toward Philadelphia (11 September 1777).

Brännkyrka ❙ 1518 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

Campaigning against the rebellious Sten Sture the Younger, who had seized the Regency of Sweden from the pro-Danish Stolle faction, Christian II of Denmark landed near Stockholm. To the southwest at the Brännkyrka, he was heavily defeated by Sture and Gustav Vasa and was forced to withdraw. When Christian invaded again a year later, Sture was killed at Bogesund (22 July 1518).

Branxton ❙ 1513 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

See Flodden

Brasov ❙ 1603 ❙ Balkan National Wars

When Moise Székély seized part of Transylvania with the aid of Turkish and Tatar auxiliaries, Habsburg Emperor Rudolf II requested Radu Serban of Wallachia to put down the rebel. When Radu invaded Transylvania, many of the nobility sided with him against the excesses of the Ottoman-supported usurper, who was defeated in the northwest at Brasov (17 July 1603).

Bratislava ❙ 907 ❙ Magyar Invasion of Germany

See Pressburg

Brattonville ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Williamson's Plantation

Braunau ❙ 1743 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

As part of the Austrian invasion of Bavaria, Count Ludwig Khevenhuller marched north from Salzburg and met a Franco-Bavarian army under Marshals Francois de Broglie and Count Friedrich von Seckendorf on the Inn at Braunau. The Allies fell back when the Austrians stormed entrenchments outside the city and Elector Karl Albrecht of Bavaria fled from Munich (9 May 1743).

Bravalla ❙ 735 ❙ Danish War of Succession

The Viking King Harold Hildetand of Denmark secured victories in Britain and the Baltic, then sailed to the Swedish coast of Skane, where he faced a large army at Bravalla under his ambitious nephew Sigurd Ring. In a massive semi-legendary engagement, both at sea and on land near Norrköping, Harold was defeated and killed and Sigurd took the Danish throne.

Brazito ❙ 1846 ❙ American-Mexican War

American Colonel Alexander Doniphan was marching south from Santa Fe when he was met on the Upper Rio Grande at Brazito, 30 miles from El Paso del Norte (Ciudad Juárez) by Mexican militia and Regular Lancers under Major Antonio Ponce de Léon, who was wounded. Captain Rafael Carabajal led the withdrawal, and Doniphan soon advanced to the Sacramento (25 December 1846).

Brechin ❙ 1452 ❙ Douglas Rebellion

After James II of Scotland murdered William Earl of Douglas, he sent Alexander Seton Earl of Huntly against the Douglas allies under Alexander Crawford Earl of Crawford. Huntly crushed the rebels on the South Esk at Brechin, though his brothers Sir William and Sir Henry Seton were killed. Crawford fled and Huntly devastated the Moray lands (18 May 1452).

Breda ❙ 1590 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

With Alexander Farnese Duke of Parma occupied in France, Prince Maurice of Orange began an offensive along the Dutch coast and sent Charles de Heraugière and just 70 men to capture Breda. Hidden in peat-barges on the Mark, the Netherlanders penetrated the city's defences and led to its capture. This was followed by further Dutch success at Deventer and Zutphen (3 March 1590).

Breda ❙ 1624–1625 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

In renewed warfare after the Twelve Years Truce, Spanish commander Ambrogio de Spinola besieged the powerful Netherlands fortress of Breda, and Maurice of Orange died while raising a relief army. His brother Frederick Henry of Orange could make no impact and, after eleven months of siege, their natural brother—Justin of Nassau—was forced to capitulate (28 August 1624–2 June 1625).

Breda ❙ 1636–1637 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Twelve years after failing to prevent Spanish capture of Breda, Frederick Henry of Orange besieged the fortress-city, held by Gomar Fourdin, flooding the surrounding country and driving off a relief attempt by Spanish Governor Cardinal Infante Ferdinand. The Dutch captured starving Breda after more than a year and gave the defeated garrison free passage (20 July 1636–10 October 1637).

Breed's Hill ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Bunker Hill

Bregalnica ❙ 1913 ❙ 2nd Balkan (Inter-ally) War

Angry over division of Macedonia, Bulgaria turned on her former allies, and General Mikhail Savoff suddenly attacked along the Macedonian frontier, where his forces were met on the Bregalnica by Serbian commander Radomir Putnik. Bloody fighting forced the invaders to withdraw. They were meantime also beaten by the Greeks around Kilkis to end the four-week war (30 June–9 July 1913).

Bregenz ❙ 1408 ❙ Habsburg-Swiss Wars

The people of Appenzell in northeast Switzerland rose against the Habsburg Abbot Cuno of St Gall and Duke Fredrick IV of Austria, and won valuable victories at Speicher (1403) and Stoss (1405). But when rebels attacked the loyal Imperial city of Bregenz, they were badly defeated. Appenzell was forced out of the Swiss League, although it remained a Confederate ally (13 January 1408).

Breisach ❙ 1638 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

After repulsing an Imperial army at Wittenweier in July, Bernard of Saxe-Weimar was joined by French forces under Jean-Baptiste Guébriant and Henri de Turenne besieging Breisach, on the Rhine near Freiburg. Another relief army was repulsed at Sennheim, and Baron Hans Heinrich von Reinach's starving garrison finally capitulated, giving Bernard all of Alsace (18 August–17 December 1638).

Breisach ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

As part of the French campaign to clear the Austrian and German allies from Bavaria, Marshal Count Camille de Tallard launched an offensive along the middle Rhine. The major fortified position on the east bank at Breisach was besieged by the great French engineer Marshal Sebastien Vauban, and its capture opened the way to Tallard's great victory in November at Speyer (6 September 1703).

Breisach ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

See Neu-Breisach

Breitenfeld ❙ 1631 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

When Imperial commander Johan Tserclaes Count Tilly invaded Saxony and occupied Leipzig, Elector John George of Saxony joined Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden against the outnumbered Catholic army just north of Leipzig near Breitenfeld. Tilly and Gottfried zu Pappenheim were routed with massive losses and Gustavus occupied the Rhineland (17 September 1631).

Breitenfeld ❙ 1642 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Swedish Marshal Lennart Torstensson withdrawing to Saxony from Olmütz in June besieged Leipzig, but was impetuously attacked at nearby Breitenfeld by the pursuing Imperial army of Archduke Leopold William and General Ottavio Piccolomini. Torstensson routed the Imperials in a brilliant action, inflicting up to 10,000 casualties, and the Archduke fled to Bohemia (2 November 1642).

Brema ❙ 1638 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

In a fresh offensive against the French, the Spanish Governor of Milan, Diego Felipe de Guzmán Marquis of Leganés, besieged the nearby fortress of Brema. French commander Marshal Charles de Crequi led a relief force from Turin, but while observing the Spanish siege lines, he was killed by a cannonball. His force withdrew in confusion and Brema capitulated (17 March 1638).

Bremberg ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Katzbach

Bremgarten ❙ 1712 ❙ 2nd Villmergen War

Almost 60 years after Catholic victory in the First Villmergen War, religious conflict in Switzerland resumed, and the Bernese army defeated a much smaller Catholic force from Lucerne in the "Battle of the Shrubs" (Staudenschlach) on a wooded area west of Zurich near Bremgarten. The Protestants then captured Baden after a brief bombardment and soon secured victory at Villmergen.

Bremule ❙ 1119 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

See Brenneville

Brennaburg ❙ 928 ❙ German Imperial Wars

A determined offensive against the Pagan Wends of northern Germany saw Emperor Henry I lead a brilliant mid-winter attack on the Hevelli, a sub-tribe living near the River Havel. Camping his army on the frozen river, Henry besieged Brennaburg (modern Brandenburg) and starved the garrison into submission. The combined Wend tribes were finally defeated the following year at Lenzen.

Brenneville ❙ 1119 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

Henry I reunited England and Normandy with victory at Tinchebrai in 1106, then imprisoned his brother Robert, former Duke of Normandy. In support of Robert's disinherited son, William Clito, Louis VI of France took an army against Henry's Anglo-Norman knights at Brenneville, southeast of Rouen. Though casualties were light, Louis fled and abandoned Clito's cause (20 August 1119).

Brennkirk ❙ 1518 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

See Brännkyrka

Brenta ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

See Monte Grappa

Brentford ❙ 1642 ❙ British Civil Wars

Advancing towards London after the indecisive engagement at Edgehill (23 October), Charles I sent Prince Rupert's cavalry ahead to Brentford, on the Thames west of the capital, strongly defended by Parliamentary General Denzil Holles. Holles withdrew after bitter street fighting and next day the King was confronted by London militia at Turnham Green (12 November 1642).

Brentwood ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Three weeks after the Union rout south of Nashville, Tennessee, at Thompson's Station, Confederate General Nathan B. Forrest attacked the railway closer to Nashville at Brentwood, where Colonel Edward Bloodgood was defeated and forced to surrender. General G. Clay Smith arrived to retake the station, but had to burn the recaptured wagons and fall back on Franklin (25 March 1863).

Brescia ❙ 1238 ❙ Imperial-Papal Wars

Following his great victory at Cortenuova against the Lombard League of Northern Italy (November 1237), Emperor Frederick II turned his army of Germans and Italian Guelphs against Brescia, one of the few cities which remained an ally of Milan. Frederick was forced to admit failure after a three-month siege and withdrew from Brescia to regroup his forces (August–October 1238).

Brescia ❙ 1401 ❙ Florentine-Milanese Wars

The city of Florence was threatened by the growing power of Gian Galeazzo Visconti Duke of Milan and sought help from the newly elected Rupert III of Germany, who had replaced Visconti's former ally, the deposed King Wenceslas. Rupert marched into Italy, but near Brescia he was heavily defeated by the Milanese and was forced back to Germany (14 October 1401).

Brescia ❙ 1426 ❙ Venetian-Milanese Wars

In renewed war by Venice and Florence against Milan, a major struggle developed around Brescia, defended by Francesco Sforza for Filippo Maria Duke of Milan. The former Milanese commander and soldier of fortune Francesco Bussone Count Carmagnola led a brutal assault, gradually capturing strongholds around Brescia until the city fell to Venice (April–November 1426).

Brescia ❙ 1849 ❙ 1st Italian War of Independence

On the same day that King Charles Albert of Sardinia was decisively defeated at Novara, the city of Brescia rose in support of the doomed Piedmontese revolt against Austria. A week later, Austrian Baron Julius von Haynau took Brescia by storm, crushing the revolt with hundreds of executions. Genoa then fell without a fight and the King abdicated in favour of his son Victor Emanuel II (31 March 1849).

Breskens ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

When Allied forces captured Antwerp, German General Gustav von Zangen was trapped against the coast. But Allied delay let more than 80,000 men and their equipment escape north through Breskens, downstream on the Scheldt. Another 10,000 under General Kurt Eberding then held Breskens against the intense Allied offensive on the Scheldt Estuary (6 October–2 November 1944).

Breslau ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

While Frederick II of Prussia was defeating the Allies at Rossbach in Saxony, an Austrian army under Prince Charles of Lorraine and Marshal Leopold von Daun advanced into Silesia and, after victory at Moys and Schweidnitz, routed and captured Duke August Wilhelm of Bevern near Breslau (modern Wroclaw). Breslau was retaken by Prussia two weeks later after Leuthen (22 November 1757).

Breslau ❙ 1806–1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

As Napoleon Bonaparte marched into Poland, his brother Jerome on the right flank advanced with an army from Saxony into Silesia, and General Dominique Vandamme besieged Breslau (modern Wroclaw). The Russian-held fortress on the Oder drove off a costly assault (22–23 December) but eventually fell, securing the French position in the south (10 December 1806–7 January 1807).

Breslau ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

The Vistula-Oder offensive across Poland bypassed the German city of Breslau (Wroclaw) on the Oder, which was encircled by Generals Vladimir Gluzdovksy and Aleksei Zhadov. A long siege saw very costly fighting and two-thirds of Breslau destroyed. Four days after the fall of Berlin, General Hermann Niehoff surrendered the city and it later became part of Poland (8 February–6 May 1945).

Brest ❙ 1342 ❙ Hundred Years War

Soon after the relief of Hennebont, Countess Jeanne of Montfort withdrew to Brest, where she was besieged by Charles of Blois on land and by 14 Genoese galleys under Carlo Grimaldi. An English relief fleet under William Bohun Earl of Northampton surprised Grimaldi, and only three Genoese ships escaped. The others were driven ashore and burned and Blois had to raise the siege (18 August 1342).

Brest ❙ 1512 ❙ War of the Holy League

Admiral Sir Edward Howard supported the alliance between Henry VIII of England and Spain by attacking the coast of France, where he fought an indecisive engagement off Brest with the French fleet of Jean de Thenouenal. Despite losing his two largest ships and Sir Thomas Knyvet killed in the ship Regent, Howard still claimed victory. He was killed off Brest a year later (10 August 1512).

Brest ❙ 1513 ❙ War of the Holy League

A year after his bloody but indecisive battle against the French navy off Brest, English Admiral Sir Edward Howard attempted a cutting-out action against French Admiral Pregent de Bidoux at anchor in Brest Harbour. Sir Edward was killed and his force was repulsed, but his brother Sir Thomas Howard later returned to Brest and captured several prizes (25 April 1513).

Brest ❙ 1694 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

See Camaret Bay

Brest ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

When American forces seized Avranches, General Troy Middleton secured St Malo, then drove west into Brittany towards the great naval base at Brest, tenaciously held by General Hermann Ramcke. Brest fell after very heavy fighting, yielding 35,000 prisoners, but the Americans lost about 10,000 casualties. The port itself was completely wrecked (25 August–18 September 1944).

Brest-Litovsk ❙ 1794 ❙ War of the 2nd Polish Partition

Polish Nationalist General Karol Sierakovski withdrew from Kruptchitsa, and days later attempted to hold the Russian counter-offensive of Field Marshal Alexander Suvorov on the Bug at Brest. In a one-sided disaster, the Poles lost 20 guns and were utterly overwhelmed with terrible casualties. Sierakovski and his survivors fled west to defend Warsaw (19 September 1794).

Brest-Litovsk ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

As part of Germany's new Triple Offensive, Austro-German commander August von Mackensen campaigned north from Lemberg through Lublin (30 July) and Chelm (31 July), then advanced on the important city of Brest-Litovsk, east of Warsaw. A determined delaying action was crushed by Mackensen's siege guns and the Russians withdrew further east (25 August 1915).

Briar Creek ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Campaigning against Britain in Georgia, General Benjamin Lincoln sent Colonel John Ashe pursuing the British from Augusta, downstream towards Savannah. On Briar Creek, Ashe's militia were surprised by a much smaller British force under Colonel Mark Prevost and Major John McPherson. With 200 killed and 170 captured, the American counter-offensive failed (3 March 1779).

Brice's Cross Roads ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

After attacking Fort Pillow, Tennessee, and widespread destruction of Union railroads, Confederate General Nathan B. Forrest was finally intercepted in Mississippi by a Union force sent from Memphis under General Samuel B. Sturgis. Forrest utterly defeated the much larger Union force at Brice's Cross Roads, near Guntown, and continued south to Tupelo (10 June 1864).

Bridge ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Facing a Persian offensive in Mesopotamia to recover Hira, Muslim Generals Muthanna and Abu Ubayd won at Babylon and Nimaraq, then met Persian commander Bahman on the Euphrates. At the Battle of the Bridge, the Arabs were utterly routed with Abu Ubayd killed. Muthanna only just managed to extricate the survivors, then recovered to win in May 635 at Buwayb (26 November 634).

Bridge of Dee ❙ 1639 ❙ 1st Bishops' War

See Dee

Bridgewater, Florida ❙ 1840 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

When an army patrol was attacked near Fort Micanopy, south of modern Gainesville, Florida, Lieutenant James Sanderson marched out with 18 men and was ambushed at nearby Bridgewater by Seminole under Halleck Tustenuggee. Sanderson and nine others were killed. Sergeant-Major Francis Carroll, who was wounded, later died in a similar ambush at nearby Martin's Point (19 May 1840).

Bridgnorth ❙ 1102 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

Henry I of England faced renewed rebellion by Robert of Beleme Earl of Salisbury, and captured the Norman's castle at Arundel, then besieged his powerful fortress of Bridgnorth, on the Severn west of Wolverhampton. Earl Robert could not send aid to his captains, who had to surrender. Henry then marched on Shrewsbury, where the Earl himself surrendered and withdrew to Normandy.

Bridgwater, England ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Days after defeat at Langport in Somerset, Royalist General George Lord Goring withdrew into Devon and Sir Thomas Fairfax took his victorious Ironsides against Bridgwater, on the Parrett, northeast of Taunton, defended by Governor Sir Hugh Wyndham. Part of the burning town was taken by storm after a massive bombardment and Wyndham was forced to surrender (21–23 July 1645).

Brielle ❙ 1572 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Supported by William of Orange, Dutch privateers known as "Sea Beggars" attacked Spanish shipping. Their Admiral, Willem van Lumey Count of Marck, then joined with William of Blois Seigneur of Treslong to surprise the town of Brielle, west of Rotterdam. Brielle fell in a severe blow to Spanish prestige, encouraging rebellion by other towns in the Netherlands (1 April 1572).

Brienne ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

Napoleon Bonaparte marched east from Paris to prevent a junction of the invading Prussian and Austrian armies, moving first against General Gebhard von Blucher between the Aube and Marne at Brienne-le-Chateau. The Allies fell back after a bloody, indecisive struggle, and Bonaparte occupied Brienne and nearby La Rothière, where he faced a massive assault three days later (29 January 1814).

Brier Creek ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Briar Creek

Brignais ❙ 1362 ❙ Hundred Years War

During the course of the war, undisciplined bands of English, French, German and Spanish soldiers known as "routiers" formed freebooting companies which roamed much of France. A small French Royal army attempted to block one such company marching north along the Rhone valley from the Languedoc, but was utterly defeated at Brignais, southwest of Lyons (6 April 1362).

Brihuega ❙ 1710 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

After capturing Madrid, an Anglo-Austrian army was driven out by French troops under

Louis Duke de Vendôme. Pursuing the Allies towards Aragon, Vendôme attacked the separated rearguard at Brihuega, northeast of Guadalajara, and forced surrender, including General James Stanhope captured. Another Allied defeat next day at Villaviciosa virtually ended the campaign (9 December 1710).

Brihuega ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War
See Guadalajara, Spain

Bril ❙ 1572 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence
See Brielle

Brimstone Hill ❙ 1782 ❙ War of the American Revolution
See St Kitts

Brindisi ❙ 1156 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Sicilian War

When Byzantine Emperor Manuel I invaded southern Italy with Papal support against William I of Sicily, naval victory off Apulia gave him a foothold. But the following year a Byzantine army under Alexius Comnenus was defeated at Brindisi. When William marched on Benevento, Pope Hadrian IV had to recognise him, and two years later Manuel made peace and withdrew from Italy.

Bristoe Station ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Manoeuvring in Virginia months after defeat at Gettysburg, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee sent General Ambrose P. Hill against General George G. Meade's army marching towards Manassas. Hill was heavily repulsed at nearby Bristoe Station by Union General Gouvernor K. Warren. Lee's army continued south through further defeat at Rappahannock Station (14 October 1863).

Bristol ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Prince Rupert followed the decisive Royalist victory at Roundway Down (13 July) by marching to besiege Bristol, defended by a largely Cornish garrison under the Governor Nathaniel Fiennes. With fresh reinforcements under his brother Prince Maurice, Rupert took Bristol by storm and the second most important port in England at the time was forced to capitulate (23–26 July 1643).

Bristol ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Within weeks of victory in the west at Langport, Parliamentary commander Sir Thomas Fairfax took Bridgwater, England, then turned to besiege Bristol, held by Prince Rupert. After preliminary bombardment and failed negotiations, Fairfax took the city by storm and Rupert withdrew to Bristol Castle. When the Prince surrendered, the King had him dismissed and exiled (21 August–11 September 1645).

Britain ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

When France fell, Marshal Herman Goering resolved to destroy the Royal Air Force before Hitler's planned invasion and was met by Air Vice Marshal Hugh Dowding's Fighter Command. The Battle of Britain over southern England saw perhaps 900 British and 1,600 German planes lost before the invasion was called off. Goering then turned to night bombing of cities (10 July–31 October 1940).

Brody ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

In the second phase of the Brusilov Offensive, Russian General Platon Lechitsky swung north from Czernowitz and joined Vladimir Sakharov northeast of Lemberg (Lvov). Heavy fighting around Brody saw General Eduard Böhm-Ermolli forced back to the Zlota Lipa, where the Russian offensive petered out around Brzezany and also further north in front of Kovel (16–28 July 1916).

Brody ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
See Brzezany

Brody ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
See Lvov

Brody-Dubno ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt was driving deep into the Ukraine on the southern flank of the German invasion when Russian General Mikhail Kirponos attempted a major counter-attack around Brody. A very large-scale tank action saw General Ewald von Kleist, with air support, break up the delaying forces. Kirponos was forced to fall back on Kiev, where he was later killed (25–29 June 1941).

Broken Staves ❙ 1743 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Dettingen

Bronkhorstspruit ❙ 1880 ❙ 1st Anglo-Boer War

When Britain annexed the Transvaal in 1877, Boers under Paul Kruger rose in revolt, and the 94th British Regiment under Colonel Philip Anstruther was sent to march on Pretoria. Ambushed 38 miles east at Bronkhorstspruit by Boer commander Frans Joubert, the column lost 57 killed and 100 wounded out of 264 and the mortally wounded Anstruther surrendered (20 December 1880).

Bronnicy ❙ 1614 ❙ Russo-Swedish Wars

See Bronnitsa

Bronnitsa ❙ 1614 ❙ Russo-Swedish Wars

Determined to secure Novgorod, Tsar Michael sent Dimitri Trubetskoi, who captured Gdov and Tichvin, then was intercepted and besieged east of Novgorod at Bronnitsa by Swedes under Jakob de la Gardie. The defeated Russians withdrew after a confused defence and the Swedes besieged Gdov. Novgorod was ceded to Russia by treaty after the siege of Pskov in 1616 (July 1614).

Bron yr Erw ❙ 1075 ❙ Welsh Dynastic War

Fighting off usurpers following the death of his father Cynan, Gruffydd of Gwynnedd (North Wales) was heavily defeated by Trahaiarn ap Caradog at Bron yr Erw (modern Bron-y-aur near Dolgellau) and was driven into exile with the Danes of Ireland. In 1081 he returned to kill Trahaiarn in battle at Mynydd Carn and thus regain the throne.

Broodseinde ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In his third successive attack from Ypres against General Friedrich von Arnim, General Sir Herbert Plumer followed success on the Menin Road and at Polygon Wood with an advance north on Broodseinde. Despite German use of mustard gas, British troops seized the town to effectively secure the key ridges east of Ypres and open the way north to Passchendaele (4 October 1917).

Brooklyn ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Long Island

Broomhouse ❙ 1513 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

James IV of Scotland resolved to avenge defeat off the Goodwin Sands and sent Alexander Lord Home raiding across the border. But while returning, Lord Alexander was ambushed by English cavalry at Broomhouse, near Alnwick, suffering about 500 dead and 400 prisoners, including his brother Sir George Home. A full Scottish invasion led to disaster a month later at Flodden (13 August 1513).

Brown's Ferry ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Wauhatchie Station

Brownstown ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

Attempting to escort supplies to Detroit on Lake St Clair, Ohio militia under Major Thomas van Horne were attacked on the American side of the Detroit River at Brownstown by British Captain Adam Muir and Indians led by Tecumseh. The Americans were dispersed, losing vital military mail, and a further escort was defeated four days later at Magagua (5 August 1812).

Bruderholz ❙ 1499 ❙ Swabian War

In their final struggle for freedom, the Swiss cantons marched against the Habsburg cities of the Swabian League and advanced to the Upper Rhine. A month after victory at Hard, a small force met over 3,000 infantry and knights who had invaded from Alsace and, at Bruderholz, south of Basle, defeated the Germans. In April the Swiss secured further victory at Schwaderloch (22 March 1499).

Bruges ❙ 1302 ❙ Franco-Flemish Wars

The Flemish rising against France—crushed at Furnes—was renewed five years later when weaver Peter de Conync roused the people of Bruges to massacre the French garrison. In a reprise of the more famous "Sicilian Vespers" 20 years earlier, over 3,000 soldiers were killed during the so-called Matins of Bruges. The Flemish artisan army went on to victory in July at Courtrai (19 May 1302).

Bruges ❙ 1382 ❙ Hundred Years War

Renewing popular rebellion against Louis II Count of Flanders, workers and tradesmen in Bruges armed themselves against Royalist forces. Led by Philip van Arteveldt—whose father led a similar rising 80 years before—the Flemish popular army defeated the French Count's forces and seized Bruges. However, they were destroyed six months later at Roosebeke (3 May 1382).

Brunanburh ❙ 937 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Aethelstan of Wessex attempted to recover Viking Northumbria, provoking a massive counter-attack up the Humber by the Dane Olaf Guthfrithson of Dublin, Constantine II of the Scots and his father-in-law Owain of Strathclyde. At Brunanburh, an uncertain site in the Midlands, Aethelstan inflicted a terrible defeat, breaking up the alliance, and assumed the title King of England.

Brunei ❙ 1962 ❙ Brunei Rebellion

In a failed coup against the Sultan of Brunei, Indonesian-backed rebels loyal to Sheik Azahari, led by Yassin Affendi, attacked Brunei Town (modern Bandar Seri Begauan). British Gurkhas airlifted from Singapore under Major Tony Lloyd-Williams retook the capital after a sharp action, with 24 rebels killed. Fighting then moved southwest to Seria and east to Limbang (8–9 December 1962).

Brunei Bay ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Australian General George Wootten captured Tarakan, off northeast Borneo (14 June), then landed at Labuan Island and Brunei Bay in the northwest. Brunei Town fell in three days, but there was severe fighting and further landings before Wootten secured Beaufort and Kuala Belait in Brunei. The Australians lost 114 killed and Japanese General Masao Baba about 1,200 (10–24 June 1945).

Brunete ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

With the Nationalists checked around Madrid at Corunna Road, Jarama and Guadalajara, Republican Generals Juan Modesto and Enrique Jurado led a large counter-offensive west towards Brunete. After initial success, the Republicans were driven back by General José Varela with massive losses in men, tanks and aircraft. Another offensive was later contained at Teruel (6–26 July 1937).

Bruneval ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

One of the most famous British commando raids on occupied Europe saw 200 airborne Special Forces attack the German radar station at Bruneval, near Le Mans in Normandy, which was taken after sharp fighting at the cost of three killed and seven wounded. The parachutists seized vital parts of the Würzburg fighter-control radar, which were taken for examination by scientists (27–28 February 1942).

Brunkeberg ❙ 1471 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

Campaigning against Danish influence in Sweden, the nobleman Sten Sture marched against Christian I of Denmark, who was besieging Stockholm with about 5,000 mainly Scottish and German mercenaries. In decisive action at nearby Brunkeberg—joined from Stockholm by Knut Posse—the King was defeated and fled. Sture ruled as Chancellor until defeat at Rotebro in 1497 (10 October 1471).

Brusa ❙ 1317–1326 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Osman I expanded his power south of the Sea of Marmara, where he besieged Byzantine Brusa, near Mount Olympus. Osman's son Orkhan Gazi led the final assault after a nine-year siege and carried news of Brusa's fall to his dying father. Orkhan defeated a Greek counter-offensive at Pelacanon and the city of Brusa became Ottoman capital until the fall of Adrianople in 1362 (1317–6 April 1326).

Brusa ❙ 1922 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War

See Bursa

Brushy Creek ❙ 1839 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

During a broad offensive against Comanches in Williamson County, Texas, Captain Jacob Burleson and a small force attacked the Indians on Brushy Creek, near modern Taylor. Burleson was killed in a frontal attack before his outnumbered unit was rescued by his brother Edward. General Burleson then pursued the Comanche and drove them off with heavy losses (25 February 1839).

Brusilov Offensive ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

Despite losses at Lake Naroch, Russian General Aleksei Brusilov led a stunning offensive to capture Lutsk and Czernowitz, then renewed his offensive towards Baranovitchi and Brody, and across the Styr and Stochod. German reinforcements finally checked the "Russian steamroller" around Kovel and Brzezany until the new Kerensky Offensive (4 June–20 September 1916).

Brussels ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Tirlement

Brusthem ❙ 1467 ❙ Franco-Burgundian Wars

Encouraged by Louis XI of France following the death of Philip Duke of Burgundy, the people of Liège renewed their revolt against Burgundy, defeated in 1465 at Montenaeken. In battle at Brusthem, near St Trond, they were routed by the new Duke, Charles the Bold, fresh from his sack of the city of Dinant. The following year Charles stormed and destroyed Liège itself (28 October 1467).

Bryansk ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Soon after the fall of Kiev, Panzer General Heinz Guderian resumed the offensive southwest of Moscow, where he took Orel, then encircled three Soviet armies near Bryansk. The Bryansk Pocket was crushed, and, with the Vyazma Pocket further north, yielded 630,000 prisoners, 1,200 tanks and 5,400 guns. The Russians later counter-attacked west from Moscow (30 September–20 October 1941).

Bryan's Station ❙ 1782 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Blue Licks

Bryn Derwyn ❙ 1255 ❙ War of Welsh Succession

The years of instability following the death of Welsh leader Llewellyn the Great in 1240 ended with a decisive battle between his grandsons David and Owain the Red on one side and Llewellyn ap Griffith. At Bryn Derwyn, near Caernarvon, Llewellyn defeated his brothers and led the last flowering of Welsh power. His eventual defeat at Aber Edw in 1282 saw the end of Welsh independence.

Brzezany ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

As Russian forces advanced around Brody in July, Austrian General Felix von Bothmer fell back and attempted to hold the Zlota Lipa near Brzezany, southeast of Lemberg (Lvov). Russian General Dimitri Shcherbachov seized nearby heights, but was eventually repulsed by an Austrian counter-attack, effectively ending the Brusilov Offensive (29 August–4 September 1916).

Brzezany ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

At the start of the Kerensky Offensive, Russian commander Aleksei Brusilov launched his main attack through Brody and advanced on Lemberg (Lvov) against General Felix von Bothmer's Austro-German army. After very heavy fighting further south near Brzezany, German reinforcements counter-attacked through Tarnopol and Russia's last offensive was utterly crushed (1–6 July 1917).

Bubiyan ❙ 1991 ❙ 1st Gulf War

When Iraqi missile boats and amphibious ships left naval bases at az-Zubayr and Umm Qasr, possibly to support Iraq's offensive towards Khafji, they were attacked off Bubiyan Island by US, British and Saudi jets and helicopters. Within days, Iraq's navy in the Gulf was effectively destroyed and only two badly damaged vessels reached safety in Iranian waters (29 January–2 February 1991).

Bucharest ❙ 1771 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

Following success against the Turks on the Pruth, a northern tributary of the Danube (September 1770), Russian General Pyotr Rumyantsev launched a spring offensive west towards Bucharest, held by Turkish General Mousson Oglon. The city fell to Rumyantsev's troops after a sharp defence and was turned over to them for rape and destruction as the Turks fled south across the Danube.

Bucharest ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

See Arges

Buck Head Creek ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union commander William T. Sherman advanced through Georgia from Atlanta to Savannah, and General H. Judson Kilpatrick marched northeast against Confederate General Joseph Wheeler in the area around Waynesborough. Surprised at Buck Head Creek, Kilpatrick recovered to repulse Wheeler, and days later defeated him at nearby Waynesborough itself (28 November 1864).

Buckland Mills ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Confederate commander Robert E. Lee withdrew through Virginia after defeat at Bristoe Station near Manassas, General James "Jeb" Stuart turned to meet a flank attack by cavalry from General George B. Meade's army under General H. Judson Kilpatrick. At Buckland Mills, Kilpatrick was routed, though Lee himself was defeated the next month at Rappahannock Station (19 October 1863).

Bucov ❙ 1600 ❙ Balkan National Wars

After Prince Michael of Wallachia lost Transylvania at Mirischlau (18 September), the Poles restored Jeremiah Movila in Moldavia (seized by Michael after Khotin), then entered Wallachia. Polish Chancellor Jan Zamoyski defeated Michael at Bucov, on the Teleajan near Ploesti, and Simeon Movila was put on the throne of Wallachia. Michael was defeated the next year at Goraslau (20 October 1600).

Buda ❙ 1529 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

When Habsburg forces recovered Hungary after victory at Mohacs, Ottoman Sultan Suleiman I led a fresh invasion to support his vassal John Zapolya, who had been defeated at Tokay. Together they laid siege to regain Buda, defended by Imperial General Támas Nádasdy. The garrison capitulated on terms of safe passage but was massacred, and Suleiman marched on to Vienna (3–8 September 1529).

Buda ❙ 1540 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Following the death of John Zapolya of Hungary (July 1540), Ferdinand I of Austria soon made an attempt to recover Buda from nationalist supporters of the former King's infant son John Sigismund, led by Bishop Martinuzzi (Friar George Utiesenic). The ill-prepared Habsburg army of General Lenart Fels was driven off and Martinuzzi sought Ottoman aid against the Emperor (October 1540).

Buda ❙ 1541 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

In a fresh attempt to recover Buda following the death of John Zapolya of Hungary, Ferdinand I of Austria sent Marshal Wilhelm Roggendorf against anti-Habsburg supporters of the infant John Sigismund, led by Bishop Martinuzzi (Friar George Utiesenic). Ottoman Sultan Suleiman I arrived to help defeat Roggendorf, then seized much of Hungary as a vassal state for his empire.

Buda ❙ 1686 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Invading Turkish Hungary after victory at Vienna (1683), Charles V of Lorraine and Louis of Baden were heavily repulsed at Buda (1684) but in a second siege drove off a relief army under Grand Vizier Kara Ibrahim. They retook the city after 78 days, slaughtering most of the garrison including the heroic commander Abdi Pasha, ending almost 150 years of Turkish rule (17 June–2 September 1686).

Buda ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

Weeks after victory northwest of Budapest at Nagy Sallo, Hungarian Nationalist commander Artur Gorgey returned to the capital to besiege 4,000 Imperial troops under General Heinrich von Hentzi, holding out in the old fortress on the Danube at Buda. After several costly assaults, the fortress was taken by storm with heavy Austrian losses, including Hentzi mortally wounded (4–21 May 1849).

Budapest ❙ 1919 ❙ Hungarian-Romanian War

On a fresh offensive into Hungary, the Romanian army crossed the Tisza in July, then advanced on Budapest. Facing white counter-revolution, Hungary's Red Army declined to fight and Dictator Béla Kun fled to Vienna (he was later executed in a Stalinist Purge). Romanian forces captured Budapest to overthrow the Soviet Republic and pillaged the capital before withdrawing (4 August 1919).

Budapest ❙ 1921 ❙ Hungarian Civil War

Former Austrian Emperor and King of Hungary Charles attempted to reclaim Hungary from Regent Miklos Horthy and advanced on Budapest. In the suburbs at Buda-Ors, Royalist Colonel Gyula Ostenburg was attacked and repulsed by Captain Gyula Gombos (later Prime Minister). Charles was arrested and exiled in Madeira, ending Habsburg claims on Hungary (23 October 1921).

Budapest ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Soviet Marshals Rodion Malinovsky and Fedor Tolbukhin drove north from the Balkans and advanced on Budapest against strong resistance. Pest fell (18 January) with 35,000 Germans killed and 62,000 captured, and Buda a month later with 30,000 captured. A final breakout was crushed and SS General Karl von Pfeffer-Wildenbruch surrendered (26 December 1944–13 February 1945).

Bud Bagsak ❙ 1913 ❙ American-Moro Wars

Attempting to disarm the Muslim Moros of the southern Philippines, Colonel John Pershing attacked rebels on Jolo, who fortified the crater of the extinct volcano Bud Bagsak, near Bun Bun. Artillery bombardment and bayonet charges killed over 500 Moros, including their leader Amil and many women and children. Within months, resistance was crushed at Mount Talipao (11–15 June 1913).

Bud Dajo ❙ 1906 ❙ American-Moro Wars

Two years after Muslim Moros were routed at Pangpang, on Jolo in the southern Philippines, about 600 rebels took refuge in the crater of the extinct volcano of Bud Dajo. Attacked by Colonel Joseph Duncan, the ill-armed men, women and children were slaughtered, provoking public outrage in America. A similar massacre followed seven years later at Bud Bagsak (5–6 March 1906).

Budhayan ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Campaigning in Oudh, General Thomas Franks seized Chanda, Uttar Pradesh, southeast of Sultanpur, when rebel leader Mehndi Husain arrived too late to save his key base. Later that day, Husain tried to block Franks at Hamirpur, near the fortress at Budhayan, but was heavily defeated and fled. Budhayan was occupied two days later, with Husain subsequently defeated again at Badshahganj (19 February 1858).

Budlee-ke-Serai ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Badli-ki-Serai

Budweis ❙ 1742 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Sahay

Buenavista, Colombia ❙ 1840 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

See Culebrera

Buenavista, Mexico ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

American General Zachary Taylor faced a counter-offensive in northern Mexico, where he chose to defend the mountain pass at Angostura, south of Saltillo near Buenavista, against Mexican General Antonio de Santa Anna. Taylor eventually won a difficult victory after a complex two-day action and Santa Anna fled to Mexico City with 500 killed and 1,000 wounded (22–23 February 1847).

Buenos Aires ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

When Britain received exaggerated reports of local dissatisfaction with Spanish rule in Argentina, an expedition under Admiral Sir Home Popham and General William Beresford took Buenos Aires by surprise with just 1,200 men. However, after Popham left, a local force under French General Jacques Liniers Bremont retook the city (12 August) and captured Beresford (27 June 1806).

Buenos Aires ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

After British forces seized Montevideo in February, command passed to Sir John Whitelock, who led an ill-prepared expedition to recapture Spanish-held Buenos Aires, defended by French General Jacques Liniers Bremont. Following heavy losses, Whitelock surrendered, agreeing to evacuate not only Buenos Aires but also Montevideo. He was later court-martialled and cashiered (2–5 July 1807).

Buenza ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Despite winning at Lizasso, French General Jean Baptiste d'Erlon had to retreat from the "Battles of the Pyrenees," and later the same day, General Sir Rowland Hill met his rearguard under General Louis Abbé in the Ulzema Valley near Buenza. Fighting along the ridge at Venta de Urroz, Hill's outnumbered force was driven off, opening d'Erlon's route to Dona Maria (30 July 1813).

Buerat ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

British General Sir Bernard Montgomery pursued Field Marshal Erwin Rommel across Libya from El Alamein and broke the defensive line at El Agheila, then advanced on a strong rearguard at Buerta. In two days' fighting, the British outflanked the Axis position, then raced to occupy the capital Tripoli before entering Tunisia to defeat the Axis at Médenine and Mareth Line (15–16 January 1943).

Buesaco ❙ 1839 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

When rebellion arose in southwest Colombia against the closing of four minor convents near Pasto, the government sent a force under General Pedro Alcántara Herrán, who met and defeated the rebels northeast of Pasto at Buesaco. Herrán eventually negotiated an armistice, but rebellion was renewed a year later as part of the War of the Supreme Commanders (31 August 1839).

Buesaco ❙ 1851 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

Facing Conservative rebellion in southern Colombia, President José Hilario López sent

General Manuel María Franco against General Julio Arboleda, who had established a junta in Popayán. Northeast of Pasto at Buesaco, Arboleda was defeated and, in September, the government won again in the north at Rionegro. Arboleda fled into exile but returned ten years later as President (10 July 1851).

Buffalo ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

On a large-scale raid across the Niagara River under General Sir Phineas Riall, 1,000 British regulars and militia and 400 Indians attacked the American city of Buffalo, defended by General Amos Hall. A spirited defence cost over 100 British casualties before Hall was forced to withdraw. Riall looted and torched Buffalo and also burned nearby Black Rock (30 December 1813).

Buffalo ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

See Con Thien (1st)

Buffalo Mountain ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Camp Allegheny

Buffalo Wallow ❙ 1874 ❙ Red River Indian War

Sent to locate Lyman's Wagon Train, bringing supplies to Colonel A. Nelson in western Oklahoma, scouts Billy Dixon and Amos Chapman and four soldiers were surrounded by over 100 Kiowa in a shallow Buffalo Wallow near the Washita. After repulsing the Indians all day, they were relieved by Major William R. Price. The incident grew greatly in legend (12 September 1874).

Buffington Island ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On a raid into Kentucky and Ohio, Confederate General John H. Morgan captured Corydon, but was pursued by General Edward H. Hobson and attempted to cross the Ohio into West Virginia at Portland. Attacking at nearby Buffington Island, Union Generals Augustus V. Kautz and Henry M. Judah took about 500 prisoners. Morgan escaped north through Salineville (19 July 1863).

Bug ❙ 1018 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

Driven from the Kievan throne by his stepbrother Yaroslav after defeat at Liubech in 1016, Russian Prince Sviatopolk fled to his father-in-law Boleslaw of Poland, who led a large Polish army to help him regain the throne. Yaroslav was defeated in battle on the Bug, north of Lvov, and withdrew to Novgorod, while Sviatopolk secured Kiev. Yaroslav soon counterattacked at the Alta (August 1018).

Builth ❙ 1282 ❙ English Conquest of Wales

See Aber Edw

Bukairiya ❙ 1904 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

Following bloody battle at Unayzah in June, the Rashid and their Turkish allies were routed in actions around Bukairiya by Emir Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh. When the Turks abandoned the Rashid, Abd al-Aziz submitted to the Ottoman Sultan, who recognised him as ruler of the Nejd. He killed the Rashidi leader two years later at Rawdhat al Muhanna (August–September 1904).

Bukittingi ❙ 1958 ❙ Indonesian Civil Wars

Concerned by growing Javanese influence in government, dissident Indonesian politicians and army officers declared a rebel authority in Sumatra under Sjafruddin Prawiranegara. Following naval bombardment, government Colonel Ahmad Yanu landed at Padang (17 April) and advanced 45 miles north to take Bukittingi, the rebel capital, which was then moved to Manado in Sulawesi (5 May 1958).

Bukowa ❙ 1600 ❙ Balkan National Wars

See Bucov

Bulandshahr ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Colonel Edward Greathed marched from Delhi towards besieged Agra, advancing through Sikandarabad to Bulandshahr, where Walidad Khan took a strong defensive position. Having endured heavy gunfire, the rebels were taken in the rear by cavalry and fled, abandoning nearby Malaghur. Greathed destroyed its fortifications, then advanced on Aligarh (28 September 1857).

Bulawayo ❙ 1893 ❙ Matabele War
See Bembesi

Buleleng ❙ 1846 ❙ Dutch Conquest of Bali
See Singaraja

Bulge ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)
See Ardennes

Bulgnéville ❙ 1431 ❙ Hundred Years War
On the death of Charles of Lorraine, his son-in-law René of Anjou claimed the dukedom, but he was defeated and captured in battle at Bulgnéville by Antoine de Vaudement, nephew of Charles and an ally of Phillip of Burgundy. After his eventual release, René was defeated pursuing his claim to Naples. Burgundy was not finally repulsed from Lorraine until 1477 at Nancy (30 June 1431).

Bulla Regia ❙ 533 ❙ Vandal War in Africa
See Tricameron

Bull Run ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
Sent to meet the Confederate army concentrating near Manassas to threaten Washington, D.C., General Irvin McDowell led about 30,000 men against Generals Joseph E. Johnston and Pierre G. T. Beaureguard. McDowell lost perhaps 3,000 men in a bloody battle on the Bull Run and fled east towards the capital. He was quickly replaced by General George B. McClellan (21 July 1861).

Bull Run ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
In the decisive battle of his northern Virginia offensive, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee, with Generals Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson and James Longstreet, smashed into General John Pope's Union army at Bull Run. After initial success, Pope was destroyed by a massive counter-attack. He fled towards Washington, D.C., via Chantilly and was relieved of command (29–30 August 1862).

Bull Run Bridge ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Kettle Run

Bull's Gap ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
General John C. Breckinridge led a Confederate expedition into eastern Tennessee, where he attacked Union General Alvan C. Gillem at Bull's Gap, just northeast of Morristown. Continuous assaults and a threat in the rear by General John C. Vaughan forced Gillem to withdraw. Terrible winter weather later made Breckinridge retire into Virginia (11–13 November 1864).

Buluan ❙ 1905 ❙ American-Moro Wars
See Malala

Bu Meliana ❙ 1911 ❙ Italo-Turkish Wars
See Sidi Mesri

Buna ❙ 1942–1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
Having driven the Japanese back to the north coast of Papua, Australian General George Vasey took Gona, then joined American General Robert Eichelberger against nearby Buna. After costly attacks, more tanks and artillery arrived and the well-defended village fell, with heavy losses on both sides. Attention then turned to Sanananda (19 November 1942–2 January 1943).

Bundelkhand ❙ 800 ❙ Later Indian Dynastic Wars
Govinda III of Rashtrakuta consolidated power in southern India, then took an expedition north against Nagabhata II of Pratihara, who had just won a decisive battle at Monghyr. At an uncertain site in Bundelkhand, Govinda crushed Nagabhata, who fled to Rajputana, his dreams of empire shattered. The rulers of Pala and Kanauj submitted to Govinda before he returned south (disputed date c 800).

Bunker Hill ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When American Colonel William Prescott was sent to secure Bunker Hill, overlooking Boston harbour, he dug in instead on nearby Breed's Hill and was counter-attacked from besieged Boston by British General William Howe. Howe was reinforced by General Henry Clinton after two costly assaults and the Americans were driven off, but only after heavy British losses (17 June 1775).

Burdwan ❙ 1747 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

When Marathas under Janoji Bhonsle invaded Orissa, Governor Mir Ja'far retreated before being reinforced to check the Marathas at Burdwan, northwest of Calcutta. Mughal Nawab Ali Vardi Khan dismissed Mir Ja'far and, with a much larger force, heavily defeated Janoji at Burdwan. However, four more years of war finally persuaded the Emperor to cede Orissa to the Marathas (January 1747).

Burford ❙ 752 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

In an attempt to throw off the overlordship of Mercia, King Cuthred of Wessex defeated Aethelbald of Mercia at Burford, in Oxfordshire. The victory was due in part to the valour of the West Saxon Aethelhun the Proud, who is claimed to have defeated Aethelbald in single combat. Aethelbald fled and the independence of Wessex was secured.

Burgidiah ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Pursuing Nana Sahib across the Gaghara, British commander Sir Colin Campbell and General Sir William Mansfield advanced through Bahraich and Napara towards the village of Burgidiah, held by about 4,000 men. Opening artillery fire at long range, Campbell sent his cavalry on a flanking movement and the rebels fled for the nearby fortress at Musjidiah (26 December 1858).

Burgos ❙ 1589 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

A year after destruction of the Spanish Armada, English General Sir John Norris invaded northern Spain and burned part of Corunna. Marching east, he was eventually attacked by Rodrigo Conde de Altamira near Burgos, on the Arlanzon. Norris drove off the attack but withdrew and, after an abortive landing near Lisbon in Spanish-held Portugal, he returned to England with nothing achieved.

Burgos ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Gamonal

Burgos ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington advanced north from Madrid and attacked Burgos on the Arlanzon, defended by French General Jean Dubretonand. The outer defences quickly fell, but after a month of unsuccessful bombardment and costly assaults, a relief army under General Joseph Souham appeared and Wellington withdrew towards Portugal (19 September–21 October 1812).

Burkersdorf ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

With Russia out of the war, Frederick II of Prussia turned against Austrian Marshal Leopold von Daun in Silesia. At Burkersdorf, southwest of Breslau—in a battle of manoeuvre with few casualties—the Austrians were driven from the field, helping secure Frederick's hold on Silesia when the war ended a few months later after further victories at Reichenbach and Freiberg (21 July 1762).

Burkersdorf ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

See Soor

Burlington Heights ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Dudley's Defeat

Burma ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

As Japanese forces invaded Burma through Kawkareik, Moulmein and Kuzeik, the British began their longest retreat, across the Bilin and Sittang Rivers and through Pegu to Rangoon, which was abandoned on 7 March. They then withdrew north through Prome, Yenangyaung and Shwegyin to India, while the Chinese fell back through Toungoo and Lashio (20 January–11 May 1942).

Burmi ❙ 1903 ❙ British Conquest of Northern Nigeria

With his capital at Sokoto destroyed in March, Sultan Attahiru withdrew north to Burmi, near Gombe, and later came under attack by 30 officers and 500 Africans of the Royal West African Frontier Force. Very heavy fighting saw commander Major Francis Marsh killed, but the Sultan and hundreds of his followers fell. With them died the once great Fulani Empire of northern Nigeria (27 July 1903).

Burnham ❙ 848 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

Five years after a second Saxon defeat at Carhampton in West Somerset, Ealdorman Earnwulf of Somerset and Ealdorman Osric of Dorset fought a Danish force about 20 miles further east at the mouth of the River Parrett near modern Burnham. The Vikings were driven off with heavy losses, but they continued to raid the southwestern coast of England.

Burnshill ❙ 1846 ❙ 7th Cape Frontier War

Determined to capture the Xhosa Chief Sandile, threatening Cape Colony, Colonel Henry Somerset led a large force towards the Amatolas, only to find Sandile's "Great Place" abandoned. The Xhosa meantime attacked Somerset's camp at nearby Burnshill, largely destroying his cumbersome supply train. The humiliated British had to retreat back across the Keiskamma (16–17 April 1846).

Burnt Corn ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

With Creek Indians threatening to take advantage of America's war with Britain, 180 Mississippi militia under Colonel James Caller attacked Chief Jim Boy at Burnt Corn Creek, Escambia County, Alabama. The Indians lost trade goods and about ten killed, but drove the Americans from the field. While only a skirmish, it led directly to the Indian attack on Fort Mims in August (27 July 1813).

Bursa ❙ 1317–1326 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

See Brusa

Bursa ❙ 1922 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War

Determined to drive the Greek invaders out of Anatolia, Turkish commander Mustafa Kemal won at Afyon (30 August), then detached a large force north to recover Bursa (previously Brusa), which had fallen during the initial Greek offensive in July 1919. Heavy fighting saw the city near the Sea of Marmara fall to the Turks, who then rejoined the pursuit west towards Smyrna (5 September 1922).

Burtinah ❙ 1839 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Russian Baron Pavel Grabbe marched into Dagestan, west of the Caspian, where he was met on the Aghdash River at Burtinah by Imam Shamil of Dagestan. Although threatened by a flank attack, Grabbe immediately fell on the Muslims and inflicted a heavy defeat. He was checked a few days later at the village of Irghun, then continued his advance against Shamil at Akhulgo (5 June 1839).

Bushire ❙ 1856 ❙ Anglo-Persian War

In response to Persia's capture of Herat in Afghanistan in October, British Colonel Foster Stalker captured Reshire in the Persian Gulf, then drove the survivors north along the coast towards Bushire (modern Bushehr). Harried by British and Indian troops and shelled by warships, the Persians were heavily defeated next day and the Governor of Bushire surrendered the town (10 December 1856).

Bushy Run ❙ 1763 ❙ Pontiac's War

Advancing from Carlisle, Pennsylvania, to relieve besieged Fort Pitt (modern Pittsburgh), Scottish regulars under Swiss-born Colonel

Henry Bouquet were ambushed by Delaware and Shawnee, about 26 miles east near Edge Hill. Despite costly losses the following day at Bushy Run, a bloody bayonet charge secured victory and Fort Pitt was relieved four days later (5–6 August 1763).

Bussaco ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French Marshals André Masséna and Michel Ney drove across central Portugal after capturing Almeida and attacked a strong Anglo-Portuguese position at Bussaco, north of Lisbon, held by Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington. A bloody engagement saw Masséna driven back with four times the Allied losses, but he circled around Wellington and forced him back to Torres Vedras (27 September 1810).

Busta Gallorum ❙ 552 ❙ Gothic War in Italy

See Taginae

Buttar Dograndi ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

Following success at Phillora, north of Chawinda, Indian forces fatally delayed four days before resuming the offensive further west at Buttar Dograndi. The town changed hands several times, but in the face of heavy Pakistani artillery, the Indians were forced to withdraw with heavy losses, contributing to the subsequent failed final assault on Chawinda (16–17 September 1965).

Buttington ❙ 894 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Despite Viking defeat at Farnham in 893, Danish King Haesten took a large force up the Thames and Severn. But he was driven off and besieged on a Severn island at Buttington by Aethelred of Mercia and the West Saxon Ealdormen, Aethelhelm of Wiltshire and Aethelnoth of Somerset. The starving Danes counter-attacked after weeks of costly hard fighting and broke through to Essex.

Butui ❙ 1865 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

See Mbutuy

Buwayb ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Following Arab disaster in battle at the Bridge (November 634), Caliph Omar sent more troops to support Muthanna of the Bakr ibn Wail against Sassanian Persians on the Euphrates. The reinforced Arabs defeated the advancing Persian army at Buwayb, near Kufa, killing General Mirhan. However, it was only a tactical victory until fresh Arab forces soon resumed the offensive at Qadisiyya (April 635).

Buxar ❙ 1539 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Chausa

Buxar ❙ 1764 ❙ Bengal War

Mir Kassim, deposed Nawab of Bengal, secured an alliance with Mughal Emperor Shah Alam and Shuja-ud-Daula, Nawab of Oudh, against Britain's East India Company. Following British victory at Patna (3 May), a greatly outnumbered force under Major Hector Munro crushed the Indian allies at Buxar, west of Patna. The Emperor submitted next day and Britain secured Bengal (23 October 1764).

Buzakha ❙ 632 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

After establishing his authority in Medina following the death of the Prophet Mohammed, the new Caliph Abu Bekr sent the warrior Khalid ibn al-Walid east through the Nejeb to spread the message. At Buzakha, Tulaiha of the powerful Beni Asad was routed when abandoned by his ally, the Ghatafan leader Uyaina. Tulaiha and the neighbouring tribes quickly rallied to Islam (September 632).

Buzancy ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

As French Marshal Marie MacMahon manoeuvred west of the Meuse, elements of his cavalry encountered the advance guard of a Saxon cavalry division under General Friedrich Senfft von Pilsach at Buzancy, on the road west from Stenay to Vouziers. The French were dispersed after a costly action and MacMahon turned north through Beaumont and Bazeilles towards Sedan (27 August 1870).

Buzenval ❙ 1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War
See Mont Valerian

Byczyna ❙ 1588 ❙ Habsburg-Polish War
When Stephen Bathory of Poland died, Habsburg Duke Maximilian (brother of Emperor Rudolf II) invaded to claim the crown, but was repulsed at Cracow by Jan Zamoyski, who brilliantly defended the city. The following year at Byczyna, east of Wroclaw, Maximilian was defeated by Zamoyski and was held prisoner until Austria abandoned its claim on Poland (24 January 1588).

Bydgoszcz ❙ 1794 ❙ War of the 2nd Polish Partition
During the long siege of Warsaw by King Frederick William III of Prussia, Polish General Jan Henryk Dabrowski took a force from the capital to support Polish rebels in the western province of Wielkopolska. He defeated the Russians in northwest Poland at Bydgoszcz (Bromberg), then marched into Prussian Poznania to threaten Frederick's communications (July 1794).

Byland ❙ 1322 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce
Edward II of England was preparing for yet another invasion of Scotland when he was surprised at Byland, near Newburgh in North Yorkshire, by Robert the Bruce, who routed the English and drove them back towards York. Edward only narrowly escaped capture and sought a truce which eventually led to formal recognition of Bruce as King of independent Scotland (14 October 1322).

Byram's Ford ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)
See Big Blue River

Bytham ❙ 1221 ❙ 1st English Barons' War
Despite the end of the Barons' rebellion after Lincoln in 1217, the King's Justiciar Hubert de Burgh faced continued opposition by the "Foreign Party" of Earl William of Aumale and Falke de Breaute. De Burgh besieged and defeated Aumale in his castle at Bytham, Lincolnshire, forcing him to acknowledge Henry III, though rebellion flared again three years later at Bedford (8 February 1221).

Byzantium ❙ 340 BC ❙ 4th Sacred War
See Perinthus

Byzantium ❙ 193–196 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus
When Emperor Septimius Severus marched east against Pescennius Niger, he left Marius Maximus to continue a siege of rebel Byzantium and pursued Niger into Asia. Following Niger's defeat at Issus, his severed head was sent to the besieged people of Byzantium as a warning, but resistance continued. When Byzantium fell by storm, public buildings and defences were destroyed as punishment.

Byzantium ❙ 324 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession
See Hellespont

Bzura ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
See Warsaw (2nd)

Bzura ❙ 1939 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)
As German forces swept deep into Poland, General Tadeusz Kutrzeba counter-attacked into the exposed left flank of General Johannes Blaskowitz's Eighth Army. Very heavy fighting west of Warsaw along the Bzura saw initial Polish success, but the Poznan Army was eventually surrounded and forced to surrender. Some survivors broke out to help defend Warsaw (9–20 September 1939).

C

Caaguazú ❙ 1841 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

Having taken Entre Rios after victory at Sauce Grande in 1840, Federalist Governor Pascual Echague invaded Corrientes for Dictator Manuel de Rosas. South of Corrientes at Caaguazú, he was brilliantly defeated by Unitarist commander José María Paz. The victory avenged defeat at Pago Largo and secured Corrientes against Rosas until defeat in 1847 at Rincón de Vences (28 November 1841).

Caaibaté ❙ 1756 ❙ Guarani War

See Caibaté

Cabala ❙ 383 BC ❙ 3rd Dionysian War

When Dionysius, Tyrant of Syracuse, renewed his attempts to drive Carthage out of Sicily, Carthaginian leader Mago launched a fresh offensive to secure his Sicilian possessions. At Cabala, in the west near Palermo, the Syracusans achieved an overwhelming victory, and Mago was killed, along with much of his army. However, the Carthaginians were quickly avenged at Cronium.

Cabeira ❙ 72 BC ❙ 3rd Mithridatic War

See Cabira

Cabezon ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

At the start of Bonaparte's campaign in Spain, Marshal Jean-Baptiste Bessières sent General Antoine Lasalle against Spanish General Gregorio de la Cuesta, defending the bridge at Cabezon on the Pisuerga in the northwest. French cavalry routed the raw infantry and Bessières captured nearby Valladolid before inflicting an even worse defeat on Cuesta at Medina del Rio Seco (12 June 1808).

Cabin Creek ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

As Union Colonel James M. Williams led a supply train south through Indian Territory towards Fort Gibson, Oklahoma, he was met at Cabin Creek by Texans and American Indians under the Cherokee Colonel Stand Watie. With Confederate General William C. Cabell delayed by flooded rivers, Watie was driven off and the Union took the offensive days later at Honey Springs (1–2 July 1863).

Cabira ❙ 72 BC ❙ 3rd Mithridatic War

Roman General Lucius Licinius Lucullus defeated Mithridates VI of Pontus at Cyzicus (73 BC), then pursued him east to the Lycus (Kelkit) River in northern Turkey, where Mithridates was routed at Cabira (modern Sivas) and fled to his son-in-law, Tigranes of Armenia. Victory brought a temporary pause until Rome invaded Armenia itself for victory within four years at Tigranocerta and Artaxata.

Cabo de Gata ❙ 1643 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

When Spain sent Admiral Martin de Mencos and Flemish commander Josse Pieters with 25 ships to reinforce Cartagena, they were met off Cabo de Gata, near Almeria, by French Admiral Jean-Armande de Maillé-Brézé. After fierce fighting the Spanish flagship sank and others were damaged and driven ashore. The French suffered heavy damage but lost no ships (3 September 1643).

Cabo de Gata ❙ 1815 ❙ Algerine War

The United States was determined to finally defeat the Barbary pirates and declared war, then sent Captain Stephen Decatur, whose flagship Guerrière was supported by Constellation and Epervier. Off Cabo de Gata, the southeastern tip of Spain, Decatur captured the Algerine flagship Mashuda and 486 prisoners. The Dey of Algiers sued for peace and Tunis and Tripoli followed suit (17 June 1815).

Cabra ❙ 1079 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Amid the confused alliances of the Spanish War, the Muslim ruler Abd-allah of Granada, supported by Christian knights, marched against his Muslim rival al-Mutamid of Seville, whose army was led by Spaniard Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid. Southeast of Cordova at Cabra, El Cid defeated the Granadans and took many prisoners, including the powerful Count Garcia Ordonez.

Cabrillas ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French Marshal Bon Adrien Moncey was sent to suppress insurrection in Catalonia, where he met a large Spanish force at the Cabrillas in southern Guadalajara, led by Brigadier Marimón serving under General Pedro Adorno. A bold flank assault by General Jean Harispe secured victory, but Moncey was repulsed a few days later outside the walls of Valencia and withdrew to Madrid (23 June 1808).

Cabrita Point ❙ 1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Marbella

Cacabellos ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As Sir John Moore's British army retreated from Benavente towards Corunna in northwest Spain, General Edward Paget made a stand at the bridge over the Coa at Cacabellos, just east of Villafranca. An impetuous attack by French cavalry General Jean-Baptise Colbert was repulsed, with Colbert killed, and Paget withdrew during the night towards Villafranca (3 January 1809).

Cacarajicara ❙ 1896 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

After taking command in Cuba, Spanish commander Valeriano Weyler sent General Julián Suárez Inclán southwest of Havana against insurgent leader Antonio Maceo. At Cacarajicara, Maceo and a small force attacked the Spanish column and took costly losses until Cuban reinforcements arrived under Colonel Juan E. Ducasse. Suárez Inclán then suffered a decisive defeat (30 April 1896).

Cache River ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Hill's Plantation

Cacheuta ❙ 1817 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

See Potrerillos

Cachirí ❙ 1816 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

Spanish Colonel Sebastián Calzada advanced through Balaga in Norte de Santander, marching against Patriot General Custodio García Rovira and Colonel Francisco Santander at Cachirí. A two-day action saw heavy losses before a Spanish attack with bayonet and cavalry secured decisive victory. The Patriots withdrew to Socorro and Calzada threatened Bogotá (21–22 February 1816).

Cadesia ❙ 636 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Qadisiyya

Cadiz ❙ 1587 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

Sent to cruise off Spain, Sir Francis Drake took about 30 ships into the key port of Cadiz, where he destroyed a large number of Spanish vessels before escaping without loss. On the way home he captured the treasure galleon St Philip. Drake claimed to have "singed the King of Spain's beard" and the action reportedly delayed the Spanish Armada by up to a year (19 April 1587).

Cadiz ❙ 1596 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

In a large-scale raid, Lord Howard of Effingham attacked Cadiz harbour, supported by Lord Thomas Howard, Robert Devereux Earl of Essex and Dutch Admiral Johan Duivenoorde. The Spanish fleet was destroyed and Essex took a landing force which captured and sacked Cadiz. Essex wanted to march into Andalusia, but the fleet returned home with its massive booty (21–22 June 1596).

Cadiz ❙ 1625 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

Charles I of England resolved to make war on Catholic Spain and sent an ill-equipped fleet of 80 ships to Cadiz under the inexperienced Edward Cecil Lord Wimbledon. While troops under Sir John Burgh captured Fort Puntales, they later got drunk and were heavily repulsed. Wimbledon withdrew and, after the West Indies treasure fleet eluded him, he returned home in disgrace (23–29 October 1625).

Cadiz ❙ 1656 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

English Admiral Richard Stayner intercepted a West Indies treasure fleet off Cadiz, attacking with just six frigates. A brilliant action saw only two Spanish ships escape while Stayner sank or burned two others, drove two ashore and captured two. He was knighted for his success, which yielded 600,000 sterling. He destroyed another fleet a year later at Santa Cruz de Tenerife (8 September 1656).

Cadiz ❙ 1702 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Leading a large Anglo-Dutch force, Admiral Sir George Rooke and James Butler Duke of Ormonde landed near Cadiz after a heavy bombardment. Although Ormonde captured Rota and Santa Maria, the siege failed and the fleet withdrew. On the return home, Rooke redeemed himself at Vigo Bay and was cleared by a Parliamentary inquiry into the fiasco at Cadiz (15 August–15 September 1702).

Cadiz ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In the wake of the French attack on Spain at the beginning of the Peninsular Campaign, Spain turned against the French fleet under Admiral Francois Rosily, which had been blockaded at Cadiz since the rout at Trafalgar in 1805. Rosily was forced to surrender after the Spanish blocked the harbour entrance and opened fire from shore batteries (14–15 June 1808).

Cadiz ❙ 1810–1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

With France occupying Andalusia after victory at Ocaña in late 1809, Spanish forces withdrew to the fortified port of Cadiz, later reinforced by Anglo-Portuguese under General Thomas Graham. After more than two years tying down much of Marshal Nicolas Soult's available army, the siege was lifted when the French withdrew following defeat at Salamanca (5 February 1810–21 August 1812).

Cadiz ❙ 1823 ❙ Franco-Spanish War

See Trocadera

Cadore ❙ 1508 ❙ War of the League of Cambrai

As part of the League of Cambrai between Germany, France, Spain and the Papal states, Emperor Maximilian invaded Italy to capture Milan. His army under the Duke of Brunswick was routed in the Cadore by Venetian General Bartolomeo d'Alviano, and the Emperor withdrew across the Alps. He returned to attack Padua after the French beat d'Alviano in 1509 at Agnadello (2 March 1508).

Cadsand ❙ 1337 ❙ Hundred Years War

In support of a popular rising against Count Louis I of Flanders, led by Jacob van Artevelde of Ghent, Edward III of England sent Sir Walter Manny to raise the blockade by French and Flemish nobles of the island of Cadsand, near Walcheren. The English expedition was victorious and Edward proclaimed himself King of France, triggering the Hundred Years War (10 November 1337).

Caen ❙ 1346 ❙ Hundred Years War

When French forces invaded Gascony, Edward III of England took a large army against Caen in Normandy, defended by Raoul II de Brienne Comte d'Eu and Jean de Melun Comte de Tancarville. Thomas Beauchamp Earl of Warwick took the city by storm, and Eu and Tancarville were among the 300 prisoners sent to England for ransom. Edward marched on to meet the French at Crecy (26 July 1346).

Caen ❙ 1417 ❙ Hundred Years War

During a fresh invasion of France after victory at Agincourt in 1415, Henry V of England and his brother Thomas Duke of Clarence marched to besiege Caen. Attacking after heavy bombardment, the King's troops were repulsed, but Clarence succeeded in forcing a breach and the city fell (4 September). The citadel held out for another two weeks before surrendering (14 August–20 September 1417).

Caen ❙ 1450 ❙ Hundred Years War

Following the English rout at Formigny in April, the incompetent Edmund Beaufort Duke of Somerset withdrew under siege to Caen. With no hope of relief, Somerset surrendered after three weeks to the huge French army of Count Arthur of Richemont and Count Charles of Clermont. The fall of Caen, followed by Cherbourg, ended English presence in Normandy (1 July 1450).

Caen ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

British commander Sir Bernard Montgomery successfully invaded Normandy, then faced a heavy counter-attack by German armour, which blocked repeated attempts to advance on Caen. After the costly Operation Epsom, a large-scale assault finally took Caen, following massive aerial bombardment. After Operation Goodwood, Montgomery stalled until the advance on Falaise (6 June–8 July 1944).

Caer Caradoc ❙ 50 ❙ Roman Conquest of Britain

In the aftermath of defeat at the Medway in Kent in 43, Caratacus of the Catuvellauni was driven into Wales, where he fought on against the Romans until Governor Ostorius Scapula mounted a major expedition to defeat him, traditionally at Caer Caradoc on the Clun and Teme in Shropshire. Caratacus was betrayed by Cartimandua, Queen of the Brigantes, and was taken in chains to Rome.

Caffa ❙ 1296 ❙ Venetian-Genoese Wars

See Kaffa

Caffa ❙ 1475 ❙ Genoese-Turkish War

See Kaffa

Cagancha ❙ 1839 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

After losing to forces opposed to Dictator Manuel de Rosas in northern Argentine at Yerua, Federalist General Pascual Echague, Governor of Entre Rios, invaded Uruguay against Fructuoso Rivera. At Cagancha in San José, aided by French volunteers and anti-Rosas Argentine forces, Rivera defeated Echague, who returned to Entre Rios for victory at Sauce Grande (29 December 1839).

Cagancha ❙ 1858 ❙ Diaz Revolt in Uruguay

A Conservative rising against President Gabriel Periera saw General César Diaz fail in a siege of Montevideo before meeting a larger government force under Colonel Lucas Moreno at Cagancha. Although Diaz secured a decisive victory, he was pursued by General Anacleto Medina north to Paso de Quinteros and surrendered. Diaz and many others were shot on Pereira's orders (15 January 1858).

Cahul ❙ 1574 ❙ Moldavian Rebellion

See Kagul Lagoon

Caia ❙ 1709 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Val Gudina

Caibaté ❙ 1756 ❙ Guarani War

When Spain ceded Portugal an area east of the Uruguay River in the south of modern Brazil, local Guarani Indians in Jesuit missions rose in rebellion. But in the decisive action at Caibaté, west of Santo Angelo, they were routed by the Portuguese, reportedly losing 1,300 dead for just four Europeans killed. Although the battle ended the war, Spain soon resumed control of the area (10 February 1756).

Cairo ❙ 1517 ❙ Ottoman-Mamluk War

See Ridanieh

Cairo ❙ 1772 ❙ Mamluk Wars

Mamluk General Abu'l-Dhahab captured Mecca and Jeddah in Arabia, and much of Ottoman Syria including Damascus, then returned to Egypt to attack his master, Sultan Ali Bey. Ali Bey was defeated in battle near Cairo and fled to Shayk Zahir al-Umar of Acre, supporting his siege of Ottoman Jaffa, before returning to Egypt and final defeat in May 1773 at Salihiyya (April 1772).

Cairo ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Ottoman Vizier Yusuf Pasha supported the Allies at Alexandria, then advanced alone on Cairo, where French General Auguste Belliard marched out to meet him at El Hanka. The Turkish cavalry managed to repulse Belliard and, as General Sir John Hely-Hutchinson approached with the main force supported by Capitan Pasha, the French withdrew to the city and soon capitulated (27 June 1801).

Caishi ❙ 1161 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

Leading a massive assault on the Southern Song, Jin Emperor Wanyan Liang took a huge army to the Yangzi, southwest of Nanjing. Just days after his navy was routed at sea off Chenjia, he tried to cross the river at Caishi, where his ships and army were destroyed by Song General Yu Yun Wen. The Emperor was soon assassinated by his generals, who made peace and withdrew (25–27 November 1161).

Caister Castle ❙ 1469 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Amid anarchy caused by war, private feuds flared and John Mowbray Duke of Norfolk besieged Caister Castle, just north of Yarmouth, where John Paston the Younger was forced to capitulate after a heavy bombardment. While Paston regained the castle during the brief Lancastrian restoration, he lost it again after Barnet (April 1471) and Norfolk held it until his death in 1476 (September 1469).

Caizhou ❙ 817 ❙ Later Tang Imperial Wars

In the face of recalcitrance by ambitious provincial military leaders, Chinese Emperor Xianzong determined to make an example of Huaixi in southern Henan. The largely volunteer and militia army of Huaixi fought on for more than two years until Imperial General Li Su led a bold surprise advance on the capital, Caizhou (Ts'ai-chou). Li won a decisive victory and Huaixi was dismembered.

Cajamarca ❙ 1532 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Peru

With the Inca Empire weakened by a bloody civil war at Cuzco, the Spanish Conquistador Francisco Pizarro met the new Emperor Atahualpa at nearby Cajamarca, where he seized the Inca and slaughtered his mainly unarmed supporters. Atahualpa paid a massive ransom, but he was executed in August 1533. An Inca revolt failed in 1535–1536 and the empire was effectively destroyed.

Cakranegara ❙ 1894 ❙ Dutch Conquest of Bali

To support Sasak Muslims against the Balinese rulers of Lombok, Dutch General Jacobus Vetter advanced on Cakranegara, where he was surprised and routed. The "Lombok Treachery" cost the Dutch almost 100 killed (including General Petrus Van Ham) and 300 wounded. However, Vetter soon returned to burn Cakrenegara and defeat the Balinese outside nearby Mataram (26 August 1894).

Calabar ❙ 1967 ❙ Biafran War

While Nigerian Federal forces advanced on the Biafran capital at Enugu, further south the dynamic Colonel Benjamin Adekunle prepared an ambitious amphibious assault at Calabar. Attacking after a massive naval and aerial bombardment, 3,000 Federals stormed the city, which fell after vicious street fighting. Six months later, Adekunle advanced west towards Port Harcourt (17–19 October 1967).

Calabee Creek ❙ 1814 ❙ Creek Indian War

Soon after defeat at Holy Ground, Creeks led by Red Eagle (William Weatherford) ambushed 1,500 Georgia militia and 500 Indians under General John Floyd at Calabee Creek, near Tuskegee, Alabama. Floyd withdrew after losing about 20 killed and 150 wounded. Following Creek defeat at Horseshoe Bend in March, Weatherford surrendered to General Andrew Jackson (27 January 1814).

Calabozo ❙ 1818 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Patriot leader Simón Bolívar renewed his advance from Angostura through La Hogaza (December 1817), attacking Spanish commander Pablo Morillo in camp on the Guárico near Calabozo. The outnumbered Royalists lost 300 killed and withdrew into the city, then escaped through Republican negligence towards Valencia, and checked Bolívar's pursuit at Sombrero (12 February 1818).

Calabria ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

The largest naval action in the Mediterranean took place off Calabria when British Admiral John Cunningham (one carrier, three battleships, five cruisers and 16 destroyers) met Italian Admiral Inigo Campioni (two battleships, 14 cruisers and 24 destroyers). Air support on both sides failed and the action was broken off after damage to both fleets, though Britain claimed victory (9 July 1940).

Calafat ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

Just weeks after a check at Citate, Russian forces on the Danube resumed their advance on Calafat, opposite Vidna, held by Ahmed Pasha. After a four-month siege, with heavy losses from disease and costly assaults, Russian General Iosif Romanovich Anrep withdrew his forces. At the same time, Russia's main army remained stalled on the lower Danube at Silistria (28 January–May 1854).

Calagurris ❙ 74 BC ❙ Sertorian War

See Calahorra

Calahorra ❙ 74 BC ❙ Sertorian War

Defeated at Murviedro in 75 BC, Rome's commander in Spain, Gnaeus Pompey, withdrew up the Ebro with Quintus Metellus Pius, and was later attacked and badly beaten at Calahorra, southeast of Logroño, by the rebel Quintus Sertorius. However, Sertorius began to lose support and was later killed by his lieutenant Marcus Perpenna. Pompey quickly defeated and executed Perpenna to end the war.

Calais ❙ 1346–1347 ❙ Hundred Years War

Edward III of England followed his decisive victory at Crecy (26 August) by marching north to invest Calais. When it became clear after almost a year under siege that Philip VI of France could not send relief, the starving city surrendered. England held Calais until 1558, by which time it was her last possession in France (4 September 1346–4 August 1347).

Calais ❙ 1558 ❙ 5th Habsburg-Valois War

When England supported a Spanish invasion of France, Henry II of France sent Francis Duke of Guise against English-held Calais, defended by Lord Thomas Wentworth. Following failure in mid-1557, a renewed attack captured the outlying forts of Nieullay and Rysbank and Calais was besieged. When the city capitulated, England lost her last territory in France (1–8 January 1558).

Calais ❙ 1596 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

During intermittent war between Henry IV of France and Phillip II of Spain, Spanish troops from the Netherlands marched into northwest France and captured a considerable amount of territory. A key action was the surprise attack and capture of Calais by Archduke Albert of Austria. The city was returned to France in 1598 by the treaty which ended the war (9 April 1596).

Calais ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

During the German advance on the Channel Ports, Panzer General Heinz Guderian seized Boulogne, then drove north to attack Calais, tenaciously held by French and British under Brigadier Claude Nicholson. With evacuation by sea ruled out, Nicholson refused to surrender. The port finally fell by storm, but its resistance is claimed to have bought time for the defence of Dunkirk (24–27 May 1940).

Calakmul ❙ 695 ❙ "Star" Wars

Succeeding his father, killed at Dos Pilas (679), the energetic King Jasaw Chan K'awiil of Tikal determined to restore his Mayan Kingdom, in modern Guatemala. In a campaign planned by the position of the stars, he marched north against his arch-rival, the city of Calakmul. King Yich'ak K'ak of Calakmul was decisively defeated and executed and Tikal regained its preeminence (August 695).

Calama ❙ 109 BC ❙ Jugurthine War

See Suthul

Calatafimi ❙ 1860 ❙ 2nd Italian War of Independence

After landing with "The Thousand" in western Sicily, Giuseppe Garibaldi rallied the local population to rise against the Bourbon Kingdom of Naples. Neapolitan Major Antonio Landi was decisively defeated in action at Calatafimi, near Alcamo, which cost over 100 lost on either side. It opened the way to Garibaldi's capture of Palermo and final victory in July at Milazzo (15 May 1860).

Calatanazar ❙ 1002 ❙ Later Christian-Muslim Wars in Spain

Muslim Chief Minister Ibn Abi Amir al-Mansour advanced into Castile to meet the combined Christian armies of King Sancho III of Navarre, Count Sancho of Castile and Alfonso V of Leon. In a battle near Calatanazar, west of Soria in central Spain, the great Muslim warrior was routed and fatally wounded, leading directly to the fall of the Caliphate of Cordova.

Calatayud ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

To divert French attention from the Allied offensive in Valencia, Spanish guerrilla leaders Juan Martin Diaz and José Duran captured Calatayud, southwest of Saragossa, and besieged the convent of La Merced. While explosive mines forced the garrison to surrender, the Spanish withdrew with their prisoners before a French relief force arrived next day (26 September–4 October 1811).

Calavryta ❙ 1079 ❙ Byzantine Wars of Succession

When Nicephorus III Botaniates seized Constantinople's throne following victory at Nicaea, he sent General Alexius Comnenus against the rival Imperial claimant Nicephorus Briennes, Governor of Dyrrhachium. A cavalry action in Achaea at Calavryta (modern Kalavryta, Greece) saw Briennus defeated, then blinded, but Comnenus himself soon revolted and seized the throne as Alexius I.

Calcinato ❙ 1706 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

French commander Louis Duke de Vendôme launched a fresh offensive in northern Italy, where he defeated Austrian General Count Christian Reventlau at Calcinato, southeast of Brescia, driving the Imperial forces out of central Lombardy and forcing a withdrawal up the Trentino Valley. French troops then besieged Turin, but they were decisively defeated by Prince Eugène of Savoy (19 April 1706).

Calcutta ❙ 1756 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

In a pre-emptive move against the British in Bengal, the French-supported Nawab Siraj-ud-Daula attacked Calcutta, where most Europeans fled, leaving fewer than 200 to defend Fort William. The garrison surrendered after four days and only 23 of 146 survived overnight imprisonment in the "Black Hole of Calcutta." The city was retaken the following January (16–20 June 1756).

Calcutta ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

At war with the French-supported Nawab Siraj-ud-Daula of Bengal, British Colonel Robert Clive recaptured Calcutta (taken the previous June), then a month later repulsed a massive counter-attack by a reputed 40,000 Indians. When Clive defeated the French at Chandernagore (24 March), Siraj made peace and withdrew until the decisive battle at Plassey in June (2 January & 5 February 1757).

Caldera Bay ❙ 1891 ❙ Chilean Civil War

Although war between Chile's Congress and President José Manuel Balmaceda was fought mainly on land, two government gunboats attacked the Congressional squadron in Caldera Bay. In a confused night action, the gunboat Almirante Lynch (Commander Alberto Funtes) sank the battleship Blanco Encalada, the first ironclad warship lost to a self-propelled torpedo (23 April 1891).

Calderón ❙ 1811 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

Two months after victory at Guanajuato, Mexican Royalist commander Félix María Calleja advanced on the main rebel army of Miguel Hidalgo at Guadalajara. Marching out to meet Calleja at the Bridge of Calderón, Hidalgo and his Generals Ignacio Allende and Juan Aldama suffered a terrible and decisive defeat. They were eventually captured and shot, and the rising was crushed (17 January 1811).

Calderón ❙ 1860 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Reversing previous Liberal defeats, new commander Jesús González Ortega captured Guadalajara, then met an approaching government relief force under General Leonardo Márquez at nearby Calderón. Márquez was heavily defeated, losing all his ammunition and baggage and more than 2,000 prisoners. Ortega soon also won the decisive battle at Calpulalpam (10 November 1860).

Caldiero ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In yet another Austrian attempt to relieve the French siege of Mantua, Baron Josef Alvinzi forced Napoleon Bonaparte to split his forces between the siege and covering Verona. On the nearby heights of Caldiero, Bonaparte was repulsed attacking a strong Austrian position. He was forced back to Verona, but reversed his loss with a bloody victory a few days later at Arcola (12 November 1796).

Caldiero ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

While Napoleon Bonaparte was campaigning in Austria, the Austrians in northern Italy under Archduke Charles were attacked in a strong defensive position at Caldiero, east of Verona, by French Marshal André Masséna. Although Masséna was repulsed, both sides suffered heavy casualties and, following battle at the Tagliamento, Charles began his withdrawal across the Alps (30 October 1805).

Caliano ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Calliano

Calibee Creek ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

See Talladega

Calibio ❙ 1814 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

When Spanish Royalists under Juan de Samano invaded southern Colombia, Republican General Antonio Nariño marched south from Bogotá, and two weeks after victory at Palacé, he attacked Generals Juan de Samano and Ignacio Asín at Calibio, northeast of Popayán. Heavy fighting saw the Royalists repulsed at bayonet point with Asín killed. Nariño then retook Popayán (15 January 1814).

Calicut ❙ 1500 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

Following the explorer Vasco da Gama, Portuguese Admiral Pedro Alvares Cabral was sent to establish a depot at Calicut, in southwest India. When Muslims induced local Indians to attack the depot, Cabral destroyed the Arab fleet, then bombarded Calicut and burned it. In 1502, the Raja of Calicut refused to expel the Muslims, and the city was burned again (16 December 1500).

Calicut ❙ 1790 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War

When Tipu Sultan of Mysore renewed war against Britain, Colonel James Hartley advanced into southeast India to attack the port of Calicut, defended by Mysorean General Hussein Ali. Hartley inflicted heavy casualties in a one-sided rout and took many prisoners. Sir Robert Abercromby's main force then arrived and secured the whole province of Malabar (10 December 1790).

Callao ❙ 1819 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

While privateers attacked Spanish ships off Chile, Lord Thomas Cochrane took the Chilean squadron from Valparaiso against Callao, the port outside Lima in Spanish Peru. With an inadequate force of just 400 marines under Major William Miller (who was badly wounded), and failure of his Congreve rockets, Cochrane was driven off, though succeeded against Valdivia (29 September 1819).

Callao ❙ 1820–1821 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

Despite previous failure, Chilean Admiral Lord Thomas Cochrane and General José de San Martin blockaded Callao outside Lima. In a brilliant coup, Cochrane entered the harbour in boats and captured the Spanish frigate Esmeralda (5 November 1820). Lima later fell (6 July 1821), but garrison commander Colonel José de Lamar held out in the fortress (8 October 1820–21 September 1821).

Callao ❙ 1824–1826 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

When Peru was liberated by victory at Ayacucho, Spanish General José Rodil held out in the fortress port of Callao, outside Lima, against Generals Simón Bolívar and Bartolomé Salóm. After 14 months, and heavy losses from starvation and disease, Rodil surrendered with the honours of war and Spain finally lost its last garrison on the South American continent (10 December 1824–23 January 1826).

Callao ❙ 1866 ❙ Peruvian-Spanish War

Commodore Casto Mendez-Nuñez attempting to recover Spanish influence in South America bombarded Valparaiso in Chile in March, then sailed against Calloa, near Lima, defended by Peruvian President Mariano Ignacio Prado. In a courageous action, with costly losses on both sides, shore batteries damaged and repulsed the Spanish ships. Hostilities ceased a week later (2 May 1866).

Calliano ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

A month after losing at Castiglione, Austrian General Dagobert Wurmser renewed his effort to relieve the French siege of Mantua, again ill-advisedly splitting his force. Having repulsed Austrian General Paul Davidovich at Roveredo in the Adige Valley, Napoleon Bonaparte smashed him next day at nearby Calliano. Bonaparte then turned to defeat Wurmser days later at Bassano (5 September 1796).

Callicinus ❙ 171 BC ❙ 3rd Macedonian War

The ambitious young King Perseus of Macedon was determined to attack Rome in Greece and led a force into Thessaly. At Callicinus, near Larissa, he defeated a large Roman army under Lucius Portius Licinius, supported by Licinius Crassus on the right wing. However, Perseus failed to follow up his victory and, two years later, his empire was destroyed by a Roman counter-offensive at Pydna.

Callinicum ❙ 297 ❙ Roman-Persian Wars

When Shah Narses of Persia invaded Roman Syria, Emperor Diocletian sent his son-in-law Galerius Maximus, who crossed the Euphrates, but was forced to withdraw towards Carrhae. Ambushed to the south at Callinicum (modern Rakka), Galerius suffered a terrible defeat, effectively losing Mesopotamia to Persia. The following year he defeated Narses at Erzurum and regained lost territory.

Callinicum ❙ 531 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

A year after defeating the Sassanian Persians at Dara in northern Mesopotamia, Byzantine General Belisarius harassed a Persian army under Azareth, retreating down the west bank of the Euphrates. Belisarius attacked near the frontier at Callinicum (Rakka), but was heavily defeated and withdrew north of the river. Azareth also suffered heavy losses and the Persians decided to make peace.

Caloocan ❙ 1899 ❙ Philippine-American War

At the start of the war, American commander Arthur MacArthur advanced a few miles north of Manila against the key railway terminus at Caloocan. General Henry W. Lawton took the town by assault after a heavy naval bombardment in the first full-scale action of the war. However, Philippine General Antonio Luna eluded defeat and withdrew north through Polo to Malolos (10 February 1899).

Caloosahatchee ❙ 1839 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

The so-called "Spanish" Seminole under Chakaika launched a night attack on the army camp at Caloosahatchee, in southwest Florida, east of Fort Myers, killing nine regulars and three civilians and looting the nearby trading post before Colonel William Harney rallied the survivors. Chakaika escaped with captured arms and other booty and a year later he attacked peaceful Indian Key (23 July 1839).

Calpulalpam ❙ 1860 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

In the wake of the terrible government defeat at Calderón (10 November), President Miguel Miramón took 8,000 troops northeast from Mexico City to meet Liberal commander Jesús González Ortega and perhaps 15,000 men on the heights of San Miguel Calpulalpam. Miramón was crushed and fled to Europe. The war ended, and Benito Juarez was installed as President (22 December 1860).

Calugareni ❙ 1595 ❙ Wallachian-Turkish War

Ottoman Grand Vizier Sinan Pasha advanced into Romania against Prince Michael the Brave of Wallachia and suffered a terrible defeat in the marshes of Calugareni, north of the Danube. However, the Turks went on to attack Bucharest and Tirgovist before being forced to withdraw. In October Sinan suffered another heavy loss on the Danube at Giurgiu (23 August 1595).

Calumpit ❙ 1899 ❙ Philippine-American War

Marching north from Malolos across the Bagbag, American commander Arthur MacArthur attacked Philippine General Antonio Luna at Calumpit on the Rio Grande. When General Frederick Funston's Kansans boldly swam the river under heavy fire to draw the boats across, MacArthur captured Calumpit. He later continued north to secure San Fernando (27 April 1899).

Calven ❙ 1499 ❙ Swabian War

In their final struggle for freedom, the Swiss cantons defeated the Habsburg cities of the Swabian League at Schwaderloch and Frastenz, then about 8,000 Swiss under Benedict Fontana attacked German entrenchments at Calven Gorge in the Munstertal. While Fontana was killed in the first assault, the position was taken at the cost of a reported 5,000 Habsburg casualties (22 May 1499).

Calvi ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

With Britain's navy forced out of Toulon (December 1793), Admiral Sir Samuel Hood (1724–1816) invaded Corsica and, after capturing Bastia, moved General Sir Charles Stuart west to besiege Calvi (where Captain Horatio Nelson lost his right eye). General Raphael de Casabianco surrendered after two months and British forces held Corsica until December 1796 (19 June–10 August 1794).

Camaret Bay ❙ 1694 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

English Admiral Peregrine Osborne Marquis of Carmarthen led a misconceived expedition against Brest, where he bombarded nearby Fort Camaret while General Thomas Talmach tried to land about 800 troops. The bombardment failed, with one English ship sunk, and Talmach lost more than half his men killed or captured before being driven off. He died of wounds four days later (8 June 1694).

Camargo ❙ 1866 ❙ Mexican-French War

See Santa Gertrudis

Cambodia ❙ 1970 ❙ Vietnam War

When 20,000 American and South Vietnamese invaded Cambodia to destroy Communist bases, they captured massive quantities of weapons and food. While the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese attempted to avoid major battles, there was some intense fighting, with over 350 Americans and perhaps 4,000 Communists killed, before the controversial "incursion" came to an end (1 May–30 June 1970).

Cambrai ❙ 1657 ❙ Franco-Spanish War

Following an alliance between France and Cromwell's England against Spain in northern France, French Marshal Henri de Turenne besieged Spanish-held Cambrai. Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé, in Spanish service, inflicted a heavy defeat and drove off the siege, as at Valenciennes in 1656. His subsequent defeat at the Dunes in June 1658 effectively ended the war (30 May 1657).

Cambrai ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Villers-en-Cauchies

Cambrai ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

General Julian Byng was determined to pierce the Hindenburg Line, sending 340 tanks against General Georg von de Marwitz, south of Cambrai. Advancing without bombardment, the first mass tank attack surprised and smashed through the defences. However, the tanks lacked infantry support, and a German counter-attack soon retook most of the lost ground (20 November–3 December 1917).

Cambrai-St Quentin ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

While Allied forces attacked on the Meuse and advanced in Flanders, British commander Sir Douglas Haig launched his offensive between Cambrai and St Quentin against General Max von Boehn. Initial action at Canal du Nord and the St Quentin Canal broke through the Hindenburg Line, leading to the capture of Cambrai (9 October) and Le Cateau (27 September–10 October 1918).

Cambuskenneth ❙ 1297 ❙ William Wallace Revolt

See Stirling

Camden ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When rebel militia attacked British outposts at Rocky Mount and Hanging Rock in early August, American General Horatia Gates advanced on the main British base at Camden, South Carolina, held by Colonel Lord Francis Rawdon, later reinforced by General Charles Earl Cornwallis. Gates was routed with terrible losses in a decisive defeat and fled to Hillsboro, North Carolina (16 August 1780).

Camden ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Poison Spring

Camel, England ❙ 721 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

King Ine of Wessex was beaten by Mercia in the north at Wodnesbeorg in 715, and later tried to extend Saxon territory west into Cornwall, where he was heavily defeated near the Camel River. A few years later, he resigned the Kingship of the West Saxons, leaving the fierce Britons of Cornwall to maintain their independence from Wessex until defeat after a hundred years at nearby Gafulford.

Camel, Iraq ❙ 656 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

Following the murder of Caliph Omar, Mohammed's son-in-law Ali was opposed by Omar's widow, Aisha, and the Generals Talha and Zubair. At Khoraiba, near Basra in Mesopotamia, the rebels were defeated and killed, securing Ali's caliphate. From the bloody battlefield defence of the camel pavilion carrying Aisha, this became known as the Battle of the Camel (9 December 656).

Camelodunum ❙ 43 ❙ Roman Conquest of Britain

See Medway

Camerinum ❙ 295 BC ❙ 3rd Samnite War

Determined on a final attempt to resist Rome in central Italy, Samnites under Gellius Egnatius, supported by Gauls, attacked advance Roman legions defending a pass near Camerinum, in the Apennines, 90 miles northeast of Rome. Although Roman commander Lucius Cornelius Scipio suffered a costly defeat, the main Roman force soon arrived and was avenged at nearby Sentinum.

Camerone ❙ 1863 ❙ Mexican-French War

In a celebrated French Foreign Legion episode, three officers and 62 men led by Captain Jean Danjou, sent to escort supplies from Veracruz to the siege of Puebla, were attacked by overwhelming Mexican forces, and determined to defend a farmhouse at Camerone. Swearing to fight to the death, Danjou and 21 others were killed, with all the remainder wounded or captured (30 April 1863).

Camerontown ❙ 1863 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

As General Duncan Cameron advanced south from Auckland, about 100 Ngati Maniapoto attacked his lines at Camerontown, where five Europeans were killed and stores destroyed. When reinforcements arrived from Tuakau, the officers were killed and Sergeant Edward McKenna won the Victoria Cross for saving the survivors. Another attack followed at Pukekohe East (7 September 1863).

Camlann ❙ 515 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

About twenty years after victory over the Saxons at Mons Badonicus, the semi-mythical King Arthur of Britain found himself in conflict with his rebellious nephew Mordred. The two traditionally met in battle at Camlann, the location of which is shrouded in legend and greatly disputed, but possibly on Salisbury Plain. Mordred and Arthur were both killed (trad date c 515).

Campaldino ❙ 1289 ❙ Guelf-Ghibelline Wars

Amid continuing factional war in northern Italy, Guelf forces from Florence led by Amerigo di Nerbona, aided by Pistoians and Luchesse under Corso Donati, marched against the Ghibelline city of Arezzo. At Campaldino, near Poppi, Count Guido Novello of Arezzo fled and the warrior-Bishop Guiglielmino of Arezzo was routed and killed. Florence secured much of Tuscany (11 June 1289).

Camp Allegheny ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union General Robert H. Milroy resumed the offensive in West Virginia after the costly action at Greenbrier River (3 October) and advanced southeast from Cheat Summit against Confederate Camp Allegheny on the Staunton turnpike, held by Colonel Edward "Allegheny" Johnson. Both sides lost about 140 men in inconclusive fighting and Milroy retreated to Cheat Summit (13 December 1861).

Camp Baldwin ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Camp Allegheny

Campbell's Station ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
While attempting to intercept Union General Ambrose E. Burnside south of Knoxville, Tennessee, Confederate General James Longstreet found himself blocked near the important railway junction at Campbell's Station. Burnside held off the Confederate attack in heavy fighting, then withdrew into Knoxville, securing a decisive victory two weeks later at Fort Sanders (16 November 1863).

Camperdown ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)
Off the Dutch coast near Texel at Camperdown (Kamperduijn), British Admiral Adam Duncan attacked Dutch Admiral Jan de Winter attempting to take 13,000 Dutch troops and rebels under Wolfe Tone to join a French landing in Ireland. During a hard-fought engagement, with heavy casualties on both sides, Duncan took or destroyed nine Dutch vessels (11 October 1797).

Camp Grant ❙ 1871 ❙ Apache Indian Wars
When Apache under Eskiminzin approached Camp Grant, north of Tucson, Arizona, to seek peace, their camp was attacked at night while the warriors were away hunting, by about 150 whites, Mexicans and Indians under William S. Oury and Jesus Elias. About 140 Apache were killed in cold blood, mainly women and children, helping to escalate war with the Apache (30 April 1871).

Campi Cannini ❙ 457 ❙ Alemannic Invasion of Northern Italy
Taking advantage of confusion following the defeat of Emperor Avitus at Placentia (16 October 456), an invading army of Alemanni crossed the Rhaetian Alps from Switzerland into Italy and reached Lake Maggiore. At nearby Campi Cannini, they were defeated and repulsed by the Roman General Majorian, who was later established as Emperor with the aid of his Suevic ally Ricimer.

Campi Raudii ❙ 101 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars
See Vercellae

Camp Izard ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War
See Withlacoochee

Campo Grande, Boquerón ❙ 1933 ❙ Chaco War
See Pampa Grande

Campo Grande, Cordillera ❙ 1869 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
See Acosta-Ñu

Campo Mayor ❙ 1644 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese Wars
See Montijo

Campo Mayor (1st) ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
French Marshal Édouard Mortier set out from Badajoz and crossed the Portuguese border to besiege the fortress at Campo Mayor, held by a scratch force of militia and a handful of regulars under the Portuguese Major Jose Joaquim Talaya. The fortress surrendered after an heroic defence against heavy bombardment and was later held against the Allies (14–21 March 1811).

Campo Mayor (2nd) ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
In a prelude to the Allied siege of Badajoz, an Anglo-Portuguese force under General Sir William Beresford attacked Campo Mayor, just inside Portugal. Withdrawing south in good order, General Marie Latour-Maubourg repulsed a badly handled Allied attack, and a sortie across the Guadiana from Badajoz by Marshal Édouard Mortier completed the French victory (25 March 1811).

Camposanto ❙ 1743 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Campaigning in northern Italy, Spanish commander Count Juan de Gages marched northwest from Bologna in an attempt to join forces with French Prince Louis-François of Conti. Crossing the Panaro, he attacked the Austro-Sardinian army of Marshal Otto von Traun at Camposanto, northwest of Modena. While both sides claimed victory, the Spanish withdrew towards Naples (8 February 1743).

Campo Vía ❙ 1933 ❙ Chaco War

Days after being driven back from Alihuatá in the Chaco Boreal, Bolivian commander General Hans Kundt was surrounded and defeated at Campo Vía, just west of Gondra, by Paraguayan Brigadier José Félix Estigarribia. Colonels Carlos Banzer and Emilio González Quint surrendered 8,000 men and Kundt was promptly dismissed, but Paraguay unwisely agreed to a truce (11 December 1933).

Campus Ardiensis ❙ 317 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

Despite bloody action at Cibalae (October 316), Eastern Emperor Valerius Licinius continued the war against his rival Constantine, who took his army into Thrace and attacked at Campus Ardiensis near the Hebrus. Licinius lost half his troops and sued for peace, agreeing to give up Illyria and Greece though retaining his Asian possessions. Eight years later war resumed at Adrianople (January 317).

Campus Castorum ❙ 69 ❙ Vitellian Civil War

See Bedriacum

Campus Mardiensis ❙ 317 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

See Campus Ardiensis

Campus Vocladensis ❙ 507 ❙ Visigothic-Frankish Wars

See Vouillé

Camp Wild Cat ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General Felix K. Zollicoffer advanced into southeastern Kentucky through Barbourville, and was blocked to the northwest on the Rockcastle River at Camp Wild Cat by Union forces under General Albin F. Schoepf and Colonel Theophilus T. Garrard. The Confederate attacks were repulsed in heavy fighting and Zollicoffer withdrew to Cumberland Ford (21 October 1861).

Cañada ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

See La Cañada

Cañada el Carmen ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War

Despite a check at Villazón, Paraguayan commander General José Félix Estigarribia continued west towards the Bolivian Andes, and days later at Cañada el Carmen, Colonel Carlos José Fernández routed Bolivian Colonel Walter Méndez. Over 7,000 prisoners and massive military materials were captured and Paraguayan forces advanced on the nearby fortress of Ballivian (11–16 November 1934).

Cañada-Strongest ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War

Resuming the offensive in the Chaco Boreal five months after victory at Campo Vía, General José Félix Estigarribia's Paraguayans advanced west towards the Andes. Four of his regiments were attacked at Cañada-Strongest, near Cochabamba, where Bolivian Colonel Enrique Peñaranda captured 1,500 men and their arms. Bolivia was routed six months later at Cañada el Carmen (24 May 1934).

Cañada Tarija ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War

When Bolivian forces in the disputed Chaco Boreal concentrated near Picuiba under Colonel Francisco Peña, Paraguayan Colonel Frederico Smith advanced northwest from Camacho and encircled Colonel Angel Bavía at Cañada Tarija. Almost 1,200 Bolivians were forced to surrender, after which Bavía committed suicide and Peña was dismissed from command (26–27 March 1934).

Canal du Nord ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Near the start of the assault on the Hindenburg Line, British Generals Julian Byng and Henry Horne attacked across the heavily defended Canal du Nord, just west of Cambrai. Supported by artillery fire, Canadian forces stormed through the German defences, while two days later the offensive continued further south on the St Quentin Canal (27 September–1 October 1918).

Cancale ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Admiral Sir Edward Hawke and Commodore Richard Howe attacked the Brittany coast, where they landed 13,000 men under Charles Spencer Duke of Marlborough and Lord George Sackville in Cancale Bay, east of St Malo. The raiders damaged the small harbour of Servan, but realised they had insufficient forces to take St Malo and returned home with little achieved (2–12 June 1758).

Cancha Rayada ❙ 1813 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

While marching south from Santiago with 1,000 men against Talca, the Argentine Patriot Manuel Blanco Encalada was intercepted at Cancha Rayada by guerrilla leader Ildefonso Elorreaga. Although Encalada was heavily defeated, the Patriots recovered to repulse an advance on Santiago a week later by Spanish General Gabino Gainza, who retired to Talca (29 March 1813).

Cancha Rayada ❙ 1818 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

Attempting to restore Spanish authority in Chile after rebel victory at Chacabuco (13 February 1817), General Manuel Osorio invaded from Peru and surprised Patriot General José de San Martin at Cancha Rayada, near Talca. San Martin was defeated, losing 120 killed and all his guns, but Osorio also suffered heavy losses and was beaten the following month at the Maipú (19 March 1818).

Candelaria, Cuba ❙ 1896 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

Insurgent leader Antonio Maceo recovered from the bloody action in western Cuba at Paso Real, and soon attacked the fortified town of Candelaria on the railway southwest of Havana, held by Cuban negros supporting the Spanish. Threatened with death as traitors if captured, the defenders fought bravely for 24 hours until reinforced from Artemisa, and Maceo had to withdraw (January 1896).

Candelaria, Mexico ❙ 1864 ❙ Mexican-French War

On campaign southwest of Guadalajara in Jalisco, Liberal General Ignacio Ugalde tried to trap a larger French force under Colonel Jean-Francois Tourre in the defile at La Candelaria. Despite the superior Mexican position and almost 50 casualties, the French troops fought back courageously in intense heat, repulsing the attack. They then marched northwest to occupy Ayutla (1 August 1864).

Candia ❙ 1648–1669 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

Supposedly responding to attacks by pirates, Sultan Ibrahim I sent a massive army against Venetian-held Crete, where the capital, Candia, held out under Captain-General Francesco Morosoni against one of history's longest sieges. Vizier Ahmed Fazili Koprulu forced the surrender after 21 years and massive casualties on both sides. He then seized most of Crete (1648–27 September 1669).

Candorcanqui ❙ 1824 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

See Ayacucho

Canea ❙ 1645 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

See Khania

Canea ❙ 1692 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

See Khania

Cane Hill ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

A month after victory at Old Fort Wayne, Union commander James G. Blunt marched east into northern Arkansas to intercept approaching Confederates under General John S. Marmaduke. The Confederate rearguard under General Joseph O. Shelby fought a bloody holding action at Cane Hill, southwest of Fayetteville, before withdrawing northeast to Prairie Grove (28 November 1862).

Cangallo ❙ 1814 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

See Apacheta

Canglor ❙ 1488 ❙ Scottish Barons' Rebellion

See Sauchieburn

Cannae ❙ 216 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Facing crisis after defeat by Hannibal at Lake Trasimene (April 217 BC), fresh Roman legions met the Carthaginian invaders on the Plain of Cannae, at the Aufidus River, north of modern Bari. In the classic double-encirclement, the Romans were surrounded and massacred, with General Aemilius Paulus killed. Cannae is regarded as the most brilliant and brutal victory in ancient history (2 August 216 BC).

Cannae ❙ 1018 ❙ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy

At the start of Norman military operations in Italy, Rainulf joined with Lombard noble Melo who had been exiled from Byzantine Bari. On the famous battlefield north of Bari at Cannae the Lombard-Norman force was routed by Byzantine General Basil Boioannes. Twenty years later, Rainulf (eventually Count of Aversa) supported Byzantium against Muslim Sicily at Rometta (October 1018).

Canne ❙ 1018 ❙ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy

See Cannae

Cañón de Ugalde ❙ 1790 ❙ Mexican-Apache Wars

General Juan de Ugalde, Spanish Governor of Coahuila, had campaigned for several years against Indians in West Texas before taking a large force of troops and Indian allies against about 300 Apache at the Arroyo de la Soledad (Sabinal River Canyon), near the modern town of Utopia. The Apache suffered a decisive defeat and the battlefield was renamed Cañón de Ugalde (9 January 1790).

Cantigny ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

When American forces rushed to reinforce the French against the German offensive across the Aisne, General Robert Lee Bullard attacked the village of Cantigny, near Montdidier. Driving out Germans under General Oscar von Hutier, he then repulsed repeated counter-attacks, losing over 1,000 men. While only a limited action, it was the first American attack of the war (28 May 1918).

Canton ❙ 879 ❙ Huang Chao Rebellion

See Guangzhou

Canton ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Guangzhou

Canton ❙ 1857 ❙ 2nd Opium War

See Guangzhou

Canton ❙ 1927 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Guangzhou

Canton ❙ 1938 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

See Guangzhou

Canusium ❙ 209 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Asculum, Apulia

Canyon Creek ❙ 1877 ❙ Nez Percé Indian War

Nez Percé Chief Joseph was leading his people's epic retreat across Montana from the Big Hole River when he was intercepted at Canyon Creek by Colonel Samuel Sturgis and 350 troopers. Sturgis was heavily repulsed in a brilliant defensive action, but Joseph also suffered costly losses in men and horses and continued north across the Missouri to the Bear Paw Mountains (13 September 1877).

Canyon de Chelly ❙ 1864 ❙ Navajo Indian War

Colonel Kit Carson and New Mexico cavalry were sent against the Navajo in northeast Arizona, and eventually defeated them at their stronghold in Canyon de Chelly, north of Fort Defiance. Sixty warriors surrendered and, by the end of the year, 8,000 Navajo were removed to the Pecos River in eastern New Mexico. One quarter had died by the time they returned home in 1868 (January 1864).

Canyon of the Dead Sheep ❙ 1857 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Supporting Colonel Benjamin Bonneville's expedition on the Gila River, Colonel William Wing Loring marched from Fort Union, New Mexico, against Mimbreno Apache under Cuchilla Negro stealing sheep along the Rio Grande. In the Canyon of the Dead Sheep, near the Arizona border, the Mimbreno Chief and several others were killed, temporarily halting these raids (25 May 1857).

Cao-Bang ❙ 1950 ❙ French Indo-China War

On a large offensive in northern Vietnam, General Vo Nguyen Giap overwhelmed Dong-Khé, isolating the garrison to the northwest at Cao-Bang, which withdrew towards a column advancing from That-Khé. Both French forces were destroyed with 4,000 men lost (mainly captured) plus huge quantities of equipment. Lang Son was abandoned and the French had lost northern Tonkin (3–7 October 1950).

Caohekou ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Japanese Marshal Aritomo Yamagata crossed the Yalu into southern Manchuria, where he advanced to secure Caohekou (Ts'ao-ho-kou), commanding the road between Motien Pass and Saimachi. Attacked by the Amur army of Tatar General Yiketang'a, Yamagata secured a bloody victory before extreme cold and over-extended supply lines made him retire on Fenghuang-cheng (25 November 1894).

Cape Bon ❙ 468 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

Leading a combined offensive against the Vandals in Carthage, Western Emperor Anthemius sent Marcellinus against Sardinia and Sicily, while Eastern Emperor Leo sent Heraclius of Edessa through Tripoli and Basiliscus commanded the combined fleet. After Gaiseric surprised and destroyed the fleet off Cape Bon in Tunisia, and Marcellinus was murdered, Leo agreed to make peace.

Cape Bon ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

With Axis forces in North Africa desperately short of fuel, Italian Admiral Antonio Toscano took the supply-laden light cruisers Alberico da Barbiano and Alberto di Giussano from Palermo. Tracked by ULTRA intelligence, he was ambushed off Cape Bon by four destroyers under Commander Graham Stokes. Both cruisers were sunk, with Toscano among over 900 men lost (13 December 1941).

Cape Carmel ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

While Napoleon Bonaparte besieged Acre, north of modern Haifa, British Captain Sir William Sidney Smith, providing support at sea, intercepted French Admiral Jean-Baptiste Perrée arriving with a siege train. In a sharp action off Cape Carmel, Smith captured all nine enemy ships, effectively ending French hopes of taking Acre. Within days Bonaparte abandoned the siege (18 May 1799).

Cape Cherchell ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

During the Nationalist blockade of southeastern Spain, the new cruiser Balaeres intercepted four freighters escorted by two Republican cruisers and seven destroyers off Cape Cherchell, west of Algiers. During heavy action in the morning, resumed that afternoon, Balaeres and the Republican cruiser Libertad were both hit, but the convoy was forced to divert to Port Cherchell (7 September 1937).

Cape Colony ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

When France invaded Holland, British General James Craig and Admiral Sir George Keith Elphinstone went to occupy the Dutch Cape of Good Hope. Craig repulsed Dutch regulars and militia at Wynberg (14 September), and a Dutch naval force was beaten a year later at Saldanha Bay. Britain held Cape Colony until it was returned to Holland in 1803 (12 June–17 September 1795).

Cape Colony ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Blueberg

Cape Ecnomus ❙ 256 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

See Ecnomus

Cape Engaño ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Wrongly thinking he had repulsed the Japanese in the Sibuyan Sea, Admiral William Halsey raced north against a decoy force under Admiral Jizaburo Ozawa. Next day off Cape Engaño, the northeastern point of Luzon, American forces sank all four Japanese carriers and five other ships, but Halsey's action had left an under-strength force off Samar to defend Leyte Gulf (25 October 1944).

Cape Espartel ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Captain Francisco Moreno was determined to break the Republican blockade of Morocco, and took two cruisers south from El Ferrol to surprise his opponents off Cape Espartel. A vital strategic action cost the Republicans one destroyer sunk and another damaged and the Nationalists won control of the Straits of Gibraltar. The Army of Africa was then able to cross into Spain (29 September 1936).

Cape Esperance ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When Admiral Aritomo Goto sailed for Guadalcanal, he was met by Admiral Norman Scott off Cape Esperance, where a confused night action saw a Japanese cruiser and two destroyers sunk while Scott had a destroyer sunk and two cruisers damaged. While Goto himself was killed, his ships bombarded Henderson Field and landed vitally needed troops and supplies (11–12 October 1942).

Cape Finisterre (1st) ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

British Admirals George Anson and Peter Warren led a brilliant action off northwest Spain, intercepting a French troop convoy near Cape Finisterre, escorted by Admiral Clement de Taffanel Marquis de la Jonquière. Without any loss, Anson captured all nine French warships and seized six merchantmen, yielding 3,000 prisoners. He was created a Peer and Warren was knighted (3 May 1747).

Cape Finisterre (2nd) ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

While escorting a large French convoy, Admiral Henri-Francois des Herbiers de l'Étenduère, with just eight warships, was intercepted off Cape Finisterre, in northwest Spain, by a much larger English fleet under Admiral Edward Hawke. In a courageous defence, l'Étenduère lost six ships and 2,500 prisoners, but his convoy escaped unscathed. Hawke received a knighthood (14 October 1747).

Cape Finisterre ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Sailing from Plymouth with a large fleet to relieve besieged Gibraltar, British Admiral George Rodney encountered a small squadron under Spanish Admiral Don Juan de Yadri escorting a convoy to Cadiz. Rodney captured the entire convoy in a decisive action off Cape Finisterre, in northwest Spain. A week later he met a much larger Spanish force off Cape St Vincent (8 January 1780).

Cape Finisterre ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

The Franco-Spanish fleet of Admiral Pierre Villeneuve was driven back across the Atlantic from the West Indies and was met off Ferrol, near Cape Finisterre, the northwestern tip of Spain, by a British squadron under Admiral Sir Robert Calder. Villeneuve lost two ships captured before escaping to Cadiz. Three months later he was utterly defeated at Trafalgar (22 July 1805).

Cape Girardeau ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

On a second expedition into Missouri after his previous repulse in January at Hartville, Confederate General John S. Marmaduke attacked the important supply depot at Cape Girardeau on the Mississippi, recently reinforced by General John McNeil from Bloomington. After a costly assault and over 300 casualties, Marmaduke withdrew south across the St Francis at Chalk Bluff (26 April 1863).

Cape Gloucester ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Aided by a diversionary landing at Arawe, Marine General William Rupertus landed at Cape Gloucester in western New Britain, fiercely defended by General Iwao Matsuda. The key airfield was quickly taken, though there was costly fighting and a further landing at Talasea (6 March) before the western end of the island was secured to isolate Rabaul (26 December 1943–April 1944).

Cape Henry ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Chesapeake Capes

Cape Kaliakra ❙ 1791 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

A few weeks after the great Russian land victory near the mouths of the Danube at Matchin, Russian Admiral Fedor Fedorovich Ushakov surprised a Turkish fleet under Algerian Admiral Seit-Ali off Cape Kaliakra, north of Varna, on the western shore of the Black Sea. The Turkish ships were driven off and an armistice between Russia and Turkey was agreed the same day (31 July 1791).

Cape Matapan ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Pursuing an Allied convoy, Italian Admiral Angelo Iachino, with a battleship, eight cruisers and destroyers, was surprised at night off Cape Matapan in southern Greece by Admiral John Cunningham, with three battleships, an aircraft carrier and destroyers. Attacking with torpedo aircraft and heavy guns, Cunningham sank three cruisers and two destroyers before the Italians withdrew (29 March 1941).

Cape of Good Hope ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Cape Colony

Cape Ortegal ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Cape Finisterre (2nd)

Cape Palos ❙ 1938 ❙ Spanish Civil War

A rare Republican success at sea saw two cruisers and five destroyers under Admiral González de Ubieta attack three Nationalist cruisers escorting a convoy off Cape Palos, in the Mediterranean, east of Cartagena. The new Nationalist cruiser Balaeres was sunk with over 700 men killed, including Admiral Manuel de Vierna, but the Republicans failed to follow up their victory (6 March 1938).

Cape Passaro ❙ 1718 ❙ War of the Quadruple Alliance

Spain was determined to regain losses from the War of the Spanish Succession and sent forces to reoccupy Sardinia and later Sicily, where English Admiral Sir George Byng met Admiral Antonio Castaneta off Cape Passaro, near Syracuse. Sixteen Spanish warships were taken or sunk in a disastrous defeat, with Castaneta fatally wounded. A year later, Byng blockaded Messina (11 August 1718).

Cape Passaro ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Britain's Mediterranean fleet had escorted a convoy to Malta, when the cruiser Ajax (Captain Desmond McCarthy) was attacked off Cape Passaro, in southeast Sicily, by four Italian destroyers and three torpedo boats. Despite Italian numbers and aggression, Ajax sank two torpedo boats, and a damaged destroyer was sunk next day when the main British fleet arrived (11 October 1940).

Capes ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Chesapeake Capes

Cape Sarych ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

After the attack on Sevastopol by the German-manned Turkish cruisers Goeben (Yavuz) and Breslau (Midilli), Russian Admiral Andrei Ebergard took his obsolescent battle fleet and met the Turkish squadron off Cape Sarych, on the southern tip of the Crimea. Despite inflicting considerable damage, Admiral Wilhelm Souchon on Goeben was hit and broke off the action (18 November 1914).

Cape Spada ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

When two Italian light cruisers (Admiral Ferdinando Casardi) sailed from Tripoli for Leros, they were intercepted off Cape Spada, between Crete and Cerrigotto, by a British destroyer flotilla and the Australian cruiser Sydney. Intense gunfire saw the cruiser Bartolomeo Colleone sunk with 120 killed (including Captain Umberto Novaro) and the other cruiser fled to Benghazi (19 July 1940).

Cape Spartivento ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Two weeks after success at Taranto, Admiral John Cunningham, on convoy escort, led a large fleet (including an aircraft carrier, a battleship and eight cruisers) against the main Italian battle fleet (Admiral Inigo Campioni) off Cape Spartivento in southern Sardinia. Both sides suffered damage before the Italians broke off. Cunningham was criticised for failure to pursue (27 November 1940).

Cape St George ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As Allied forces fought to secure Bougainville, an American destroyer squadron led by Captain Arleigh Burke intercepted Japanese destroyers under Captain Kiyoto Kagawa, off Cape St George, returning from Buka to Rabaul. The last surface action in the Solomons campaign saw three out of five Japanese destroyers sunk without American loss (25 November 1943).

Cape St Mathieu ❙ 1293 ❙ Anglo-French Wars

When a quarrel between crews of English and Norman ships in Brittany escalated into large-scale battle, Gascon forces supported the English and helped defeat 200 Norman and French ships off Cape St Mathieu near Brest. Philip IV of France then instigated full-scale war against Edward I of England, who invaded Gascony but was repulsed in 1297 at Furnes (15 May 1293).

Cape St Vincent ❙ 1606 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Dutch Admiral Willem Hultain was attempting to intercept the homeward bound Spanish silver fleet when he found himself heavily outnumbered in a clash off Cape St Vincent, the southwestern tip of Portugal. The Dutch were defeated and fled before the larger Spanish fleet, except for Vice Admiral Reinier Klaazoon, who fought to the last, then blew up his ship, along with his crew and himself.

Cape St Vincent ❙ 1693 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

See Lagos Bay

Cape St Vincent ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When he sailed from Plymouth with a large fleet to relieve besieged Gibraltar, British Admiral George Rodney met a much smaller Spanish force under Admiral Don Juan de Langara off Cape St Vincent, the southwestern point of Portugal. Rodney sank one Spanish ship and captured six others in a hard-fought night action before continuing on to Gibraltar (16 January 1780).

Cape St Vincent ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Intercepting Admiral José de Cordova sailing from the Mediterranean to Brest, outnumbered British Admiral Sir John Jervis attacked the Spanish fleet off southern Portugal near Cape St Vincent. Cordova was routed in a brilliant one-sided victory—which marked out Commodore Horatio Nelson. The Spanish fleet ceased to be a threat, and Jervis was created Earl St Vincent (14 February 1797).

Cape St Vincent ❙ 1833 ❙ Miguelite Wars

In support of Maria da Gloria, legitimate heir to the throne of Portugal, England sent a fleet under Captain (later Admiral Sir) Charles Napier to assist the Regent Don Pedro against his brother, the usurper Miguel. Napier routed Miguel's fleet off Cape St Vincent, in southwestern Portugal and, three weeks later, the constitutional army seized Lisbon for the young Queen (5 July 1833).

Cape Styrsudden ❙ 1790 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

See Kronstadt Bay

Cape Teulada ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

See Cape Spartivento

Capetown ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Cape Colony

Capetown ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Blueberg

Cape Trafalgar ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

See Trafalgar

Cap Francais ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (Caribbean)

A British naval squadron under Captain Arthur Forrest attempting to intercept a French convoy off northern Santo Domingo was attacked by Admiral Guy-Francois de Kersaint near Cap Francais (modern Cap Haitien). Both sides suffered heavy damage in a severe action and, when Forrest withdrew to Jamaica for repairs, the French convoy sailed safely for France (21 October 1757).

Cap Francais ❙ 1803 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Santo Domingo Rising)

See Vertieres

Capharsalma ❙ 161 BC ❙ Maccabean War

The Seleucid General Nicanor, who had been defeated at Emmaus five years earlier, was sent to renew the campaign against the Hebrew Judas Maccabeus, and pursued the rebels into hills north of Jerusalem. Nicanor stumbled into an ambush at Capharsalma (modern Kfar Shalem) and was driven back to Jerusalem with heavy losses. He soon fought again and was killed at Adasa.

Caporetto ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

With Austrian resistance failing on the Isonzo, Germany sent reinforcements and General Otto von Below attacked in the north through Caporetto. Massive bombardment helped an Austro-German breakthrough, and Italian General Luigi Cadorna retreated to the Piave with shocking losses. He was dismissed and a year later Italy struck back at Vittorio Veneto (24 October–7 November 1917).

Cappel ❙ 1531 ❙ Swiss Religious Wars

See Kappel

Capua ❙ 212 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Having defeated Carthaginian General Hanno at Beneventum (212 BC), Roman Consuls Quintus Fulvius Flaccus and Appius Claudius moved west to besiege Capua, where Hanno's brother Hannibal arrived to defend the town. After fierce fighting, fresh Roman cavalry reinforcements forced Hannibal to withdraw. Later that year he defeated a Roman blocking force at the Silarus.

Capua ❙ 211 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Carthaginian General Hannibal launched a renewed attempt to relieve the Roman siege of Capua, approaching from Mt Tifata, while the garrison under Hanno attempted a massive sortie. Appius Claudius held the Capuans and Quintus Fulvius Flaccus turned on Hannibal, inflicting a decisive defeat. Hannibal then led a diversionary advance on Rome, but Capua was starved into surrender.

Capua ❙ 554 ❙ Gothic War in Italy

See Casilinum

Carabobo ❙ 1814 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

When Patriot leader Simón Bolívar withdrew west from San Mateo in northern Venezuela to Valencia, he gathered reinforcements under Colonel José Félix Ribas, then met approaching Royalists led by General Juan Manuel Cagigal outside Valencia on the Plain of Carabobo. Cagigal was defeated and fled south towards El Pao, but Bolívar was crushed two weeks later at La Puerta (28 May 1814).

Carabobo ❙ 1821 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

Having liberated Colombia in 1819 after Boyacá, Patriot Simón Bolívar returned to Venezuela and joined José Antonio Páez advancing on Caracas. On the Plain of Carabobo, east of Valencia, he was blocked by Royalist Generals Miguel de La Torre and Tomás Morales, who were routed and fled to Puerto Cabello. Bolívar then entered Caracas to assure Venezuelan independence (24 June 1821).

Caracas ❙ 1813 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

See Taguanes

Caracas ❙ 1821 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

While Patriot leader Simón Bolívar advanced through western Venezuela against Spanish commander Miguel de La Torre, other rebels under General José Bermúdez attacked from the east and seized Caracas. De La Torre had to send a large force under General Tomás Morales, who retook the city. However, the diversion contributed to the Royalist defeat at Carabobo (14 and 24 May 1821).

Caraguatay ❙ 1869 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

See Piribebuy

Carandayty ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War

See Yrendagüe

Caravaggio ❙ 1448 ❙ Milanese War of Succession

Amid confusion after the death of Filippo Visconti Duke of Milan, his son-in-law Francesco Sforza met a Venetian offensive east of Milan at Caravaggio. Supported by Roberto Sanseverino, and Jacopo and Francesco Piccinino (sons of the famous Niccolo), Sforza won a decisive victory, which consolidated his position. He succeeded as Duke in 1450 after besieging Milan (15 September 1448).

Carberry Hill ❙ 1567 ❙ Uprising against Mary Queen of Scots

Led by Alexander Lord Home, Scottish nobles who objected to Mary Queen of Scots' marriage to James Hepburn Earl of Bothwell defeated and took her prisoner at Carberry Hill, near Musselburgh, east of Edinburgh. The Queen was forced to dismiss Bothwell, and abdicated in favour of her infant son James VI. Her attempt to regain the throne was defeated the following year at Langside (15 June 1567).

Carbiesdale ❙ 1650 ❙ British Civil Wars

Following the execution of Charles I, James Graham Marquis of Montrose returned from the Continent with Scottish and mercenary forces to support Charles II, and was opposed by Presbyterian extremist Remonstrants under Colonel Archibald Strachan. Montrose was heavily defeated in northern Scotland at Carbiesdale and fled abroad. On his return he was betrayed and executed (27 April 1650).

Carcassonne ❙ 589 ❙ Frankish Imperial Wars

In a decisive success over the Franks, Recared I, Gothic King of Spain, defeated an invasion of southern Gaul by Guntram, Frankish King of Burgundy. The massive victory at Carcassonne, just north of the Pyrenees, secured Recared's northern border for most of his reign, which was noted for his historic declaration of Catholicism as the Spanish religion of state.

Carcassonne ❙ 1209 ❙ Albigensian Crusade

Soon after the massacre of Albigensian heretics at Beziers in southern France, Anglo-Norman knight Simon de Montfort besieged nearby Carcassonne, where he offered safe conduct to Raymond Roger Viscount of Beziers and Caracassonne, and his supporters. However, he promptly seized them and the Viscount died in prison. De Montfort was granted Beziers and Carcassonne (1–15 August 1209).

Carchemish ❙ 605 BC ❙ Babylon's Wars of Conquest

Driven out of Harran in 610 BC, the remnants of the Assyrian army joined with Necho II of Egypt on the Euphrates at Carchemish, where they were attacked by Prince Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon, son of Nabopolassar. In a decisive action, the Babylonians won a brilliant victory, driving Egypt out of Syria and Palestine. The battle also represented the last death throes of the once-great Assyrian empire.

Cardedeu ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

General Laurent Gouvion Saint-Cyr advancing to relieve the siege of French-held Barcelona broke through at Rosas, then two weeks later smashed into a Spanish force under Generals Francois Vives and Teodoro Reding at Cardedeu, north of Barcelona. Driving off the Spanish, St-Cyr reached Barcelona next day and relieved the garrison of General Philibert Duhesme (16 December 1808).

Carenage Bay ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See St Lucia

Carham ❙ 1018 ❙ Danish Conquest of England

Eight years after defeating the Danes at Mortlack, Malcolm II of Scotland, supported by Owen of Strathclyde, advanced into Northumbria and heavily defeated Eadulf Cudel, the Danish Earl of Bernicia, on the River Tweed at Carham. The Lothian lowlands below the Firth of Forth became part of Scotland and King Knut recognised the Tweed as England's new northern border.

Carhampton ❙ 835 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

Vikings who landed in Bridgwater Bay, West Somerset, immediately faced a force under King Egbert of Wessex just inland near Watchet. In battle at Carhampton, Egbert's West Saxons were driven off with heavy losses. The King was more successful in 837 against a subsequent large-scale Danish invasion of Cornwall at Hingston Down.

Carhampton ❙ 843 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

After Egbert of Wessex was defeated by a Viking force at Carhampton (835), he won a great victory at Hingston Down in 837. A few years later his son King Aethelwulf met a fresh Viking landing in West Somerset, near Watchet, in the so-called Second Battle of Carhampton. Aethelwulf was heavily defeated and the Vikings continued to raid along the southwest coast of England.

Carigat ❙ 1791 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War
See Arikera

Carillo ❙ 1813 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

Spanish Royalist Captain Bartolomé Lizón campaigning in northern Colombia attacked and bloodily defeated Republican commander Francisco de Paula Santander in the Cúcuta Valley at Carillo. Lizón then seized and butchered San José, and new Scots-born Republican commander Colonel Gregor MacGregor was unable to prevent Spanish capture of Pamplona (October 1813).

Carisbrook ❙ 530 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Having established the Kingdom of Wessex in southern England, the great Saxon warrior Cerdic and his son Cynric invaded the offshore Isle of Wight, where they defeated the local Britons at a fortress on the site of modern Carisbrook. The island was then settled by Jute invaders, possibly Cerdic's nephews Stuf and Wihtgar.

Carlisle ❙ 1745 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

Charles Stuart—Bonnie Prince Charlie—invaded England and laid siege to Carlisle, where Colonel Durand surrendered after five days. Following his failed invasion, Charles withdrew north, pursued by Duke William of Cumberland, and left 400 men under John Hamilton to hold Carlisle. They surrendered after a bold defence and many were executed (9–15 September & 21–30 December 1745).

Carlos Antonio López ❙ 1932 ❙ Chaco War

As Paraguay and Bolivia advanced into the disputed Chaco Boreal, Bolivian Major Oscar Moscoso attacked the fortress of Carlos Antonio López on east shore of Lake Pitiantuta, killing a five-man Paraguayan unit led by Corporal Liborio Talavera. It was quickly retaken by Paraguay, but Bolivia soon captured fortresses on the Pilcomayo at Corrales, Toledo and Boquerón (15 June 1932).

Carlow ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

At the start of the rebellion in Ireland, an estimated 1,200 insurgents under a cobbler named Michael Heydon attacked Colonel Stephen Mahon of the 9th dragoons and a force of about 500 on the River Barrow at Carlow. The rebels suffered very heavy losses, quickly followed by another costly repulse 15 miles further east at the small town of Hacketstown (25 May 1798).

Carmen, Cañada el ❙ 1934 ❙ Chaco War
See Cañada el Carmen

Carmen Alto ❙ 1844 ❙ Peruvian Civil Wars

During disorder in Peru following the death of President Agustín Gamarra at Ingavi, Manuel Ignacio de Vivanco seized the country as Dictator and overthrew the constitution. However, Constitutionalists under Ramón Castilla captured Lima, then defeated Vivanco's army near Arequipa at Carmen Alto. The Dictator fled into exile and Castilla secured the Presidency (17 July 1844).

Carnifex Ferry ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate General John Floyd took the initiative in West Virginia at Cross Lanes, then withdrew to Carnifex Ferry, on the Gauley near Summerville, where he was later attacked by heavily reinforced Union troops under General William S. Rosecrans and Major Henry W. Benham. After several hours of fighting, the outnumbered Confederates withdrew south at night (10 September 1861).

Carpathian Passes ❙ 1241 ❙ Mongol Invasion of Europe

With his northern forces advancing through Poland towards Liegnitz, the Mongol Batu (grandson of Genghis Khan) and General Subetai marched west from Kiev to force the Carpathian Passes towards the Danube. Between Uzhgorod and Mukacehvo, a large Hungarian army sent to stop them suffered a massive defeat, and Batu continued west to decisive battle at the Sajo (12 March 1241).

Carpathians ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

While Germany attacked Russia at the Masurian Lakes, further south, Austrian Generals Karl von Pflanzer-Baltin and Alexander von Linsingen advanced through the Carpathians into Bukowina against General Platon Lechitsky. Czernowitz fell, but a Russian counterattack seized Przemysl and halted the advance until the spring offensive at Gorlice-Tarnow (23 January–10 April 1915).

Carpi ❙ 1701 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Commanding French forces in Lombardy, the elderly Marshal Nicolas Catinat faced an offensive by Austria's Prince Eugène of Savoy, who crossed the Alps then advanced to Carpi, on the Adige near Legnago. Catinat was completely outmanoeuvered and defeated. He withdrew behind the Minco, then the Oglio, and was replaced by Francois de Neufville Marshal Villeroi (9 July 1701).

Carpinteria ❙ 1836 ❙ Uruguayan Civil War

Former Uruguayan President Fructuoso Rivera led a rising against his successor Manuel Oribe and met a large government force under Oribe's brother Ignacio and Juan Antonio Lavalleja at Arroyo de la Carpinteria, north of Durazno. Rivera was badly beaten but escaped to rebuild his forces. He defeated Oribe two years later at Palmar to regain the Presidency (19 September 1836).

Carpio de Azaba ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As French forces advanced to relieve the Anglo-Portuguese blockade of Ciudad Rodrigo, troops under General Thomas Graham met General Pierre Watier southwest near the Azaba at Carpio. Although Watier took the town and crossed the river, he was driven back after a feeble action. Meanwhile, a fierce battle was being fought only ten miles away at El Bodon (25 September 1811).

Carrhae ❙ 610 BC ❙ Babylon's Wars of Conquest

See Harran

Carrhae ❙ 53 BC ❙ Roman-Parthian Wars

Roman Consul Marcus Licinius Crassus, trying to match his rivals Pompey and Caesar, rashly crossed the Euphrates to attack Parthia. At Carrhae (modern Harran), he was attacked by Parthian General Surenas and his Legions were caught in the open desert after his cavalry were destroyed. The Romans were annihilated in one of their worst defeats and Crassus himself was killed after surrendering.

Carrhae ❙ 297 ❙ Roman-Persian Wars

See Callinicum

Carrhae ❙ 1104 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Harran

Carrick ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

See Clonmel

Carrickfergus ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

In a futile invasion of Ireland, French privateer Francois Thurot landed at Carrickfergus, northeast of Belfast, after a storm dispersed half his fleet. The town surrendered following a brief siege, but Thurot had insufficient forces and reembarked. When two of his three remaining ships became separated in another storm, Thurot was attacked and killed by a British squadron (10–20 January 1760).

Carrickfergus ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution

The day after raiding Whitehaven in England, American John Paul Jones in the sloop Ranger sailed to Ireland, where he met the sloop Drake off Carrickfergus, near Belfast. Drake was captured after a fierce action in which British Captain Gordon Burdon was killed. While not the first British prize taken, it was reputedly the first major ship-to-ship action between the two navies (24 April 1778).

Carrick's Ford ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Rich Mountain

Carrignagat ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)
See Collooney

Carrion ❙ 1037 ❙ Spanish Territorial Wars
See Tamaron

Carrion ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
See Villa Muriel

Carrizal ❙ 1916 ❙ United States' Expedition against Villa

Following the raid on Columbus, New Mexico, in March by Francisco (Pancho) Villa, General John Pershing invaded northern Mexico. He failed to locate the rebel but, at Carrizal, Captain Charles Boyd met Federal troops under General Felix Gómez. After heavy Mexican losses, and the opposing leaders both killed, the American patrol had to retreat and the expedition later withdrew (21 June 1916).

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1586 ❙ Drake's Caribbean Raid

A large-scale raid against Spain in the Caribbean saw an English fleet of about 30 ships under Sir Francis Drake sack Santo Domingo in January, then attack the rich city of Cartagena, in modern Colombia. After Drake seized the port in sharp fighting, the residents paid a massive ransom (said to be 100,000 ducats or ten million pesos) and he sailed north against St Augustine (9 February 1586).

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1697 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

Near the end of the war, French Admiral Jean-Bernard Desjeans Baron de Pointis left Brest for Santo Domingo and took a mixed fleet against Spanish Cartagena. The city, in modern Colombia, was taken by storm after a brief siege and De Pointis seized a massive treasure. However, when sickness struck his men, he destroyed Cartagena's fortifications and withdrew (12 April–2 May 1697).

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1702 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession
See Santa Marta

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1708 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

British Commodore Charles Wager, commanding just three ships, attacked 17 heavily armed Spanish treasure ships off Cartagena, Colombia. While the Spanish flagship blew up with 700 men lost, Wager's ship was badly damaged and his other two captains gave only half-hearted pursuit. They were later tried and dismissed, while Wager was knighted for his exploit (28 May 1708).

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1741 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

After seizing Porto Bello (November 1739), English Admiral Edward Vernon led an expedition against Cartagena, fiercely defended by General Blas de Lezo and Governor Sebatián de Eslava. Despite a large fleet and over 8,000 troops under General Thomas Wentworth, the English attack foundered in swamps and was driven off. Vernon withdrew and later attacked Santiago (3 March–17 April 1741).

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1815 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

In support of revolution in Colombia, Simón Bolívar secured Bogotá, then besieged dissident Cartagena, held by General Manuel de Castillo. When a large Spanish army under General Pablo Morillo landed at nearby Santa Marta, Bolívar was driven off and he fled to Jamaica (26 March–10 May 1815). Morillo captured Cartagena after a long siege (6 December 1815) and later retook Bogotá.

Cartagena, Colombia ❙ 1820–1821 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

Although Colombian independence was assured by the decisive action at Boyacá in August 1819, Spanish Brigadier Gabriel de Torres held out at Cartagena against Colonel Mariano Montilla, supported at sea by commander José Padilla. Torres accepted generous terms after more than a year and South America's greatest fort surrendered to the cause of liberation (10 July 1820–10 October 1821).

Cartagena, Spain ❙ 209 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See New Carthage

Cartagena, Spain ❙ 460 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

When the Western Emperor Majorian assembled 300 ships in Spain to attack the Vandals of North Africa, Gaiseric led a brilliant pre-emptive attack on the Romans at Cartagena. The Vandals surprised and captured or sank virtually the entire fleet, dealing Majorian's prestige such a blow that he was soon overthrown. It was eight years before a new expedition was sent against Carthage (May 460).

Cartagena, Spain ❙ 1706 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Admiral Sir John Leake led an Anglo-Dutch fleet to Cartagena, where he landed marines under Major Richard Hedges, who forced the city's surrender before General Daniel O'Mahony could bring aid. Leake then captured Alicante (29 July), but Cartagena was soon besieged and recaptured by Franco-Spanish commander Marshal James Duke of Berwick (4–13 June & 11–17 November 1706).

Cartago ❙ 1842 ❙ Central American National Wars

In a last attempt to restore the Central American Federation, exiled Francisco Morazán of Salvador entered Costa Rica and, aided by defecting army commander Vicente Villaseñor, overthrew Dictator Braulio Carrillo. Morazán soon faced rebellion by Antonio Pinto Suárez, who ousted him after heavy fighting at Cartago. Morazán and Villaseñor were both executed (12 September 1842).

Cartago ❙ 1948 ❙ Costa Rican Civil War

See Ochomogo

Carthage, Missouri ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Secessionist Governor Claiborne Price lost at Boonville, Missouri, in June, and withdrew southwest, then turned on a pursuing Union force under Colonel Franz Sigel at Carthage, west of Springfield. Outnumbered three to one, Sigel fought a brief action, then withdrew southeast through Sarcoxie. A decisive Confederate victory followed further east at Wilson's Creek (5 July 1861).

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 310–307 BC ❙ Agathoclean War

Besieged by Carthaginian forces in Sicily at Syracuse, the Tyrant Agathocles led a counter-invasion against Carthage itself, where he defeated and killed Hanno. When he returned to Sicily, his son Achagethus was driven off from Carthage by Himilco and was later killed by mutinous troops. Agathocles went back with a large mercenary force, but he was also defeated and soon made peace.

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 255 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

See Tunis

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 148–146 BC ❙ 3rd Punic War

In the last terrible act of the wars between Rome and Carthage, Publius Scipio Aemilianus besieged Carthage, which held out for two years under the leadership of Hasdrubal against starvation and disease. After the final successful assault and a six-day rampage of destruction, the surviving population was sold into slavery and the city was razed to the ground.

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 238 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

When Maximinus in Germany was proclaimed Emperor by his soldiers, Legions in Africa proclaimed the octogenerian Gordian I as a rival. But at Carthage, his son and co-Emperor Gordian II was defeated and killed by veterans loyal to Maximinus under Cappellianus, Governor of Numidia. Gordian I committed suicide, while Maximinus was killed by his own troops at Aquileia two years later.

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 439 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

The Vandal Gaiseric and his followers invaded North Africa and seized Hippo Regius in 431, gradually establishing an independent kingdom at uncertain peace with Rome. But within a few years, Gaiseric surprised and captured the key city of Carthage and put it to the sack. Carthage remained capital for the Vandals until their defeat a hundred years later at Tricameron (19 October 439).

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 468 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

See Cape Bon

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 533 ❙ Vandal War in Africa

See Ad Decimum

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 697–698 ❙ Muslim Conquest of North Africa

During continuing Muslim civil war, Byzantine troops recovered coastal Tripoli before the Arab General Hassan ibn Noman invaded with a large army and stormed and sacked Carthage. In 697 a powerful Byzantine fleet then drove the Arabs out, but the following year massive reinforcements again enabled them to recapture the city, virtually ending the Byzantine presence in North Africa.

Carthage, Tunisia ❙ 1270 ❙ 8th Crusade

Two years after the fall of Antioch, Syria, King Louis IX of France launched his second Crusade, attempting to capture Carthage as a base in North Africa. After seizing the harbour, his army had to besiege the walled city in extremely hot and pestilential conditions. When the King died of fever, his brother Charles negotiated a cash indemnity to abandon the siege and go home (July–August 1270).

Casa-al-Secco ❙ 1427 ❙ Venetian-Milanese Wars

Filippo Maria Visconti Duke of Milan defended the city of Cremona, against attack by a large Venetian-Florentine army under Francesco Bussone Count Carmagnola. A day-long battle at the nearby pass of Casa-al-Secco saw the Milanese led by Agnolo della Pergola cut down by Allied crossbowmen. Despite heavy losses on both sides, it was a bloody victory for Carmagnola (July 1427).

Casablanca ❙ 1907 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Responding to the murder of some Europeans working on the new harbour at Casablanca, French forces bombarded, then seized, the city (4 August). However, Casablanca was soon besieged by Moroccan Chief Madoni el Glaoui until he was driven off at nearby Taddert. Morocco was eventually declared a French Protectorate in 1912 after the second siege of Fez (18 August–12 September 1907).

Casablanca ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

As part of the Torch operations in French Northwest Africa, 34,000 Americans under General George Patton landed in Morocco near Casablanca. There was resistance ashore under Vichy General Charles Nogùes, and Admiral Gervais de Lafond suffered costly losses in ships and men. Threatened with assault on Casablanca itself, Admiral Francois Darlan surrendered (8–10 November 1942).

Casa de Salinas ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

British General Sir Arthur Wellesley was advancing east along the Tagus towards Talavera, southwest of Madrid, when Marshal Claude

Victor sent Generals Pierre Lapisse and Francois Ruffin across the shallow Alberche, where they surprised and nearly captured Wellesley at Casa de Salinas. In a costly action, Wellesley finally checked the French then won at Talavera de la Reina next day (27 July 1809).

Casale ❙ 1628–1629 ❙ Thirty Years War (Mantuan War)

During a disputed succession in Mantua and Montferrat, Gonzalo Fernández de Cordoba, Spanish Governor of Milan, laid siege to Casale, east of Turin, held for the French-born heir Charles di Gonzaga Duke of Nevers. When Louis XIII crossed the Alps and defeated a Savoyard army at Susa, Cordoba raised the siege, but it was resumed a few months later (1628–March 1629).

Casale ❙ 1629–1630 ❙ Thirty Years War (Mantuan War)

In the breakdown of negotations over the succession of Mantua and Montferrat, Spain sent the veteran Ambrogio de Spinola to renew the siege of Casale, east of Turin. The city fell, but the citadel held out. Spinola died during negotiations and, in the peace which followed, the French-born heir Charles di Gonzaga Duke of Nevers received his inheritance (September 1629–October 1630).

Casale ❙ 1640 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

After victory in northern Italy at Chieri (November 1639), French commander Henri Comte d'Harcourt and Henri de Turenne made a second advance on Casale, on the Po, 40 miles east of Turin. Despite having twice as many troops, Spanish General Diego Felipe de Guzmán Marquis of Leganés suffered a decisive defeat and the French advanced on Turin (29 April 1640).

Casalechio ❙ 1511 ❙ War of the Holy League

Following breakup of the League of Cambrai, Pope Julius II formed a new alliance with Venice against France in northern Italy. At Casalechio, Papal commander Francesco Maria della Rovere Duke of Urbino was routed by the French under Gian Giacomo Trivulzio of Milan, who then captured nearby Bologna. The Pope retired to Ravenna, where he was defeated 12 months later (21 May 1511).

Casal Novo ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Cazal Novo

Casas Grandes ❙ 1911 ❙ Mexican Revolution

At the start of Mexico's Revolution, Francisco Madero crossed from Texas and, after initial success, led an ambitious dawn attack on Casas Grandes, in Chihuahua. In the first pitched battle of the Revolution, his 600 ill-armed men were decisively defeated when Federal cavalry reinforcements drove them from the field. Madero soon regained the initiative at Ciudad Juárez (6 March 1911).

Casco Bay ❙ 1690 ❙ King William's War

See Fort Loyal

Caseros ❙ 1852 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

Opposing the costly intervention in Uruguay by Argentine Dictator Juan Manuel de Rosas, rebel General Justo José de Urquiza raised the siege of Montevideo, then met Rosas at Monte Caseros, west of Buenos Aires. Supported by Brazilians and Uruguayans, Urquiza secured a decisive victory. The Dictator then fled into exile and Urquiza became President (3 February 1852).

Casilinum ❙ 214 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Soon after Hannibal withdrew to Apulia from his third failed attempt on Nola, Marcus Claudius Marcellus and Fabius Cunctator attacked Casilinum, just west of Capua, held by Carthaginians and Capuans under Status Metius. Following a heavy assault, the garrison surrendered to Fabius in return for free passage to Capua. Marcellus, claiming ignorance, attacked and destroyed the withdrawing column.

Casilinum ❙ 554 ❙ Gothic War in Italy

The Romano-Byzantine General Narses was campaigning in Italy against the Goths when a Frankish army under the brothers Buccelin and Lothair invaded from Germany. Part of the army under Buccelin met Narses on the Volturno River at Casilinum, just west of Capua, and was destroyed. Buccelin was killed, and the Frankish offensive into Italy was virtually over.

Caspe ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

Campaigning on the Ebro in Aragon for the Spanish Republican government, Colonel Eulogio Despujol surprised a Carlist force under Manuel Marco de Bello at Caspe, northeast of Alcañiz. The Carlists were routed in a brilliant action, losing 200 prisoners and 80 horses. Despujol was promoted to Brigadier and became Conde de Caspe (23 February 1874).

Cassano ❙ 1158 ❙ Frederick's 2nd Expedition to Italy

German Emperor Frederick Barbarossa crossed the Alps into northern Italy, where he marched against the Milanese, who had campaigned against his feudatory lord, Otto von Wittelsbach (later Duke Otto I of Bavaria). The Emperor defeated the Italians on the Adda River at Cassano, then marched west in August to besiege Milan.

Cassano ❙ 1259 ❙ Guelf-Ghibelline Wars

With the death of Frederick II, the Imperial cause in northern Italy was sustained by the cruel Ghibelline despot Ezelino III da Romana. Pro-Papal Guelfs gradually recovered territory and at Cassano, east of Milan, Ezelino was defeated and died of wounds a prisoner. The Guelfs butchered many Ghibelline leaders but were defeated the following year at Montaperti (27 September 1259).

Cassano ❙ 1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Returning to Italy to meet a new French offensive, Prince Eugène of Savoy joined Victor Amadeus II of Savoy (now an Imperial ally) attacking the French at Cassano, on the Adda, east of Milan. French commander Philippe de Vendôme failed until reinforced by his brother Louis Duke de Vendôme. Eugène withdrew, returning next year for his great victory at Turin (16 August 1705).

Cassano ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Three weeks after their victory at Magnano, the Austrians of General Paul Kray were joined by Russians under General Alexander Suvorov and attacked the demoralised French on the Adda at Cassano, east of Milan. Despite the inspired leadership of newly appointed commander Jean Victor Moreau, the French were again defeated and the Allies seized Milan (27 April 1799).

Cassel ❙ 1071 ❙ Franco-Frisian War

When he became King of France, Philip I took an army to protect Flanders on behalf of his aunt Adela—sister of Henry I of England and widow of his former Regent, Baldwin V—against attack by Count Robert of Frisia. Philip was heavily defeated at Cassel, inland from Dunkirk, and Count Robert continued his struggle against the King for five years before eventually swearing allegiance.

Cassel ❙ 1328 ❙ Franco-Flemish Wars

Soon after being crowned, Philip VI of France determined on a fresh expedition to secure control of Flanders. At Cassel, east of Saint-Omer, Flemish leader Nicolas Zannequin led a doomed force of infantry and pikemen, who were ridden down and destroyed by French cavalry. Philip, first of the House of Valois, then sacked Bruges and seized most of Flanders (23 August 1328).

Cassel ❙ 1677 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

Louis XIV of France launched a fresh offensive in the Netherlands to capture Valenciennes, then besieged St Omer, with the support of Marshal Sebastien Vauban and Duke Francois Henri of Luxembourg. A relief army under William of Orange was defeated at nearby Cassel by Luxembourg and the King's brother, Duke Philippe d'Orleans. St Omer soon surrendered (11 April 1677).

Cassel ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

As Napoleon Bonaparte returned west of the Elbe, former French Marshal Jean Baptiste Bernadotte sent a Cossack force under Prince Alexander Tchernitcheff against Cassel, the capital of Jerome Bonaparte's Kingdom of Westphalia. Jerome quickly fled and the Russians inflicted a heavy defeat, capturing nine French guns and declaring Jerome's kingdom at an end (28 September 1813).

Cassina Grossa ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

See Alessandria

Cassino ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

See Monte Cassino

Cassiope ❙ 1084 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

See Corfu

Cassville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Adairsville

Castagnaro ❙ 1387 ❙ Padua-Verona War

Attacking Verona, Francesco de Carrara of Padua sent a large mercenary army under Englishman Sir John Hawkwood (Giovanni Acuto), who met Giovanni dei Ordelaffi at Castagnaro. Despite inferiority in men and guns, Hawkwood secured a brilliant tactical victory, taking almost 5,000 prisoners (including Ordelaffi) and most of the Veronese artillery (11 March 1387).

Castalla ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In an unwise advance from Alicante, Spanish General José O'Donnell (brother of Henry) marched north towards Castalla to try and surprise General Jean-Isidore Harispe. However, the outnumbered French routed the Murcian army, with about 3,000 Spanish lost for 200 French casualties. O'Donnell's survivors fled back to Alicante (21 July 1812).

Castalla ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Leading a new offensive in Valencia, French Marshal Louis Suchet beat Allied forces at Yecla and Biar before meeting a mixed army under the incompetent leadership of General Sir John Murray in hills west of Castalla. Despite a poorly managed battle, Murray's subordinates won a remarkable victory and Suchet withdrew. Murray did not pursue and remained on the defensive (13 April 1813).

Casteel Zeelandia ❙ 1661–1662 ❙ Chinese Conquest of Taiwan

See Fort Zeelandia

Casteggio ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

See Montebello

Castelfidardo ❙ 1860 ❙ 2nd Italian War of Independence

With the Kingdom of Naples under attack by Giuseppe Garibaldi, Count Camillo Cavour of Piedmont sent General Enrico Cialdini into the Papal states against Pope Pius IX's army. French General Léon Louis Lamoricière was decisively defeated at Castelfidardo and fell back on nearby Ancona, while Cialdini marched south to join Garibaldi at the Volturno (18 September 1860).

Castellazzo ❙ 1391 ❙ Florentine-Milanese Wars

When Gian Galeazzo Visconti of Milan sent Jacopo Dal Verme against Florence and Bologna, he was met at Castellazzo, near Alessandria, by English mercenary Sir John Hawkwood and Jean III Count of Armagnac, who crossed the alps to aid his allies. The massive French army was routed, with Armagnac killed, and the Visconti family effectively secured most of northern Italy (25 July 1391).

Castellfullit de la Roca ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

General Ramón Nouvilas was appointed to command the Spanish Republican army in the north and attempted to relieve the Carlist siege of Olot in Gerona. However, at Castellfullit de la Roca, in one of the government's worst defeats, Nouvilas was routed by Carlist General Francisco Savalls. He was captured along with about 2,000 of his men, and Olot capitulated two days later (14 March 1874).

Castellón de la Plana ❙ 1938 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Expanding the offensive on the Ebro, which began at Belchite, the Nationalist army of General Fidel Dávila seized the coastal city of Vinaroz in April, then resumed the offensive south towards the key city of Castellón de la Plana. Heavy fighting saw Castellón fall to General Antonio Aranda's corps, and the Nationalists then continued south along the coast towards Valencia (14 June 1938).

Castelnaudary ❙ 1632 ❙ French Civil War

Rebelling against Louis XIII and his Minister Cardinal Richelieu, the King's brother Duke Gaston of Orleans was supported by the great Henry Duke of Montmorency and nobles of the Languedoc. The rebel army was crushed at Castelnaudary, south of Toulouse, by Marshal Henry of Schomberg. Montmorency was executed and Gaston fled into exile (1 September 1632).

Castelnuovo, Albania ❙ 1538–1539 ❙ Later Venetian-Turkish War

Venetian Admiral Andrea Doria recovered from failure at Preveza in September 1538 and, with Ferrante Gonzaga, captured the Albanian fortress of Castelnuovo (24 October). The following summer Turkish Admiral Khair-ed-Din Barbarossa led a costly siege which eventually recovered the port (modern Herceg Novi), and a truce soon ended the war with Venice (13 July–10 August 1539).

Castelnuovo, Albania ❙ 1687 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

Campaigning against the Turkish Corsairs of Dalmatia, Venetian Captain-General at Sea, Girolamo Cornaro, in alliance with Montenegrans under Vuceta Bogdanovic, won a great victory over the Turks near Castelnuovo (modern Herceg Novi). The fortress became part of Venetian Albania and Cornaro went on to besiege Monemvasia (30 September 1687).

Castelnuovo, Albania ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

On a fresh offensive in Dalmatia, French forces under General Auguste Marmont advanced from Dubrovnik towards Castlenuovo (modern Herceg Novi) against a large force of Russians and Montenegrans. Marmont secured a decisive victory in a night-time attack outside Castlenuovo, completed next day when he destroyed a Montenegran counter-attack (29–30 September 1806).

Castelnuovo, Italy ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Responding to the French check at Caldiero, Austrian General Paul Davidovich advanced down the Adige Valley towards Verona. North of Castelnuovo, he faced a large force under General Barthélemy Joubert, while General Pierre Augereau had advanced upriver to cut him off at Peri. After heavy losses in men and supplies, Davidovich broke through to withdraw north (21 November 1796).

Castelo Branco ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Franco-Spanish commander James Fitz-James Duke of Berwick advanced into Portugal and fell on a Dutch-Portuguese force under Baron Nicolas Fagel near the frontier fortress of Castelo Branco. Fagel's outnumbered troops were heavily defeated, with most killed or captured. He managed to escape southwest towards Abrantes, while Berwick marched south to capture Portalegre (May 1704).

Castiglione ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Marching to relieve the French siege of Mantua, Austrian commander Dagobert Wurmser unwisely divided his fresh army down both sides of Lake Garda. Two days after defeating an Austrian force at Lonato, Napoleon Bonaparte routed Wurmser near Castiglione delle Stiviere, north of Medole. Wurmser withdrew and Bonaparte renewed the siege of Mantua (5 August 1796).

Castillejos, Morocco ❙ 1860 ❙ Spanish-Moroccan War

When Moroccan forces raided Spanish possessions in North Africa, a large invasion force landed and, in the first major action of the war, General Juan Prim y Prats met the Moors at Castillejos (Fnideq), just south of Ceuta. The Moors were defeated in very heavy fighting, permitting a Spanish advance south towards victory at Tetuán. Prim was created Marques de Castillejos (1 January 1860).

Castillejos, Spain ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

During the siege of Olivenza, in central Spain, south of Badajoz, Spanish General Francisco Ballesteros advanced south towards Niebla, but was pursued by General Honoré Gazan and turned to fight at Villaneuva de los Castillejos. Ballesteros was heavily defeated, losing 1,500 prisoners as well as numerous casualties, and was driven over the Guadiana into Portugal (24 January 1811).

Castillon ❙ 1453 ❙ Hundred Years War

England lost Normandy at Formigny in 1450, and John Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury landed with a fresh army at Bordeaux (23 October 1452). Ill-advisedly marching east to relieve Castillon, besieged by French General Jean Bureau, the 80-year-old Earl was defeated and killed. The fortress surrendered three days later and the defeat cost England the southwest (17 July 1453).

Castine ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

See Hampden

Castlebar ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

French General Joseph Humbert advanced south from Killala to attack a strong defensive position at Barnageerah Pass near Castlebar, County Mayo. Loyalist General Gerard Lake had only just taken command from General John Hely-Hutchinson, and his defeated garrison of about 1,500 fencibles and militia fled in a disgraceful rout known as the "Castlebar Races" (27 August 1798).

Castleford ❙ 948 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

During the confused struggle for Northumbria following Viking defeat in 937 at Brunanburh, the Saxon Eadred marched against Erik Bloodaxe, the exiled Norwegian who claimed northern England. Returning south after burning the city of Ripon, Eadred's rearguard was ambushed at Castleford on the River Aire. The Saxons suffered terrible losses, and Eadred turned back and overthrew Erik.

Castle Hill ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

See Buda

Castrejon ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marshal Auguste Marmont led a counter-offensive south of the Duoro through Tedula towards Salamanca, and attacked General Sir Stapleton Cotton, defending a line on the Tarabancos at Castrejon, west of Medina del Campo. Though Cotton resisted heavy artillery fire, when the French threatened to turn his position, he fell back west to Castrillo on the Guarena (18 July 1812).

Castricum ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Four days after success at Alkmaar in northern Holland, Frederick Augustus Duke of York and his Russian ally General Ivan Hermann advanced on French entrenchments among coastal dunes near Castricum, southwest of Bergen-aan-Zee. However, General Guillaume Brune drove them back with heavy losses in men and guns. York quickly made peace and returned home (6 October 1799).

Castrillo ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Advancing northeast after taking Salamanca (27 June), Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington was surprised by a counter-offensive through Castrejon by French Marshal Auguste Marmont. In a defensive position further west on the Guarena at Castrillo, British-German troops under General Victor Alten repulsed General Bertrand Clausel and Wellington withdrew to Salamanca (18 July 1812).

Castrogiovanni ❙ 859 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

With the fall of Palermo in 831, the key to the Byzantine defence of central Sicily became the heavily fortified city of Castrogiovanni (modern Enna), held in the final months by a force under Theodotus. Following several failed assaults, the city was eventually stormed by Emir Abbas ibn Fadl, giving Arabs the "navel of Sicily" and leaving the Byzantines little else but Syracuse (24 January 859).

Castro Urdiales ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

British Admiral Sir Home Popham led an offensive on the northern coast of Spain to relieve pressure on the Allied campaign around Salamanca, attacking Lequeitio and Guetaria. He soon joined with Spanish troops under Colonel Francisco Longa to capture the fortress at Castro Urdiales, northwest of Bilbao. A few days later, Popham marched southeast against Portugalete (6–8 July 1812).

Castro Urdiales ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Campaigning on the Biscay Coast, French General Maximilien Foy besieged Castro Urdiales, northwest of Bilbao, captured by the British the previous July and held by Spanish Colonel Pedro Alvarez. A relief force under General Gabriel Mendizibal was driven off (29 April) and, despite British naval support, Foy took the port by storm (25 April–11 May 1813).

Catalaunian Plain ❙ 451 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire

See Chalons

Catalca ❙ 1912 ❙ 1st Balkan War

See Chataldja

Catambuco ❙ 1823 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

Royalist rebels under Colonel Agustín Agualongo rose in support of Ferdinand VII and seized Pasto, but it was retaken by Colonel Bartolomé Salom. Returning after defeat at Ibarra in July, the rebels besieged the city. Salom marched out to inflict a terrible defeat at nearby Catambuco and the rising was suppressed until the final Royalist defeat in June 1824 at Barbacoas (13 September 1823).

Catania ❙ 1849 ❙ 1st Italian War of Independence

Following the bombardment of Messina, and truce in 1848, Sicily renewed her uprising against Ferdinand II of Naples, aided by foreigners including the Pole Ludwig Mieroslawski. In eastern Sicily at Catania the rebels were defeated in a decisive battle by General Carlo Filangieri and Swiss mercenaries. Filangieri became Governor of Sicily as the Duke of Taormina (6 April 1849).

Catania ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

British General Sir Bernard Montgomery opened the Allied invasion of Sicily, landing in the southeast, where he captured Syracuse (10 July). However, he stalled on the Plain of Catania, with costly losses while attempting to secure the Primosole Bridge over the Simeto. Montgomery then diverted inland towards Adrano and the Germans held Catania until they withdrew on 4 August (12–17 July 1943).

Catawba Ford ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution
See Fishing Creek

Cateau Cambresis ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)
See Beaumont-en-Cambresis

Cathraeth ❙ 598 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars
Marching into northern Northumbria against King Aethelfrith, the Scottish Princes Mynydawc and Cynan of Edinburgh were met in battle on the Swale at Cathraeth (modern Catterick). While Aethelfrith's Bernicians suffered heavy losses, the army of Edinburgh was destroyed. A further victory at Daegsaston in 603 secured Aethelfrith's northern border against the Scots.

Catlett's Station ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Auburn

Cattaro ❙ 1690 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars
While Venice besieged the Turkish fortress at Monemvasia in southern Greece, other Venetian forces on the Dalmatian coast marched against Zin Ali Pasha of Herzogovina, who was reinforced by cavalry from the Pasha of Bosnia. In a decisive defeat near Cattaro (modern Kotor), south of Dubrovnik, Zin Ali was captured and lost 700 men out of his army of 3,500 (30 April 1690).

Cattaro ❙ 1813–1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)
Following French defeats in Germany, Peter I of Montenegro besieged the Adriatic port of Cattaro (Kotor), south of Dubrovnik, defended by French General Jean-Joseph Gauthier. Aided by Captain William Hoste in the frigate Bacchante, the Montenegrans forced Gauthier to surrender. The Congress of Vienna in 1815 made them return Cattaro to Austria (14 October 1813–3 January 1814).

Caucasus ❙ 1942–1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
To secure Caucasus oil, German Army Group A under Marshal Wilhelm List (later, General Ewald von Kliest) drove south from Rostov and took Maikop (9 August). Russian counter-attacks then stopped the Germans crossing the Caucasus Mountains towards Grozny and Baku. Threatened in the rear by the fall of Stalingrad, the Germans were forced to withdraw (29 July 1942–14 February 1943).

Caudebec ❙ 1592 ❙ 9th French War of Religion
The Catholic forces of Alessandro Farnese Duke of Parma relieved Rouen (21 April) then marched west and captured the town of Caudebec on the Seine, where they found themselves trapped by the massively reinforced Royalist army of Henry of Navarre. In a brilliant manoeuvre, Parma led his 15,000 men across the river in a single night to escape to the south (24 April–21 May 1592).

Caudine Forks ❙ 321 BC ❙ 2nd Samnite War
Determined to conquer central Italy after victory at Suessa in 339 BC, Rome renewed war against the Samnites. After initial success, Consuls Titus Veturius Calvinus and Spurius Postumius Albinus were routed by Caius Pontius on the Plain of Caudium at the Caudine Forks, and surrendered. Rome accepted a harsh truce and, when war resumed, she was defeated again in 315 BC at Lautulae.

Caudium ❙ 321 BC ❙ 2nd Samnite War
See Caudine Forks

Cau Giay ❙ 1883 ❙ Sino-French War
See Hanoi

Cauldron ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)
Axis commander Erwin Rommel turned the British line at Gazala, then concentrated his tanks in a defensive position in the Allied rear known as the Cauldron. Rommel drew in and destroyed British armour and, with the fall of Bir Hacheim (11 June), the British retreated into Egypt through Mersah Matruh to El Alamein, while Rommel turned northeast on Tobruk (30 May–4 June 1942).

Caulk's Field ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

As a diversion from the advance on Baltimore, Captain Sir Peter Parker (HMS Menelaus) took 260 men against the eastern shore of Chesapeake Bay to attack about 175 Americans under Colonel Phillip Reed in camp west of Chestertown. Landing at night without the element of surprise, the British were badly beaten at Caulk's Field with 17 killed, including Parker fatally wounded (31 August 1814).

Caurières ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Louvement

Caversham Bridge ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Reading

Caving Banks ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Bird Creek

Cawnpore (1st) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Near the start of the mutiny, rebel leader Nana Sahib laid siege to Cawnpore (modern Kanpur), held by a small garrison under General Sir Hugh Wheeler. Three weeks of bombardment forced the starving garrison to surrender in return for safe passage to Allahabad. But as they left, Wheeler and most of the men were killed. The women and children were taken and later murdered (6–26 June 1857).

Cawnpore (2nd) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Advancing from Allahabad to recapture Cawnpore (modern Kanpur), Sir Henry Havelock beat rebel forces at Fatehpur, Aong and Pandu Nadi, yet arrived too late to prevent the murder of European women and children by Nana Sahib. Just outside the city at Maharajpur, Nana Sahib was routed and fled. British forces then entered Cawnpore and exacted terrible retribution (16 July 1857).

Cawnpore (3rd) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

As General Sir Colin Campbell marched south from Lucknow, General Charles Windham marched out of Cawnpore (modern Kanpur) against approaching rebels from Gwalior under Tantia Topi. Heavily outnumbered Windham was routed and driven back to his entrenchments. The rebels seized the city before Campbell arrived to stabilise the situation (27–28 November 1857).

Cawnpore (4th) ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Securing the British entrenchments at Cawnpore (modern Kanpur) after General Charles Windham's defeat, General Sir Colin Campbell attacked the rebels outside the city under Tantia Topi. In a vital strategic defeat, despite massive numerical superiority, the rebels were driven out with heavy losses in men and guns, saving Cawnpore. Campbell then prepared to retake Lucknow (6 December 1857).

Cayenne ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

British Admiral Sir Sydney Smith supported Portuguese Brazil against French Guyana, sending Captain James Yeo in the sloop Confiance with Colonel Manoel Marques to take Cayenne. Five weeks after the combined force landed near Cayenne and captured Fort Diamant, French General Victor Hugues surrendered. Guyana remained Portuguese until 1814 (January–February 1809).

Cazal Novo ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

While retreating from the failed French invasion of Portugal, part of Marshal Michel Ney's rearguard under General Jean-Gabriel Marchand took a strong position at Cazal Novo, southeast of Coimbra. There they inflicted heavy losses on the Light Division under General Sir William Erskine before continuing the French withdrawal east through Miranda do Corvo (14 March 1811).

Cecora ❙ 1620 ❙ Polish-Turkish Wars

After victory at Jassy in support of Moldavian intrigue, Polish Hetman Stanislas Zolkiewski was abandoned by local allies and retreated north before a large Ottoman army under Sultan Osman II. On the Dniester at Cecora, near Mogilev-Podolski, the 73-year-old Polish General was killed and his army was annihilated. The Turks were stopped in 1621 at Khotin (September–6 October 1620).

Cedar Canyon ❙ 1864 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

In response to Indian attacks in northern Colorado, Major Jacob Downing took a force against a Cheyenne village at Cedar Canyon, north of the South Platte. Downing claimed he killed 26, wounded 30 and captured 100 horses in a dawn attack. While he was unable to pursue because he had run out of ammunition, this was the first major action on the Platte (May 1864).

Cedar Creek ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Despite defeat at Fisher's Hill and Tom's Brook, Confederate commander Jubal A. Early boldly attacked Union General Horatio G. Wright at Cedar Creek, just northeast of Strasburg, Virginia. Early secured the initial advantage, but Union commander Philip Sheridan arrived to turn certain defeat into brilliant triumph, and he finally defeated Early in March 1865 at Waynesboro (19 October 1864).

Cedar Falls ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

See Iron Triangle

Cedar Mountain ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

A month after saving Richmond in the Seven Days' Battles, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee sent Generals Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson and Ambrose P. Hill into northern Virginia, where part of General John Pope's army under General Nathaniel Banks was defeated at Cedar Mountain, near Culpeper. Jackson soon continued the offensive along the Rappahannock (9 August 1862).

Cedarville ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Front Royal

Cedarville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Sent from Petersburg to reinforce the Confederates in the Shenandoah Valley, General Richard H. Anderson was intercepted on the Shenandoah in Virginia, just north of Front Royal at Cedarville, by Union General Wesley Merritt. The Union forces withdrew north after an inconclusive action, and Anderson supported the attack further north at Summit Point five days later (16 August 1864).

Cedynia ❙ 972 ❙ Polish-German Wars

Mieszko I of Poland expanded into eastern Pomerania, where he met a force under Margrave Hodo of the Eastern March at Cedynia, just inside the modern Polish border northeast of Berlin. Driven onto swampy ground, the German knights were badly defeated and, after repulsing an attempt by Emperor Otto II to regain the area in 976, Mieszko was confirmed as Count of the March (24 June 972).

Cefn Carnedd ❙ 50 ❙ Roman Conquest of Britain

See Caer Caradoc

Celaya ❙ 1859 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

See La Estancia

Celaya ❙ 1915 ❙ Mexican Revolution

After supporting Venustiano Carranza to overthrow President Victoriano Huerta, rebel leader Francisco (Pancho) Villa fell out with his former ally and, at Celaya, west of Querétaro, attacked a large government army under General Álvaro Obregón. Villa suffered massive losses in two battles—among the bloodiest in Mexican history—and fell back on Trinidad (6–7 & 13–15 April 1915).

Cempoala ❙ 1520 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Mexico

Conquistador Hernán Cortés destroyed Cholula and arrived at the Aztec capital, Tenochtitlan (November 1519), before Pánfilo de Narváez left Cuba with 1,000 men to remove him from command. Leaving Pedro de Alvarado in charge, Cortés marched to Cempoala on the coast and beat Narváez, enlisting his men. Cortés returned to Tenochtitlan, where fierce resistance had begun (May 1520).

Central Henan ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (China)

In the opening Kogo phase of the Ichigo offensive, General Eitaro Uchiyama advanced south to clear the Beijing-Hankou Railway. Storming across Central Henan, the Japanese secured massive territory including Zhengzhou (22 April) and Luoyang (24 May). Army commander Shunroku Hata then moved his field headquarters to Hankou to prepare the next phase towards Changsha (18 April–25 May 1944).

Cepeda ❙ 1820 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

On campaign against the Unitarians of Buenos Aires, Argentine Federalist forces under Estanislao López of Sante Fe and Francisco Ramirez of Entre Ríos attacked and defeated General José Rondeau of Río de la Plata at Cepeda, northwest of Buenos Aires. However, the struggle between the provinces and Buenos Aires continued for 40 years until a second action at Cepeda (1 February 1820).

Cepeda ❙ 1859 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

Concluding protracted conflict between the warring provinces of Argentina, President Justo José de Urquiza at Paraná took an army against the Porteño forces of Buenos Aires, led by General Bartolomé Mitre. In battle northwest of Buenos Aires at Cepeda, Mitre was defeated, and Buenos Aires agreed to join the Confederation, though fighting resumed two years later at Pavón (23 October 1859).

Cephisus ❙ 1311 ❙ Wars of the Catalan Company

The Spanish mercenary army known as the Catalan Grand Company turned against their former Byzantine allies at Aprus (1305) and descended into Greece, to be confronted at the River Cephisus by Walter de Brienne Duke of Athens. Luring the French knights onto marshy ground, the Catalans utterly crushed them, killing Walter. They then established themselves as rulers of Athens (15 March 1311).

Cer ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

Near the start of the war, Austrian Generals Liborius von Frank and Oskar Potiorek invaded Serbia and were met in the Cer Mountains west of Belgrade by Serbian Generals Stepa Stepanovic and Zivojin Misic. Despite costly Serbian losses, this first Allied victory saw the Austrians driven out of the mountains, and they fell back across the Drina to the city of Sabac (12–20 August 1914).

Cerami ❙ 1063 ❙ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy

Two years after seizing Messina in Sicily, Roger d'Hauteville marched inland to capture Troina, then met a large Muslim army in the mountains at Cerami. The Muslims suffered massive casualties, including a leading general identified as Arcadius of Palermo said to have been killed by Roger himself. Victory secured the Normans northeast Sicily, and Roger soon won again at Misilmeri.

Ceresole ❙ 1544 ❙ 4th Habsburg-Valois War

When a French-Swiss force under Francis de Bourbon Prince of Enghien besieged Carignano, south of Turin, they faced the large Spanish-Italian force of Alfonso d'Avalos Marquis del Vasto, reinforced by 7,000 Landsknechts. The Germans were virtually annihilated in a bloody action to the southeast at Ceresole and del Vasto withdrew with 9,000 killed or captured (14 April 1544).

Céret ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Boulou

Cerignola ❙ 1503 ❙ Italian War of Louis XII

In resumed war between France and Spain over Naples, Spanish General Gonsalvo de Cordoba was forced back to an eight-month siege at the port of Barletta. However, when reinforcements arrived by sea, Cordoba marched west to Cerignola and inflicted a terrible defeat, killing French commander Louis d'Armagnac Duke of Nemours and securing Naples for Spain (28 April 1503).

Cerigotto ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

See Cape Spada

Cerisole ❙ 1544 ❙ 4th Habsburg-Valois War

See Ceresole

Cernay ❙ 58 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

See Mühlhausen

Cernomen ❙ 1371 ❙ Ottoman Conquest of the Balkans

See Maritza

Cerquin ❙ 1539 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Honduras

As Spain tried to secure Honduras, the Lenca Chief Lampira raised powerful resistance in the mountains, where he held out in his stronghold at Cerquin against a force under Alonso de Cáceres, sent by Governor Francisco de Montejo. After six months' failed siege, Lampira was lured to peace talks and killed. Resistance was soon crushed. The modern Honduran national currency is named in his honour.

Cerrito ❙ 1812 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Spanish Viceroy Gaspar Vigodet led an offensive from Montevideo which was met at nearby Cerrito by a makeshift force under the Argentine General José Rondeau. With brilliant tactics, Rondeau secured a decisive Patriot victory and succeeded San Martin to command the Patriot Army of the North. Vigodet meanwhile withdrew to eventual siege at Montevideo (31 December 1812).

Cerro Corá ❙ 1870 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Despite defeat at Piribebuy and Acosta-Ñu in August 1869, Paraguayan Dictator Francisco Solano López continued fighting until cornered at Cerro Corá, near the Aquidaban in northeast Paraguay, by Brazilian commander Gaston d'Orleans Comte d'Eu. Attacked by General José Antonio Câmara, López and most of his men were killed, ending Latin America's bloodiest war (1 March 1870).

Cerro del Borrego ❙ 1862 ❙ Mexican-French War

See Orizaba

Cerro de Pasco ❙ 1820 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

While Patriot commander José de San Martin besieged Callao, he sent General Juan Antonio Alvarez de Arenales inland to raise support, where he was met at Cerro de Pasco by a Royalist force under General Diego O'Reilly. A decisive action saw the Royalists lose 70 casualties and 350 captured, including O'Reilly, and Arenales captured vital Spanish military equipment (6 December 1820).

Cerro Gordo ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

General Winfield Scott's expeditionary force advancing inland from Veracruz towards Mexico City met Mexican commander Antonio de Santa Anna at Cerro Gordo, a mountain pass near Plan del Rio. After a premature assault by General David Twiggs, Scott's main force attacked next day and the Mexicans fled with heavy casualties and prisoners (17–18 April 1847).

Cerro Grande ❙ 1859 ❙ 2nd Chilean Liberal Revolt

Faced by a widespread Liberal army rising and defeat at Loros in March, Conservative Chilean President Manuel Montt Torres sent General Juan Viduarra Leal against rebel leader Pedro León Gallo and over 2,000 men at Cerro Grande, near La Serena. Gallo was defeated by the smaller government force when some commanders changed sides and the rising was bloodily crushed (29 April 1859).

Cerro Porteño ❙ 1811 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Near the start of her war against Spain, Argentina sent General Manuel Belgrano to incorporate Paraguay under the authority of Buenos Aires. At Cerro Porteño, southeast of Asunción near Paraguarí, Spanish Governor Bernardo de Velazco fled the field. However, militia commander Colonel Manuel Atanasio Cavañas secured a decisive victory and soon won again at Tacauri (15 January 1811).

Cerros de San Francisco ❙ 1879 ❙ War of the Pacific

See San Francisco, Chile

Cesis ❙ 1577 ❙ Livonian War

See Wenden

Cesis ❙ 1919 ❙ Estonian War of Independence

When a counter-offensive at Tallinn drove the Red Army out of Estonia, Estonian General Johan Laidoner marched into northern Latvia to meet a German offensive from Riga. With Latvian aid, Laidoner decisively defeated General Rudiger von der Goltz near Cesis (Vönnu)—celebrated in Estonia by Victory Day—and checked Russia later that year at the Narva (19–23 June 1919).

Cesky Brod ❙ 1434 ❙ Hussite Wars

See Lipany

Cesme ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

See Chesme

Ceuta ❙ 1415 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in North Africa

King John I of Portugal was urged on by his glory-hunting sons to attack the Muslim fortress of Ceuta (modern Sabta), south of the Strait of Gibraltar. The city fell with heavy Arab losses after a ferocious defence by Governor Salat ben Salat. Portugal's first overseas colony was given to Dom Pedro de Menezes, who held it against repeated attacks, including a major siege in 1419 (21 August 1415).

Ceuta ❙ 1720 ❙ Spanish-Moroccan Wars

Determined to save Ceuta (Sabta) from constant Moroccan attack, Philip V sent about 16,000 men under Jean de Bette Marquis de Lede and, following a naval bombardment, a successful Spanish offensive inflicted over 500 casualties and captured 29 cannon. Although de Lede was soon driven back and later withdrew, the blockade continued for many years (15 November 1720–February 1721).

Ceva ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Just days after defeat at Millessimo, in northwest Italy, Austrian Baron Michael Colli took a defensive position west of Dego at Ceva and inflicted a costly repulse on French General Pierre Augereau. The French withdrew and gathered a large force to attack next day. Colli skillfully slipped away in the night and withdrew to Mondovi, where he was quickly defeated (16–17 April 1796).

Cevo ❙ 1768 ❙ Ottoman Invasions of Montenegro

Abandoned by Venice, Montenegro faced separate Ottoman armies invading from Rumelia and Bosnia. The two forces united, but near Cevo, just west of Danilograd, they were beaten by the much smaller Montenegran army in the "Marathon of Montenegro." Three days later, a lightning storm reputedly destroyed the Turks' gunpowder supply, and they had to withdraw (28 October 1768).

Ceylon ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Indian Ocean)

Admiral Chuichi Nagumo in command of a large Japanese fleet bombed key naval ports at Colombo and Trincomalee in Ceylon and sank an aircraft carrier, two cruisers, two destroyers and five other ships at the cost of just 36 aircraft lost. A supporting force under Admiral Jizaburo Ozawa sank 18 merchant ships in the Bay of Bengal before they both withdrew (5–9 April 1942).

Ceza ❙ 1888 ❙ Zulu Rebellion

When Britain annexed the last of Zululand and imposed a new hut tax, Zululand Police and Imperial troops supported Magistrate Dick Addison going to arrest uSuthu Chief Dinuzulu. Attacked by the Zulus at Ceza, on the border of the Boer New Republic, the British turned and fled. Losses were minimal, but this blow to British prestige was followed by another at Ivuna (1 June 1888).

Chabreiss ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

See Shubra Khit

Chacabuco ❙ 1817 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

Recovering from rebel defeat at Rancagua in 1814, General José de San Martin crossed the Andes and joined Bernardo O'Higgins against outnumbered Royalists under Brigadier Rafael Maroto, north of Santiago at Chacabuco. Maroto was routed, losing 500 killed, 600 captured and all his guns. Santiago fell two days later and O'Higgins proclaimed independence for Chile (12–13 February 1817).

Chacaltaya ❙ 1814 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

José Pinelo captured La Paz, in modern Bolivia, in support of Indian Chief Mateo Pumacahua then faced 1,200 Royalists from Oruro under General Juan Ramirez de Orosco. Pinelo was defeated northeast of La Paz at Chacaltaya, and Ramirez occupied the city. He then marched into Peru and drove Pumacahua out of Arequipa (9 December), seized after victory at Apacheta (2 November 1814).

Chaeronea ❙ 338 BC ❙ 4th Sacred War

A decade after success at Pagasae and Olynthus, Philip II of Macedon took a large army into central Greece and at Chaeronea in Boeotia, met Athenians under Chares and Thebans led by Theagenes. In a brutal action, with terrible losses including the entire Theban "Sacred Band," Philip secured victory, ensuring Macedonian dominance over Greece. He was assassinated two years later (August 338 BC).

Chaeronea ❙ 86 BC ❙ 1st Mithridatic War

Driven out of Piraeus, the Pontic General Archelaus, commanding the army of Mithridates VI in Greece, quickly occupied Chareonea in Boeotia, where he came under attack by Roman commander Lucius Sulla. Archelaus was decisively defeated in a large-scale action outside Chaeronea, but escaped with 10,000 men to Chalcis. He soon returned to Boeotia to fight again further east at Orchomenus.

Chaffin's Bluff ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See New Market Heights

Chahar Mahall ❙ 1751 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

In the struggle for control of Persia after the assassination of Nadir Shah, the Zand Chieftain Karim Khan and his brother Sadeq Khan seized Isfahan (January 1751), then turned against their former ally, the Bakhtiyari Ali Mardan Khan. In battle southwest of Isfahan in the Chahar Mahall, Ali Mardan was defeated and fled. Karim seized power as Regent for the boy-Shah Ismail III.

Chaidari ❙ 1826 ❙ Greek War of Independence

During the Ottoman siege of the Acropolis, a relief force under Georgios Karaiskakis and French Colonel Charles Nicolas Baron Fabvier approached as far as Chaidari, where they came under heavy attack and were routed. Although Fabvier blamed the loss on Karaiskakis withdrawing prematurely, Karaiskakis redeemed his reputation four months later at Arachova (20 August 1826).

Chains ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq
See Hafir, Iraq

Chakan ❙ 1660 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars
With Maratha commander Shivaji besieged near Kolhapur at Panhala, further north, Mughal General Shaista Khan besieged the fortress of Chakan, near Poona, held for Shivaji by Phirangoji Narsala. When a powerful mine destroyed part of the wall, Chakan fell in a bloody two-day assault with most of the garrison slaughtered and Phirangoji surrendered (21 June–15 August 1660).

Chaksana ❙ 1788 ❙ Mughal-Maratha War of Ismail Beg
When Mahadji Sindhia sent Rana Khan and Benoit de Boigne to relieve Agra, renegade Mughal leader Ismail Beg and Rohilla Chief Ghulam Kadir raised their siege and met Mahadji's army at Chaksana, eight miles from Bharatpur. The Marathas quit the field early after terrible losses on both sides, but de Boigne also had to withdraw. They met again in June at Bagh Dera (22 April 1788).

Chalcedon ❙ 74 BC ❙ 3rd Mithridatic War
War resumed between Rome and Mithridates VI of Pontus, and Consul Marcus Aurelius Cotta sailed to the Bosphorus, where he was heavily defeated outside Chalcedon and had to retire into the city. Pontic ships then forced their way into the harbour and destroyed or captured the Roman fleet. The following year, Mithridates moved west along the Sea of Marmara against Cyzicus.

Chalchuapa ❙ 1885 ❙ Central American National Wars
President Justo Rufino Barrios of Guatemala was determined to reimpose a Central American Confederation and, aided by Honduras, invaded western El Salvador against President Rafael Zaldívar. His army stormed the fortress of Santa Ana, but just to the west, at Chalchuapa, Barrios was killed in further fighting. His defeated army fled, ending the dream of Guatemalan dominance (2 April 1885).

Chalcis ❙ 429 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War
See Patras

Chaldiran ❙ 1514 ❙ Turko-Persian War in Anatolia
Invading Shi'ite Persia, Turkish Sultan Selim I took about 60,000 men across the Upper Euphrates and, northeast of Lake Van, met Shah Ismail I with a reported 50,000 horsemen on the Plain of Chaldiran. Utilising newly introduced artillery, the Ottomans routed the Persians, and Selim inflicted a further defeat at Turna Dag before turning against Syria in 1516 at Marj-Dabik (23 August 1514).

Chalgrove Field ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars
After a failed attempt to intercept a Parliamentary pay convoy near Oxford, a strong Royalist force under Prince Rupert were themselves intercepted on the Thame, southeast of Oxford. The Prince cut his way through to Oxford after a sharp action on Chalgrove Field, near Chiselhampton, although Parliamentary Colonel John Hampden was fatally wounded (18 June 1643).

Chalibee ❙ 1814 ❙ Creek Indian War
See Calabee Creek

Chalk Bluff ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)
Repulsed on the Mississippi at Cape Girardeau (26 April), Confederate General John S. Marmaduke's expedition into Missouri retreated southwest, pursued by General William Vandever, who had arrived to take command from General John McNeil. At Chalk Bluff, on the St Francis River north of Kennet, Marmaduke's rearguard fought a bloody action as he escaped into Arkansas (1–2 May 1863).

Chalmette ❙ 1815 ❙ War of 1812
See New Orleans

Chalons ❙ 273 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars
When military Governor Gaius Tetricus was proclaimed Emperor in Gaul, the legitimate Emperor Aurelian, returning from victory in the east, marched into Gaul against the usurper. The Gallic force was decisively defeated in battle near Chalons-sur-Marne after Tetricus deserted, reputedly by prior agreement. Tetricus was subsequently pardoned by Aurelian.

Chalons ❙ 366 ❙ Alemannic Invasion of Roman Gaul
Soon after appointing his brother Valens co-Emperor in the East, Roman Emperor Valentinian I moved to Paris to better combat fresh barbarian incursions. Building up a substantial military presence, he sent General Jovinus against barbarian Alemanni, who had crossed the frozen Rhine. Jovinus defeated the Alemanni at Chalons-sur-Marne, reputedly killing more than 6,000 (January 366).

Chalons ❙ 451 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire
Attila the Hun overran much of the Balkans, then led a reported 40,000 men into Gaul and besieged Orleans. In one of history's decisive battles, on the Catalaunian Plain between Chalons and Troyes, Attila was defeated by Roman commander Aetius and Theodoric the Visigoth (who was killed). Attila had to withdraw across the Rhine, but he invaded Italy the next year to sack Aquileia.

Chalus ❙ 1199 ❙ French War of Richard I
In a pointless dispute over ownership of some supposed treasure, Richard I—the Lion Heart—besieged one of his own Barons, Viscount Ademar, at the castle of Chalus, southwest of Limoges. An otherwise insignificant action saw the English King hit by a crossbow bolt and he died ten days later. The Viscount was later murdered in revenge by Richard's illegitimate son Philip (26 March 1199).

Chambly ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution
Attempting to support besieged St Johns, southeast of Montreal, British General Sir Guy Carleton reinforced Chambly, ten miles further north, held by Major Joseph Stopford. Surrounded by Canadian Colonel James Livingston and American Major John Brown, Stopford prematurely surrendered, yielding vital military supplies, which hastened the fall of St Johns (18 October 1775).

Chamkaur (1st) ❙ 1704 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars
Amid renewed war against Sikh Guru Gobind Singh in the Upper Punjab, suspended after defeat at Basoli in 1702, Raja Ajmer Chand of Kahlur sought aid from an Imperial force under Generals Saiyad Beg and Alif Khan. In battle at Chamkaur, southwest of Rupar, Saiyad Beg changed sides—reportedly won over to the Sikh cause—and Alif Khan was forced to withdraw to Delhi.

Chamkaur (2nd) ❙ 1704 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars
Despite being promised safe passage after the siege of Anandpur in the Upper Punjab, Sikh Guru Gobind Singh was defeated at the Sarsa, and was routed next day at nearby Chamkaur by Mughal Generals Khwaja Mohammad and Nahar Khan. The Guru's sons Ajit and Jujhar were killed in this final stand, while Gobind Singh and a handful of survivors escaped (22 December 1704).

Chamorlu ❙ 1413 ❙ Ottoman Civil Wars
Ottoman Sultan Mehmed II resolved to put an end to rebellion by his brother Musa Celebi and took a large force into Serbia, where he was supported by the Serbian Despot George Brankovic. In battle at Chamorlu, near Samokov, Brankovic helped defeat Musa, who was later captured and killed. As a reward the Despot secured Serbia's freedom from Ottoman assault (5 July 1413).

Champa ❙ 1281–1283 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

When Kubilai Khan sent General Sodu and a small force against King Jaya Indravarman VI of Champa (in southern Vietnam), they captured his capital Vijaya (near modern Quy Nhon). Despite reinforcements, the Mongols could not secure decisive victory and Kubilai then sent his son Toghon. But war with Annam intervened and Champa remained undefeated, though later agreed to pay tribute.

Champagne ❙ 1914–1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Despite bloody stalemate in Flanders around Ypres, French commander Joseph Joffre determined to resume the offensive and attacked German positions in Champagne around Perthes. Fighting in bad winter conditions, bold French assaults against entrenched machine-guns eventually failed and both sides settled in to stubborn trench warfare (20 December 1914–17 March 1915).

Champagne ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Coinciding with the Allied offensive in Artois, Generals Henri Pétain and Fernande de Langle de Cary led a massive French advance in Champagne between Rheims and the Argonne, against General Karl von Einem and Crown Prince Wilhelm. The French took ground, prisoners and guns, but were finally checked with about 145,000 casualties (25 September–6 November 1915).

Champaner ❙ 1535 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

Emperor Humayun expanded the Mughal Empire into central India, where he captured Mandu from Sultan Bahadur Shah of Gujarat, then pursued him to the supposedly impregnable fortress of Champaner, 20 miles south of Godhra. Humayun led a brilliant night-time escalade of the massive walls after the Sultan fled to Diu and General Ikhtiyar Khan surrendered the fortress (9 August 1535).

Champaubert ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

In a brilliant campaign east of Paris against the invading Prussian-Russian army of General Gebhard von Blucher, Napoleon Bonaparte attacked part of Blucher's force under Generals Zacharii Olssusiev and Konstantin Poltoratski at Baye, outside Champaubert. He captured both Generals and destroyed their force, then achieved another victory next day at Montmirail (10 February 1814).

Champ Blanc ❙ 1650 ❙ War of the 2nd Fronde

Rebelling against the power of Cardinal Jules Mazarin during the minority of Louis XIV, French nobleman Viscount Henri de Turenne led a force with Spanish support to relieve the so-called Frondeurs besieged at Rethel, north of Rheims. The rebels were routed by a Royal army under Marshal Cesar de Choiseul at nearby Champ Blanc and Turenne later changed sides (15 December 1650).

Champion Hill ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General John C. Pemberton attempting to defend besieged Vicksburg, on the Mississippi, marched east against the Union army, which had just captured Jackson. At Champion Hill, Mississippi, some of the campaign's hardest fighting saw Pemberton finally defeated by General John A. McClernand and he withdrew towards Vicksburg across the Big Black River (16 May 1863).

Champions ❙ 547 BC ❙ Spartan-Argive Wars

In a dispute over Cynuria, a strategic strip of coast between Argos and Laconia, the Argives demanded the matter be settled by 300 champions from either side. It is claimed that only two Argives and one Spartan survived the semi-legendary Battle of Champions, but the Spartan remain on the battlefield to claim victory. Sparta won the ensuing general engagement and annexed Cynuria.

Champotón ❙ 1517 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Yucatan

Three ships under Francisco Hernandez de Cordoba sailed from Cuba to the west coast of the Yucatan Peninsula, where they were driven off from the Mayan city of Campeche. They then attempted to land further south at the fortified town of Champotón, where an armed party found itself in a fierce battle and withdrew with heavy losses. Hernandez returned to Cuba, where he later died of wounds.

Chancellorsville ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Crossing the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg, Virginia, Union commander Joseph Hooker marched towards Chancellorsville against Confederate General Robert E. Lee. Despite heavy losses, including General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson killed, Lee won perhaps his greatest victory, while Hooker, with his reinforcements repulsed at Salem Church, withdrew across the river (1–4 May 1863).

Chanda, Maharashtra ❙ 1818 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

As victorious British forces moved to capture remaining Maratha fortresses to end the war, Colonel Sir John Worthington Adams marched against Chanda (modern Chandrapur, south of Nagpur), stubbornly defended by troops of the Raja of Nagpur. Chanda was taken by storm after two days' bombardment, and the subsequent fall of Malegaon virtually ended the war (19–21 May 1818).

Chanda, Uttar Pradesh ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Following Gurkha success at Manduri (19 September), British Colonel Frederick Wroughton sent 1,100 of the Nepalese soldiers under Dhir Shamshar Rana against rebel forces gathering at Chanda, in the Jaunpur district, southeast of Sultanpur. After marching ten miles, the Gurkhas met a rival force of about 5,000, but savage fighting dispersed the rebels, who lost perhaps 300 dead (31 October 1857).

Chanda, Uttar Pradesh ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Thomas Franks campaigned against Mehndi Husain in Oudh, where he defeated rebel lieutenants Fazil Azim at Saraun (21 January) and Beni Bahadur at Nasratpur (23 January). Franks then attacked Chanda, 20 miles southeast of Sultanpur, held by Banda Husain. The rebels were routed in fierce fighting and Franks met Mehndi himself the same day near Budhayan (19 February 1858).

Chandax ❙ 961 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Crete

Chanderi ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

While General Sir Hugh Rose advanced on Jhansi, further west, Brigadier Charles Stuart attacked rebel forces in the powerful hilltop fortress at Chanderi. Stuart breached the walls with artillery fire, then sent in a storming party under Major Richard Keatinge, who was severely wounded. Although most of the rebels escaped, Stuart captured the fort and all its guns (13–17 March 1858).

Chandernagore ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

With Calcutta retaken in January from French-supported Nawab Siraj-ud-Daula of Bengal, British Colonel Robert Clive advanced up the Hooghly against the French base at Chandernagore. Supported by Admiral Charles Watson on the river, Clive bombarded the town until commander Pierre Renault surrendered, effectively ending the French presence in Bengal (14–24 March 1757).

Chandwar ❙ 1194 ❙ Later Muslim Conquest of Northern India

The great Muslim conqueror Muhammad of Ghor secured Delhi following victory at Taraori, then turned against the Kingdom of Kanauj under Raja Jaichand. In a terrible rout near the Jumna at Chandwar (modern Ferozabad), the elephant-based army of Kanauj was routed by horse archers. Jaichand was killed, his capital at Benares was sacked and his kingdom was virtually destroyed.

Chang'an ❙ 316 ❙ Wars of the Sixteen Kingdoms Era

With the dramatic fall of the Jin capital at Luoyang (311), new Emperor Min moved his court to Chang'an. But Jin military power had been fatally weakened and Chang'an (Xi'an) fell by storm to a Xiongnu army under General Liu Yao. Like his predecessor, Min was captured and later executed. The rump of the Jin Dynasty survived only in southern China as the Eastern Jin, with their capital at Nanjing.

Chang'an ❙ 756 ❙ An Lushan Rebellion

The rebel An Lushan was advancing through Luoyang towards the Tang Imperial capital at Chang'an, when he was checked to the west at Tongguan by Tang General Feng Chang Qing. However, Emperor Xuan Zong had Feng executed for failure, and ordered General Geshu Han on a doomed offensive. The Tang army was destroyed and the Emperor abandoned Chang'an (January–July 756).

Chang'an ❙ 763 ❙ Later Tang Imperial Wars

Tang Emperor Daizong had recently defeated An Lushan rebels at Luoyang, when he faced a new threat with King Khri-srong-lde-brtsan of Tibet advancing on Chang'an (modern Xi'an). The Emperor fled east and General Guo Ziyi was defeated trying to hold the capital. After a brief occupation the Tibetans withdrew with their loot. Intermittent war continued for 60 years (12–30 November 763).

Changban ❙ 208 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

The great Han General and warlord Cao Cao (Ts'ao Ts'ao) secured most of northern China, then turned south against his rivals and attacked Liu Bei of Shu at Changban, near modern Yichang in Hubei. In a much mythologised battle, Liu Bei and his General Zhao Yun were pursued and defeated. Liu Bei then formed an alliance with Sun Quan of Wu to meet Cao Cao on the Yangzi at Red Cliffs.

Chang-chou ❙ 1863–1864 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Changzhou

Changchun ❙ 1946 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

As Soviet forces evacuated Manchuria, 4,000 Nationalist Chinese airlifted to the capital Changchun were attacked by a much larger Communist force under General Lin Biao. Severe street fighting forced General Chen Jicheng to surrender the city, but with the loss of Siping (Szepingkau) further south, Lin abandoned Changchun (22 May) and withdrew to Harbin (15–17 April 1946).

Changchun ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

At the start of the Liaoshen offensive in Manchuria, Communist General Lin Biao sent about 65,000 men to capture the northernmost Nationalist bridgehead at Changchun, isolated since the fall (13 March) of Siping (Szepingkau). Promised air drops failed to supply the city and, when some defenders changed sides, Zheng Dongguo surrendered his starving garrison (September–21 October 1948).

Changde ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (China)

Regrouping after failure in Western Hubei, General Isamu Yokoyama led 100,000 Japanese into Hunan and captured Changde after heavy street fighting (3 December). Supported by American bombers, Generals Xue Yue and Sun Lianzhong retook Changde six days later after heavy losses on both sides, then drove the invaders back across the Li and Yuan (2 November–30 December 1943).

Changfukeng ❙ 1938 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

When Russians occupied Changfukeng Hill, close to Lake Khasan on the Tumen, General Kamezo Suetaka from Japanese-occupied

Manchukuo retook the border position, then faced an overwhelming air and land offensive under General Grigorii Shtern. After about 1,400 Japanese and 3,200 Russians casualties, a cease-fire was agreed, and Japan withdrew (6 July–11 August 1938).

Changjin ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

See Chosin

Changlu ❙ 29 ❙ Wars of the Later Han

With the Later Han Dynasty established after victory at Kunyang (23), Emperor Guangwu sent a large army against the warlords of the north China plain. Some pledged allegiance but others determined to fight and, at Changlu in modern Shandung, the Han army secured a decisive victory, including Liu Yu killed. Success enabled Guangwu to unify eastern China and he later turned west against Chengdu.

Changping ❙ 260 BC ❙ China's Era of the Warring States

During a period of struggle between states in eastern China, Qin (Ch'in) General Bai Qi launched a massive offensive against the Kingdom of Zhao. At Changping, he inflicted a crushing defeat on General Zhao Kuo, then massacred a claimed (but unlikely) 400,000 prisoners. Bai Qi then led his forces to besiege the Zhao capital of Handan, where he eventually committed suicide.

Changsha ❙ 1852 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

After campaigning in southern Hunan and gathering recruits, Taiping Western King Xiao Chaogui tried to surprise Changsha, held by Imperial Governor Luo Bingzhang. Xiao was killed leading the assault and, despite massive reinforcements under Heavenly King Hong Xiuquan, the city held out and the Taiping withdrew north towards Hankou (11 September–30 November 1852).

Changsha ❙ 1926 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

At the start of the Nationalist offensive against the warlords of northern China, Chiang Kai-shek's frontline commander Tang Shengzhi entered Hunan in force and advanced on General Ye Kaixin at Changsha. The city fell by storm and Chiang soon continued the advance north through Pingjiang and Tingsiqiao towards Wuchang (5–10 July 1926).

Changsha ❙ 1930 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

When Li Lisan attempted a Communist rising in Jiangxi and Fujian, his General Peng Dehuai took Yochow (modern Yueyang) followed by Changsha. Driven out after ten days by Nationalist General He Yingqin, the Communists were then ordered to retake Changsha. However, they suffered further bloody losses and withdrew and Li was recalled to Moscow (28 July–September 1930).

Changsha ❙ 1939 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

General Yasuji Okamaru took and held Nanchang (18 March–8 May), then stormed the Xin Jiang River to advance on Changsha, in Hunan. To the northeast he captured Ganfang, then faced a huge Chinese counter-offensive under General Chen Cheng. Ganfang was retaken and, after very heavy fighting, the Japanese retreated behind the Xin Jiang to Yueyang (17–30 September 1939).

Changsha ❙ 1941–1942 ❙ World War II (China)

Renewing the offensive in Hunan, Japanese forces under General Anan Tadaki again advanced on Changsha and reached the outskirts (1 January), before General Xue Yeu inflicted massive casualties driving them back across the Xin Jiang. The so-called Third Battle of Changsha has been claimed as the first major Allied victory of the war (24 December 1941–15 January 1942).

Changsha ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (China)

Continuing Japan's massive Ichigo offensive in eastern China from Central Henan, General Isamu Yokoyama led three columns into southern Hunan to neutralise Allied air bases. Chinese General Xue Yue was forced back with heavy losses, and the Japanese seized the much-disputed city of Changsha. The offensive then turned south towards Hengyang and Guilin (26 May–19 June 1944).

Changshu ❙ 1856 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Taiping leader Shi Dakai led a new offensive in Jiangxi, where he threatened Zeng Guofan at Nanchang by besieging Changshu (modern Qingjiang), just to the northwest. Zeng Guofan ordered his forces to abandon the siege of Jiujiang and sent a large force under Zhou Fengshan, who was routed in a massive battle. Shi was then inexplicably recalled to Nanjing, saving Nanchang (20–24 March 1856).

Changsintien ❙ 1922 ❙ 1st Zhili-Fengtian War

See Changxindian

Changteh ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (China)

See Changde

Changxindian ❙ 1922 ❙ 1st Zhili-Fengtian War

Two years after Manchurian warlord Zhang Zuolin joined Kao Kun's Zhili faction at Zhuozhou, the allies fell out and Zhang marched on Beijing. Southwest of the capital at Changxindian, Zhili General Wu Beifu beat Fengtian General Zhang Jinghui, but heavy losses prevented Wu from pursuing into Manchuria. In October 1924 Zhang Zuolin won at Shanhaiguan (28 April–4 May 1922).

Changzhou ❙ 1863–1864 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Following the fall of Suzhou (6 December), Imperial commander Li Hongzhang sent Liu Mingquan northwest of Shanghai to besiege Changzhou, held by the Taiping veteran Chen Kunshu (who later fought General Charles Gordon in nearby towns). When Li himself arrived to lead a massive assault, Chen was defeated and captured, further isolating Nanjing (19 December 1863–11 May 1864).

Chania ❙ 1645 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

See Khania

Channel Dash ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

In a famous blow to British prestige, the German cruisers Prince Eugen, Scharnhorst and Gneisenau under Admiral Otto Ciliax raced through the English Channel from Brest to Wilhelmshaven, with heavy air and surface escort. While six British torpedo aircraft were shot down, and bomber and destroyer attacks failed, two of the German cruisers were damaged by mines (11–12 February 1942).

Channel Ports ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As German forces stormed into France through the Ardennes, General Paul von Kleist's Panzer Group raced west towards the three great Channel Ports—Boulogne, Calais and Dunkirk. Frontline tank commander General Heinz Guderian reached the coast at Abbeville (19 May), then drove north through Boulogne and Calais, while other units closed in on Dunkirk (22 May–4 June 1940).

Chantilly ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate commander Robert E. Lee pursued General John Pope's Union army from defeat at Bull Run, sending General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson on a flank attack at Chantilly, northeast of Centreville, Virginia. Leading Union Generals Philip Kearny and Isaac I. Stevens were killed in a brief but bloody action and Pope continued falling back towards Washington, D.C. (1 September 1862).

Chaouen ❙ 1924 ❙ Spanish-Rif War

During a strategic withdrawal to the coast of Morocco, General Luis Aizpuru reached the garrison at Chaouen, 40 miles south of Tetuán, and more than 40,000 troops began the evacuation. Attacked by 7,000 Rif under Mhamed Abd el Krim (brother of the Chief), the disastrous trek cost up to 18,000 Spanish lives before the survivors reached Tetuán (15 November–13 December 1924).

Chapinería ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

As Nationalists advanced through Talavera de la Reina towards Madrid, the Republican army attempted to hold a line west of the capital at Chapinería. A government counter-attack met with initial success, but Nationalist commander Major Antonio Castejón broke through in heavy fighting. Another defensive effort a few days later failed to the southeast at Navalcarnero (18–19 October 1936).

Chaplin Hills ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Perryville

Chapu ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Zhapu

Chapultepec ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

In his final advance on Mexico City following the costly diversion at Molino del Rey, American General Winfield Scott quickly attacked the fortress of Chapultepec, just west of the capital. After heavy fighting, with almost 2,000 Mexican casualties, Scott entered Mexico City the next day and army commander General Antonio de Santa Anna withdrew towards Puebla (12 September 1847).

Chapultepec ❙ 1859 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

See Tacubaya

Charasia ❙ 1879 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

In response to the murder of Sir Louis Cavagnari, British Envoy to Afghanistan, General Sir Frederick Roberts was despatched to again occupy Kabul. Twelve miles south at Charasia, Roberts met a large Afghan force and defeated them with heavy losses. Four days later he reached Kabul and Amir Yakub Khan abdicated, retiring to British protection in India (6 October 1879).

Chardak Pass ❙ 1176 ❙ Byzantine-Turkish Wars

See Myriocephalum

Charenton ❙ 1649 ❙ War of the 1st Fronde

When the Paris Parlement rebelled against taxes and Cardinal Jules Mazarin, during the minority of Louis XIV, the royal family was forced to flee. Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé took an 8,000-strong Royal army against the rebels, and in heavy fighting seized the fortress of Charenton outside Paris. The Parlement sued for peace, but a fresh war began the following year (8 February 1649).

Charford ❙ 508 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Ten years after victory over Arthur at Badon, the Saxon warrior Cerdic and his son Cynric met the British leader Natanleod on the Avon, at a site near modern Charford (later known as Cerdicesford for the King). The invaders reputedly killed 5,000 Britons and, after Cerdic received further Saxon reinforcements, he defeated the Britons again ten years later at the same site.

Charford ❙ 519 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

The Saxon warrior Cerdic was reinforced by a fresh migration of his countrymen and met a force of Britons on the Avon, at a site near modern Charford (later known as Cerdicesford for the King). As in battle at the same site ten years earlier, Cerdic defeated the Britons. Shortly afterwards he took the title of King of the West Saxons, consolidating establishment of the Kingdom of Wessex.

Charikar ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Besieged by rebel tribesmen at Charikar, 35 miles north of Kabul, the Gurkha garrison under Lieutenant John Haughton decided to evacuate, leaving their wounded and families. In the so-called Massacre of Charikar, only the badly wounded Haughton, the political agent Major Eldred Pottinger and a handful of others out of 200 survived the march to Kabul (5–14 November 1841).

Charjui ❙ 1740 ❙ Persian-Uzbek Wars

Nadir Shah of Persia defeated Mughal India at Karnal (February 1739), then resolved to punish the Uzbeks for raiding his northern province of Khorasan. Marching northwest along the Oxus (Amy Darya), he beat Abdul Fayz Khan, King of Bokhara at Charjui (modern Chardzhou), southwest of Bokhara. Abdul Fayz surrendered and Nadir soon defeated the Uzbeks of Khiva (September 1740).

Charleroi ❙ 1672 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

As Louis XIV of France dispersed his army across a number of fronts in Holland, William of Orange attempted a bold attack on Charleroi, in modern Belgium. The Dutch Prince besieged the city, but facing severe winter conditions and with insufficient resources, he was driven off by a French and Flemish relief force under Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé (15 December 1672).

Charleroi ❙ 1693 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

After victory at Neerwinden in July, French Marshal Duke Francois Henri of Luxembourg advanced on Charleroi, strongly defended by Francisco de Castillo Marquis of Villaderias. Francois de Neufville Marshal Villeroi and Marshal Sebastien Vauban then besieged Charleroi and, after suffering costly losses in heavy fighting, they took the city by storm (5 September–1 October 1693).

Charleroi ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

French General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan marched north into the Netherlands, where he besieged Charleroi, then sent forces to defeat the Austrians in the field at Hooglede. Threatened by the approaching Allied relief army of Friedrich Josias Prince of Saxe-Coburg, Jourdan shelled Charleroi and forced its surrender. Saxe-Coburg arrived too late and lost next day at Fleurus (12–25 June 1794).

Charleroi ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Turning north from the Ardennes to face the unexpected German invasion through Belgium, French commander Joseph Joffre sent Charles Lanzerac to meet Generals Karl von Bulow and Max von Hausen on the Sambre. After heavy fighting around Charleroi, the Belgians abandoned nearby Namur, and the French withdrew, exposing the late-arriving British at Mons (21–23 August 1914).

Charleston, Massachusetts ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

During the prolonged American siege of Boston, Major Thomas Knowlton led a daring raid on the British headquarters at Charleston, close to Bunker Hill on the Charleston Peninsula. Knowlton destroyed some barracks and took a handful of prisoners, but his raid had little strategic significance. He was killed later that year in a skirmish at Harlem Heights (8 January 1776).

Charleston, South Carolina ❙ 1706 ❙ Queen Anne's War

On the offensive in North America, a French squadron from Havana supported by Spanish troops attacked Charleston, South Carolina, which was suffering yellow fever. A courageous defence by Governor Sir Nathaniel Johnson and Colonel William Rhett saw one ship taken and the landing repulsed, with about 300 out of 800 killed or captured (27 August–2 September 1706).

Charleston, South Carolina ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Fort Sullivan

Charleston, South Carolina ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Three months after a check at Beaufort, British commander General Augustine Prevost advanced from the Savannah to Charleston, South Carolina, defended by Colonel William Moultrie. Having insufficient forces for an assault, Prevost attempted to negotiate surrender. However, he withdrew when American reinforcements approached, leaving a rearguard at Stono Ferry (11–12 May 1779).

Charleston, South Carolina ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British commander Sir Henry Clinton was encouraged by success at Savannah in October and took about 14,000 men from New York against Charleston, South Carolina, held by General Benjamin Lincoln. After Clinton invested the city (10 April), heavy fighting and bombardment forced Lincoln to surrender. Over 5,000 men were captured in one of America's worst defeats (29 March–12 May 1780).

Charleston, South Carolina ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Despite surrender at Yorktown (October 1781), the British held on in the south at Savannah, Georgia, and at Charleston, South Carolina, besieged by General Nathanael Greene. Savannah surrendered to General Anthony Wayne (11 July 1782), but it was many more months before General Alexander Leslie evacuated Charleston and fighting ended (December 1781–14 December 1782).

Charleston Harbour (1st) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

The Union's South Atlantic Squadron attempted to force Charleston Harbour, South Carolina, by naval action, where Admiral Samuel F. Du Pont took nine ships to bombard Fort Sumter, held by General Pierre G. T. Beauregard. The Union squadron was repulsed with heavy damage in the face of accurate artillery fire, and one ship sank the following day (7 April 1863).

Charleston Harbour (2nd) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

While besieging Fort Wagner, at the entrance to Charleston Harbour, South Carolina, Union General Quincy A. Gillmore opened fire on nearby Fort Sumter, defended by General Pierre G. T. Beauregard. After three weeks' bombardment, a storming party under John A. Dahlgren was repulsed, and Charleston held out until it fell to land assault in February 1865 (17 August–8 September 1863).

Charlestown, West Virginia ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Summit Point

Charlotte ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

With British General Charles Earl Cornwallis marching north from victory at Camden in August, his advance cavalry led by Major George Hanger was delayed at the town of Charlotte, North Carolina, by a militia rearguard under Colonel William Davie. The rebels were driven back in a brisk action, but news of defeat at King's Mountain persuaded Cornwallis to withdraw (26 September 1780).

Charouine ❙ 1901 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

A force of Moroccan Berbers withdrawing from a costly assault on Timimoun in western Algeria was intercepted 30 miles to the southwest at Charouine by General Armand Servière and Captain Theodore Pein. A badly handled and dilatory action saw the French lose 27 killed and 41 wounded before the Moroccans withdrew west into the Tafilalet (28 February–3 March 1901).

Chascomús ❙ 1839 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

Argentine Dictator Manuel de Rosas won in the north at Yerua in September, then sent his brother Prudencia against Unitarist rebels south of Buenos Aires at Chascomús, where he imposed a crushing defeat. Ambrosio Crámer was killed in the battle, with Pedro Castelli and Manuel Leonico Rico captured and executed, enabling Rosas to concentrate his effort in the north (7 November 1839).

Chashniki ❙ 1564 ❙ Livonian War

A year after Muscovites took the Lithuanian-held city of Polotsk, a Russian army of perhaps 30,000 men under Pyotr Shuiski was attacked further south at Chashniki, on the Ulla River, by a smaller Polish-Lithuanian force led by Prince

Nikolai "The Black" Radziwill. A terrible rout saw Shuiski defeated and killed and the Russians soon lost again northwest of Polotsk at Nevel (January 1564).

Chataldja ❙ 1912 ❙ 1st Balkan War

Turkish forces were crushed by Bulgaria at Kirk Kilissa and Lüleburgaz in October and fled to the defensive lines at Chataldja, about 25 miles from Constantinople. Cholera and repeated attacks by General Radko Dimitriev cost both sides terrible losses before an armistice saw the Bulgarians fell back exhausted. Enver Bey successfully defended the lines until the end of the war (17–18 November 1912).

Chateaudun ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

German General Friedrich Wilhelm Ludwig von Wittich was sent northwest from Orleans, where he attacked Chateaudun on the Loire, held by 2,500 French irregulars led by the Pole Joseph de Lipowski. Chateaudun was captured and largely destroyed after savage street fighting and nearby Chartres quickly surrendered. Chateaudun was retaken by the French on 6 November (18 October 1870).

Chateau Gaillard ❙ 1203–1204 ❙ Anglo-French Wars

In resumed war with King John of England, Philip II Augustus of France besieged the powerful castle of Chateau Gaillard, built on the Seine at Andelys by Richard I. While a relief force under William Marshal Earl of Pembroke was driven off in September, the eventual fall of Roger de Lacy's garrison led to England's loss of Normandy and Anjou (August 1203–6 March 1204).

Chateaugay ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

Invading Canada from Lake Champlain, American General Wayne Hampton advanced down the Chateaugay River against defences established by Sir George Prevost. An American detachment under Colonel Robert Purdy was sharply repulsed by Canadian militia led by Colonel Charles-Michel Salaberry and Hampton was forced to withdraw. He later resigned (26 October 1813).

Chateauneuf-de-Randon ❙ 1380 ❙ Hundred Years War

With Edward III of England in the ascendant following victory near Poitiers in 1356, French hopes focussed on Betrand de Guesclin, who fought a guerrilla-style war before besieging the fortress at Chateauneuf-de-Randon, near Mende. The elderly warrior eventually forced the English garrison to surrender, but he died exhausted a week later and France agreed to a lengthy truce (May–4 July 1380).

Chateau-Thierry ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

In a brilliant campaign east of Paris against the Prussian-Russian army of General Gebhard von Blucher, Napoleon Bonaparte repulsed his enemy at Champaubert and Montmirail. On the third day, Bonaparte drove a large force under General Hans Yorck at Chateau-Thierry back across the Marne, then turned against Blucher himself at Vauchamps (12 February 1814).

Chateau-Thierry ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Having smashed through the Anglo-French Allies along the Aisne, the offensive by Generals Bruno von Mudra and Max von Boehn was met on the Marne at Chateau-Thierry by newly arrived Americans under General John Dickman. The German offensive was halted and driven back across the river and days later the Americans counter-attacked further west at Belleau Wood (3–4 June 1918).

Chatham ❙ 1667 ❙ 2nd Dutch War

See Medway

Chatham ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Thames

Chatillon-le-Duc ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

German General Karl August Werder and Baron Kolmar von der Goltz advanced southwest from the capture of Strasbourg in September, crossing the Vosges to attack General Albert Cambriels at Chatillon-le-Duc, northwest of Besançon. The commander of the French army in the east was heavily defeated in heavy fighting along the Ognon and fell back on Besancon (22 October 1870).

Chatillon-sous-Bagneux ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

As German forces encircled Paris, General Auguste Alexandre Ducrot attempted to hold the Chatillon Heights to the southwest. Despite a courageous defence against heavy shell-fire from General Jakob von Hartmann's Bavarians advancing through Sceaux towards Versailles, Ducrot was forced back to Paris and the Germans occupied the redoubt at Moulin de la Tour (19 September 1870).

Chatillon-sur-Seine ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

When Italian Liberator Giuseppe Garibaldi intervened to support France, his son Ricciotti and the 4th Brigade attacked 800 Germans at Chatillon-sur-Seine, 40 miles north of Dijon, where the Germans lost 120 killed and 165 prisoners. Although Chatillon was quickly retaken, this modest victory encouraged Garibaldi to launch an ambitious assault on Dijon (19 November 1870).

Chatillon-sur-Sevre ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Following early victories, the Royalist counter-revolution in western France met with considerable success until Republican General Jean-Baptiste Kléber arrived from Mainz with a veteran army to suppress the rising. Kléber routed the rebels at Chatillon-sur-Sevre, southeast of Cholet, then wore them down with successive defeats at Cholet, Le Mans and Savenay (3 July 1793).

Chatra ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Campaigning against rebels in Chota Nagpur in western Bihar, Major Frederick English took just 350 men and two guns and, having secured Doranda, marched north against an estimated 3,000 Ramgarh rebels at Chatra, in the Hazaribagh district, south of Gaya. The rebels were defeated and fled after a sharp action, abandoning a massive amount of military stores (2 October 1857).

Chattanooga ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On a bold offensive into eastern Tennessee, Union commander Ormsby M. Mitchel sent General James Negley's division against the strategic Confederate city of Chattanooga. Two days of bombardment across the Tennessee River caused heavy damage, but when Confederate General Edmund Kirby Smith arrived in the area, Negley withdrew west across the mountains (7–8 June 1862).

Chattanooga (1st) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union commander William S. Rosecrans, opening his campaign against Chattanooga, Tennessee, ordered Colonel John T. Wilder on a diversion northeast of the city, where he launched a heavy artillery bombardment from heights above the Tennessee River. Meanwhile, Rosecrans was able to advance in the southwest, though he was defeated next month at Chickamauga (21 August 1863).

Chattanooga (2nd) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Besieged in Chattanooga, Tennessee, after defeat at Chickamauga (September 1863), Union commander William S. Rosecrans was replaced by General George H. Thomas, who was reinforced and led a fresh offensive to the northeast at Missionary Ridge. Confederate General Braxton Bragg was heavily defeated and began withdrawing south through Ringgold Gap (23–25 November 1863).

Chauca ❙ 1528 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Yucatan

See Aké

Chaul ❙ 1508 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

Attempting to expand Portuguese influence in India, Lorenzo de Almeida, son of the Viceroy, engaged a large fleet sent to northwest India by Sultan Kansu al-Ghuri of Egypt supporting Sultan Mahmud Shah of Gujarat. Trapped by a river bar off Dabhol, near Chaul, Almeida was defeated and died after a cannonball shattered his legs. A year later his father was avenged off Diu (January 1508).

Chau Nhai ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

Americans and South Vietnamese, attacking south of Chu Lai, landed near Chau Nhai, northwest of Quang Ngai City (Operation Utah), and came under heavy fire from Viet Cong and North Vietnamese regulars. After costly assaults against strong positions, the Allies withdrew to a defensive perimeter and intense air and artillery attack finally forced the Communists to retire (4–7 March 1966).

Chausa ❙ 1539 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

Leading Indian-Muslim forces against the Mughal Humayun, the Afghan-Turk rebel Sher Khan overthrew the Sultan of Bengal, then defeated the Imperial army at Chausa on the Ganges near Buxar. The Mughals retreated up the Ganges Valley and, after a further defeat at Kanauj in 1540, Humayun fled to Persia. Sher Khan (later Sher Shah) became Sultan of Delhi and, effectively, ruler of the empire (26 June 1539).

Chaves ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

French Marshal Nicolas Soult, invading Portugal from the north, crossed the border near Chaves and defeated a poorly armed peasant force under Brigadier Francisco Silveira. The town of Chaves surrendered next day, and Soult continued on towards Oporto. However, Chaves was retaken by Silveira later the same month, its capture having yielded little strategic importance (11 March 1809).

Chawinda ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

As part of India's offensive into Pakistan towards Sialkot, a fierce tank battle developed to the southeast around the key city of Chawinda. Following Indian attacks to the north at Phillora and west at Buttar Dograndi, a final night assault (18–19 September) reached Chawinda, but was thrown back. Facing a bloody battle of attrition, the enemies brought the war to an end (8–20 September 1965).

Cheat Summit ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On his first offensive, Confederate General Robert E. Lee, with Colonel Albert Rust, advanced on General Joseph Reynolds at Cheat Summit, southeast of Huttonsville, West Virginia, and to the west near Elkwater. Lee withdrew after a poorly co-ordinated attack against stubborn resistance and a month later Reynolds counter-attacked 12 miles further east at Greenbrier River (12 September 1861).

Chekiang-Kiangsi ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (China)

See Zhejiang-Jiangxi

Chelambram ❙ 1781 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

See Porto Novo

Chelmno ❙ 1794 ❙ War of the 2nd Polish Partition

Three days after the disastrous Polish defeat at Szczekociny, a separate insurgent force under General Josef Zajaczek was brought to battle on the Vistula at Chelmno (Kulm) near Bydgoszcz in northwest Poland. Prussians under the personal command of King Frederick William III inflicted another decisive defeat and continued marching east to besiege Warsaw (9 June 1794).

Chelyabinsk ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War

When the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk ended Russia's war with Germany, 40,000 Czech and Slovak prisoners of war were released by the Bolsheviks and sent east to safety along the Trans-Siberian Railway. At Chelyabinsk, they rioted against Hungarian Communists and took the city a week later. They then seized the railway and beat the Bolsheviks at Ekaterinburg (14–17 May 1918).

Chelyabinsk ❙ 1919 ❙ Russian Civil War

Mikhail Tukhachevski's Red Army took Ekaterinburg (15 July) as part of a massive counter-offensive into the Urals, while further south they stormed east through Zlatoust (13 July) and General Mikhail Frunze advanced on Chelyabinsk. The Whites were badly beaten for a third time, driving them out of the southern Urals, and Admiral Aleksandr Kolchak withdrew to the Tobol (25 July 1919).

Chemille ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Near the start of the Royalist rebellion in western France, Vendéean leader Maurice d'Elbée advancing south of the Loire captured Chemille, then faced a counter-attack by Republican General Jean-Francois Berruyer. Berruyer withdrew after a confused battle, but d'Elbée had lost his guns and lacked ammunition, so he also withdrew, falling back on Cholet (11 April 1793).

Chemin des Dames ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Aisne

Chemnitz ❙ 1639 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Swedish commander Johan Banér advanced into Saxony, where he scattered the Imperial forces of Count Matthias Gallas then, at Chemnitz, 40 miles southwest of Dresden, met a Saxon-Austrian army under John George of Saxony and Archduke Leopold William. Banér secured a brilliant tactical victory and advanced into Bohemia as far as Prague, routing his pursuers at Brandeis (14 April 1639).

Chemulpo ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

On the first day of the war, the Russian gunboat Koreetz exchanged fire with Japanese Admiral Sotokichi Uriu approaching Chemulpo (modern Inchon, Korea). The following day, at the same time as a surprise Japanese attack on Port Arthur (modern Lüshun), Koreetz and the cruiser Varyag were damaged by shellfire outside the harbour and returned to scuttle themselves (8–9 February 1904).

Ch'en-chia ❙ 1161 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

See Chenjia

Chengam ❙ 1767 ❙ 1st British-Mysore War

When Haidar Ali of Mysore established an alliance with the treacherous Nizam Ali of Hyderabad, British Colonel Joseph Smith tried to block their advance in central Madras at the Pass of Chengam. However, Smith was defeated and driven back to Trinomalee, 20 miles to the southeast where, three weeks later, the British inflicted a severe defeat on the Indian allies (3 September 1767).

Chengdu ❙ 36 ❙ Wars of the Later Han

After defeating the warlords of the north China plain at Changlu (29), Emperor Guangwu sent an army under Wu Han west against Gongsun Shu in his capital at Chengdu, in modern Sichuan. Guangwu's last remaining major rival was drawn out on a rash sortie and was defeated and killed. The city then surrendered and was sacked by the Han army, effectively ending resistance.

Chenggao ❙ 204 BC ❙ Chu-Han War

Driven out of Yingyang, Han warlord Liu Bang struck back at rival Xiang Yu and beat a Chu army at Chenggao. Later that year, Xiang Yu returned with his main force and another battle at Chenggao saw Liu Bang heavily defeated. The rivals soon made peace and Liu Bang regained his wife and father, taken hostage at Pengcheng. Liu Bang eventually broke the truce and secured final victory at Gaixia.

Cheng-Jung ❙ 404 ❙ Wars of the Sixteen Kingdoms Era

See Zhengrong

Chengpu ❙ 632 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

When the southern state of Chu expanded north across the Yellow River, the state of Jin and its northern allies joined forces under the great Duke Wen of Jin. In a massive battle at Chengpu, the Jin smashed into the enemy right wing, crushing their weak Che and Cai auxiliaries. Chu commander Ziyu was then routed, and he later committed suicide. The defeat decisively checked Chu territorial ambition.

Chenguanzhuang ❙ 1949 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Facing the Huaihai offensive, Nationalist General Du Yuming abandoned Xuzhou and, after failing to relieve Shuangduiji, was surrounded to the southwest at Chenguanzhuang, near Yungchen (6 December 1948). When Communist Generals Chen Yi and Liu Bocheng launched the final assault, Du was captured, along with 200,000 men and all their tanks and arms (6–10 January 1949).

Chenjia ❙ 1161 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

During a huge Jin assault on southern China, an armada claimed to comprise 600 ships and 100,000 men was intercepted off Chenjia Island, south of modern Qingdao, by a much smaller Song force under veteran commander Li Bao. The inexperienced Jin fleet was virtually annihilated and, a few days later, the main Jin invasion army was routed trying to cross the Yangzi at Caishi (16 November 1161).

Chenkiang ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Zhenjiang

Chenkiang ❙ 1856 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Zhenjiang

Chenzhou ❙ 883–884 ❙ Huang Chao Rebellion

After defeat at Liangtian, warlord Huang Chao abandoned Chang'an and moved east, where his ally Meng Kai seized Caizhou but was defeated and killed attacking Chenzhou. Huang launched a full-scale siege of the city, which held out under prefect Zhao Chou. The failed year-long siege enabled loyalist forces to regroup and Huang withdrew to Shandong, where he was cornered and killed himself.

Cherbourg ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Despite the failed assault at Cancale in June, a second British expedition under Commodore Sir Richard Howe and General Thomas Bligh landed at Marais Bay, just east of Cherbourg. The French withdrew, and Bligh's force destroyed the harbour works and many ships, as well as capturing 200 guns, before re-embarking. They returned to Brittany a month later, at St Cast (7–16 August 1758).

Cherbourg ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (High Seas)

At the end of a very successful cruise, the Confederate raider Alabama (Commander Raphael Semmes) was met in the English Channel off Cherbourg by the Union ship Kearsage (Captain John A. Winslow) and sunk by gunfire. For her failure to detain the British-built Alabama, Britain was later ordered to pay the United States compensation for damage caused (19 June 1864).

Cherbourg ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

After the great Allied landing in Normandy, American General Lawton Collins swung west to cut off the Cotentin Peninsula and the key port of Cherbourg. Facing tenacious German defence, the assault went in after heavy air attack and naval bombardment. Cherbourg finally surrendered, yielding about 35,000 prisoners, but extensive demolition delayed its use as a supply port (21–29 June 1944).

Cheriton ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Alresford

Cherkassy ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

See Korsun

Chernaya ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War

In a last attempt to break the Allied siege of Sevastopol, Russian commander Prince Mikhail Gorchakov sent a force towards Traktir Bridge on the nearby Chernaya River, defended by French and Sardinians under General Alfonso Ferrero Marquis di La Marmora. The Russians were driven back with heavy losses in hard fighting and a few weeks later Sevastopol finally fell (16 August 1855).

Chernigov ❙ 1078 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

See Nezhatina Niva

Chernigov ❙ 1094 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

Oleg Sviatoslavich returned from 15 years' exile, after defeat at Nezhatina Niva, seeking aid from the Kipchak Turks (fresh from victory over Kiev at Tripole) to regain the throne of Chernigov from his cousin Vladimir Monomakh. Vladimir was defeated and fled after an eight-day siege, but two years later, he returned to depose Oleg and eventually became Grand Prince of Kiev (16–24 July 1094).

Chernigovka ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

With the fall of Kiev, Panzer General Ewald von Kleist raced south towards the Sea of Azov, cutting off two Russian armies around Chernigovka. The Soviet Eighteenth Army was destroyed, with General Andrei Smirnov killed, and the Ninth Army was badly battered. The pocket yielded 100,000 Russian prisoners, 200 tanks and 500 guns, and the survivors fell back on Rostov (5–10 October 1941).

Cherry Valley ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Following the Wyoming Massacre at the hands of British Major John Butler, his son Captain Mark Butler attacked pro-rebel settlers in the Cherry Valley, New York, on the upper Susquehanna. In a brutal assault, supported by Indian Chief Joseph Brant, the settlement was destroyed, with many killed, including women and children. Retaliation came in August 1779 at Newtown (11 November 1778).

Chersonesus ❙ 443 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire

Attila the Hun renewed his invasion of the Eastern Empire after destroying Sirmium in 441, defeating the Imperial army under Flavius Aspar the Alan outside Constantinople. He then pursued them into the Chersonesus, the Gallipoli Peninsula on the European side of the Dardanelles. Aspar suffered a decisive defeat and Emperor Theodosius was forced to sue for peace with the Huns.

Chesapeake Capes (1st) ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Sailing from Newport to support the rebels in Virginia, French Commodore Sochet Destouches was met off Chesapeake Bay by a similar-sized British squadron under Admiral Marriott Arbuthnot. While Arbuthnot was outmanoeuvred in an indecisive action with three ships badly damaged, Destouches decided to return to Newport. Arbuthnot was replaced soon afterwards (16 March 1781).

Chesapeake Capes (2nd) ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Reinforced by Britain's West Indian fleet, Admiral Thomas Graves sailed from New York to Chesapeake Bay to support the army in Virginia, where he was met by French Admiral Francois Comte de Grasse. The poorly handled British ships returned to New York after an indecisive action, and weeks later the army surrendered at Yorktown, effectively deciding the war (5–9 September 1781).

Chesapeake* vs Shannon ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Boston Harbour

Chesme ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

Russian Admiral Alexei Orlov sailed from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, where he attacked Admiral Husam ul-Din Pasha off the Turkish coast near Chios and drove him into nearby Chesme Bay, where Scots-born Vice Admiral

John Elphinston attacked the following night with fire ships. One Turkish ship was captured and the rest were burned, with losses estimated at 9,000 men (7–8 July 1770).

Chester ❙ 615 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Turning south after victory over the Scots at Daegsaston in 603, King Aethelfrith of Northumbria marched on Chester, where he inflicted a terrible defeat on the Welsh of Powys. He then seized Chester and razed Bangor, the victory dividing the northern and southern Welsh forces and giving Aethelfrith strategic access to the Irish Sea. He was defeated and killed two years later at the Idle.

Chester ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Rowton Heath

Chesterfield ❙ 1266 ❙ 2nd English Barons' War

With Simon de Montfort Earl of Leicester killed at Evesham (August 1265), remaining rebel Barons led by Robert de Ferrers Earl of Derby gathered a force in Derbyshire. At Chesterfield, in the last pitched battle of the war, the rebel Barons were defeated by Henry III's nephew Henry of Almaine. Remaining resistance to the King was largely confined to the Fens around Ely (15 May 1266).

Chester Station ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On an offensive against the railway north of Confederate Petersburg, Virginia, General Benjamin F. Butler attacked Port Walthall Junction (7 May), then marched northwest to destroy track at Chester Station. There he came under attack by General Robert Ransom's division of General Pierre G. T. Beauregard's Confederate army and retired east to the Bermuda Hundred lines (10 May 1864).

Chestnut Hill ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See White Marsh

Chetate ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

See Citate

Chevelon Fork ❙ 1882 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

See Big Dry Wash

Chevelu ❙ 218 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Marching into the Alps from Gaul, Carthaginian General Hannibal Barca was blocked at the Chevelu Pass, west of Lake du Bourget, by a large tribal force of Allobroges. Hannibal routed the tribesmen with massive losses with a surprise night attack. He then captured their capital further south at Chambéry before advancing through the Isère Valley past the White Rock (October 218 BC).

Chevilly ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

General Joseph Vinoy led a reconnaissance in force south from besieged Paris, taking 20,000 men along the left bank of the Seine towards the villages of L'Hay and Chevilly. However, he was heavily repulsed by General Wilhelm von Tumpling and fell back with the loss of more than 2,000 men. A second sortie by Vinoy two weeks later at Bagneux was also repulsed (30 September 1870).

Chevy Chase ❙ 1388 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Border Wars

See Otterburn

Chhamb ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

Driven back in the north around Haji Pir (28 August), Pakistani forces in the southwest under General Akhtar Malik (later General Yayha Khan) crossed into Indian Kashmir with about 100 tanks and seized Chhamb. However, the Pakistani invasion stalled against stubborn defence and Chhamb was retaken at the start of India's counter-offensive towards Lahore (1–4 September 1965).

Chhamb ❙ 1971 ❙ 3rd Indo-Pakistan War

When India supported rebels in East Pakistan, Pakistan bombed Indian airfields, and General Iftikhar Khan Janjua advanced from Sialkot against Chhamb. Indian General Sartaj Singh was forced to withdraw, but a large-scale armoured action saw the pursuing Pakistanis heavily defeated, with massive losses in men and tanks. Pakistan soon lost again further south at Shakargarh (3–10 December 1971).

Chiang-kou ❙ 1851 ❙ Taiping Rebellion
See Jiangkou

Chiang-ling ❙ 1236 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China
See Jiangling

Chiari ❙ 1701 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession
Francois de Neufville Marshal Villeroi was appointed to French command in Lombardy after the defeat in July at Carpi, and attempted an offensive across the Oglio against the Austrian army of Prince Eugène of Savoy. At Chiari, west of Brescia, Villeroi was repulsed by Eugène with heavy losses. He then withdrew to Cremona, while Eugène blockaded the French at Mantua (1 September 1701).

Chibi ❙ 208 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms
See Red Cliffs

Chichén Itzá ❙ 1531 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Yucatan
After a previous unsuccessful attempt to seize Yucatan, Francisco de Monteja led a fresh expedition, which secured Campeche in the west. His son Francisco then advanced inland to establish a capital at Chichén Itzá (southeast of modern Merida). But after continuous heavy attack by the Maya, the younger Montejo abandoned his settlement. All Spanish forces soon withdrew to Mexico.

Chickahominy ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Cold Harbour

Chickamauga ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
After securing the key city of Chattanooga, Tennessee, Union commander William S. Rosecrans marched southeast against the Confederate army at Chickamauga. In some of the war's bloodiest fighting, Confederate commander Braxton Bragg, supported by General James Longstreet, secured a costly victory and Rosecrans withdrew under siege to Chattanooga (18–20 September 1863).

Chickasaw Bluffs ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
Union forces under General William T. Sherman advancing south against Vicksburg on the Mississippi attempted to force through the Confederate defences to the north at Chickasaw Bluffs, Mississippi, held by General John C. Pemberton. Sherman lost almost 2,000 men in a failed frontal assault and was forced to withdraw upstream to Milliken's Bend (26–29 December 1862).

Chiclana ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
See Barrosa

Chien-k'ang ❙ 548–549 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties
See Jiankang

Chien-k'ang ❙ 589 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties
See Jiankang

Ch'ien-shui-yuan ❙ 618 ❙ Rise of the Tang Dynasty
See Qianshuiyuan

Chieri ❙ 1639 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)
While campaigning in northern Italy, French commander Henri Comte d'Harcourt and Henri de Turenne advanced to resupply Casale, east of Turin. At nearby Chieri, with just 8,000 men, Harcourt defeated an Imperial-Savoyard army of 20,000, inflicting almost 4,000 casualties and prisoners. Casale was relieved and the Spanish were defeated there again a year later (20 November 1639).

Chieveley ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

On a reconnaisance south of besieged Ladysmith, Captain James A. L. Haldane led an armoured train north from Estcourt. Just past Frere at Chieveley, the train was ambushed and derailed by Boers under Commandant B. van der Merwe. The British lost five killed, 45 wounded and 70 captured, including Haldane and Winston Churchill, who both later escaped (15 November 1899).

Chigirin ❙ 1677 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine

A renewed Turkish attempt on the Ukraine following defeat at Zurawno (1676) saw Kara Ibrahim Pasha and 100,000 men cross the Dneiper and besiege Chigirin, held by 32,000 Russians under Grigori Romodanovski and 25,000 Cossacks led by Ivan Samoilovych. Ibrahim withdrew after stubborn defence and was dismissed, but Chigirin fell the next year to a fresh assault (July–August 1677).

Chigirin ❙ 1678 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine

Despite previous failure, Grand Vizier Kara Mustafa himself led 100,000 Turks and Tatars against Chigirin on the Dnieper, held by 80,000 Russians and Cossacks under Grigori Romodanovski and Ivan Samoilovych, and Scottish General Patrick Gordon. The city was stormed and burned but, three years later, the Turks withdrew from the Ukraine and made peace with Russia (August 1678).

Chihaya ❙ 1333 ❙ Genko War

With western Japan rising for Emperor Go-Daigo against Regent Hojo Takatoki, Kusunoki Masashige escaped from Akasaka (1331) and took a defensive position at the mountain fortress of Chihaya near Nara. A legendary defence saw the Shogun's besieging army driven off with terrible losses, greatly enhancing the Imperial cause and leading to offensives against Kyoto and Kamakura.

Chihchiang ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (China)

See Zhijiang

Chi Hoa ❙ 1860–1861 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

French forces seized Saigon in 1859, which soon came under siege by the veteran Vietnamese Marshal Nguyen Tri Phoung, fresh from driving their opponents out of Danang. Almost a year later, a French relief force under Admiral Léonard Charner defeated the besieging force at nearby Chi Hoa. Emperor Tu Duc eventually sued for peace, ceding southern Vietnam (March 1860–25 February 1861).

Chihuahua ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

See Sacramento River

Chihuahua ❙ 1913 ❙ Mexican Revolution

Francisco (Pancho) Villa captured Torréon in central Mexico, then took his revolutionary army against Chihuahua. After five days of heavy fighting he withdrew, and the Federals claimed victory. However, after Villa took Ciudad Juárez, then defeated the Federal army at Tierra Blanca, Chihuahua was evacuated (29 November). He entered the city a week later (5–10 November 1913).

Chikou ❙ 1937 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

See Taiyuan

Chiksan ❙ 1597 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

Advancing on Seoul through Namwon, the Japanese army was blocked to the southeast at Chiksan by a Chinese-Korean garrison under Ma Gui. Desperate to hold the town, reinforcements were poured in and, soon after naval defeat at Myongyang, the Japanese were forced to withdraw—Kato Kiyomasa to Ulsan, Konishi Yukinaga to Sunchon and Shimazu Yoshihiro to Sachon (October 1597).

Chi Lang Pass ❙ 1427 ❙ Sino-Vietnamese War

While Le Loi and General Nguyen Trai besieged Dong-do (later Hanoi) to end Chinese overlordship, a claimed 100,000 Ming reinforcements under Liu Sheng were ambushed and routed to the northwest near Lang Son at Chi Lang Pass, with up to 70,000 lost. When China then abandoned Dong-do and withdrew from Vietnam, Le Loi founded the 350-year Le Dynasty (October 1427).

Chilchon ❙ 1597 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Kyo Chong

Chilianwallah ❙ 1849 ❙ 2nd British-Sikh War

With British forces besieging the Sikhs at Multan, northwest of Lahore, General Sir Hugh Gough advanced alone against a powerful Sikh position on the Jhelam at Chilianwallah. Terrible fighting saw Gough drive commander Sher Singh from the field. However, his own very heavy losses forced Gough to withdraw until reinforcements arrived to help him win at Gujrat (13 January 1849).

Chillicothe ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Piqua

Chiloé ❙ 1826 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

Despite the decisive Spanish defeat at Ayacucho in 1824, 2,000 Royalists under Antonio Quintanilla held out on the island of Chiloé, in the Los Lagos region off the coast of southern Chile, which Quintanilla had defended in 1820. Facing renewed attack by a Chilean Patriot force under Ramón Freire, the garrison was forced to surrender and Spain lost her last foothold in Chile (15 January 1826).

Chilung ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War

Supporting war against China in Vietnam, Admiral Sébastien Lespès took two ships and bombarded the port of Chilung (Keelung) in northern Taiwan. Troops landed to secure the port but were insufficient to hold it, and the French withdrew to establish a blockade. In October, an attack on nearby Tanshui and further bombardment persuaded Chilung to surrender in March 1885 (5 August 1884).

Chi-mo ❙ 279 BC ❙ China's Era of the Warring States

See Jimo

Chinchow ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

See Nanshan

Chinchow ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Jinzhou

Chinese Farm ❙ 1973 ❙ Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War

At the start of Israel's counter-offensive to retake the Sinai Peninsula, advanced units became isolated by the Second Egyptian Army around fortifications at Chinese Farm, near Matzmed, north of the Great Bitter Lake. After intense and costly fighting, Israeli Generals Ariel Sharon and Avraham Adan relieved their hard-pressed forces, then swept west across the Suez Canal (16–18 October 1973).

Ching-hsing ❙ 205 BC ❙ Chu-Han War

See Jingxing

Chingleput ❙ 1752 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Following French defeat at Trichinopoly (10 April), Robert Clive marched south from Madras against the remaining French fortresses. Having captured the coastal fortress of Covelung, Clive took his mixed British-Sepoy force inland to Chingleput on the Palar River, defended by a mainly native garrison. The French commander surrendered after four days' bombardment (13 October 1752).

Ching-lu-chen ❙ 1410 ❙ Ming Imperial Wars

See Jing Luzhen

Chinhae Bay ❙ 1598 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Noryang

Chinhai ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Zhenhai

Chinhat ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

With rebel forces approaching the key city of Lucknow, General Sir Henry Lawrence unwisely took 300 British and 400 Indian troops eight miles to the northeast to Chinhat, where they met over 5,000 Sepoys under Barkat Ahmad. Lawrence retreated after a heavy defeat cost him four precious guns as well as many men lost, and the following day Lucknow was besieged (30 June 1857).

Chinkurli ❙ 1771 ❙ Maratha-Mysore Wars

On his final campaign, Maratha Peshwa Madhav Rao marched into the Carnatic in southeast India against his perennial enemy, Haidar Ali of Mysore. The Peshwa ravaged Mysore then fell fatally ill. His General, Trimbak Rao Pethe, concluded the campaign with decisive victory at Chinkurli near Seringapatam. It was Haidar Ali's worst defeat and he soon sued for peace (5 March 1771).

Chinsura ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

Although Britain and Holland were not at war, Dutch in Java sent 1,400 men to support Nawab Mir Jafar of Bengal, plotting against the British who had put him on the throne after Plassey. With the concurrence of Governor Robert Clive, Colonel Francis Forde attacked the invaders on the Hooghly between Chinsura and Chandrenagore, capturing all seven Dutch ships (25 November 1759).

Chin-Tien ❙ 1851 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Jintian

Chioggia ❙ 1379–1380 ❙ War of Chioggia

Admiral Pietro Doria followed Genoese naval victory off Pula (May 1379) by seizing Chioggia to blockade nearby Venice and Venetian Admiral Vittore Pisani, imprisoned after Pula, was released to counter-blockade the attackers. The Genoese surrendered Chioggia after months of assault (Doria was killed on 3 February) and Venetian primacy in the Adriatic was restored (December 1379–24 June 1380).

Chios ❙ 412 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

The Spartan Chalcideus and renegade Athenian Alcibiades took a fleet across the Aegean to attack Athenian settlements in Ionia and assaulted Chios, one of the wealthiest Greek colonies in the eastern Aegean. They seized the city after defeating the pro-Athenian faction and immediately used the island as a base to attack Miletus and other Athenian allies on the Greek mainland of Asia Minor.

Chios ❙ 357 BC ❙ 1st Greek Social War

In a revolt against Athens, Chios and Rhodes were joined by Mausolos of Caria, and their combined fleet met Athenian Admiral Chabrias off Chios, where Athenian mercenaries under Chares had also landed. Chabrias was defeated and killed in a decisive naval action. The mercenaries were re-embarked and withdrew. Athens was defeated again a year later off Embata.

Chios ❙ 201 BC ❙ 2nd Macedonian War

While campaigning in Asia Minor, Philip V of Macedon seized Samos then besieged Chios, where he was attacked by Attalus of Pergamum, aided by Admiral Theophiliscus of Rhodes. Despite the death of the Rhodian Admiral, his ships prevailed, but on the other wing Attalus was forced to withdraw, allowing Philip to capture Chios. The Macedonians then sailed south to meet the Rhodian fleet at Lade.

Chios ❙ 1694 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

Two years after Venetian defeat at Canea, Captain-General Antonio Zeno attacked Hassan Pasha's 3,000-strong garrison on Chios. After bombarding and mining breached the walls, the fortress surrendered and the Turks were allowed to withdraw to Chesme. While Zeno captured massive booty, including ships and 200 cannon, he was soon defeated off nearby Spalmadori (7–15 September 1694).

Chios ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

The Russian Baltic fleet sailed to the Mediterranean under Admiral Alexei Orlov and attacked Turkish Admiral Hassan ul-Din Pasha in the narrow channel between Chios and the Anatolian coast. Russian Admiral Girgori Spiridov in the van bore the brunt of battle and, after both flagships blew up, the Turks cut their cables during the night and fled south to nearby Chesme (6 July 1770).

Chios ❙ 1822 ❙ Greek War of Independence

While Turkish forces attempted to suppress the strategic island of Chios, Greek Admiral Konstantinos Kanaris led a daring raid on the rival fleet. Using fireships, he inflicted heavy damage, including the flagship Maizural-Livo lost with Turkish Admiral Kara Ali and virtually his entire crew. The raid helped trigger Turkish reprisals, which completed the "massacre of Chios" (18–19 June 1822).

Chippenham ❙ 878 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Danish King Guthrum ended a five-year truce (concluded after Viking victory at Wilton) by seizing Saxon Mercia. He then led a mid-winter attack on King Alfred of Wessex at Chippenham, east of Bath. Surprised and defeated, Alfred fled to the marshes of Somerset, leaving the Vikings to overrun Wessex. However, he was able to rally his forces for battle in May at Edington (6 January 878).

Chippewa ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

In a fresh American offensive across the Niagara River, commander Jacob Brown sent General Winfield Scott north along the Canadian shore to Chippewa against British forces under General Sir Phineas Riall. Unexpectedly finding himself facing American regulars, Riall fought bravely but, after heavy losses on both sides, he withdrew north towards Lundy's Lane (5 July 1814).

Chipyong ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

Renewing the offensive east of Seoul, 135,000 Chinese and North Koreans crushed the South Koreans at Hoengsong, then surrounded 5,000 Americans and French further west at Chipyong under Colonel Paul Freeman. After courageous defence, the siege was broken to produce the first Chinese defeat since their intervention. The Allies then struck back towards Seoul (13–15 February 1951).

Chire ❙ 1815 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

In action against Patriot commander Joaquín Ricaurte in Santander, Spanish Colonel Sebastián Calzada was attacked and heavily defeated at Chire, southeast of Barrancabermeja, losing 250 casualties and 150 prisoners as well as large quantities of equipment. Calzada then withdrew through Chita towards Pamplona and Cúcuta, but soon secured victory at Balaga (31 October 1815).

Chiricahua Pass ❙ 1869 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Captain Reuben F. Bernard campaigned against Cochise in southeast Arizona, marching south from Camp Bowie to meet about 250 Apache at Chiricahua Pass, close to the Mexican border. Despite an indecisive daylong action—with two killed and two wounded—Bernard could not dislodge the Indians. He prudently withdrew at nightfall, claiming to have killed 18 Apache (19 October 1869).

Chita ❙ 1920 ❙ Russian Civil War

In the final stages of the war, Bolshevik forces of the Far Eastern Republic attacked Chita, east of Lake Baikal. The White forces had repulsed earlier assaults, but with Japanese support now withdrawn, they could not resist the attack by 30,000 men and two armoured trains. Some survivors fled into Manchuria, and the Trans-Baikal region was effectively secured (16–21 October 1920).

Chitaldrug ❙ 1695 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

Campaigning in central India, Mughal Emperor Aurangzeb sent General Quasim Khan to intercept the Maratha warlord Santaji Ghorpade, reportedly transporting plunder to his base in Mysore. The Imperial army was destroyed in a disastrous defeat at Chitaldrug in northern Mysore and Quasim Khan committed suicide. The survivors were released for a massive ransom (November 1695).

Chitor ❙ 1534–1535 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

After a long siege of the famous Rajput fortress of Chitor, northeast of Udaipur, Sultan Bahadur Shah of Gujarat redoubled his efforts as a Mughal army approached. When he launched his final assault, the women of the fortress burned themselves to death and the men made a suicidal last sortie. Just as the fortress fell, Emperor Humayun arrived and Bahadur Shah fled to Mandu.

Chitor ❙ 1567–1568 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

In his most famous siege, Mughal Emperor Akbar attacked the powerful Rajput fortress of Chitor, using enormous mines to blow up the defences. However, after sniper fire killed commander Jai Mal, the defenders died in a final assault and Akbar massacred 30,000 local peasants. The subsequent capture of Ranthambhor gave Akbar control of Rajputana (20 October 1567–23 February 1568).

Chitral ❙ 1895 ❙ Chitral Campaign

A small British-Sepoy force under Major George Robertson, which intervened in a disputed succession in the tiny Kashmir kingdom of Chitral, was besieged in the fort at Chitral by Sher Afzul and Umra Khan. A relief force from Gilgit under Colonel James Kelly drove off the besiegers just before General Sir Robert Low's main force arrived from Peshawar (4 March–17 April 1895).

Chivington Massacre ❙ 1864 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

See Sand Creek

Chize ❙ 1373 ❙ Hundred Years War

Following his naval defeat off La Rochelle (June 1372), Edward III of England was prevented from assisting his French allies, and La Rochelle, Poitiers and Surgeres soon fell. A small English-Poitevin force was then defeated outside Chize, east of Surgeres, by Bertrand du Guesclin, Constable of France. This final action ended English resistance, and Poitou was permanently restored to France.

Chmielnik ❙ 1241 ❙ Mongol Conquest of Europe

See Cracow

Chochiwon ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

American forces retreating from disaster at Osan, south of Seoul, were driven out of Chonan (8 July) and then Chonui (10 July), despite air-strikes destroying North Korean armour. Heaviest fighting was further south at Chochiwon, where the American 21st Infantry tried to slow the advance and lost over 400 men. The survivors fell back ten miles to the new line on the Kum (8–12 July 1950).

Chochow ❙ 1920 ❙ Anhui-Zhili War

See Zhuozhou

Chocim ❙ 1600 ❙ Balkan National Wars

See Khotin

Chocim ❙ 1621 ❙ Polish-Turkish Wars

See Khotin

Chocim ❙ 1673 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine

See Khotin

Chocim ❙ 1769 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

See Khotin

Chocim ❙ 1788 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

See Khotin

Chojnice ❙ 1454 ❙ Thirteen Years War

In a rising against the ruling Teutonic knights, Poles in Prussia sought aid from Casimir IV of Poland, who claimed sovereignty and declared war on the knights. At Chojnice, about 60 miles southwest of Gdansk, the disunited Royal army was brutally defeated by a small Teutonic force. The Poles recovered to seize Marienburg, then in 1462 defeated the Order at Puck (18 September 1454).

Chokjinpo ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Okpo

Chokoho Incident ❙ 1938 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

See Changfukeng

Cholet ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Despite defeat at Torfou, south of the Loire, Republican General Jean-Baptiste Kléber and his veteran army launched a fresh offensive south from Nantes and crushed the Royalist rebels at their headquarters in Cholet. Rebel leaders Maurice d'Elbée and Charles Bonchamp were badly wounded (Bonchamp fatally), and the Vendéean army fled northeast across the Loire (17–18 October 1793).

Cholula ❙ 1519 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Mexico

Conquistador Hernán Cortés landed in Mexico and overcame the Tlaxacans, who then joined him against their rivals at Cholula, near modern Puebla. After entering Cholula in peace, the Spaniards and their Tlaxacan allies launched a bloody massacre which saw perhaps 3,000 Cholulans killed and the temple of Quetzalcoatl destroyed. Cortés then marched towards Tenochtitlan (October 1519).

Choluteca ❙ 1894 ❙ Central American National Wars

When President José Santos Zelaya of Nicaragua aided rebels in Honduras, President Domingo Vásquez of Honduras declared war, then faced an invasion by Nicaraguan troops and Honduran rebels under the Liberal leader Policarpo Bonilla (13 December 1893). President Vásquez was routed at Choluteca and fell back 50 miles north on his capital, Tegucicalpa (6 January 1894).

Chonan ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

See Chochiwon

Chongchon ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

General Walton Walker recovered from defeat at Unsan (6 November) and attacked north from the Chongchon before a Chinese counter-offensive smashed through South Koreans on his right. With shocking losses in men and equipment, and facing another offensive to the east at Chosin, the Allies retreated south of the pre-war border and in March abandoned Seoul (24–28 November 1950).

Chongju ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

As Japanese General Konishi Yukinaga advanced from Pusan through Sangju, he was joined by Kato Kiyomasa just northwest of Chongju, where Korean General Shin Ip determined to halt them at the Tangumdae. After heavy losses on both sides, Shin and many officers threw themselves in the river to die. Seoul fell a few days later and King Songju fled north across the Imjin (7 June 1592).

Chongju ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

Advancing into Korea after a Japanese landing at Chemulpo (9 February), General Tamemoto Kuroki gathered further forces which had landed near Pyongyang and encountered General Pavel Ivanovich Mischenko's Cossacks at Chongju. In the reputed first land action of the war, the Russians were driven out of the town, and Kuroki's First Army continued on to the Yalu (28 March 1904).

Chonui ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War
See Chochiwon

Chorokh ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War
Russian Prince Ivan Malkhazovich Andronikov on campaign in eastern Turkey following victory at Akhaltsikhe (November 1853) met a force of 34,000 Turks on the River Chorokh (Turkish Coruh) near Batum. Andronikov attacked with a detachment of just 13,000 men and gained a decisive victory, after which Russian forces turned their attention south to Bayazid and Kars (4 June 1854).

Chorrillos ❙ 1881 ❙ War of the Pacific
Negotiations after victory at Arica in June 1880 failed and Chile resumed the offensive against Peru. General Manuel Baquedano advanced on Lima, attacking the defensive line at Chorrillos, held by General Andrés Avelino Cáceres. The Chileans captured the line in a dawn attack at the cost of perhaps 2,000 casualties and two days later took the position at Miraflores (13 January 1881).

Chosin ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War
South Koreans and American marines drove deep into northeast Korea, destroying a Chinese army in extreme cold around the Chosin (Changjin) Reservoir. Chinese General Song Shilun was however reinforced, and launched a new offensive (27 November). After severe losses on both sides, the defeated Allies were forced to withdraw south towards Koto-ri (25 October–29 November 1950).

Chotin ❙ 1600 ❙ Balkan National Wars
See Khotin

Chotin ❙ 1621 ❙ Polish-Turkish Wars
See Khotin

Chotin ❙ 1673 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine
See Khotin

Chotin ❙ 1739 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War
See Stavuchany

Chotin ❙ 1769 ❙ Catherine the Great's First Turkish War
See Khotin

Chotin ❙ 1788 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War
See Khotin

Chotusitz ❙ 1742 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession
Prince Charles of Lorraine led an Austrian counter-offensive against the Prussian invasion of Silesia, attacking Frederick II of Prussia and Leopold the Younger of Anhalt-Dessau at Chotusitz, east of Prague. Frederick suffered more casualties in the bloody fighting, though the Austrians also lost their guns and many prisoners and withdrew. Empress Maria Theresa then made peace (17 May 1742).

Chra River ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)
See Kamina

Christmas Hill ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)
See Longstop Hill

Chrysler's Farm ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812
Advancing down the St Lawrence from Lake Ontario, American General James Wilkinson attacked the British under Colonel Joseph Morrison on the Canadian shore at Chrysler's Farm. After heavy losses on both sides, General John Boyd was driven from the field (Wilkinson was ill), but the American gunboats had passed the rapids and wintered at French Mills (11 November 1813).

Chrysopolis ❙ 324 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession
Constantine built on victory in 324 at Adrianople and on the Hellespont, pursuing his rival Valerius Licinius across the Bosphorus to the Asian shore, where he was in camp at Chrysopolis (modern Scutari). Licinius was disastrously defeated and later executed, while Constantine became sole Emperor at last and built his new capital—Constantinople—at Byzantium (18 September 324).

Chuanbi ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st Opium War

Two months after an attack on British merchants off Kowloon, Captain Henry Smith and the frigates Volage (28) and Hyacinth (18) attacked a fleet of 29 war junks under Admiral Guan Tianpei at Chuanbi (Chuenpi) on the Zhujiang River. A brief action saw the junks destroyed and dispersed. Britain formally declared war in January 1840 and sent a fleet which captured Dinghai (4 November 1839).

Ch'uan-chou ❙ 1852 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Quanzhou

Chucalissa ❙ 1736 ❙ Chickasaw-French War

Marching from Illinois with French troops and Indian allies against the Chickasaw blocking trade in the Mississippi Valley, Major Pierre d'Artaguiette unwisely attacked Chucalissa village, near modern Memphis, and was heavily defeated and captured. When a large French force later advanced from the south towards Ackia, Artaguiette and other prisoners were tortured to death (25 March 1736).

Chu Dien ❙ 547 ❙ Sino-Vietnamese Wars

In a rising in northern Vietnam (then Annam), national hero Ly Bon (Ly Bi) expelled the local Governor and subsequently proclaimed himself Emperor. He then faced a massive counter-offensive by troops of the southern Chinese Liang Dynasty. At the village of Chu Dien, near Hanoi, Ly Bon was defeated and fled. His infant Van Xuan Kingdom was crushed, and he was later captured and killed.

Chudnov ❙ 1660 ❙ Russo-Polish Wars

Defeated in the Ukraine at Liubar in August, Russian commander Vasili P. Sheremetev withdrew to nearby Chudnov, while his Cossack ally, Yuri Chmielnicki, was defeated then defected at Slobodyszcze. Surrounded by Polish-Tatar forces under Jerzy Lubomirski and Stefan Czarniecki, Sheremetev was defeated and surrendered. He died after 22 years in Tatar captivity (23 October 1660).

Chuenpi ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st Opium War

See Chuanbi

Chu Lai ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

In the first major American operation of the war, Marine General Lewis Walt launched a pre-emptive offensive south of his base at Chu Lai against Viet Cong commander Nguyen Dinh Trong readying his forces near Van Truong. Landing by air and sea, the Marines secured victory with only 45 killed against over 600 Communists dead. The Viet Cong later reoccupied the area (18–24 August 1965).

Chü-lu ❙ 207 BC ❙ Fall of the Qin Dynasty

See Julu

Chumatien ❙ 1927 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Zhumadian

Chunchon ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

At the start of the war, North Korean forces stormed across the border towards Seoul in the west, while further east, about 11,000 invaders without tanks were unexpectedly blocked by courageous South Korean defence at Chunchon. Diverting armour from other sectors, the North Koreans took the city after heavy losses on both sides, then advanced south towards Wonju (25–28 June 1950).

Chungtu ❙ 1214–1215 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

See Beijing

Chunuk Bair ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

As part of the Allied offensive against the Sari Bair Ridge, Australians and New Zealanders under General Alexander Godley (later reinforced by other British and Indian troops) seized Chunuk Bair, northeast of Anzac. In the purported turning point of the Gallipoli campaign, reinforced Turkish units counter-attacked and the Allies were driven back with shocking losses (8–10 August 1915).

Chupas ❙ 1542 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

Four years after Diego del Almagro was killed at Salinas, his successor Francisco Pizarro was assassinated (26 June 1541) by supporters of Diego del Almagro the Younger, who was proclaimed Governor. In a bloody action at Chupas, near Huamanga (Ayacucho), Almagro was defeated by Viceroy Cristoval Vaca de Castro and Pizarrist Alonzo de Alvarado. He was later executed (16 September 1542).

Chu Pong ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

See Ia Drang

Chuquinga ❙ 1554 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

Despite the execution of anti-Royalist leader Gonzalo Pizarro after defeat at Xaquixaguana (April 1548), war continued between rival Spanish factions in Peru, and Francisco Hernandez Giron led a fresh revolt at Cuzco. At Chuquinga, near Abancay in southern Peru, Giron defeated Royalists under Alonzo de Alvarado. However, Giron himself was later captured and beheaded (21 May 1554).

Churubusco ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

American General Winfield Scott reached the southern approaches to Mexico City, where he drove the Mexicans out of Contreras, and later the same day his main army attacked Churubusco, held by General Antonio de Santa Anna. After a dispersed and confused action, with very heavy Mexican losses in killed and wounded, Santa Anna fled to Mexico City and sued for a truce (20 August 1847).

Chustenalah ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Shoal Creek

Chusto-Talasah ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Bird Creek

Chyhyryn ❙ 1677 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine

See Chigirin

Cibalae ❙ 316 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

Having disposed of all but one co-Emperor, Constantine turned against his former ally Valerius Licinius, Emperor in the East. At Cibalae (probably Vinkovce between the Drava and Sava Rivers in modern Croatia), the two rivals fought to exhaustion until Licinius broke off the battle to avoid further casualties. They met again the following January at Campus Ardiensis (8 October 316).

Cibecue Creek ❙ 1881 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Preaching a revivalist mysticism, Apache medicine man Nokaidelklini and his supporters were attacked by Colonel Eugene Carr from Fort Apache, Arizona. The Apache suffered a terrible defeat at Cibecue Creek, near the San Cralos Agency northeast of Phoenix, and the mystic was killed. Geronimo then resumed the warpath but was eventually hunted down and surrendered (30 August 1881).

Cibik Ridge ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Piva Forks

Cibotus ❙ 1096 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Civetot

Ciecierzyn ❙ 1654 ❙ Russo-Polish Wars

See Szepiele

Cieneguilla ❙ 1854 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

With Jicarilla Apache raiding south of Taos in northern New Mexico, Major George Blake sent 60 men under Lieutenant John Davidson into the Embudos Mountains, where they were ambushed at Cieneguilla by Chacon. With every man save two hit and 22 killed, Davidson led the survivors back to Taos. Chacon failed with a similar ambush a week later at Rio Caliente (30 March 1854).

Cienfuegos ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

In a remarkable raid on Cuba at the start of the war, American Captain Bowman H. McCalla in the warship Marblehead, with Nashville in support, attacked the cable station at Cienfuegos. Landing under severe fire, a launch party cut the cables, severing telegraph communication between Havana and Spain. Forty-nine of the men involved received the Congressional Medal of Honour (11 May 1898).

Cienfuegos ❙ 1957 ❙ Cuban Revolution

During the mainly guerrilla war against President Fulgencio Batista, mutineers led by Dionisio San Román seized the naval base at Cienfuegos and were joined by civilian insurgents. In one of the largest-scale actions of the revolution, Batista units attacked in force, supported by tanks and bombers. Perhaps 300 rebels were killed and a subsequent general strike was also crushed (5 September 1957).

Cieszyn ❙ 1919 ❙ Polish-Czech War

See Teschen

Cinco de Mayo ❙ 1862 ❙ Mexican-French War

See Puebla

Cirencester ❙ 628 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Penda of Mercia began his campaign to expand the power of his kingdom by invading Wessex, where he attacked Cynegils and his son Cwichelm, joint Kings of the West Saxon Hwicce people. An indecisive daylong battle at Cirencester was followed by a peace by which Penda apparently secured land as far as the Avon. He subsequently married his sister to Cynegils' son, Cenwalh.

Cirta ❙ 106 BC ❙ Jugurthine War

Determined to end the war in Numidia after victory at Thala, new Roman commander Gaius Marius, with Lucius Cornelius Sulla, advanced on King Jugurtha and his father-in-law, King Bocchus of Mauretania, at Cirta (modern Constantine, Algeria). In battle outside the city, the Numidian army was defeated when Bocchus fled. He later betrayed Jugurtha, who was taken to Rome and executed.

Ciskei ❙ 1834–1835 ❙ 6th Cape Frontier War

When Xhosa under Maqoma entered Cape Province, they were checked by Piet Retief, then defeated in the Ciskei over several months by Colonel Harry Smith. When their presumed leader Hintsa was murdered, Governor Sir Benjamin D'Urban annexed the area between the Keiskamma and Kei as Queen Adelaide Province, but it was soon returned to the Xhosa (December 1834–June 1835).

Cissus ❙ 191 BC ❙ Roman-Syrian War

See Corycus

Citate ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

After Turkey crossed the Lower Danube for victory at Oltenitza (November 1853), General Mikhail Gorchakov counter-attacked upstream in Wallachia, advancing on Calafat. Turkish commander Ahmed Pasha then attacked the Russian garrison of Colonel Alexander Baumgarten at nearby Citate. The main Russian army arrived after four days' fighting, and the Turks fell back (6–9 January 1854).

Citium ❙ 450 BC ❙ Greco-Persian Wars

See Salamis, Cyprus

Ciudad Bolívar ❙ 1903 ❙ Venezuelan Civil Wars

General Antonio Matos recovered from La Victoria (November 1902) and returned to Venezuela to resume resistance to President Cipriano Castro. After repulsing an advance on Caracas, Government General Juan Gomez sailed to the Orinoco to attack General Nicolás Rolando and 3,000 men at Cuidad Bolívar. Rolando was routed and captured, effectively ending the war (19–21 July 1903).

Ciudad Juárez ▌ 1911 ▌ Mexican Revolution

Near the start of Mexico's Revolution, Francisco Madero sent Pascual Orozco and Francisco (Pancho) Villa from El Paso, Texas, against the border city of Ciudad Juárez. In a remarkable victory of ill-trained fighters over professional troops, General Juan J. Navarro was forced to surrender. Subsequent Federal defeat in the south at Cuautla led to the fall of the government (10 May 1911).

Ciudad Juárez ▌ 1913 ▌ Mexican Revolution

Days after his failed attack on Chihuahua, in northern Mexico, Francisco (Pancho) Villa led a brilliant coup north against Ciudad Juárez. Riding a captured train into the city at night, he surprised the Federal garrison and, by morning Ciudad Juárez was in his hands. He then left General Juan Medina in command and marched south towards victory at Tierra Blanca (15 November 1913).

Ciudad Real ▌ 1809 ▌ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Following defeat of the Spanish Army of the Centre in January at Uclés, General Don José Urbina Count Cartaojal marched south to campaign on the Gaudiana between Manzanares and Ciudad Real. Forcing the river at Peralvillo near Ciudad Real, French General Francois Sébastiani routed Cartaojal, with a further Spanish loss two days later downstream at Medellin (26 March 1809).

Ciudad Rodrigo ▌ 1810 ▌ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In a renewed French attack towards central Portugal, Marshal André Masséna besieged the medieval fortress of Ciudad Rodrigo on the Agueda. Defended by Spanish militia under General Andreas Herrasti, the garrison held out against massive attack. However, terrible bombardment and losses made Herrasti surrender, and the French moved against Almeida (30 May–9 July 1810).

Ciudad Rodrigo ▌ 1812 ▌ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington opened his rapid advance into Spain by besieging Ciudad Rodrigo, defended by General Jean-Leonard Barrié. Storming the fortress 12 days later, he captured the French siege train and massive supplies, opening the way to Badajoz. However, victory cost heavy British losses, including Generals Robert Craufurd and Henry McKinnon killed (8–19 January 1812).

Civetot ▌ 1096 ▌ 1st Crusade

Preceding the First Crusade, pilgrims of the so-called "People's Crusade" reached Civetot, east of Constantinople, and began an ill-advised advance towards Nicaea. Ambushed by Turks, they were driven back to Civetot with terrible losses including many German knights and thousands of women and children. The battle and massacre ended the disastrous People's Crusade (21 October 1096).

Civita Castelana ▌ 1798 ▌ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Encouraged by Britain, King Ferdinand IV of Naples sent Austrian General Karl Mack von Leiberich to occupy Rome. French General Jean-Étienne Championnet temporarily withdrew to gather his forces, then at Civita Castelana, east of Viterbo, crushed the Neapolitan army. Ferdinand fled to the British and, six weeks later, Championnet captured Naples (5–6 December 1798).

Civitate ▌ 1053 ▌ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy

Pope Leo IX resolved to subdue the Normans in Apulia and led a mixed army of Romans, Germans and Byzantine Greeks. At Civitate (San Paolo di Civitate), on the Fortore, he was thoroughly defeated by a small yet disciplined Norman force under Robert and Humphry Guiscard and Count Richard of Aversa. The Pope was captured and held as an honoured prisoner (16 June 1053).

Civitella ❙ 1053 ❙ Norman Conquest of Southern Italy
See Civitate

Clans ❙ 1396 ❙ Scottish Clan Wars
See North Inch

Clark's Mill ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)
Campaigning in southwestern Missouri, a 1,000-strong Confederate force under Colonels John Q. Burbridge and Colton Greene attacked the Union Fort at Clark's Mill, near Vera Cruz, north of Gainesville. Captain Hiram E. Barstow and only 100 men withstood a five-hour attack before surrendering and the Confederates burned the blockhouse and other buildings (7 November 1862).

Clashmealcon Caves ❙ 1923 ❙ Irish Civil War
A famous incident of the guerrilla phase of the war saw Republican Timothy "Aero" Lyons and six others besieged by government troops for three days in Clashmealcon Caves at Kerry Head. After surviving firebombs and grenades, two drowned and Lyons was fatally wounded trying to scale the cliff. The others surrendered and three were executed. War ended a month later (April 1923).

Clastidium ❙ 222 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy
Driven back from central Italy at the Telamon (225 BC), Insubre Gauls of the north were defeated at the Adda, then at Clastidium (modern Casteggio), south of Pavia. Marcus Claudius Marcellus defeated and killed their Chief Viridomarus (Britomatus), reputedly in single combat, and the Gauls were subjugated until Hannibal crossed the Alps four years later and induced them to rise against Rome.

Clear Lake ❙ 1850 ❙ Pit River Indian War
When surveyor Captain William Warner and two white settlers were murdered by Pit River Indians in northern California, Captain Nathaniel Lyon took a punitive expedition northwest through Benicia to Clear Lake. The soldiers killed about 160 warriors in a brutal bayonet assault, then massacred the women and children. Days later Lyon attacked again at the Russian River (15 May 1850).

Clearwater ❙ 1877 ❙ Nez Percé Indian War
One month after victory at White Bird Canyon, Nez Percé Chief Joseph was joined by Chief Looking Glass on the Clearwater River in central Idaho against a much larger force under General Oliver Howard. Joseph courageously repulsed the troopers with costly losses on both sides, then started an epic retreat east across the Bitterroot Mountains towards the Big Hole River (11–12 July 1877).

Cleidon Pass ❙ 1014 ❙ Byzantine Wars of Tsar Samuel
See Balathista

Clifton Moor ❙ 1745 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)
Advancing into England soon after victory at Prestonpans, Scottish rebels under Charles Stuart—Bonnie Prince Charlie—finally turned back, and a mid-winter rearguard action on Clifton Moor, near Penrith, saw Jacobite commander Lord George Murray defeat the pursuing army of Duke William of Cumberland. The rebels then crossed into Scotland and besieged Stirling (18 December 1745).

Clissau ❙ 1702 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War
See Kliszow

Clitheroe ❙ 1138 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Territorial Wars
David I of Scotland took advantage of a period of instability in England and crossed the border to capture some key cities from King Stephen. He then sent his nephew William FitzDuncan against an English force at Clitheroe, Lancashire, where the Scots inflicted a sharp defeat. However, David was comprehensively defeated a few months later at the Battle of the Standard (10 June 1138).

Clonmel ❙ 1650 ❙ British Civil Wars

Oliver Cromwell renewed his campaign against Catholic-Royalist Ireland after the destruction of Drogheda and Wexford in late 1649, besieging Clonmel on the Suir. Cromwell suffered heavy losses in an unexpected check, but a second attack succeeded. Hugh O'Neill and his garrison had escaped to Limerick and Cromwell promptly returned to England (21 April–10 May 1650).

Clonmel ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

Government troops under the command of General John Prout, advancing through Waterford and Tipperary, converged on Clonmel and attacked the Republican forces of Dinny Lacey and Dan Breen attempting to hold the nearby town of Carrick-on-Suir. Carrick fell after four days' heavy fighting and further costly action eventually saw Prout secure Clonmel (31 July–10 August 1922).

Clontarf ❙ 1014 ❙ Later Viking Raids on Britain

In an attempt to reinforce the Viking presence in Ireland, fresh forces from the Orkneys invaded to support a Danish uprising in Dublin. At nearby Clontarf, the army of Irish King Brian Boru, led by his son Murchadh, utterly destroyed the Danes with 6,000 reported dead, though Brian himself was killed in his tent nearby. Thereafter, the Danes turned to the conquest of England (23 April 1014).

Clontibret ❙ 1595 ❙ Tyrone Rebellion

When Hugh O'Neill Earl of Tyrone renewed the rebellion of his uncle Shane O'Neill (which had been crushed at Letterkenny in 1567), the Lord Lieutenant in Ireland, Sir Henry Bagenal, marched from Dundalk to secure Monaghan. As the English withdrew southeast towards Dundalk, Hugh O'Neill attacked them on the march near Clontibret and Bagenal was utterly defeated (27 May 1595).

Clouds ❙ 1899 ❙ Philippine-American War

See Tirad Pass

Cloyd's Mountain ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Raiding against railways in southwestern Virginia, Union General George Crook attacked a dispersed Confederate force at Cloyd's Mountain, in Pulaski County near Dublin. The Confederates were defeated in a bloody action and commander General Albert G. Jenkins was captured and died of wounds. Another action was fought next day further west at Cove Mountain (9 May 1864).

Clusium ❙ 225 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy

See Faesulae

Cnidus ❙ 394 BC ❙ Corinthian War

When King Agesilaus of Sparta returned from Asia Minor to attack Athens at Coronea, his brother-in-law Pisander led the Spartan navy against the Persian fleet under Conon of Athens and the Satrap Pharnabazus. Pisander was killed and the Spartan fleet was destroyed in a decisive action off Cnidus, near Rhodes, restoring Persian power in Asia Minor (August 394 BC).

Coa ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marshal André Masséna advanced into Portugal after capturing Ciudad Rodrigo (9 July) and sent Marshal Michel Ney against an Anglo-Portuguese force on the River Coa outside the border fortress of Almeida. A courageous defence by General Robert "Black Bob" Craufurd cost heavy French losses, yet the Allies were driven off and Masséna began his siege of Almeida (24 July 1810).

Coamo ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

While American forces in southern Puerto Rico secured Guánica (25 July), another division further to the east under Generals James H. Wilson and Oswald H. Ernst attacked Coamo to cut Spanish communication north to San Juan. The town surrendered after a brief action with 40 American casualties. Within days the war ended and the United States gained Puerto Rico (9 August 1898).

Coatepeque ❙ 1863 ❙ Central American National Wars

When Honduras and El Salvador formed a Liberal alliance against Guatemala and Nicaragua, President José Rafael Carrera of Guatemala invaded El Salvador against Gerardo Barrios and captured Santa Ana. At nearby Coatepeque, he suffered a costly defeat and withdrew. President Barrios later lost in Nicaragua at San Felipe and Carrera returned to take San Salvador (23–24 February 1863).

Coatit ❙ 1895 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War

Weeks after crushing Okulé-Kusai rebellion in northern Ethiopia at Halai, Italian General Oreste Baratieri turned against rebel leader Ras Mangasha of Tigre. The Italians and native askaris attacked Ras Mangasha northeast of Adowa at Coatit, where badly armed Tigreans fought a brave draw, then withdrew. The Ethiopian Imperial army routed Baratieri in 1896 at Adowa (13 January 1895).

Cocboy ❙ 641 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

See Maserfield

Cocherel ❙ 1364 ❙ Hundred Years War

With the accession of Charles V of France, Charles of Navarre attempted to recover land in Normandy and was opposed by the great Royalist warrior Bertrand du Guesclin. The Navarrese army, supported by English mercenaries, was attacked and destroyed west of Paris at Cocherel, near Mantes, and Navarrese leader Jean de Grailly Captal du Buch was captured (16 May 1364).

Cochin ❙ 1506 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

When Portugal sent Duarte Pacheco to Cochin in southwest India to assist the Raja against Calicut, Pacheco was driven out by overwhelming forces before recapturing the city and restoring the Prince. Pacheco then resisted a massive siege by the Raja of Calicut. The Raja was defeated and killed after a five-month assault and Cochin became Portuguese until Dutch conquest in 1663.

Cockpit Point ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Determined to blockade Washington, D.C. after victory at Bull Run, Confederate General Samuel G. French established batteries on the Potomac, where Cockpit Point, near Dumfries, Virginia, was shelled and heavily damaged by two gunboats under Lieutenant Robert H. Wyman. A few weeks later, the batteries were abandoned and the Confederates withdrew towards Richmond (3 January 1862).

Cogorderos ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Benavides

Coimbra, Brazil ❙ 1864 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

In a pre-emptive attack on Brazil, Paraguayan Dictator Francisco Solano López sent 6,000 men under Colonels Vicente Barrios and Francisco Isidro Resquin on a brilliant lightning attack into the Mato Grosso. There they captured Coimbra, held by Colonel Hermenegildo de Albuquerque Porto Carrero, and also Corumbá, to hold the border province for the rest of the war (26–28 December 1864).

Coimbra, Portugal ❙ 1064 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

King Ferdinand I won a civil war to unite the kingdoms of Castile, Leon and Galicia, then turned against the Muslims of Aragon and Valencia. Concluding a successful campaign, he besieged the city of Coimbra, south of Viseu, now in Portugal. Coimbra fell after six months with more than 5,000 Muslim prisoners taken, but Ferdinand died soon afterwards, and Spain reverted to civil war.

Coimbra, Portugal ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

While retreating from the failed invasion of Portugal, a French attempt to secure a crossing of the Mondego River was blocked at Coimbra by Portuguese militia under General Nicholas Trant, who had occupied the city. General Louis Montbrun failed in a three-day attempt to capture Coimbra and, after French defeat at Condeixa, his cavalry joined the general retreat (10–13 March 1811).

Coimbra, Portugal ❙ 1828 ❙ Miguelite Wars

During the disputed succession following the death of John VI of Portugal, his son Miguel attempted to seize the kingdom against the interests of his own niece Maria Da Gloria. Miguel's General, Alvaro Povoas, defeated the constitutional army of General John Carlos de Saldanha, near Coimbra in central Portugal. Two weeks later, Miguel usurped the throne (24 June 1828).

Coire ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

French General André Masséna responded to an Austrian advance over the Lech by crossing the Rhine and marching south along the right bank of the river. He crushed an Austrian force under General Franz von Auffenberg at Coire (Chur) in eastern Switzerland, where he took over 3,000 prisoners before continuing his advance (7 March 1799).

Coixtlahuaca ❙ 1458 ❙ Aztec Wars of Conquest

During expansion under the powerful ruler Motecuhzoma I, Aztec forces moved southeast into the Gulf Lowlands to secure Tochtepec and Cotaxtla, then further south against the powerful trading city of Coixtlahuaca, on the Mixteca Alta, where merchants had supposedly been murdered. A very large army marched on Coixtlahuaca, and the city was crushed, consolidating Aztec power in the south.

Colberg Heath ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Kolberg Heath

Colby Moor ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

On a fresh offensive in southwest Wales following Royalist disaster at Naseby (14 June), General Rowland Laugharne, Parliamentary Governor of Pembroke, marched against local Royalists under Sir Edward Stradling. Supported by naval forces landing in Milford Haven near Carnaston Bridge, Laugharne crushed Stradling on Colby Moor and secured all of Pembrokeshire (30 July 1645).

Colchester ❙ 1648 ❙ British Civil Wars

With Kentish rebels under George Goring Earl of Norwich dispersed at Maidstone (1 June), Norwich joined Royalists led by Arthur Lord Capel and Sir Charles Lucas under siege at Colchester, Essex, which was starved into surrender by Parliamentarian Sir Thomas Fairfax. Lucas and Sir George Lisle were shot next day and the war was effectively over (12 June–27 August 1648).

Cold Harbour ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Gaines' Mill

Cold Harbour ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Union commander Ulysses S. Grant advanced through Virginia across the Totopotomoy Creek towards Richmond, he met General Robert E. Lee again at Cold Harbour, just west of the Confederate Capital. In what has been called Lee's last great victory, repeated Union attacks were repulsed with about 12,000 men lost. Grant then turned south against Petersburg (31 May–12 June 1864).

Colditz ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Advancing east following Napoleon Bonaparte's victory at Lützen, French forces led by Prince Eugène de Beauharnais caught up with the Russian rearguard under General Mikhail Miloradovich three days later at Colditz, southeast of Leipzig. Miloradovich was badly mauled but fought an effective delaying action as the Allies continued towards the Elbe (5 May 1813).

Colenso ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

In a first attempt to relieve Ladysmith, British General Sir Redvers Buller led 21,000 men against the left flank of Boer leader Louis Botha on the Tugela, south of Ladysmith, at Colenso. Buller lost over 1,000 men in a failed, bloody frontal assault, and—with the third defeat of "Black Week" after Stormberg and Magersfontein—he was relieved of overall command (15 December 1899).

Coleraine ❙ 1564 ❙ O'Neill Rebellion

Campaigning against Anglo-Scots colonisation of Ulster, Shane O'Neill Lord of Tyrone met his Protestant rivals under Sorley Boy MacDonnell, near Coleraine in County Londonderry. The engagement was indecisive, but the following year O'Neill resoundingly defeated MacDonnell at Ballycastle and held him prisoner until his own defeat in 1567 at Letterkenny.

Coleroon ❙ 1782 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

See Kumbakonam

Coleshill ❙ 1157 ❙ Anglo-Welsh Wars

Shortly after succeeding to the English throne, Henry II led a force against Wales, where some districts had been lost during the anarchic reign of his predecessor Stephen. In the Coleshill Forest in North Flintshire, Henry was surprised and defeated with heavy losses by Welsh Chief Owen ap Gruffydd. However, the King resumed the campaign and gradually reasserted English authority.

Coleto Creek ❙ 1836 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Mexican General José Urrea invaded Texas through San Patricio and advanced against Goliad, southeast of the Alamo, held by Colonel James Fannin. Fatally delaying his withdrawal, Fannin was beaten at nearby Coleto Creek and surrendered after heavy losses. A week later (27 March), he and 400 other prisoners were executed, but the Texans were soon avenged at San Jacinto (20 March 1836).

Colima ❙ 1859 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Reactionary President Miguel Miramón secured decisive victory at La Estancia in November, then took 3,000 men against the west coast city of Colima, held by 5,000 Liberals under Generals Pedro Ogazón and Antonio Rojas. Miramón repulsed Rojas on the Tuxpan, then defeated the Liberals on the nearby heights of Tonila to secure Colima before returning to Mexico City (21–24 December 1859).

Coliseo ❙ 1895 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

Days after bloody victory in western Cuba at Mal Tiempo, insurgent leader Máximo Gómez entered Matanzas Province, where he met Spanish commander General Arsenio Martínez Campos at Coliseo, near Cárdenas. Gómez had to withdraw after heavy losses, but Martínez Campos failed to pursue and fell back towards Havana, where he was replaced in command (23 December 1895).

Collierville ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General James R. Chalmers attacking the railroad just east of Memphis, Tennessee, advanced on the small town of Collierville, courageously defended by Colonel Edward Hatch. Surprised by a Union counterattack, Chalmers' much larger force was routed and fled across the Coldwater, leaving 50 prisoners including militia General James Z. George (3 November 1863).

Colline Gate ❙ 82 BC ❙ Sullan Civil War

Within months of victory at Sacriportus and Faventia, Lucius Cornelius Sulla virtually ended the civil war by destroying the army of Gaius Marius the Younger, led by Pontius Telesinas, just outside Rome at the Colline Gate. Sulla executed thousands of prisoners, including Telesinas, and when Marius committed suicide in the fall of Praeneste, Sulla made himself Dictator (1 November 82 BC).

Collooney ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

A week after victory at Castlebar, French General Joseph Humbert and a 1,600-strong French-Irish force were met five miles from Sligo near Collooney by a garrison of 300 Limerick militia under Colonel Charles Vereker. About 50 men were lost on either side in sharp fighting before Vereker surrendered. He and his men were released on parole to return to Sligo (5 September 1798).

Colmar ❙ 1675 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

See Turckheim

Colmar ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Supporting the German offensive into Alsace, forces south of Strasbourg around Colmar broke out to the north, then faced stiff resistance under French commander Jean de Lattre de Tasigny, supported by American General Frank Milburn. The Colmar Pocket was finally eliminated with heavy losses on both sides, ending the last German presence on French soil (5 January–9 February 1945).

Colombey ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

French Marshal Francois-Achille Bazaine, falling back after defeat at Wörth, was attacked east of Metz at Colombey by German forward units under Baron Kolmar von der Goltz. Both sides claimed victory after heavy losses—including French General Claude-Théodore Decaen killed—but the French were able to continue withdrawing across the Moselle towards Mars-la-Tour (14 August 1870).

Colombo ❙ 1587–1588 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

In his war against the Portuguese in western Ceylon, the heroic King Rajasinha I of Sitavaka led a final massive siege of the key city of Colombo. However, his navy failed to prevent Portuguese reinforcements. Rajasinha was eventually forced to withdraw with heavy losses and, within a few years, the Kingdom of Sitavaka had been destroyed (May 1587–February 1588).

Colombo ❙ 1655–1656 ❙ Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

After capturing Portuguese Trincomalee in 1639, Dutch forces joined with King Rajasinha II of Kandy, in central Ceylon, to attack Colombo. Following a seven-month siege, with shocking cruelty on both sides, the starving Portuguese garrison surrendered. With the subsequent fall of Jaffna, the Dutch ruled coastal Ceylon until British invasion in 1796 (November 1655–12 May 1656).

Colombo ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Landing on Dutch Ceylon (modern Sri Lanka), British Admiral Peter Rainier and Colonel James Stuart (1741–1815) captured Trincomalee, then sailed to attack the capital, Colombo, which was surrendered by Governor Johan Gerard van Angelbeek after a sharp fight. Unlike other Dutch possessions, the island was not returned to Holland under treaty in 1802, and remained a British territory (15 February 1796).

Colombo ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Indian Ocean)

Admiral Chuichi Nagumo entered the Indian Ocean with a large fleet and launched a heavy carrier air-raid against the naval docks at Colombo in Ceylon (modern Sri Lanka). The British lost an armed merchant cruiser and destroyer sunk, and 25 fighters, for 21 Japanese planes shot down. Nagumo's aircraft also sank the heavy cruisers Dorsetshire and Cornwall south of Ceylon (5 April 1942).

Colorado ❙ 1840 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

Pursuing Comanche survivors of defeat in August at Plum Creek in southern Texas, Colonel John Moore and 100 Texan militia marched north across the Concho for a dawn attack on the Comanche camp on the Colorado, near modern Ballinger, south of Abilene. The Indians lost 50 killed and a further 80 drowned in the river before Moore withdrew with 500 captured ponies (14 October 1840).

Columbia ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Confederate commander John B. Hood advanced north across Tennessee from Florence, he was intercepted on the Duck River at Columbia, south of Nashville, by Union General John M. Schofield, marching north from Pulaski. Although the action was indecisive, Schofield was in danger of being cut off and withdrew north through Spring Hill to Franklin (24–29 November 1864).

Columbus ❙ 1916 ❙ Villa's Raids

Two months after his supporters murdered Americans in northern Mexico at Santa Isabel, Sonora, rebel leader Francisco (Pancho) Villa took more than 500 men across the border and burned the town of Columbus, New Mexico, killing 15 soldiers and civilians before being driven off with heavy losses. The raid led to the punitive expedition of General John Pershing and action at Carrizal (8–9 March 1916).

Comayagua ❙ 1827 ❙ Central American National Wars

President Manuel José Arce of the Central American Federation faced Liberal opposition in Honduras and El Salvador and sent General José Justo Milla against Hondura's capital, Comayagua. President Dionisio Herrera was desposed after a month besieged. Herrera's nephew Francisco Morazán soon beat Milla at La Trinidad and freed his uncle in 1829 in Guatemala City (10 May 1827).

Comayagua ❙ 1845 ❙ Central American National Wars

When Honduras supported efforts to restore President Francisco Malespín of El Salvador, overthrown after Jutiapa, Salvadoran General José Trinidad Cabañas led an army into Honduras. He was heavily defeated at Comayagua and, after a further loss at Sensenti (10 June), he withdrew into El Salvador, pursued by a Honduran army which was eventually checked at Obrajuela (2 June 1845).

Comayagua ❙ 1872 ❙ Central American National Wars

Twelve months after seizing power in El Salvador at Santa Ana, President Santiago Gonzáles formed a Liberal alliance with President Miguel García Gránados of Guatemala and personally led an invasion against President José María Medina of Honduras. In a sharp two-month campaign, Gonzáles captured Comayagua and replaced Medina with the more Liberal Carlos Céleo Arias (May 1872).

Comayagua ❙ 1874 ❙ Central American National Wars

When Liberal President Miguel García Gránados of Guatemala was replaced by the more Conservative Justo Ruffino Barrios, the new government withdrew Guatemalan support for President Carlos Céleo Arias of Honduras and invaded in support of his opponent Ponciano Levía. The brief war ended with the fall of Comayagua and the installation of Levía as President (13 January 1874).

Combat de Trente ❙ 1351 ❙ Hundred Years War

See Thirty

Combolchia ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See Dessie

Como ❙ 1964 ❙ Guinea-Bissau War

At the start of the war for Portuguese Guinea, independence forces loyal to Amilcar Cabal, who had seized the coastal island of Como, faced a full-scale counter-offensive by up to 3,000 Portuguese regulars. Two months of intense fighting saw perhaps 600 Portuguese killed, and the much-mythologised rebel victory greatly increased support for what became a ten-year war (January–February 1964).

Compiègne ❙ 1430 ❙ Hundred Years War

In an attempt to counter the French military resurgence inspired by Jeanne d'Arc, Duke Philip of Burgundy joined the English in besieging Compiègne, north of Paris. A relief army sent by Charles VII of France eventually broke the siege, but Jeanne (Joan of Arc) was captured (23 May). She was later sold to the English for trial and execution at the stake (May–November 1430).

Comum ❙ 196 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy

See Lake Como

Concepción, Peru ❙ 1882 ❙ War of the Pacific

Peruvian General Andrés Avelino Cáceres advanced against an isolated Chilean outpost in central Peru, where he sent 400 men under Colonel Juan Gastó against just 77 men holding out at the pueblo of Concepción, in Junin Province, northwest of Huancayo. In one of the heroic actions of the war, the Chileans fought bravely for about 18 hours before all were eventually killed (9–10 July 1882).

Concepcion, Texas ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Following the skirmish at Gonzales, Stephen Austin's Texan army advanced on San Antonio, where General Martin de Cos sent a force against James Bowie and James Fannin in camp at nearby Concepcion. Colonels Domingo de Ugartechea and José María Mendoza were driven off with 14 killed and 39 wounded and the Texans moved closer to besiege San Antonio (28 October 1835).

Concón ❙ 1891 ❙ Chilean Civil War

With northern Chile seized from President José Manuel Balmaceda after victory in March at Pozo Almonte, Congressist Colonel Estanislao del Canto Arteaga landed 9,000 men north of Valparaiso and advanced against Colonel Orozimbo Barbosa Puga and 8,000 Loyalists entrenched at nearby Concón. Barbosa was driven out with over 2,000 casualties and lost again at Placilla (21 August 1891).

Concord ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Determined to seize arms held by American patriots, British forces from Boston under Colonel Francis Smith and Major John Pitcairn dispersed rebels at Lexington, then continued west the same day against Concord. After a skirmish with militia under Colonel James Barrett, Smith headed back to Boston, reinforced by Lord Hugh Percy, with costly losses to both sides all the way (19 April 1775).

Condeixa ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marshal Michel Ney retreated from the failed French invasion of Portugal, fighting a series of remarkable rearguard actions against the cautious Allied pursuit led by Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington. Forced back at Redhina, General Louis Montbrun turned on the Allies on the Mondego River at Condeixa, delaying their advance as the French fell back on Cazal Novo (13 March 1811).

Condé-sur-l'Escaut ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

While besieging Condé, east of St Amand, Friedrich Josias Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Frederick Augustus Duke of York were attacked in a strong defensive position by the new French commander August Picot Marquis Dampierre. Following repeated failed attacks, Dampierre was killed by a cannonball and his force withdrew. Condé fell to Saxe-Coburg in mid-July (8 May 1793).

Condore ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Rajahmundry

Congella ❙ 1842 ❙ Natal War

In order to occupy Natal, Captain Thomas C. Smith secured Port Natal, then attacked the Boer camp at Congella, just outside Durban, held by Andreis Pretorius. The British column was driven off with 17 killed and 32 wounded and was then besieged in camp. Relieved by Colonel Abraham Cloete, they withdrew to Cape Colony, though within a year Britain had secured Natal (23 May 1842).

Conjeeveram ❙ 1692 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

See Kanchi

Conjeeveram ❙ 1751 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Days after victory at Arni over Raza Sahib (son of French-appointed Nawab Chanda Sahib), Robert Clive marched against the southeast Indian town of Conjeeveram (modern Kanchipuram), held by a French garrison under Portuguese soldier of fortune La Volonté. Two days of bombardment drove the garrison out and Clive pursued Raza Sahib to battle at Kaveripak (16–18 December 1751).

Conjeeveram ❙ 1780 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

See Perambakam

Connecticut ❙ 1815 ❙ War of 1812

Unaware that peace had been signed in Europe, the American frigate President (Captain Stephen Decatur) attempted to break out of the British blockade of New York. In a bloody action off Connecticut, the British frigate Endymion (Captain Henry Hope) was eventually disabled, but the frigates Pomone and Tenedos arrived, and the badly damaged President surrendered (15 January 1815).

Consarbruck ❙ 1675 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

With Marshal Henri de Turenne killed at Sasbach (27 July) Imperial forces advanced into Lorraine, and French Marshal Francois de Crequi was sent to drive off Duke Charles of Lorraine's siege of Trier. Crequi was defeated at nearby Consarbruck (modern Konz) and captured in the fall of Trier, leaving Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé to stem the threatened Imperial invasion (11 August 1675).

Constanta ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

General August von Mackensen seized the Romanian Danube cities of Tutrakan and Silistria, then took his German-Bulgarian-Turkish force east to attack the Black Sea port of Constanta, defended by Romanians and Russians under Andrei Zayonchovsky. Initially repulsed, Mackensen's second attack took the city by storm. He then turned west against Bucharest (22 October 1916).

Constantine ❙ 1836–1837 ❙ French Conquest of Algeria

Campaigning to complete the conquest of eastern Algeria, France faced continued resistance by the Bey of Constantine, who repulsed an attack by Marshal Bertrand Clausel (21 November 1836). Clausel was recalled and, in a hard-fought siege the next year, a larger force under Marshal Charles Damremont captured Constantine, though Damremont was killed by a sniper (6–13 October 1837).

Constantinople ❙ 443 ❙ Hun Invasion of the Roman Empire

Attila renewed his invasion of the Eastern Empire after destroying Sirmium in 441, capturing Naissus (Nis), Serdica (Sofia) and Arcadiopolis, then advancing on Constantinople, defended by Flavius Zeno. Outside the city, he defeated the Imperial army under Aspar the Alan and the Germans Areobindus and Arnegisclus, but lacked resources for a siege and pursued the Roman army to the Chersonesus.

Constantinople ❙ 532 ❙ Nika Insurrection

A riot by Hippodome factions in Constantinople shouting Nika (victory) became a revolt against Emperor Justinian. They proclaimed Hypatius (a nephew of Anastasius) as Emperor and six days of riot saw much of the city burned. Troops under Belisarius and Narses crushed the rising, with perhaps 30,000 killed. Hypatius and his brother Pompeius were arrested and executed (12–18 January 532).

Constantinople ❙ 626 ❙ Byzantine-Balkan Wars

While Emperor Heraclius was fighting the Persians in Asia Minor at the Sarus, the Avar Khan Baian advanced through Bulgaria to besiege Constantinople, defended by the Patriarch Sergius and the Emperor's son Constantine. Advancing Persians under Shahbaraz were intercepted and destroyed on the Bosphorus, and the Avars were defeated trying to storm the city (29 June–10 August 626).

Constantinople ❙ 672–677 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Syllaeum

Constantinople ❙ 717–718 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

One of the most costly Saracen attacks on Constantinople saw Muslim General Maslama lead a huge army, supported by a very large fleet under Suleiman. During a year-long siege, the Emperor Leo III inflicted massive Muslim losses on land and at sea—claimed to be over 100,000 men. Maslama was eventually defeated by an advancing Bulgarian relief army at Adrianople, and withdrew.

Constantinople ❙ 1047 ❙ Later Byzantine Military Rebellions

In a rising against his uncle, Emperor Constantine IX, Leo Tornikios (Tornices) gathered backing in Macedonia and marched on the capital, supported by General John Vatatzes. Tornikios very nearly succeeded attacking Constantinople itself, but when he hesitated, reinforcements arrived and drove him off. The rebels were defeated and Tornikios and Vatatzes were captured and blinded.

Constantinople ❙ 1187 ❙ Branas Rebellion

Two years after defeating Norman Sicily at the Strymon and Demetritsa, the Byzantine Admiral-General Alexius Branas rose in revolt against Emperor Isaac II and marched against the Byzantine capital. Outside the walls of Constantinople, Branas was met by an army under the Emperor's new brother-in-law, Conrad of Montferrat, and the rebel was defeated and killed.

Constantinople ❙ 1203–1204 ❙ 4th Crusade

When Crusaders supported Venice in attacking Constantinople, supposedly in support of the deposed Isaac II and his son Alexius, they helped capture it on 17 July 1203. However, the restored Byzantines rose against the Crusaders and a second attack took place. The city fell amid violent assault and deliberate destruction and Baldwin was established as the first Latin Emperor (11–13 April 1204).

Constantinople ❙ 1236 ❙ 2nd Latin-Byzantine Imperial War

The Byzantine John III Vatatzes of Nicaea renewed warfare against the Latin Emperors in Constantinople, establishing an alliance with Ivan Asen II of Bulgaria. Together they laid siege to the capital by land and sea, but with the support of newly arrived Venetian ships, the great Latin warrior John of Brienne led a brilliant counter-offensive to repulse the allies and break the siege.

Constantinople ❙ 1261 ❙ 3rd Latin-Byzantine Imperial War

From his base in Nicaea, the Byzantine Emperor Michael VIII Paleologus sent General Alexius Strategopoulos to attack Constantinople. With the Venetian navy and the best French knights away campaigning on the Black Sea, the city was captured with little fighting. Its fall marked the end of the Latin Crusader Emperors and the restoration of the Greek Empire (25 July 1261).

Constantinople ❙ 1352 ❙ Venetian-Genoese Wars

During a threatened trade war with Byzantium, Genoese Admiral Peganino Doria took his fleet right to the walls of Constantinople. Emperor John VI Cantacuzenus brought in Venetian ships under Niccolo Pisani to reinforce his own fleet led by Constantine Tarchaniotes. However, they were driven off in an indecisive action and John was forced to make peace with Genoa (13 February 1352).

Constantinople ❙ 1422 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Ending some years of peace between the Turks and the declining Greek Byzantine Empire,

Emperor Manuel II Palaeologus supported a usurper against Ottoman Sultan Murad II, who responded by attacking Constantinople itself. Murad's siege was driven off with severe losses and he made peace with Manuel, who agreed to pay a heavy annual tribute (June 1422).

Constantinople ❙ 1453 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Sultan Mehmed II's decisive offensive saw him take a massive force against Constantinople, defended by Emperor Constantine XI and General John Giustiniani. The city fell by storm after a devastating siege and one of the heaviest bombardments then recorded. The 1,000-year Byzantine Empire ended in slaughter with Constantine and Giustiniani both killed (February–29 May 1453).

Constantinople ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

In a large-scale military demonstration, British Admiral Sir John Duckworth appeared before Constantinople with eight ships of the line, demanding surrender of the Turkish fleet. With support from French General Francois Sébastiani, Sultan Selim II strengthened his resistance and Duckworth withdrew through the Dardanelles, suffering heavy damage (19 February–3 March 1807).

Constantinople ❙ 1912 ❙ 1st Balkan War

See Chataldja

Constellation* vs Insurgente ❙ 1799 ❙ Franco-American Quasi War

See Nevis

Constellation* vs Vengeance ❙ 1800 ❙ Franco-American Quasi War

See Guadeloupe

Constitution* vs Cyane ❙ 1815 ❙ War of 1812

See Madeira

Constitution* vs Guerrière ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

See Newfoundland

Constitution* vs Java ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

See Bahia

Con Thien (1st) ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

Despite costly failure at Khe Sanh (April–May), North Vietnamese regulars attempted a large-scale offensive further east across the DMZ into Quang Tri. Badly outnumbered US Marines around the small base at Con Thien suffered bloody losses, but heavy reinforcements, artillery and air-strikes (Operation Buffalo) finally repulsed the invaders with high casualties on both sides (2–14 July 1967).

Con Thien (2nd) ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

As a prelude to the Tet Offensive, North Vietnamese troops again tried to seize Quang Tri, unleashing one of their heaviest bombardments of the war against the hilltop base at Con Thien. American forces responded with a massive counter-bombardment by artillery, airstrikes and naval guns, and the Communists were driven off with perhaps 2,000 killed (11 September–31 October 1967).

Contreras ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

Nearing Mexico City after victory at Cerro Gordo (18 April), American General Winfield Scott split his force and sent General Persifor Smith west against General Gabriel Valencia in Contreras. Despite being initially repulsed, an American dawn attack with the bayonet drove the Mexicans out with heavy losses. Scott advanced later that day north through Churubusco (19–20 August 1847).

Convoy Pedestal ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

Determined to relieve besieged Malta, Allied Convoy Pedestal sailed from Gibraltar with a heavy escort. One of the war's most famous convoy battles saw Axis aircraft, submarines and surface ships sink an aircraft carrier, a cruiser, a destroyer and nine freighters. However, five merchant ships, including the tanker Ohio, reached Malta to prevent starvation and capitulation (10–15 August 1942).

Convoy PQ17 ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

One of the costliest convoy actions of the war saw Allied convoy PQ17 to Russia attacked by German aircraft and U-boats near Bear Island. Four German heavy ships in the area played no active part, but their threat led to a decision to scatter the convoy. Only 13 of 34 merchantmen reached Archangel. Later convoys to Russia were kept smaller for easier defence (27 June–8 July 1942).

Conwy ❙ 1295 ❙ English Conquest of Wales

Taking advantage of England's war in Gascony, Welsh nobles renewed the nationalist cause which had been crushed at Aber Edw in 1282. Edward I's advance into northern Wales was challenged at Conwy, south of Llandudno, where his archers and crossbowmen under William de Beauchamp Earl of Warwick destroyed the Welsh spearmen and Wales was occupied (January 1295).

Cooch's Bridge ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

As British General Sir William Howe marched towards Philadelphia, American commander General George Washington sent an inadequate force under General William Maxwell to halt the invaders. At Cooch's Bridge, on the Christiana northeast of Elkton, Delaware, Maxwell was repulsed by General Charles Earl Cornwallis and Howe advanced to victory at Brandywine (3 September 1777).

Cool Springs ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Snicker's Ferry

Copenhagen ❙ 1362 ❙ Wars of the Hanseatic League

Waldemar IV Atterdag expanded the power of Denmark, capturing Visby on the Baltic island of Gotland (July 1361). As a result, he found himself at war with the cities of the Hanseatic League allied with Sweden and Norway. The Allied fleet under John Wittenborg of Lubeck entered the Sound and sacked Copenhagen. However, the League's ships were defeated later that year off Helsingborg.

Copenhagen ❙ 1523–1524 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

After being deposed in Sweden by Gustav Vasa, the unpopular Christian II of Denmark faced rebellion in Jutland led by his uncle Duke Frederick of Holstein. Copenhagen was besieged by Frederick's General Johan Rantzau and, after the fall of the capital followed by capture of Malmo, the Duke became King of Denmark and Norway as Frederick I.

Copenhagen ❙ 1535–1536 ❙ Danish Counts' War

With Hanseatic forces destroyed at Oksnebjerg and Bornholm in June 1535, Lutheran Duke Christian of Schleswig and General Johan Rantzau besieged Copenhagen, which sided with Lubeck in favour of former King Christian II. Count Christopher of Oldenberg surrendered Copenhagen after 12 months of siege and the Duke entered the city in triumph as Christian III (24 July 1535–29 July 1536).

Copenhagen ❙ 1658 ❙ 1st Northern War

See Sound

Copenhagen ❙ 1700 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Attacked in Schleswig by Frederick IV of Denmark, 17-year-old Charles XII of Sweden boldly sailed against Copenhagen itself, repulsing the Danish fleet before landing under fire to seize nearby entrenchments. Copenhagen paid a massive indemnity to avoid siege, and Frederick was forced to make peace, freeing Charles to relieve the Russian siege of Narva (August 1700).

Copenhagen ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

When Denmark joined Russia, Prussia and Sweden against the British navy's Continental blockade, Britain sent a large naval squadron to the Baltic to neutralise the Danish fleet. Admiral Sir Hyde Parker opened a hard-fought action in Copenhagen harbour and, after his second-in-command Admiral Sir Horatio Nelson ignored a signal to withdraw, the Danish fleet was destroyed (2 April 1801).

Copenhagen ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

Concerned that Denmark might join the alliance between France and Prussia, British and Hanoverian troops led by General William Cathcart besieged Copenhagen, supported by warships under Admiral James Gambier. When negotiations failed, Copenhagen was bombarded for four days and capitulated, denying Napoleon Bonaparte the remaining Danish fleet (2–7 September 1807).

Cople ❙ 1860 ❙ Venezuelan Federalist Revolt

During a chaotic presidential succession, Federalist officers defeated the government at Santa Inés, yet, two months later, General León de Febres Cardero beat Federalist commanders Juan Crisótomo Falcón and Juan Antonio Sotillo near the Apure at Cople. Falcón fled to Colombia but, after years of costly war, he returned as President and oversaw decentralisation of authority (17 February 1860).

Coral Sea ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When Admiral Shigeyoshi Inoue took a large invasion force against Port Moresby in Papua, he was met in the nearby Coral Sea by Admiral Frank Fletcher. The first naval battle fought beyond the horizon saw greater losses in American ships, but the invasion was cancelled. Japanese losses, including a carrier sunk and another damaged, weakened them a month later at Midway (7–8 May 1942).

Corbach ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

See Korbach

Corbie ❙ 1636 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

In a fresh invasion of France, General Johann von Werth and Ferdinand Cardinal-Infante of Spain invaded Picardy and captured Corbie, east of Amiens, while other Imperial forces in the south besieged St Jean de Losne. However, Louis XIII sent reinforcements to his brother Louis de Bourbon Count of Soissons, who recaptured Corbie and drove back the invasion (July–August 1636).

Corbridge ❙ 914 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

The Viking Ragnall rallied the Danes of York and defeated the Bernician noble Ealdred Lord of Bamburgh at Corbridge-on-Tyne, just east of Hexham. Ealdred was driven out of northern Northumberland and sought refuge with King Constantine II of Scotland, who supported him four years later in another battle at the same site. (Some historians believe there was only one battle, in 918.)

Corbridge ❙ 918 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Supported by Constantine II of Scotland, Ealdred Lord of Bamburgh attempted to recover Bernica in northern Northumberland from the Danish Viking Ragnall, who had previously defeated him on the same site at Corbridge-on-Tyne, near Hexham (914). Although both sides claimed victory, Ragnall held part of Bernicia, while the Danes were kept out of Scotland.

Corcyra ❙ 427 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

Despite Spartan Admiral Alcidas failing to aid a rising against Athens in Mytilene, he was sent to support a similar insurrection on Corcyra (modern Corfu), off northwest Greece. A small Athenian force led by Nicostratus was driven off, but next day, a large Athenian fleet arrived under Eurymedon. The Peloponnesians withdrew and the rising was bloodily suppressed (August 427 BC).

Corcyra ❙ 1084 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

See Corfu

Cordova ❙ 1236 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

King Ferdinand III of Castile launched a brilliant offensive into Moorish Andalusia, where he besieged the Arab capital of Cordova, probably the greatest Muslim city in the West. While Cordova prepared for a lengthy resistance, the Emir Ibn Hud was assassinated and the city fell, leaving Ferdinand to advance down the Guadalquivir on a fresh expedition twelve years later to attack Seville.

Cordova ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Alcolea

Corfu ❙ 1084 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

Leading Norman forces against the Greek Empire, a year after victory at Dyrrhachium, Robert Guiscard took a large fleet to raise the naval blockade of Corcyra (modern Corfu), which the Normans had first captured in 1081. After twice being defeated by a Byzantine-Venetian fleet off Cassiope, south of Corfu, Guiscard won the third and decisive engagement off Corfu to regain the island.

Corfu ❙ 1537 ❙ Later Venetian-Turkish War

Sultan Suleiman turned against his former Venetian allies and besieged Corfu, off the coast of Albania, with massive assaults on the Venetian fortress. When an approaching fleet under Andrea Doria threatened to cut off his forces, Suleiman withdrew. However, the Turks were soon avenged at Valpovo, and Doria was defeated again a year later at Preveza (18 August–6 September 1637).

Corfu ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

See Ionian Islands

Corfu ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

While Napoleon Bonaparte was campaigning in Egypt, the French-held Ionian Islands off Greece were attacked by a combined Turkish-Russian fleet under Admirals Kadir Bey and Fedor Ushakov. Most of the islands fell quickly, but Corfu, defended by General Louis Chabot, held out for four months and surrendered only after nearby Vido fell by storm (November 1798–March 1799).

Corfu ❙ 1923 ❙ Corfu Incident

When General Enrico Tellini and three other Italian members of a Boundary Commission were assassinated in Greece, Benito Mussolini sent his navy to bombard and occupy Corfu, with needless civilian losses. Greece was forced to apologise and pay a 50-million lire indemnity before the Italians withdrew, enhancing the reputation of Mussolini, who then annexed Fiume (27 August 1923).

Corinth, Greece ❙ 394–392 BC ❙ Corinthian War

Withdrawing from Boeotia after costly victory at Coronea and naval defeat at Cnidus (394 BC), King Agesilaus of Sparta laid siege to Corinth, which was later reinforced by troops from Argos. The city was eventually relieved by a column from Athens under Iphicrates. The Spartans later resumed the blockade of Corinth (390 BC) until defeat by Iphicrates at Lechaeum.

Corinth, Greece ❙ 265 BC ❙ Chremonidian War

In revolt against Antigonus II Gonatus of Macedonia, Athenians led by Chremonides and his brother Glaucon formed an alliance with Sparta and Egypt, and Antigonus led an army into the Peloponnese. King Areus of Sparta was defeated and killed in terrible fighting outside Corinth and the alliance broke up, freeing Antigonus to turn his force against Athens the following year.

Corinth, Greece ❙ 243 BC ❙ Wars of the Achaean League

During the formation of the Achaean League—a confederation of Greek city-states—the leading founder was Aratus of Sicyon. His first great exploit was seizing Corinth from its Macedonian garrison by a small force which broke into the city at night. The fall of Corinth was instrumental in inducing other cities to join the Achaean League and, in 241 BC, Aratus seized the neighbouring city-state of Pellene.

Corinth, Greece ❙ 146 BC ❙ Roman-Achaean War

Driven back from a failed invasion of Roman northern Greece at Scarpheia, the Achaean army of Diaeus was routed later that year outside Corinth by a large Roman force under Lucius Mummius, with strong naval support. Mummius then destroyed Corinth and slaughtered its inhabitants, putting an end to the Achaean League of city-states and establishing Roman control over Greece.

Corinth, Mississippi (1st) ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

General Henry Halleck, advancing from the bloody Union victory at Shiloh, Tennessee, marched slowly south into Mississippi to besiege the defeated Confederate army of General Pierre G. T. Beauregard in the railroad centre at Corinth. Beauregard evacuated the town after a preliminary bombardment and most of his army escaped south to Tupelo (29 April–30 May 1862).

Corinth, Mississippi (2nd) ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Three weeks after eluding destruction at Iuka, Mississippi, Confederate General Sterling Price joined commander Earl Van Dorn attacking Union General William S. Rosecrans to the northwest at Corinth. The Confederates were eventually driven off with about 5,000 casualties, though a hesitant pursuit by Rosecrans failed to destroy Van Dorn next day at Hatchie Bridge (3–4 October 1862).

Cork ❙ 1920 ❙ Anglo-Irish War

Determined to crush Republican Cork City—where Lord Mayor Thomas MacCurtain was assassinated (20 March 1920) and his successor Terence MacSwiney died on hunger strike (25 October)—the Royal Irish Constabulary (Black and Tans) attacked the city. Public buildings and the city centre were destroyed and the bitter war continued until July 1921 (11–12 December 1920).

Cork ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

When government forces broke the line from Limerick to Waterford, the Republicans destroyed roads, bridges and railways to defend Cork City. However, General Emmet Dalton led an attack from the sea and 500 government troops sailed upriver towards the city. The Irregulars fled Cork after three days of heavy attack, virtually ending full-scale fighting in the field (7–10 August 1922).

Corona ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See La Corona

Coronea ❙ 447 BC ❙ 1st Peloponnesian War

Ten years after securing central Greece at Oenophyta, Athens faced insurrection encouraged by Thebes and sent only about 1,000 men under Tolmides to support their Boeotian allies. The Athenians took Chaeronea but had to withdraw, and were attacked at Coronea, north of Mt Helicon. Tolmides was killed and much of his force was captured in a disastrous defeat. Athens then abandoned Boeotia.

Coronea ❙ 394 BC ❙ Corinthian War

Determined to avenge recent Spartan defeat at Haliartus, King Agesilaus returned to Greece from Asia Minor and advanced into Boeotia against Athens, Argos, Thebes and Corinth. Despite brilliant defence by the Thebans, Agesilaus finally secured victory in a hard-fought costly action at Coronea, but continued his return march to Sparta. He then laid siege to Corinth (August 394 BC).

Coronel ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

Five cruisers of the German Far East Squadron led by Admiral Maximilian von Spee, trying to return home via Cape Horn, met three British cruisers under Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock off Coronel, Chile. Two of the outgunned British vessels were sunk, with Cradock lost. The following month a fresh British force destroyed von Spee off the Falkland Islands (1 November 1914).

Corrales ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

In a surprise attack across the Upper Parana at Paso de Patria, Paraguayan General José Eduvigis Díaz attacked Argentine Colonel Emilio Coneza and cavalry led by Colonel Manuel Hornos. Díaz withdrew into Paraguay after heavy fighting at Corrales, but the Argentines had suffered very costly losses and Paraguayan President Francisco Solano López claimed victory (30 January 1866).

Corregidor ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When General Masaharu Homma invaded the Philippines, General Douglas MacArthur, President Manuel Quezon and 40,000 men withdrew to Corregidor Island, off Bataan. MacArthur escaped to Australia (12 March) and General Jonathon Wainwright withstood massive bombardment before surrendering. Resistance in the Philippines ended 18 May at Panay (7 January–6 May 1942).

Corregidor ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

While securing Bataan in southwest Luzon, American General Charles Hall sent an amphibious force against nearby Corregidor, supported by a simultaneous paratroop landing. The Japanese garrison fought a tenacious defence, and many died when stored munitions were destroyed underground. Capture of the fortress island secured the entrance to Manila Bay (16–26 February 1945).

Corrichie ❙ 1562 ❙ Huntly Rebellion

Mary Queen of Scots undermined the powerful Gordons by giving land belonging to George Gordon Earl of Huntly to her half-brother James Stewart. Huntly marched on Aberdeen but was defeated by Stewart at nearby Corrichie and died after capture of apoplexy. Although his son Sir John was executed, their cause was renewed in 1571 at Tillyangus and in 1594 at Glenlivet (28 October 1562).

Corrick's Ford ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Rich Mountain

Corrientes (1st) ❙ 1865 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

After success against Brazil at Coimbra (December 1864), Paraguayan dictator Francisco Solano López sent a flotilla against Corrientes, on the Argentine shore of the Parana River. A sharp surprise attack saw the garrison defeated and two Argentine ships captured. Next day, Paraguayan General Wenceslao Robles landed with 3,000 men to briefly occupy the city (13 April 1865).

Corrientes (2nd) ❙ 1865 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Responding to Paraguay's capture of Corrientes in northern Argentina on the Parana, General Wenceslao Paunero counter-attacked with 2,000 men, including 350 Brazilians, while Paraguayan commander Wenceslao Robles was campaigning to the south. The garrison of 1,600 under Major Martinez was routed with 400 killed, but the Allies soon re-embarked (25 May 1865).

Corsica ❙ 456 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

When a fleet of 60 Vandal ships from Carthage sailed to Corsica, threatening both Gaul and Italy, they were surprised at anchor by the Suevic warrior Ricimer, acting for the Emperor Avitus. Ricimer overcame the Vandals—either in battle at sea or while they were dispersed ashore—and returned to Italy a hero. However, he soon rebelled against Avitus and defeated him at Placentia.

Cortenuova ❙ 1237 ❙ Imperial-Papal Wars

In renewed warfare against the Lombard League of northern Italy, Emperor Frederick II led a large army of Germans and Italians against Milan and its allies. Frederick eventually secured the victory in a protracted battle at Cortenuova, near Crema, with heavy losses on both sides. This convinced some Lombard cities to detach themselves from Milan (27 November 1237).

Corunna ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Retreating into northwest Spain after an unsuccessful invasion of Portugal, Sir John Moore's British army arrived at the small port of Corunna. In a remarkable defensive battle four days later, Marshal Nicolas Soult's pursuing French army was defeated, enabling most of the British force to be evacuated. However, Moore was killed by a cannonball just as the battle ended (16 January 1809).

Corunna Road ❙ 1936–1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

When Nationalists failed in a frontal assault on Madrid, General José Varela attacked to the north along the Corunna Road, where he was checked and wounded in a week of bloody fighting. General Luis Orgaz then resumed the offensive but suffered further heavy losses before both sides dug in. Orgaz later attacked southeast of the city at Jarama (13–20 December 1936 & 3–15 January 1937).

Corupedion ❙ 281 BC ❙ Wars of the Diadochi

War between Alexander's successors ended when Lysimachus of Thrace marched south to repulse an invasion by Seleucus of Syria. The septuagenarian warriors—who had fought together twenty years earlier at Ipsus—met at Corupedion, near the coast of Asia Minor, where Lysimachus was defeated and killed. Seleucus styled himself "Conqueror of the Conquerors," but he was soon assassinated.

Corus ❙ 281 BC ❙ Wars of the Diadochi

See Corupedion

Corycus ❙ 191 BC ❙ Roman-Syrian War

Driven from Greece at Thermopylae, Antiochus of Syria sent his fleet from Ephesus under Polyxenidas against the Roman Gaius Livius Salinator. Though heavily outnumbered, Polyxenidas attacked off Corycus, the port of Seleucia on the Ionian Peninsula. He was defeated, losing 23 ships. Both fleets withdrew and fought again the following year at nearby Myonnesus (September 191 BC).

Corydon ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On a raid against Union communications in Kentucky, Confederate General John H. Morgan captured Lebanon, then crossed the Ohio and was met by militia under Colonel Lewis Jordan at Corydon, Indiana, just west of Louisville. Morgan secured a sharp victory at little cost, then continued his destructive raid along the Ohio until he was trapped at Buffington Island (9 July 1863).

Cos ❙ 254 BC ❙ Macedonian-Egyptian Wars

Antigonus II of Macedonia secured the Peloponnese in battle at Corinth (265 BC) and Athens (262 BC), then joined with Antiochus II of Syria against Ptolemy III of Egypt, who had supported Athens and Sparta. Aided by Rhodian ships, Antigonus personally met the Egyptian fleet off Cos and secured a decisive victory. With Egypt's role in the Aegean curtailed, Ptolemy soon made peace.

Cos ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

See Kos

Cosmin ❙ 1497 ❙ Turkish Imperial Wars

In a breakdown of relations with Romania, John I Albert of Poland attacked his former ally Stephen of Moldavia, who had been promised Ottoman support. The Turks marched into Bukovina and, in the beech forests at Cosmin (modern Kitsman), near Chernovtsy, Albert was heavily defeated and sued for peace. Stephen also submitted, ending independent Romania (26 October 1497).

Cosseria ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Having defeated the Austrians at Montenotte, west of Genoa, French General Pierre Augereau advanced next day on the Piedmontese at Millesimo and was blocked by Austrian General Giovanni Provera at nearby Cosseria. After being delayed 24 hours with heavy casualties, Napoleon Bonaparte ordered Augereau forward to the victory at Dego and Cosseria fell next day (13–14 April 1796).

Cotagaita ❙ 1810 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

In an early attack on Royalist forces in the southwest of modern Bolivia, Argentine Patriots under General Antonio González Balcarce advanced against an entrenched position at Cotagaita, southeast of Lake Poopo, held by Spanish General José de Cordoba. The Patriots suffered a costly reverse yet had their revenge ten days later further south at Suipacha (27 October 1810).

Cotechna ❙ 1712 ❙ Tuscarora Indian War

After Tuscarora Indians attacked Roanoke, North Carolina sought aid from South Carolina, and Colonel John Barnwell led 60 militia and 500 Indians against the main Tuscarora village at Cotechna, near modern Grifton. Barnwell inflicted heavy losses but was twice repulsed. Fearing for the lives of white hostages, he agreed to a short-lived truce with King Hancock (January 1712).

Cotiaeum ❙ 491 ❙ Later Roman Wars of Succession

See Cotyaeum

Cotonou ❙ 1890 ❙ 1st Franco-Dahomean War

When King Behanzin of Dahomey (modern Benin) attempted to regain land ceded by his predecessor, war broke out and his forces attacked the small French contingent near Cotonou under Colonel Sébastien Terrillon. The French suffered costly losses in two actions near the town before the Dahomeans were repulsed. Terrillon was soon defeated at Atchoupa (1 & 4 March 1890).

Cotrone ❙ 204 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Crotona

Cotrone ❙ 982 ❙ Later German Imperial Wars

Emperor Otto II secured northern Italy, then attempted an offensive in the Byzantine south, where Abu Kasim, the Muslim Emir of Sicily, was also campaigning. Otto took Naples and Taranto, then faced an Arab-Byzantine alliance on the east coast near Cotrone (modern Crotone). Although Kasim was killed, Otto was routed and soon afterwards died in Rome, planning another offensive (July 982).

Cotyaeum ❙ 491 ❙ Later Roman Wars of Succession

After Anastasius was acclaimed Emperor on the death of Zeno, the former Emperor's brother Longinus of Cardala raised rebellion in Isauria. In battle at Cotyaeum (modern Kütahya), in west central Turkey, the Imperial army under John the Scythian and John the Hunchback secured decisive victory. Pockets of rebellion in Isauria persisted until resistance was finally suppressed in 498.

Cotyaeum ❙ 1113 ❙ Byzantine-Turkish Wars

When Malik Shah, son of the late Kilij Arslan, Seljuk Sultan of Rum, attempted to recover territory in Anatolia lost at the time of the 1st Crusade, he met with some early success before being challenged by Emperor Alexius I himself at Cotyaeum, south of Dorylaeum. In a major setback to his campaign, Malik Shah was heavily defeated and was beaten again in 1116 at Philomelion.

Coullioure ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Following his victory at Boulou (1 May), French General Jacques Dugommier continued his offensive against the Spanish invasion of the Rousillon by besieging the coastal fortress of Coullioure, supported by General Claude Victor. After a powerful sortie was repulsed (16 May), the garrison of 7,000 surrendered and the last coastal works were returned to French hands (26 May 1794).

Coulmiers ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

In a French offensive towards Orleans, General Louis Jean-Baptiste d'Aurelle led 70,000 men against Baron Ludwig von der Tann and defeated a patrol in the nearby forest of Marchénoir. Von der Tann's heavily outnumbered Bavarians withdrew northwest to Coulmiers and fell back on Artenay after fierce fighting. The French occupied Orleans, claiming a great victory (9 November 1870).

Council House Affair ❙ 1840 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

During peace talks between Comanche Indians and Texas officials at the Council House in San Antonio, shooting broke out in a dispute over the release of white prisoners. Of 65 Indians present, 33 were killed and the rest were captured, while seven whites died, including two judges. This treachery led to a vicious war with the Comanche, culminating in battle at Plum Creek (19 March 1840).

Countisbury Hill ❙ 878 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

King Alfred of Wessex had fled after the surprise Viking attack at Chippenham in January, yet managed to raise a Saxon force against a landing in northern Devon by 1,200 Danes under Ubba, brother of the great Halfdan. At Easter, Ubba was defeated and killed at Countisbury Hill, along with up to 800 of his men, winning Alfred increasing support for his imminent showdown at Edington.

Courtrai ❙ 1302 ❙ Franco-Flemish Wars

When Flanders revolted against Philip IV of France, the King's army under Count Robert of Artois was slaughtered at Courtrai, near Lille, after becoming bogged in soft ground. In the so-called Battle of the Spurs, Guy de Namur's Flemish infantry succeeded against mounted knights. Courtrai Cathedral was decorated with hundreds of spurs from the French dead (11 July 1302).

Courtrai ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Two weeks after French defeat at Landrécies, the French offensive was renewed as the left wing under Generals Jean Victor Moreau and Joseph Souham attempted a flanking movement around the Lys at Courtrai. Austrian Count Charles von Clerfayt was defeated trying to hold the advance and the French soon moved forward through Ghent to their decisive victory at Tourcoing (11 May 1794).

Courtrai ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In the second-phase offensive through Flanders against the northern Hindenburg Line, Belgian, British and French under King Albert of Belgium advanced on Courtrai and captured the key city. Further heavy fighting forced the Germans to evacuate Lille, and the Allies secured the strategic Belgian ports, then linked up with the main action on the Selle (14–19 October 1918).

Coutras ❙ 1587 ❙ 8th French War of Religion

In the War of the Three Henrys—King Henry III of France, Protestant King Henry of Navarre and Catholic Duke Henry of Guise—the principal battle was at Coutras, northeast of Bordeaux, where Henry of Navarre routed and killed Catholic commander Duke Anne of Joyeuse. Henry of Navarre gained southwest France and later took the throne as Henry IV (20 October 1587).

Covadonga ❙ 718 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Spain

Despite Muslim invaders driving the Visigoths out of Spain in 713 at Merida and Segoyuela, Don Pelayo, Christian king of Asturias in the northwest, led a revolt against Berber Governor Munuza, who sent an army under 'Alkama. A semi-legendary action at Covadonga, near Oveida, saw 'Alkama defeated and killed, traditionally marking the start of Christian Reconquest of Spain (trad date c 718).

Covelung ❙ 1752 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

With the French defeated at Trichinopoly in April, Robert Clive and a mixed British-Sepoy force marched south from Madras against the remaining French fortresses. The coastal fortress of Covelung surrendered after a steady bombardment, yielding 50 British guns captured at Madras. Having repulsed a relief column next day, Clive then marched inland against Chingleput (16 September 1752).

Cove Mountain ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Raiding railways in southwest Virginia following Union victory at Cloyd's Mountain, Union General William W. Averell met a Confederate brigade under General William E. Jones further west at Cove Mountain, just northeast of Wytheville. Jones fell back after an inconclusive action and Averell burned the New River Bridge before continuing north to Meadow Bluff (10 May 1864).

Cowan's Ford ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British commander Charles Earl Cornwallis crossed from South Carolina to attack North Carolina militia under General William Davidson at Cowan's Ford on the Catawba, west of Charlotte. Davidson was killed in a decisive action and his force scattered. Earl Cornwallis sent his cavalry forward the same day against other rebel forces at nearby Tarrant's Tavern (1 February 1781).

Cow Creek ❙ 1855 ❙ Rogue River War

See Hungry Hill

Cowpens ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

On a new rebel offensive in South Carolina, General Daniel Morgan advanced into the British rear, where he was pursued by Tory cavalry Colonel Banastre Tarleton. At Cowpens, near the Broad River, Tarleton was brilliantly outmanoeuvred and decisively defeated, reputedly escaping with only 200 men out of 1,100. Two weeks later he struck back at Tarrant's Tavern (17 January 1781).

Cox's Plantation ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Following victory on the Mississippi at Donaldsonville, Louisiana, Union forces under Generals Godfrey Weitzel and Cuvier Grover marched down the Lafourche and, six miles away at Cox's Plantation, were met by Confederate General Thomas Green. The Union forces were driven back with over 400 casualties and Green soon attacked again at Stirling's Plantation (12–13 July 1863).

Cracow ❙ 1241 ❙ Mongol Conquest of Europe

As the renewed Mongol invasion of Europe swept west after the destruction of Kiev (1240), Batu (grandson of Genghis Khan) sent his cousins Kaidu and Baidar into southern Poland against the strategic city of Cracow. The Polish army of Boleslav V was completely crushed to the northeast near Chmielnik and Kaidu continued west towards his decisive victory at Liegnitz (3 March 1241).

Cracow ❙ 1655 ❙ 1st Northern War

The Swedish army of Charles X took Warsaw and beat King John II Casimir at Czarnowo, then advanced south on Cracow, bravely defended by Hetman Stefan Czarniecki. However, with Polish defeat to the east at Wojnicz, Czarniecki had to evacuate Cracow. The Swedes were eventually checked at Jasna Gora, and Czarniecki briefly enjoyed victory in March 1656 at Warka (8 October 1655).

Cracow ❙ 1772 ❙ Polish Rebellion

In support of Polish Nationalists, French forces under Brigadier Claude-Gabriel Choisi took Cracow Castle by surprise but were quickly besieged by Russian Colonel Alexander Suvorov. A frontal assault was bloodily repulsed

(18 February) and, after a Polish relief force was defeated (28 February), the starving garrison finally surrendered, virtually ending the war (January–15 April 1772).

Cracow ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
See Limanowa

Crag Picquet ❙ 1863 ❙ Pathan Rising
See Ambela

Craibstane ❙ 1571 ❙ Huntly Rebellion
Sir Adam Gordon, brother of George Earl of Huntly, renewed Catholic rebellion following abdication by Mary Queen of Scots and defeated the Forbes clan at Tillyangus in October, then faced a government force sent from Stirling under Lord William Master of Forbes. While Gordon won again at Craibstane, outside Aberdeen, Earl Huntly later submitted to the government (20 November 1571).

Crampton's Gap ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See South Mountain

Craney Island ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812
When a British naval squadron blockaded Norfolk to try and capture the frigate Constellation, about 500 Americans under Colonel Henry Beatty determined to block them at Craney Island, guarding the Elizabeth River. Approaching in 15 boats, Captain Samuel Pechell's landing party of about 700 was devastated by American artillery, losing almost 100 men, and Norfolk was saved (22 June 1813).

Crannon ❙ 322 BC ❙ Lamian War
Athens and other Greek cities rebelled after the death of Alexander the Great and Antipater, Regent of Macedonia, was besieged at Lamia, trying to reassert control. His son-in-law, Craterus, invaded Greece with a large Persian army, and at Crannon, in Thessaly, Greek commanders Antiphilus and Menon were crushed. After Athens' fleet was destroyed off Amorgos the Greek revolt was over.

Craonne ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)
Napoleon Bonaparte marched north from victory at Montereau (18 February), pursuing the Prussian-Russian army of General Gebhard von Blucher threatening Paris. To the northeast at Craonne, Marshals Michel Ney and Claude Victor defeated Blucher's rearguard under Baron Ferdinand von Winzingerode. However, the Allied army managed to escape and fell back to Laon (7 March 1814).

Crasus ❙ 805 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars
When Nicephorus deposed the Empress Irene and withheld tribute due to Harun al-Rashid in Baghdad, the Caliph led a Muslim army into Phrygia (west central Anatolia) and defeated the Byzantine army several times, most notably at Crasus. The following year, Harun assembled an even larger army and secured decisive victory over the Emperor at Heraclea.

Crater ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
During the Union siege of Petersburg, Virginia, by General Ambrose E. Burnside, a massive mine was successfully exploded under the Confederates' defensive line to the southeast. But as Union soldiers advanced through the resulting crater, they were massacred in a counterattack by General William Mahone. It was terrible, costly failure, and Burnside was relieved of command (30 July 1864).

Cravant ❙ 1423 ❙ Hundred Years War
Following the death of Charles VI of France and his appointed heir, Henry V of England, war continued between the Dauphin Charles VII and English forces on behalf of the infant Henry VI. Attempting to seize Cravant, near Auxerre, the Dauphin's Franco-Scottish army was heavily defeated by an English-Burgundian relief force under Thomas Montacute Earl of Salisbury (30 July 1423).

Crayford ❙ 457 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Creccanford

Crazy Woman Creek ❙ 1876 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

General George Crook pursued the Sioux after defeat at Little Big Horn (26 June) to win at Slim Buttes, then sent Colonel Ranald Mackenzie against the Cheyenne in the Big Horn Mountains. At Crazy Woman Creek, south of Sheridan, Wyoming, Mackenzie's attack destroyed Dull Knife's camp and pony herd. Crazy Horse himself was beaten at Wolf Mountain six weeks later (25 November 1876).

Creazzo ❙ 1513 ❙ War of the Holy League

See Vicenza

Creccanford ❙ 457 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

A year after defeating their former ally Vortigern King of the Britons at Aegelsthrep, the semi-legendary Jute warrior Hengist and his son Aesc achieved a further victory over the British leader on the banks of the Cray at Creccanford (modern Crayford), near Dartford. Another victory at Wippedesfleet in 465 gave this first Anglo-Saxon a kingdom in southeast England.

Crecy ❙ 1346 ❙ Hundred Years War

Following a French invasion of Gascony, Edward III of England took a large army which captured Caen, then met a French force almost three times as large at Crecy-en-Ponthieu, north of Abbeville. Repeated assaults by Philip VI's cavalry were destroyed by devastating fire from English longbows in one of the worst defeats ever inflicted by infantry on mounted knights (26 August 1346).

Cree ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

While Robert the Bruce was campaigning in Argyle, his brother Edward marched into Galloway against local lords led by Sir Ingram de Umfraville and Sir John de St John. Bruce defeated the Galwegians on the banks of the Cree, between the counties of Kircudbright and Wigtown and, after a further victory at the Dee in June, went on to occupy Galloway.

Crefeld ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

As Frederick II of Prussia fought Austrians in Moravia at Olmütz, he sent Hanoverians, Hessians and Brunswickers led by Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick to drive the French across the Rhine. Louis de Bourbon-Condé Comte de Clermont made a stand at Crefeld, but his numerically superior force was heavily defeated and he continued withdrawing towards Cologne (23 June 1758).

Crema ❙ 1159–1160 ❙ Frederick's 2nd Expedition to Italy

Emperor Frederick Barbarossa took Milan (September 1158), then continued his campaign in Lombardy by marching east to besiege the heavily fortified small city of Crema. With the Emperor personally in command, the siege was pressed with extraordinary brutality. When Crema fell after six months, it was evacuated and razed to the ground (4 July 1159–27 January 1160).

Cremaste ❙ 388 BC ❙ Corinthian War

Two years after defeating Sparta outside Corinth at Lechaeum, the Athenian Iphicrates sailed to the Dardanelles to attack the Spartan Anaxibius at Abydos. Anaxibius was ambushed and badly defeated on the nearby Plain of Cremaste, but the Athenian fleet was cut off by Spartan, Persian and Syracusan ships under Antalcidas. Athens was forced to accept the "King's Peace," which ended the war.

Cremera ❙ 477 BC ❙ Early Roman-Etruscan Wars

In the war for control of the Lower Tiber, Romans under Marcus Fabius advanced against the Etruscans of Veii and fortified a camp on the Cremera, where it joins the Tiber near Fidenae. Disastrous defeat saw the Fabii virtually annihilated, with a claimed 300 of their patricians killed, along with other allies. Within a few years Rome had established temporary peace with the Etruscans (18 July 477).

Cremona ❙ 200 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy

Boii, Insubres and Cenomani Gauls of northern Italy, commanded by the Carthaginian General Hamilcar, sacked Placentia, then quickly turned east against Cremona. However, the city held out under siege until Praetor Lucius Furius Purpureo arrived from Ariminum. The Gauls suffered a decisive defeat, with perhaps 35,000 killed. Three years later the Insubres were beaten at the Mincio.

Cremona ❙ 69 ❙ Vitellian Civil War

See Bedriacum

Cremona ❙ 1431 ❙ Venetian-Milanese Wars

A large-scale naval battle on the River Po near Cremona saw the Venetian fleet under Admiral Niccolo Trevigiano and the soldier of fortune Francesco Bussone Count Carmagnola defeated by the Duke of Milan's Generals, Niccolo Piccinino and Francesco Sforza. However, Milan eventually sued for peace. Carmagnola was later executed by Venice for alleged disloyalty (June 1431).

Cremona ❙ 1648 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Trancheron

Cremona ❙ 1702 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

In a brilliant coup against the French in Lombardy, Prince Eugène of Savoy led a surprise night attack on Cremona, causing heavy damage and casualties and capturing French officers, including commander Francois de Neufville Marshal Villeroi. However, the citadel held out and Eugène withdrew when a relief army approached under Charles Henri Prince de Vaudemont (1 February 1702).

Cresson ❙ 1187 ❙ 3rd Crusade

Prior to Saladin's invasion of Palestine, a large Muslim reconnaissance force crossing Galilee under treaty was recklessly attacked at the Springs of Cresson, near Nazareth, by only about 140 knights of the military orders. Hospitallier Grandmaster Roger de les Moulins was killed in the ensuing disaster and Templar Grandmaster Gerard of Ridfort was among just a handful of survivors (1 May 1187).

Crete ❙ 960–961 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Following decades of failed Byzantine campaigns against Muslim Andalusians in Crete, Emperor Romanos II sent a massive fleet and army under Nicephorus Phocas, who landed to attack the principal fortress of Chandax (modern Khania), defended by the Emir Kouroupas. Chandax was taken by storm after a long winter siege, effectively securing the whole of Crete (July 960–6 March 961).

Crete ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

When Greece fell, British forces under General Bernard Freyberg withdrew to Crete, where General Kurt Student launched a bold assault with gliders and paratroops. A supporting seaborne assault was driven off at the cost of heavy losses to the Royal Navy, but after success at Maleme and elsewhere, the Germans captured Crete, along with over 11,000 prisoners (20 May–1 June 1941).

Crête-à-Perriot ❙ 1802 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Santo Domingo Rising)

Napoleon Bonaparte's brother-in-law General Charles Leclerc, sent to suppress a rising in Santo Domingo by black leader Francois Toussaint l'Ouverture, besieged Fort Crête-à-Perriot inland from St Marc, held by troops of Jean Jacques Dessalines under Louis Lamartiniere. The rebels held out for three weeks and inflicted 2,000 French casualties before they slipped away (4–24 March 1802).

Creussen ❙ 1003 ❙ German War of Succession

Amid disputed succession for the German crown following the death of the childless young

Otto III, the new Emperor Henry II faced a rebellion by the Margrave Henry of Schweinfort, Ernest of Babenburg and his own brother Bruno. Inconclusive warfare ended when the rebels were decisively defeated at the siege of Creussen, on the River Main, and Henry's succession was assured.

Crichton ❙ 1337 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

During the Scottish Royalist war against the English-backed claimant Edward Baliol, Sir Andrew Moray, Regent for the boy-King David II of Scotland, and Sir William Douglas of Liddesdale laid siege to English-held Edinburgh. Southeast at Crichton, they were attacked by an English relief force. While Moray claimed the victory, Douglas was severely wounded and the siege was lifted.

Crimea ❙ 1771 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

See Perekop

Crimisus ❙ 340 BC ❙ Timoleon's War

Four years after securing Syracuse in eastern Sicily with victory at Adranum, Timoleon of Corinth was threatened by a fresh Carthaginian invasion under Hamilcar and Hasdrubal. Marching northwest, he surprised the Punic army crossing the Crimisus, near Segesta. The Carthaginians retreated under siege to Lilybaeum with a reported 10,000 killed and 15,000 captured, and Timoleon withdrew.

Crisa ❙ 590 BC ❙ 1st Sacred War

The Phocian city of Crisa demanded tolls from pilgrims travelling to Delphi, which sought aid from the Sacred League of northern and central Greece. Thessaly sent an army under Eurylochus, who besieged the city, aided by troops from Athens, while Cleisthenes of Sicyon sent ships for a blockade. Crisa surrendered and was destroyed, and Delphi became the seat of the Sacred League.

Crnomen ❙ 1371 ❙ Ottoman Conquest of the Balkans

See Maritza

Crocus Field ❙ 352 BC ❙ 3rd Sacred War

See Pagasae

Croia ❙ 1466–1467 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

See Krujë, Albania

Croix d'Orade ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington closed in to besiege Toulouse, British forces under General Sir Richard Vivian advanced in the northeast to capture the key bridge at Croix d'Orade on the River Hers, defended by General Jacques Vial. Although a relatively minor action, in which Vivian was wounded, the bridge was taken, securing strategic passage for Wellington's army (8 April 1814).

Cromdale ❙ 1690 ❙ First Jacobite Rebellion

In the last armed Scottish resistance to the accession of William III after defeat at Dunkeld (21 August 1689), Highland forces loyal to James II rose in rebellion, led by General Thomas Buchan. Camped at Cromdale, east of Grantown in Moray, the Jacobites were attacked and routed by Royalist forces under Sir Thomas Livingstone, ending the rising (1 May 1690).

Cronion ❙ 383 BC ❙ 3rd Dionysian War

See Cronium

Cronium ❙ 383 BC ❙ 3rd Dionysian War

When Carthaginian leader Mago died at Cabala in Sicily, his son, also Mago, took command and later that year continued the offensive against Dionysius, Tyrant of Syracuse. The Syracusans suffered severe losses in a decisive battle at Cronium, near Palermo, including General Leptines, brother of Dionysius, killed. The Tyrant sued for peace and Carthage secured most of western Sicily.

Crooked Creek ❙ 1859 ❙ Comanche Indian Wars

Leading a new campaign against the Comanche following success at Rush Springs, Oklahoma (October 1858), Major Earl van Dorn took 500 men into Kansas and trapped about 90 Comanche in a deep ravine at Crooked Creek, north of the Canadian River. Not one escaped, with 49 warriors killed and five wounded and 37 prisoners, mainly women. Van Dorn lost six killed (13 May 1859).

Cropredy Bridge ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

King Charles I attempted to concentrate his forces at Worcester but was blocked by Sir William Waller north of Banbury at Cropredy, where General John Middleton held the bridge over the River Cherwell. Waller was heavily repulsed at nearby Slat Mill after Royalist troops cleared the bridge, and the Parliamentary troops dispersed, abandoning their guns (29 June 1644).

Cross Keys ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Two weeks after supporting Confederate victory at Winchester, in the northern Shenandoah, General Richard S. Ewell was attacked by Union commander General John C. Frémont at Cross Keys, near Harrisonburg, Virginia. Ewell routed part of Frémont's army under General Julius Stahel, then marched south to support General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson at Port Republic (8 June 1862).

Cross Lanes ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate General John Floyd took the initiative in West Virginia, leading his brigade across the Gauley to surprise Colonel Erastus B. Tyler in camp at Kessler's Cross Lanes, just south of Summersville. The Union force was heavily defeated, losing almost 300 men, including many captured. Floyd withdrew south to the river, and next month met an attack at Carnifex Ferry (26 August 1861).

Crotona ❙ 204 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

On the defensive in the "toe" of Italy after the defeat of reinforcements in the north in Liguria (16 June), Carthaginian General Hannibal defeated an approaching army under Publius Sempronius outside Crotona (modern Crotone). Reinforced by Licinius, Sempronius renewed his attack. Hannibal suffered greater losses in a drawn action, yet the Romans fell back and he was able to withdraw through Bruttium.

Crouy ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

See Ourcq

Crown Point (1st) ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Two days after capturing Fort Ticonderoga on the western shore of Lake Champlain, American Major Ethen Allen sent Seth Warner and a company of the Green Mountain Boys ten miles north against Crown Point. The small isolated fort surrendered with little resistance, but was later reoccupied by the British after the failed American invasion of Canada (12 May 1775).

Crown Point (2nd) ❙ 1755 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Lake George

Cruachan Ben ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

See Brander

Crusader ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See Sidi Rezegh

Császáhalom ❙ 1441 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

After rebuilding the fortifications of Belgrade following the previous year's failed Ottoman siege, Hungarian General Janos Hunyadi raided south against Ishak Bey, Ottoman Governor of Semendria (modern Smederevo). The forces met at nearby Császáhalom in a relatively minor battle. However, the Turks suffered a decisive defeat and were driven back to the fortress at Semendria.

Ctesiphon ❙ 198 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus

Emperor Septimius Severus secured western Europe at Lugdunum (197), then led a major offensive through Mesopotamia, where he sacked Seleucia and Babylon, then advanced on Ctesiphon, southeast of modern Baghdad. Vologases V of Parthia was defeated and fled after a decisive action and Severus styled himself Parthicus Maximus. He was checked at Atra the following year (January 198).

Ctesiphon ❙ 363 ❙ Later Roman-Persian Wars

On campaign against the Sassanid Shapur II, Emperor Julian advanced down the Euphrates to destroy Pirisabora and Maiozamalcha, then moved east against Ctesiphon, on the Tigris. Lacking confidence to besiege a major city Julian declined a siege and ten days later he died in a skirmish. New Emperor Jovian sued for peace and surrendered Nisibis and Roman territory east of the Tigris (June 363).

Ctesiphon ❙ 637 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Madain

Ctesiphon ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Anglo-Indian General Charles Townshend, advancing up the Tigris through Kut-al-Amara, attacked General Nur-ud-Din, who held two strongly defended lines at Ctesiphon, just 16 miles from Baghdad. The British seized the first line, but heavy losses and Turkish reinforcements forced them to withdraw through Umm-at-Tubal to the terrible siege at Kut (22–25 November 1915).

Cuarte ❙ 1094 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

After the capture of Valencia by Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid—Yusuf ibn Tashfin, King of the Almoravids, sent his nephew Mohammed against the city. The large Berber and Almoravid army camped at nearby Cuarte, and after they spent ten days demonstrating around the defences, El Cid counter-attacked in force, routing the Muslims and seizing a huge amount of booty (June 1094).

Cuaspud ❙ 1863 ❙ Ecuador-Colombia War

When President Tomás Cipriano de Mosquera of Colombia sent aid to rebels against President Gabriel García Moreno of Ecuador, General Juan José Flores took a large force into southern Colombia. In a disastrous defeat for Ecuador at Cuaspud, Flores was routed by a smaller Colombian army, losing 1,500 casualties and 2,000 captured, and the war quickly ended (6 December 1863).

Cuautla ❙ 1812 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

General Félix María Calleja captured Zitácuaro, then attacked Cuautla, southeast of Mexico City, held by Mexican rebels José María Morelos and Ermengildo Galeana. Ciriaco de Llano arrived with siege reinforcements and, after months of bombardment and assault with heavy losses on both sides, Morelos evacuated. In December 1813, he was beaten at Valladolid (18 February–2 May 1812).

Cuautla ❙ 1911 ❙ Mexican Revolution

Following victory for Francisco Madero in the north at Ciudad Juárez (10 May), Emiliano Zapata attacked Cuautla, southeast of Mexico City, where General Felipe Meri took the Convent of San Diego by storm. Zapata captured Cuautla next day, then took nearby Cuernavaca without a fight. President Porfirio Diaz resigned six days later and Madero formed a new government (20 May 1911).

Cuchilla del Tambo ❙ 1816 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

See El Tambo

Cuddalore ❙ 1748 ❙ 1st Carnatic War

During his unsuccessful siege of British Fort St David, south of Pondicherry, French Governor General in India, Marquis Joseph Dupleix, marched against nearby Cuddalore, defended by Major Stringer Lawrence and about 1,000 men. The superior French force was dispersed with heavy gunfire in a disorganised night-time assault and they returned to Pondicherry (27–28 June 1748).

Cuddalore ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

In resumed warfare against Britain in India, French Admiral Comte Ann-Antoine d'Aché arrived on the southeast coast of India in support of new Governor General Comte Thomas Lally. During an indecisive naval action off Cuddalore, d'Aché was repulsed by Admiral Sir George Pocock and retired to Pondicherry. Cuddalore surrendered to Lally a week later (29 April 1758).

Cuddalore ❙ 1782 ❙ 2nd British-Mysore War

Encouraged by his overwhelming defeat in February of a small British force in southeast India at Kumbakonam, Tipu Sultan, heir to the ruler of Mysore, advanced with his French allies against the key seaport of Cuddalore, south of Pondicherry. Aided at sea by Admiral Pierre André Suffren, Tipu overwhelmed the garrison of 400 and the port became a key base against the British (April 1782).

Cuddalore (1st) ❙ 1783 ❙ War of the American Revolution

General James Stuart (1735–1793) led a British expedition from Madras and laid siege to Cuddalore, south of Pondicherry, garrisoned by the Marquis Charles de Bussy. While the French were driven from their trenches in heavy fighting, Stuart's force was demoralised by the defeat of the naval blockade off Cuddalore. De Bussy held out until peace in Europe ended the war (13 June 1783).

Cuddalore (2nd) ❙ 1783 ❙ War of the American Revolution

In the last of five indecisive naval actions off the east coast of India, French Admiral Pierre André Suffren slipped into besieged Cuddalore for new crew, then attacked the blockade of British ships under British Admiral Edward Hughes. Despite the French captains failing to press their advantage, Hughes was forced to abandon his blockade, though the siege continued (20 June 1783).

Cuenca ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

Soon after Carlist forces successfully defended Estella, Don Alfonso de Bourbon, brother of the Don Carlos VII, led 14,000 partisans south to attack Cuenca, bravely held by Republicans under Don Hilario Lozano. The outnumbered garrison capitulated after two days, but Don Alfonso permitted a terrible slaughter. He was then gradually driven back and left Spain three months later (July 1874).

Cuevas ❙ 1865 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

See Paso de Ceuvas

Cuito Cuanavale ❙ 1987–1988 ❙ Angolan War

The decisive action in the long struggle for Namibia was fought in Angola at Cuito Cuanavale between Angola's Cuban-backed government (MLPA) and South African forces supporting the local opposition (UNITA). The largest battle in Africa since WW II saw very heavy losses in men and armour. Cuba and SADF withdrew and Namibia secured independence (September 1987–April 1988).

Culblean ❙ 1335 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

See Kilblain

Culebrera ❙ 1840 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

Rebel Colonel Manuel Gonzáles won in the north at La Polonia (29 September), then marched south towards Bogotá. In two actions on the same day to the northwest at Buenavista and Culebrera, the rebels were defeated by government forces under Colonels Juan José Neira and José Vargas Paris. Bogotá was saved and in early 1841 González was routed at Aratoca (28 October 1840).

Cullera ❙ 1129 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Despite his victories at Saragossa (1118) and Cutanda (1120), King Alfonso I of Aragon—El Batallador, the fighter—faced a fresh Muslim offensive into Christian Valencia by the powerful Emir Ali Ibn Yusuf. At Cullera, on the Jucar, south of Valencia, Alfonso inflicted a heavy defeat on the invaders with huge losses in men and stores. But he was unable to halt the Muslim advance (May 1129).

Culloden ❙ 1746 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

Standing with his outnumbered supporters on Culloden Moor, east of Inverness, Charles Stuart—Bonnie Prince Charlie—faced the well-equipped Hanoverian army of Duke William of Cumberland. Over 1,000 Highlanders died in a terrible rout, with many more killed in the subsequent pursuit and persecution. Charles fled to France and the rebellion was brutally crushed (16 April 1746).

Culp's Farm ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Kolb's Farm

Cumae ❙ 474 BC ❙ Syracusan-Etruscan War

With Syracuse supreme in Sicily after victory at Himera (480 BC), the Tyrant Hiero sailed to the west coast of the Italian mainland to meet Etruscan forces advancing into Campania to threaten the Greek colony at Cumae, just west of Naples. Leading the Syracusan fleet into the Bay of Naples, Hiero secured a great naval victory, confirming Syracusan influence in southern Italy.

Cumae ❙ 38 BC ❙ Wars of the Second Triumvirate

Octavian planned to invade Sicily and prepared a large fleet under Caius Sabinius Calvisius and Mendorus, which was attacked in the Bay of Cumae, near Naples, by the fleet of Sextus Pompeius (Pompey the Younger) under Menecrates. While Menecrates was killed, Octavian's fleet suffered a heavy defeat and, after further ships were lost in a storm, he postponed his expedition against Pompey.

Cumberland ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate General Jubal A. Early pursued Union forces across the Potomac after victory at Kernstown (24 July), sending General John McCausland to burn Chambersburg, Pennsylvania. McCausland was ambushed by General Benjamin Kelley two days later near Cumberland, Maryland, and he was soon defeated in West Virginia by pursuing Union cavalry at Moorefield (1 August 1864).

Cumberland Church ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Farmville

Cunaxa ❙ 401 BC ❙ Persian Civil War

When young Prince Cyrus attempted to seize the throne of Persia from his elder brother Artaxerxes, his large force, including 13,000 Greek mercenaries, met Artaxerxes at Cunaxa, north of Babylon. When Cyrus himself was killed in the fighting, his Persian supporters fled, and the surviving Greeks, under Clearchus and later Xenophon, began the famous March of the 10,000 to the Black Sea.

Cuneo ❙ 1744 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Louis-Francois de Bourbon Prince of Conti led a French offensive which took Villefranche and other towns in northern Italy, before being stalled by the stubborn fortress of Cuneo, west of Turin, held by Baron Friedrich von Leutrum. Conti repulsed a relief force at nearby Madonna del Olmo, before heavy losses to casualties and disease made him raise the siege (September–22 October 1744).

Curalaba ❙ 1598 ❙ Spanish Conquest of Chile

Governor Martin García Oñez de Loyola of Chile renewed expansion to the south, provoking united opposition under the Araucanian leader Pelantaro. In a disastrous defeat at Curalaba, Loyola was killed, along with perhaps 150 Spaniards and 250 Indian auxiliaries. Pelantaro then destroyed colonial outposts and Spain withdrew, accepting the Bio Bio as their de facto border (23 December 1598).

Curicta ❙ 49 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

Attempting to protect Illyricum against Pompey, Publius Cornelius Dolabella took a fleet across the Adriatic, but off the Dalmatian island of Curicta (modern Krk), he was heavily defeated by the Pompeian Admirals Marcus Octavius and Lucius Scribinius Libo. Dolabella withdrew with 40 ships lost, and the Caesarian garrison of Curicta under Gaius Antonius was starved into surrender.

Curtatone ❙ 1848 ❙ 1st Italian War of Independence

King Charles Albert of Sardinia joined the war against Austria, but he was defeated at Santa Lucia (6 May) and withdrew the Italian allies behind well-established entrenchments at Curtatone, just west of Mantua. Austrian Marshal Josef Radetzky, with Baron Heinrich von Hesse as Chief of Staff, stormed the defences, taking numerous prisoners, then won again at Custozza (29 May 1848).

Curupaíty ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

The Argentine, Brazilian and Uruguayan allies under Generals Bartolomé Mitre and Venancio Flores advanced into southwest Paraguay near Curuzú and attacked Paraguayan General José Eduvigis Diaz entrenched at Curupaíty, south of Humaitá. A disastrous reversal cost Mitre about half his army—9,000 casualties—while Diaz claimed to have lost fewer than 100 men (22 September 1866).

Curuzú ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

On the offensive in southwest Paraguay against Dictator Francisco Solano López, the Argentine, Brazilian and Uruguayan allies under General Venancio Flores attacked and overran advanced Paraguayan positions on the Paraguay at Curuzú. The victory encouraged the Allied advance, which was however broken against entrenched positions further north at Curupaíty (3 September 1866).

Curzola ❙ 1298 ❙ Venetian-Genoese Wars

Ending the long war between Genoa and Venice, Genoese Admiral Lamba Doria met the much larger Venetian fleet of Admiral Andrea Dandola near Curzola Island in the eastern Adriatic. The Venetian ships were virtually all sunk or captured, with massive casualties in killed or captured, and Genoa remained Italy's greatest maritime power for the next 80 years (7 September 1298).

Custer's Last Stand ❙ 1876 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

See Little Big Horn

Custozza ❙ 1848 ❙ 1st Italian War of Independence

Defeated by Austria at Curtatone (29 May), King Charles Albert of Sardinia led an army against Marshal Josef Radetzky, covering Verona. A hard action to the southwest at Custozza saw Piedmontese forces defeated, and Radetzky crossed the Minco at Volta (27 July) to retake Milan. There was a brief armistice before fighting resumed in March 1849 at Mortara and Novara (24–25 July 1848).

Custozza ❙ 1866 ❙ 3rd Italian War of Independence

With Austria under attack by Prussia in Bohemia, Italy declared war (18 June), and King Victor Emmanuel sent a large army under Alfonso Ferrero Marquis di la Mamora against Archduke Albert of Austria. The Italians were utterly defeated at Custozza, southwest of Verona, but after Austrian disaster a week later at Königgratz, Albert was withdrawn and Venetia was ceded to Italy (24 June 1866).

Cutanda ❙ 1120 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Capture of the key Muslim city of Saragossa in December 1118 by Alfonso I of Aragon—El Batallador, the fighter—provoked renewed Muslim resistance. However, the large-scale Almoravid counter-attack was heavily defeated at Cutanda. The Christian victory led directly to Alfonso's capture of nearby Daroca, Calatayud and other territory formerly under Muslim Saragossa (17 June 1120).

Cut Knife Creek ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

A week after relieving Battleford, in northwest Saskatchewan, Colonel William Otter advanced west against the Canadian Cree Poundmaker (Pitikwahanapiwiyin) in camp at Cut Knife Creek. Otter was driven back to Battleford with 23 casualties after seven hours and Poundmaker's band marched east to support the rebels at Batoche, intercepting Otter's supplies at Eagle Hills (2 May 1885).

Cutton Moor ❙ 1138 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Territorial Wars

See Standard

Cuzco ❙ 1532 ❙ Inca War of Succession

Following the death of the Inca Emperor Huayna Capac (1527), bloody war broke out between his successor Huascar and his younger son Atahualpa. The war reached its climax at the Inca capital Cuzco (in modern Peru), where Huascar was defeated and overthrown, followed by bloody reprisals. After Atahualpa was seized by the Spanish at nearby Cajamarca (1532) he ordered his brother Huascar's execution.

Cuzco ❙ 1535–1536 ❙ Inca Revolt

After Francisco Pizarro seized Peru at Cajamarca, the Inca Manco Capac took advantage of his absence to raise revolt, which saw initial success. Manco besieged Cuzco, where garrison commander Juan Pizarro was killed. Spanish forces captured Quito in the north, then drove off the ten-month siege of Cuzco in heavy fighting. The Inca withdrew into the mountains and Spanish civil war broke out.

Cuzco ❙ 1538 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

See Salinas, Peru

Cuzco Hills ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

American commander Bowman H. McCalla secured Fisherman's Point in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba, and a few days later 160 marines under Captain George F. Elliot and 50 Cubans led by Colonel Enrique Thomas attacked the Spanish on the nearby Cuzco Hills. Supported by naval shelling, the marines won a costly action and the Spanish troops fled towards Guantánamo City (14 June 1898).

Cyme ❙ 474 BC ❙ Syracusan-Etruscan War

See Cumae

Cymensore ❙ 477 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Landing on the west Sussex coast with his sons Cymen, Wlencing and Cissa, the Saxon adventurer Aella defeated the Britons at a site traditionally known as Cymensore (named for his son), probably near Selsey, west of modern Portsmouth. Aella drove the Britons into the Andredsweald and, after victory at Mearcredesburn (485) and Anderida (491), he became King of the South Saxons.

Cynoscephalae ❙ 364 BC ❙ Wars of the Greek City-States

When several cities in Thessaly sought aid from Thebes against Alexander, Despot of Pherae, an expedition was sent under the powerful General Pelopidas, who was taken prisoner (368 BC). After being rescued by Epaminondas, Pelopidas defeated Alexander at Cynoscephalae, south of Larissa near Skotoussa, but was killed in action. The Tyrant was forced to acknowledge Theban hegemony.

Cynoscephalae ❙ 197 BC ❙ 2nd Macedonian War

After defeating Philip V of Macedonia in northwest Greece at the Aous (198 BC), Roman commander Titus Quinctius Flamininus advanced southeast into Thessaly and met the Greeks at Cynoscephalae, south of Larissa. The Macedonian phalanx was routed by Roman Legions in a decisive action, with perhaps 13,000 killed. Philip sued for peace, yielding all claim to Greece (June 197 BC).

Cynossema ❙ 411 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

Recovering from disaster at Syracuse (413 BC), the Athenian navy was rebuilt and sailed to defend the Hellespont access to the Black Sea, where it faced an attack by Spartan Admiral Mindarus. Off Cynossema, near Abydos in the narrows, the Athenians secured a close victory. The following year they attacked and defeated Mindarus further east at Cyzicus (September 411 BC).

Cynthiana ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General John H. Morgan escaped from prison after surrender near Salineville (July 1863) and once again led a raid into Kentucky, where he captured General Edward Hobson's garrison at Cynthiana, northeast of Lexington. Morgan was attacked and driven out next day by fresh Union troops under General Stephen G. Burbridge and was forced to flee (11–12 June 1864).

Cypress Hills ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

Angry over alleged horse-theft, American wolfers attacked the Assiniboine village at Cypress Hills, in southwestern Saskatchewan, near the Montana border, and killed 30 Indians. Following the massacre, the newly formed Northwest Mounted Police built Fort Walsh nearby and restored peace. But it was a prelude to renewed rebellion which began with the attack at Duck Lake in 1885 (May 1873).

Cyrrhestica ❙ 38 BC ❙ Roman-Parthian Wars

See Gindarus

Cyzicus ❙ 410 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

Despite defeat off Cynossema (411 BC), Spartan Admiral Mindarus, aided by the Persian Pharnabazus, captured Cyzicus on the southern shore of the Sea of Marmara. Attacked by a reinforced Athenian fleet under Alcibiades, Mindarus was killed in a decisive action. The Spartan fleet was burned or captured, yielding Athens command of the sea until 406 BC at Notium (April 410 BC).

Cyzicus ❙ 73 BC ❙ 3rd Mithridatic War

Determined to relieve Marcus Aurelius Cotta, blockaded after Chalcedon, Roman commander Lucius Licinius Lucullus entered the Sea of Marmara after victory off Lemnos and attacked Mithridates VI of Pontus besieging Cyzicus. Caught between two Roman armies, Mithridates suffered terrible losses and withdrew east into northern Turkey, where he was defeated the following year at Cabira.

Cyzicus ❙ 194 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus

Emperor Septimius Severus took power in Rome (April 193), then marched against Pescennius Niger, ruler of Roman Asia. Recovering from defeat at Perinthus (191), Severus besieged Byzantium and sent General Tiberius Claudius Candidus across the Bosphorus against Niger's proconsul, Asellius Aemilianus. At Cyzicus, south of the Sea of Marmara, Aemilianus was defeated and executed.

Czarnowo, Lodzkie ❙ 1655 ❙ 1st Northern War

See Opoczno

Czarnowo, Mazowieckie ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

Having destroyed the Prussians at Jena and Auerstadt in October, Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Poland and captured Warsaw. Marching north across the Wkra, Marshal Louis Davout defeated the heavily outnumbered Russian General Count Alexander Ostermann-Tolstoy at Czarnowo. After further victories at Pultusk and Golymin, Bonaparte withdrew to winter quarters (23 December 1806).

Czaslau ❙ 1742 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Chotusitz

Czernowitz ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

As part of the brilliant Brusilov Offensive, Russian General Platon Lechitsky in the south stormed into Bukowina against General Karl von Pflanzer-Baltin. A stunning victory saw Lechitsky take Czernowitz and virtually destroy the Austrian Seventh Army. German reinforcements eventually stabilised the front and Czernowitz was lost a year later after Stanislau (4–17 June 1916).

Czestochowa ❙ 1655 ❙ 1st Northern War

See Jasna Gora

D

Dabhoi ❙ 1731 ❙ Maratha Rebellions

When Maratha Senapati Trimbak Rao Dabhade rebelled and threatened to join forces with Nizam-ul-Mulk of Hyderabad, Peshwa Baji Rao I and his brother Chimnaji Appa intercepted the rebels at Dabhoi, southeast of Baroda in Gujarat. A fierce action saw Trimbak Rao defeated and killed and Baji Rao established as undisputed leader of the Maratha state (1 April 1731).

Dabik ❙ 1516 ❙ Ottoman-Mamluk War

See Marj-Dabik

Dabney's Mill ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Hatcher's Run

Dabul ❙ 1508 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

See Chaul

Dabusiyya ❙ 1032 ❙ Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars

After Ilek Khan Ali Tegin invaded Khwarezm and captured Samarkand and Bokhara, Masud of Ghazni sent the Khwarezmshah Altuntash, who retook both cities, then defeated the Seljuk Turks near Samarkand at Dabusiyya. However, Altuntash was severely wounded in the battle and died a few days later. In the peace which followed, Ali Tegin retained Samarkand and Masud kept Bokhara.

Dacca ❙ 1971 ❙ Bangladesh War of Independence

In response to a popular uprising in East Pakistan, a major offensive by Pakistani forces under General Tikka Khan began with the arrest of Bengali leader Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. Within five days the city of Dacca was secured and by mid-April most resistance elsewhere was brutally crushed. Pakistan's subsequent defeat by India created independent Bangladesh (25–30 March 1971).

Dacca ❙ 1971 ❙ 3rd Indo-Pakistan War

When Pakistan invaded India in the west at Chhamb, Indian General Jagjit Singh Aurora launched a massive invasion of East Pakistan in support of Bengali independence (4 December) and advanced on Dacca. After heavy action, Pakistani General Amir Abdullah Khan Niazi surrendered the city and all of East Pakistan, which became independent Bangladesh (14–16 December 1971).

Dade Massacre ❙ 1835 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

Major Francis Dade marching north from Tampa to reinforce Fort King was ambushed by about 280 Seminoles under Miconapy and Jumper in Florida's Wahoo Swamp, near Bushnell, north of modern Dade City. Terrible fighting saw only three out of 80 soldiers escape alive. Another force advancing south was attacked three days later, 30 miles down the Withlacoochee (28 December 1835).

Dadong Mountains ❙ 1852 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

After boldly defending Yung'an in Guangxi (Kwangsi), the Taiping army withdrew and pursuing General Wulantai attacked and killed about 2,000 stragglers and wounded at nearby Gusu. Next day the Imperial army was ambushed in the Dadong Mountains, losing over 2,000 men, as well as arms and supplies. The Taiping then fell back through the mountains to Guilin (8 April 1852).

Daegsaston ❙ 603 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Threatened by Scots under King Aidan, recovered from their defeat at Cathraeth in 598, Aethelfrith of Northumbria met the invaders at Daegsaston, in the Liddesdale Valley, northeast of Dumfries. While Aethelfrith's brother Theodbald was killed, Aidan's Scots and Picts were destroyed. Having secured the Kingdom of Northumbria in the north, Aethelfrith turned south towards Chester.

Dafeichuan ❙ 670 ❙ Tang Imperial Wars

When Tibet launched a major offensive north to seize Chinese-held towns in the Tarim Basin, in modern Xinjiang, China, General Xue Rengui led a large Tang army to restore control. The expedition established a base at Dafeichuan, where they were attacked by a massive Tibetan force under Mgar Khri'brin. The Imperial army suffered a devastating defeat and China had to withdraw.

Dagu Forts ❙ 1858 ❙ 2nd Opium War

Determined to open China to trade, Anglo-French forces captured Guangzhou in late 1857, before Admirals Sir Michael Seymour and Charles Rigault de Genouilly attacked the Dagu (Taku) Forts guarding the Bei He. After exchanging fire the Allies secured the forts, then advanced to Tianjin, where British Plenipotentiary James Lord Elgin imposed a truce opening more ports to trade (20 May 1858).

Dagu Forts ❙ 1859 ❙ 2nd Opium War

When war resumed with China over trade concessions, British General Sir James Hope Grant (with Chinese and French allies) attacked the Dagu Forts at the mouth of the Bei He, now strongly held by Prince Senggelinqin (Sang-ko-lin-chin). A bloody action saw Hope Grant with his landing party stuck in mud then forced to withdraw, with 90 killed, 300 wounded and three gunboats lost (25 June 1859).

Dagu Forts ❙ 1860 ❙ 2nd Opium War

In a renewed assault on the Dagu Forts on the Bei He, 11,000 British under General Sir James Hope Grant and 6,000 French led by General Charles Cousin-Montauban landed at Beicang to attack from the landward side, supported by ships on the river. Prince Senggelinqin (Sang-ko-lin-chin) fled after very heavy Chinese losses and the Allies advanced on Beijing through Baliqiao (21 August 1860).

Dagu Forts ❙ 1900 ❙ Boxer Rebellion

With an international relief force for Beijing blocked at Langfang, nine British, French, German and Russian warships demanded the surrender of the Dagu (Taku) Forts at the mouth of the Bei He. After fort commander Luo Rongguang opened fire, the Allies bombarded and seized the forts, ensuring Imperial support for the anti-foreign Boxers, who then besieged nearby Tianjin (17 June 1900).

Dahlenkirchen ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

As Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Russia, Prussian forces besieged the Baltic port of Riga after victory at Eckau. To cover a naval landing further west at Schlock, Russian commander General Jean Henri Essen sent General Ivan Alexandrovich Vilyaminov, who overran the siege lines outside Riga at Dahlenkirchen. Prussian General Julius Grawert withdrew to Mitau (22 August 1812).

Dai Do ❙ 1968 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dong Ha

Dail Righ ❙ 1306 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

See Dalry

Dakar ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

An attempt to secure Vichy French West Africa, under Governor Pierre Boisson, saw Britain send a large naval force to Dakar, led by Admiral John Cunningham, with British and Free French troops under Generals Noel Irwin and Charles de Gaulle. After a failed landing and heavy damage by shellfire to warships on both sides, the expedition was abandoned (23–25 September 1940).

Dakhila ❙ 1898 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Mahdist commander Ahmed Fedil was pursued to the Upper Blue Nile after defeat at Omdurman and lost at Gedaref before being brought to battle just south of Rosaires near Dakhila by a British-Sudanese force under Colonel David (Taffy) Lewis. The Dervishes suffered heavy losses, including Emir Saadallah killed, but fought again a year later at Um Diwaykarat (26 December 1898).

Dakka ❙ 1919 ❙ 3rd British-Afghan War

When Amir Amanullah of Afghanistan sent General Saleh Mohammad into India against the border village of Bagh, it was retaken by British General George Crocker (11 May), who then marched five miles northwest against the large village of Dakka. Following ineffectual aerial bombing, the Afghans were driven out after heavy ground-fighting and costly losses on both sides (13–17 May 1919).

Dak To ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

As further diversion from the planned Tet Offensive after action in the north at Con Thien and in the south at Loc Ninh, North Vietnamese regulars attacked American forces in the central highlands around Dak To. Intense fighting, supported by heavy US bombing and artillery, made the NVA withdraw with perhaps 1,500 dead, while the US lost almost 300 killed (3–22 November 1967).

Dalahican ❙ 1896 ❙ Philippines War of Independence

See Binakayan

Dalinghe ❙ 1631 ❙ Manchu Conquest of China

A major offensive into Manchuria saw Abahai (Hong Taiji) take 20,000 Manchu, Mongol and Han troops against the powerful Ming fortress city of Dalinghe (Ta-ling-ho), northeast of Jinzhou. Heavy fighting secured outlying fortified villages and, after a relief army was defeated at the Xiaoling, Ming commander Zu Dashou surrendered the starving city (1 September–21 November 1631).

Dalippur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Edward Lugard and Brigadier Claude Douglas captured Jagdispur (9 May), then pursued Amar Singh through jungle to the south and west, inflicting losses at Hetampur, Piru and Metahi before meeting the main force at Dalippur. Amar Singh's rebels were decisively beaten, losing the two guns taken from Le Grand at Jagdispur and withdrew west towards Ghazipur (27 May 1858).

Dallas ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As General William T. Sherman's Union army advanced through Georgia, Confederate commander Joseph E. Johnston repulsed two flanking attempts southwest of Allatoona at New Hope Church and Pickett's Mill. Confederate General William J. Hardee then counter-attacked at nearby Dallas but suffered a costly defeat and Johnston withdrew east towards Marietta (27 May 1864).

Dalmanutha ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Belfast

Dalry ❙ 1306 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Two months after defeat at Methven, Robert the Bruce of Scotland was attacked at Dalry, Ayrshire, by John MacDougall of Lorne, an English ally and kinsman of John Comyn, whom Bruce had murdered to claim the crown. Bruce's battered force lost again and he continued into hiding until he could raise a fresh army for victory in May 1307 at Loudon Hill (11 August 1306).

Dalton (1st) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

While Union commander William T. Sherman advanced east on Meridian, Mississippi, Union General George H. Thomas marched into northern Georgia to threaten the Confederate rear at Dalton. Thomas reached within three miles of Dalton before being blocked by the much larger Confederate army of General Joseph E. Johnston. He then returned to Chattanooga (22–27 February 1864).

Dalton (2nd) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate cavalry under General Joseph Wheeler raiding deep into the rear of the Union army besieging Atlanta, Georgia, attempted to seize Dalton, in the north of the state, held by Colonel Bernard Laibolt. After a failed assault, Wheeler came under attack by an approaching Union relief column led by General James B. Steedman and was forced to withdraw (14–15 August 1864).

Damalcherry Pass ❙ 1740 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

When Maratha forces invaded the Carnatic in southeast India, Dost Ali Khan, Nawab of Arcot, took a defensive position at Damalcherry Pass, 30 miles north of Ambur. In a terrible rout, Maratha General Raghuji Bhonsle took them in the rear and Dost Ali and his son Hassan Ali were defeated and killed. Bhonsle occupied Arcot, then besieged and captured Trichinopoly (31 May 1740).

Damascus ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

Muslim conqueror Khalid ibn al-Walid was besieging Damascus after victory in February at Marj as-Suffar, when Emperor Heraclius at Antioch is claimed to have sent a massive relief force under General Werban. Khalid supposedly raised the siege to destroy the approaching Christian army. He then returned to the siege. Part of Damascus fell by storm and the rest quickly surrendered (August 635).

Damascus ❙ 1148 ❙ 2nd Crusade

Despite suffering severe losses reaching Palestine, Emperor Conrad III of Germany and King Louis VII of France joined Baldwin III of Jerusalem in a mismanaged expedition against Damascus, where a half-hearted siege was repulsed by a relief army under Nur-ed-Din. The Crusaders retreated with heavy losses and Conrad took his army back to Germany (23–28 July 1148).

Damascus ❙ 1401 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

The Turko-Mongol Tamerlane captured Aleppo (December 1400), then marched south towards Damascus. Mamluk Sultan Faraj gathered an Egyptian army to protect Syria's capital, but they fled when Tamerlane approached and the city surrendered. However, the citadel held out for a month against heavy assault. As punishment Damascus was sacked and stripped of its vast treasure (25 January 1401).

Damascus ❙ 1771 ❙ Mamluk-Ottoman Wars

With Cairo secured by victory at Tanta, the great Mamluk leader Ali Bey sent General Abu'l-Dhahab into Syria to support Shayk Zahir al-Umar against Uthman Pasha al-Sadiq, Ottoman Governor of Damascus. The combined Mamluk forces defeated the Ottoman army and captured Damascus. Abu'l-Dhahad then returned to Egypt to overthrow his master in Cairo (3 June 1771).

Damascus ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

During his decisive broad offensive in Palestine through Megiddo, British General Sir Edmund Allenby sent his cavalry north in pursuit of the Turks, towards Damascus, while Arab forces further east advanced along the railway from Dera. After Australian troops entered Damascus, Prince Feisal secured the city. Beirut fell the same day and the fall of Aleppo ended the war (1 October 1918).

Damascus ❙ 1925 ❙ Druze Rebellion

Encouraged by Druze capture of Suwayda in southern Syria (24 September), rebellion broke out in Damascus, where looters destroyed the palace of French High Commissioner Maurice Sarrail. Withdrawing north, General Maurice Gamelin's artillery and aircraft bombarded the rebel quarter, with perhaps 1,000 killed and over 100 million francs of damage. Sarrail was recalled (18–20 October 1925).

Damascus ❙ 1926 ❙ Druze Rebellion

On the offensive against Druze rebels in Syria, French General Maurice Gamelin sent forces to retake Suwayda, then launched a fresh attack on rebel positions in the southern part of the capital, Damascus, where aerial bombardment with explosives and incendiaries caused massive damage and casualties. Druze Sultan al-Atrash soon fled to Jordan and the rebellion slowly ended (7 May 1926).

Damascus ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

See Syria

Damdama ❙ 1624 ❙ Rebellion of Prince Shahjahan

During war against Persia in Afghanistan, Mughal Prince Shahjahan rebelled against his father, Emperor Jahangir and, despite defeat at Balochpur (March 1623), returned to advance up the Ganges and occupy Benares. At Damdama, near Allahabad, his General, Bhim Singh, was defeated and killed, crushing the rebellion. Shahjahan later made peace with his father and succeeded to the throne.

Damghan ❙ 1528 ❙ Persian-Uzbek Wars

A Persian force marching to relieve the Uzbek siege of Herat was beaten outside Damghan, in northeast Iran, by Uzbek commander Renish Behader Khan. The main Persian army of Shah Tahmasp then besieged Renish in Damghan, where he was defeated and killed along with most of the garrison. Ubaid Khan had to raise the siege of Herat and met the Persians in September at Torbat-i-Jam.

Damietta ❙ 1169 ❙ Crusader Invasion of Egypt

King Amalric of Jerusalem left a Crusader garrison in Cairo after his victory at Alexandria and two years later he and Turkish General Shirkuh returned to resume the struggle for the strategic Nile Delta. However, a combined Crusader-Latin army was badly repulsed besieging Damietta and Amalric withdrew. Shirkuh died and his nephew Saladin effectively secured Egypt and later Damascus.

Damietta ❙ 1218–1219 ❙ 5th Crusade

Crusaders from Palestine and Europe landed at the eastern mouth of the Nile, where they maintained a loose blockade of Damietta, later strengthened by fresh reinforcements and capture of the nearby fortress of Adiliya. Following a brutal siege with heavy losses on both sides, Damietta fell by storm. It was given up in 1221 after failure of the Crusade (May 1218–5 November 1219).

Damietta ❙ 1249 ❙ 7th Crusade

Louis IX of France assembled a massive Crusader army in Cyprus and sailed to Egypt. In a reprise of the Fifth Crusade, he landed near Damietta on the eastern Nile Delta, where the city was besieged and then captured when the garrison fled in panic. However, Damietta was surrendered by the French ten months later after disastrous Crusader defeats at Mansura and Fariskur (7 June 1249).

Damietta ❙ 1250 ❙ 7th Crusade

See Fariskur

Damme ❙ 1213 ❙ Anglo-French Wars

When Count Ferdinand of Flanders defected, Philip II of France diverted his fleet against Flanders before invading England. King John of England sent a large fleet under Count William of Holland and William Longsword Earl of Salisbury and, off Damme near Bruges, the French fleet was destroyed. Philip burned his remaining ships and abandoned his planned invasion (30 March 1213).

Dams Raid ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

One of the best-known British air exploits took place when Wing commander Guy Gibson led 17 bombers against five strategic dams in the Ruhr using the revolutionary "bouncing bombs." Eight aircraft and 53 aircrew were lost and only the Möhne and Eder dams were breached. While damage was soon repaired, the "Dam Busters" provided an important boost for Allied morale (16–17 May 1943).

Danang ❙ 1847 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

In a powerful demonstration against the anti-Christian Vietnamese Emperor Thieu Tri, Admiral Jean-Baptiste Cécille sent two warships against the key port of Danang, nominally to rescue a jailed missionary. While a massive French bombardment inflicted heavy damage and casualties, nothing substantial was achieved until a full-scale attack on the port 11 years later (15 April 1847).

Danang ❙ 1858 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

As supposed response to the execution of Spanish Bishop José María Díaz, 14 ships and 2,500 men under Admiral Charles Rigault de Genouilly bombarded and stormed Danang. Genouilly then sailed for Saigon. Meanwhile, Danang held out against Vietnamese Marshal Nguyen Tri Phuong despite terrible losses to disease, until it was abandoned in March 1860 (31 August–1 September 1858).

Danang ❙ 1975 ❙ Vietnam War

At the start of the offensive to conquer South Vietnam, up to 35,000 North Vietnamese with tanks and artillery converged on Danang, packed with civilian and military refugees fleeing the fall of Hue. As order in Danang broke down under heavy shelling, South Vietnamese officers fled, leaving a claimed 100,000 troops to surrender, effectively ending resistance in the north (28–29 March 1975).

Danbury Raid ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Encouraged by the raid on Peekskill (23 March), British commander William Howe sent Colonel William Tryon against Danbury, Connecticut. Having burned buildings and stores, Tryon was blocked at nearby Ridgefield by Generals Benedict Arnold, David Wooster and Gold Silliman. Wooster was mortally wounded, yet the British eventually withdrew with heavy losses (25–27 April 1777).

Danchua ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Amid sharp fighting west of Cawnpore, a local unit under Colonel Thomas Rattray—known as Rattray's Sikhs—repulsed a mutineer force at Akbarpur (7 October) and a month later finally met Tantia Topi's rebels at Danchua. The rebels suffered a decisive loss, though three weeks later they defeated General Charles Windham outside Cawnpore and seized the city (6 November 1857).

Dandanaqan ❙ 1040 ❙ Seljuk Wars of Expansion

The Seljuk brothers Toghril and Caghri Beg marched into Khorasan, in Turkish north-eastern Iran and captured Nishapur (1037) before Ghaznavid Sultan Masud ibn Mahmud counter-attacked. Outside Dandanaqan, near Merv (modern Mary, Turkmenistan), Masud was routed and withdrew to India, leaving Caghri to rule Khorasan and Toghril to go on to capture Isfahan and Baghdad (23 May 1040).

Dandridge ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Campaigning east of Knoxville, Tennessee, Union General Samuel B. Sturgis advanced south from Mossy Creek towards Dandridge, where he was blocked by Confederate General James Longstreet. Sturgis was forced to withdraw west towards Strawberry Plains after sharp fighting and ten days later he had his revenge at Fair Garden (17 January 1864).

Danesmoor ❙ 1469 ❙ Wars of the Roses
See Edgecote

Danith ❙ 1115 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars
See Tel-Danith

Danj ❙ 1447–1448 ❙ Albanian-Venetian War

Venetian forces intervening to support the Zakarija Dynasty in northern Albania seized Danj fortress, where they were besieged by George Kastriote Skanderbeg. The Albanian commander defeated a relief force at the nearby Drin (July 1448), but with Turkey threatening after victory at Svetigrad he made peace with Venice and soon repulsed the Turks at Dibra (1447–4 October 1448).

Danli ❙ 1844 ❙ Central American National Wars

General Joaquín Rivera attempted an invasion of Honduras in the name of former President Francisco Morazán and raised insurrection in Texiguat. He suffered a heavy loss at Nacaome and, after gathering fresh forces in the east, he was decisively defeated at Danli by government troops under Colonel Julián Tercero. Rivera was later captured and executed in Comayagua (20 December 1844).

Dannevirke ❙ 1848 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War

Encouraged by Prussia, the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein rose against Frederick VII of Denmark. Following their defeat at Bov (9 April), Prussia sent General Eduard von Bonin to occupy Holstein, while Count Friedrich Heinrich von Wrangel invaded Schleswig. As a result of hard fighting, Wrangel stormed the defensive line of the Dannevirke and Denmark withdrew (23 April 1848).

Dannoura ❙ 1185 ❙ Gempei War

Taira Tomomori was driven from his stronghold on the Inland Sea at Yashima (23 March) and withdrew to Dannoura, in far south Honshu, where he was attacked by Minamoto Yoshitsune. In a decisive and bloody sea battle, the boy-Emperor Antoku was drowned and the Taira nobility was virtually destroyed, establishing Minamoto as the greatest power in Japan (25 April 1185).

Danubyu ❙ 1825 ❙ 1st British-Burmese War

When Burma conquered Arakan and attacked British India, General Sir Archibald Campbell drove Burmese General Maha Bundoola away from Rangoon, then pursued him up the Irriwaddy to the stockade at Danubyu. British Colonel Willoughby Cotton was initially repulsed, but Campbell himself led a second attack and Bundoola was defeated and killed (7 March–1 April 1825).

Danubyu ❙ 1853 ❙ 2nd British-Burmese War

With Burma defeated at Pegu in late 1852, Britain faced continued resistance by Nya-Myat Toon in the jungle west of Danubyu. At the end of a hard-fought campaign, with costly losses from cholera, General Sir John Cheape finally took the Burmese Chieftain's stronghold at Kyoukazeen. Only scattered guerrilla opposition remained to British rule of Pegu Province (February–March 1853).

Danzig ❙ 1308 ❙ Wars of the Teutonic Knights
See Gdansk

Danzig ❙ 1577 ❙ Gdansk War

After Danzig declared for the Habsburg candidate for the throne of Poland (September 1576), King Stephen Bathory marched on the city with Jan Zborowski. While Bathory closed the siege after victory at Lubieszow, Danzig (modern Gdansk) held out with Danish support by sea. However, the city finally agreed to accept Bathory and pay him a substantial subsidy (11 June–12 December 1577).

Danzig ❙ 1626–1630 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden intervened in Polish Prussia to blockade, then besiege, the great Baltic port of Danzig (modern Gdansk), capturing the fortifications at Putzig and Danziger Haupt. Despite a naval loss off Oliwa, Sweden maintained the blockade. However, defeat at Sztum in June 1629 led Sweden to make separate peace with Poland and Danzig (3 July 1626–18 February 1630).

Danzig ❙ 1733–1734 ❙ War of the Polish Succession

Russian and Saxon troops under Count Burkhardt von Münnich invaded Poland in support of Augustus III of Saxony, claiming the throne and besieged the rival claimant and former King Stanislas Leszcynski in Danzig. Although Leszcynski's son-in-law, Louis XV of France, sent reinforcements by sea, Danzig fell and Leszcynski fled to Prussia (October 1733–30 June 1734).

Danzig ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

Having bypassed Danzig (modern Gdansk) on his advance into eastern Prussia, Napoleon Bonaparte sent Marshal Francois Lefebvre against the port, held by Prussians under Count Friedrich von Kalckreuth. After a sustained Russian relief attempt by General Levin Bennigsen was eventually repulsed (15 May), Kalckreuth capitulated, marching out with all his arms (19 March–27 May 1807).

Danzig ❙ 1813–1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

As Napoleon Bonaparte's army withdrew west after the disastrous retreat from Moscow, General Jean Rapp took a large force to Danzig, where he was besieged by an Allied army under Prince Eugene of Württemberg. The prolonged siege denied Bonaparte experienced troops for his campaign in Germany and Rapp was eventually forced to surrender (21 January 1813–2 January 1814).

Danzig ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

When the Vistula-Oder offensive had secured Poland, Soviet forces under Marshal Georgi Zhukov and General Konstantin Rokossovksy drove north across East Pomerania to reach the Baltic, cutting off German-held Danzig. In heavy fighting they reduced nearby Gdynia and Danzig itself two days later. The Russian armies then joined the drive towards Berlin (13–30 March 1945).

Daosa ❙ 1859 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Dausa

Dara ❙ 530 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Early in his career, the great Romano-Byzantine General Belisarius was posted as commander of the East to defend the border outpost at Dara, northwest of Nisibis (Nusaybin in modern Turkey). Outside the walls of the fortress, Belisarius secured a decisive victory against an attacking Sassanian Persian army. But, after defeat at Callinicum the next year, he was demoted and recalled (June 530).

Dara ❙ 540 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

While returning from the sack of Antioch, Sassanian Shah Chosroes attacked the frontier fortress of Dara, where he burned gates in the outer wall but could not force an entry. He then attempted to tunnel under the walls, but the Romans discovered the strategy and built a counter-trench. Chosroes eventually agreed to withdraw in return for the payment of a reported 1,000 pounds of silver.

Dara ❙ 573 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

When Justin II provoked a new war with Persia, Chosroes I routed the Romano-Byzantine army investing Nisibis, then besieged the key fortress at nearby Dara, held by General Marcian. After six months, the Sassanian Persians stormed the city, reputedly driving Justin insane. Dara remained Persian until Chosroes II returned it in 591 to secure Roman aid for his restoration at Ganzak (November 573).

Dara ❙ 586 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

See Solachon

Daratoleh ❙ 1903 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

A week after disaster at Gumburu, the third expedition against Muhammad Abdullah Hassan of Somaliland met Dervishes at Daratoleh, near Damot. Defending a square with Maxims, Major John Gough inflicted terrible losses for just 15 killed and 29 wounded. Three Victoria Crosses were won (including Gough) and the Mullah withdrew until his defeat in January 1904 at Jidballi (22 April 1903).

Darbytown Road (1st) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See New Market Road

Darbytown Road (2nd) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union forces under Generals Alfred H. Terry and Augustus V. Kautz successfully defended the New Market Road, southeast of Richmond, Virginia, then advanced on Confederate General Richard H. Anderson on the Darbytown Road. The Union troops were driven off after scattered action and another advance was checked two weeks later further north at Fair Oaks (13 October 1864).

Darda ❙ 1687 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

See Harkany

Dardanelles ❙ 1399 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

In a French effort to drive off another Ottoman advance against Constantinople, Jean le Maingre Marshal Boucicaut took six ships from Aigues-Mortes and sailed into the Dardanelles, supported by Venetian and Genoese galleys. During perhaps the first significant Ottoman naval battle, he defeated 17 Turkish galleys, then landed troops and archers at Constantinople to relieve the siege.

Dardanelles ❙ 1654 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

On a fresh advance towards Constantinople, Venetian Captain-General Luigi Lionardo Mocenigo was confronted in the Dardanelles by a much larger Turkish fleet. Despite massive superiority in numbers and guns, the Turks suffered a bloody defeat, with a claimed 3,000 killed. The Ottoman fleet was defeated again in the Dardanelles two years later (16 March 1654).

Dardanelles ❙ 1656 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

When Venetian Captain-General Lorenzo Marcello renewed the blockade of Constantinople, the Turks counter-attacked in the Dardanelles. While Marcello was killed, the Turks lost up to 10,000 dead and 400 prisoners. The Venetians freed 5,000 Christian galley slaves in captured ships, then seized Tenedos and Lemnos. It was the worst Ottoman naval defeat since 1571 at Lepanto (26 August 1656).

Dardanelles ❙ 1657 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

After failed attempts to break the Venetian blockade of Constantinople, new Vizier Koprulu Mehmed Pasha rebuilt his fleet and attacked again in the Dardanelles. Venetian commander Lazzaro Mocenigo died when a lucky shot sank his flagship and Koprulu won a decisive victory. The Turks then recovered Tenedos (4 September) and Lemnos (15 November) after a 60-day siege (17–19 July 1657).

Dardanelles ❙ 1912 ❙ Italo-Turkish War

To support her war against Turkey in Libya, Italy sent a naval force against the Dardanelles. Although over 300 shells were fired from long range against the outer forts, little damage was caused and fear of Great Power intervention forced the Italians to withdraw. However, they then seized Rhodes and other islands in the Dodecanese and retained them at the end of the war (18 April 1912).

Dardanelles ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

At the start of a misconceived naval plan to force the Dardanelles and attack Constantinople, 24 Anglo-French warships under Admirals Sackville Carden and Émile Guépratte bombarded the Turkish outer forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles. Two attacks caused considerable damage prior to an attempt to enter the straits and force the Dardanelles Narrows (19 & 25 February 1915).

Dardanelles Narrows ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

After silencing the forts at the entrance to the Dardanelles, Anglo-French warships under Admirals John de Robeck and Émile Guépratte attempted to storm the Narrows. They bombarded Turkish coastal batteries, but withdrew with three battleships sunk and three badly damaged by mines and gunfire, leaving the army to later attack on land at Helles and Anzac (18 March 1915).

Dar es Salaam ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

The reputed first British action of the war saw the cruiser Astraea bombard Dar es Salaam in German East Africa to destroy the naval wireless. Governor Heinrich Schnee blew up the station and surrendered the city, which was later reoccupied by German forces. It was eventually recaptured by British General Jan Smuts (3 September 1916) during the Morogoro Offensive (8 August 1914).

Dargai ❙ 1897 ❙ Great Frontier Rising

Following capture of the Northwest Frontier Khyber Forts by Afridi tribesmen, General Sir William Lockhart was sent west from Kohat into the Tirah to subjugate the rebels. On the Dargai Heights, north of Thal, his Gordon Highlanders and Gurkhas inflicted a decisive defeat, after which he severely crushed the remaining rebellion and recaptured Landi Kotal (18–20 October 1897).

Darghiyya ❙ 1842 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

On a determined expedition against the Muslims of Dagestan, Russian Baron Pavel Grabbe took 10,000 men south from Gurzul towards the rebel "capital" at Darghiyya. In the forest of Ichkeria, he was attacked and forced to retreat by Shu-ayb and Ulubey, lieutenants of the Imam Shamil. Grabbe lost 1,800 men killed and wounded and was soon relieved of command (11–16 June 1842).

Darghiyya ❙ 1845 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Sent by the Tsar against Imam Shamil of Dagestan, Russian Count Mikhail Vorontsov led 20,000 men west from Gertme towards Darghiyya, which he captured, then abandoned and burned (18 July). Facing terrible losses, Vorontsov destroyed his supplies and withdrew north through the forest of Ichkeria, losing 4,000 men killed and wounded before reaching Gurzul (15 June–1 August 1845).

Dargo ❙ 1842 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

See Darghiyya

Dark Water Creek ❙ 1875 ❙ Red River Indian War

See Sappa Creek

Daroca ❙ 1120 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Cutanda

Dartanat ❙ 1488 ❙ Persian-Turkoman Wars

Sheikh Haidar of Ardabil in northern Iran led a campaign into Shirvan (modern Azerbaijan), where he besieged Shah Farrukh Yasar at Shemakha, 70 miles west of Baku. However, the Turkoman Sultan Yakub intervened and, near Dartanat, Sheikh Haidar suffered a devastating defeat and was killed. His son Ismail was avenged against Farrukh Yasar 12 years later at Jabani (9 July 1488).

Darwin, Australia ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As Japanese forces invaded Papua, Admiral Chuichi Nagumo sent over 200 land and carrier aircraft against Darwin Harbour in nearby northern Australia, sinking eight ships, including an American destroyer. This first and most serious attack on Australia killed about 250 and caused massive destruction in the town. Darwin was hit again 63 times in the next 12 months (19 February 1942).

Darwin, Falklands ❙ 1982 ❙ Falklands War
See Goose Green

Dashiqiao ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War
As they withdrew into Manchuria from defeat at Delisi (15 June), Russian Generals Nikolai Platonovich Zarubayev and Georg Karlovich Stackelberg tried to defend Dashiqiao (Ta-shih-ch'iao), 140 miles north of Port Arthur. Advancing from the south, General Yasukata Oku's Second Army smashed into the Russians and drove them back through Haicheng with about 3,000 casualties (24 July 1904).

Dasmariñas ❙ 1897 ❙ Philippines War of Independence
Recovering from a check at Zapote Bridge, Spanish General José Lachambre continued the offensive south of Manila, attacking Emilio Aguinaldo and 5,000 men at Dasmariñas. Following days of brutal fighting, and the heroic death of 23-year-old General Flaviano Yengco at nearby Pasang Santol, Aguinaldo evacuated the burning town and fell back on Imus (28 February–3 March 1897).

Dasymon ❙ 838 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars
See Dazimon

Dathin ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria
See Wadi al-Arabah

Daulatabad ❙ 1294 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate
See Deogiri

Daulatabad ❙ 1633 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars
Mughal Governor Mahabat Khan of Punjab advanced into central India, where he besieged Daulatabad fortress, northwest of Aurangabad, defended by Fath Khan of Ahmadnagar. Mahabat Khan captured the outer defences and, four months later, Fath Khan and his son, the boy-King Husain Nizam Shah III, surrendered the citadel, ending the Sultanate of Ahmadnagar (28 June 1633).

Daulatabad ❙ 1741 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession
Manipulated by scheming courtiers, the Mughal General Mir Ahmed Nasir Jang rose in rebellion against his father, Nizam-ul-Mulk of Hyderabad. When the contending armies eventually met at Daulatabad, near Aurangabad, the Nizam attempted reconciliation but failed. The ensuing battle saw Nasir Jang wounded and defeated, though he was later pardoned (23 July 1741).

Dausa ❙ 1859 ❙ Indian Mutiny
Rebel leader Firuz Shah lost at Ranod in December, then marched northwest to join Tantia Topi and Man Singh at Dausa, a fortified town east of Jaipur, where they were surprised by Brigadier St George Showers, sent in pursuit by General Sir Robert Napier. The rebels were beaten, losing about 300 casualties, but all three leaders escaped. Topi soon lost decisively at Sikar (14 January 1859).

Dau Tieng ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War
Following action south of the DMZ at Song Ngan, American and South Vietnamese forces began an even larger offensive near the Cambodian border northwest of Saigon (Operation Attleboro). The heaviest fighting was at Ap Cha Do and against the huge supply base at Dau Tieng, where the Allies took heavy losses before the Communists withdrew (14 September–25 November 1966).

Davis' Cross Roads ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
Soon after Union forces occupied Chattanooga, Tennessee, General James S. Negley marched south against Confederates concentrating near Lafayette. To the west at Davis' Cross Roads beyond Dug Gap, Negley checked Generals Thomas C. Hindman and John C. Breckinridge, then skillfully withdrew to establish a defensive line west of the Chickamauga (10–11 September 1863).

Dawson's Massacre ❙ 1842 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Texan Captain Nicholas Dawson marching to join battle at the Salado, northeast of San Antonio, was met two miles away by part of the Mexican army under Colonels Cayetano Montero and José María Carrasco. In a confused action, 36 out of 54 Texans were killed, apparently trying to surrender. Three escaped and the rest were taken as prisoners to Mexico (18 September 1842).

Dawston ❙ 603 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

See Daegsaston

Dayr al-Jamajim ❙ 701 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

In revolt against the Umayyad Caliphate, Ibn al-Ash'ath in the east raised an army of Arab Kufans and non-Arab Mawali and marched into Iraq to seize Kufa. He then took a claimed 200,000 men against Governor al-Hajjaj on the nearby plain at Dayr al-Jamajim. After lengthy negotiations, al-Hajjaj and his smaller Syrian-supported force defeated the rebel, who fled north to Maskin (September 701).

Day River ❙ 1951 ❙ French Indo-China War

Defeated in the Red River Delta at Vinh Yen and Mao Khé, Viet Minh commander Vo Nguyen Giap then attacked across the Day River, south of Hanoi. Crossing at Phu Ly, Ninh Binh and Phat Diem, the Communists advanced towards the Red River, but lacked resources across such a wide front. Facing his third defeat in five months, Giap disengaged and withdrew (29 May–18 June 1951).

Day's Gap ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On a raid into Confederate Alabama and Georgia, Union Colonel Abel D. Streight was attacked by General Nathan B. Forrest at Day's Gap on Sand Mountain, southwest of Chattanooga, Alabama. Streight fought a brilliant rearguard action, but he was pursued for days, and on 3 May his entire force of about 1,600 men surrendered west of Rome, Georgia (30 April 1863).

Dayuan ❙ 102 BC ❙ Wars of the Former Han

Han Emperor Wudi determined to expand his influence in Central Asia and sent General Li Guangli and a large force of conscripts against Dayuan (Ta-yüan) in the Ferghana Valley. After a failed expedition with very heavy losses (104–103 BC), Li Guangli returned the following year with a much larger force to besiege Dayuan. The city fell after 40 days and the King of Dayuan was executed.

Dazaifu ❙ 1281 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Hakata Bay

Dazimon ❙ 838 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

When Emperor Theophilus raided into Syria, Caliph al-Mu'tasim led a counter-invasion into Anatolia and the Emperor advanced from the Halys to meet the Arabs on the Iris, east of Amasya. At Dazimon (modern Tokat), part of the Muslim army under Afshin Khaydar inflicted a disastrous defeat and Theophilus fled west to Constantinople, leaving the Caliph to seize Ancyra and besiege Amorium.

D-Day ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

See Normandy

Dead Buffalo Lake ❙ 1863 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

General Henry Hastings Sibley advancing into central North Dakota in pursuit of Santee and Teton Sioux under Inkpaduta defeated the Indians at Big Mound. Two days later, he attacked again at Dead Buffalo Lake, northeast of Fort Rice in modern Kidder County. The Sioux were once more driven off and two days later Sibley had his third and largest victory at Stony Lake (26 July 1863).

Deal ❙ 55 BC ❙ Roman Invasion of Britain

Julius Caesar landed with just two Legions at Deal in Kent and there was sharp resistance before local British tribes began to surrender. However, when a storm damaged Caesar's ships and dispersed his reinforcements, he abandoned the campaign and sailed for Gaul. He returned with a larger force a year later and defeated Cassivellaunus at Wheathampstead (August–September 55 BC).

De'an ❙ 1206–1207 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

When Song forces tried to recover land in northern China, a massive Jin (Chin) army advanced to besiege Xiangyang and also De'an (Te-an) to the southeast, where Wang Yunchu led a courageous defence by a largely militia force. The Jin used incendiaries to burn the defences and undermined parts of the walls, but De'an held out. After 108 days, the enemy abandoned the siege and withdrew.

Dearborn ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

See Fort Dearborn

Debar ❙ 1448 ❙ Albanian-Turkish Wars

See Dibra

Debra Sina ❙ 1887 ❙ Sudanese-Ethiopian War

With Abyssinia occupied by war with Italy, Mahdist Khalifa Abdullah sent 60,000 men into Abyssinia under General Hamdan Abu Anja. The army of King Yohannes IV, led by Ras Asdal, attempted to make a stand on the Plain of Debra Sina, northeast of Addis Ababba, but was crushed. The Dervishes entered Gondar, then returned to Omdurman with massive booty (July 1887).

Debra Tabor ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

After Italian surrender at Amba Alagi in May, the Allied drive began against remnants in the Ethiopian mountains near Lake Tana. Advancing from Dessie, British-led Ethiopian forces attacked the fortified village of Debra Tabor, where Colonel Ignazio Angelini surrendered 3,000 Italians and 1,200 colonial troops. After the rains, the advance continued northwest to Gondar (3 July 1941).

Decatur ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Following the fall of Atlanta, Georgia, in July, Confederate General John B. Hood marched west from a repulse at Allatoona and tried to cross the Tennessee River at Decatur, Alabama, defended by General Robert S. Granger. Hood was driven off after some artillery fire and continued west to cross the river and occupy Florence before turning north towards Columbia (26–29 October 1864).

Decium ❙ 533 ❙ Vandal War in Africa

See Ad Decimum

Dee ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

While Robert the Bruce was campaigning in Argyle, his brother Edward marched into Galloway and, soon after victory at the Cree, attacked Sir Roland MacDougal of Galloway and Donald of the Isles on the banks of the Dee. The Lord of the Isles was routed and taken prisoner and Edward Bruce drove the native Irish Chiefs and their English allies out of Galloway (29 June 1308).

Dee ❙ 1639 ❙ 1st Bishops' War

Covenanters under James Graham Earl of Montrose opposed to Charles I's attempt to impose a new prayer book on Scotland advanced against Aberdeen and defeated James Gordon Viscount Aboyne at nearby Megray Hill. Days later, when Aboyne attempted to hold the Bridge on the Dee outside the city, he was driven off by heavy gunfire, although the war had already ended (18 June 1639).

Deeg ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Dieg

Deep Bottom (1st) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

General Winfield Scott Hancock led a Union offensive to the southeast of Confederate Richmond, Virginia, crossing the James River to attack Confederate positions just north of Deep Bottom, defended by General Charles Field. Hancock secured initial success, but in the face of Confederate reinforcements he left a garrison at Deep Bottom and withdrew south (27–29 July 1864).

Deep Bottom (2nd) ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a renewed Union offensive southeast of Confederate Richmond, Virginia, Generals Winfield S. Hancock and David B. Birney again crossed the James to support the Union garrison at Deep Bottom. After heavy fighting and almost 3,000 casualties, Hancock was once more driven off by Confederate General Charles Field and withdrew south, leaving his bridgehead (13–20 August 1864).

Deerfield ❙ 1675 ❙ King Philip's War

Amid a bitter war in colonial New England, Indians supporting Metacomet of the Wampanoag (King Philip) burned Deerfield, in western Massachusetts. Sent to recover the local harvest, Captain Thomas Lathrop was ambushed to the southwest and killed, along with almost all his 60 men (Bloody Brook Massacre) before Major Robert Treat arrived and drove the Indians off (18 September 1675).

Deerfield ❙ 1704 ❙ Queen Anne's War

In apparent retaliation for English attacks on Abnaki settlements, Major Jean-Baptiste Hertel de Rouville led 50 Canadians and 200 Indians in a night assault during a snowstorm on Deerfield in western Massachusetts. Of fewer than 300 residents, 54 were killed and 120 were captured, with 17 dying on the return to Canada. Hertel lost three killed and 20 wounded (28–29 February 1704).

Deganiya ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Syrian General Husni el Zaim advancing towards the Sea of Galilee seized the Israeli village of Zemach (18 May) then followed up a heavy artillery bombardment to attack the twin villages of Deganiya Alpha and Deganiya Beta. Facing a large Israeli counter-attack with artillery, the Syrians had to withdraw and never again attempted to attack south of the Sea of Galilee (20–23 May 1948).

Dego ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Two days after defeat at Montenotte, west of Genoa, Austrian General Eugène von Argenteau withdrew to Dego, northwest of Savona, where he was defeated by part of the French army under General André Masséna. A hard-fought counter-attack by Baron Philip von Vukassovitch briefly regained the town until Napoleon Bonaparte arrived and Dego was recaptured (14–15 April 1796).

Deig ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Dieg

Deining ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

While French General Jean-Baptise Jourdan advanced across the Rhine into Germany, Archduke Charles Louis of Austria counter-attacked from the Danube and fell with massively superior forces on General Jean Baptiste Bernadotte at Deining, southeast of Nuremburg. Bernadotte was heavily repulsed and was beaten again next day at Neumarkt (22 August 1796).

Deir Yassin ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Fighting was continuing for Kastel, just west of Jerusalem, when guerrillas of the Irgun and Stern Gang attacked the nearby Palestinian village of Deir Yassin, overlooking the strategic road to Tel Aviv. After crushing minimal resistance, the Jews killed a large but hotly disputed number of civilians, creating one of the most controversial incidents in all Arab-Israeli conflict (9 April 1948).

Dekemhare ❙ 1990–1991 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

As rebel forces advanced on Asmara, there was heavy fighting on the Gura Plain to the south around Dekemhare, where the Ethiopian government had established powerful defences (August–September 1990). A second offensive by Eritrean liberation forces saw a massive artillery and tank battle to take Dekemhare. Asmara fell a few days later to virtually end the war (19–21 May 1991).

De Klipdrift ❙ 1902 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War
See Tweebosch

Delaware Capes ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution
See Chesapeake Capes

Delhi ❙ 1398 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

The Turko-Mongol Tamerlane marched into northern India, where he joined his troops who had captured Multan in October. He then advanced on the capital and, outside Delhi, he overwhelmed the army of Sultan Mahmud II Tugluk. After executing perhaps 50–80,000 prisoners, the Mongol conqueror sacked Delhi before turning north with his booty towards Meerut (17 December 1398).

Delhi ❙ 1556 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

The Hindu General Hemu and his Afghan allies took advantage of the death of Mughal Emperor Humayun (24 January 1556) to capture Agra, then marched on Delhi. Outside the walls of the city, Hemu defeated the Mughal Governor Tardi Beg Khan, who fled to the new Emperor Akbar and was assassinated. Late in the year, Akbar recovered Delhi with his decisive victory at Panipat.

Delhi ❙ 1737 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

Expanding his power in northern India, Maratha Peshwa Baji Rao I attacked Delhi, where he defeated Imperial commander Amir Khan before being forced to withdraw to face the advancing forces of Wazir Qamar-ud-din Khan. While Baji Rao was driven off to the southeast at Badshahpur, Emperor Muhammad Shah eventually made peace and ceded Malwa to the Peshwar (28 March 1737).

Delhi ❙ 1739 ❙ Persian Invasion of India
See Karnal

Delhi ❙ 1757 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

On his fourth invasion of northern India, Afghan General Ahmad Shah Durrani—having gained the Punjab and Multan in 1752 at Lahore—marched east and captured Delhi. The Mughal capital was sacked and subjected to terrible massacre and pillage before Durrani returned home with a vast treasure. His next invasion brought decisive victory in 1761 at Panipat (January 1757).

Delhi ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

General Sir Gerard Lake marched into Hindustan with British regulars and native troops to capture Aligarh, then pursued the defeated Maratha army under French General Louis Bourquien northwest to Delhi, where Lake soon defeated a much superior force. With Delhi secured and Bourquien a prisoner, Lake then marched south against the fortress city of Agra (11 September 1803).

Delhi ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

Encouraged by destroying Monson's Retreat in August, Maratha leader Jaswant Rao Holkar of Indore took a large force to besiege Delhi, captured by the British just a year earlier. A brilliant defence saw Colonel David Ochterlony's vastly outnumbered garrison repulse the Marathas for nine days, until General Sir Gerard Lake approached and Holkar withdrew (7 October–2 November 1804).

Delhi ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

When rebels seized Delhi as the mutiny started, General Sir Henry Barnard and later General Archdale Wilson blockaded the city, held by King Bahadur Shah and his commander Bakht Khan. Reinforced by General John Nicholson, there was a bloody assault (September 14) with heavy losses on both sides including Nicholson killed. The city fell six days later (8 June–20 September 1857).

Delisi ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

Russian General Georg Karlovich Stackelberg advancing from Manchuria was halted 80 miles north of Port Arthur (modern Lüshun) by General Yasukata Oku's Second Army at Delisi (Telissu) near Wafangdian. Oku counterattacked in force and, as a result of indecision, the Russians withdrew to avoid encirclement. They fell back through Dashiqiao with over 3,000 casualties (14–15 June 1904).

Delium ❙ 424 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

On a two-pronged Athenian offensive into Boeotia, in conjunction with Demosthenes' failed advance on Megara, the main Athenian army under Hippocrates captured Delium on the east coast of Boeotia. In a terrible rout nearby however, Hippocrates was defeated and killed by Theban General Pagondas. Delium fell after a 16-day siege and the survivors fled south to Athens (November 424 BC).

Delville Wood ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

As part of the Battle of the Somme, South Africans under General Henry Lukin attacked east from Longueval against Germans at Delville Wood. South Africa's heaviest fighting on the Western Front cost both sides high losses, but reinforcements eventually helped the Allies capture the shattered remains of the Wood. They soon attacked again at nearby Guillemont (15 July–3 September 1916).

Dembeguina ❙ 1935 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

While Ethiopians tried to encircle Makale, Ras Imru attacked the pass at Dembeguina, west of Aksum, held by Major Luigi Criniti with an Italian-Askari force. Criniti was driven out and lost all his nine light tanks before Ras Imru was checked by the war's first use of mustard gas. The "Christmas Offensive" was finally halted and the Italians soon struck back in the Tembien (15–17 December 1935).

Demetritsa ❙ 1185 ❙ 2nd Byzantine-Sicilian War

Leading a fresh offensive against the Byzantine Empire, William II—the Good—of Sicily was defeated west of Constantinople at the Strymon (7 September) before his fleet was attacked off Greece near Demetritsa by Admiral-General Alexius Branas. The Normans were decisively defeated, checking their offensive. A few years later Norman Sicily was seized by Germans (7 November 1185).

Denain ❙ 1712 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

When peace talks failed, Prince Eugène of Savoy led Austro-Dutch troops to the Netherlands, where part of his force under Arnold van Keppel Earl of Albermarle was attacked by Marshal Claude Villars at Denain, near Valenciennes. Before Eugène could intervene the Dutch were destroyed. It was the last major battle of the war and strengthened France in ensuing peace negotiations (24 July 1712).

Denia ❙ 1707 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Following French victory at Almanza in April, French forces under Irish General Daniel Mahony (later Claude-Francois Bidal Chevalier d'Asfeld) besieged Denia, held by Juan Bautista Basset y Ramos. After repeated assaults, Denia was reinforced by British naval Captain James Moodie and the French withdrew. The city eventually capitulated to d'Asfeld in November 1708 (June 1707).

Denmark Strait ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

See Bismarck

Dennewitz ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

In the wake of defeat at Dresden, the Allies resumed their policy of attacking Napoleon Bonaparte's lieutenants. Marshal Michel Ney's attempt to march on Berlin was met southwest at Dennewitz by Swedes under former French Marshal Jean Baptiste Bernadotte and General Friedrich von Bulow's Prussians. Ney's Saxons fled and he lost heavily in men and guns (6 September 1813).

Denpasar ❙ 1906 ❙ Dutch Conquest of Bali

Dutch forces conquered northern Bali at Jagaraga (1849) and Cakranegara (1894), then used looting of a shipwreck in 1904 to justify attacking Badung in the south. They shelled Denpasar, where about 4,000 Balinese soldiers and civilians died in a ritual suicide battle (puputan). The kingdoms of Tabanan and Klungkung also fell and Balinese independence was finally crushed (20 September 1906).

Deogiri ❙ 1294 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate

Marking the first major Muslim offensive in the Deccan, Muslim Prince Ala-ud-din (nephew of Sultan Jalal-ud-din of Delhi) led 10,000 men through the Gavilgad Hills towards Deogiri (later Daulatabad) near Aurangabad. There he utterly routed the army of King Ramchandra (Ramdev) of the Hindu Yadav Dynasty and his son Prince Shankar. Ala-ud-din then returned with a massive treasure.

Deogiri ❙ 1307 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate

Despite defeat in 1294, King Ramchandra (Ramdev) of Deogiri eventually refused to pay tribute to Sultan Ala-ud-din, who sent an expedition under Malik Kafur. The army of Deogiri was defeated and Ramchandra was taken to Delhi to pay homage, as well as his arrears and a peace offer claimed to include 700 elephants. He was pardoned and returned as a vassal King (March 1307).

Deogiri ❙ 1318 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate

Taking advantage of a disputed succession in Delhi following the death of Ala-ud-din, Gujarat and Deogiri rose in revolt. New Sultan Mubarak Shah sent troops to restore order in Gujarat and personally led a force into Deogiri, where Harpal had usurped his father-in-law Ramchandra and proclaimed independence. The rebel was defeated and fled, but was later captured, flayed and beheaded.

Deols ❙ 469 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

After murdering his brother Theodoric II, the new Visigoth ruler Euric campaigned against King Riothamus of the Bretons, who attempted to defend Roman Aquitaine. At Deols, on the Indre, south of Orleans near Chateauroux, Riothamus was heavily defeated and fled to the Burgundians. Euric was checked by the Roman-Frank Paulus, though in 471 he defeated an Imperial army near Arles.

Deorai ❙ 1659 ❙ War of the Mughal Princes

In bitter war between the sons of ailing Mughal Emperor Shahjahan, Dara Shikoh the eldest, defeated at Samugargh (May 1658), raised a new army against Aurangzeb, who had seized the throne. Taking a powerful position in the pass at Deorai, south of Ajmer, Dara was defeated and fled after three days of fighting. He was later captured and executed by his brother Aurangzeb (12–14 April 1659).

Deorham ❙ 577 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

King Ceawlin of the West Saxons resumed the advance west into Gloucestershire after victory at Wibbandun in 568 and he defeated and killed three British Kings—Conmail, Condidan and Fairnmail—at Deorham (modern Dyrham), just north of Bath. Ceawlin's decisive victory led directly to the capture of Gloucester, Cirencester and Bath, and divided the British forces in Wales and Cornwall.

Deothal ❙ 1815 ❙ British-Gurkha War

See Malaon

Deptford Strand ❙ 1497 ❙ Flammock's Rebellion

See Blackheath

Dera ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Advancing north along the Jordan Valley, the Arab army of Prince Faisal attacked the key railway junction city of Dera (in modern Jordan), though was driven off by the Turkish garrison. Reinforced by British ground and air forces, the Arabs attacked again and eventually secured the town as the Turks evacuated north towards Damascus (18–28 September 1918).

Derby ❙ 917 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Following the death of Aethelred of Mercia in 911, his widow Aethelflaed—the Lady of Mercia—ruled in peace for many years, then turned against the Danish Confederacy of the Five Boroughs and laid siege to Derby. When Derby fell by storm, Leicester and York acknowledged her rule. Aethelflaed then joined with her brother, Edward of Wessex, against the Danes of East Anglia.

Dermbach ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

See Wiesenthal

Derna ❙ 1805 ❙ Tripolitan War

Six months after failing to destroy the pirate fleet at Tripoli, American forces turned against Derna, 500 miles to the west, attacked from the sea and by a land force from Alexandria under Captain William Eaton, Marine Lieutenant Preston O'Bannon and deposed Tripolitan ruler Hamet Karamanli. With Derna taken by storm, Peshwa Yusuf Karamanli sued for peace, ending the war (25 April 1805).

Derna ❙ 1912 ❙ Italo-Turkish War

In fighting around Derna, in eastern Libya, Italian General Tomasso Salsa drove off attacks by Turkish commander Enver Bey (10 February and 3 March), then received reinforcements and led a large-scale counter-offensive. Italian machine-guns and artillery inflicted terrible Turko-Arab losses and Enver Bey withdrew after three days. Peace was signed a month later (14–17 September 1912).

Derry ❙ 1600 ❙ Tyrone Rebellion

Sir Henry Docwra was sent from England to suppress Hugh O'Neill Earl of Tyrone and he held a strongly entrenched position at Derry (later Londonderry) against attacks by Gaill Narv (29 July) and O'Neill's cousin Hugh Roe O'Donnell (16 September). However, when Narv went over to the English, O'Donnell raised the siege and marched to aid the rebels at Kinsale (May–September 1600).

Dertosa ❙ 215 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Ibera

Descarga ❙ 1835 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Soon after a Spanish Liberal government force marching to relieve the Carlist siege of Villafranca de Oria was repulsed at Larrainzar, a second much larger force under General Baldomero Espartero was attacked in camp at Descarga, just east of Vergara, by Carlist General Juan Benito Eraso. Espartero lost almost 2,000 men captured and Villafranca fell next day (2 June 1835).

Deschutes ❙ 1848 ❙ Cayuse Indian War

Colonel Cornelius Gilliam, marching east from Vancouver after Cayuse who had murdered Dr Whitman in November 1847, met an Indian force at the mouth of the Deschutes on the Washington-Oregon border. Major Henry Lee was repulsed in a skirmish, but next day, Gilliam's force pursued and beat the Indians, killing more than 20, then won again at the Willow (29–30 January 1848).

Desert Storm ❙ 1991 ❙ 1st Gulf War

Responding to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, coalition General Norman Schwarzkopf determined not just to liberate Kuwait but to destroy the Iraqi army. Desert Storm saw a huge air campaign against Baghdad, victories at Khafji and Bubiyan, and a 100-hour ground offensive with victories such as As-Salman, Wadi al-Batin and Kuwait forced Iraq to make peace (17 January–28 February 1991).

Deskarti ❙ 1946 ❙ Greek Civil War

During a Communist offensive in Macedonia, one of the largest actions was at Deskarti, southeast of Grevena, where 1,500 well-armed insurgents attacked and seized the town. After five days of heavy fighting, government forces retook Deskarti. Martial law was then declared throughout northern Greece as the Communist offensive resumed at Naoussa (21–26 September 1946).

Despenaperros ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See La Carolina

Dessau ❙ 1626 ❙ Thirty Years War (Saxon-Danish War)

When Christian IV of Denmark intervened in Germany, Protestant commander Count Ernst von Mansfeld attempted to cross the Elbe to join the Danes. Attacking the Catholic bridgehead north of Leipzig at Dessau, Mansfeld was utterly defeated by Imperial General Albrecht von Wallenstein, losing much of his army and withdrew into Silesia. Mansfeld died a few months later (25 April 1626).

Dessie ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

With Ethiopia's capital Addis Ababa taken (6 April), South African Brigadier Dan Pienaar drove north against strong Italian defences at Combolchia Pass, outside Dessie. Very hard fighting saw Italy's accurate artillery eventually overcome and over 8,000 prisoners were captured, along with huge quantities of guns and vehicles. The survivors fled north towards Amba Alagi (17–22 April 1941).

Detmold ❙ 783 ❙ Wars of Charlemagne

Defeated by Pagan Saxons at Suntel Hill in 782, Charlemagne, King of the Franks, sent a large force to suppress the rebellion of Chief Widikund. The Saxons were beaten at Detmold in northern Germany and again a few days later, on the River Haase near Osnabruk. Intermittent fighting continued for several years before Widikund surrendered and accepted Christianity.

Detroit ❙ 1763–1764 ❙ Pontiac's War

The great Ottawa Chief Pontiac turned on his former British allies and led a surprise attack on Major Henry Gladwin at Fort Detroit. Despite initial failure, he established a siege and routed a British patrol at nearby Bloody Run. Though he eventually withdrew (28 November), the fort remained under loose blockade until finally relieved by Colonel John Bradstreet (7 May 1763–August 1764).

Detroit ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

While withdrawing from a failed advance into Canada, American General William Hull was blockaded at Detroit by British regulars and militia under General Isaac Brock and Indians led by Tecumseh. After American defeats at Brownstown and Magagua, Hull disgracefully surrendered the fort. The British abandoned it in September 1813 following defeat on Lake Erie (16 August 1812).

Dettingen ❙ 1743 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

George II of England and John Dalrymple Earl of Stair marching up the Rhine at the head of the Anglo-Hanoverian-Hessian "Pragmatic Army" were trapped on the Main at Dettingen by French Marshal Adrien de Noailles and his nephew Louis Comte de Gramont. A hard-fought action saw Gramont's line broken and the defeated French fell back behind the Rhine (27 June 1743).

Deutschbrod ❙ 1422 ❙ Hussite Wars

See Nemecky Brod

Devagiri ❙ 1294 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate

See Deogiri

Devernaki ❙ 1822 ❙ Greek War of Independence

Dramali (Mohamet Ali Pasha) advanced into eastern Peloponnesia and was repulsed at Nauplia. He then withdrew through the pass at Devernaki, where he was attacked by Nikitas Nikitaras and suffered terrible losses. The disastrous expedition cost 17,000 Turkish dead (including Dramali) out of 23,000, before the survivors were finally evacuated from Corinth (8 August 1822).

Devikota ❙ 1749 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Attempting to help deposed Raja Sauhojee of Tanjore against the French-appointed Raja Partab Singh, British forces failed to capture Devikota at the mouth of the Coleroon River in southeast India. Major Stringer Lawrence was then sent and, after a rash attack by Captain Robert Clive, Devikota was taken by assault.

Britain later abandoned Sauhojee in return for the fort (April 1749).

Devil's Backbone ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

After victory in July at Honey Springs, Oklahoma, Union General James G. Blunt entered western Arkansas, where he occupied Fort Smith, then sent Colonel William Cloud in pursuit of the retreating Confederates under General William L. Cabell. At nearby Devil's Backbone, close to Jenny Lind, Cabell ambushed Cloud, but was repulsed and had to continue withdrawing (1 September 1863).

Devil's Bridge ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

As he crossed the Alps from Italy to aid General Alexander Korsakov in Switzerland, Russian General Alexander Suvorov repulsed General Claude Lecourbe at Airolo. Next day he met a desperate French defence of the Devil's Bridge over the Shöllenen Gorge on the Reuss. The French retreated after heavy losses on both sides and Suvorov advanced to the Muottothal (24 September 1799).

Devil's Hole ❙ 1763 ❙ Pontiac's War

During Ottawa Chief Pontiac's war against Britain, a supply train was ambushed near the Devil's Hole, at the foot of Niagara Falls, by Seneca Indians. Only a handful of the train and their escort escaped and, when two nearby companies of light infantry went to their aid, they too were ambushed. Most of the 60 men were killed, including all three subalterns (14 September 1763).

Devizes ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Roundway Down

Dewangiri ❙ 1865 ❙ British-Bhutanese War

When Britain seized Assam, neighbouring Bhutan seized key mountain passes and refused to pay Britain tribute. A small British force was repulsed at Dewangiri, near Deothang, before Sir Henry Tombs led a second much larger force and recaptured Dewangiri after a brief campaign. Bhutan was forced to sue for peace and agreed to cede the passes in return for an annual subsidy from Britain.

Dhar ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Mandasur rebels west of Indore occupied Dhar and Amjhera and, in response, Colonel Charles Stuart marched west from Mhow to Dhar, held mainly by Arab and Afghan mercenaries claiming allegiance to 13-year-old Rajah Anand Rao Puar of Dhar. Following a fierce action, Durand waited for siege guns. He then bombarded and stormed the fort but found it abandoned (22–31 October 1857).

Dharmat ❙ 1658 ❙ War of the Mughal Princes

Amid bitter war between the sons of the ailing Mughal Emperor Shahjahan, the younger brothers Aurangzeb and Murad Baksh united against an Imperial army led by Jaswant Singh, Rajput Raja of Marwar, in support of the eldest brother, Dara Shikoh. At Dharmat, near Ujjain, the Rajputs were heavily defeated and the rebels advanced for decisive battle in late May at Samugargh (15 April 1658).

Dharmkot ❙ 1846 ❙ 1st British-Sikh War

When a large Sikh army crossed the Sutlej into British East Punjab to gather supplies, an Anglo-Indian force under Sir Harry Smith was sent against them at Dharmkot, between Ludhiana and Ferozepur. Smith captured the small fortress, with its massive supply of grain, though he was defeated a few days later at Baddowal as he marched east towards Ludhiana (18 January 1846).

Dhat al-Sawari ❙ 654 ❙ Early Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Mount Phoenix

Dhodap ❙ 1768 ❙ Maratha Wars of Succession

Renewing war against Maratha Peshwa Madhav Rao after earlier victory at Alegaon (1762), his ambitious uncle Raghunath Rao challenged the Peshwa and found himself under attack at the hill fortress of Dhodap, northeast of Bombay near Nashik. Raghunath was defeated and imprisoned after a decisive action, but he later became Peshwa after murdering Madhav Rao's successor (10 June 1768).

Dhu al Quassa ❙ 632 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

Immediately following the death of the Prophet Mohammed, the new Caliph Abu Bekr faced rebellion by Bedouin of the Abs and Dhobian tribes. The new Caliph dispersed the tribesmen in a surprise raid on the rebel camp at Dhu al Quassa, northeast of Medina. A second raid a month later a little further east utterly routed the dissidents and established the Caliph's authority (August 632).

Dhu-Kar ❙ 610 ❙ Persian-Arab Wars

See Dhu-Qar

Dhu-Qar ❙ 610 ❙ Persian-Arab Wars

Shah Chosroes II of Persia abolished the buffer Arab kingdom of Hira (between the lower Euphrates and northern Arabia) and executed its last king, provoking an incursion by the Bedouin of the Bakr ibn Wail. At Dhu-Qar the powerful sub-tribe of Bani Shaiban inflicted a heavy defeat on the Persian army, later greatly exaggerated as the first Arab victory over Persia.

Diamond Hill ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

Shortly after capturing Pretoria (5 June), British commander Lord Frederick Roberts took 17,000 men and 70 guns against a strongly entrenched Boer position under General Louis Botha, ten miles to the east at Diamond Hill. After inflicting over 160 British casualties, Botha had to withdraw, although the action was seen by the Boers as showing that they could fight back (11–12 June 1900).

Diao Yu ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

In a large-scale assault on Song southern China, the Mongol Khan Mongke, a grandson of Genghis Khan, captured Chengdu, then besieged Song General Wang Jian at Diao Yu fortress, near modern Hechuan in central Sichuan. After four months, Mongke's last assault was repulsed and he died soon afterwards. The war was then suspended until resumed by his brother Kubilai (May–August 1258).

Dibra ❙ 1448 ❙ Albanian-Turkish Wars

Ottoman Sultan Murad II invaded Albania to capture Svetigrad, then advanced against Dibra (modern Debar), northeast of Tirana. Albanian commander George Kastriote Skanderbeg broke off his siege of Danj and marched to meet the Turks, inflicting a very costly defeat. The Turks soon had to withdraw, lifting their siege of Krujë, to meet a Hungarian army at Kossovo (October 1448).

Didymoteichon ❙ 1352 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

In the war between rival Byzantine Emperors, John V Palaeologus sought aid from Stephan Dushan of Serbia, while John VI Cantacuzenus was sent an Ottoman army under Suleyman Pasha, son of the Sultan Orchan. A decisive battle in Thrace at Didymoteichon, south of Adrianople, saw the Serbians under Borilovic routed. Cantacuzenus deposed Palaeologus and enthroned his son Mathew.

Diedenhofen ❙ 1643 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Thionville

Dieg (1st) ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

Following the repulse of Maharaja Jaswant Rao Holkar at Delhi, British commander General Sir Gerard Lake sent General John Henry Fraser south against the mountain fortress of Dieg, where he soon met a massive Maratha army. When Fraser was fatally wounded, Colonel William Monson managed to scatter the Marathas. A month later Lake arrived with his siege train (14 November 1804).

Dieg (2nd) ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

With Maharaja Jaswant Rao Holkar of Indore defeated at Farrukhabab, British commander

General Sir Gerard Lake took his siege train west against the fortress of Dieg, where a hard-fought battle had been won a month earlier. The garrison fled following a massive bombardment and Lake turned his attention to the remaining fortress at Bharatpur (1–13 December 1804).

Diégo Suarez ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Indian Ocean)

See Madagascar

Dien Bien Phu ❙ 1953–1954 ❙ French Indo-China War

To break Viet Minh control in northern Vietnam, French General Henri Navarre determined to hold the remote camp at Dien Bien Phu. Against all odds, General Vo Nguyen Giap moved heavy guns to the surrounding hills to lay siege. After massive bombardment and brutal hand-to-hand fighting 10,000 French surrendered, ending French rule in Indo-China (20 November 1953–7 May 1954).

Dieppe ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Determined to demonstrate an Allied offensive in the west, over 6,000 Anglo-Canadian troops under Task Force commander General John Roberts attacked the well-defended French port of Dieppe. Over 3,500 were killed or captured, plus heavy losses in tanks, ships and aircraft. The disaster was later claimed to have provided valuable experience for subsequent landings in Normandy (19 August 1942).

Diersheim ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

After French victory on the lower Rhine at Neuwied, upstream beyond Strasbourg Generals Jean Moreau and Dominique Vandamme crossed the river before dawn and advanced under deadly Austrian fire towards Diersheim. A powerful counter-attack by Count Anton Sztaray that afternoon was repulsed with heavy losses on both sides, before an armistice halted further operations (21 April 1797).

Dig ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

See Dieg

Dijon ❙ 500 ❙ Burgundian-Frankish War

Clovis, King of the Salian Franks, determined to launch a campaign against King Gundobad of Burgundy and enlisted the aid of Gundobad's brother, the Prince Godigisel. On the River Ouche at Dijon, Gundobad was heavily defeated by the Franks and his treacherous brother. Gundobad was then pursued down the Rhone to Avignon where he held out against a long siege.

Dijon (1st) ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

With the French defeated near Besançon at Chatillon-le-Duc, German commander Karl August Werder marched west through Gray and sent General Gustav von Beyer probing towards the key city of Dijon. Following unexpectedly hard fighting at nearby St Apolinaire, Beyer bombarded Dijon into capitulation, though it was abandoned by the Germans after only a month (30 October 1870).

Dijon (2nd) ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

Italian Liberator Giuseppe Garibaldi intervened to support France and followed a modest victory at Chatillon-sur-Seine with a rash attack on Dijon. After two days of fighting to the northwest near Pasques, Garibaldi's inadequate force was repulsed by General Karl August von Werder, who pursued Garibaldi back to Auton. The Germans later abandoned Dijon (26–27 November 1870).

Dijon ❙ 1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

After occupying Dijon following German withdrawal (28 December 1870), Italian Liberator Giuseppe Garibaldi, commanding the Army of the Vosges, was attacked by 4,000 men from General Edwin von Manteuffel's army under General Karl von Kettler. The Germans withdrew after three days of very heavy fighting and Garibaldi held the city until armistice a week later (21–23 January 1871).

Dilam ❙ 1902 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

Responding to the fall of Riyadh in January and the killing of its Rashidi Governor, Abd al-Aziz ibn Rashid marched south from Hail against the upstart Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud). Unwisely attacking Saudi and Kuwaiti forces in a strongly defended position at Dilam, 50 miles south of Riyadh, Ibn Rashid suffered heavy losses and withdrew. In June 1904 he advanced on Unayzah (November 1902).

Dimale ❙ 219 BC ❙ 2nd Illyrian War

Demetrius of Pharos, the ruler of Illyria, began to threaten Roman territory and a massive land and naval force under Consuls Aemilius Paullus and Livius Salinator attacked his heavily fortified city of Dimale on the Illyrian mainland. The supposedly impregnable defences were breached after just seven days. The Romans then quickly stormed the island capital of Pharos (Lesina) and Demetrius fled.

Dinant ❙ 1466 ❙ Franco-Burgundian Wars

A year after crushing rebellion in Liège at Montenaeken, Philip Duke of Burgundy resolved to impose his will on rebellious Dinant, in the southeast of modern Belgium, and sent his son Charles the Bold. After besieging the city, Charles took it by storm, razed the walls and destroyed the citadel. A claimed 800 male prisoners were tied back to back and thrown into the Meuse (24–27 August 1466).

Dindori ❙ 1670 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

When the great Maratha Shivaji sacked the Mughal city of Surat, General Daud Khan was sent to cut off his withdrawal to the southeast. Shivaji detached part of his force as a rearguard and Daud Khan was heavily defeated in the Chandvad range near Dindori, north of Deolali. Emperor Aurangzeb then sent a much larger army against the Maratha fortress of Salher (16–17 October 1670).

Dinghai ❙ 1840 ❙ 1st Opium War

British Admiral Sir George Elliot arrived with a fresh fleet to reinforce the locals after victory at Chuanbi (November 1939) and sailed against Dinghai, on Zhoushan Island off the Yangzi, held by Zhang Chaofa. War junks were destroyed and Dinghai was bombarded and stormed by General George Burrell. A brief truce followed and Britain withdrew but later had to retake the island (5 July 1840).

Dinghai ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

Leading a force northeast from Hong Kong, British Superintendent Sir Henry Pottinger, with General Sir Hugh Gough and Admiral Sir William Parker, captured Xiamen, then attacked Dinghai (Tinghai), on Zhoushan Island off the Yangzi. Chinese General Keo was defeated and killed after a courageous defence and the British attacked nearby Zhenhai (29 September–1 October 1841).

Dingjun ❙ 219 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

After defeating Cao Cao at Red Cliffs (208), the warlord Liu Bei consolidated power in southern China, then led a large army into disputed Hanzhou. In battle at Dingjun Mountain, Liu Bei's General, Huang Zhong, routed Cao Cao's vanguard and killed commander Xichou Yuan. Liu Bei secured Hanzhou and, a few months later, his ally Guan Yu attacked Cao Cao's forces at Fancheng.

Dinwiddie Court House ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

With Union forces attacking his defences southwest of Petersburg, Virginia, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee sent Generals George Pickett and Fitzhugh Lee to block General Philip Sheridan at Dinwiddie Court House. Fighting in heavy mud, Pickett repulsed Sheridan's advance, but he was decisively beaten the following day to the northwest at Five Forks (31 March 1865).

Dipaea ❙ 471 BC ❙ Arcadian War

Following defeat at Tegea, the cities of Arcadia, in the mountainous central Peloponnese (except for Mantinea), joined forces against Sparta. With Argos apparently absent, Tegea and her allies were decisively beaten at Dipaea by disciplined Spartan Hoplites. The victory enabled Sparta to strengthen her grip on the Peloponnese and she soon turned west to secure Messenia (uncertain date c 471 BC).

Dire Dawa ❙ 1977–1978 ❙ Ogaden War

As the Somali army invaded Ethiopia's northern Ogaden in support of separatist rebels, an armoured force advanced on Dire Dawa, where repeated attacks were driven off with costly losses in men and tanks. The Somalis then turned their attention south to Jijiga, but Dire Dawa remained under virtual siege until relieved by a massive Soviet-led counter-offensive (August 1977–February 1978).

Dirnstein ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

See Durrenstein

Dirschau ❙ 1627 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

See Tczew

Distomo ❙ 1827 ❙ Greek War of Independence

To support Greek forces besieged at the Acropolis, Georgios Karaiskakis attacked Ottoman supply lines in the mountains west of Levadia. After victory at Arachova (December 1926) he attacked and defeated Omer Pasha of Negroponte to the southwest near Distomo and captured valuable baggage and artillery. Karaiskakis was killed in May near the Acropolis at Analatos (12 February 1827).

Ditmarschen ❙ 1500 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

See Hemmingstedt

Diu ❙ 1509 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

When Portugal seized Cochin in southern India, the deposed Raja sought aid from the Mamluk Sultan of Egypt, who sent a fleet advised by Venetians resentful of Portuguese interference. Off Diu, in the northwest, the allies were routed by Viceroy Francisco de Almeida, whose son had been killed at Chaul. Almeida then sacked Diu, which later became a Portuguese colony (3 February 1509).

Diu ❙ 1538–1539 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

The Portuguese island colony of Diu, off northwest India, was attacked by a vastly superior force of Ottoman ships under Khedim Suleiman Pasha of Egypt and troops of Gujarati Sultan Bahadur Shah, led by Khadjar Safar. Defended by Sultan Muhammad Zaman Mirza and Antonio de Silveira, the three-month siege ended on reports of the Portuguese Viceroy approaching (25 February 1539).

Diu ❙ 1546 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

Following a failed siege in 1538, the Portuguese island colony of Diu, off northwest India, was again besieged by Gujarati General Khadjar Safar. Defended by John de Mascarenhas, the fortress held out against seven months of starvation and assault and Safar was killed. A Portuguese fleet under Viceroy Juan de Castro eventually appeared and routed the Muslims (20 April–11 November 1546).

Djalula ❙ 637 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

See Jalula

Djerba ❙ 1560 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Having lost Tripoli to Ottoman forces in 1551, Phillip II of Spain sent Juan Duke of Medinaceli, who captured the nearby island of Djerba (7 March 1560). The Christian fleet was soon destroyed at anchor by Admiral Pyale Pasha and the Corsair Turghud Re'is (11 May). The 5,000-strong garrison under Alvaro de Sande at Burdj al-Kabir was then besieged and captured (16 May–31 July 1560).

Djiddah ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See Jeddah

Djiddah ❙ 1925 ❙ Saudi-Hashemite Wars

See Medina, Saudi Arabia

Djidjelli ❙ 1664 ❙ North African War of Louis XIV

See Jijelli

Djorf ❙ 1908 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

After victory in May at Bou Denib, just inside Morocco's Algerian border, Major Jules Fesch's garrison came under attack by Moroccans until relieved by General César Alix and 4,000 men, who then assailed the siege force on the nearby Plain of Djorf. The Moroccans suffered severe losses to French artillery and machine-guns and the border area was largely secured (7 September 1908).

Djunis ❙ 1876 ❙ Serbo-Turkish War

Resuming war after a brief armistice, the Serb army under Colonel Djura Horvatovic and Russian General Mikhail Chernyayev attacked Turkish commander Abdul Kerim between Djunis and Alexinatz, southeast of Belgrade. The Turks took Alexinatz after very heavy fighting around Djunis and were threatening Belgrade when Russia intervened to enforce an armistice (29 October 1876).

Dnieper ❙ 1788 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

See Liman

Dnieper ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Having blunted the German offensive at Kursk and counter-attacked at Orel and Kharkov, Russian forces advanced on a broad front towards the German "eastern rampart" on the Dnieper. In the north the offensive secured Smolensk, in the centre it took Kiev and Zhitomir and in the south the Russians advanced through Melitopol to seal off the Crimea (7 August–31 December 1943).

Dniester ❙ 1769 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

The invading Russian army under General Pyotr Rumyantsev secured victory at Khotin, then marched down the Dniester and set up camp, where they were subjected to a large-scale assault by Turkish Grand Vizier Moldovani Ali Pasha. The Turks were repulsed with heavy losses, after which Rumyantsev proceeded to capture Jassy and occupy Moldavia and Wallachia (9 September 1769).

Dobromierz ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Hohenfriedberg

Dobro Polje ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

At the start of the Allies' Salonika offensive on the Vardar, Serbian Generals Petar Bojovic and Stepa Stepanovic smashed into the Bulgarians around Dobro Polje in mountains east of Bitola. Their brilliant victory secured a decisive breakthrough and Franco-Serb forces stormed into Bulgaria, which surrendered on 4 November after the fall of Nish and Belgrade (15 September 1918).

Dobrynitchi ❙ 1605 ❙ Russian Time of Troubles

A Polish-supported pretender claiming to be Dimitri—murdered son of former Tsar Ivan IV—invaded the Ukraine and, after victory at Novgorod Seversk (November 1604), attacked Tsarist leaders Fedor Mstislavski and Basil Shuiski at Dobrynitchi. The "First False Dimitri" was beaten, though with Cossack support eventually usurped the throne. He was later overthrown by Shuiski (21 January 1605).

Dodecanese Islands ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

When Italy surrendered (8 September 1943), British forces seized several small islands of the Dodecanese, while the Germans held Rhodes. Churchill's doomed attempt to secure Aegean sea lanes ended in disaster when German airborne and amphibious attacks overwhelmed Kos (5–6 October) and a second larger assault took Leros after some very heavy fighting (12–16 November 1943).

Dodowa ❙ 1826 ❙ 1st British-Ashanti War

Reinforced by local auxiliaries, British troops in Gold Coast under Colonel Edward Purdon marched against the Ashanti, who had killed General Charles McCarthy two years earlier at Bonsaso, then threatened coastal tribes under British protection. On the Plain of Accra, just south of Dodowa, the Ashantene Obei Yaw was defeated and the hostile advance was repulsed (7 August 1826).

Doffingen ❙ 1388 ❙ German Towns War

Ten years after winning privileges at Reutlingen, the South German cities of the Swabian League renewed resistance against King Wenceslas. At Doffingen, near Stuttgart, their mercenary army was defeated by German Princes led by Eberhard of Württemberg. The Diet of Eger in 1389 dissolved the city leagues and princely privilege was gradually restored (28 August 1388).

Dogali ❙ 1887 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War

After Italian forces invaded Ethiopia's Eritrea Province against King Yohannes IV, Abyssinian commander Ras Alula besieged the Italian border post at Saati (24 January 1887). When a reinforcement of 500 troops was sent from Monkulla under Colonel Tommaso de Cristoforis, the Italians were ambushed and routed at Dogali, ten miles west of Massawa (26 January 1887).

Dogba ❙ 1892 ❙ 2nd Franco-Dahomean War

When King Behanzin of Dahomey (modern Benin) contested French occupation of Cotonou, war resumed and Colonel Alfred Dodds advanced inland with over 2,000 men towards Dogba, where the Dahomeans attacked. Dodds suffered heavy losses (including Colonel Marius-Paul Faurax killed) before his enemy were repulsed. He then continued on towards Abomey (19 September 1892).

Dogger Bank ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British Admiral Hyde Parker was escorting a convoy from the Baltic when he met a Dutch convoy under Admiral Johann Zoutmann near the Dogger Bank in the North Sea. Both sides suffered heavy losses in a hard-fought but indecisive action before Parker drove the Dutch back to port. Parker blamed his incomplete victory on poorly equipped ships and resigned his commission (5 August 1781).

Dogger Bank ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

As the Russian Baltic Fleet crossed the North Sea on its way to destiny off Japan at Tsushima, they mistakenly opened fire on the Hull fishing fleet on the Dogger Bank, sinking the trawler Crane and damaging several others. The incident threatened war with Britain and was settled only after the Tsar apologised and Russia paid 65,000 pounds compensation (21–22 October 1904).

Dogger Bank ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

Buoyed by success against Scarborough, German Admiral Fritz von Hipper led his battle fleet into the North Sea and was intercepted on Dogger Bank by Admiral Sir David Beatty, who sank one German battle-cruiser and severely damaged two others. However, after heavy damage to Beatty's own flagship, his deputy Admiral Archibald Moore allowed the Germans to escape (24 January 1915).

Dogoran ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Dorylaeum

Dog's Field ❙ 1109 ❙ Polish-German Wars

See Psie Pole

Doiran ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

While Franco-Serb forces attempted to advance into Macedonia around Lake Prespa, British General George Milne attacked north from Salonika towards Bulgarian positions near Doiran. The poorly co-ordinated attacks stalled and the front stabilised again until a fresh advance towards Doiran in 1918 as part of the successful offensive on the Vardar (24–25 April & 8–9 May 1917).

Doiran ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

As part of the great Allied offensive north from Salonika, British forces under General George Milne advanced against strong Bulgarian positions near Doiran. Milne was repulsed with almost 4,000 men lost in a frontal assault, though Franco-Serb victory further west on the Vardar forced the Bulgarians to withdraw and the British joined the pursuit (18–19 September 1918).

Dol-de-Bretagne ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Royalist rebel Henri de la Rochejaquelein was marching south through Normandy soon after his repulse at Granville, when Republican Generals Jean Antoine Rossignol and Jean-Baptiste Kléber attempted to cut him off near the towns of Antrain and Dol. A premature attack cost the Republicans victory at Dol and they were driven out of Antrain with very heavy losses (22–23 November 1793).

Dole ❙ 1668 ❙ War of Devolution

After Philip IV of Spain died, his son-in-law Louis XIV of France claimed Spanish territory for his wife Maria Theresa. Having conquered Flanders, the King and Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé invaded Franche-Comte. Besançon capitulated and Dole, southeast of Dijon, surrendered after a costly siege. The ensuing peace saw Louis retain Flanders but lose Franche-Comte (14 February 1668).

Dollar ❙ 875 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Thorstein the Red, son of Olaf, continued the Viking War against Scotland by decisively defeating Constantine I on the border of Perthshire and Fife at Dollar, near the River Devon. Threatened by English Northumbria, Constantine gave up half his kingdom to Thorstein. However, within less than a year, the Viking leader was killed in battle by native Chiefs supporting their true King.

Dolni-Dubnik ❙ 1877 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

See Plevna

Dolores, Chile ❙ 1879 ❙ War of the Pacific

See San Francisco

Dolores, Chile ❙ 1891 ❙ Chilean Civil War

See San Francisco

Dolores, Mexico ❙ 1810 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

When the militant Mexican priest Miguel Hidalgo preached resistance to Spain, his followers seized the town and prison at Dolores (modern Dolores Hidalgo). Supported by his peasant army, Hidalgo then took San Miguel el Grande and Celaya without resistance before leading a bloody assault on Guanajuato, launching the first Mexican War of Independence (16 September 1810).

Domazlice ❙ 1431 ❙ Hussite Wars

In response to Hussite raids into eastern Germany, a huge new crusade invaded Bohemia under Frederick of Brandenburg. Southwest of Pilsen at Domazlice (German Taus) they were met by Prokob the Bald, supported by the Polish Hussite Sigismund Korybut. The Germans fled in disorder after only light fighting, reinforcing the need to negotiate with the heretics (14 August 1431).

Dominica ❙ 1761 ❙ Seven Years War (Caribbean)

Following the conquest of French Canada, a British force of 26,000 men under Admiral Sir James Douglas and General Andrew Lord Rollo sailed against Dominica. After heavy naval gunfire destroyed the French positions, the island fell in just two days and Rollo went to support the attack on Martinique. At the war's end Britain retained possession of Dominica (7 June 1761).

Dominica ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Soon after France entered the war, French Admiral Francois-Claude de Bouillé at Martinique in the West Indies sailed with 2,000 men to nearby Dominica, where the 500-strong British garrison under Captain William Stewart was forced to surrender. Britain quickly responded by capturing St Lucia, south of Martinique, and regained the island at the war's end (8 September 1778).

Dominica ❙ 1782 ❙ War of the American Revolution

French Admiral Francois Comte de Grasse sailing from Martinique to join Spain against Jamaica was intercepted south of Dominica, where Rear Admiral Sir Samuel Hood (1724–1816) opened a long-range duel with Rear Admiral Louis Philippe Marquis de Vaudreuil. When Admiral George Rodney's main fleet came up, the French withdrew. Battle resumed three days later off the Saints (9 April 1782).

Dominica ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

The West Indian island of Dominica was awarded to Britain in 1763, though its possession remained disputed and, in 1805, five French warships under General Joseph Lagrange bombarded and took the capital, Roseau. However, Governor Sir George Prevost and his small garrison stubbornly fought on from a secondary position and the French eventually withdrew (22 February 1805).

Dominica ❙ 1965 ❙ Dominican Civil War

See Santo Domingo

Domitz ❙ 1635 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

John George of Saxony declared war on Sweden in Pomerania and advanced down the Elbe against Swedish General Johann Banér. In a mid-winter counter-offensive, Banér attacked across the Elbe at Domitz, northeast of Dannenberg, defeating a small Saxon force and opening way into Mecklenberg. The Saxons were beaten again in December at Goldberg and Kyritz (1 November 1635).

Domokos ❙ 1897 ❙ 1st Greco-Turkish War

Defeated in Thessaly at Mati, Pharsalus and Velestino, Crown Prince Constantine of Greece fell back on Domokos, north of Lamia, for a final stand against the victorious Ottoman army of Edhem Pasha. In a very large-scale action, the Turks were initially repulsed with heavy losses, but by nightfall, the defeated Greeks were forced to retreat and quickly ended their disastrous war (17 May 1897).

Domosdova ❙ 1444 ❙ Albanian-Turkish Wars

When an Ottoman army under Ali Pasha invaded Albania through Ohrid, they were met southeast of Elbasan on the plain of Tervol at Domosdova by an Albanian force under George Kastriote Skanderbeg. The Turks were heavily defeated in an unexpected reverse, encouraging King Ladislas of Poland to launch his fatal Crusade towards disaster at Varna (June 1444).

Domstadtl ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

While Frederick II of Prussia besieged the Austrians at Olmütz, in eastern Bohemia, a Prussian supply convoy of 4,000 wagons tried to advance south from Niesse. After several attacks the convoy, claimed to be 40 miles long, was utterly destroyed at nearby Domstadtl by Austrian General Gideon von Loudon, aided by Croat auxiliaries. Frederick withdrew from Olmütz next day (30 June 1758).

Don ❙ 1380 ❙ Russian-Mongol Wars

See Kulikovo

Donabew ❙ 1825 ❙ 1st British-Burmese War

See Danubyu

Donaldsonville ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

A few days after a failed Confederate advance on Baton Rouge, Louisiana, Union Admiral David G. Farragut attacked Donaldsonville, further down the Mississippi, which had fired on passing Union ships. After landing and exchanging fire with local Confederate patriots, Farragut persuaded the town leaders to halt attacks on Union shipping (9 August 1862).

Donaldsonville ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Confederate forces under General Thomas Green and Colonel James P. Major recovered from a repulse at Lafourche Crossing, in western Louisiana (21 June), then advanced on Donaldsonville, on the Mississippi, held by Major Joseph D. Bullen. Green retired after heavy fighting and over 300 Confederate casualties, but struck back two weeks later at nearby Cox's Plantation (28 June 1863).

Dona Maria ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As the French army retreated during the week-long "Battles of the Pyrenees," General Sir Rowland Hill overtook Marshal Nicolas Soult's rearguard as it attempted to force the pass at Dona Maria. While the first British attack was repulsed, with General Sir William Stewart wounded, a second attack broke the French, though heavy fog hindered pursuit (31 July 1813).

Donauwörth ❙ 1632 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

See Rain

Donauwörth ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Advancing deep into Germany, Allied commander John Churchill Duke of Marlborough and Prince Louis of Baden attacked and defeated the army of Bavaria under Elector Maximilian Emanuel and Count Jean-Baptiste d'Arco on the Danube at the fortress of Schellenberg, outside Donauwörth. Marlborough then occupied Donauwörth and six weeks later won again at Blenheim (2 July 1704).

Don Basin ❙ 1919 ❙ Russian Civil War

Driven back from Orel (20 October), White commander Anton Denikin appointed Sergei Ulagai to defend the Don Basin (Donbas) against Generals Aleksandr Yegorov and Kliment Voroshilov. Ulagai's army lost 8,000 men in bloody fighting and retreated to Rostov and the Crimea as advancing Reds took key cities including Bakhmut, Popasnaya and Lugansk (25–31 December 1919).

Donegal Bay ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

In support of Irish Rebellion, Commodore Jean-Baptiste Bompart sailed for Lough Swilly with 3,000 troops in nine ships. However, in Donegal Bay, he was routed by British Admiral Sir John Borlase Warren. Only two French ships escaped and Irish rebel Wolfe Tone was captured in the flagship, Hoche. The French advance party had already surrendered at Ballinamuck (12 October 1798).

Donetz ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

See Kharkov (1st)

Dong Ap Bia ❙ 1969 ❙ Vietnam War

Americans and South Vietnamese on a large-scale sweep into the A Shau Valley, southwest of Hue, attempted to capture the North Vietnamese fortified position on Mount Ap Bia. After repeated bloody assaults, the position was taken with terrible losses on both sides, raising intense American debate and virtually ending such costly search and destroy operations (10–20 May 1969).

Dong Bo Dau ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Thang Long

Dong-do ❙ 1426–1427 ❙ Sino-Vietnamese War

Ending his ten-year war against Chinese overlordship of Vietnam, Le Loi and General Nguyen Trai besieged Dong-do (later Thang Long and Hanoi), reinforced by Ming troops under Wang Tong. Defeated at nearby Tot-dong, and with reinforcements destroyed at Chi Lang, Wang Tong abandoned the city and China withdrew from Vietnam for the next 350 years (1426–December 1427).

Dong Ha ❙ 1968 ❙ Vietnam War

As the Tet Offensive wound down, up to 8,000 North Vietnamese regulars entered the A Shau Valley to attack the Dong Ha base and nearby Dai Do. Aided by air-strikes and artillery, the outnumbered US Marines and South Vietnamese eventually repulsed the Communists with over 1,000 killed, effectively ending the threat of invasion across the DMZ until 1972 (29 April–15 May 1968).

Dong-Khé ❙ 1950 ❙ French Indo-China War

Encouraged by Communist victory in China, Viet Minh under Vo Nguyen Giap attacked French border fortresses in northern Vietnam, where four battalions overwhelmed the 800-strong garrison at Dong-Khé. The fortress was retaken by French airborne troops at high cost after two days, though was lost again four months later in the Communist advance on Cao-Bang (25–27 May 1950).

Dong Xoai ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

Following government failure at Binh Gia and Ba Gia, about 1,500 Viet Cong attacked the army base at Dong Xoai, 50 miles north of Saigon. With heavy losses on both sides, the Viet Cong were driven off by Allied air power before government forces fled in the face of a renewed attack, helping convince the US that only major military intervention could save South Vietnam (10–12 June 1965).

Donkerhoek ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Diamond Hill

Doogaur ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

While British forces besieged Bassein, off Bombay, Colonel James Hartley manoeuvred against a Maratha relief army under Ramchandra Ganesh. After a skirmish at Padaghe, Hartley met a reported 20,000 Marathas northwest at Doogaur, where Ganesh was fatally wounded. Bassein fell following further fighting at Vajreshwari and the Marathas withdrew (10–12 December 1780).

Doolittle Raid ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Determined to strike at the Japanese homeland, 16 American B-25 bombers led by Colonel James Doolittle took off from the carrier Hornet and bombed Tokyo and other cities. With limited fuel, the crews bailed out or crash-landed in China, with some captured and three executed. The raid caused little material damage but greatly affected both Japanese and American morale (18 April 1942).

Doornkop ❙ 1896 ❙ Jameson's Raid

See Krugersdorp

Doornkop ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

As General Lord Frederick Roberts advanced on Johannesburg from the east through Elandsfontein, General Sir Ian Hamilton attacking from the west was blocked at Doornkop by Jacobus de la Rey and Ben Viljoen. Although Hamilton lost 300 men in a parade-ground frontal assault against the ridge, the Boers withdrew and Johannesburg fell two days later (29 May 1900).

Doornkraal Farm ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Bothaville

Dorchester Heights ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

During the siege of Boston, American General John Thomas attacked the Dorchester Heights, on a peninsula, south of the harbour. In a bold night assault with a large workparty and wagon loads of materials, Thomas secured and fortified the position. A snowstorm prevented a British counter-attack and, within days, commander General William Howe decided to evacuated Boston (4 March 1776).

Dormans ❙ 1575 ❙ 5th French War of Religion

Facing increasing Huguenot disorder, Henry of Guise took a Catholic force against Henry of Navarre and moderate French Catholics known as Politiques. At Dormans, southwest of Rheims, Guise intercepted and defeated German Protestant reinforcements under John Casimir. However, the newly crowned King Henry III feared the Politiques and established a new peace (10 October 1575).

Dornach ❙ 1499 ❙ Swabian War

In their final struggle for freedom, the Swiss cantons defeated the Habsburg Swabian League at Frastenz and Calven before Emperor Maximilian intervened a few months later and sent Count Henry of Furstenberg to besiege the castle of Dornach, south of Basel. Decisive defeat cost the Germans 3,000 killed, including Count Henry and war ended with virtual Swiss independence (22 July 1499).

Dorostalon ❙ 971 ❙ Byzantine-Russian Wars

Prince Sviatoslav of Kiev conquered Bulgaria, though he was repulsed by the Byzantine army at Arcadiopolis (970) and withdrew to the Danube, where he was beaten with terrible losses at Dorostalon by Emperor John Tzimisces. After a three-month siege, Sviatoslav was defeated again and sued for peace, but on the way home he was killed by Pecheneg Turks at the Dnieper (13 April–21 July 971).

Dorpat ❙ 1603 ❙ 1st Polish-Swedish War

After Swedish forces invaded and overran most of Livonia, they were defeated in March 1601 at Kokenhausen and new Polish commander Jan Karol Chodkiewicz gradually regained control. Attacking Dorpat (modern Tartu, Estonia)—which had been seized by the Swedes in December 1600—Chodkiewicz defeated General Arvid Stalarm and won again in 1609 at Weissenstein (13 April 1603).

Dorpat ❙ 1625 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden resumed war against Poland in Livonia, where he captured Kokenhausen and Selburg, while further north in eastern Estonia, his forces under Gustavus Horn and Jakob de la Gardie besieged the key Catholic city of Dorpat (modern Tartu) on the Ema River. With the fall of Dorpat, Adolphus was able to turn south towards Wallhof (16 August 1625).

Dorpat ❙ 1702 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Erestfer

Dorpat ❙ 1704 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

On a fresh spring offensive through Ingria, Tsar Peter I sent Russian forces to besiege the powerful Swedish fortresses of Narva and Dorpat (modern Tartu) in eastern Estonia. Dorpat was invested by 23,000 men under Marshal Boris Sheremetev. When Peter personally arrived, a ruse encouraged a sortie, which was destroyed and the commander surrendered (June–24 July 1704).

Dorylaeum ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

Crusaders under Bohemund of Taranto advancing into modern Turkey from the capture of Nicaea (19 June) were attacked by Sultan Kilij Arslan's Turkish cavalry near Dorylaeum (modern Eskisehir) and suffered severe casualties. Relieved by the arrival of Godfrey de Bouillon's heavy cavalry, the Crusaders beat the Turks before taking Dorylaeum and Arslan's rich treasure (1 July 1097).

Dorylaeum ❙ 1147 ❙ 2nd Crusade

Emperor Conrad III rejected advice to use the coastal route to Palestine and led his German Crusaders into central Turkey without waiting for Louis VII of France. While advancing past Nicaea to Dorylaeum, site of a great Crusader victory in 1097, Conrad's poorly provisioned force was destroyed by a massive Turkish army. The Emperor eventually reached Acre by ship (25 October 1147).

Dos Pilas ❙ 679 ❙ "Star" Wars

During war between Mayan cities (in modern Guatemala), with battles planned by the stars, rivals for Tikal fought for possession of Dos Pilas to the southeast. In 672 Nu Bak Chaak took the city from B'alaj Chan K'awiil then lost it again. In the decisive return battle, with aid from Calakmul, B'alaj Chan K'awiil defeated and killed Nu Bak Chaak, whose son was later avenged at Calakmul.

Dos Ríos ❙ 1895 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

Shortly after returning to Cuba to join renewed revolution, the Patriot leader and poet

José Martí was surprised in camp at Dos Ríos, ten miles east of Bayamo, by Spanish forces under Colonel Ximénez Sandoval. The Cubans suffered about 150 casualties, including Martí killed and Máximo Gómez wounded trying to recover his body. Cuban forces soon struck back at Peralejo (19 May 1895).

Douai ❙ 1710 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Imperial commander Prince Eugène of Savoy led a fresh offensive in the Netherlands to besiege Douai, south of Lille, held by French General Francois Albergotti. The town surrendered after a relief force was driven off, although Eugène had lost very heavy casualties in the siege. He then also took the Béthune, St Venant and Aire, though all were lost again in 1712 (25 April–26 June 1710).

Douala ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

See Duala

Douaumont (1st) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

At the start of the battle for Verdun, German forces under Crown Prince Wilhelm and General Konstantin Schmidt von Knobelsdorf attacked the key fortress of Douaumont, which fell after heavy fighting. French commander Philippe Petain himself tried to hold Douaumont village, but on 4 March it too fell to the German onslaught, which then turned against Vaux (21–25 February 1916).

Douaumont (2nd) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

While French forces defended desperately around Vaux, northeast of Verdun, General Charles Mangin attempted a counter-attack further north at Fort Douaumont. The French seized part of the fort before bloody fighting eventually drove them out with terrible losses. Mangin was relieved of command, but was soon recalled and secured success at Fleury and Souville (22–25 May 1916).

Douaumont (3rd) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Following a lull in fighting around Verdun, after German failure at Fleury and Souville, new French commander Robert Nivelle determined to renew the offensive and ordered General Charles Mangin against the key fortress of Douaumont. The fort surrendered after massive bombardment and heavy fighting and the French turned south against Vaux (21–24 October 1916).

Dove Creek ❙ 1865 ❙ Kickapoo Indian Wars

A large party of Kickapoo under Papequah marching towards Mexico to escape Civil War in Kansas was attacked at Dove Creek, west of San Angelo, Texas, by Confederate Captain Henry Fossett. The badly outnumbered Americans lost 26 killed and 60 wounded for 15 Indian dead. This worst Texan defeat at Indian hands was avenged at Nacimiento in 1873 (8 January 1865).

Dover, England ❙ 1216–1217 ❙ 1st English Barons' War

Supported by English Barons rebelling against King John, Crown Prince Louis of France landed in England, where he captured Rochester and Winchester, then besieged Dover Castle, held by Hubert de Burgh. After the Royalist victory at Lincoln, and defeat of Louis' supply fleet off South Foreland, the Prince abandoned the siege and his claim to the throne (22 July 1216–August 1217).

Dover, England ❙ 1652 ❙ 1st Dutch War

See Goodwin Sands

Dover, Tennessee ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Fort Donelson

Dover Straits ❙ 1666 ❙ 2nd Dutch War

See Four Days Battle

Dover Straits ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

Six German destroyers attacking the Dover barrage near the South Goodwins were met by the British destroyers Broke and Swift. A close-range night engagement saw Swift torpedo G-85, while Broke (Commander Edwards Evans) rammed G-42, which sank after hand-to-hand fighting to repel boarders. Both British ships were badly damaged but the other Germans withdrew (20–21 April 1917).

Downs ❙ 1639 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Spain determined to reinforce her army in the Netherlands and sent a fleet of over 70 ships and 24,000 men under the command of Admiral Antonio d'Oquendo, who anchored in the English Downs between Dover and Deal. In a brilliant attack with 30 ships, Dutch Admiral Maarten Tromp destroyed the Spanish fleet, killing over 7,000 and securing mastery of the sea (21 October 1639).

Drabescus ❙ 465–464 BC ❙ Wars of the Delian League

During the confrontation with Thasos over mineral-rich areas on the Thracian mainland, Athens sent 10,000 settlers to Ennea Hodoi at a crossing point on the lower River Strymon. After establishing a colony, settlers advanced into the interior, where they were annihilated by Thracian tribesmen at Drabescus. In 437 BC, the Athenians established a short-lived colony on the Strymon at Amphipolis.

Draco ❙ 553 ❙ Gothic War in Italy

See Mount Lactarius

Dragasani ❙ 1821 ❙ Greek War of Independence

In support of Greek Independence, Alexander Ipsilantis tried to raise rebellion in Romania, where he led over 5,000 men in a rash frontal assault on about 800 Turks on the Olte at Dragasani. Ipsilantis was driven off with terrible losses, including the "Sacred Band" of Greek youth annihilated, then fled to Austria, where he was imprisoned for seven years. His allies died at Sekou (19 June 1821).

Dranesville ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union General Edward O. C. Ord recovered from the costly defeat in northern Virginia at Ball's Bluff (21 October) and met a large Confederate foraging expedition under General James "Jeb" Stuart northwest of Washington, D.C., near Dranesville, just south of the Potomac. Stuart lost almost 200 casualties before being forced to withdraw, though he managed to save his wagons (20 December 1861).

Drepanum ❙ 249 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

Supporting Rome's blockade of the Carthaginian fortress of Lilybaeum in western Sicily, Consul Publius Claudius Pulcher ill-advisedly took his fleet to attack Carthaginian ships at nearby Drepanum. Claudius was completely outmanoeuvred by Admiral Adherbal in a resounding defeat. Almost 100 Roman vessels were destroyed, while the Carthaginian fleet reputedly lost no ships.

Drepanum ❙ 1266 ❙ Venetian-Genoese War

See Trapani

Dresden ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Manoeuvring against the Austrians after a Prussian defeat in Silesia at Landshut (26 June), Frederick II of Prussia tried to divert his rivals by besieging and bombarding Dresden, held by General Johann Sigismund von Macquire. Austrian Marshal Leopold von Daun advanced to relieve the city and, with Silesia under threat, Frederick withdrew and marched to Liegnitz (12–29 July 1760).

Dresden ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Soon after French defeats at Grossbeeren and Katzbach, Austria joined the alliance and supported an attack on Napoleon Bonaparte at Dresden. Despite their superior numbers, the Russians of Prince Ludwig Wittgenstein, the Prussians of General Friedrich von Kleist, and Prince Karl Philipp Schwarzenberg's Austrians suffered terrible losses and withdrew into Bohemia (26–27 August 1813).

Dreux ❙ 1562 ❙ 1st French War of Religion

Two months after Protestant defeat at Rouen, Huguenot leader Louis I de Bourbon Prince of Condé took German reinforcements to relieve Le Havre, but was defeated at Dreux, north of Chartres, by Anne Duke of Montmorency. However, the rival commanders were both captured and the later assassination of Catholic leader Francis of Guise brought temporary peace (19 December 1562).

Dreux ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

When General Yves-Louis Fiereck directed a breakout west from besieged Paris, a mixed force of Gardes Mobiles and marines reached Dreux, where they were attacked by Germans under Grand Duke Friedrich Franz II of Mecklenburg. The French withdrew after a heavy defeat in fierce action south of Dreux, pursued next day through Chateauneuf (17 November 1870).

Drewry's Bluff ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As the Confederate army withdrew up the Virginia Peninsula from Yorktown, five Union gunboats under commander John Rodgers ascended the James River towards Richmond. Seven miles upriver the guns under General William Mahone at Fort Darling on Drewry's Bluff inflicted such heavy damage, especially on the iron-clad Galena, that Rodgers had to withdraw (15 May 1862).

Drewry's Bluff ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union commander Benjamin F. Butler withdrawing from action at Swift Creek, north of Petersburg, Virginia, attempted a cautious advance against the Confederate line further north at Drewry's Bluff, on the James River. After initial Union success, Confederate General Pierre G. T. Beauregard led a bold counter-attack and repulsed the advance on Richmond (12–16 May 1864).

Driefontein ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

As he advanced east from Kimberley through Paardeberg and Poplar Grove, General Lord Frederick Roberts was blocked by General Christiaan de Wet at Driefontein, defending Bloemfontein, capital of the Orange Free State. A sharp action cost 400 British and 100 Boer casualties before the Boers withdrew and Bloemfontein was abandoned three days later (10 March 1900).

Drin ❙ 1448 ❙ Albanian-Venetian War

See Danj

Drina ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

Buoyed by success at Cer and Sabac, Serbian Marshal Radomir Putnik advanced into Syrmia, then had to withdraw in the face of a second Austrian invasion across the Drina by General Oskar Potiorek. Austrian General Artur Geisl secured Parasnica before a massive Serbian counter-offensive halted the invasion. Putnik later fell back to defend Belgrade at Kolubara (8–17 September 1914).

Driniumor ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Aitape

Drogheda ❙ 1649 ❙ British Civil Wars

Oliver Cromwell led a campaign of destruction against Catholic-Royalist Ireland, where he attacked Drogheda on the Boyne, held by a 3,000-strong garrison under Sir Arthur Aston. The town was overwhelmed after a brief siege, followed by slaughter of the garrison and civilians, including Aston killed. Cromwell then advanced against Wexford (3–12 September 1649).

Droop Mountain ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Raiding against road and rail links in West Virginia near Lewisburg, Union Generals William W. Averell and French-born Alfred N. Duffié attacked Confederate General John Echols 20 miles to the north at Droop Mountain. The Confederate brigade was defeated and dispersed in a sharp action, though Averell soon withdrew and ended his raid (6 November 1863).

Drumclog ❙ 1679 ❙ Scottish Covenanter Rebellion

Despite defeat at Rullion Green (1666), nonconformist Covenanters renewed their rebellion against Episcopalianism and, on Drumclog Moor, southwest of Strathaven, met John Graham of Claverhouse. Led by John Balfour of Kinloch, the rebels repulsed the badly outnumbered government force, killing about 40, but they were destroyed three weeks later at Bothwell Bridge (1 June 1679).

Drummossie ❙ 1746 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

See Culloden

Dryfe Sands ❙ 1593 ❙ Later Scottish Clan Wars

In the so-called "last great Clan battle" on the border, John Lord Maxwell took 2,000 men against Sir James Johnston at Lockwood. But at Dryfe Sands, near Lockerbie, Maxwell was ambushed and killed along with many of his men. In 1608 Maxwell's son murdered Sir James in revenge but was subsequently hanged and James IV reconciled the Clans to end the feud (7 December 1593).

Dry Lake ❙ 1873 ❙ Modoc Indian War

See Lava Beds (2nd)

Dry Wood Creek ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

After victory in southwest Missouri at Wilson's Creek, 6,000 secessionist militia led by General Sterling Price marched to Dry Wood Creek, on the Kansas border, east of Fort Scott, where they were attacked by just 600 Kansas cavalry under Colonel James H. Lane (1814–1866). Despite the advantage of surprise, Lane was driven off and Price marched north to Lexington, Missouri (2 September 1861).

Duala ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

In the wake of a failed land assault in German Cameroon at Garua, Anglo-French forces under General Charles Dobell attacked by sea against Duala. Naval bombardment forced the Germans to blow up the wireless station and surrender the port and its shipping, including nine liners. They then retreated inland to Yaunde and held out in the north at Garua and Mora, Cameroon (27 September 1914).

Dubba ❙ 1843 ❙ British Conquest of Sind

See Hyderabad, Pakistan

Dubienka ❙ 1792 ❙ Polish Rising

When Poland declared independence, Catherine the Great sent Marshal Alexander Suvorov to impose Russian authority. He fought the Poles at Zielenice before Tadeusz Kosciuszko brilliantly defended Dubienka, east of Chelm. However, Kosciuszko dispersed his outnumbered force when two Russian armies encircled and occupied Warsaw. The Second Polish partition followed (18 July 1792).

Dublin (1st) ❙ 1171 ❙ Anglo-Norman Conquest of Ireland

Following Norman capture of Dublin after victory at Waterford, Haskulf the Norse King of Dublin returned from overseas with fresh forces and attempted to retake the city. Outside Dublin, near the mouth of the Poddle, Haskulf was routed and captured by Normans under the brothers Miles and Richard de Cogan. He was later executed (May 1171).

Dublin (2nd) ❙ 1171 ❙ Anglo-Norman Conquest of Ireland

With the Norse King Haskulf captured attempting to retake Dublin from the Normans, Irish High King Rory O'Connor laid siege to the city, supported by leading Clan Chiefs. However, Norman leaders Raymond le Gros, Richard de Clare "Strongbow," Miles de Cogan and Maurice Fitzgerald led a powerful counterattack. The Irish King fled and his army was routed (September 1171).

Dublin ❙ 1803 ❙ Emmet's Insurrection

In the aftermath of the failed Irish rebellion of 1798, Nationalist leader Robert Emmet returned from France with pikes and muskets, hoping to trigger a fresh rising with French support. A premature march on Dublin Castle was bloodily dispersed after his rebels seized and killed the Lord Chief Justice. Emmet was soon captured and hanged for treason, as were many of his supporters (23 July 1803).

Dublin ❙ 1916 ❙ Easter Rising

In an insurrection against Britain, about 1,500 Irish Republicans under James Connolly and Patrick Pearse seized the General Post Office and other buildings in Dublin on Easter Monday. General Sir John Lowe's powerful response saw five days of street fighting and artillery fire force a surrender. Fifteen rebel leaders were executed and the rising was suppressed (24–29 April 1916).

Dublin ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

See Four Courts

Dubrovnik ❙ 1991–1992 ❙ Croatian War

When Croatia broke away from Yugoslavia, the Adriatic port city of Dubrovnik came under siege as part of the Serb blockade of the Croatian coast. Heavy shelling by the Yugoslav army under General Pavle Strugar and navy under Admiral Miodrag Jokic caused civilian deaths and severe property damage, before a UN-mediated ceasefire finally ended the siege (October 1991–May 1992).

Duck Lake ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

Veteran Canadian rebel Louis Riel declared Saskatchewan independent and Méti led by Gabriel Dumont ambushed 56 Mounted Police and 43 Prince Albert settlers under Superintendent Leif Crozier near the Duck Lake Trading Post, on the South Saskatchewan, near Batoche. Crozier lost 12 killed and 11 wounded in sharp fighting and had to retreat. Dumont lost five killed (26 March 1885).

Dudley's Defeat ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

During the British siege of Fort Meigs, a relief force arrived under General Green Clay of Kentucky, who sent 800 men under Colonel William Dudley to spike the British guns. With his mission accomplished, Dudley rashly pursued the British and their Indian allies. Lured into ambush, Dudley and about 200 men were killed and more than 400 were captured, but Fort Miegs was saved (5 May 1813).

Dug Gap ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Davis' Cross Roads

Dujaila ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Soon after failing at Sheik Sa'ad, Wadi and Hanna, General Sir Fenton Aylmer's Anglo-Indian force made a further attempt to break the Turkish siege of Kut-al-Amara near Es Sinn. But an attack on the powerful redoubt at Dujaila by General George Kemball was driven off with heavy losses. Aylmer was replaced by General George Gorringe, who in turn failed at Sannaiyat (8 March 1916).

Dul Madoba ❙ 1913 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

When Muhammad Abdullah Hassan renewed war against friendly tribes in Somaliland, British Camel Constabulary under Richard Corfield attacked the Mullah's forces at Dul Madoba, near Idoweina. Corfield was killed and Captain Gerald Summers wounded before the Dervishes withdrew. The British lost 36 killed and 21 wounded out of 85 before returning to Burao (9 August 1913).

Dumanli Dag ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

See Bayburt

Dunaberg ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

See Dvinsk

Dunajetz ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

See Gorlice-Tarnow

Dunamunde ❙ 1701 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Charles XII of Sweden drove off a siege of the Baltic city of Riga by Russian, Polish and Saxon troops, then pursued his enemy to the nearby fortress port at Dunamunde (modern Daugavgriva, Latvia). Crossing the Dvina (Duna) in rafts and boats under heavy opposition fire, Charles won a great victory and went on to occupy Livonia and Courland (9 July 1701).

Dunanore ❙ 1580 ❙ Geraldine Rebellion

See Fort del Or

Dunbar ❙ 1296 ❙ English Invasion of Scotland

In reponse to Scotland's alliance with France and invasion of Cumberland, Edward I marched north to sack Berwick, then sent forces to Dunbar, east of Edinburgh, against the main Scottish army of King John Baliol, led by Thomas Durward Earl of Athol. English under John de Warenne Earl of Surrey overwhelmed the Scots and Edward declared himself King of Scotland (27 April 1296).

Dunbar ❙ 1337–1338 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Supporting his ally Edward Baliol against adherents of David II, Edward III of England sent William Montague Earl of Salisbury and Richard Fitzalan Earl of Arundel against Dunbar Castle, held by Countess Agnes of Dunbar for her absent husband. In a celebrated siege, "Black Agnes" resisted for six months before Sir Alexander Ramsay broke the blockade by sea and the English withdrew.

Dunbar ❙ 1650 ❙ British Civil Wars

The outnumbered Parliamentary army of Oliver Cromwell marched into Scotland against Royalists under General David Leslie and attacked the Scots outside Dunbar, on the Firth of Forth, east of Edinburgh. Leslie suffered an overwhelming defeat and withdrew north, leaving Cromwell and his commanders George Monck and John Lambert to seize Edinburgh (3 September 1650).

Dunblane ❙ 1715 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Fifteen)

See Sheriffmuir

Duncrub ❙ 965 ❙ Scottish Dynastic Wars

Following the death of King Indulph of Scotland at Invercullen in 961, his throne passed to Duff (Dubh), son of Malcolm I, who found himself at war with Indulph's son Cullen. At Duncrub, in Perthshire, Cullen was heavily defeated, with his allies the Mormaor of Atholl and the Abbot of Dunkeld slain. Two years later Cullen killed Duff at Forres and seized the throne.

Dundalk ❙ 1318 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Edward Bruce, brother of Robert the Bruce, extending the Scottish War to Ireland, defeated local forces at Ardscull and was crowned at Dundalk, north of Dublin. Two years later, his small Scots force faced a much larger Anglo-Irish army loyal to Edward II, under Sir John de Bermingham, near Dundalk at Faughart. Bruce was killed and England re-established control of Ulster (14 October 1318).

Dundarg ❙ 1334 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

In the war between adherents of young King David II and the English-backed Edward Baliol, Scottish Regent Sir Andrew Moray and Alexander de Mowbray marched into Buchan and besieged Henry de Beaumont in Dundarg Castle on Moray Firth. Beaumont was forced to surrender when his water supply was severed and was permitted to return to England (August–November 1334).

Dundee, Scotland ❙ 1651 ❙ British Civil Wars

Left to subjugate Scotland after victory at Dunbar (1650), Parliamentary General George Monck captured Stirling, then besieged Dundee, defended by Governor Robert Lumsden. The storming of Dundee was followed by heavy civilian deaths. With Royalist defeat at Worcester two days later, other Scottish towns quickly surrendered and the war came to an end (August–1 September 1651).

Dundee, South Africa ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Talana Hill

Dundia Khera ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Determined to pacify Oudh, General Sir Colin Campbell took Shankapur without a shot fired and drove Beni Madhav northwest towards Dundia Khera, on the Ganges, south of Cawnpore. The fleeing rebels were beaten nearby by Colonel Frederick Evelegh (10 November). Two weeks later, Campbell inflicted a decisive defeat with over 600 dead, and secured Oudh (24 November 1858).

Dunes ❙ 1600 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

See Nieuport

Dunes ❙ 1658 ❙ Franco-Spanish War

French Marshal Henri de Turenne was besieging Dunkirk, aided by ships and troops from Cromwell's England, when a large Spanish relief force approached, led by Don John of Austria and Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé supported by English Royalists. On dunes between the beach and the port, the Spanish were routed and Dunkirk fell ten days later, ending the war (14 June 1658).

Dungan Hill ❙ 1647 ❙ British Civil Wars

On an offensive from Dublin, Parliamentary commander Colonel Michael Jones took a force northwest towards Trim and, at nearby Dungan (sometimes Dungan's) Hill, attacked a Catholic-Royalist force under Thomas Preston Viscount Tara. The Irish were virtually annihilated, losing over 3,000 killed and all their guns and baggage, and Tara retired to Kilkenny (8 August 1647).

Dungeness ❙ 1652 ❙ 1st Dutch War

After Admiral Witte Cornelius de With was repulsed at Kentish Knock (8 October), Maarten Tromp was recalled to lead the Dutch fleet and, off Dungeness headland in Kent, he engaged English Admiral Robert Blake, who had only half as many ships. With three vessels sunk and two captured, Blake withdrew defeated and Tromp secured temporary command of the Channel (10 December 1652).

Dunkeld ❙ 1689 ❙ First Jacobite Rebellion

One month after victory at Killiecrankie, Scottish supporters of James II, led by Colonel Alexander Cannon, attacked Dunkeld, north of Perth, held for William III by the Cameronian Regiment under Colonel William Cleland. Although Cleland was killed, the Highlanders were heavily repulsed (despite a four to one advantage) and the Jacobite rising was virtually over (21 August 1689).

Dunkirk ❙ 1646 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Gaston Duke d'Orleans (son of Henry IV of France), expanding French territory north into the Spanish Netherlands, captured Gravelines (1644) and later took Mardyk. He then left Louis II Duke d'Enghien to besiege the key Spanish port of Dunkirk. Supported at sea by a Dutch blockade under Admiral Martin Tromp, d'Enghien captured Dunkirk after a month (19 September–11 October 1646).

Dunkirk ❙ 1658 ❙ Franco-Spanish War

As France and Cromwell's England strengthened their alliance against Spain in northern France, French Marshal Henri de Turenne, aided by English troops under Sir William Lockhart, besieged Dunkirk, supported by the blockading English fleet. The port capitulated ten days after the nearby Battle of the Dunes and remained four years in English hands (24 June 1658).

Dunkirk ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Attacking in northern France, Prince Frederick Augustus Duke of York and a strong British-Hanoverian force besieged Dunkirk by land and sea. French commander General Joseph Souham gallantly defended the port and, after the Allied covering force lost at nearby Hondschoote, the Duke lifted his siege and withdrew to Belgium (24 August–8 September 1793).

Dunkirk ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

With the Allies overwhelmed on all fronts by the German invasion of the Lowlands and the enemy race for the Channel Ports, French, British and Belgian troops withdrew to Dunkirk, which saw a bold defence and evacuation under General John Lord Gort (later General Harold Alexander). While almost 900 small ships and naval craft saved 338,000 men, France was doomed (28 May–4 June 1940).

Dunlawton ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

Marching south from St Augustine, Florida, 40 men of the independent St Augustine Guards under Major Benjamin Putnam went to Anderson's Plantation at Dunlawton on the Halifax, where Indians had fired on a boat the previous day. Attacked by 150 Seminoles under Coacoochee, Putnam was driven out with costly losses and fled to his boats (18 January 1836).

Dunnichen Moss ❙ 685 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

King Ecgfrith of Northumbria had been defeated by the Kingdom of Mercia at Trent in 679 and unwisely turned north to invade Scotland, where he was overwhelmed and killed by Brude, King of the Picts. The battle at Dunnichen Moss (Nechtanesmere), east of modern Forfar, effectively signalled the end of Northumbrian power and secured Scotland against Anglo-Saxon England (20 May 685).

Dunnottar ❙ 900 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

During a reign marked by increasing Viking attacks, Donald II of Scotland, son of Constantine I, had his capital at Forteviot burned by Norse raiders under Sitric, son of Imhair. Donald then marched to repulse a fresh Danish landing at the Tay, but at Dunnotar near Stonehaven in Kincardine, he was defeated and killed (some historians assert he died of old age, not in battle).

Dunsinane ❙ 1054 ❙ Scottish War of Succession

In support of his grandson Malcolm Canmore, Siward the Danish Earl of Northumberland invaded Scotland against the usurper King Macbeth (who had murdered Malcolm's father, Duncan I). At Dunsinane, near Perth, Macbeth was heavily defeated, reputedly losing 10,000 men. Malcolm took the throne three years later after Macbeth was killed at Lumphanan (27 July 1054).

Dunstable ❙ 1461 ❙ Wars of the Roses

The Lancastrian army of Henry Beaufort Duke of Somerset approaching the Yorkists at St Albans surprised an outpost 14 miles northwest at Dunstable, where every one of 200 men under Edward Poynings was killed or captured. Richard Neville Earl of Warwick apparently disbelieved reports of the loss and as a result he was surprised and defeated next day at St Albans (15 February 1461).

Duoro ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Oporto

Duppel ❙ 1849 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War

With the resumption of hostilities against Frederick VII of Denmark, the rebel Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein repulsed a Danish landing at Eckenforde, then joined German troops under General Eduard von Bonin and stormed the Danish entrenchments at Duppel, just west of Sonderborg. After further fighting the rebels advanced into Danish Jutland (13 April 1849).

Duppel ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd Schleswig-Holstein War

Following the death of Frederick VII of Denmark, Prussian troops under Prince Friedrich Karl and General Leonhard von Blumenthal invaded Schleswig in support of the German claimant Prince Fredrick of Augustenburg and attacked the Danish lines at Duppel with heavy artillery fire. The Danes withdrew to Alsen after losing 5,000 casualties and prisoners (30 March–18 April 1864).

Dupplin ❙ 1332 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Edward Baliol, son of former King John Baliol, launched an attempt to seize the Scottish throne, invading with a mixed force of Scots and English adventurers against Donald Earl of Mar, Regent for the boy-King David II. On Dupplin Moor, west of Perth, Earl Donald was killed. Baliol had himself crowned, but he was defeated at Annan in December by the new Regent (12 August 1332).

Duquesne ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Fort Duquesne

Durango ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Regrouping his forces after battle with Spanish General Joachim Blake southeast of Bilbao at Zornoza, French commander Eugène Villatte, supported by Generals Francois Sébastiani and Jean Francois Leval, launched a massive attack at Durango. In the face of heavy artillery fire the Spanish fell back to Bilbao and the next day they withdrew west towards Valmaseda (31 October 1808).

Durazzo ❙ 1081 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

See Dyrrhachium

Durbe ❙ 1260 ❙ Early Wars of the Teutonic Knights

After disaster at Siauliai (1236), the Livonian knights made peace with Duke Mindaugus of Lithuania, who adopted Christianity. But Pagan Samogitians advanced into Latvia and met the knights at Durbe. One of the worst German defeats in the east saw Master Burckhardt von Hornhausen among thousands killed. Mindaugus reverted to Paganism but was soon murdered in a coup (13 July 1260).

Durdah ❙ 1781 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

With a British advance on Poona checked at Bhorghat, Major Jacob Camac crossed the Jumna into Malwar and, following repulse near Sironj, fell back on Mahadpur. Two weeks later, he surprised Mahadji Sindhia's camp at nearby Durdah and inflicted a severe defeat, capturing the Maratha horses and baggage. Mahadji sued for peace and never again took arms against Britain (24 March 1781).

Durham ❙ 1069 ❙ Norman Conquest of Britain

Three years after his great victory at Hastings (October 1066), William I sent the Norman noble Robert de Comines north, where he seized the city of Durham. Northumbrian forces counter-attacked next day and Comines was killed in a disastrous defeat, along with most of his men, said to have numbered up to 500. Returning south from Hexham, William later retook the city by storm.

Durham ❙ 1080 ❙ Norman Conquest of Britain

Northumbrians in Durham renewed resistance against Norman rule, killing the tyrannical Earl-Bishop Walcher of Lorraine and about 100 of his supporters. King William's half-brother Odo (who was Bishop of Bayeaux and Earl of Kent) marched north and crushed the rebellion. However, Odo's corruption and cruelty shocked even William, and he was imprisoned throughout his brother's lifetime.

Durham ❙ 1312 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Robert the Bruce of Scotland led a powerful raid into England, crossing the border in force and sending his brother Edward and Sir James "Black" Douglas against Durham. The city was sacked amid widespread death and destruction. After Douglas also raided Hartlepool, the people of Durham agreed to pay a large tribute and the Scots withdrew (August 1312).

Durnkrut ❙ 1278 ❙ Bohemian Wars

See Marchfeld

Durrenstein ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

As Napoleon Bonaparte advanced towards Vienna after victory at Ulm, French General Honoré Gazan met a powerful Russian army under Prince Mikhail Kutuzov at Durrenstein (modern Durnstein), west of Vienna, near Krems. The hard-fought delaying action is counted a Russian victory, yet Bonaparte continued on to the capture of Vienna and glory at Austerlitz (11 November 1805).

Dussindale ❙ 1549 ❙ Kett's Rebellion

Leading a rural insurrection from Norfolk, a landholder named Robert Kett took a reputed 20,000 against Norwich, where he defeated the incompetent William Parr Marquess of Northampton. John Dudley Earl of Warwick was then recalled from Scotland and routed the rebels at nearby Dussindale with more than 3,000 killed. Kett and several other leaders were hanged (27 August 1549).

Dvinsk ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

On the northern flank of the Triple Offensive, General Otto von Below made a determined assault on the border city of Dvinsk (Daugavpils in modern Lithuania). The Germans were repulsed in heavy fighting and the offensive stalled. Despite further costly attacks in October 1915 and early 1916 the city remained in Russians hands until the general withdrawal in 1917 (24–25 September 1915).

Dwin ❙ 624 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

On the second campaign of his counter-attack against the Persians after victory at Ophlimos, Emperor Heraclius advanced northeast from Ceasarea into the Araxes Valley to attack Dwin, capital of Persian Armenia. Sassanid King Chosroes II withdrew before the Emperor's continued advance towards Ganzak, where he seized massive booty. The following year Heraclius beat a Persian army at Arcesh.

Dybbol ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd Schleswig-Holstein War

See Duppel

Dyle ❙ 891 ❙ Viking Raids on Germany

When Danish Vikings advancing up the Rhine heavily defeated a German force at La Gueule (26 June), German King Arnulf personally led an attack on the Norse camp on the Dyle, near Louvain. The invaders were routed in a violent repulse, with Danish King Godefrid and his brother Siegfried killed. The Vikings never again ventured so far inland and turned instead to Britain (September 891).

Dyle Line ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Facing an overwhelming German invasion of Belgium and the fall of Eben Emael, the Belgian army fell back to the River Dyle, in central Belgium between Antwerp and Namur. Allied commander Maurice Gamelin ordered British and French forces to help hold the line, but the Germans broke through in force and the Allies soon fell back to the Escaut and then the Lys (15–17 May 1940).

Dylerschans ❙ 1664 ❙ 2nd Dutch War

Prince William Fredrick of Nassau led a counter-offensive in east Friesland, where he laid siege to Dylerschans, on the Ems near Papenburg, taken the previous year by Prince-Bishop Christof Bernhard van Galen of Munster. The small fortress was forced to surrender after six weeks. Its loss persuaded van Galen to support the English during the 2nd Dutch War (23 May–4 June 1664).

Dyme ❙ 226 BC ❙ Cleomenic War

See Hecatombaeum

Dyrham ❙ 577 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Deorham

Dyrrhachium ❙ 49–48 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

Julius Caesar crossed the Adriatic and landed 25,000 men near Pompey's base at Dyrrhachium (modern Durres, Albania). Reinforced by Mark Antony, Caesar besieged Dyrrhachium, but Pompey's greatly superior force broke out and Caesar was heavily defeated on the nearby plains. He withdrew to Thessaly but had his revenge three months later at Pharsalus (December 49 BC–20 May 48 BC).

Dyrrhachium ❙ 1081 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

Attacking the Byzantine Empire from Italy, the Norman Robert Guiscard besieged the Adriatic port of Dyrrhachium (modern Durres, Albania). While Venetian ships defeated Guiscard's son Bohemund at sea, a decisive battle on land saw Guiscard rout the relief army of Emperor Alexius I. The city fell by treachery a few months later and Alexius withdrew (18 October 1081).

Dyrrhachium ❙ 1083 ❙ 1st Byzantine-Norman War

When the Norman Robert Guiscard seized the Byzantine Adriatic port of Dyrrhachium (modern Durres, Albania) in 1082, his son Bohemund was left in command and faced counter-attack by Emperor Alexius I. The Emperor was again heavily defeated in the field near Dyrrhachium, but the Normans withdrew from Byzantine territory two years later after losing to Alexius at Larissa.

Dyrrhachium ❙ 1107 ❙ 2nd Byzantine-Norman War

The great Crusader Bohemund of Antioch was returning from Europe when he attacked Byzantium by besieging the fortress at Dyrrhachium (modern Durres, Albania). Cut off from Italy by Byzantine ships, Bohemund was forced to surrender and acknowledge Emperor Alexius I. He never returned to the Holy Land, leaving Antioch to his nephew Tancred (August–September 1107).

Dysert O'Dea ❙ 1318 ❙ English Invasion of Ireland

Encouraged by Anglo-Norman defeat at Ardscull (1316), Murtough O'Brien attempted to recover Thomond (seized 150 years earlier by Richard de Clare "Strongbow" after victory at Dublin). Supported by Conor O'Dea at Dysert O'Dea near Ennis, King Murtough defeated and killed Strongbow's descendant Richard de Clare, driving the Normans out of County Clare (10 May 1318).

E

Eagle Creek ❙ 1877 ❙ Nez Percé Indian War

See Bear Paw Mountains

Eagle Hills ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

Days after defeating Colonel William Otter at Cut Knife Creek, in northwest Saskatchewan, Cree Indians under Poundmaker (Pitikwahanapiwiyin) marched east towards Batoche and, at Eagle Hills, met a wagon train carrying supplies to Otter. When the wagons were captured in a sharp action, Poundmaker intervened to prevent bloodshed and the 21 teamsters were taken prisoner (14 May 1885).

East China Sea ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Sent on a suicide mission to disrupt Allied landings on Okinawa, Japan's largest surviving battleship, Yamato, was met southwest of Kyushu in the East China Sea by American carrier-borne aircraft. With no air cover, Yamato was overwhelmed and sunk along with a cruiser and four out of eight destroyers. Admiral Sheiichi Ito and 3,500 men died for just ten US aircraft lost (7 April 1945).

Eastern Solomons ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Admiral Nobutake Kondo, advancing from Truk with a carrier force and transports to wrest the initiative at Guadalcanal, was met in the Eastern Solomons by American Admiral Frank Fletcher. A long-range duel between carrier-borne aircraft saw the US carrier Enterprise severely damaged, but Kondo lost a light carrier and 70 planes and had to withdraw (24–25 August 1942).

Eastertide Offensive ❙ 1972 ❙ Vietnam War

With America withdrawing from Vietnam, North Vietnamese General Vo Nguyen Giap launched a widespread offensive, taking cities including Quang Tri. The Eastertide Offensive was finally halted in the central highlands at Kontum and in the south at An Loc with 50,000 North Vietnamese and 40,000 South Vietnamese killed. Giap was dismissed (30 March–1 May 1972).

East Indies ❙ 1941–1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

While the Japanese advanced through the Philippines and Malaya, large forces under Admiral Ibo Takahashi converged on the Dutch East Indies and captured Borneo, Celebes and Timor. The Australian, British, Dutch and American Allies tried to halt the invasion at Lombok Strait and the Java Sea, but were badly beaten and the region was quickly occupied (16 December 1941–9 March 1942).

East Stoke ❙ 1487 ❙ Simnel's Rebellion

See Stoke

Ebelsberg ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

After Austria's failed invasion of Bavaria, Baron Johann Hiller withdrew following defeat at Landshut and, after a tactical victory at Neumarkt-St-Viet, was attacked attempting to hold the bridge on the Danube at Ebelsberg, southeast of Linz. Despite inflicting heavy

French losses, the outnumbered Austrians were defeated by Marshal André Masséna and retired towards Vienna (3 May 1809).

Eben Emael ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Airborne troops under Hauptmann Walter Koch opened Germany's lightning invasion of Belgium, landing at key bridges and on top of the vital fortress at Eben Emael commanding defences on the strategic Albert Canal. In little more than 24 hours, Major Jean Jottrand surrendered the supposedly impregnable fortress and the Belgian army fell back to defend the Dyle Line (10 May 1940).

Eben-ezer ❙ 1050 BC ❙ Philistine-Israel Wars

As Philistine invaders spread from Palestine into Israel, two decisive actions were fought at Eben-ezer, near Aphek (modern Ras el-Ain), east of Jaffa. Rashly accepting open battle, the tribes of Manasseh, Ephraim and Benjamin were routed. In a second action, the sacred Ark was brought as a rallying point, but the Israelites were defeated again, with the Ark captured and taken to Ashod.

Ebersberg ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

See Ebelsberg

Ebro ❙ 217 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

With Carthaginian General Hanno defeated by Roman invaders at Tarraco in northeast Spain, the great Carthaginian leader Hasdrubal took a large land and naval force north as far as the Ebro River. A small Roman fleet, aided by Massilia, attacked and destroyed Hasdrubal's ships in confined waters at the mouth of the river and the Carthaginians withdrew south to New Carthage (modern Cartagena).

Ebro ❙ 1084 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Following defeat at Almenar in 1082, al-Hayib, Taifa of Lérida, and King Sancho Ramirez of Aragon renewed their invasion of Muslim Saragossa. On the Ebro River, they were routed by Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid—in service with al-Hayib's brother, al-Mutamin. El Cid's prisoners included the powerful Aragonese noble Count Sancho Sanchez of Pamplona (14 August 1084).

Ebro ❙ 1938 ❙ Spanish Civil War

With Valencia holding firm, Republican General Juan Modesto launched a final offensive across the Ebro to ease pressure on Madrid. Despite initial success, the Republicans were driven back by Nationalist General Juan Yagüe, suffering irreplaceable losses in men and equipment. The fate of the Republic was virtually sealed and the rebels marched on Barcelona (24 July–16 November 1938).

Ebsdorf ❙ 880 ❙ Viking Raids on Germany

Viking forces repulsed in England at Edington (878) turned against Europe and, at Ebsdorf, on Luneberg Heath, they attacked an army under Duke Bruno of Saxony. Caught in a snowstorm, the Germans were routed. Among the many dead, Bruno and the Bishops of Hildesheim and Ninden were canonised as martyrs. The Norsemen were checked a year later at Saucourt (2 February 880).

Ecbatana ❙ 129 BC ❙ Later Syrian-Parthian War

The Seleucid Antiochus VII campaigned from Syria into Mesopotamia, where he defeated Parthia at the Zab River (130 BC) and took Babylon and Ecbatana (modern Hamadan). After trying to impose a harsh peace, he faced a large Parthian army under Phraates II near Ecbatana. Antiochus died in a terrible rout, effectively ending Seleucid power east of the Euphrates (February 129 BC).

Echalar ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

During the week-long "Battles of the Pyrenees," Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington was pursuing Marshal Nicolas Soult from defeat at Sorauren, when General Bertrand Clausel attempted to make a stand on the ridge at Ivantelly near Echalar. Wellington's outnumbered force won the ensuing struggle and Soult continued his retreat into France (2 August 1813).

Echmiadzin ❙ 1804 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

When Russia annexed Georgia, local rebels sought Persian aid and Russian General Pavel Zitzianov besieged Erivan. In the ensuing battle 12 miles west at Echmiadzin, Russia secured a narrow victory over Persian Crown Prince Abbas Mirza. When Shah Fath Ali sent fresh forces, the Russian siege was lifted and war dragged on until the decisive battle at Aslanduz (20 June 1804).

Echmiadzin ❙ 1827 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

After defeat in Azerbaijan near Abbasabad, Persian commander Abbas Mirza marched west into Armenia to threaten the rear of General Ivan Paskevich's Russian army. A small force under General Afanasi Ivanovich Krasovski near Echmiadzin was massively outnumbered, but after heavy losses on both sides, Abbas withdrew and Krasovski joined Paskevich at Erivan (August 1827).

Ecija ❙ 711 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Spain

Having beaten a Visigothic Spanish army near Cadiz in July 711 at Xeres (later known as Guadalete), invading Muslims under the brilliant General Tarik ibn Ziyad advanced into Spain and soon achieved another victory at Ecija, on the Genil River. The battle led directly to Muslim seizure of the Visigoth capital at Toledo.

Eckau ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

At the beginning of Napoleon Bonaparte's invasion of Russia, Prussians under General Friedrich von Kleist advanced in the north towards the Baltic port of Riga, defended by Russian and English forces. The Allies under General Feodor Lewis marched out to meet the invaders at Eckau, but after repeated assaults, they were driven back by Kleist, who then established a siege (18 July 1812).

Eckenforde ❙ 1849 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War

With the expiry of an armistice, Frederick VII of Denmark sent forces to recover Schleswig and Holstein, which had been seized by rebels with Prussian aid. The warships Christian VIII (84) and Gefion (46) escorted Danish troops to land at Eckenforde, northwest of Kiel. However, they were repulsed by small coastal batteries and were forced into a humiliating surrender (5 April 1849).

Eckmühl ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Archduke Charles of Austria invaded Bavaria, where he was defeated by Napoleon Bonaparte at Abensberg (20 April). While the Austrian left wing was then beaten to the southeast at Landshut, the right wing under Charles marched northeast towards Marshal Louis Davout at Eckmühl. Aided by Bonaparte himself, Davout crushed the Austrians, but they withdrew in good order (22 April 1809).

Ecnomus ❙ 256 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

When Roman Consuls Atilius Regulus and Lucius Vulso put into Phintias, near Mount Ecnomus in southern Sicily, to embark troops for Africa, their fleet was attacked by the Carthaginians Hamilcar and Hanno. In one of history's largest naval battles, with over 300 vessels on either side, both fleets suffered comparable losses, though more Carthaginian vessels were captured and Hamilcar fled.

Econochaca ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

See Holy Ground

Edessa ❙ 260 ❙ Roman-Persian Wars

Shapur I of Sassanid Persia seized Armenia and Mesopotamia and captured Antioch in Roman Syria, but he was driven out of Antioch by Emperor Valerian, who then unwisely advanced northeast to Edessa. With his incompetent commander Macrianus defeated, Valerian was surrounded and became the first Roman Emperor captured in battle. Ransom was refused and he died in Persian captivity.

Edessa ❙ 503 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Following success in Roman Mesopotamia at Amida and Apadna, Sassanid King Kawad was encouraged to attack Edessa by Arab leader Numan because of an Apocryphal letter from Christ guaranteeing King Abgar that the city would not be captured. After a short blockade and some skirmishing, the Persians withdrew following payment in gold and the war wound down (September 503).

Edessa ❙ 544 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Having earlier failed to capture Dara, Chosroes I of Persia invaded Roman Mesopotamia to attack Edessa, claimed to be protected by a legendary religious guarantee. Following a courageous defence—reputedly aided by divine intervention—Chosroes received payment in gold and withdrew. After a failed Roman incursion into Armenia, in 545 the two warring powers agreed to a truce.

Edessa ❙ 1031 ❙ Later Byzantine-Muslim Wars

Despite the terrible Christian defeat near Aleppo at Azaz, the great Byzantine commander George Maniaces led a force against Edessa (modern Urfa in southeastern Turkey), which was yielded to him by the Marwanid Emir of Mayyafariqin. When the Arab leader tried to retake the city, Maniaces defeated and repulsed him. Aleppo remained a Christian possession for the next 50 years.

Edessa ❙ 1098 ❙ 1st Crusade

Having detached himself from the main Crusader advance towards Antioch, Syria in order to capture Tarsus, Baldwin, brother of Godfrey of Bouillon, took his own expedition across the Euphrates, supposedly to assist the Christians of Edessa. He seized the city in a sharp campaign to establish the Latin Principality of Edessa and played no further part in the Crusade (February 1098).

Edessa ❙ 1144 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

When the Turkish warrior Zengi and his son Nur-ed-Din attacked the northernmost Crusader city of Edessa, Count Joscelin of Edessa was away campaigning and his army was too small to relieve the garrison, under Archbishop Hugh. Edessa (modern Urfa, Turkey) fell on Christmas Eve, followed by a brutal massacre, leading to preaching of the 2nd Crusade (28 November–24 December 1144).

Edessa ❙ 1146 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

When Zengi, the Turkish Governor of Mosul, was murdered, Count Joscelin of Edessa tried to recover Edessa, captured two years before. Aided by Lord Baldwin of Marash, he took the town, though the citadel held out and Zengi's son Nur-ed-Din counter-attacked a week later. With Baldwin killed and Joscelin wounded, Edessa was retaken by the Muslims and finally destroyed (3 November 1146).

Edgecote ❙ 1469 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Supporting George Duke of Clarence against his brother Edward IV, Yorkshire Lancastrians under Robin of Redesdale attacked a loyal force led by William Herbert Earl of Pembroke and Humphrey Stafford Earl of Devon. Northeast of Banbury on Danesmoor near Edgecote, the Welsh were routed with perhaps 4,000 killed. Pembroke, Devon and many others were later executed (26 July 1469).

Edgehill, England ❙ 1642 ❙ British Civil Wars

Parliamentary commander Robert Devereux Earl of Essex, attempting to intercept the Royalist march on London, met Charles I at Edgehill, near Kineton in Warwickshire. Despite the courage of Royalist cavalry under Prince Rupert, this first major action of the wars was confused and indecisive. Essex withdrew and the King advanced through Brentford (23 October 1642).

Edge Hill, Pennsylvania ❙ 1763 ❙ Pontiac's War

See Bushy Run

Edinburgh ❙ 1314 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

As Scotland secured her border areas following victory at Loudon Hill, Thomas Randolph Earl of Moray (a nephew of Robert the Bruce) besieged Edinburgh Castle, lost to England in 1296. At the end of a futile six-week siege, Randolph and a handful of men scaled the walls in a brilliant night-assault to overpower the garrison, leading to surrender of the fortress (14 March 1314).

Edinburgh ❙ 1335 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession
See Boroughmuir

Edington ❙ 878 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain
With King Alfred of Wessex previously defeated at Chippenham in January, Danish King Guthrum faced the King of the West Saxons marching on Chippenham with a newly raised army. Alfred routed the Danes to the south near Westbury at Edington (Ethandun) and Guthrum sued for peace and withdrew. The action effectively settled the border between Saxon and Danish England (May 878).

Edo ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration
See Ueno

Eger ❙ 1552 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars
Turkish forces under Kara Ahmed began a fresh offensive and captured Temesvár, then marched into eastern Hungary and joined the Pasha of Buda to take Szolnok and besiege Eger (Erlau), southwest of Miskolc, held by Stephan Dobo. After an heroic five-week defence, aided by the wives of the 2,500-strong Imperial garrison, the Ottomans were forced to withdraw (September–October 1552).

Egg Harbour ❙ 1778 ❙ War of the American Revolution
See Little Egg Harbour

Eggmühl ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)
See Eckmühl

Egmont-op-Zee ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)
See Alkmaar

Egorlyk ❙ 1920 ❙ Russian Civil War
See Torgovaya

Ekaterinburg ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War
Having seized Chelyabinsk, 40,000 Czech and Slovak former prisoners of war joined the anti-Bolshevik cause and secured much of the Trans-Siberian Railway. Colonel Sergei Voitsekhovsky then marched on nearby Ekaterinburg (modern Sverdlovsk), where the Imperial family had just been murdered. The city was taken and the Czechs continued west towards Kazan (25 July 1918).

Ekaterinburg ❙ 1919 ❙ Russian Civil War
As part of a massive counter-offensive in the Urals, Red commander Mikhail Tukhachevski sent General Vasilii Shorin to attack Ekaterinburg (modern Sverdlovsk), defended by 40,000 Whites under General Rudolf Gajda. The city was taken by storm with 3,500 Whites captured and, following further White defeat to the south at Zlatoust, the survivors withdrew east to the Tobol (15 July 1919).

Ekaterinodar (1st) ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War
At the start of a fresh offensive into the Kuban, White commander Lavr Kornilov led a strong force against Ekaterinodar (modern Krasnodar), supported by General Sergei Markov. A brutal action saw Kornilov killed by artillery fire on his headquarters and his Volunteer Army withdrew. However, the Whites soon secured success further north at Novocherkassk (10–13 April 1918).

Ekaterinodar (2nd) ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War
On the offensive in the Kuban, white commander Anton Denikin captured Torgovaya and Belaya Glina, then advanced on Red commander Ivan Sorokin at Ekaterinodar (modern Krasnodar). During a month-long campaign, Denikin captured nearby towns before Ekaterinodar fell by storm. Sorokin fell back on Stavropol and Whites reached the sea at Novorosissk (16 July–15 August 1918).

Ekeren ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession
French Marshal Louis de Boufflers was sent against a Dutch army threatening Antwerp and led 40,000 men against a much smaller force under Jacob van Wassanaer Heer van Opdam, south of Bergen-op-Zoom around Ekeren. Opdam withdrew prematurely in a confused and bloody action and left General Frederik Johan van Baer to save the defeated army. Opdam then resigned (30 June 1703).

El Agheila ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

With an Italian army destroyed in Libya at Bardia, Tobruk and Beda Fomm, newly arrived German General Erwin Rommel launched an Axis offensive at El Agheila, where British General Richard O'Connor was thrown into headlong retreat. While Tobruk held out under siege, O'Connor was captured at the front and a British counter-attack failed at Sollum-Halfaya (24 March 1941).

El Agheila ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

As they pursued Field Marshal Erwin Rommel across Libya after victory at El Alamein, British forces retook Tobruk (12 November) and Benghazi (19 November) before meeting sharp resistance at Agedabia, then a full-scale defence at El Agheila. Heavy fighting saw costly losses on both sides before Rommel withdrew through Buerat and entered Tunisia (23 November–15 December 1942).

El Alamein (1st) ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Falling back from defeat at Gazala and Mersah Matruh, new British commander Sir Claude Auchinleck committed his reserves to hold a defensive line west of Cairo at El Alamein. His great victory halted Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's advance into Egypt in arguably the most important strategic battle in the Desert war, followed by further Axis defeat at Alam Halfa (1–27 July 1942).

El Alamein (2nd) ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Having forced Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to withdraw at Alam Halfa, British General Bernard Montgomery built overwhelming superiority in men and armour, then attacked west of Cairo at El Alamein. Despite initial Allied failure and losses, Rommel was forced to disengage and begin retreating west across Libya through El Agheila and Buerat (23 October–4 November 1942).

Elandsfontein ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

General Lord Frederick Roberts led the invasion of Transvaal by advancing on Elandsfontein, a vital railway junction just east of Johannesburg near Germiston, where he came under Boer fire and took some losses. However, the Boers withdrew and, after British victory the same day in the west at Doornkop, Roberts permitted the Boers to evacuate Johannesburg (29 May 1900).

Elandslaagte ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

As Boers invaded Natal through Talana Hill, another column further west under General Johannes Kock was attacked on the railway at Elandslaagte by General John French. A British infantry assault and cavalry charge cost both sides heavy casualties, including Kock mortally wounded. His troops then surrendered, delaying the Boer advance on Ladysmith (21 October 1899).

Elands River Poort ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

In command of a guerrilla raid into eastern Cape Colony, General Jan Smuts crossed the Orange and sent Deneys Reitz against 130 men of the 17th Lancers in camp at Elands River Poort, near Tarskastad. The British were routed, with 29 killed and 41 wounded including commander Captain Lord George Vivian. The Boers re-equipped themselves with captured supplies (17 September 1901).

Elands River Post ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

Jacobus de la Rey captured Zilikats Nek, west of Pretoria, then besieged a garrison of 500 Australians and Rhodesians under Colonel Charles O. Hore further west at Elands River Post (modern Swartruggens). A relief attempt by General Sir Frederick Carrington was repulsed and the colonials lost 75 men before finally being relieved by General Robert Broadwood (4–15 August 1900).

El Arish ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Opening Napoleon Bonaparte's invasion of Syria, advance units from Egypt under General Jean Reynier took El Arish town on the Palestine border, but could not dislodge the Mamluk and Albanian fortress garrison. When General Jean-Baptiste Kléber arrived with fresh troops, a relief force from Jaffa was heavily defeated (14–15 February) and the fort surrendered (8–20 February 1799).

El Arish ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See Magdhaba

El Arish ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

See Rafa

Elasa ❙ 161 BC ❙ Maccabean War

When a Seleucid army was defeated at Adasa by Hebrew rebel Judas Maccabeus, a much larger force was sent later the same year under the powerful General Bacchides. He lured the outnumbered Jews from the hills onto a relatively open battlefield at Elasa, north of Jerusalem. Judas Maccabeus was defeated and killed, though his brothers Jonathon and Simon continued the rebellion.

El Ashmunien ❙ 1167 ❙ Crusader Invasion of Egypt

After marching into Fatimid Egypt and taking Cairo, Crusaders led by King Amalric of Jerusalem, aided by the deposed Egyptian Vizier Shawar, advanced up the Nile against Turkish General Shirkuh and his nephew Saladin. The Crusader-Egyptian army was badly defeated at El Ashmunien and withdrew to Cairo. But within weeks they besieged and later captured Alexandria (18 March 1167).

El Asnam ❙ 740 ❙ Berber Rebellion

Berbers in the Maghrib Province led by Maysara al-Matghari rebelled against the Arab rulers of North Africa and captured Tangier. After Maysara was deposed and killed by his followers, his successor, Khalid ibn Hamid al-Zanatai, defeated a large Arab army on the Wadi Chelif at El Asnam. Following the "Battle of the Noble Ones," the Arabs were defeated again the following year at Bakdura.

El Ayoun ❙ 1958 ❙ Western Sahara Wars

Soon after Morocco gained independence, Moroccan-backed guerrillas attacked in Spanish West Africa, with severe fighting at El Ayoun. A large-scale assault was repulsed, but next day a Spanish Legion patrol was ambushed and destroyed at nearby Edchera. Within weeks, a massive Spanish-French joint offensive (Ouragan) suppressed the Saharawi rebellion (12–13 January 1958).

Elba ❙ 1652 ❙ 1st Dutch War

Near the start of the war, Dutch Admiral Jan van Galen's Mediterranean squadron of ten warships attacked English Admiral Richard Badiley off Elba, with just four ships and four merchant vessels. After losing one warship captured, Badiley took refuge in Porto Longone, Elba. The captured ship was retaken in November and in March 1653, battle was resumed off Leghorn (28 August 1652).

Elba ❙ 1801 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

When the Italian island of Elba refused to surrender to France, the Tuscan garrison—supported by Lieutenant Colonel George Airey—was besieged at Porto Ferraio by French General Pierre Joseph Watrin. Admiral Sir John Warren drove off the French blockade and Watrin withdrew when a landing party under Captain John Chambers destroyed the French batteries (2 May–22 September 1801).

El Bodon ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As French forces advanced to relieve the Anglo-Portuguese blockade of Ciudad Rodrigo, Marshal

Auguste Marmont crashed into British units under General Sir Thomas Picton eight miles southwest at El Bodon. The Allied army under Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington withdrew after a courageous defensive victory and Ciudad Rodrigo was temporarily relieved (25 September 1811).

El Caney ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

American commander William R. Shafter advanced through Las Guásimas, then despatched General Henry W. Lawton against El Caney, northeast of Santiago de Cuba. While the massively outnumbered Spanish force suffered heavy casualties, including General Joaquin Vara de Rey killed, the heroic action prevented Lawton joining the main assault that day at San Juan Hill (1 July 1898).

Elchingen ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

Advancing across the Rhine in force, Napoleon Bonaparte's Grand Army swung south to the Danube to cut off the Austrian invasion of Bavaria and trap General Karl Mack von Leiberich at Ulm. When Mack attempted to break out of encirclement seven miles east at Elchingen, he was heavily repulsed by General Michel Ney and the French swarmed across the Danube (14 October 1805).

El Ferrol ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

At the start of the war, heavy fighting took place for the key naval base and shipyard at El Ferrol in northwest Spain. The Nationalists eventually seized the port, capturing a battleship, four cruisers (two under construction almost complete) and a destroyer. These formed the backbone of their fleet and two cruisers secured the early strategic victory off Cape Espartel (20–21 July 1936).

Elgin ❙ 1040 ❙ Scottish War of Succession

Earl Macbeth of Moray rebelled against his cousin Duncan I of Scotland and allied himself with the Danish Earl Thorfinn to defeat and kill the King near Elgin on the River Lossie, traditionally at Pitgaveney. Macbeth seized the Scottish throne, but he was eventually defeated by Duncan's son Malcolm at Dunsinane (1054) and was killed three years later at Lumphanan (14 August 1040).

El Guettar ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Recovering from disaster in southern Tunisia at Kasserine, new American commander George Patton attacked through Gafsa against Italians at El Guettar. After initial success, Patton met strong resistance from German tanks and artillery before breaking through. General Omar Bradley called it America's first "indisputable defeat" of German forces in the war (20 March–8 April 1943).

El Herri ❙ 1914 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

French forces determined to suppress the Zaia of central Morocco seized their capital at Khenifra (12 June) before Colonel René Laverdure marched south to attack the Zaian camp at nearby El Herri. A brutal counter-attack saw Laverdure and 600 of his men killed in the worst French defeat in Morocco, though some French prestige was restored a year later at Sidi Sliman (13 November 1914).

Elizabethville ❙ 1961 ❙ Congolese Civil War

After Moise Tshombe proclaimed the secession of Katanga (11 July 1960), UN troops intervened to reintegrate the province. After two failed attempts (August and September 1961) to secure the Katangan capital Elizabethville (modern Lubumbashi), the UN attacked in force with artillery and jet bombers. After costly losses, Tshombe agreed to end the secession (5–18 December 1961).

Elizabethville ❙ 1962–1963 ❙ Congolese Civil War

Despite agreeing to end the secession of Katanga, Moise Tshombe failed to comply and, a year later, UN troops launched a fresh attack on Elizabethville (modern Lubumbashi). The secessionist capital fell after heavy fighting and Katanga was reunited with Congo. Tshombe went into exile but returned as leader to crush rebellion in the east at Stanleyville in late 1964 (29 December 1962–15 January 1963).

El Jícaro ❙ 1906 ❙ Guatemalan-Salvador War

When El Salvador supported efforts to overthrow President Manuel Estrada Cabrera of Guatemala, war was declared and Salvadoran General Tomás Regolado invaded eastern Guatemala. He was killed in the first major action at El Jícaro, just south of Tegucicalpa and, after further costly Salvadoran losses, US President Theodore Roosevelt intervened to restore peace (11 July 1906).

Elk Creek ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Honey Springs

Elkhorn Tavern ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Pea Ridge

Elkin's Ferry ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

At the start of an expedition southwest from Little Rock, Arkansas, towards Camden, Union General Frederick Steele was blocked near the Little Missouri by Confederates under General John S. Marmaduke. Repulsing a rearguard attack at Okolona, Steele fought his way across the river at nearby Elkin's Ferry, then continued south through Prairie d'Ane (3–4 April 1864).

El Ksiba ❙ 1913 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Colonel Charles Mangin led an offensive against the Zaia of central Morocco and attacked Moussa ou Said's camp at El Ksiba, near Kasbah Tadla, southwest of the Zaian capital at Khenifra. While French cannon inflicted heavy loses, Mangin suffered badly with 63 killed and 153 wounded, many lost on the return march. Khenifra fell to a fresh offensive a year later (8–10 June 1913).

Ellandun ❙ 825 ❙ Later Wars of Wessex

Beornwulf of Mercia took advantage of the West Saxons being occupied against the Welsh at Gafulford and marched into Wessex to curtail the ambition of King Egbert. Supported by the East Angles, Egbert defeated Mercia in Wiltshire at Ellandun (possibly modern Wroughton near Swindon) and over-ran southeastern England. Beornwulf was killed later in the year during battle in East Anglia.

Elleporus ❙ 389 BC ❙ 2nd Dionysian War

When Dionysius of Syracuse invaded southern Italy he besieged Caulonia, near Locri, then turned against an Italiote League relief army advancing from Crotona under the Syracusan exile Heloris. Surprised at the Elleporus River, on the east coast of the "toe" of Italy, Heloris was defeated and killed. Rhegium itself accepted a truce but was captured two years later.

El Menabba ❙ 1908 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Campaigning along Algeria's Moroccan border, Mulai Lahsin surprised a French supply column before dawn at El Menabba, north of Béchar. However, the Moroccans then stopped to loot and the Legionnaires recovered and drove them out. While the humiliating defeat cost 19 killed, 100 wounded and all their supplies, the French were avenged a month later at Bou Denib (17 April 1908).

Elmina ❙ 1782 ❙ Anglo-Dutch War

During a brief war against Holland, two British ships under Captain Thomas Shirley (Leander) and 500 men under Captain Alexander Mackenzie attacked Fort Conraadsburg at Elmina, on the Gold Coast (modern Ghana). The British were heavily repulsed, but later captured other Dutch forts at Mouree, Cormantine, Apam and Accra. All were returned by treaty in 1785 (16–21 February 1782).

El Moungar ❙ 1903 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Driven off from Taghit near Algeria's western border, Dawi Mani and Oulad Djerir tribesmen attacked a French supply column and its 113-strong escort under Captain Marie Louis Vauchez further north at El Moungar. The Legion lost 38 killed (including Vauchez) and only 20 remained unwounded as the Moroccans made off with the convoy and its supplies (2 September 1903).

El Mughar ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

With his cavalry advancing north along the Palestine coast from Gaza, British commander Sir Edmund Allenby struck the Turkish Eighth Army under Colonel Friedrich von Kressenstein trying to hold the railway west of Jerusalem near El Mughar. The Turks were driven back and the port city of Jaffa fell two days later as Allenby circled northeast to outflank Jerusalem (13–14 November 1917).

El Obeid ❙ 1883 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Khedive Mohammad Ahmed of Egypt faced a rising in the Upper Sudan by the Mahdi and sent 10,000 Egyptians under General William Hicks, who reached Khartoum, then marched southwest towards the Dervish capital at El Obeid. In the desert nearby at Kashgil, Hicks was killed and his army was utterly destroyed, forcing an Anglo-Egyptian evacuation of the Sudan (4 November 1883).

El Potrero ❙ 1840 ❙ Central American National Wars

Defeated by Salvadoran invaders at Soledad, new Honduran President José Francisco Zelaya sought aid from Nicaragua, which sent a 500-strong force under General Manuel Quijano. Just south of Tegicucalpa at El Potrero, Salvadoran General José Trinidad Cabañas was defeated and driven out. Salvadoran forces then invaded Guatemala to take and then lose Guatemala City (31 January 1840).

El Ronquillo ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Campaigning in southwestern Spain, General Francisco Ballesteros struck at the French forces of Honoré Théodore Gazan at El Ronquillo, 20 miles north of Seville, where he suffered an unexpected check and was driven off. Forces sent by Marshal Édouard Mortier then beat Ballesteros at Zalamea (15 April) and Aracena (26 May) before he withdrew to Gibraltar (25 March 1810).

El Sombrero ❙ 1818 ❙ Venezuelan War of Independence

See Sombrero, Venezuela

El Tambo ❙ 1816 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

Spanish commander Pablo Morillo recaptured Cartagena and Bogotá, then sent General Juan Samano to recover Popayán, lost following defeat at Palo River, and to reconquer the Cauca Valley. Marching west to meet the Royalists at El Tambo, 24-year-old Patriot Colonel Liborio Mejía suffered a terrible defeat and withdrew towards La Plata while Samano took Popayán (29 June 1816).

El Teb (1st) ❙ 1884 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Advancing south from the Red Sea port of Trinkitat to relieve the Mahdist siege of Tokar, General Valentine Baker and more than 4,000 Turks, Sudanese and Egyptians were met at El Teb by a large Dervish army under Abdullah ibn Hamid. Baker lost two-thirds of his force to the Hadendowa warriors in a disastrous rout, but he was avenged three weeks later at the same site (4 February 1884).

El Teb (2nd) ❙ 1884 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

Determined to avenge British defeat at El Teb, Generals Sir Gerald Graham and Sir Redvers Buller left the Red Sea port of Trinkitat with 3,000 infantry and 900 cavalry to relieve the Mahdist siege of nearby Tokar. The Dervishes were defeated in hard fighting with 2,000 killed. Graham then relieved Tokar before returning to Trinkitat and in March he beat the Dervishes at Tamai (29 February 1884).

Eltekeh ❙ 700 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

When Hezekiah of Judah refused tribute to Assyria, Senaccherib led a large force which routed the Judean King and his Egyptian allies at Eltekeh, near Ekron, southeast of Joppa. Assyrian forces then besieged and captured Lachmish further south and Hezekiah paid a tribute to avoid the capture of Jerusalem. Senaccherib withdrew but assigned much of Judah to his allies in Palestine.

Eltham's Landing ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As the Confederate army withdrew up the Virginia Peninsula from Yorktown, a Union force under Brigadier General William B. Franklin attempted a flank attack, disembarking to the north on the York River at Eltham's Landing, near West Point. Marching towards Barhamsville, Franklin was intercepted by General Gustavus W. Smith and driven off with almost 200 casualties (7 May 1862).

El Uvero ❙ 1957 ❙ Cuban Revolution

Rebel leader Ernesto Che Guevara over-ran the garrison at La Plata, Cuba (16 January), then gathered a larger force and attacked the well-fortified Federal barracks further east at El Uvero. While both sides suffered unexpectedly high losses, the victorious rebels captured large quantities of arms. A year later, President Fulgencio Batista sent a major counter-offensive into the Sierra Maestra (27–28 May 1957).

Elvas ❙ 1659 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese Wars

When Portuguese forces under Joao Rodrigues de Vascondellos Conde de Castello-Melhor invaded Spain to besiege Badajoz, they were driven off by Luis Mendez de Haro, who unwisely pursued the Portuguese across the Guadiana into Portugal. At Elvas, 20 miles west of Badajoz, de Haro was routed by Castello-Melhor and Sancho de Villa Flor and fled in panic (14 January 1659).

Ely ❙ 1071 ❙ Norman Conquest of Britain

Supported by Danish King Sweyn Estridsen, the Saxon leader Hereward the Wake sacked Peterborough (1070). After King William I persuaded the Danes to withdraw, Hereward was left to defend the fortified camp at Ely, Cambridgeshire. Hereward escaped when Normans stormed the stronghold, but over 1,000 Saxons were killed, crushing the final local resistance after Hastings.

Ely ❙ 1267 ❙ 2nd English Barons' War

With Baronial rebellion by Simon de Montfort Earl of Leicester routed at Evesham (August 1265), the remainder were defeated at Axholme and Chesterfield before Prince Edward moved against the last hold-outs under John d'Eyvill on the Isle of Ely in the Fens of Cambridgeshire. The disinherited rebels were crushed and forced to acknowledge Henry III as King, ending the war (11 July 1267).

Elz ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Emmendingen

Emaqongqo ❙ 1840 ❙ Zulu Wars of Succession

See Maqonqo

Embadeh ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

See Pyramids

Embata ❙ 356 BC ❙ 1st Greek Social War

A year after defeat off Chios, Athenian commander Chares was reinforced by Iphicrates and Timotheus and they met the combined forces of Chios, Rhodes, Cos and Byzantium in the Hellespont. Unwisely sailing out to battle while his colleagues were deterred by storms, Chares was badly defeated off Embata, near Chios. Athens soon made peace and recognised the independence of the allies.

Embudo Pass ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

Facing a rising against the American annexation of New Mexico, Colonel Sterling Price dispersed a large insurgent force at La Cañada, near modern Santa Cruz, then advanced up the Rio Grande against a strong position at the Embudo Pass. The Mexicans were driven off with 20 killed and 60 wounded and Price continued northeast towards Pueblo de Taos (29 January 1847).

Emessa ❙ 272 ❙ Roman-Palmyrean War

When Emperor Aurelian invaded Syria against Queen Zenobia of Palmyra, he defeated her army at Immae, then pursued her south along the Orontes River. Palmyrean General Zabdas commanded a large army at Emessa (modern Homs in western Syria), but after the defeat of his cavalry, the Palmyreans fled. Zabdas withdrew into the desert to Zenobia's capital at Palmyra.

Emmaus ❙ 166 BC ❙ Maccabean War

Jewish rebel Judas Maccabeus defeated the Seleucids at Beth Horon, then later that year faced a large army sent under Seleucid Generals Nicanor and Gorgias. While Gorgias was unsuccessfully raiding the Jewish camp, Judas fought Nicanor at Emmaus (modern Imwas), west of Jerusalem. By the time Gorgias returned, the Seleucid camp at Emmaus had been destroyed and the government army put to flight.

Emmendingen ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Driven back towards the Rhine by Archduke Charles Louis of Austria, despite a sharp victory at Biberach, French General Jean Victor Moreau suffered a costly defeat on the Elz at Emmendingen, just north of Freiburg. He then sent General Louis Desaix across the Rhine at Breisach and continued retreating south before crossing to the left bank after further defeat at Schliengen (19 October 1796).

Empadine ❙ 1893 ❙ Matabele War

Invading Matebeleland (in modern Zimbabwe) against King Lobengula, Colonel Goold Adams advanced north towards Empadine, where 600 Matabele under Gambo attacked a patrol led by Captain Thomas Tancred. They were then routed by the main British force, but the over-cautious Adams played no part in the capture of Bulawayo after the victory at Imbembesi (2 November 1893).

Empingham ❙ 1470 ❙ Wars of the Roses

See Lose-Coat Field

Empress Augusta Bay ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As American forces landed at Cape Torokina in Empress Augusta Bay on Bougainville, Japanese Admiral Sentaro Omori tried to disrupt the invasion and was attacked by the covering force under Admiral Stanton Merrill. With superior radar, Merrill sank a Japanese cruiser and a destroyer, forcing Omori to withdraw at the cost of just one American destroyer damaged (2 November 1943).

Emsdorf ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Despite defeat at Korbach, Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick sent Prince Karl Wilhelm Ferdinand south through Hesse against French communications. Northeast of Marburg, between Emsdorf and Erxdorf, the Hereditary Prince's German and English cavalry routed and captured French General Christian Glaubitz. The French were decisively defeated at Warburg two weeks later (16 July 1760).

Emuckfaw ❙ 1814 ❙ Creek Indian War

General Andrew Jackson led an inexperienced force against Creek Indians at Horseshoe Bend, on the Tallapoosa in Alabama, and came under severe attack at nearby Emuckfaw. With Major Alexander Donelson killed and lacking sufficient forces to take the Creek fortress, Jackson retreated towards Fort Strother, through another costly engagement at Enotachopco (22 January 1814).

Enderta ❙ 1936 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

See Amba Aradam

Engabeni ❙ 1837 ❙ Boer-Matabele War

See Kapain

Engen ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

On a major French offensive across the Rhine, northwest of Lake Constance, General Jean

Victor Moreau was attacked by Austrian General Paul Kray in the Black Forest. During a prolonged and sprawling engagement, Moreau defeated Kray at Engen, taking a large number of prisoners, while General Claude-Jacques Lecourbe defeated the Austrian rearguard at nearby Stockach (3 May 1800).

Englefield ❙ 870 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

With East Anglia secured following victory at Hoxne, Viking forces under Halfdan (son of Ragnar Lodbrok) and the warrior Bagsecq, invaded Wessex. West of Reading at Englefield, a Viking advance party was heavily repulsed by Aethelwulf, Ealdorman of Berkshire. However, an Anglo-Saxon attack on the invaders' camp at Reading a few days later was a costly failure (December 870).

English Channel ❙ 1588 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

See Spanish Armada

Eniwetok ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Following capture of Kwajalein, in the central Marshall Islands (4 February), Americans under Admiral Harry Hill and General Thomas Watson moved 350 miles west against the well-fortified Eniwetok Atoll. A massive preliminary bombardment and very heavy fighting virtually annihilated the entire 4,000-man garrison, including commander General Yoshima Nishida (17–20 February 1944).

Enkhuizen ❙ 1573 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

See Zuyder Zee

Enna ❙ 133 BC ❙ 1st Servile War

Veteran Roman General Publius Rupilius was sent to suppress a large-scale slave rebellion in Sicily, where he first captured the rebel city of Tauromenium. Later in the year, he stormed the mountain stronghold of Enna in central Sicily and the rebellion was brutally crushed. The insurgent leader Cleon of Cilicia was killed in the fighting and his ally Eunus the Syrian died in prison.

Enniscorthy ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

At the start of the rebellion in Ireland, a large rebel force under Father John Murphy attacked the town of Enniscorthy, 12 miles from Wexford on the River Slaney. North Cork militia and yeomanry infantry under Captain William Snowe held them off with heavy losses, then withdrew to Wexford. The rebels set up a major encampment on nearby Vinegar Hill (28 May 1798).

Enniskillen ❙ 1689 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution

See Newtown Butler

Enogai Inlet ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

During the assault on New Georgia, a Raider Battalion under Colonel Harry Liversidge landed behind enemy lines (5 July) and crossed the Dragons Peninsula for a rear attack on the Japanese coastal guns at Enogai Inlet, commanding the Kula Gulf. Heavy fighting cost the Americans 48 killed and 77 wounded, but the guns were silenced and the 350-man Japanese garrison was destroyed (10 July 1943).

Enotachopco ❙ 1814 ❙ Creek Indian War

After a failed advance against Creek Indians in Alabama, General Andrew Jackson withdrew from Emuckfaw, then came under attack at Enotachopco Creek, where his rearguard under Colonel William Carroll suffered heavy losses. Jackson rallied his inexperienced troops, but lost 20 dead and 75 wounded before extracting his force. He was soon avenged at Horseshoe Bend (24 January 1814).

Ensenada ❙ 1827 ❙ Argentine-Brazilian War

See Monte Santiago

Enslin ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Graspan

Enterprise* vs Boxer ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Portland, Maine

Entrammes ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Campaigning north of the Loire, Vendéean rebel Henri de la Rochejaquelein concentrated his force at Entrammes on the Mayenne to face the Republican army of General Jean Lechelle. Failing to wait for his full army to arrive, Lechelle attacked and was routed with the loss of 4,000 men and most of his guns and stores. He never again commanded in the field (26 October 1793).

Entshanana ❙ 1884 ❙ Zulu Civil War

See Tshaneni

Enugu ❙ 1967 ❙ Biafran War

Goaded by the abortive rebel invasion of Midwest State through Benin, the bulk of the Nigerian Federal army of General Yakubu Gowon advanced on the Biafran capital at Enugu. After heavy shelling, the coal and steel city fell to Colonel Theophilus Danjuma and rebel leader Colonel Chukwuemeka Ojukwu transferred his capital to Umuahia (26 September–4 October 1967).

Enzheim ❙ 1674 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

Marshal Henri de Turenne advanced along the Rhine after his victory at Sinsheim in June and captured Strasbourg for Louis XIV of France. He then marched southwest to nearby Enzheim against a superior Imperial force led by Prince Alexandre de Bournonville. While both sides withdrew after heavy casualties, Turenne is regarded as having won a narrow but costly victory (4 October 1674).

Épéhy ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Near the start of his assault on the Hindenburg Line, British commander Sir Douglas Haig launched a preliminary attack against outlying defences held by superior forces under General Max von Boehn. General Julian Byng took Havrincourt (18 September), then joined Sir Henry Rawlinson in the main attack around Épéhy, capturing 100 guns and over 11,000 prisoners (12–28 September 1918).

Ephesus ❙ 498 BC ❙ Greco-Persian Wars

When some Greek cities on Asia Minor's Ionian coast rebelled against Persia and secured aid from Athens, the Satrap Artaphernes (brother of King Darius) recovered Sardis, then attacked the Greeks near Ephesus. The Persians won a decisive victory though the Greek cities continued their revolt. Persia then turned to recover Cyprus with victory at Salamis, before resuming the war in Ionia at Miletus.

Ephesus ❙ 406 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

See Notium

Epidaurus ❙ 47 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

See Tauris

Epila ❙ 1348 ❙ Aragonese Civil War

When Pedro IV of Aragon named his daughter as heir, he faced open rebellion by Aragonese nobles exercising rights granted to them by previous Kings. After forcing the King to name a male heir, open war broke out and the nobles besieged Royalists under Lope de Luna at Epila, west of Zaragoza. Pedro arrived to secure a decisive victory and he severely curbed the power of the aristocracy (21 July 1348).

Epsom ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As part of Montgomery's advance on Caen, General Miles Dempsey launched a large-scale offensive—Operation Epsom—along the Orne, southwest of the city. After very costly fighting, the British forced a salient into the German line before both sides fell back exhausted. Over 100 Panzers were lost and Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt was replaced. Caen fell a week later (26–29 June 1944).

Erbach ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

With General Jean Victor Moreau invading southern Germany after victory at Mosskirch, Austrian commander Paul Kray counterattacked at Biberach, then in greater strength towards Erbach on the Danube, where Moreau was driven back. French reinforcements restored the line and Kray fell back through Delmensingen (20 May) and Kelmuntz (5 June) towards Ulm (16 May 1800).

Erdi ❙ 1986 ❙ Libyan-Chad War

As rival tribal leaders struggled for control of northern Chad, the mainly Arab forces of Libyan-backed Acheikh ibn Oumar seized Erdi, then faced a massive counter-attack by Toubou loyal to Goukouni Oueddei. Libyan tanks and aircraft intervened to rescue Acheikh and Erdi was saved but at very heavy cost. Full-scale war began when Libyan regulars advanced on Zouar (5 October 1986).

Erego ❙ 1902 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

General Eric Swayne defeated Muhammad Abdullah Hassan of Somaliland at Ferdiddin (June 1901), then led a second expedition southeast from Bohotle towards Erego, near Mudug Oasis. Hard fighting saw almost 100 British killed and a Maxim lost before the Dervishes withdrew with 1,400 lost. Although Swayne was recalled, further action followed at Gumburu and Daratoleh (6 October 1902).

Eressos ❙ 1821 ❙ Greek War of Independence

In the first important naval action of the war, Greek Admiral Yakoumakis Tombazes met the Turkish fleet advancing from the Dardanelles and pursued a Turkish battleship to Eressos on southwestern Lesbos. After ineffective gunfire, the heroic Dimitris Papanikolis used a fireship to destroy the man-of-war, which was lost with about 400 lives. The Turkish fleet then withdrew (5–8 June 1821).

Erestfer ❙ 1702 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Despite his terrible defeat at Narva in 1700, Russian Tsar Peter I ordered General Boris Sheremetev into eastern Livonia, where he met Swedish General Anton von Schlippenbach at Erestfer, near Dorpat. Using infantry, dragoons and sledge-mounted cannon, Sheremetev won a decisive victory, with over 3,000 Swedes lost and 350 prisoners. He also gained his Marshal's baton (7 January 1702).

Eretria ❙ 411 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

When Euboea threatened to revolt against Athens, a powerful fleet under Spartan Admiral Agesandridas was sent to aid the rebels. Forced to respond, Athenian Admiral Thymochares put to sea with an ill-trained squadron, which met the Spartans off the harbour of Eretria, south of modern Chalcis. The Athenians were crushed, with 22 ships and crews lost, and the Euboean rebellion spread.

Ergeme ❙ 1560 ❙ Livonian War

See Oomuli

Erie ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

See Fort Erie

Erivan ❙ 1616–1618 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Advancing into Armenia to recover cities seized by Persia, Ottoman Grand Vizier Damad Mehmed Pasha was dismissed when he was repulsed assaulting Erivan and made peace. New Vizier Khalil Pasha and his Crimean Tatar allies renewed the siege, but after defeat by the Persians southeast near Arbadil (10 September 1618), Khalil was driven off and made peace (1616–September 1618).

Erivan ❙ 1635–1636 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Turkish Sultan Murad IV renewed his campaign against Persia, where he captured Tabriz in the northwest, then took Erivan in Armenia before returning to Constantinople. A hard-fought counter-offensive saw Persian Shah Safi march against Erivan, which fell after a long winter siege. While Erivan remained in Persian hands, Murad responded two years later by finally taking Baghdad.

Erivan ❙ 1724 ❙ Turko-Persian War

Launching a fresh invasion of Persian-held Armenia, Turkish forces besieged Erivan (modern Yerevan), said to be the most powerful fortress in the country. After a three-month siege and terrible Turkish losses in four failed assaults, the Persian garrison surrendered and was permitted to leave with the honours of war. The invaders then marched southeast against Tabriz (September 1724).

Erivan ❙ 1731 ❙ Turko-Persian War

Shah Tahmasp II defeated the Afghans in Persia, then marched into Turkish Armenia with 18,000 men against Hakimoglu Ali Pasha. Following defeat at Echmiadzin, the Turks fell back to Erivan (modern Yerevan), which Tahmasp besieged having failed to take it by assault. Faced by a separate Turkish threat to Hamadan, Tahmasp had to lift his siege and withdraw (March 1731).

Erivan ❙ 1804 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

See Echmiadzin

Erivan ❙ 1827 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

On a new offensive against the Persian invasion of Armenia, Russian General Afanasi Ivanovich Krasovski blockaded Erivan, but had to withdraw when the Persians advanced towards Echmiadzin. Russian Commander Ivan Paskevich then resumed the siege (28 September) and took the city by storm, earning the title Count of Erivan. Persia soon sued for peace (July–1 October 1827).

Erlau ❙ 1552 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

See Eger

Ermes ❙ 1560 ❙ Livonian War

See Oomuli

Er Ridisiya ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Having defeated Mamluk General Murad Bey on the left bank of the Nile at Aswan, French General Louis Desaix sent Louis-Nicolas Davout's cavalry across the river in pursuit of General Osman Bey. In some of the hardest fighting on the Upper Nile, Davout defeated the Mamluks during a sandstorm at Er Ridisiya Bihari, though at a heavy cost in French casualties (11 February 1799).

Erxdorf ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

See Emsdorf

Erzincan ❙ 1473 ❙ Ottoman-Turkoman War

When Uzun Hassan of the White Sheep Turkomans advanced from Azerbaijan into Anatolia and destroyed Tokat, Ottoman Sultan Mehmed II's army was checked at Terjan. However, the following year at Otluk Beli, northeast of Erzincan, the Turkoman army was destroyed by Mehmed and Vizier Ahmad Gedik Pasha, securing Turkish domination over Anatolia (11 August 1473).

Erzincan ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

Resuming his advance across the Caucasus from Erzurum, Russian commander Nikolai Yudenich split the Turkish defence at Bayburt, then advanced on General Abdul Kerim at Erzincan. The Turkish Third Army was utterly crushed, losing 17,000 casualties and another 17,000 captured. Yudenich then turned south against the Second Army around Bitlis (23–25 July 1916).

Erzurum ❙ 298 ❙ Roman-Persian Wars

The year after his disastrous defeat at Callinicum, Galerius Maximus secured reinforcements from the Danube and marched into Armenia against Narses of Persia. Near Erzurum, he inflicted a decisive defeat on the Persian army, capturing massive booty including the King's harem. He then raided towards Ctesiphon and Narses sued for peace, ceding Mesopotamia and other territory to Rome.

Erzurum ❙ 1821 ❙ Turko-Persian War in Azerbaijan

Facing an attack by the Turkish army of Dawud Pasha of Baghdad, Persian Prince Abbas Mirza marched west with 30,000 men in a counter-invasion and met the much larger force at Erzurum, north of Lake Van. The Turks were badly defeated in a decisive battle before Abbas was turned back by winter. He won again the next year at Khoi before both sides agreed to make peace.

Erzurum ❙ 1877–1878 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

As he advanced through the Caucasus from capturing Kars, Russian Grand Duke Michael pursued Turkish commander Ahmed Mukhtar Pasha, who had withdrawn following defeat at Aladja Dagh to the fortress of Erzurum. While investment of Erzurum was completed in December 1877, the Turks held out against a bitter winter siege until an armistice signed on 31 January 1878 ended the war.

Erzurum ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

Russian commander Nikolai Yudenich crushed the Turks at Koprukoy in January, then stormed west across the Caucasus in bitter winter conditions to attack Abdul Kerim at Erzurum. A three-day battle saw Yudenich break through the outer perimeter of fortresses and entrenchments, forcing the Turks to abandon the city and retreat towards Bayburt and Erzincan (11–16 February 1916).

Escobea ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd British-Ashanti War

With Ashanti forces threatening the British at Abakrampa, north of Elmina in modern Ghana, further north at Dunquah Colonel (later Sir) Francis Festing led a force west against the nearby Ashanti camp at Escobea, held by the Chiefs Essaman Quantah and Quasi Doomfie. The Ashanti camp was destroyed and the survivors dispersed, withdrawing north through Amoafo (27 October 1873).

Eshowe ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

Soon after repulsing a Zulu force on the Nyezane in southern Zululand, Colonel Charles Pearson fortified the mission station at nearby Eshowe, which he held with about 1,400 troops and 460 native auxiliaries. After ten weeks' loose siege, Pearson was relieved following British victory to the southeast at Gingindlovu and the entire force returned south into Natal (23 January–3 April 1879).

Eski Hissarlik ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

When Anglo-French forces landed on the Gallipoli Peninsula around Helles, the Turks repulsed an advance towards Krithia, then counter-attacked around Eski Hissarlik. The night action cost severe losses on both sides, especially among the French Senegalese. Following a second Allied offensive towards Krithia, the opposing forces dug in for virtual trench warfare (1–3 May 1915).

Eskisehir ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Dorylaeum

Eskisehir ❙ 1147 ❙ 2nd Crusade

See Dorylaeum

Eskisehir ❙ 1921 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War

With the Greek army checked in Anatolia at the Inönü, King Constantine took command and led his army against the Turks around nearby Eskisehir. Turkish General Ismet Pasha (later Inönü) fought a bloody defence before commander Mustafa Kemal had to order a withdrawal to prevent further losses. The Turks then fell back to a defensive position on the Sakarya (16–17 July 1921).

Eski Zagra ❙ 1122 ❙ Byzantine-Pecheneg Wars

Thirty years after the disastrous defeat at Mount Leburnion, a fresh horde of Pecheneg Turks invaded through Bulgaria and ravaged as far as Thrace and Macedonia before being met by Varangians and mercenary knights under John II Comnenus at Eski Zagra (modern Stara Zagora) in Bulgaria. The invaders were defeated with terrible slaughter and virtually disappeared from history.

Espinosa ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Spain with a large army, sending Marshals Claude Victor and Francois Lefebvre through Old Castile, where they attacked General Joachim Blake in a strong position west of Bilbao at Espinosa de los Monteros. Despite an initial costly repulse, the French won a decisive victory next day and Blake's Galicians withdrew west to Reynosa (10–11 November 1808).

Espiritu Santo ❙ 1839 ❙ Central American National Wars

Facing an invasion of eastern El Salvador by Honduran-Nicaraguan troops under Francisco Ferrera, Liberal President Francisco Morazán of El Salvador lost at Jicaral. But at Espiritu Santo, northwest of San Miguel, Morazán and José Trinidad Cabanas routed the invaders. Morazán later beat Ferrera again at San Pedro Perulapán while Cabañas won in Honduras at Tegucicalpa (6 April 1839).

Esquiroz ❙ 1521 ❙ 1st Habsburg-Valois War

Francis I of France resolved to restore Henry d'Albert to the throne of Navarre and sent a large army under Andre de Foix de Lesparre to occupy Navarre and Castile, where they besieged Logrono. Two months later, a relief army under Antonio de Lara Duke of Najera routed the French at Esquiroz, northeast of Pamplona, capturing de Foix and repelling the invaders (May–30 June 1521).

Es Salt (1st) ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Having secured Jerusalem and Jericho, Sir Edmund Allenby sent General John Shea across the Jordan to support Arab forces around Amman. Costly fighting against Turks under Liman von Sanders won Es Salt, northwest of Amman, though heavy rain and bombing blocked further advance. Shea had to withdraw across the swollen Jordan with about 1,400 casualties (23–30 March 1918).

Es Salt (2nd) ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

General Harry Chauvel led a second attempt to support Arab forces around Amman, crossing the Jordan with Australian, New Zealand and Imperial forces to take Es Salt, northwest of Amman, along with over 1,000 Turkish prisoners. However, he had to withdraw in the face of costly losses and Turkish reinforcements. Amman did not fall for another four months (30 April–4 May 1918).

Essaman ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd British-Ashanti War

With Ashanti forces under Amonquatia threatening the coastal port at Elmina, in modern Ghana, General Sir Garnet Wolseley took an African auxiliary force sweeping north and west against the villages of Essaman and Amguana. Near Essaman, the Ashanti were defeated and driven away from the so-called Cape Coast. They were soon defeated again near Abakrampa (14 October 1873).

Essertenne ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

See Gray

Essex* vs Phoebe ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

See Valparaiso

Essie ❙ 1058 ❙ Scottish War of Succession

When the usurper King Macbeth of Scotland was defeated at Dunsinane and killed at Lumphanan, his followers installed his stepson Lulach—the Simpleton—son of Queen Gruoch by her first husband. However, the victorious Malcolm Canmore soon defeated and killed Lulach at Essie in Strathbogie, Aberdeenshire, and was crowned as Malcolm III (17 March 1058).

Es Sinn ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

See Dujaila

Essling ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

See Aspern-Essling

Estella ❙ 1873 ❙ 2nd Carlist War
See Montejurra

Estella ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War
Spanish Republican Marshal Francisco Serrano captured Carlist Bilbao, then sent General Manuel de la Concha against Estella, held by Carlist Generals Antonio Dorregaray and Torcuato Mendíri. Concha was killed in heavy fighting near Abárzuza and the Republicans were driven off with over 1,000 casualties. Estella was saved and Mendíri became Count of Abárzuza (25–28 June 1874).

Estella ❙ 1876 ❙ 2nd Carlist War
Near the end of the war in Spain, Republican General Fernando Primo de Rivera became commander in chief and advanced on the remaining Carlist stronghold at Estella. The city itself was taken by storm after bloody victory at nearby Montejurra and, a week later, Don Carlos VII fled Spain for good, ending the fighting. Primo de Rivera was created Marques de Estella (19 February 1876).

Estero Bellaco ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
A fresh Allied offensive into southwest Paraguay against President Francisco Solano López saw 45,000 Brazilians and Argentines led by General Venancio Flores surprised at Estero Bellaco, near the Upper Parana, by just 5,000 Paraguayans under General José Eduvigis Díaz. Fighting on marshy ground, Díaz had initial success before being forced to withdraw northeast to Tuyutí (2 May 1866).

Estero Rojas ❙ 1867 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
A bold initiative from besieged Humaitá saw Paraguayan Colonel Valois Rivarola ambush a convoy led by Brigadier Alexandre Manuel Albino de Carvalho approaching the Allied base at Tuyutí. Attacking at nearby Estero Rojas, Rivarola inflicted about 300 casualties before the convoy was rescued by troops from Tuyutí under Brazilian General Manuel Marques de Sousa (24 September 1867).

Estill's Defeat ❙ 1782 ❙ War of the American Revolution
See Little Mountain

Esztergom ❙ 1595 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars
Leading a fresh Imperial advance into Turkish Hungary, Prince Karl of Mansfeldt besieged the important fortress of Esztergom, north of Buda, held by the veteran warrior Kara Ali. A relief army led by the son of Grand Vizier Sinan Pasha was heavily defeated at the gates of the city and Kara Ali was killed as Esztergom fell by storm and was put to the sack (7 September 1595).

Esztergom ❙ 1605 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars
Turkish Grand Vizier Lala Mehmed Pasha led a fresh offensive in Hungary to capture Pest, then marched north to besiege Esztergom, supported by Prince Stephan Bocskai of Transylvania, who was in revolt against the Emperor. The city fell by storm and the Habsburgs evacuated Transylvania, recognising Bocskai, who mediated peace between the Emperor and the Sultan (29 September 1604).

Esztergom ❙ 1683 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars
Weeks after defeating the Turks at Vienna and Parkany, Charles V of Lorraine besieged the Danube fortress of Esztergom. When his artillery breached the walls, 4,000 Turks surrendered and were allowed to march out with their arms. Grand Vizier Kara Mustafa had three local commanders beheaded for cowardice, but he was himself later executed for failure (20–26 October 1683).

Etampes ❙ 1652 ❙ War of the 2nd Fronde
A month after defeating part of the army of Louis XIV and Cardinal Mazarin at Blenau, rebel French nobles under Louis II de Bourbon Prince of Condé and his Spanish allies were met south of Paris at Etampes by the main Royal army under Marshal Henri de Turenne. Condé was defeated and driven back to Paris, where he was defeated again two months later at St Antoine (4 May 1652).

Etchoe ❙ 1760 ❙ Cherokee Indian Wars

With Fort Prince George and Fort Loudoun besieged by Cherokee Chief Oconostota, General Jeffrey Amherst in Charleston sent a large relief force of Scottish regulars under Colonel Archibald Montgomerie. Attacked on the Little Tennessee River near Etchoe (modern Franklin, North Carolina), Montgomerie withdrew with 20 killed and 76 wounded (27 June 1760).

Etchoe ❙ 1761 ❙ Cherokee Indian Wars

Following the Fort Loudoun massacre by Cherokee Chief Oconostota, General Jeffrey Amherst in Charleston eventually sent 2,600 regulars and local militia into North Carolina under Colonel James Grant. He won a hard-fought action on the Little Tennessee near Etchoe (modern Franklin), site of battle the previous year, and the Cherokee soon sued for peace (10 June 1761).

Ethaleni ❙ 1838 ❙ Boer-Zulu War

Boer leaders Piet Uys and Andries Potgieter led a counter-offensive against Zulu King Dingane after the massacre at Bloukranz (18 February), taking over 300 men across the Tugela. Ambushed by Chief Ndlela at Ethaleni, on the Mhlatuze, west of Gingindlovu, the Boers were routed and fled, with Uys and his son among the dead. The Zulus soon won again at the Tugela (11 April 1838).

Ethandun ❙ 878 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

See Edington

Etival ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

German commander Karl August von Werder campaigning west of Strasbourg sent General Alfred von Degenfeld towards Epinal. Between Etival and Nompatelize, south of Raon l'Etape, Degenfeld crashed into part of General Louis-Francois Dupré's Army of Lyons. The badly outnumbered French lost 2,000 casualties and prisoners and Dupré was severely wounded (6 October 1870).

Etshaneni ❙ 1884 ❙ Zulu Civil War

See Tshaneni

Ettlingen ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Malsch

Eupatoria ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War

Following failure at Balaklava and Inkerman to break the Allied siege of Sevastopol, Russian commander Prince Alexander Menshikov sent General Stepan Khrulev north against the Allied port of Eupatoria (Yevpatoriya). However, Khrulev was driven off with almost 800 killed by Turkish forces under Colonel Robert Cannon, who was in the Sultan's service as Bahram Pasha (17 February 1855).

Eureka Stockade ❙ 1854 ❙ Eureka Rebellion

Disenfranchised gold miners at Ballarat, Australia, rebelled in support of reformist grievances and about 250 "diggers" led by Peter Lalor manned a fortified stockade at Eureka. When police and soldiers under Captain John Thomas approached, fighting broke out with 22 miners and six soldiers killed. The failed resistance came to symbolise the cause of workers' freedom (3 December 1854).

Eurymedon ❙ 466 BC ❙ Greco-Persian Wars

Cimon of Athens commanding the Delian League fleet sailed along the south coast of Turkey to confront a massive Persian fleet assembled to avenge the humiliating defeats at Plataea and Mycale in 479 BC. At the mouth of the Eurymedon in Antalya Bay, Cimon won a decisive victory on land and sea and drove the Persians back from southeast Asia Minor, confirming Athenian mastery of the Aegean.

Eurymedon ❙ 190 BC ❙ Roman-Syrian War

War at sea between Rome and Antiochus III of Syria continued after the action at Corycus and Rome's Rhodian allies under Eudamas met the Seleucid fleet, now led by the exiled Hannibal, off the Eurymedon, in southern Turkey, near Side. Hannibal's larger fleet was badly handled and lost 20 ships disabled and one captured. The main decisive action came that September at Myonnesus (July 190 BC).

Eutaw Springs ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Pursuing the British into South Carolina despite a check at Fort Ninety-Six, rebel General Nathanael Greene was met near the Santee River at Eutaw Springs by about 2,000 men under Colonel Alexander Stewart. Greene was eventually repulsed in a hard-fought action, although Stewart had also suffered very heavy losses and withdrew south to Charleston (8 September 1781).

Evesham ❙ 1265 ❙ 2nd English Barons' War

With King Henry III captured at Lewes by Simon de Montfort Earl of Leicester, his son Prince Edward gathered a powerful army. When de Montfort crossed the Severn and advanced towards Evesham, southeast of Worcester, he mistook Edward's force for his own son's army, defeated earlier at Kenilworth. The Earl was defeated and killed and King Henry was restored (4 August 1265).

Evora ❙ 1663 ❙ Spanish-Portuguese Wars

See Ameixial

Evora ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

After marching into Portugal, French commander Androche Junot sent General Louis Loisson southeast to secure his communication with Spain. At the town of Evora, 70 miles southeast of Lisbon, Loisson routed an inexperienced Portuguese-Spanish force under General Francisco de Paula Leite. He then sacked Evora but withdrew when the British landed in Portugal (29 July 1808).

Exeter ❙ 1068 ❙ Norman Conquest of Britain

Renewing the war against William I after their father was killed at Hastings, the sons of former King Harold of England attacked Bristol with the Irish fleet, then joined Harold's mother Gytha at Exeter. Marching west against the rebels, William besieged Exeter and, after undermining its walls, took the town by storm. He then ravaged the countryside of Devon to impose Norman rule.

Exeter ❙ 1549 ❙ Western Rebellion

When Edward VI tried to enforce the new English prayer book, pro-Catholic forces in Cornwall and Devon rebelled under Sir Humphry Arundell and up to 10,000 besieged Exeter. Royal troops under Lord John Russell failed to raise the siege until reinforcements gave them victory at nearby St Mary's Clyst. The rebels withdrew and were routed at Sampford Courtenay (2 July–6 August 1549).

Exilles ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Attempting to divert Austria's siege of Genoa, Louis-Charles Fouquet Comte de Belleisle (brother of Marshal Charles de Belleisle) invaded Piedmont. West of Turin near Exilles, Belleisle was killed in a rash frontal attack on Austrian General Rudolf Joseph Colloredo in entrenchments at the Col de l'Assiette. His routed army was then driven back to France (19 July 1747).

Eylau ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

In their mid-winter offensive against the French invasion of eastern Prussia, Russians under General Levin Bennigsen met Napoleon Bonaparte's Grand Army in a snowstorm at Eylau (modern Bagrationovsk). Although General Anton Lestocq's Prussians arrived to assist, Bennigsen could not break through and withdrew to winter quarters, leaving Bonaparte to claim victory (8 February 1807).

Ezra Church ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

While besieging the Confederate army at Atlanta, Georgia, Union commander William T. Sherman sent General Oliver O. Howard against the supply lines to the west, where he dug in at Ezra Church against Generals Stephen D. Lee and Aleander P. Stewart. The Confederates were repulsed with heavy losses and Sherman soon attacked again further west at Utoy Creek (28 July 1864).

F

Fada ❙ 1987 ❙ Libyan-Chad War

On the day of Chadian victory at Zouar, government troops and Goukouni Oueddei's rebels joined in a fierce attack on Fada, 400 miles to the southeast, where a Libyan brigade was routed with claimed 780 killed and 120 armoured vehicles destroyed. Libya bombed Fada next day, trying to destroy captured war supplies, and in March attempted to advance on Fada from Ouadi Doum (2 January 1987).

Faddiley ❙ 583 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

See Fethanleag

Faenza ❙ 490 ❙ Goth Invasion of Italy

King Theodoric of the Ostrogoths defeated Odoacer, the German ruler of Italy, on the Sontius and at Verona in 489, then besieged him in his capital in Ravenna. A powerful sortie by Odoacer broke the siege and at Faenza he beat the Ostrogoths and advanced into northern Italy. However, a subsequent Ostrogoth victory at the Adda drove Odoacer back to a long siege at Ravenna.

Faesulae ❙ 225 BC ❙ Gallic Wars in Italy

Responding to pressure from Roman expansion in the north, Insubrian Gauls and their Boii allies crossed the Apennines and advanced as far as Clusium. The Gauls then lured a local Roman force into a trap at Faesulae (modern Fiesole) near Florence, killing 6,000. The arrival of Consul Lucius Aemilius Papus drove the invaders towards the coast and defeat at Telamon and later at Clastidium.

Faesulae ❙ 405 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

The great Roman-Vandal General Flavius Stilicho repulsed the Visigoths at Pollentia and Verona, then faced a fresh invasion by Goths and Vandals under Radagaisus, who attacked Florence. At nearby Faesulae (modern Fiesole), supported by Sarus the Goth and Uldin the Hun, Stilicho destroyed the invaders and Radagaisus was executed. The survivors retreated to join Alaric's warband.

Faial ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

Pursued to neutral Faial in the Portuguese Azores, the American privateer General Grant (Captain Samuel Reid) was attacked by the British ships Plantagenet (Captain Robert Floyd), Rota (Captain Philip Somerville) and Carnation (Captain George Bentham). After repulsing a hard-fought attack and inflicting about 300 casualties, Reid had to scuttle his ship (26–27 September 1812).

Faid Pass ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Germany reinforced its Panzer army in Tunisia and General Jurgen von Arnim launched his offensive by driving the French from Faid Pass. Two weeks later, the German tanks stormed out of the pass and smashed through thin American defence, capturing many tanks and men. Sbeitla and Sidi Bou Zid fell and the Americans retreated to Kasserine (30 January–2 February & 14–16 February 1943).

Fair Garden ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Ten days after being repulsed east of Knoxville, Tennessee, near Dandridge, Union General Samuel B. Sturgis met an advancing Confederate force under Generals William T. Martin and John T. Morgan further west at Fair Garden, near Sevierville. Supported by Colonel Edward M. McCook, Sturgis defeated the Confederates but incurred heavy losses and retired next day (27 January 1864).

Fair Oaks ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Seven Pines

Fair Oaks ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a diversion east of Richmond, Virginia, Union General Benjamin F. Butler advanced north from New Market Road against Confederate General Richard H. Anderson on the Nine Mile Road near Fair Oaks. Butler was driven off by a counter-attack and other Union forces were no more successful the same day, southwest of Petersburg at Hatcher's Run (27–28 October 1864).

Falaise ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

While a German counter-attack failed around Mortain, British and Canadians from Caen and Americans from Avranches attempted to encircle two enemy armies. However, severe fighting held open the gap between Falaise and Argentan and 20,000 men escaped before the Allied trap closed. The Germans lost perhaps 560 tanks, 9,000 guns, 10,000 killed and 50,000 captured (13–20 August 1944).

Falan ❙ 1389 ❙ Wars of Scandinavian Union

See Falkoping

Falkirk ❙ 1298 ❙ William Wallace Revolt

Recovering from defeat at Stirling, Edward I of England led a large force against Scottish nationalist Sir William Wallace. At Falkirk, the Scots volunteer army resisted the King's cavalry on marshy ground but was destroyed in one of the first major victories by English longbowmen. Wallace fled to France and was executed in 1305 after another Scottish defeat at Stirling (22 July 1298).

Falkirk ❙ 1746 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

English General Henry Hawley was advancing to relieve the Jacobite siege of Stirling when he met the rebels under Charles Stuart—Bonnie Prince Charlie—and Lord George Murray to the southeast at Falkirk. In a confused 20-minute action during a rainstorm, the Hanoverians were driven off with heavy losses in men and equipment and the siege continued (17 January 1746).

Falkland Islands ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

Returning home via South America, German Admiral Maximilian von Spee sank two British cruisers off Coronel, then met Admiral Frederick Doveton Sturdee's pursuing battle squadron near the Falkland Islands. A decisive one-sided action saw four German cruisers sunk, with von Spee himself lost. The fifth cruiser escaped into the Pacific and was later destroyed (8 December 1914).

Falkoping ❙ 1389 ❙ Wars of Scandinavian Union

During a time of rebellion among local nobles, Queen Margaret of Denmark invaded Sweden and, on the Plain of Falan, near Falkoping, her forces defeated and captured King Albert of Sweden and his son, ending the Folkung Dynasty. As a result of the battle, Denmark, Norway and Sweden came under one crown and the Scandinavian Union continued for 130 years (24 February 1389).

Fallen Timbers ❙ 1794 ❙ Little Turtle's War

General Anthony Wayne was determined to secure the Ohio Valley and established Fort

Recovery on the Wabash before marching north against Miami, Shawnee and other tribes. Attacking at Fallen Timbers, a forest clearing on the Maumee near modern Toledo, Wayne's regulars used bayonets to secure a decisive victory. The Indians of the northwest soon sued for peace (20 August 1794).

Falling Waters ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Hoke's Run

Fallujah ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

After besieging Iraqi forces were repulsed at Habbaniyah, west of Baghdad, a British relief column (Habforce) arrived from Transjordan under General George Clarke and attacked the Iraqis at nearby Fallujah on the Euphrates. The Iraqi army was heavily defeated and pro-Axis leader Rashid Ali fled. Habforce entered Syria next month and attacked Vichy forces at Palmyra (19–21 May 1941).

Falside ❙ 1547 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

See Pinkie

Faluja ❙ 1948–1949 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Following the fall of Huleiqat, northeast of Gaza, Jewish commander Shimon Avidan attacked an Egyptian Brigade further east at the village of Faluja and nearby Iraq al-Manshiyya, commanded by General Taba Bey and (later President) Gamel Abdul Nasser. Despite repeated heavy attacks, the "Faluja Pocket" held out and armistice saw them permitted to withdraw (22 October 1948–7 January 1949).

Famagusta ❙ 1570–1571 ❙ Venetian-Turkish War in Cyprus

In renewed war against Venice, Sultan Selim II sent Lala Mustafa with a large force to Cyprus, where he captured Nicosia, then besieged Famagusta. Before help arrived from Europe, Governor Marc Antonio Bragadino negotiated a safe capitulation, but he was then murdered and his men were enslaved. The Turks were later defeated in October 1571 at Lepanto (15 September 1570–1 August 1571).

Famaillá ❙ 1841 ❙ Argentine Civil Wars

With his army virtually destroyed at Quebracho Herrado (November 1840), Unitarist General Juan Galo Lavalle was pursued to Tucumán, where he made a final stand 20 miles to the southwest at Famaillá against General Manuel Oribe. Lavalle was heavily defeated, then killed fleeing to Bolivia (8 October), ending opposition in the north and east to Dictator Manuel de Rosas (19 September 1841).

Famars ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Valenciennes

Fancheng ❙ 219 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

Just months after Cao Cao of Wei was driven out of Hanzhou by defeat at Dingjun, his cousin Cao Ren was defeated and besieged at Fancheng by Guan Yu of Shu. Cao Cao's relief army under Yu Jin was destroyed by floods, but Guan Yu was badly beaten by a second force under Xu Huang. Guan Yu was pursued and executed and Sun Quan seized the middle Yangzi, leading to battle in 222 at Yiling.

Fangtou ❙ 369 ❙ Wars of the Sixteen Kingdoms Era

With northern China wracked by war between states, Emperor Fei of the Eastern Jin sent Huan Wen north across the Yellow River to invade the Xianbei state of Former Yan and besiege Fangtou. With his supplies cut and facing attack by Former Qin, Huan withdrew but was pursued and routed by General Murong Chui. Huan's expedition is said to have cost 30,000 men (August–November 369).

Fano ❙ 271 ❙ Roman-Alemannic Wars

When Alemanni tribesmen invaded northern Italy, they defeated Emperor Aurelian at Placentia and advanced southwards towards Rome. On the Metaurus at Fano, however, Aurelian's regrouped forces caught the invaders and inflicted a decisive defeat. The capital was saved and Aurelian pursued the Alemanni back north, where he caught and annihilated the survivors at Pavia.

Fao ❙ 1986 ❙ Iraq-Iran War
See Al Faw

Farah ❙ 1719 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars
Campaigning against Asadullah Khan, leader of the Abdali Afghans who had defeated the Persians at Herat, Mahmud Ghilzai of Kandahar, a nominal vassal of the Shah, besieged the rebel at Farah, in western Afghanistan. Asadullah was defeated and killed, along with 3,000 of his men. Mahmud Ghilzai secured Afghanistan, then invaded Persian territory and seized Kerman.

Fariskur ❙ 1250 ❙ 7th Crusade
The French Crusade of King Louis IX was driven back from an advance on Cairo by a costly defeat at Mansura (8 February) and attempted to withdraw to Damietta, on the eastern Nile Delta. At Fariskur, the retreating army was routed, with thousands of prisoners enslaved or executed. The King himself was taken prisoner and ransomed, ending his disastrous expedition to Egypt (6 April 1250).

Farka ❙ 1896 ❙ British-Sudan Wars
See Firket

Farmah ❙ 640 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Egypt
See Pelusium

Farmville ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
As defeated Confederates withdrew west from Petersburg, Virginia, pursuing Union troops crossed High Bridge and advanced units under General Andrew A. Humphreys met Confederate commander Robert E. Lee at Cumberland Church, near Farmville. The Union forces were repulsed and Lee was able to continue west towards Appomattox Court House (7 April 1865).

Farnham ❙ 893 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain
Danish invaders who landed in Kent advanced into Wessex, but at Farnham near Guildford, they were heavily defeated by Alfred's son Edward, who recovered the booty they had seized. Driven north across the Thames, the Danes were besieged at Thorney Island by Prince Edward and Aethelred of Mercia, who forced them to give hostages and abandon Kent, withdrawing to Viking East Anglia.

Farquhar's Farm ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War
See Nicholson's Nek

Farrukhabad ❙ 1750 ❙ Pathan War
On a massive offensive in northern India against Safdar Jang, Subadar of Awadh, Pathan leader Ahmad Khan Bangesh led a surprise attack on the Mughal army outside Farrukhabad, near the upper Ganges, where the Subadar's General, Naval Rai, was defeated and killed. The Pathans secured a second victory over Safdar Jang himself to the northwest at Kasganj (3 August 1750).

Farrukhabad ❙ 1751 ❙ Pathan War
When a Bangash attack on northern India was defeated at Qadirganj, Rohilla Pathans who went to aid their Sunni Muslim brethren were routed near Farrukhabad by Marathas under Gangadhar Jaswant and Jawahir Singh Jat. After Pathan General Sadulla Khan fled and Bahadur Khan was killed, along with a claimed 10,000 Rohillas, the invasion was driven back across the Ganges (28 April 1751).

Farrukhabad ❙ 1804 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War
British commander General Sir Gerard Lake repulsed Maharaja Jaswant Rao Holkar of Indore at Delhi (2 November), then pursued the Maratha army down the Ganges towards Farrukhabad, where he destroyed the Maratha cavalry in a one-sided disaster. Holkar fled to his ally the Raja of Bharatpur and Lake marched west to aid the siege of Dieg (17 November 1804).

Farsetmore ❙ 1567 ❙ O'Neill Rebellion
See Letterkenny

Fategarh ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny
Preparing for the British advance from Cawnpore to Lucknow, General Sir Colin Campbell sent Brigadier Adrian Hope northwest to the Ganges, where he captured the vital bridge at Kali Nadi and the following day attacked nearby Fategarh. In the face of a decisive cavalry charge led by Colonel Hope Grant, the rebels fled across the Ganges, abandoning the town and its fort (2 January 1858).

Fatehabad ❙ 1041 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession
In the aftermath of disaster at Dandanaqan in Turkmenistan (May 1040), Ghaznavid Sultan Masud ibn Mahmud withdrew to India and was deposed and killed by his brother Muhammad, who immediately marched west to claim Afghanistan. At Fatehabad, near Jalalabad, Masud's son Maudad routed the rebels, executed Muhammad and his sons, then secured himself as Sultan (March 1041).

Fatehabad ❙ 1879 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War
Amid renewed hostilities following British victory at Peiwar Kotal, General Sir Charles Gough (brother of Commander-in-Chief Sir Hugh) marched against Khugiani tribesmen in eastern Afghanistan. Gough's heavily outnumbered force defeated 5,000 Afghans in a fierce fight east of Kabul at Fatehabad, 14 miles southwest of Jalalabad. However, Major Wigram Battye was killed (2 April 1879).

Fatehpur ❙ 1799 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars
Supported by Irish-born General George Thomas, Vama Rao of Hariana invaded Jaipur and took a strong defensive position to the northwest at Fatehpur, where he was attacked by the Rajput army of Partab Singh led by General Raja Roraji Khavis. Although heavily outnumbered, Thomas achieved a remarkable victory, though the arrival of Rajput reinforcements forced him to withdraw.

Fatehpur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny
As General Sir Henry Havelock marched out of Allahabad to recapture Cawnpore, rebel leader Nana Sahib tried to intercept a column under Major Sydenham Renaud and found himself facing Havelock's full force at Fatehpur. The rebels were driven off in a brief action. The British suffered few losses and, after plundering Fatehpur, advanced through Aong and Pandu Nadi (12 July 1857).

Fatehpur Sikri ❙ 1527 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India
See Khanua

Fathkelda ❙ 1724 ❙ Mughal-Hyderabad War
See Shakarkhelda

Fatshan Creek ❙ 1857 ❙ 2nd Opium War
Determined to punish China for seizing men off the ship Arrow, British Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, with Commodore Henry Keppel, destroyed war junks at Escape Creek (25 May), then attacked the main Chinese fleet at nearby Fatshan Creek, south of Guangzhou. Every ship in the Chinese fleet was destroyed or captured and the British advanced to capture Guangzhou itself in December (1 June 1857).

Faughart ❙ 1318 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce
See Dundalk

Faventia ❙ 82 BC ❙ Sullan Civil War
While Gaius Marius the Younger lost south of Rome at Sacriportus, his allies Papirius Carbo and Caius Norbanus advanced from the north. After a series of costly skirmishes, Carbo was routed at Faventia (modern Faenza) by Sullan General Quintus Caecilius Metellus. Norbanus fled to Rhodes, Carbo played no further major part, and Sulla returned south to defeat Marius at the Colline Gate.

Favorita ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See La Favorita

Faya Largeau ❙ 1983 ❙ Chad Civil Wars

After Goukouni Oueddei's Libyan-backed rebels overwhelmed the northern city of Faya Largeau (23 June), their advance was checked at Abéché by government troops, who counter-attacked and retook Faya with very heavy losses on both sides (30 July). Massive Libyan bombing regained the city (10 August), though Faya was abandoned by Libya after defeat at Ouadi Doum in March 1987.

Fehmarn ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Kolberg Heath

Fehrbellin ❙ 1675 ❙ Scania War

Swedes invading Brandenburg under Count Karl Gustav Wrangel were repulsed at Rathenow and three days later were surprised northwest of Berlin at Fehrbellin by Elector Frederick William and Field Marshal Georg von Derfflinger. The Elector's much smaller force won a great victory and he went on to capture Swedish Pomerania. However, he had to return it when war ended (28 June 1675).

Fei River ❙ 383 ❙ Wars of the Sixteen Kingdoms Era

Fu Jian of the Kingdom of Former Qin unified much of northern China, then led a massive army south against the Eastern Jin, with their capital at Nanjing. In a famous action at the Fei River (Feishui) in Anhui, the smaller Jin Imperial army under Xie An and Xie Xuan inflicted a terrible defeat, killing Qin commander Fu Jung. Fu Jian fled north and his empire soon collapsed.

Feldkirch ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

As French commander André Masséna crossed the Rhine in Switzerland, General Nicolas Oudinot attacked General Friedrich von Hotze's Austrians just inside Austria at Feldkirch and was driven back from well-entrenched positions. Masséna himself joined the attack, but was again heavily repulsed and withdrew through Zurich. He resumed the offensive in September (7–23 March 1799).

Fellin ❙ 1560 ❙ Livonian War

Ivan IV of Russia renewed his war against Livonia, sending Andrei Kurbsky, who defeated the Livonian Order in Estonia at Oomuli, then besieged fortified Fellin (modern Viljandi), further north. Grandmaster Wilhelm Furstenberg surrendered the city after almost three weeks and was taken to Moscow. The Order never recovered and was secularised the following year (4–20 August 1560).

Fenes ❙ 1660 ❙ Transylvanian National Revolt

See Gilau

Fenghuangcheng ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Campaigning in southern Manchuria, the Japanese fell back from Caohekou to defend Fenghuangcheng (Fengcheng) against the Amur army of Tatar General Yiketang'a. Repulsed nearby (9 December), the Chinese launched a massive assault but were attacked in the rear and decimated by General Naobumi Tatsumi. The Japanese then moved west against Haicheng (14 December 1894).

Fengtian ❙ 783 ❙ Later Tang Imperial Wars

During war against rebellious provinces in northeast China, troops in the capital Chang'an mutinied and Emperor Dezong fled 50 miles northeast to Fengtian, where he was besieged by Zhi Ci. Garrison commander Hun Zen led a brilliant five-week defence, including destruction of a huge siege tower, until an Imperial army under Li Huaiguang arrived and the mutineers were defeated.

Ferdiddin ❙ 1901 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

Driven off with heavy losses by part of the first British Somaliland expedition at Samala,

Muhammad Abdullah Hassan withdrew south towards Ferdiddin, near Damot, where he was met days later by the main force of largely Somali levies under General Eric Swayne. The Mullah suffered high losses and fled to Italian territory, though Swayne lost the following year at Erego (17 June 1901).

Fère-Champenoise ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

See La Fère-Champenoise

Ferghana ❙ 102 BC ❙ Wars of the Former Han

See Dayuan

Ferkeh ❙ 1896 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See Firket

Ferozeshah ❙ 1845 ❙ 1st British-Sikh War

When a large Sikh army crossed the Sutlej into British East Punjab, they were repulsed by British General Sir Hugh Gough at Mudki, then retired northwest to Ferozeshah, near Ferozepur, where they were attacked three days later. In some of the hardest fighting in India, Lal Singh repulsed the first British assault, but was finally driven out at great cost to both sides (21–22 December 1845).

Ferrara ❙ 1815 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (The Hundred Days)

King Joachim I of Naples (Marshal Murat) prematurely declared war after Napoleon Bonaparte's return from Elbe and led a Neapolitan army against Austria in northern Italy to capture Bologna. Attempting to cross the Po towards Mantua, he was beaten at Ferrara by General Vincenz Bianchi and had to withdraw south, where he was routed (3 May) at Tolentino (12 April 1815).

Ferrol ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

See Cape Finisterre

Ferrybridge ❙ 1461 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Returning from Mortimer's Cross too late to prevent defeat at St Albans, Edward Duke of York pursued the Royalists into Lancashire and sent John Radcliffe Lord Fitzwalter to Ferrybridge, where he was surprised and killed. Later that day, John Mowbray Duke of Norfolk counter-attacked to kill Lancastrian leader John Baron Clifford and the Yorkists won next day at Towton (28 March 1461).

Festubert ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Despite terrible losses at Aubers, four days later, British commander Sir Douglas Haig attacked again further south towards Festubert, west of La Bassée, to support the French offensive in Artois. A massive bombardment helped secure some initial success and Festubert was captured, though the British lost almost 16,000 men and the attack soon ground to a halt (15–27 May 1915).

Fethanleag ❙ 583 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Conquest of Britain

Ceawlin of the West Saxons was advancing along the Upper Severn after his great victory at Deorham, when he was halted at Fethanleag (modern Faddiley) near Nantwich, Cheshire, by Britons under Brochmael, Prince of Powys. Ceawlin was heavily defeated and his brother Cutha was killed. The West Saxon King was later overthrown and defeated at Wodnesbeorg in 592 by his nephew Coel.

Fetterman Massacre ❙ 1866 ❙ Red Cloud's War

Sent to protect a wood train under attack five miles from Fort Phil Kearney, Wyoming, the impetuous Captain William Fetterman and 82 other soldiers were lured into an ambush on nearby Lodge Trail Ridge by perhaps 2,000 Sioux under Crazy Horse and Red Cloud. They fought back bravely, inflicting heavy Indian losses, but the entire detachment was wiped out (21 December 1866).

Fez ❙ 1911 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

When Sultan Mulai Hafid of Morocco was besieged in Fez by tribal rebels, his troops under French Colonel Emile Mangin held the city and eventually drove off a final massive assault (11 May). Fez was then relieved by French forces under General Robert Monier from Casablanca and Colonel Jean Broulard from Tangiers and the rebels were forced to withdraw (12 March–22 May 1911).

Fez ❙ 1912 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Moroccan soldiers in the French garrison at Fez mutinied and were put down by General Robert Monier, after which the city came under siege by Moroccan forces opposed to Sultan Mulai Hafid. A relief column under Colonel Henri Gouraud arrived to destroy the nearby Moroccan camp with artillery and a French Protectorate was soon declared (17 April–1 June 1912).

Fidenae ❙ 426 ❙ Roman-Etruscan Wars

After losing to the Etruscans near Fidenae at Cremera (477), Rome renewed the war against Fidenae and, early in the campaign, King Tolumnius of Veii was killed, reputedly in single combat. Following subsequent Roman failure, Aemielius Mamercus was appointed Dictator in command and Fidenae was taken by storm and looted. A few years later, Rome advanced upstream against Veii itself.

Field of Blood ❙ 1119 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Antioch, Syria

Figueras ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

French General Jacques Dugommier repulsed a Spanish invasion of France, then advanced into Catalonia and was killed by a cannonball (17 November) while attacking General Amarillas Comte de la Union in defensive lines at Banyuls, covering Figueras. De la Union was killed (20 November) as General Dominique de Perignon stormed the pass at Banyuls and Figueras itself fell a week later (17–20 November 1794).

Figueras ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

When Spanish insurgent leader Juan Antonio Martínez seized the Catalonian town of Figueras, near the French border, he was immediately besieged by Marshal Jacques Macdonald. The garrison held out in the hope of relieving French pressure on the siege of Tarragona, but no help came. The starving garrison surrendered three days after a sortie was heavily repulsed (9 April–19 August 1811).

Fihl ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

Following great Arab victories at Ajnadin and the Yarmuk, the Byzantine General Baanes attempted to halt the Muslim advance towards Damascus. At Fihl, in the eastern Jordan Valley (near the site of ancient Pella) Arab General Khalid ibn al-Walid drove him back and seized the nearby town of Basain (modern Beth Shan). Khalid then continued on through Marj as-Suffar (23 January 635).

Finisterre ❙ 1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

See Cape Finisterre

Finland ❙ 1939–1940 ❙ Russo-Finnish War

See Winter War

Finschhafen ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Huon Peninsula

Finta ❙ 1653 ❙ Moldavian Civil War

In a struggle for the throne of Moldavia, Prince Vasile Lupu was driven out by rival George Stefan, aided by Wallachian and Transylvanian troops. Supported by his Cossack son-in-law, Timus, Lupu was briefly restored, before a decisive battle on the road to Tirgoviste at Finta saw Lupu defeated and exiled. Stefan then resumed the throne (17 November 1653).

Fiodoroivskoy ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

See Vyazma

Firadz ❙ 634 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid advancing up the Euphrates from Ain Tamar destroyed the hostile Bani Tughlib, then pursued the Persian army up to Firadz, close to the frontier of the Byzantine Empire. There he routed a combined Roman-Sassanian army but wisely did not advance further. Khalid was soon summoned to join the Muslim offensive in Syria at Ajnadin (January 634)

Firket ❙ 1896 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

At the start of Britain's campaign to reconquer the Sudan after the fall of Khartoum, General Herbert Kitchener's British-Egyptian-Sudanese army attacked the Mahdists at Firket, south of Akasha. The Dervish army was driven out by a surprise dawn assault with about 1,000 killed, including commander Hammuda Idris. Kitchener then advanced through Hafir to Dongola (7 June 1896).

First of June ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

To protect a desperately needed food convoy from North America, French Admiral Louis Villaret de Joyeuse took his fleet to sea and drew off the British force of Admiral Richard Howe. After four days of running battle, the decisive struggle was joined off Ushant and the French lost seven ships captured and one sunk. Howe won, but the food convoy arrived safely (29 May–1 June 1794).

Firth of Forth ❙ 1708 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Hoping to promote rebellion against England, French Admiral Claude Chevalier de Forbin sailed to the east coast of Scotland with 10,000 soldiers and James Stuart the Old Pretender. Intercepted at the Firth of Forth by Admiral Sir George Byng, Forbin escaped with just a single ship captured. His withdrawal ended French hopes of provoking a Scottish rising (13 March 1708).

Fish Creek ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

General Frederick Middleton took command of Canadian forces against rebellion in Saskatchewan and marched on the rebel headquarters at Batoche, southwest of Prince Albert. But to the south at Fish Creek, he was ambushed by rebel leader Gabriel Dumont. Although the Méti and Indians inflicted about 50 casualties, Middleton cautiously continued his advance on Batoche (24 April 1885).

Fishdam Ford ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

In pursuit of guerrilla General Thomas Sumter after his defeat at Fishing Creek (18 August), British cavalry under Major James Wemyss marched west against the rebels at Moore's Hill, in Chester County, South Carolina, where they collided to the south at Fishdam Ford. Wemyss was wounded and repulsed in a confused action, but Sumter was further pursued to Blackstocks (9 November 1780).

Fisher's Hill ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Following defeat at the Opequon, Confederate commander Jubal A. Early retreated along the Shenandoah to Fisher's Hill, just south of Strasburg, Virginia, where he was attacked by pursuing Union General Philip Sheridan. Early was badly beaten—losing 1,200 casualties, 1,000 prisoners and 16 guns—and he soon suffered further defeat at Tom's Brook and Cedar Creek (21–22 September 1864).

Fishguard ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Shortly after a failed French invasion of Ireland at Bantry Bay, Captain Jean-Baptiste Laroque landed 1,400 French troops and ex-convicts near Fishguard in southwestern Wales. With insufficient food and weapons, the demoralised French under American adventurer Colonel William Tate surrendered next day to John Campbell Lord Cawdor without a shot fired (23 February 1797).

Fish Hook ❙ 1970 ❙ Vietnam War

See Cambodia

Fishing Creek ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Immediately after routing the rebels at Camden, British commander Charles Earl Cornwallis sent cavalry leader Colonel Banastre Tarleton after partisan Colonel Thomas Sumter, marching north with loot from Wateree Ferry. Catching Sumter at Fishing Creek, South Carolina, Tarleton virtually destroyed his force and recovered British prisoners as well as the looted supplies (18 August 1780).

Fish River ❙ 1781 ❙ 1st Cape Frontier War

When Xhosa crossed the Fish River into Dutch South Africa's Zuurveld (modern Bathurst and Albany), eastern border commander Adriaan van Jaarsveld attacked with 92 whites and 40 Khoi. Rarabe's brother Langa withdrew, but other Chiefs would not. After two months of fighting along the Fish, the Xhosa were driven out, ending the first Frontier War (23 May–19 July 1781).

Fish River ❙ 1819 ❙ 5th Cape Frontier War

The Xhosa Prophet Nxele was heavily repulsed attacking Grahamstown in Cape Colony and withdrew east pursued by British Colonel Thomas Willshire and Boers under Andries Stockenstrom. At the mouth of the Fish River, Nxele attacked the Boers and was driven off with terrible losses. He then surrendered near Trompettersdrif and later drowned while escaping from custody (13 August 1819).

Fish River ❙ 1851 ❙ 8th Cape Frontier War

While British forces advanced to the Waterkloof, further south Colonel George Mackinnon led 1,000 troops and 300 Mfengo levies against Xhosa on the Fish, 30 miles northeast of Grahamstown. In a serious incident, an isolated company under Captain William J. Oldham was attacked with 32 killed and 21 wounded, although Mackinnon eventually secured the area (September 1851).

Fismes ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

As General Gebhard von Blucher's Prussian-Russian army advanced towards the French capital, they met a force under Marshal Auguste Marmont at Fismes, west of Rheims, where Marmont was repulsed in a sharp action. As a result, Napoleon Bonaparte abandoned Rheims, while the Allies felt they could ignore the French Emperor and continue the drive on Paris (17 March 1814).

Fiume ❙ 1919 ❙ D'Annunzio's Insurrection

Italy and Yugoslavia disputed post-war possession of the Dalmation port of Fiume and Italian adventurer Gabriele D'Annunzio led volunteers to seize the city. When the Treaty of Rapallo declared Fiume independent, D'Annunzio declared war on Italy but withdrew under Italian bombardment. Benito Mussolini annexed Fiume in 1923 (12 September–27 December 1919).

Five Forks ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

With Union forces attacking his defences southwest of Petersburg, Virginia, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee ordered General George Pickett to hold the crossroads at Five Forks, northwest of Dinwiddie Court House. Union commander Philip Sheridan secured a brilliant victory—taking over 5,000 prisoners—which is said to have decided the fate of Petersburg (1 April 1865).

Flamanda ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

While August von Mackensen campaigned down the Danube from Tutrakan towards Constanta, Romanian commander Alexandru Averescu attempted a counter-offensive further upriver between Zimnicea and Flamanda. The Romanian crossing into Bulgaria was a disorganised shambles and, after defeat near Flamanda, their offensive was abandoned (29 September–3 October 1916).

Flamborough Head ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

American John Paul Jones led a small squadron against a Baltic convoy off Yorkshire near Flamborough Head, where his converted merchantman Bonhomme Richard engaged the British frigate Serapis under Captain Richard Pearson. In one of America's most famous naval actions, Jones forced Pearson to surrender as his own ship sank, then took the captured convoy to Texel (23 September 1779).

Flanders ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In bloody action fought across Flanders, the Allies and Germans struggled for advantage, from the Yser in the north, through Langemark, Ypres, Gheluvelt, Nonne Boschen, Messines and Armentières to La Bassée. After shocking losses on both sides, the line stabilised, marking the end of mobility and the start of trench warfare (10 October–30 November 1914).

Flanders ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

On the offensive against the northern end of the Hindenburg Line, King Albert of Belgium, with General Sir Herbert Plumer and French under Jean Degoutte, advanced between Lille and the coast against General Friedrich von Arnim. Paschendaele, Dixmude and Armentières were quickly taken and the Allies then advanced on Courtrai (28 September–10 October 1918).

Flanders Ridges ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Ypres

Fleetwood Hill ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Brandy Station

Flers-Courcelette ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

General Sir Henry Rawlinson led a fresh assault in the Battle of the Somme, attacking on an extended front northeast from Pozières, supported by the first use of tanks on the Western Front. The Allies secured considerable territory, capturing Martinpuich, Flers and Courcelette, but suffered very heavy losses before German reinforcements stabilised the front (15–22 September 1916).

Fleurus ❙ 1622 ❙ Thirty Years War (Palatinate War)

Withdrawing after defeat at Höchst in June, Protestants under Count Ernst von Mansfeld and Christian of Brunswick marched west towards Bergen-op-Zoom, besieged by General Ambrogio de Spinola. At Fleurus, near Charleroi, Spanish General Gonzalo Fernández de Cordoba was defeated attempting to block them. Six weeks later (4 October) Bergen was relieved (29 August 1622).

Fleurus ❙ 1690 ❙ War of the Grand Alliance

Following French defeat at Walcourt at the hands of Prince George Frederic of Waldeck, command was given to Duke Francois Henri of Luxembourg, who gained his revenge at Fleurus, northeast of Charleroi. Waldeck's German-Spanish-English army was decisively defeated, with massive losses in casualties and prisoners, and Luxembourg went on to secure Flanders (1 July 1690).

Fleurus ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

The Austrian-British-Hanoverian army of Friedrich Josias Prince of Saxe-Coburg, advancing to relieve the siege of Charleroi, arrived one day late to prevent its surrender and launched a large-scale attack on French positions to the northeast at Fleurus. Coburg was routed after a counter-attack led by General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan and Austria abandoned the Netherlands (26 June 1794).

Fleury (1st) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

General Konstantin Schmidt von Knobelsdorf renewed the offensive northeast of Verdun, launching a massive bombardment with gas around Fleury and nearby fortifications at Thiaumont. However, a French counter-attack under General Charles Mangin prevented a breakthrough to Souville and the German offensive stalled, with troops diverted to the Somme (23 June–1 July 1916).

Fleury (2nd) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

In a third attack northeast of Verdun, Germans again tried to break through around Fleury towards Souville. General Robert Nivelle's defence held firm and the Germans were repulsed. Generals Erich von Falkenhayn and Konstantin Schmidt von Knobelsdorf were replaced and a lull followed until the French offensive towards Douaumont (1 August–6 September 1916).

Flodden ❙ 1513 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

Despite a previous cross-border raid being beaten at Broomhouse in August, James IV of Scotland invaded England, where Henry VIII sent Thomas Howard Earl of Surrey to meet him in a bloody engagement at Flodden, south of the Tweed near Branxton. While both sides lost heavily, King James and 12 earls were killed in a disastrous defeat and the Scots withdrew (9 September 1513).

Florence ❙ 405 ❙ Goth Invasion of the Roman Empire

See Faesulae

Florence ❙ 1529–1530 ❙ 2nd Habsburg-Valois War

When Spain and France made peace in Italy, Florence continued the war and was besieged by Imperial Prince Philibert of Orange. The Florentine Francisco Ferrucci broke out after ten months but was routed at Gavinana in the Pistoia Mountains, where both Ferrucci and Philibert were killed (2 August). Florence then surrendered, ending the Republic (14 October 1529–12 August 1530).

Flores ❙ 1591 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

See Azores

Flores Fight ❙ 1839 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

See San Gabriels, Texas

Flores Sea ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Madoera Strait

Florida, Bolivia ❙ 1814 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Sent to organise resistance in the Santa Cruz area of modern Bolivia, Argentine guerrilla leader Ignacio Warnes, under General Juan Antonio Alvarez de Arenales, met and defeated a Spanish Royalist force at Florida, then marched 50 miles northeast to seize the city of Santa Cruz. After subsequent Argentine defeats in the east of the country, Warnes was killed at Parí (25 May 1814).

Florida, USA ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

While escorting a British convoy from Havana to Bermuda, the brig Epervier (Commander Richard Wales) was attacked off the coast of Florida by the American sloop Peacock (Captain Lewis Warrington). Wales was forced to strike his colours when the smaller British ship was dismasted and heavily damaged with eight killed and 15 wounded. However, the convoy escaped (29 April 1814).

Florina ❙ 1912 ❙ 1st Balkan War

See Monastir

Florina ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

With Romania about to enter the war, Allied forces under General Maurice Sarrail attempted a diversionary offensive into Serbia from Salonika. Bulgarians and Germans on the western flank launched a massive pre-emptive attack against the Serbs around Florina, but after heavy fighting, the Serbs held firm and the struggle died down until a new advance towards Monastir (15–27 August 1916).

Florina ❙ 1947 ❙ Greek Civil War

Determined to establish a headquarters in northern Greece, Communist commander Markos Vaphiadis led about 650 men against Florina, where a fifth column rising failed to eventuate and he was repulsed after five hours. When Vaphiadis attacked again four days later, a stronger government force with air support drove him off with heavy losses (28 May & 1 June 1947).

Florina ❙ 1949 ❙ Greek Civil War

Communist leader Nikos Zakhariadis took command from "defeatist" Markos Vaphiadis after Kastoria and sent over 4,000 men against Florina, where they secured part of the town. Attacked by government forces, with massive air support, the insurgents were driven out with over 1,000 casualties. They then withdrew south to their stronghold around Vitsi (12–16 February 1949).

Flowing Springs ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Summit Point

Flushing ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

As part of the diversionary expedition to Walcheran Island guarding Antwerp, British forces led by General Sir John Pitt Lord Chatham laid siege to Flushing, held by a 5,000-strong garrison under General Louis-Claude Monnet. After a bold defence, Monnet was forced to capitulate, for which he was court-martialled. However, the British expedition overall was a costly disaster (2–15 August 1809).

Focsani ❙ 1789 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

Russian forces under General Alexander Suvurov advanced into Turkish Wallachia, where they joined with Austrian Prince Friedrich Josias of Saxe-Coburg to attack the Turks under Mustapha Pasha at Focsani in Moldavia (modern Romania). The Turkish camp fell by storm with heavy losses and the routed survivors fled, abandoning a massive booty of cannon and stores (20 July 1789).

Focsani ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

See Maracesti

Foggia ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

While Anglo-American forces landed in southwestern Italy at Salerno, British General Sir Bernard Montgomery raced up the east coast after landing at Messina and Taranto, heading for the strategic airfield at Foggia. Montgomery seized Foggia—the same day Naples fell—to bring southern Europe within range of Allied bombers. He then advanced north against Termoli (1 October 1943).

Foix ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

With French forces in Spain occupied with the siege of Valencia, Spanish General Pedro Sarsfield led a cheeky raid across the border and temporarily seized and ransomed the French town of Foix, 45 miles south of Toulouse on the Ariege in the foothills of the Pyrenees. Although the action had little strategic value, it was a welcome boost to Allied morale (19 February 1812).

Folck's Mill ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Cumberland

Fombio ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Piacenza

Fondouk Pass ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

As British forces broke through the Mareth Line into southern Tunisia, American tanks and infantry under General Charles Ryder circled west towards Fondouk Pass. Despite heavy air support, the attack failed against intense German defence. British and Americans then combined to smash their way through the Pass but too late to cut off the retreating Axis army (27–30 March & 8–9 April 1943).

Fontaine-Française ❙ 1595 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

When Phillip II of Spain refused to recognise Henry IV of France and supported the dubious claim of his own daughter Elizabeth, Henry declared war on Spain. A Spanish invasion of French Burgundy from Milan was repulsed at Fontaine-Française, northeast of Dijon, but a further Spanish invasion from the Netherlands seized territory in the northwest (9 June 1595).

Fontana Fredda ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)
See Sacile

Fontenailles ❙ 841 ❙ Frankish War of Succession
See Fontenoy, France

Fontenatum ❙ 841 ❙ Frankish War of Succession
See Fontenoy, France

Fontenay ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Royalist leader Maurice d'Elbée secured victory at Thouars for the counter-revolution in western France, then advanced south towards Fontenay-le-Comte. At nearby Pissotte, the rebels were routed by Republican General Francois Chalbos, with d'Elbée wounded. A fresh attack nine days later drove Chalbos out and the Royalists captured valuable arms and stores (16 & 26 May 1793).

Fontenoy, Belgium ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Having initially respected the neutrality of the Austrian Netherlands, Louis XV of France and Marshal Maurice de Saxe took an army into Flanders to besiege Tournai. Five miles southeast at Fontenoy, Saxe defeated a large English-Austrian-Dutch-Hanoverian relief force under William Augustus Duke of Cumberland. He then went on to take Tournai and all of Flanders (11 May 1745).

Fontenoy, France ❙ 841 ❙ Frankish War of Succession

Amid protracted civil war for the Frankish crown following the death of Charlemagne, Emperor Lothair I met his brothers Ludwig the German and Charles the Bold at Fontenoy, near Auxerre in central France. The decisive battle which became known as the "Judgement of God" saw Lothair suffer a heavy defeat, leading to the Treaty of Verdun and partition of the empire (25 June 841).

Foochow ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War
See Fuzhou

Foochow ❙ 1926 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War
See Fuzhou

Forbach ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War
See Spicheren

Force Z ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Pacific)
See Prince of Wales and Repulse

Ford ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See North Anna

Ford of the Biscuits ❙ 1594 ❙ O'Donnell's Rebellion

In a prelude to the Tyrone Rebellion, Irish rebels Hugh O'Donnell and Cormac O'Neill (brother of the Earl of Tyrone) ambushed government troops sent to relieve Enniskillen, Ulster. At the nearby River Arney, the English under Sir Henry Duke and Sir Edward Herbert were defeated and lost over 100 men. The battle was named for biscuit rations spilled in the fighting (7 August 1594).

Formigny ❙ 1450 ❙ Hundred Years War

At the conclusion of a five-year truce, France invaded English Normandy and Sir Thomas Kyriel took a fresh army to support Edmund Beaufort Duke of Somerset. Marching from Cherbourg to relieve Caen, Kyriel was routed and captured at Formigny by Count Arthur of Richemont and Count Charles of Clermont. Defeat at Formigny led directly to England losing Normandy (15 April 1450).

Fornham ❙ 1173 ❙ Anglo-Norman Rebellion

With Henry II of England away in France, Robert Beaumont Earl of Leicester and his Flemish mercenaries joined with Hugh Bigod Earl of Norfolk supporting the King's eldest son "Young King Henry." A Royalist army under Richard de Lucy and Humphrey de Bohun utterly defeated the rebellious Barons at Fornham St Genevieve in Suffolk and Leicester was captured (16 October 1173).

Fornovo ❙ 1495 ❙ Italian War of Charles VIII

Charles VIII of France marching north from his conquest of Naples was blocked by the mercenary army of Milan and Venice under Giovanni Gonzago. At Fornovo, west of Parma, French Generals Louis de la Trémouille and Gian Giacomo Trivulzio drove the Italians off. Charles continued his withdrawal to France and defeat at Aversa the next year cost him Naples (6 July 1495).

Fort Alabama ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

See Thonotosassa

Fort Anderson ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On campaign against the Union army in North Carolina, General James Longstreet sent Confederate Generals Daniel H. Hill and James J. Pettigrew against the powerful Union base at New Bern, at the mouth of the Neuse. At Fort Anderson, the Confederates were heavily repulsed by Colonel Hiram Anderson and withdrew north to Washington, North Carolina (13–15 March 1863).

Fort Anderson ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Wilmington

Fort Anne ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British General John Burgoyne pursuing Colonel Pierce Long down Lake Champlain from Fort Ticonderoga was too slow to trap the Americans at Skenesboro and sent Colonel John Hill against Fort Anne, where Long was reinforced by Colonel Henry van Rensselaer. Hill suffered a costly defeat, but with Burgoyne approaching, the rebels burned the fort and continued south (8 July 1777).

Fort Apalachicola ❙ 1816 ❙ 1st Seminole Indian War

See Negro Fort

Fort Balaguer ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In one of the few successes of the disastrously incompetent Allied siege of Tarragona, General Sir John Murray sent Colonel William Prevost south against French-held Fort Balaguer, guarding the coast road from Valencia. While Prevost succeeded in capturing the fort, a few days later the attack on Tarragona was abandoned and Murray withdrew by sea to Alicante (3–7 June 1813).

Fort Bisland ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

On the offensive in western Louisiana, Union forces under General Nathaniel P. Banks advanced up the Bayou Teche against Confederate General Richard Taylor and Colonel Tom Green at Fort Bisland, west of Berwick City. Heavy fighting forced Taylor to withdraw his outnumbered force northwest through a skilled rearguard action further upstream at Irish Bend (12–13 April 1863).

Fort Blakely ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Blakely

Fort Bowyer ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

On the offensive in the Gulf of Mexico, British Commodore William Percy and Colonel Edward Nicholls attacked Fort Bowyer (modern Fort Morgan) guarding Mobile Bay, held by a small force under Major William Lawrence. Landing after heavy bombardment, the British were badly beaten with 160 killed and the sloop Hermes sunk before they retreated to Pensacola (12–15 September 1814).

Fort Bowyer ❙ 1815 ❙ War of 1812

Following defeat at New Orleans, British forces under Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane and General John Lambert attacked Fort Bowyer (modern Fort Morgan) at the mouth of Mobile Bay, which had repulsed an earlier assault. Major William Lawrence's garrison was overwhelmed and the British were threatening Mobile itself when news arrived that the war was over (8–12 February 1815).

Fort Brooke ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Two Union ships under Captain Alexander A. Semmes led an expedition into Hillsborough Bay, Florida, where they bombarded Fort Brooke, just east of Tampa, defended by Captain John Westcott. A landing party then captured two Confederate ships on the nearby Hillsborough River and a third was scuttled before the Union expedition withdrew (16–18 October 1863).

Fort Carey ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Wateree Ferry

Fort Carillon ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Fort Ticonderoga

Fort Caspar ❙ 1865 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

See Platte Bridge

Fort Clinton ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Campaigning north from New York City, British General Sir Henry Clinton attacked American fortresses on the Hudson. Fort Montgomery, held by Governor George Clinton, fell quickly, but nearby Fort Clinton, under his brother James Clinton, was strongly defended. It eventually fell after heavy losses on both sides, though the offensive failed to help the British at Saratoga (6 October 1777).

Fort Constantine ❙ 1836–1837 ❙ French Conquest of Algeria

See Constantine

Fort Darling ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Drewry's Bluff

Fort Davidson ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Confederate General Sterling Price started a large-scale expedition across Missouri by attacking Fort Davidson, at Pilot Knob north of Ironton, defended by General Thomas Ewing. The heavily outnumbered garrison inflicted over 1,500 casualties before escaping under cover of dark and the Union army regrouped to meet Price in western Missouri at Lexington (27 September 1864).

Fort Dearborn ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

When American General William Hull was blockaded by the British in Detroit, he unwisely ordered Captain Nathan Heald to evacuate Fort Dearborn, on the site of modern Chicago. After abandoning the fort, the militia garrison and civilians were attacked by Potawatomi Indians. Many were massacred, though Heald was among the prisoners. Detroit surrendered next day (15 August 1812).

Fort Defiance ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

With the great Seminole leader Osceola threatening Fort Defiance outside Micanopy, Florida, garrison commander Major Julius Heilman led a bold counter-offensive, attempting an ambitious double envelopment. The Indians were repulsed after some hard fighting, but Heilman lacked the resources to complete his strategy and he returned to the fort (9 June 1836).

Fort del Or ❙ 1580 ❙ Geraldine Rebellion

Supporting James Fitzmaurice and his cousin Gerald Fitzgerald Earl of Desmond against Anglo-Scots colonisation of Ulster, Spanish and Italians under Sebastiano di San Guiseppe landed at Smerwick, where they were besieged in Fort del Or by Lord Arthur Grey de Wilton. After being forced to surrender, a reported 600 were massacred, though San Guiseppe survived (7–10 November 1580).

Fort De Russy ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Union commander Nathaniel P. Banks opened his campaign up the Red River in Louisiana by sending Generals Andrew J. Smith and Joseph Mower against the partly completed Confederate Fort de Russy, below Alexandria. A bold assault from the landward side forced garrison commander Colonel William Byrd to surrender and Banks continued upriver towards Mansfield (14 March 1864).

Fort Donelson ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On the offensive in western Kentucky, Union General Ulysses S. Grant captured Fort Henry on the Tennessee River, then marched ten miles east against Fort Donelson on the Cumberland, held by Confederate Generals John B. Floyd, Gideon Pillow and Simon B. Buckner. After heavy fighting and naval bombardment, the fort and 12,000 men surrendered unconditionally (11–16 February 1862).

Fort Donelson ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Determined to disrupt Union shipping on the Cumberland, in Tennessee, Confederate commander Joseph Wheeler, supported by Generals Nathan B. Forrest and John A. Wharton, attacked Fort Donelson and nearby Dover. The heavily outnumbered garrison under Colonel Abner C. Harding refused to surrender and heavy fighting saw Wheeler forced to withdraw (3 February 1863).

Fort Drane (1st) ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

Amid fighting around Fort Drane, near Irvine, south of modern Gainesville, Florida, the great Seminole Chief Osceola launched an unexpected attack on the fortress itself. Most unusual for the time, Osceola attacked at night, but following two hours of fierce fighting after midnight, he was driven off and withdrew with only a few captured horses. The fort was later abandoned (20 April 1836).

Fort Drane (2nd) ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

Seminole Indians who occupied abandoned Fort Drane, south of Gainesville, Florida, were later attacked in the open by Major Benjamin Pierce from nearby Fort Defiance. Chief Osceola narrowly escaped capture in heavy fighting before Pierce was forced to withdraw to Micanopy. Two months later, Osceola was lured out of the everglades and seized under a flag of truce (21 August 1836).

Fort Driant ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As part of the assault on Metz, American forces under General LeRoy Irwin failed trying to storm the powerful Fort Driant. A second assault after massive bombardment penetrated tunnels under the fort before it too was repulsed with over 500 casualties. A third assault took the city of Metz, but Driant held out for another two weeks (27 September, 3–13 October & 9 November–8 December 1944).

Fort Duquesne ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Three years after the British disaster at Monongahela, Brigadier John Forbes led a fresh advance on the French at Fort Duquesne (modern Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania). A patrol by Major James Grant was surrounded and suffered heavy losses (14 September). By the time a full attack was prepared, French Captain Francois-Marie de Lignery blew up the fort and fled (23 November 1758).

Fort Erie ❙ 1812 ❙ War of 1812

In a courageous raid across the Niagara River with 100 men in two longboats, American Captain Jesse Elliott seized two British brigs under the guns of Fort Erie. Caledonia (Lieutenant Robert Irvine) was sailed across river to Black Rock, but Detroit (Lieutenant Frederic Rolette)—the former American vessel Adams—was grounded mid-river, then stripped and destroyed (8–9 October 1812).

Fort Erie (1st) ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

American General Jacob Brown led a fresh offensive across the southern Niagara River, taking 3,500 men into Canada to attack Fort Erie, which had been recaptured by the British a year earlier in the offensive following victory at Stoney Creek. Major Thomas Buck surrendered the strategic fort and the Americans marched north against General Sir Phineas Riall at Chippewa (2–3 July 1814).

Fort Erie (2nd) ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

Advancing against the Americans on the Canadian shore of the Niagara days after victory at Lundy's Lane, British General Sir Gordon Drummond besieged General Edmund Gaines at Fort Erie. A major assault was repulsed with heavy losses (15 August) and, after a bloody sortie (17 September), General George Izard blew up the fort and withdrew across the river (4 August–5 November 1814).

Fort Fisher ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In an expedition against the vital Confederate port of Wilmington, North Carolina, Admiral David D. Porter and General Benjamin F. Butler led a combined Union assault on nearby Fort Fisher. Butler was driven off by a determined Confederate Division led by General Robert F. Hoke and the garrison under Colonel Charles Lamb. He was later relieved of command (7–27 December 1864).

Fort Fisher ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

A renewed attempt on Fort Fisher, below Wilmington, North Carolina, saw Union General Alfred H. Terry, supported by Admiral David D. Porter, defeat Confederate General Robert F. Hoke under General Braxton Bragg. Colonel Charles Lamb surrendered the fort after heavy shelling and infantry assault and Terry ascended the Cape Fear against Wilmington (13–17 January 1865).

Fort Foster ❙ 1836 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

See Thonotosassa

Fort Foureau ❙ 1900 ❙ French Conquest of Chad

See Kousséri

Fort Frontenac ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Two years after British defeat at Oswego on Lake Ontario, British Colonel John Bradstreet regained the southern shore of the lake and sailed against Fort Frontenac (modern Kingston) guarding the entrance to the St Lawrence. After a bold assault, French Commandant Pierre Jacques Payen de Noyan surrendered his small garrison and a massive supply of guns and stores (27 August 1758).

Fort George, Florida ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Pensacola

Fort George, Quebec ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

Colonel Winfield Scott invaded Canada across the Niagara River on Lake Ontario and attacked the British at Fort George, supported by the American fleet under Commodore Isaac Chauncey. With over 350 casualties, British General John Vincent spiked his guns and withdrew west, counter-attacking within days at Stoney Creek. America abandoned the fort in December (27 May 1813).

Fort Harrison ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See New Market Heights

Fort Hatteras ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On campaign against blockade-runners off North Carolina, Union General Benjamin F. Butler and Admiral Silas H. Stringham attacked the Confederate Forts Hatteras and Clark on Hatteras Island, held by Colonel William F. Martin. Following a bold amphibious attack, which cost just a handful of Union casualties, Martin surrendered the forts and about 700 men (28–29 August 1861).

Fort Henry ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

With the Confederates defeated in eastern Kentucky at Mill Springs, a separate Union force under General Ulysses S. Grant advanced in western Kentucky against Fort Henry on the Tennessee River, defended by General Lloyd Tilghman. The fort surrendered to Flag-Officer Andrew H. Foote after bombardment from the river and Grant marched east against Fort Donelson (6 February 1862).

Fort Hindman ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Arkansas Post

Fort Huger ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Suffolk

Fort Itala ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

Over-confident after victory at Blood River Poort, days later Boer commander Louis Botha marched into Natal and sent his brother Christiaan against Fort Itala, east of Dundee, defended by Major Archibald Chapman. A reckless frontal assault by the Boers was driven off with costly losses and, after a further repulse at nearby Fort Prospect, the commando withdrew north (26 September 1901).

Fort Jesus ❙ 1696–1698 ❙ Later Portuguese Wars in East Africa

See Mombasa

Fort King ❙ 1840 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

On patrol outside Fort King, near modern Ocala, Florida, 18 men under Captain Gabriel Rains were ambushed by a much larger Seminole force led by Halleck Tustenuggee. In fierce fighting, with four soldiers and three Indians killed, Rains was severely wounded but got his men back to the fort. For his courage, he was later brevetted Major. Tustenuggee was also wounded (28 April 1840).

Fort Laramie ❙ 1854 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

Marching east from Fort Laramie, in southeastern Wyoming, 24-year-old Lieutenant John Grattan unwisely attempted to arrest some Brulé Sioux who had killed an emigrant's cow. Chief Conquering Bear was fatally wounded in an exchange of fire and, in retribution, Grattan and his entire detachment of 29 were killed. The army was avenged a year later at Ash Hollow (18 August 1854).

Fort Lee ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

With Fort Washington on Manhattan Island secured by General William Howe, General Charles Earl Cornwallis crossed the Hudson against Fort Lee, just recently reinforced by American General George Washington. Attacking with 4,000 British and Hessian troops, Cornwallis seized Fort Lee and valuable military supplies, although Washington led his troops to safety (20 November 1776).

Fort Loudoun ❙ 1760 ❙ Cherokee Indian Wars

When Governor William Lyttelton of South Carolina unwisely provoked war against the Cherokee, Chief Oconostota besieged Fort Loudoun, near Vonore, Tennessee, held by Colonel Paul Demeré. Captain John Stuart negotiated a surrender, but the 200-strong garrison was butchered as they left for Fort Prince George. Stuart was captured and Demeré was tortured to death (8 August 1760).

Fort Loyal ❙ 1690 ❙ King William's War

Following French success against Schenectady and Salmon Falls, Rene Robinau de Portneuf and Augustine de Courtmanche soon led Canadians and Indians against Fort Loyal at Falmouth, near modern Portland, Maine, held by Captain Sylvanus Davis. When a British sortie was destroyed the garrison surrendered, but over 100 were butchered and Davis was held prisoner (16–20 May 1690).

Fort Macon ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union General Ambrose E. Burnside led an expedition against the North Carolina coast, where he captured the key town of New Bern, on the Neuse, then sent Brigadier General John G. Parke southeast to the Atlantic against Fort Macon. When his heavy guns arrived, Parke smashed the fort's defences and Colonel Moses J. White surrendered about 400 men (23 March–25 April 1862).

Fort McAllister ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

In a naval assault on Fort McAllister, at Genesis Point outside Savannah, Georgia, three Union ironclads under Captain Percival Drayton, supported by gunboats and mortar schooners, bombarded the fortress, held by Captain George W. Anderson. The Union squadron was eventually forced to withdraw and Fort McAllister was not taken until almost two years later (3 March 1863).

Fort McAllister ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

When Union commander William T. Sherman reached Savannah (10 December) after his "March to the Sea" through Georgia, General William B. Hazen attacked Major George W. Anderson at strategic Fort McAllister, southwest of the city. A bold assault saw Hazen take the fort by storm and, on the night of 20/21 December, the Confederates evacuated Savannah (13 December 1864).

Fort McHenry ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

British General Robert Ross advanced to seize Baltimore, while Admiral Sir Alexander Cochrane's naval squadron moved upriver to bombard the city's defences at Fort McHenry, held by Major George Armistead. Ross was defeated and killed on land and, when the bombardment of the fort next day failed to make any impression, the entire force withdrew (13–14 September 1814).

Fort Meigs ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

With Americans defeated west of Lake Erie at Frenchtown in January, British General Henry Proctor took a large force from Amherstburg up the Maumee to attack General William Harrison at the powerful new stockade at Fort Meigs. Proctor crushed part of a relief force under General Green Clay (Dudley's Defeat), but he lacked resources to take the fort and withdrew to Canada (1–5 May 1813).

Fort Mercer ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

After capturing Philadelphia with victory at Brandywine, British General Sir William Howe attacked Fort Mercer, on the west bank of the Hudson, held by Colonel Christopher Greene. During a poorly planned assault, Hessian General Car von Donop was heavily repulsed and killed (22 October). When Fort Mifflin opposite fell, Fort Mercer was finally evacuated (22 October–21 November 1777).

Fort Mifflin ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Having captured Philadelphia following victory at Brandywine, British General Sir William Howe and his brother Admiral Richard Howe bombarded Fort Mifflin, downstream on the east bank of the Hudson, held by Colonel Samuel Smith (later, Major Simeon Thayer). The Americans withdrew after massive casualties and Howe turned against Fort Mercer (10 October–15 November 1777).

Fort Mims ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

Creek under Red Eagle (William Weatherford) took advantage of America's war with Britain and followed action at Burnt Corn by attacking Major Daniel Beasley at Fort Mims, north of Mobile, Alabama. More than half the 500 militia and civilians in the fort were killed in a brutal assault. In November, the Americans were avenged at Tallaseehatchee, Talladega and Autossee (30 August 1813).

Fort Montgomery ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Fort Clinton

Fort Moultrie ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Fort Sullivan

Fort Necessity ❙ 1754 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Threatening Fort Duquesne (modern Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania), Colonel George Washington and about 150 Virginia militia defeated a French patrol at Youghiogany, but were driven back to Fort Necessity, near modern Uniontown, by French and Indians under Captain Louis Coulon de Villiers. Washington capitulated after nine hours' fighting and his force was released (3 July 1754).

Fort Niagara ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

British General John Prideaux advanced along the Mohawk to Lake Ontario and sailed west to besiege the strong French fortress at Niagara, defended by Captain Pierre Pouchot. Sir William Johnson took command after Prideaux was killed by a shell and, when Captain Francois-Marie de Lignery died in a failed relief attempt, Pouchot surrendered next day (June–25 July 1759).

Fort Niagara ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

When American General John Boyd burned Newark before abandoning Fort George on the Niagara River and crossing back into America, British commander Sir Gordon Drummond sent Colonel John Murray across the river against Fort Niagara, where Captain Nathaniel Leonard was said to be drunk. Murray seized the fort at bayonet-point and took 350 prisoners (18 December 1813).

Fort Ninety-Six ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

General Nathanael Greene, pursuing the British into South Carolina, marched west towards the Savannah to besiege the powerful Fort Ninety-Six, held by Colonel John Cruger. Greene lost about 150 casualties and was unable to take the fort. He withdrew when Colonel Lord Francis Rawdon arrived with reinforcements, though the garrison was later evacuated to Charleston (22 May–19 June 1781).

Fort Oswego ❙ 1756 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Oswego

Fort Peddie ❙ 1846 ❙ 7th Cape Frontier War

After victory at Burnshill, Xhosa forces advanced south into eastern Cape Colony against Colonel Martin Lindsay at Fort Peddie. Although a British supply train was destroyed at the Fish River (21 May), a massive assault on the fort was heavily repulsed (28 May). The garrison held out until Colonel Henry Somerset arrived to defeat the Xhosa at nearby Gwanga (30 April–7 June 1846).

Fort Phil Kearney ❙ 1866–1867 ❙ Red Cloud's War

Built in July 1866 to protect the Bozeman Trail from Wyoming to the goldfields of Montana, Fort Phil Kearney, south of modern Sheridan, immediately came under attack and was besieged following the Wagon Box Fight (August 1867). Despite being relieved, the so-called Fort Perilous became untenable and was finally abandoned in August 1868 as part of a truce with the Indians.

Fort Pillow ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Raiding Union communications, Confederate General Nathan B. Forrest destroyed Paducah, Kentucky, and within weeks marched west from Jackson against Fort Pillow, Tennessee, on the Mississippi, held by Major Lionel F. Booth. With Booth killed in heavy fighting, Major William F. Bradford surrendered and the Confederates reportedly murdered many black prisoners (12 April 1864).

Fort Pitt ❙ 1763 ❙ Pontiac's War

Near the start of Pontiac's War against the British, his Indian allies laid siege to Fort Pitt (modern Pittsburgh), commanded by the Swiss-born Captain Simeon Ecuyer. After intermittent assaults, there was a concentrated five-day attack (27 July–1 August) before the Indians withdrew to support the action at Bushy Run. The fort was relieved a week later (22 June–10 August 1763).

Fort Prince George ❙ 1760 ❙ Cherokee Indian Wars

When Governor William Lyttelton of South Carolina seized several Cherokee Chiefs and sent them to Fort Prince George as hostages, the fort came under siege by Chief Oconostota. After Captain Richard Cotymore was lured out and fatally wounded (16 February 1760), the Indian hostages were killed. But Oconostota lacked the forces to take the fort and turned northwest against Fort Loudoun.

Fort Prospect ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Fort Itala

Fort Pulaski ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

In an advance on Savannah, Georgia, Union forces under General David Hunter and Captain Quincy A. Gillmore attacked Fort Pulaski, on Cockpit Island, guarding the river approaches to the Confederate city. Although casualties were minimal, Gillmore's new rifled artillery caused heavy damage and Colonel Charles H. Olmstead surrendered the fort and 360 men (10–11 April 1862).

Fort Recovery ❙ 1791 ❙ Little Turtle's War

See St Clair's Defeat

Fort Recovery ❙ 1794 ❙ Little Turtle's War

Determined to secure the Ohio Valley, General Anthony Wayne advanced to the site of St Clair's Defeat in 1791 on the Wabash, southwest of modern Celina, and established Fort Recovery, which was soon besieged. An attack by Little Turtle of the Miami was heavily repulsed, after which the great Chief was replaced and he did not command the decisive action at Fallen Timbers (30 June 1794).

Fort Rice ❙ 1865 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

A Cheyenne-Sioux force campaigning in North Dakota attacked strategic Fort Rice, on the Missouri south of Mandan, held by a strong garrison under Colonel John Pattee. About 300 warriors made repeated assaults but were heavily repulsed by steady infantry fire and howitzers. They then withdrew west into Montana and attacked two army columns on the Powder River (28 July 1865).

Fort Ridgely ❙ 1862 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

Little Crow of the Santee Sioux led a rising in Minnesota, where he slaughtered settlers, then advanced on Fort Ridgely, south of modern Fairfax. A patrol was ambushed at nearby Redwood Ferry, with Captain John Marsh among the 24 killed. However, Fort Ridgely was reinforced by Lieutenant Tim Sheehan and repulsed two costly assaults by Little Crow and Big Eagle (20–22 August 1862).

Forts Jackson and St Philip ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Union Flag-Officer David G. Farragut advanced up the Mississippi towards the Confederate city of New Orleans, where he attacked the key defences at Forts Jackson and St Philip, defended by General Johnson K. Duncan and Commander John K. Mitchell. When Farragut's squadron passed the defences and seized New Orleans itself, these downstream forts surrendered (16–28 April 1862).

Fort St David ❙ 1746 ❙ 1st Carnatic War

See Negapatam

Fort St David ❙ 1746–1748 ❙ 1st Carnatic War

Having captured the main British base in southeastern India at Madras, French Governor General Joseph Dupleix marched south against Fort St David. The beleaguered garrison was reinforced by British Admiral Thomas Griffin (March 1747) and was later saved by Admiral Edward Boscawen, who went on to attack Dupleix at Pondicherry (19 December 1746–11 August 1748).

Fort St David ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

As warfare resumed against Britain in India, newly arrived French Governor-General Comte Thomas Lally took a large force against the powerful British Fort St David, south of Pondicherry. After severe artillery damage and the arrival of a French fleet, the demoralised and poorly led garrison surrendered. Lally then moved inland to besiege Tanjore (29 April–2 June 1758).

Fort St George ❙ 1758–1759 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

See Madras

Fort St Joseph ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When Spain entered the war, Governor Don Bernardo de Galvez of Lousiana captured Mobile in British West Florida (March 1780) then, to avenge an attack at St Louis, sent Captain Eugenio Pourré and a mixed force up the Mississippi towards Detroit. Pourré surprised and briefly seized the British garrison at Fort St Joseph, claiming the area for Spain before returning downstream (12 February 1781).

Fort St Philip ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

See Forts Jackson and St Philip

Fort Sanders ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

General James Longstreet, attempting to capture Knoxville, Tennessee, from Union commander Ambose E. Burnside, was checked to the south at Campbell's Station (16 November), then stormed Fort Sanders, to the northwest. Entangled in Union defences, Longstreet's force lost about 500 casualties and 300 prisoners and he withdrew northeast through Bean's Station (29 November 1863).

Fort Schlosser ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

A cheeky raid across the Niagara River into New York State saw a small British force of militia and regulars under Colonel Thomas Clark attack Fort Schlosser, midway down the river opposite Chippewa. They withdrew after causing some damage and a larger-scale British assault occurred a few days later further south at Black Rock (5 July 1813).

Fort Schuyler ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Fort Stanwix

Fort Shelby ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

See Prairie du Chien

Fort Sinquefield ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

Two days after the massacre at Fort Mims, about 100 other Creeks under Prophet Francis (Hillis Hadjo) attacked nearby Fort Sinquefield, west of the Alabama near Grove Hill, held by 30 civilians and militia under Lieutenant James Bailey. Facing a spirited defence, the Indians were driven off with 11 killed—including Francis—and the garrison withdrew to Fort Madison (2 September 1813).

Fort Sitibaldi ❙ 1817 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

See Sitibaldi

Fort Smith ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

See Devil's Backbone

Fort Stanwix ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Supporting the British offensive from Canada, Colonel Barry St Leger advanced down the Mohawk against Fort Stanwix (modern Rome, New York), held by Colonels Peter Gansevoort and Marnius Willett. A relief column was repulsed downstream at Oriskany, but when General Benedict Arnold's main force approached, St Leger abandoned his siege and retreated (3–23 August 1777).

Fort Stedman ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a final offensive east from besieged Petersburg, Virginia, a dawn attack by General John B. Gordon captured Union Fort Stedman, very close to the Confederate Line. But the fort surrendered after a powerful counter-attack by Generals John G. Parke and John F. Hartranft. Gordon withdrew with 3,500 men lost, including 1,900 captured and Petersburg fell a week later (25 March 1865).

Fort Stephenson ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

Repulsed from Fort Meigs, west of Lake Erie in May, British General Henry Proctor made a further half-hearted assault (28 July) then advanced up the Sandusky in Ohio against Fort Stephenson, held by Major George Croghan.

Following an ineffective bombardment, Proctor and his Indian allies were driven off. Naval defeat on Lake Erie the next month ended his campaign (1 August 1813).

Fort Stevens ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate General Jubal A. Early, invading Maryland after victory at Lynchburg, defeated a Union force at the Monocacy, then advanced on Washington. However, the delaying action enabled veterans under Generals Horatio G. Wright and Alexander McCook to reinforce the capital and, after defeat to the northwest at Fort Stevens, Early fell back through Snicker's Ferry (11–12 July 1864).

Fort Sullivan ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

With North Carolina Loyalists defeated at Moore's Creek Bridge, British Admiral Sir Peter Parker and General Henry Clinton took an expedition against South Carolina, bombarding Colonel William Moultrie at Fort Sullivan outside Charleston Harbour. The British fleet was damaged and driven off in a humiliating defeat and the position was renamed Fort Moultrie (28 June 1776).

Fort Sumter ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

In the opening action of the war, Confederate General Pierre G. T. Beauregard demanded the surrender of the Union garrison of Fort Sumter in Charleston Harbour, South Carolina, defended by Major Robert Anderson, who capitulated following a heavy bombardment. While the shelling caused no casualties, the ensuing war cost the lives of over 620,000 soldiers (12–13 April 1861).

Fort Sumter ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

See Charleston Harbour

Fort Texas ❙ 1846 ❙ American-Mexican War

As the war began, Mexican Generals Francisco Meija and Pedro de Ampudia bombarded and besieged Major Jacob Brown at Fort Texas, on the Rio Grande opposite Matamoros. Although Brown was killed, Captain Edgar Hawkins held off the Mexicans until relieved by General Zachary Taylor advancing through Palo Alto. Nearby modern Brownsville is named for Brown (3–9 May 1846).

Fort Ticonderoga ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

British General James Abercrombie renewed the offensive from Lake George in eastern New York, leading a strong force against Fort Ticonderoga (French Fort Carillon) where Marquis Louis de Montcalm had established effective defensive lines. Abercrombie withdrew after losing almost 2,000 men in a foolhardy frontal assault and was replaced by General Jeffrey Amherst (8 July 1758).

Fort Ticonderoga ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

A year after a costly British repulse at Fort Ticonderoga, on Lake Champlain in eastern New York, General Jeffrey Amherst led a fresh assault against the French position, now held by Chevalier Francois-Charles de Bourlamaque. The French blew up the magazine and withdrew after a brief action. A few days later Amherst also captured Crown Point, ten miles to the north (26 July 1759).

Fort Ticonderoga ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

At the start of the war, Americans Colonel Benedict Arnold and Major Ethan Allen attacked Fort Ticonderoga, on Lake Champlain, held by Captain William Dalaplace and 50 men. Surprised at dawn, Dalaplace surrendered and the Americans secured about 80 guns for the continuing siege of Boston. A detached company then marched north against Crown Point (10 May 1775).

Fort Ticonderoga ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British General John Burgoyne launched a fresh offensive from Canada into New York, where he attacked the powerful Fort Ticonderoga, on the western shore of Lake Champlain, held by General Arthur St Clair. Heavily bombarded from the landward side, St Clair was forced to abandon the fort, evacuating by land and water through Hubbardton and Fort Anne (5–6 July 1777).

Fort Wagner ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Following a diversionary attack on the defences of Charleston Harbour, South Carolina, at Grimball's Landing, Union General Quincy Gillmore attacked further east at Fort Wagner, on Morris Island. The Union assault was repulsed by General Pierre G. T. Beauregard after costly fighting and the fort remained under siege until eventual Confederate evacuation (10 July–7 September 1863).

Fort Washington ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Just weeks after victory at White Plains, British General William Howe attacked the isolated American Fort Washington, on the northern end of Manhattan Island, held by Colonel Robert Magaw. General George Washington reached nearby Fort Lee with reinforcements, but after intense fighting, Magaw surrendered, yielding massive supplies of guns and ammunition (16 November 1776).

Fort Wayne ❙ 1790 ❙ Little Turtle's War

See Harmar's Defeat

Fort White ❙ 1850 ❙ 8th Cape Frontier War

Defeated at Boomah Pass, near the Keiskamma River, British survivors withdrew to nearby Fort White, south of Burnshill, where they came under siege by the great Xhosa Chief Sandile. A force of just 120 men under Captain John Mansergh of the 6th Regiment of Foot held off the Xhosa for two days with steady volley fire and Sandile eventually had to withdraw (25–26 December 1850).

Fort William Henry, Maine ❙ 1696 ❙ King William's War

In the final North American action of the war, Pierre le Moyne d'Iberville led a land and sea attack against Fort William Henry at Pemaquid, near modern Bristol, Maine, held by Captain Pascoe Chubb. Supported by Abnaki Indians under Jean-Vincent de Saint Castin, d'Iberville forced the British garrison to surrender and they were transported to Boston (14–15 August 1696).

Fort William Henry, New York ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Marquis Louis de Montcalm marching south from Ticonderoga took a large French and Indian force against Fort William Henry, at the head of Lake George in eastern New York. After heavy bombardment, Colonel George Monro surrendered in return for safe withdrawal, but the garrison were treacherously massacred by the Indians. Montcalm destroyed the fort and withdrew (4–9 August 1757).

Fort Zeelandia ❙ 1661–1662 ❙ Chinese Conquest of Taiwan

Defeated by the Manchu at Nanjing in 1659, Ming General Zheng Chenggong (known as Koxinga) withdrew to Dutch-held Taiwan and attacked Fort Zeelandia, in the southwest, near Tainan. A long siege cost about 1,600 Dutch lives before Governor Fredrik Coyet surrendered. The Ming held the island until defeat by the Manchu in July 1683 at Penghu (1 May 1661–1 February 1662).

Forum Gallorum ❙ 43 BC ❙ Wars of the Second Triumvirate

During renewed war after the murder of Julius Caesar, Decimus Brutus was besieged by Mark Antony at Mutina (modern Modena). At nearby Forum Gallorum, Antony ambushed and defeated a relief army under Gaius Vibius Pansa, who was fatally wounded. Antony was then attacked and routed by Aulus Hirtius and was forced back to his camp outside Mutina (14 April 43 BC).

Forum Trebronii ❙ 251 ❙ 1st Gothic War
See Abrittus

Fossalta ❙ 1248 ❙ Imperial-Papal Wars
Amid continuing warfare between the cities of northern Italy, pro-Papal Guelfs were forced out of Florence, triggering a major offensive by Bologna against Ghibelline leader Enzio (Hensius), son of Emperor Frederick II. At Fossalta, Philip Ugoni of Brescia led the Guelfs to a great victory. Enzio was captured and spent his remaining 22 years as a prisoner in Bologna (26 May 1248).

Foule Point ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)
Arriving at Mauritius to find it had already fallen, three French frigates under Captain Francois Roquebert headed for Madagascar, where they were attacked off Foule Point by Captain Charles Schomberg with three frigates and a brig. Sharp fighting saw Roquebert defeated and killed, while one other French ship surrendered at Tamatave and the third fled back to France (20 May 1811).

Four Courts ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War
When Irish Republican forces seized Dublin's Four Courts, they came under heavy attack by government forces under General Patrick Daly, supported by General Emmet Dalton. In action which marked the start of the war, artillery smashed the buildings, which were taken by storm. Commander Ernie O'Malley surrendered, though other forces held out in O'Connell Street (28–30 June 1922).

Four Days Battle ❙ 1666 ❙ 2nd Dutch War
After unwisely despatching Prince Rupert away down the English Channel, English Admiral George Monck was attacked off North Foreland by a large Dutch fleet under Mihiel de Ruyter. Monck was almost overwhelmed before Rupert's return on the third day prevented total disaster. The English retreated to the Thames having lost 23 ships, while de Ruyter lost only four (11–14 June 1666).

Four Lakes ❙ 1858 ❙ Yakima Indian Wars
When a small Federal force was defeated at Pine Creek by Indians in Washington resisting removal to a reservation, Colonel George Wright took 600 men against rebel tribes in the Columbia Basin. At Four Lakes, just southwest of Spokane, Wright defeated a force of Coer d'Alanes, Spokanes and Palouses, with decisive victory a few days later on the Spokane Plain (1 September 1858).

Fowltown ❙ 1817 ❙ 1st Seminole Indian War
At war with the Seminole in southwestern Georgia, General Edmund Gaines ordered Major David Twigg against Chief Neamathla's village at Fowltown. Both sides suffered casualties in a sharp action and, after the Indians attacked an army patrol on the Apalachicola River, General Andrew Jackson invaded Spanish Florida and marched towards Pensacola (21 November 1817).

Foz d'Aronce ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
Marshal Michel Ney, retreating from the failed French invasion of Portugal, fought rearguard actions against Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington at Redhina, Cazal Novo and Condeixa. However, with Coimbra occupied by the allies, Ney was forced northeast through Foz d'Aronce on the Ceira. In a rare reverse, he was driven back under shellfire at the cost of heavy losses (15 March 1811).

Fraga ❙ 1134 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain
During his offensive against Muslim Spain, King Alfonso I of Aragon—El Batallador, the fighter—won great victories at Saragossa and Cutanda. Besieging Fraga, west of Lérida, he suffered his first defeat at the hands of the brilliant new General Yahya Ben Gania and reinforcements from Cordova. Alfonso died two months later, apparently from battle wounds (17 July 1134).

France ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

As Germany swept into Belgium and the Netherlands, Panzers stormed across France from the Ardennes and raced for the coast. There were bold counter-attacks at Laon and Arras, but Paris fell, leaving perhaps 400,000 by-passed men to surrender on the useless Maginot Line. As the Channel Ports fell, survivors evacuated through Dunkirk and France capitulated (10 May–21 June 1940).

Frankenau ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

See Orlau-Frankenau

Frankenhausen ❙ 1525 ❙ German Peasants' War

On campaign against peasant armies in Thuringia, Langrave Philipp of Hesse secured victory at Fulda (3 May), then was joined by Saxon troops advancing on rebel-held Mühlhausen. To the east at Frankenhausen, rebel leader Thomas Muntzer suffered a bloody, decisive defeat and was later tortured to death. Mühlhausen quickly surrendered, effectively ending the war in Thuringia (15 May 1525).

Frankfort on the Oder ❙ 1631 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

Gustavus Adolphus advanced up the River Oder to divert the Imperial siege of Magdeburg and drove Catholic General Haimbald von Schaumberg back on Frankfort. The Swedish King took the city by storm and, although von Schaumberg escaped with some of the Imperial cavalry, the garrison was killed or captured and Frankfort was sacked, helping trigger the outrage at Magdeburg (13 April 1631).

Franklin ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Following Confederate victories south of Nashville, Tennessee, at Thompson's Station and Brentwood, Confederate General Earl Van Dorn advanced on Franklin, defended by General Gordon Granger. A flank counter-attack by Union cavalry under General David S. Stanley almost led to disaster before Van Dorn was finally defeated and withdrew south to Spring Hill (10 April 1863).

Franklin ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Confederate commander John B. Hood pursued General John M. Schofield north across Tennessee, he failed to trap the Union army at Spring Hill, then met Schofield again further north on the Harpeth River at Franklin. Leading a bloody front assault against strong defences, Hood suffered more than 6,000 casualties, yet continued his ill-fated advance on Nashville (30 November 1864).

Frastenz ❙ 1499 ❙ Swabian War

In their final struggle for freedom, the Swiss cantons defeated the Habsburg cities of the Swabian League at Schwaderloch, then Confederation forces under Heinrich Wolleb stormed the Germans heavily entrenched at Frastenz, on the River Ill, south of Feldkirch. The Swiss captured the camp in the face of heavy artillery fire at the cost of over 4,000 Swabian casualties (20 April 1499).

Fratesci ❙ 1659 ❙ Wallachian-Turkish War

Campaigning against the Turks close to the Danube, Mihnea III Radu of Wallachia defeated an Ottoman force at Fratesci, just north of Giurgiu. However, he was later overwhelmed and the battle was said to be the last victory over the Turks in Romania for more than 200 years. It was quickly followed by the Ottoman conquest of Transylvania in 1660 at Gilau and Nagyvarad (23 November 1659).

Fraubrunnen ❙ 1375 ❙ Guglers' War

During a truce in the Hundred Years War, Enguerrand VII, Sire de Coucy, took a large army of English and French mercenaries into Swiss Aargau, which he claimed from Duke Leopold III of Austria. After several failures, his troops (known as Guglers for their hooded cloaks) were decisively defeated at Fraubrunnen, northeast of Bern, by a Swiss-Bernese army and de Coucy withdrew (27 December 1375).

Frauenberg ❙ 1525 ❙ German Peasants' War

Peasant commander Wendel Hipler took the offensive in Franconia and seized Würzburg, then besieged nearby Frauenberg, held by Conrad III von Thuenguen (Bishop of Würzburg and Duke of Franconia). A failed assault by Florian Geyer cost over 400 casualties and the fortress held out until relieved by Georg Truchsess von Waldburg (5 June) after victory at Königshofen (15 May 1525).

Fraustadt ❙ 1706 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

As Charles XII of Sweden marched against Russians under General George Ogilvie at Grodno in eastern Poland, Saxon-Russian reinforcements under General Johann Schullenberg were utterly routed at Fraustadt (modern Wschowa), southwest of Leszno, by Swedish General Karl Gustav Rehnskjold. The Russians at Grodno then withdrew without a battle (3 February 1706).

Frayser's Farm ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See White Oak Swamp

Fredericia ❙ 1657 ❙ 1st Northern War

Attacking the Danish mainland, Swedish forces under Count Karl Gustav Wrangel besieged the city of Fredericia in eastern Jutland. When Danish Grand Marshal Andre Bilde was killed, his garrison of over 3,000 surrendered and Denmark quickly sued for peace. However, war soon broke out again and Wrangel captured Funen, then besieged Copenhagen (24 October 1657).

Fredericia ❙ 1849 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War

In resumed hostilities against Frederick VII of Denmark, Schleswig and Holstein rebels and their German allies, led by Prussian General Eduard von Bonin, defeated the Danes at Duppel, then besieged Fredericia in eastern Jutland. A courageous Danish sortie then caused heavy German losses and Prussia made a separate armistice, leaving the Duchies to fight alone (5 May–6 July 1849).

Fredericksburg ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

General Ambrose E. Burnside took command of the Union army after Antietam, advancing across Virginia against General Robert E. Lee to attack over the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg. After terrible losses in a frontal assault, which cost 13,000 Union and 5,000 Confederate casualties, Burnside was forced to withdraw. However, Lee was unable to follow up his victory (11–15 December 1862).

Fredericksburg ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On a fresh offensive into Virginia, Union commander Joseph Hooker crossed the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg and left General John Sedgewick to capture the town from Confederate General Jubal A. Early. Early was defeated and driven out, although at nearby Salem Church he helped repulse Sedgewick's attempt to reinforce Hooker at Chancellorsville (3 May 1863).

Fredericktown ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Union Colonel Joseph B. Plummer resolved to secure southeast Missouri and marched west from the Mississippi against Fredericktown, which had already been seized by Colonel William P. Carlin from Pilot Knob. Confederate General M. Jeff Thompson's Missouri State Guard was badly defeated in battle nearby, then fled south towards Greenville and dispersed (21 October 1861).

Fredrikshald ❙ 1718 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Returning from exile after his disastrous defeat at Poltava in 1709, Charles XII of Sweden raised a fresh initiative against Danish Norway. While besieging Fredrikshald (modern Halden), he was shot dead and the campaign was abandoned, though naval action continued at Osel and Grengam. Persistent claims that the King was assassinated led to his exhumation as late as 1917 (22 December 1718).

Fredrikshamn ❙ 1789 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

A year after a previous ill-prepared venture was repulsed off Hogland, Gustav III of Sweden again assaulted Russian Fredrikshamn (modern Hamina) on the Gulf of Finland to open the way to St Petersburg. Gustav's army was heavily repulsed and the King withdrew after a Swedish naval defeat the same day in the Svenskund. He was beaten again a week later at sea off Hogfors (24 August 1789).

Fredrikshamn ❙ 1790 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

Gustav III of Sweden led a third attempt to capture Fredrikshamn (modern Hamina), on the Gulf of Finland, and to threaten St Petersburg, attacking a Russian flotilla at sea nearby. When the Russians withdrew short of ammunition, Gustav did not immediately follow up his victory and a Swedish assault on the port two days later was repulsed with heavy losses (15 & 17–18 May 1790).

Freeman's Farm ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Saratoga, New York (1st)

Freiberg, Saxony ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

In the final action of the war, Prince Henry Ludwig, brother of Frederick II of Prussia, attacked a Saxon-Austrian force under Marshal Jean-Baptiste Serbelloni at Freiberg, southwest of Dresden. Supported by the great Prussian General Friedrich von Seydlitz, Prince Henry secured this relatively minor victory and the war soon came to an end (29 October 1762).

Freiburg, Württemberg ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

After Baron Franz von Mercy's Bavarians captured Freiburg, Louis II Duke d'Enghien joined with Marshal Henri de Turenne in an heroic assault against entrenched positions. The French suffered terrible losses in two failed attacks and were repulsed attacking Mercy's rearguard as he withdrew. However, d'Enghien claimed the victory and secured the middle Rhine (4, 5 & 9 August 1644).

Freiburg, Württemberg ❙ 1713 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

When Austria alone resumed the war against France, Marshal Claude Villars crossed the Rhine and, after capturing Landau, laid siege to Freiburg. Villars entered the city (30 September) after defeating Imperial commander Prince Eugène of Savoy in the field. Six weeks later the Governor surrendered the citadel and the war finally came to an end (22 September–13 November 1713).

Frenchman's Butte ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

Canadian cavalry General Thomas Strange pursued the Cree Indian Big Bear (Mistahimaskwa) west after victory at Batoche, attacking the elusive rebels two weeks later at Frenchman's Butte, in northwest Saskatchewan, near Fort Pitt, north of Lloydminster. However, the government forces were outflanked and repulsed and the Cree escaped further north towards Loon Lake (28 May 1885).

Frenchtown ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

Determined to regain the initiative on Lake Erie after the loss of Detroit, American General James Winchester seized Frenchtown (modern Munroe, Michigan) on the Raisin River. A counter-attack across the ice by British Colonel Henry Proctor and Indians under Roundhead saw Winchester suffer heavy losses. He and 500 men surrendered and some were murdered (21 January 1813).

Fresnay ❙ 1420 ❙ Hundred Years War

Thomas Montacute Earl of Salisbury, advancing south from Alencon in northwestern France, took several towns, then besieged Fresnay. A large Franco-Scottish relief force marching north from Le Mans under Marshal Pierre de Rieux (alias Rochefort) was routed by John Holland Earl of Huntingdon, who inflicted perhaps 3,000 casualties. Rieux was captured and Fresnay surrendered (3 March 1420).

Freteval ❙ 1194 ❙ French War of Richard I

Ransomed from captivity on his way home from the Crusades, Richard I—the Lion Heart—regained control of England, then sailed for France to recover land taken by his former Crusader ally King Phillip II Augustus. At Freteval, east of Le Mans, Richard defeated Phillip's army and forced him to yield the English domains. After a brief peace, their struggle resumed in 1198 at Gisors (3 July 1194).

Freyer's Farm ❙ 1904 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

With Herero rebels fighting in the north of German Southwest Africa, Nama tribesmen in the south joined in and, at Freyer's Farm, east of Bersheba, Jakob Morenga ambushed a pursuing 30-strong detachment under Lieutenant Baron Oscar von Stempel. Four German officers were killed in the attack, including von Stempel, marking the start of the so-called Herero War (30 August 1904).

Frezenberg ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

When British forces fell back to new defensive lines northeast of Ypres after action at Gravenstafel and St Julien, Duke Albrecht launched a fresh attack east of Ypres on the Frezenberg Ridge. In the offensive's turning point, new British commander Sir Herbert Plumer's stubborn defence held firm. The Germans soon made one final attempt at Bellewaarde (8–13 May 1915).

Fribourg ❙ 1340 ❙ Burgundian-Swiss Wars

Despite defeat at Laupen near Bern in 1339, the rival Swiss city of Fribourg and its Austrian and Burgundian allies continued the inter-city war until the Bernese army of Lord John of Bubenberg and Rudolf von Erlach drove the Fribourgers to their city wall and inflicted a heavy defeat. Two days later, Fribourg was stormed and much of it was burned to the ground (24–26 April 1340).

Friedberg, Bavaria ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

On the day that Austria defeated France at Amberg, another Austrian force under General Maximilian Latour fared less well further south at Friedberg, near Augsburg. Latour was routed by French General Jean Victor Moreau, although a further French defeat in the north at Würzburg forced Moreau to begin withdrawing towards the Rhine through Biberach (24 August 1796).

Friedberg, Hesse ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Generals Jean-Baptiste Jourdan and Jean-Baptiste Kléber led a renewed French advance east of the Rhine, concentrating their forces north of Frankfurt against Austrian General Alexander Wartensleben, who had been ordered by Archduke Charles Louis to hold Friedberg. The Austrian right wing was routed in heavy fighting nearby and Wartensleben fell back on Frankfurt (10 July 1796).

Friedland ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

A fresh spring offensive in eastern Prussia following the winter carnage at Eylau saw Russians under General Levin Bennigsen advance against Napoleon Bonaparte on the Alle River at nearby Friedland (modern Pravdinsk) without waiting for General Anton Lestocq's Prussians. The Russians lost massive casualties in a one-sided disaster and Tsar Alexander I sued for peace (14 June 1807).

Friedlingen ❙ 1702 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

When Elector Maximilian Emanuel of Bavaria joined forces with France, Austrian commander Prince Louis Margrave of Baden was driven back across the Rhine from Landau by Duke Claude de Villars. In the Black Forest at Friedlingen, the French infantry was initially repulsed before a cavalry attack defeated Prince Louis.

Villars was created a Marshal of France (14 October 1702).

Friedrichstadt ❙ 1850 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War

Abandoned by Prussia after failure at Fredericia in mid-1849, Schleswig and Holstein fought on alone against Danish reoccupation and, after decisive defeat at Idstedt in July, the rebel Duchies made a final effort to storm the well-fortified town of Friedrichstadt on the Eider. They were bloodily repulsed after a week and the war ended with Danish rule reimposed (29 September–6 October 1850).

Frigidus ❙ 394 ❙ Later Roman Military Civil Wars

When the Frankish Roman General Arbogastes murdered Valentinian II, he had his ally Eugenius appointed Emperor. But aided by desertion in the opposing army, Theodosius, Emperor in the east, defeated the usurpers at the Frigidus River, east of Aquileia, near the Adriatic. Eugenius was executed, Arbogastes committed suicide, and the empire was briefly reunited (6 September 394).

Froeschwiller ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Generals Charles Pichegru and Louis Lazare Hoche recovered from French defeat at Kaiserslautern and weeks later attacked Austrian General Dagobert Wurmser between Haguenau, on the Moder, north of Strasbourg, and the nearby village of Froeschwiller (Wörth). A confused five-day action saw Wurmser beaten and withdraw north to lose again at Wissembourg (18–22 December 1793).

Froeschwiller ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

See Wörth

Frog Lake ❙ 1885 ❙ 2nd Riel Rebellion

While Canadian Indians besieged Battleford, the Cree Kapapamahchakwew (Wandering Spirit) and Ayimisis (son of Big Bear) attacked the settlement at Frog Lake, on the North Saskatchewan just inside Alberta, killing Indian agent Thomas Quinn and eight others. Wandering Spirit eluded defeat the following month at Frenchman's Butte but was eventually hanged for the deed (2 April 1885).

Frontenac ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Fort Frontenac

Frontier ❙ 1958 ❙ Algerian War

Determined to cut the flow of men and arms into Algeria, France built a 200-mile electrified fence along the Tunisian border and sent large forces to prevent the ALN breaking through. A series of brutal actions, collectively known as the Battle of the Frontier, cost the insurgents perhaps 6,000 killed or captured and gave France a significant tactical and strategic victory (January–June 1958).

Frontiers ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

As German forces swept through Belgium towards France, French commander Joseph Joffre invaded Alsace and Lorraine, then turned north to try and stop the German onrush. The principal actions of the Battles of the Frontiers were fought at Lorraine, Ardennes, Charleroi and Mons, with a key siege at Namur and the famous rearguard action at Le Cateau (14–27 August 1914).

Front Royal ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

After victory in the Shenandoah at McDowell, Confederate General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson attacked Front Royal, Virginia. Supported by Colonel Richard Taylor's Louisiana Tigers, Jackson stormed the town and, at nearby Cedarville, forced the surrender of almost 900 Union troops, including commander Colonel John R. Kenly. He then marched north on Winchester (23 May 1862).

Front Royal ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Cedarville

Fryeburg ❙ 1725 ❙ Dummer's War

Amid skirmishing with Indians in northern New England, Governor William Dummer of Massachusetts offered a bounty for Indian scalps. A raiding party under Captain John Lovewell was ambushed by Abnaki near modern Fryeburg, Maine, where Lovewell and 19 others were killed. The Indians also suffered heavy losses and withdrew. The fight effectively ended the war (8 May 1725).

Fucine Lake ❙ 89 BC ❙ Roman Social War

Fighting Rome over rights of citizenship, the Marsi and Samnite tribes of central Italy led an armed revolt, during which Roman commander Lucius Porcius Cato was attacked by the Marsi at the now-drained Fucine Lake (modern Fucino), in the Apennines near Arezzano. Cato was defeated and killed, but later the same year, the Italian allies were heavily defeated at Asculum and Pompeii.

Fuengirola ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As a diversion to lure French General Francois Sébastiani from Malaga, a British-Polish force from Gibraltar under Andrew Lord Blayney landed by sea at nearby Fuengirola. Blayney intended to re-embark and attack unprotected Malaga, but he left it too late and was trapped at Fuengirola. Sébastiani routed the landing force and took Blayney prisoner (13–15 October 1810).

Fuentarrabia ❙ 1638 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Prince Henry II de Bourbon Prince of Condé resolved to help France against Imperial Spain in the lowlands, invading Spain itself to assist Catalan rebels and in the futile hope of advancing towards Madrid. Outside the frontier fortress of Fuentarrabia, at the mouth of the Bidassao River, he was routed and his expedition ended in disaster, although France continued to aid the rebellion against Madrid.

Fuentarrabia ❙ 1836 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Following success near San Sebastian at Hernani, General Sir George de Lacy Evans of the British Legion took 5,000 men east against Spanish Carlists at Fuentarrabia. However, overcaution by General William Reid allowed the Carlists to secure a key bridge near the town. The bridge was taken after bloody fighting, though heavy losses forced Evans to abandon his offensive (11–13 July 1836).

Fuentarrabia ❙ 1837 ❙ 1st Carlist War

See Irun

Fuente de Cantos ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Despite defeat at Villagarcia, a month later Spanish General Pedro La Romana renewed his advance towards Seville, supported by General George Madden's Portuguese cavalry. Facing a massive counter-attack by Marshal Édouard Mortier, La Romana began to withdraw, but at Fuente de Cantos, his rearguard under Madden and General Martin La Carrera was heavily defeated (15 September 1810).

Fuentes d'Onoro ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As a French relief army approached the Allied siege of Almeida, Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington marched south to the heights of Fuentes d'Onoro. In two separate engagements Marshal André Masséna was repulsed with heavy losses and withdrew. Meanwhile, the garrison of Almeida broke out and France lost its last foothold in Portugal (3 & 5 May 1811).

Fujigawa ❙ 1180 ❙ Gempei War

Recovering from disastrous defeat at Ishibashiyama, Minamoto Yoritomo quickly gathered a fresh army and again marched on Japan's ruling Taira. Securing a base at Kamakura, he surprised Taira Koremori at the Fujigawa, west of Mount Fuji. In the first major Minamoto victory, the Taira fled to Kyoto, but soon recovered to defeat Yoritomo's uncle Yukiie at the Sunomata (9 November 1180).

Fulford ❙ 1066 ❙ Norwegian Invasion of England

Harold Godwinson Earl of Wessex was no sooner elected King of England than he faced an invasion of Northumbria by Harald Hadrada of Norway, supported by Harold's own estranged brother Tostig. Just outside of York at Fulford, Harold's loyal brothers Edwin and Morcar were defeated and the King rushed north to meet the invaders at Stamford Bridge (20 September 1066).

Funen ❙ 1658 ❙ 1st Northern War

Having captured Fredericia and Danish Jutland, Charles X of Sweden and Count Karl Gustav Wrangel took advantage of an extreme winter to cross the frozen Little Belt and attack Funen Island. Despite Danish attempts to smash up the ice with artillery fire, Funen fell after heavy fighting. The Swedes then marched east to capture Zealand and besiege Copenhagen (February 1658).

Fuqiao ❙ 494 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

Determined to avenge the death of his father He-lü, of wounds after defeat at Zuili (496 BC), Fuchai of Wu took a large army into neighbouring Yue. A decisive battle at Fuqiao, near the mouth of the Yangzi, saw Fuchai inflict a crushing defeat on the army of Yue. King Goujian was forced to accept a humiliating peace, but he eventually recovered and struck back at the Lizhe.

Furnes ❙ 1297 ❙ Franco-Flemish Wars

When Guy de Dampierre Count of Flanders declared for Edward I of England, he was immediately attacked by Philip IV of France. Edward I took a force to assist his Flemish ally. However, before he arrived, Count Guy was defeated at Furnes (modern Veurne) and died in captivity. Philip conquered Flanders, though five years later, the Count's son defeated the invaders at Courtrai.

Furth ❙ 1632 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

See Alte Veste

Fusan ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Pusan

Fushimi ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration

After the restoration of Imperial government in Japan, former Tokugawa Shogun Yoshinobu let his supporters persuade him to march on the court at Kyoto. Just southeast at Fushimi and Toba, the 10,000-strong Shogunal army was heavily defeated by 6,000 "Imperial" troops from Satsuma and Choshu. Yoshinobu retreated to Edo, where his allies were routed at Ueno (27 January 1868).

Fustat ❙ 640–641 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Egypt

See Babylon, Egpyt

Futtehabad ❙ 1041 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

See Fatehabad

Futtehabad ❙ 1879 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

See Fatehabad

Futtehpore ❙ 1799 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

See Fatehpur

Futtehpore ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Fatehpur

Fuzhou ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War

After a failed French attack on Chilung in Taiwan, Admiral Amédée Courbet sailed up the Min in Fujian against the shipyards and arsenal at Fuzhou. He destroyed Chinese ships on the river, then bombarded the city, causing massive damage. China formally declared war a few days later. The attack cost Courbet ten killed and 48 wounded while the Chinese lost over 2,000 casualties (23 August 1884).

Fuzhou ❙ 1926 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

While Nationalist commander Chiang Kai-shek advanced in central China towards Wuchang, his General, He Yingqin, on the coast at Shantou (Swatow) repulsed an invasion by Zhou Yinren, then counter-attacked into Fujian. The key city of Fuzhou on the Min Delta finally fell and He Yingqin soon supported the advance further north against Hangzhou (13 October–9 December 1926).

Fyvie ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars

James Graham Marquis of Montrose and 800 Royalists withdrawing into the Highlands after the sack of Aberdeen in September were surprised at nearby Fyvie by Covenanter forces under Archibald Campbell Marquis of Argyll. Although outnumbered five to one, Montrose drove off four attacks before withdrawing. He defeated Argyll two months later at Inveraray (24 October 1644).

G

Gadebusch ❙ 1712 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Swedish General Magnus Stenbock repulsed a Danish invasion of Sweden at Helsingborg, then took his army south to protect Swedish territory in Germany. Attacked at Gadebusch in Mecklenberg by Frederick IV of Denmark, who was aided by Saxon cavalry, Stenbock's outnumbered force achieved a remarkable victory. He was defeated the following May at Tonning (20 December 1712).

Gaeta ❙ 1435 ❙ Aragon's Conquest of Naples

Determined to press his claim to Naples, Alfonso V of Aragon besieged nearby Gaeta, held for Genoa by Francisco Spinola. With the city almost starved into surrender, Genoese Admiral Biagio Assereto arrived and, off nearby Isla de Ponza, Alfonso was routed and captured, along with his two brothers. Alfonso was later released and defeated René of Anjou to secure Naples (5 August 1435).

Gaeta ❙ 1860–1861 ❙ 2nd Italian War of Independence

Advancing from victory at the Volturno, near Capua, Giuseppe Garibaldi and Piedmontese General Enrico Cialdini besieged the last remaining forces of Francis II of Naples at the port of Gaeta, northwest of Naples. Francis abdicated after the city fell to Cialdini (created Duke of Gaeta) and Victor Emmanuel was proclaimed the first King of unified Italy (3 November 1860–13 February 1861).

Gafsa ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See El Guettar

Gafulford ❙ 825 ❙ Later Wars of Wessex

In his campaign to restore the authority of the Kingdom of Wessex, overshadowed by Mercia, King Egbert of Wessex campaigned in Cornwall against the local southern Welsh. In alliance with Devon he won a sharp victory at Gafulford (modern Galford in Devon), securing eastern Cornwall for Wessex. He then turned against Mercia at Ellandun.

Gaines' Mill ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Continuing his offensive east of Richmond after Beaver Dam Creek, Confederate General Robert E. Lee initiated the third of the Seven Days' Battles, attacking General Fitz-John Porter north of the Chickahominy at Gaines' Mill, Virginia. Lee's superior force was defeated with greater losses, but Richmond was saved as the Union began withdrawing through Savage's Station (27 July 1862).

Gainsborough ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Francis Williams Baron Willoughby and Oliver Cromwell marched to relieve the Royalist siege of Gainsborough, Lincolnshire, and defeated and killed Colonel Sir Charles Cavendish. When new Royalist forces appeared under William Cavendish Earl of Newcastle, Cromwell's Ironsides cavalry withdrew, though Willoughby's infantry were lost with the eventual fall of the town (28 July 1643).

Gaixial ❙ 202 BC ❙ Chu-Han War

Amid warlord rivalry after the collapse of the Qin (Ch'in) Dynasty, Liu Bang broke the truce agreed after Chenggao (204 BC) and resumed war against Xiang Yu. After a bloody campaign, Xiang Yu suffered a crushing defeat at Gaixial (Kai-hsia) in Anhui and committed suicide. Liu Bang established the 215-year Western Han Dynasty as Emperor Gao Zu, the first commoner to rule China.

Gajalhatti Pass ❙ 1790 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War

See Sathinungulum

Galaxidi ❙ 1821 ❙ Greek War of Independence

In order to secure the Gulf of Corinth, Turkish Admiral Kara Ali sent the Egyptian squadron under Ismael Djebel Akhdar (Ismael Gibraltar), east from Patras to attack Galaxidi (modern Galaxídhion). The Ottoman ships destroyed the town and port with long-range guns and captured 34 ships, though the action could not delay the fall of Tripolitza just a few days later (1 October 1821).

Galiabur ❙ 1920 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

During a major campaign against Muhammad Abdullah Hassan of Somaliland, British forces secured inland forts around Baran, while a naval party under Captain Gilbert Hewett led an assault on the coastal fort at Galiabur, west of Las Khoria. About 200 Dervishes fought to the death before Galiabur fell, securing the north coast. The Mullah fled inland to Taleh (6 February 1920).

Galicia ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

A huge campaign across southeast Poland and modern Ukraine saw Austrian forces advance through Krasnik and Komárow, while further south Russians crossed the Zlota Lipa and Gnila Lipa and took Lemberg after Rawa Russka and Gorodok. Austria abandoned Galicia except Przemysl at the cost of 400,000 men, while Russia lost 250,000 (18 August–21 September 1914).

Gallabat ❙ 1889 ❙ Sudanese-Ethiopian War

Determined to avenge defeat at Debra Sina in 1887, Yohannes IV of Abyssinia took a massive army against Mahdist General Zaki Tamal on the Atbara at Gallabat, opposite Metemma. Abyssinians over-ran the Mahdist positions, but when Yohannes was killed his army withdrew and were massacred as they fled. Gallabat is reputedly the last major battle fought with edged weapons (9 March 1889).

Gallabat ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Soon after Italy joined the war, Italian forces had entered Sudan from Ethiopia and British General William Slim later mounted a counter-offensive near Gallabat. Despite initial success, lack of air cover and armour eventually forced Slim to withdraw after heavy fighting. Two months later, a renewed British advance succeeded further north through Agordat (6–9 November 1940).

Gallinero ❙ 1832 ❙ Mexican Civil Wars

Supporting a rising against President Anastasio Bustamente, General Esteban Moctezuma seized San Luis Potosi after victory at Poza de las Carmelos in June, then met Bustamente and 4,000 men at nearby Puerto del Gallinero. After heavy losses on both sides, Moctezuma withdrew with about 2,000 casualties. Bustamente reoccupied San Luis Potosi, but soon lost Puebla (17 September 1832).

Gallipoli ❙ 1354 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

Ottoman forces under Suleyman Pasha (son of Sultan Orchan) won a civil war for Byzantine Emperor John VI Cantacuzenus in Thrace at Didymoteichon (1352), then refused to evacuate the Gallipoli Isthmus. When a great earthquake shattered the walls of Gallipoli two years later, Suleyman seized the city, which became the beachhead for Turkish conquest in Europe (2 March 1354).

Gallipoli ❙ 1366 ❙ Byzantine-Ottoman Wars

When Pope Urban V declared a crusade against the Ottomans, one of the few who actively campaigned was Count Amadeus VI of Savoy, who led a fleet of galleys and 1,500 men to the Dardanelles. A sharp action captured Gallipoli (modern Gelibolu) but Amadeus withdrew after a bloody incursion into the Black Sea, handing the city to the Byzantines (24 August 1366).

Gallipoli ❙ 1416 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

In response to a new Venetian campaign of conquest in Dalmatia, Ottoman Sultan Mehmed I sent his fleet of over 100 ships under Cali Bey from Gallipoli. However, in a brilliant surprise attack, Venetian Admiral Pietro Loredan destroyed the Turkish fleet at Gallipoli. Emperor Manuel II then intervened to arrange a short-lived peace (29 May 1416).

Gallipoli ❙ 1915–1916 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

Following the navy's failure to storm the Dardanelles Narrows, British and French forces landed on Gallipoli Peninsula at Helles and Anzac and later at Suvla Bay. After failed offensives including Krithia, Sari Bair and Scimitar Hill, evacuation ended the disastrous campaign, which had cost each side perhaps 250,000 casualties, many lost to disease (25 April 1915–9 January 1916).

Galveston ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

While blockading the Texas Coast, Union Admiral David G. Farragut captured Sabine Pass outside Port Arthur, then ordered Commander William B. Renhsaw to force the surrender of Galveston, to the west, defended by Colonels Joseph J. Cook and Xavier B. Debray. The port surrendered after a brief exchange of fire, but was lost again a few months later (4 October 1862).

Galveston ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Confederate commander John B. Macgruder led a dawn attack on New Year's Day, surprising Galveston, Texas, which had previously surrendered without much struggle. Colonel Isaac S. Burrell's garrison fought hard before surrendering and naval Commander William B. Renshaw died scuttling his flagship. However, most of the Union squadron escaped to resume the blockade (1 January 1863).

Gámeza ❙ 1819 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

As Republican commander Simón Bolívar advanced through western Colombia, General Francisco de Santander's division met Spanish Colonel José María Barreiro at the Gámeza River near Tunja. Barreiro was driven back from the bridge, but held an inaccessible fortress at the nearby Peña de Tópaga. Bolívar withdrew to Tasco and attacked again at Pantano de Vargas (12 July 1819).

Gammelsdorf ❙ 1313 ❙ Habsburg Wars of Succession

Following the death of Henry VII of Germany in 1313, the Habsburg Frederick of Austria and the Wittelsbach candidate Louis of Bavaria both claimed the crown. In the ensuing civil war, Louis defeated Frederick at Gammelsdorf, west of the Isar from Landshut, and was crowned as Louis IV. The costly dispute continued until Frederick's eventual defeat at Mühldorf (November 1313).

Gamonal ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Napoleon Bonaparte invaded Spain with a large army and sent Marshal Nicolas Soult to threaten Madrid. Between the Ruevena and Arlanzon Rivers east of Burgos at Gamonal, Soult surprised and virtually destroyed a Spanish army under General Ramon Patigno Count Belvedere, inflicting massive casualties and taking all his guns. Soult later seized Burgos (10 November 1808).

Ganale Doria ❙ 1936 ❙ 2nd Italo-Ethiopian War

While Italian forces in northern Ethiopia prepared to attack in the Tembien, General Rudolfo Graziani in the south advanced from Dolo against Ras Desta, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie. Attacking along the Ganale Doria with large-scale use of mustard gas, Graziani routed the Ethiopians and drove the survivors into the desert, then captured the ruins of Negelli (12–15 January 1936).

Gandamak ❙ 1809 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

See Nimla

Gandamak ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Jagdalak

Gandarus ❙ 38 BC ❙ Roman-Parthian Wars

See Gindarus

Gandesa ❙ 1874 ❙ 2nd Carlist War

As Don Alfonso de Bourbon, brother of the Spanish pretender Don Carlos VII, assembled his forces northwest of Tortosa, Liberal commander Colonel Eulogio Despujol attacked a strong position at Gandesa, held by Carlist Colonel Tomás Segarra. The Carlists were driven out with over 100 men killed in a costly defeat. Don Alfonso soon led an offensive south against Cuenca (4 June 1874).

Gandzha ❙ 1588 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

In the wake of the costly Turkish capture of Tabriz, new Turkish commander Ferhad Pasha defeated the Persians near Baghdad, then joined the Governor of Shirwan to invade Karabagh in Azerbaijan. Following fierce fighting, Ferhad besieged and captured Gandzha (later Kirovabad). Shah Abbas made peace in 1590, ceding Tabriz and Shirwan to the Turks.

Gandzha ❙ 1826 ❙ Russo-Persian Wars

See Yelizavetpol

Ganesh Khind ❙ 1817 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War

See Kirkee

Gangiri ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Kasganj

Gangut ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Hango

Gannoruwa ❙ 1638 ❙ Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

With a disastrous Portuguese expedition destroyed at Radenivela in 1630, Captain-General Diego de Mello de Castro led over 6,000 men on a fresh invasion against the Kingdom of Kandy, in central Ceylon. The Portuguese troops, supported by Indian and African mercenaries, captured and burned the capital, Kandy, but a few miles west at Gannoruwa, de Mello's force was surrounded and destroyed.

Ganzak ❙ 591 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

When Persian General Bahram Chobin seized the Sassanid Persian throne, Emperor Maurice sent a large army to support the legitimate ruler, Chosroes II. After a fierce skirmish near Lake Urmiah, Bahram was caught and routed at Ganzak (modern Takht-i-Suleiman, Azerbaijan) by Byzantines led by Narses. Bahram fled to the Turks and was soon assassinated. Restoration of Chosroes ended the war.

Gaoping ❙ 954 ❙ Wars of the Five Dynasties

During rivalry after the fall of Tang (907), Shizong of Later Zhou took an army against Liu Min of Eastern Han. At Gaoping, in southeast Shanxi, the Han suffered a decisive defeat and Zhou besieged the Han capital at Taiyuan until driven off by the intervention of Liao. Zhou secured much of northern China and unification was completed when its rulers were replaced in 960 by the new Song Dynasty.

Gaouz ❙ 1918 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Marshal Louis Lyautey responded to attacks on convoys around Khenifra in central Morocco by sending a new offensive under Colonel Paul Doury, who used artillery and aircraft to assault 1,500 Berbers at Gaouz, south of Errachidia. While Doury lost 200 killed, the Moroccans suffered very heavy casualties. The tribal chiefs began to submit and by 1921, Zaian resistance was over (9 August 1918).

Garcia ❙ 1841 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

As fighting continued in Antioquia, Colombian government forces under General Eusebio Borrero fought an inconclusive action at Itagüí and were surprised a month later at the hacienda of Garcia by Colonel Juan Gregoria Sarria for General José María Obando. Borrero was defeated and captured, but after a few months Obando himself was finally beaten at La Chanca (12 March 1841).

Garcia Hernandez ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

In the aftermath of his victory at Salamanca, Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington sent cavalry to pursue the French and, at Garcia Hernandez, General George Anson and the German Legion of General Eberhardt von Bock caught up with General Maximilian Foy. A remarkable victory saw the French routed and Wellington continued towards Madrid (23 July 1812).

Garhakota ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Hugh Rose relieved the British garrison at Sagar, then marched 25 miles east against Garhakota, one of the most powerful fortresses in central India. However, Rose took insufficient men to properly invest the place and a poorly handled action allowed the rebels to escape after brief resistance. Rose then returned to Sagar to prepare his advance on Jhansi in March (12 February 1858).

Gariach ❙ 1411 ❙ MacDonald Rebellion

See Harlaw

Garibpur ❙ 1971 ❙ 3rd Indo-Pakistan War

Before the official start of the war, Indian Colonel Raj Kumar Singh entered East Pakistan with 14 tanks to cut communications south of Jessore and seized the village of Garibpur. Pakistani Brigadier Mohammad Hayat counter-attacked in force, but was driven off with 11 tanks destroyed. Singh held Garibpur and the Pakistanis abandoned nearby Chaugacha (20–22 November 1971).

Garigliano ❙ 457 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

Facing continuing raids against Italy by the Vandals of North Africa, new Emperor Majorian surprised a Vandal-Berber raiding party returning with loot from Campania. At the mouth of the Garigliano, many of the raiders were slaughtered before they could return to their ships, or were driven into the sea and drowned. Gaiseric, the Vandal, was avenged a few years later at Cape Bon.

Garigliano ❙ 1139 ❙ Norman-Papal War

In order to punish King Roger II of Sicily for supporting former anti-pope Anacletus, Pope Innocent II excommunicated the King and, supported by Robert of Capua, unwisely took an army against him in southern Italy. On the Garigliano, near Gallucio, the Papal army was utterly destroyed. Innocent was captured and had to recognise Roger's rule over Sicily and southern Italy (22 July 1139).

Garigliano ❙ 1503 ❙ Italian War of Louis XII

Eight months after defeat at Cerignola, the French camped at the Garigliano, near Cassino, facing Spanish commander Gonsalvo de Cordoba. After weeks of stalemate, with costly French and Italian losses from skirmishing and swamp fever, Cordoba was reinforced. He attacked across the river to destroy the Allies and seize Gaeta, ending French claims to Naples (27 December 1503).

Garigliano ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

Diverting from the Allied landing at Anzio, British General Sir Richard McCreery and French under General Alphonse Juin crossed the Garigliano near Minturno, at the western end of the Gustav Line across Italy. General Fridolin von Senger was driven back, but German reinforcements stopped the Americans on the Rapido and halted the offensive west of Monte Cassino (17–19 January 1944).

Garnett's and Golding's Farms ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a lesser action during the Seven Days' Battles, east of Richmond, Virginia, Confederate General John B. Magruder sent a flank attack south of the Chickahominy at Garnett's and Golding's Farms. Confederate forces under General Robert A. Toombs and Colonel George T. Anderson were repulsed and Magruder fought again next day at Savage's Station (27–28 June 1862).

Garo Pass ❙ 1904 ❙ British Invasion of Tibet

See Karo Pass

Garrapata ❙ 1876 ❙ Colombian Civil Wars

When Conservatives in Antioquia and Tolima rose in rebellion, they were defeated at Los Chancos, then rebel General Marcelino Vélez faced Liberal government Generals Santos Acosta and Sergio Camargo in Tolima at Garrapata. Despite superior numbers, Vélez was defeated, leading to a temporary armistice, followed by further losses at La Donjuana and Manizales (20–22 November 1876).

Garris ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

As Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington closed in on Bayonne in southwestern France, General Jean Isidore Harispe attempted to defend the River Bidouse, southeast of the city at Garris. With about 500 men lost, including 200 captured, Harispe destroyed the bridges and withdrew southeast through Saint Palais. However, Wellington rebuilt the bridges and crossed the following day (15 February 1814).

Gartalunane ❙ 1489 ❙ Scottish Barons' Rebellion

Facing renewed Baronial rebellion, James IV of Scotland sent John Lord Drummond to relieve Colin Campbell Earl of Argyll, besieged in Dumbarton by Robert Lord Lyle and Mathew Stewart, son of Sir John Stewart Earl of Lennox. Near Dumbarton at Gartalunane (modern Gartloaning), Drummond surprised and routed Lennox and the rebellion collapsed (11–12 October 1489).

Garua ❙ 1914–1915 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

British Colonel Charles Carter marched from Nigeria into northern German Cameroon where he attacked Garua, on the upper Benue. He was driven off with over 300 casualties, but a second Anglo-French expedition led by Colonel Frederick Cunliffe besieged the fortress and forced Hauptmann von Crailsheim to surrender, leaving Germany only the fortress at Mora (30 August 1914 & 10 June 1915).

Gate Pa ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

Within weeks of conquering the Waikato at Orakau, General Sir Duncan Cameron marched east to the Bay of Plenty, where Rawiri Puhirake had provocatively built a fortified pa near Tauranga. With 1,700 men and artillery, the British fought their way into Gate Pa, but were driven out with 120 casualties. Rawiri slipped away into the night and was soon killed at Te Ranga (29 April 1864).

Gaugamela ❙ 331 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

In one of the greatest battles of the ancient world, Alexander the Great returned from Egypt and defeated a huge Persian army under King Darius III at Gaugamela, between Nineveh and Arbela in modern Iraq. Persian casualties in the battle were enormous and Alexander entered Babylon a few days later, making himself master of Persia. Darius was killed fleeing across central Iran (1 October 331 BC).

Gavdos ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

See Cape Matapan

Gavere ❙ 1453 ❙ Franco-Burgundian Wars

Consolidating his hold on the Low Countries after the Hundred Years War, Philip Duke of Burgundy took a large army against Ghent, which had risen in protest against increased taxes. South of the city at Gavere he crushed the Ghent Militia, with 10,000 reported killed, and imposed a massive financial penalty, which cowed other cities until Liège rose in revolt at Montenaeken (23 July 1453).

Gavilán ❙ 1817 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

When a Patriot force under Juan Gregoria Las Heras advanced through Potrerillos to capture Gavilán, northeast of Concepción, Spanish General José Ordóñez attacked from nearby Talcahuano and met with initial success. Heavy Patriot reinforcements then arrived from Arauco under Bernardo O'Higgins and Ordóñez had to withdraw, with heavy losses in men, guns and munitions (4 May 1817).

Gavinana ❙ 1529–1530 ❙ 2nd Habsburg-Valois War

See Florence

Gawilgarh ❙ 1803 ❙ 2nd British-Maratha War

British General Arthur Wellesley won at Assaye (24 September) and Argaum (28 November) against Maratha leaders, Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior and Raja Raghuji Bhonsle of Berar, then pursued the Raja's defeated force to the hill fortress of Gawilgarh, east of Burhanpur. The fortress fell by storm after heavy bombardment, effectively ending the fighting in central India (15 December 1803).

Gaza ❙ 332 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

Alexander the Great moved south from the capture of Tyre to besiege Gaza, the last major settlement before entering the desert route to Egypt. Raising a massive earth rampart around the city, he used powerful siege machines to demolish the walls before the final assault. The citizens were slaughtered and garrison commander, Batis, was tortured to death (September–November 332 BC).

Gaza ❙ 312 BC ❙ Wars of the Diadochi

In the war between the successors of Alexander the Great, Antigonus secured Syria with victory at Tyre. However, Ptolemy of Egypt later returned to attack Gaza, held for Antigonus by his son Demetrius Poliorcetes. Demetrius was completely defeated and fled to Cilicia, but when Antigonus prepared a massive counter-offensive Ptolemy withdrew, leaving Syria to his rival.

Gaza ❙ 1239 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

When Theobald of Champagne, King of Navarre, arrived in Palestine with a French army, he led a Crusader offensive against fortresses in the south, where a large contingent under Count Henry of Bar recklessly advanced without support. Surprised near Gaza by the massive Ayyubid army of Emir Rukn ad-Din, Count Henry's force was routed and he was killed (13 November 1239).

Gaza ❙ 1244 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

See La Forbie

Gaza ❙ 1516 ❙ Ottoman-Mamluk War

See Yaunis Khan

Gaza (1st) ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

With Turkey driven out of Sinai at Rafa, British commander Archibald Murray entered Palestine and sent General Charles Dobell against the opposing line between Gaza and Beersheba, held by Colonel Friedrich von Kressenstein. Despite initial success, poor communication led to premature British withdrawal with over 4,000 men lost, though Murray claimed it as victory (26–27 March 1917).

Gaza (2nd) ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Despite bloody losses at Gaza, British commander Archibald Murray sent General Charles Dobell on a frontal assault against the newly reinforced Turkish line between Gaza and Beersheba. The ill-conceived assault failed at a cost of over 6,000 British casualties and Murray was replaced by General Sir Edmund Allenby, who won with a flank attack at Beersheba in October (17–19 April 1917).

Gaza (3rd) ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See Sheria

Gaza ❙ 1956 ❙ Arab-Israeli Sinai War

Campaigning in northern Sinai after the fall of Rafa, Israelis under Colonel Aharon Doron advanced on large Egyptian and Palestinian troop concentrations around Gaza, where they met unexpectedly fierce resistance. Following sharp fighting, Egyptian Governor General Fuad al Dijani surrendered Gaza to avoid further losses, effectively ending war in the north (2–3 November 1956).

Gaza ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

At the start of the Sinai Campaign, Israeli Colonel Yehudi Resheff, with a reinforced mechanised brigade, advanced through Khan Yunis towards Gaza, held by a Palestinian division under General Mohammed Hasni. Heavy hand-to-hand fighting developed before the Jews seized Gaza City and the key Ali Montar Ridge, giving Israel the much-disputed Gaza Strip (5–6 June 1967).

Gazala ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

After a four-month stalemate, German commander Erwin Rommel launched a massive attack on the British defensive line, south from Gazala, shielding Tobruk. Turning the desert flank at Bir Hacheim, Rommel stormed into the British rear and, after brutal action in the Cauldron, General Neil Ritchie withdrew into Egypt through Mersah Matruh to El Alamein (26 May–13 June 1942).

Gdansk ❙ 1308 ❙ Wars of the Teutonic Knights

When Margrave Waldemar of Brandenberg besieged Gdansk, Prince Ladislav of Poland appealed to the Teutonic Order and Gunter von Schartzburg seized the city (renamed Danzig) and killed the inhabitants. The Knights then refused to relinquish Pomerania, moving their headquarters from Venice to nearby Marienburg. They were defeated by Ladislav at Plowce in 1331 (14 November 1308).

Gdansk ❙ 1577 ❙ Gdansk War

See Danzig

Gdansk ❙ 1626–1630 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

See Danzig

Gdansk ❙ 1733–1734 ❙ War of the Polish Succession

See Danzig

Gdansk ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Danzig

Gdansk ❙ 1813–1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Danzig

Gdansk ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

See Danzig

Gdov ❙ 1614 ❙ Russo-Swedish Wars

With Russia's invasion of Sweden repulsed near Novgorod at Bronnitsa, King Gustavus Adolphus himself led a force into Russia and attacked Gdov, east of Lake Peipus, which had been captured by forces of Tsar Michael.

Gustavus took the city by storm after two bloody assaults and returned next year to continue his offensive further south against Pskov (July–10 September 1614).

Gebora ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

During Marshal Nicolas Soult's siege of Badajoz, he sent a veteran French force, led by Marshal Édouard Mortier, north across the Guadianna to attack a Spanish relief army under General Gabriel Mendizabal. Surprised near the Gebora River, Mendizabal was routed with heavy losses in men and guns and his survivors fled to reinforce the garrison at Badajoz (19 February 1811).

Gedaref ❙ 1898 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

As Dervish forces withdrew up the Blue Nile after defeat at Omdurman (2 September), about 4,000 men under Emir Saadallah were intercepted at Gedaref by Colonel Charles Parsons, who had marched across the Atbara from eastern Sudan. The Dervishes were defeated in hard fighting with about 500 dead and Parsons then held Gedaref against a counter-attack by Ahmed Fedil (22 September 1898).

Gefrees ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Archduke Charles of Austria won at Aspern-Essling (22 May), then sent a diversionary expedition through Saxony into Bavaria. Near Gefrees, northeast of Beyreuth, Austrian Field Marshal Michael von Kienmeyer and General Paul Radivojevich inflicted a sharp defeat on General Androche Junot. However, news of Austrian defeat at Znaim brought the campaign to an end (8 July 1809).

Geisberg ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Wissembourg

Gela ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

At the start of the Allied invasion of Sicily, American General George Patton landed in the southwest between Licata and Cape Scaramia. Heaviest fighting was around Gela, where Italians and German General Paul Conrath counter-attacked in force. Supported by accurate naval gunfire, General Terry Allen secured the bridgehead and Patton swept north towards Palermo (10–12 July 1943).

Gelt ❙ 1570 ❙ Dacre's Rebellion

Leonard Dacre of Gilsland gathered a northern rising in support of the imprisoned Mary Queen of Scots, but on the banks of the Gelt, near Carlisle, his 3,000 Borderers were utterly defeated by an English army under Henry Lord Hunsdon and Sir John Forster. Dacre fled to France, while English forces ravaged Teviotdale and the Border to stamp out insurrection (20 February 1570).

Gelves ❙ 1510 ❙ Spanish Colonial Wars in North Africa

See Los Gelves

Gemaizeh ❙ 1888 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

When Mahdist General Osman Digna threatened the Red Sea port of Suakin, despite his defeat at Handoub, Governor Sir Charles Holled-Smith appealed to Cairo and Sir Francis Grenfell brought British-Sudanese-Egyptian reinforcements. Taking the offensive, Grenfell attacked Osman at Gemaizeh, just west of Suakin, and the Dervishes were driven off with perhaps 500 killed (20 December 1888).

Gemas ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

In an attempt to stall the Japanese in northwest Johore, Australian General Gordon Bennet took position at the Gemencheh near Gemas, where he ambushed the invaders and inflicted costly losses. But after very heavy fighting against Japanese reinforcements, and with his coastal flank threatened at Muar, Bennet had to fall back through Yong Pen towards Singapore (14–20 January 1941).

Gemauerthof ❙ 1705 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

After capturing the fortresses of Dorpat and Narva, Russian Marshal Boris Sheremetev marched into Courland to hold the Swedes, while Tsar Peter took the main Russian army into Poland. In a bloody action at Gemauerthof, near Jelgava in Latvia, Sheremetev's superior force was beaten by General Adam Lewenhaupt, who then secured a strong defensive position at Riga (16 July 1705).

Gembloux ❙ 1578 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

A fresh offensive in the Netherlands saw Spanish Viceroy Don John of Austria and his nephew Alexander Farnese drive the Dutch out of Namur and attack them in retreat at nearby Gembloux. The Dutch force under new commander Antoine de Goignies suffered a terrible rout, with thousands killed for just a handful of Spanish casualties. Don John soon attacked again at Rymenant (31 January 1578).

Generals ❙ 1824 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

See Ayacucho

Geneva ❙ 1602 ❙ Swiss Religious Wars

In a final attempt to recapture Calvinist Geneva, Duke Charles Emmanuel of Savoy, with Spanish aid, sent 2,000 mercenaries under Charles d'Albigny, who took the city by surprise and scaled the outside walls. However, in a small yet significant victory for the Reformation, they were repulsed by Isaac Mercier. Savoy later recognised Geneva as an independent city (21–22 December 1602).

Genil ❙ 1319 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

Following the death of Ferdinand IV of Castile, his brothers Juan and Pedro became joint regents for the infant Alfonso XI and undertook an offensive against the Muslim military leader Ismail, who had seized the throne of Granada. Juan and Pedro were defeated and killed in a bitter battle at the River Genil, throwing Castile into civil war between rival claimants to the Regency.

Genoa ❙ 1522 ❙ 1st Habsburg-Valois War

A month after the disastrous French defeat at Bicocca and the subsequent withdrawal from Lombardy, the Spanish-German army of General Prospero Colonna attacked Genoa, the last remaining substantial French possession beyond the Alps. Colonna stormed and pillaged Genoa in a sudden assault, giving the Imperialists effectively control of northern Italy (30 May 1522).

Genoa ❙ 1684 ❙ Franco-Genoese War

To punish Genoa for building ships for Spain and selling munitions to the Ottoman Governor of Algiers, Louis XIV of France sent Admiral Abraham Duquesne to bombard the city, accompanied by Secretary for War, Jean Baptiste Colbert Marquis de Seignelay. After suffering considerable damage, Genoa was humbled and had to abandon its long alliance with Spain (May 1684).

Genoa ❙ 1746–1747 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Austrian Marquis Anton Otto Botta d'Adorno attacked France and Spain in northern Italy, where he seized the great port of Genoa (6 September 1746). But, in a courageous insurrection against Austrian tyranny he was thrown out (5–10 December). Austro-Sardinian forces then laid the city under siege, which fatally drained their resources and ultimately failed (January–June 1747).

Genoa ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

A large-scale naval engagement off the city of Genoa saw a British squadron, under Admiral Sir William Hotham, clash with Admiral Pierre Martin and the French were driven off with two ships captured. Although Captain Horatio Nelson claimed the Admiral had been derelict in failing to pursue, Parliament voted Hotham thanks. He soon met Martin again off the Hyères (13 March 1795).

Genoa ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Amid renewed Austrian fighting in northern Italy, Baron Michael von Melas attacked French General André Masséna and drove him into siege at Genoa, confined by British ships and Austrian troops under General Karl Ott. Napoleon Bonaparte arrived too late over the Alps and Masséna negotiated a conditional surrender, allowing him to keep his men and guns (20 April–4 June 1800).

Genoy ❙ 1820 ❙ Colombian War of Independence

With Colombian independence assured by victory at Boyacá, Patriot forces in the south, under General Manuel Valdés, crossed the Juanambú towards Popayán, held by Spanish Colonel Sebastián Calzada. At Genoy, just north of Pasto, Valdés was heavily defeated by Royalist Colonel Basilio García and was forced to withdraw. Armistice later that year secured peace (2 February 1820).

Geok Tepe ❙ 1879 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

Having conquered the Khanate of Khokand, Russia faced resistance in southern Turkmenistan by tribesmen known as Tekkes. Russian artillery, under General Nikolai Pavlovich Lomakin, badly damaged their stronghold at Geok Tepe, but the Russians were repulsed with heavy losses in men, material and prestige. The town fell two years later amid heavy bloodshed (28 August 1879).

Geok Tepe ❙ 1881 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

With Russian expansion in Turkmenistan checked by Tekke tribesmen, General Mikhail Skobelev led a fresh campaign, which bombarded and stormed their stronghold of Dengil-Tepe at Geok Tepe. Skobelev allegedly refused to accept surrender and up to 20,000 Tekkes were reported killed. The brutal victory virtually completed Russia's conquest of central Asia (12 January 1881).

Georgegarh (1st) ❙ 1801 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

Major Louis Bourquein invaded Haryana for Sindhia, then left Captain Lewis Smith to besiege the strong fortress of Georgegarh near Jhajjar. Irish-born adventurer George Thomas drove off Smith and routed Sindhia's rearguard under veteran General Puran Singh. Bourquein returned with a large force, but was heavily defeated outside Georgegarh and withdrew (25–29 September 1801).

Georgegarh (2nd) ❙ 1801 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

Following Sindhia's defeat in Haryana, General Pierre Perron sent Colonel Pedron and 30,000 men to besiege Irish-born adventurer George Thomas at Georgegarh, near Jhajjar. A relief force under Raja Vaman Rao was driven off (18 October) but, after massive defections among his Marathas, Thomas abandoned his guns and fought his way out to Hansi (October–10 November 1801).

Georgia Landing ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Union General Godfrey Weitzel led an offensive on the Lafourche in western Louisiana, advancing south through Donaldsonville on the Mississippi against Confederate forces under General Alfred A. Mouton. With over 200 men captured in a running action near Georgia Landing, Mouton was forced to withdraw further south to nearby Labadieville (27 October 1862).

Gerberoi ❙ 1080 ❙ Norman Dynastic Wars

William of Normandy conquered Saxon England at Hastings, then faced rebellion at home by his son Robert, supported by Philip I of France. Besieged in Philip's castle at Gerberoi, near Beauvais northwest of Paris, the rebels were defeated, reputedly after Robert wounded his father in single combat. Robert was forgiven, but was later imprisoned after losing to his brother Henry at Tinchebrai in 1106.

Gerchsheim ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks' War

Within days of Prussian victory at Aschaffenburg, General Erwin von Manteuffel led the advance southeast through Tauberbischofsheim and Werbach, then sent Generals August von Goeben and Karl von Wrangel against Gerchsheim. After costly losses on both sides, with further losses the same day at nearby Helmstadt, Prince Karl of Bavaria retreated east through Würzburg (25 July 1866).

Gergovia ❙ 52 BC ❙ Rome's Later Gallic Wars

Having captured Avaricum in central Gaul in March, Julius Caesar marched into the Auvergne to attack Gergovia (near modern Clermont-Ferrand), the fortified capital of Arverni Chieftain Vercingetorix. Despite surprising nearby Gallic camps, the Romans were repulsed in an uncoordinated attack, losing over 700 men. Caesar withdrew north and later that year routed Vercingetorix at Alesia.

Germanikeia ❙ 778–779 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

See Hadath

Germantown ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When British General Sir William Howe secured Philadelphia (26 September) after victory at Brandywine, General George Washington counter-attacked at Germantown, five miles to the north. A confused action saw Washington repulsed with over 1,000 casualties, including 400 prisoners. After further action at White Marsh, he withdrew to winter quarters in Valley Forge (4 October 1777).

Germiston ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Elandsfontein

Gerona ❙ 1285 ❙ French-Aragonese War

When Pedro III of Aragon claimed Sicily in the aftermath of the Sicilian Vespers, Pope Martin IV encouraged Philip III of France to invade Aragon, where he besieged Gerona, held by Viscomte Raymond de Cardona, which fell after heavy losses to disease on both sides. Following naval disaster at Las Hormigas, the isolated French garrison surrendered in October (26 June–7 September 1285).

Gerona ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

The fortress of Gerona, blocking the coastal route from France to Barcelona, withstood attack by French General Philibert Duhesme in June 1808, then faced a better-equipped siege by Duhesme from the south and General Honoré Reille in the north. A Spanish relief army under Count Raimondo Caldagues routed Reille and Duhesme was forced to withdraw (18–20 June & 24 July–20 August 1808).

Gerona ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Having withstood two previous sieges, the Catalonian city of Gerona under General Mariano Alvarez de Castro was besieged by French General Laurent Gouvion Saint-Cyr and later Marshal Pierre Augereau. Both sides suffered terrible losses in repeated assaults and in failed relief attempts by Spanish General Joachim Blake, before the heroic garrison finally fell (24 May–11 December 1809).

Gertruydenberg ❙ 1588–1589 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Sir John Wingfield was appointed Governor of Gertruydenberg (modern Geertruidenberg, near Breda), then held the city against Alexander Farnese Duke of Parma, even sending aid to his brother-in-law, Peregrine Bertie Lord Willoughby, besieged at Bergen. But the Dutch suspected Wingfield would treacherously surrender Gertruydenberg to Spain and he finally capitulated (1588–10 April 1589).

Gertruydenberg ❙ 1593 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

In one of his great sieges, Prince Maurice of Orange invested Gertruydenberg (modern Geertruidenberg, near Breda) using special matting to support his guns on the soft ground. As at Steenwijk, he used his troops to dig siege positions. After a Spanish relief attempt under Count Ernst von Mansfeld was driven off, the powerful fortress surrendered (26 March–24 June 1593).

Gesher ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Advancing south of the Sea of Galilee to support the Syrians further north around Deganiya, Iraqi forces attempted to cross the Jordan near Gesher, just south of its junction with the Yarmak. The Iraqis were heavily defeated by Israel's Golani Brigade, though they later regrouped and advanced west across the Jordan further downriver towards Jenin (15–22 May 1948).

Gestilren ❙ 1210 ❙ Swedish Wars of Succession

Amid continuing rivalry for Sweden's throne, Sverker II seized power in 1196, when Knut Eriksson died. After years of Sverker's tyrannical rule, Knut's son Erik raised a large force in Norway and returned to reclaim the crown. Despite Danish support, Sverker was defeated and killed at Gestilren, west of Tidaholm near Lake Vattern, and Erik Eriksson was proclaimed King (17 July 1210).

Gettysburg ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Marching north across the Potomac to Gettysburg in Pennsylvania, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee attacked General George G. Meade's Union army in a defensive position south of town. In the bloodiest battle on American soil, Lee was decisively defeated with terrible losses and began his retreat southwest through Williamsport, cautiously pursued by the shattered victors (1–3 July 1863).

Ghagra River ❙ 1529 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Gogra

Ghallaghurga ❙ 1762 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

See Kup

Ghazhdewan ❙ 1512 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

See Ghujduwan

Ghazi-ud-din-Nagar ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Approaching rebel-held Delhi, British Brigadier Archdale Wilson was met by a mutineer force at the nearby village of Ghazi-ud-din-Nagar on the Hindan. Despite being badly affected by extreme heat, the British troops defeated the rebels and repulsed a counter-attack next day. Joined by General Sir Henry Barnard, they then advanced on the strategic position at Badli (30–31 May 1857).

Ghazni ❙ 998 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

When Amir Sebuktigin of Bokhara died (997), his son and successor Isma'il found himself at war with his ambitious older brother, Mahmud of Balkh. Isma'il was defeated in heavy fighting near the capital Ghazni and Mahmud seized the throne. While Isma'il lived in comfortable captivity, Mahmud built an empire, which eventually stretched from the Punjab to Persia (March 998).

Ghazni ❙ 1117 ❙ Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars

Intervening in a disputed succession in Afghanistan, the Seljuk Sultan Sanjar of Khorasan took a large army against Malik Arslan Shah of Ghor. Outside Ghazni at Shahrabad, Malik Arslan suffered a terrible defeat and his brother Bahram Shah was installed as a Seljuk vassal. Malik Arslan later attempted to return from exile in Lahore (1118) but was defeated and executed by his brother.

Ghazni ❙ 1148 ❙ Ghor-Ghazni Wars

Saif-ud-Din of Ghor invaded the Afghan kingdom of Ghazni, where he defeated the army of Bahram Shah, who fled to India. He then annexed Ghazni before Bahram returned and defeated the Ghurid Prince. Saif-ud-Din surrendered in return for his life, but was tortured to death. His death was later avenged by his brother, Ala-ud-Din Husain, who defeated Bahram and destroyed Ghazni.

Ghazni ❙ 1151 ❙ Ghor-Ghazni Wars

Determined to gain control of Afghanistan, Ala-ud-Din Husain of Ghor invaded Ghazni and defeated the army of Bahram Shah, who fled. In revenge for the torture and execution of his brother at Ghazni in 1148, Ala-ud-Din then destroyed Ghazni city, burning it to the ground and earning the nickname Jahan-Suz (the burner). His victory effectively ended the Ghaznavid Dynasty in Afghanistan.

Ghazni ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Britain was concerned over Russian influence in Afghanistan and sent General Sir John Keane, who led his 20,000-strong force against Ghazni, held by Afzal Khan for Amir Dost Muhammad. Keane took the powerful fortress by storm after blowing up the gate in a brilliant assault, then advanced to Kabul to restore Shah Shuja (7 August). Dost Muhammad fled (21–23 July 1839).

Ghaznigak ❙ 1888 ❙ Afghan Civil Wars

Amir Abdur Rahman consolidating his authority in northern Afghanistan despatched forces under General Shulam Haidar and Sandar Abdullah against his cousin Ishaq Khan, Governor of Afghan Turkestan. Ishaq was defeated in battle at Ghaznigak, east of Balkh near Tashqurghan (modern Kholm), and fled to Russia, where he died soon afterwards (27 September 1888).

Gheluvelt ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Despite losses at Langemark, German forces launched a massive attack on Gheluvelt, east of Ypres. The most important action of the First Battle of Ypres saw the town seized, then lost to a bold British counter-attack. The courageous defence is said to have saved Ypres, though Gheluvelt was lost in a subsequent German offensive to the northwest through Nonne Boschen (29–31 October 1914).

Gheria, Bengal ❙ 1740 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

The incompetent Mughal Nawab Safaraz Khan of Bengal faced rebellion by Ali Vardi Khan, Governor of Bihar, and marched out from his capital at Murshidabad to face the rebels. Safaraz Khan was killed in the decisive battle near the Ganges at Gheria and his generals immediately proclaimed Ali Vardi Khan as Nawab of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa (10 April 1740).

Gheria, Bengal ❙ 1763 ❙ Bengal War

British Major Thomas Adams restored Mir Jafar as Nawab of Bengal, then took his mixed force against the usurper Mir Kasim, who established a strong defensive position on the Plain of Gheria near Jangipur at Sooty. Following very hard fighting, with costly losses on both sides, Mir Kasim was driven out and withdrew to his stronghold on the Ganges at Udaynala (2 August 1763).

Gheria, Bombay ❙ 1756 ❙ War against Malabar Pirates

On campaign against pirates on India's Malabar Coast, south of Bombay, British Admiral Charles Watson and Colonel Robert Clive, with Maratha support, followed capture of Savandrug by attacking the pirate stronghold at Gheria (modern Vijayadurg). Forcing his way into the harbour, Watson took the fortress from the rear and Chief Tulaji Angria was finally defeated (13 February 1756).

Ghoaine ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Advancing from Kandahar in southern Afghanistan towards Ghazni against Akbar Khan (son of deposed Amir Dost Muhammad), British General William Nott was blocked by Afghan General Shems-ud-Din at Karabagh, near Ghoaine, two miles from Ghazni. Nott inflicted a heavy defeat, capturing all the Afghan guns, and continued his advance through Maidan to Kabul (30 August 1842).

Ghujduwan ❙ 1512 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

After the Uzbek leader Ubaid Khan defeated the Mughal Babur of Kabul at Kul-i-Malik, near Samarkand in Uzbekistan, Shah Ismail Safawi of Persia sent General Najm-i Thani to aid his former ally. At Ghujduwan (modern Gizhdivan), northeast of Bokhara, the Mughals and Persians were heavily defeated. Babur then turned his attention to conquests in India (12 November 1512).

Giants ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Leipzig

Giao-chao ❙ 602 ❙ Sino-Vietnamese Wars

Facing renewed rebellion in Annam, in northern Vietnam, where Li Bon had been crushed at Chu Dien, Sui Emperor Wen Di sent the famous General Liu Fang, who took a large force and attacked the rebels in Giao-chao, near Hanoi. Having secured victory and restored order, he then marched south and reimposed control over King Sambhuvarman of Champa at Tra-khe.

Gibbet Rath ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

Soon after the Irish rising began, General Sir Ralph Dundas tried to negotiate terms with rebels in Kildare. But, just east of the town on the Curragh, at Gibbet Rath, rebels attempting to surrender were attacked by General Sir James Duff, who claimed they had fired on his men. The ensuring massacre saw about 350 rebels killed. Duff reported three of his troops also died (29 May 1798).

Gibeon ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

Renewing the invasion of German Southwest Africa after defeat at Sandfontein, General Jan Smuts led a southern force towards Gibeon, where Major Duncan McKenzie tried to encircle Germans under Hauptmann Bogislav von Kleist. The South Africans failed to cut the railway and, after the heaviest fighting of the campaign, the Germans escaped north towards Windhoek (25–26 April 1915).

Gibraltar ❙ 207 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

With Carthage under pressure in Spain, the city of Gades (Cadiz) threatened to ally itself with Rome and Punic Admiral Adherbal arrived to arrest the leaders. A Roman squadron sent from Carteia under Laelius attacked the Carthaginian ships in the turbulent Straits of Gibraltar, where the heavier Roman ships inflicted a costly defeat, sinking three triremes. The three surviving vessels escaped to Carthage.

Gibraltar ❙ 1607 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Dutch Admiral Jacob van Heemskerk led a bold attack on Gibraltar, taking his outgunned ships against a large Spanish fleet under Admiral Don Juan Alvarez d'Avila. During the bloody battle, both admirals were killed, though the Dutch leader's death was kept from his captains, who went on to achieve a stunning victory. The Spanish fleet was destroyed without Dutch loss (25 April 1607).

Gibraltar (1st) ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Stubbornly assaulting Spanish Gibraltar, the Anglo-Dutch fleet under Admirals Sir George Rooke and Sir George Byng laid down a bombardment, then Prince George of Hesse landed with 1,800 men and Governor Diego de Salinas surrendered the fortress next day. A French counter-attack was then repulsed off Malaga and at the war's end the rock was ceded to Britain (23–24 July 1704).

Gibraltar (2nd) ❙ 1704–1705 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

A Franco-Spanish force under Marshal Count René de Tessé resolved to retake Gibraltar and besieged the strategic island, held by marines under Prince George of Hesse. A small French squadron was surprised and destroyed by Admiral Sir John Leake (29 October 1704), but the siege was not raised until Leake returned and defeated the French fleet off Marbella (September 1704–5 April 1705).

Gibraltar ❙ 1779–1783 ❙ War of the American Revolution

When Spain entered the war, French and Spanish forces under Louis Duc de Crillon besieged Gibraltar, brilliantly defended by General George Eliott. Reinforced following British victory off Cape St Vincent (16 January 1780), Eliott drove off a massive land and sea assault (13 September 1782). Gibraltar was saved and Eliott was made Baron Heathfield (24 June 1779–6 February 1783).

Gien ❙ 1652 ❙ War of the 2nd Fronde
See Blenau

Giessen ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)
See Kirchberg

Gijon ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

As the war started, Nationalist Colonel Antonio Pinilla at Gijon held out in the Simancas Barracks against Asturian miners, who eventually broke in using dynamite. Ordering no surrender, Pinilla called down shellfire from the Nationalist Cruiser, Almirante Cervera, offshore and both sides died in the bombardment. The miners then turned against nearby Oveida (19 July–16 August 1936).

Gijon ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Soon after the fall of Bilbao and Santander, Nationalist forces under Generals Antonio Aranda and José Solchaga converged on Gijon in Asturias, the last remaining Republican stronghold in northern Spain. Republican resistance was crushed and the Nationalists seized the city, securing the whole northern coast and its vital resources for the rebel cause (1 September–21 October 1937).

Gila River ❙ 1857 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Leading the Gila Expedition in Southern Arizona, Colonel Benjamin Bonneville, supported by Colonel Dixon S. Miles and Captain Richard Ewell, advanced down the Gila and, north of Mount Turnbull, found a large camp of Coyotera Apache. A co-ordinated attack saw 45 killed and about 36 captured for the loss of nine wounded soldiers. The Apache soon sued for peace (27 June 1857).

Gilau ❙ 1660 ❙ Transylvanian National Revolt

When Crimean Tatars drove Prince George Rákóczi II out of Transylvania, his supporters restored him, then faced a Turkish army under Pasha Ahmed Sidi of Buda invading Transylvania in force. In the west at Fenes, near Gilau, west of Cluj, Rákóczi was defeated and died of his wounds two weeks later aged just 39. The Turkish offensive then continued against Nagyvarad (22 May 1660).

Gilbert Islands ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

At the start of the Allied offensive in the Central Pacific, American General Holland Smith invaded the Gilbert Islands, seizing Makin with relative ease then Tarawa 100 miles south, where there were shocking losses on both sides. Capture of the Gilberts provided important airfields for land-based aircraft to support the next advance north into the Marshall Islands (20–24 November 1943).

Gilead ❙ 635 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria
See Fihl

Gilgal Creek ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
See Marietta

Gilgit ❙ 747 ❙ Tang Imperial Wars

Despite withdrawing after Dafeichuan (670), Tang China eventually regained the remote northwest and General Gao Xianzhi later led 10,000 men across the Pamirs against the Tibetan client-state of Gilgit (Little Balur). A brutal action saw 5,000 Tibetans killed and a garrison was established to restore Chinese control in the Pamir region. In 751, Gao was halted in Central Asia at Talas.

Gimrah ❙ 1832 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Facing rebellion in Muslim Dagestan, west of the Caspian, Russian Baron Grigori Rosen, supported by General Franz Kluge-von-Klugenau, drove Imam Ghazi Muhammad to a final stand at Gimrah, west of modern Buinaksk. Imam Ghazi and most of his followers were killed when Gimrah fell by storm. However, another Imam was elected and resistance continued for 25 years (29 October 1832).

Gindarus ❙ 38 BC ❙ Roman-Parthian Wars

When Pacorus of Parthia invaded Roman Syria, supported by Roman General Quintus Labienus, Mark Antony, despite continuing civil war, sent an army under Ventidius Bassus, who executed Labienus. Ventidius defeated Parthian General Phranipates, then defeated and killed Pacorus at Gindarus, west of the Euphrates, and Parthia withdrew from Syria (9 June 38 BC).

Gindrinkers Line ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (China)

See Kowloon

Gingee ❙ 1648 ❙ Bijapur-Maratha Wars

Mohammad Adil Shah resolved to expand the power of Muslim Bijapur and sent General Mustafa Khan against Gingee, west of Pondicherry, held by the Rupa Nayak. During a long siege, the Maratha leader, Shahji Bhonsle, was captured and Mustafa Khan died. Muhammad Khan then continued the siege to capture the city and reputedly enough treasure to load 89 elephants (28 December 1648).

Gingee ❙ 1689–1698 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

Attacking the Maratha kingdoms of central India, Emperor Aurangzeb sent General Zulfiqar Khan to besiege King Rajaram at Gingee fortress, west of Pondicherry. Despite his troops being under attack in the field, Aurangzeb refused to make peace. When Rajaram escaped to Vellore, a new Mughal commander and fresh forces scaled the walls to end the nine-year siege (17 February 1698).

Gingee ❙ 1750 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Having routed Nawab Mohammad Ali of Arcot near Tiruvadi, French Colonel Louis d'Auteil attacked Gingee, 50 miles inland from Pondicherry, defended by 10,000 of the Nawab's men. In a remarkable feat, a storming party under the Marquis Charles de Bussy blew in the gates with an explosive charge to capture the most powerful fortress in southeast India (11 September 1750).

Gingee ❙ 1752 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Over-confident after victory at Seringham, Governor Thomas Saunders of Madras sent Major James Kinneer, with just 200 European troops and about 2,000 Sepoys, against Gingee, inland from Pondicherry, the most powerful fortress in southeast India. Intercepted by a French column under Colonel Jacques Kerjean, Kinneer was overwhelmed and repulsed with heavy losses (6 August 1752).

Gingindlovu ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

British commander Lord Frederick Chelmsford advancing to relieve Eshowe, in southern Zululand, met perhaps 10,000 Zulus under Somopo and Dabulamanzi (brother of King Cetshwayo) near Gingindlovu. Cut down by volley fire and Gatlings, the Zulus fled with about 1,200 killed. Chelmsford lost 13 killed and 48 wounded and Eshowe was relieved next day (2 April 1879).

Ginniss ❙ 1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

When General Charles Gordon was killed by Mahdists and the British relief expedition withdrew from Khartoum, new Khalifa Abdullah el-Taaishi advanced down the Nile and threatened Kosheh, south of Akasha. Arriving with reinforcements, General Sir Frederick Stephenson routed the main Dervish army in a dawn attack at nearby Ginniss and drove them upstream (30 December 1885).

Giornico ❙ 1478 ❙ Swiss-Milanese Wars

After Charles of Burgundy was killed at Nancy (January 1477), Swiss under Hans Waldmann and Adrian von Bubenberg attacked the Lady Bona of Savoy, widow of former Burgundian ally Duke Galeazzo Sforza of Milan. Repulsed at Bellinzona, the Swiss withdrew to Giornico, in the Leventina Valley, where the Milanese army was routed and the valley became Swiss (28 December 1478).

Girgil ❙ 1847 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

At war with Imam Shamil of Dagestan, Count Mikhail Vorontsov besieged the rebel position at Girgil, while Shamil attacked the Russians in the field. After a heavy bombardment, the village fell by storm—at the cost of about 500 Russian casualties—and Vorontsov marched against Saltah. Girgil was captured again a year later by Prince Moisie Argutinsky (13–20 June 1847).

Girishk ❙ 1795 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

While Zaman Shah of Kabul was campaigning against the Sikhs in the Sind, he was attacked in the rear by his brother Mahmud Mirza. Marching rapidly west, Zaman heavily defeated his brother at Girishk, on the Helmand River northwest of Kandahar. Mahmud fled to Persia, but five years later he returned to overthrow and blind his brother at Kabul.

Giron ❙ 1829 ❙ Peruvian-Colombian War

See Tarqui

Gisikon ❙ 1653 ❙ Swiss Peasant War

Locked in conflict with the city aristocracies, Swiss peasants fought an inconclusive battle at Wohlenschwyl. The following day, part of their army, under Christian Schybi, was heavily defeated at Gisikon by General Zweier von Evebach and the garrison of nearby Lucerne. The rising was crushed after a further peasant defeat days later at Herzogenbuchsee and Schybi was executed (4–5 June 1653).

Gisikon ❙ 1845 ❙ Sonderbund War

Fighting against Catholic separatists of the Sunderbund League, the Protestant forces of Switzerland under General William Henry Dufour captured Fribourg and Zug. Then, in the main fighting of the conflict, they defeated the Catholics at Gisikon with fewer than 100 dead on either side. Nearby Lucerne fell next day and the 25-day war came to an end (23 November 1845).

Gisors ❙ 1198 ❙ French War of Richard I

Returned from the Crusades, Richard I of England—the Lion Heart—regained his French domains at Freteval (1194), then faced war against Phillip II. Near Beauvais at Gisors, the French King narrowly escaped death, when his knights were routed and thrown into the Epte by a collapsing bridge. Richard had little other success and died six months later at Chalus (28 September 1198).

Gissar ❙ 1511 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

See Pul-i-Sanghin

Gitschin ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks' War

Facing a Prussian invasion of Bohemia by Prince Friedrich Karl, Austrian Count Edouard von Clam-Gallas was repulsed at Münchengratz and fell back on Gitschin (modern Jicin) with Crown Prince Albert of Saxony. With no aid from the main Austrian army concentrating at Königgratz, Clam-Gallas suffered a heavy defeat and was relieved of his command (29–30 June 1866).

Giurgiu ❙ 1595 ❙ Wallachian-Turkish War

Ottoman Grand Vizier Sinan Pasha, advancing into Romania against Prince Michael the Brave of Wallachia, overcame defeat at Calugareni to attack Bucharest and capture Tirgovist. However, Michael and Sigismund Bathory of Transylvania pursued Sinan to the Danube, where the Ottoman rearguard was smashed while crossing the river at Giurgiu. Wallachia was restored (27 October 1595).

Giurgiu ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

Russian General Mikhail Gorchakov marching up the Danube from the siege of Silistria encountered a large Turkish force at Giurgiu under Colonel Robert Cannon (in the Sultan's service as Bahram Pasha). After very heavy fighting, and with a Turkish flotilla arriving up the river, the Russians withdrew towards Budapest and the focus of fighting moved to Armenia and the Crimea (7 July 1854).

Givenchy ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

To relieve the French in Arras and support their winter offensive in Champagne, British commander Sir John French ordered an attack on strategic Givenchy, west of La Bassée, where Indian troops took the town before being driven out by artillery. Reinforcements arrived and Givenchy was retaken and held as extreme winter conditions ended the advance (18–22 December 1914).

Givenchy ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

With French forces bleeding in a battle of attrition in Artois, British General Sir Henry Rawlinson attacked north of the La Bassée canal around Givenchy to coincide with a new French advance. The British attack was repulsed with heavy losses, as was a simultaneous British supporting action near Bellewaarde bringing the Second Battle of Artois to an end (15–16 June 1915).

Gladsmuir ❙ 1745 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

See Prestonpans

Glasgow ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

As Confederate General Sterling Price marched west through Missouri, he sent General Joseph O. Shelby's "Iron Brigade" north across the Missouri River against Glasgow, defended by Colonel Chester Harding. Badly defeated, Harding was forced to surrender and Shelby seized large quantities of arms and supplies before continuing west to rejoin Price at Lexington (15 October 1864).

Glatz ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Austrian Marshal Gideon von Loudon destroyed a Prussian force at Landshut in Silesia (23 June), then marched southeast to besiege the fortress town of Glatz (modern Klodzko, Poland), while Frederick II of Prussia tried to divert the Austrians by besieging Dresden. On the same day that von Loudon took Glatz by storm, Frederick left for Silesia to defend Liegnitz (June–29 July 1760).

Glencoe ❙ 1692 ❙ First Jacobite Rebellion

Amid the final doomed Scottish resistance to the accession of William III, the Macdonalds of Glencoe in Argyleshire were slow to acknowledge the Protestant King and suffered a surprise attack by Royalists under Captain Robert Campbell of Glenlyon. While most Macdonalds escaped, 38 were killed in a massacre, which came to symbolise the cause of Jacobite rebellion (13 February 1692).

Glendale ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See White Oak Swamp

Glen Fruin ❙ 1603 ❙ Later Scottish Clan Wars

In the culmination of a long-running feud, Alexander Colquhoun of Luss was commissioned by James VI of Scotland to pursue the troublesome Alasdair MacGregor of Glenstrae. In Glen Fruin, at Strone, Colquhoun's force was surrounded and over 200 were killed. The government outlawed and later hanged MacGregor and 11 Chiefs. His clan name was proscribed for over 150 years.

Glenlivet ❙ 1594 ❙ Huntly Rebellion

Renewing the rebellion crushed at Corrichie, the Catholic nobles, George Gordon Earl of Huntly and Francis Hay Earl of Errol, faced King James VI, who marched north, then sent Archibald Campbell Earl of Argyll forward to Glenlivet. Argyll was routed, but the rebels withdrew as the Scottish King advanced. James destroyed Huntly Castle and Huntly fled aboard (4 October 1594).

Glen Lochy ❙ 1544 ❙ Scottish Clan Wars

See Shirts

Glen Malure ❙ 1580 ❙ Geraldine Rebellion

James Eustace Viscount Baltinglass supported the Catholic Fitzgeralds of Munster by raising a rebellion in Leinster aided by Fiach MacHugh O'Byrne. At Glen Malure, in County Wicklow, O'Byrne defeated Lord Arthur Grey de Wilton, Lord Deputy of Ireland. However, the English quickly recovered to overcome the rebels and their Italian allies at Fort del Or near Smerwick (25 August 1580).

Glenshiel ❙ 1719 ❙ War of the Quadruple Alliance

A failed invasion to support rebellion in Scotland saw a Spanish fleet with 6,000 men scattered by a storm and only about 300 landed to help defend Glenshiel, west of Inverness. Royalist General Joseph Wightman routed the Jacobite leaders, George Keith Earl of Marischal and William Murray Marquis of Tullibardine, and the captured Spaniards were sent home (10 June 1719).

Glentrool ❙ 1307 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Robert the Bruce of Scotland recovered from defeat to raise a fresh army, which took a defensive position at Glentrool, near Newton Stewart, against Aymer de Valance Earl of Pembroke (who had beaten him at Methven in June 1306). The English were repulsed in a sharp action over rocky ground and a month later, Bruce won his great victory over Pembroke at Loudon Hill (April 1307).

Globe Tavern ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

A fresh offensive against the Weldon Railroad, south of besieged Petersburg, Virginia, saw Union General Gouvernor K. Warren reach Globe Tavern, where he met Confederate Generals Ambrose P. Hill, Henry Heth and Wiliam Mahone. The Confederates were driven off in bloody fighting, though a probe further south was checked days later at Reams Station (18–21 August 1864).

Glorieta Pass ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

When Confederate General Henry Hopkins Sibley invaded New Mexico through Valverde to capture Santa Fe, part of his force under Major Charles L. Pyron was met to the southeast at Glorieta Pass by advancing Union troops led by Major John C. Chivington. Pyron was forced to withdraw after bitter fighting and Sibley eventually retreated south to San Antonio (26–28 March 1862).

Glorious First of June ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See First of June

Gloucester ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Following Royalist capture of Bristol (26 July), King Charles I took his force against the Parliamentary stronghold at Gloucester, defended by Governor Edward Massey. After a fiercely defended siege, a large relief force from London under Robert Devereux Earl of Essex drove the Royalists off. Returning to the capital, Essex was beaten at Newbury (10 August–6 September 1643).

Gloucester Hill ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

See Imjin

Glowworm ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (War at Sea)

While the British Navy laid mines off Norway, the destroyer Glowworm turned to seek a man lost overboard and encountered a German invasion force. Crippled by a destroyer, Glowworm rammed and badly damaged the heavy cruiser Admiral Hipper before sinking under gunfire. Captain Gerard Roope was among over 100 men lost and was awarded the war's first Victoria Cross (8 April 1940).

Gnesen ❙ 1656 ❙ 1st Northern War

Despite the defeat of a Swedish force outside Warsaw at Warka, Swedish forces under Adolf Johan, brother of King Charles X, continued to campaign west of the capital and met a much larger Polish army under Stefan Czarniecki and Jerzy Lubomirski at Gnesen (Gniezno), near Poznan. The Poles were defeated and Czarniekci was beaten by Charles himself in July at Warsaw (27 April 1656).

Gniezno ❙ 1656 ❙ 1st Northern War
See Gnesen

Gnila Lipa ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
On a cautious counter-offensive into eastern Poland, Russian commander Nikolai Ivanov sent Generals Nikolai Ruzskii and Aleksei Brusilov west across the Zlota Lipa against a reinforced Austrian force under General Eduard Böhm-Ermolli on the Gnila Lipa. The Austrians were driven back on Lemberg (Lvov), while Brusilov circled north through Rawa Russka (29–30 August 1914).

Goa ❙ 1510 ❙ Early Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia
Afonso de Albuquerque expanding Portugal's presence in India, seized the west coast port of Goa from Adil Shah, Sultan of Bijapur. A large-scale Muslim counter-attack a few months later made Albuquerque abandon the city, but he soon retook it and later sailed east to seize Malacca (August 1511). Goa remained Portuguese until annexed by India in 1961 (4 March & 25 November 1510).

Goa ❙ 1604 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars
Dutch Admiral Steven van de Haghen was leading an expedition to the East Indies and reached Portuguese Goa, on the west coast of India, where he was attacked by a large Spanish-Portuguese fleet. Van de Haghan drove off the attack in a fierce action, during which he captured a Portuguese frigate. The Dutch Admiral then continued east to seize the strategic island of Ambon (29 October 1604).

Godaveri ❙ 1326 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate
Muhammad Shah II assumed the throne in Delhi, then faced rebellion in the Deccan by his cousin Baha-ud-din Garshasp, Governor of Sagar, who refused to recognise him. When the rebel advanced on Deogiri, he was defeated at the Godaveri by Khvaja Jahan and Majir Abu Rija. He was eventually caught and executed and Mohammad renamed Deogiri as Daulatabad, his southern capital.

Godby ❙ 1918 ❙ Finnish War of Independence
See Aland

Gode ❙ 1977 ❙ Ogaden War
When Ogaden separatist rebels and Somali "volunteers" were heavily repulsed by the Ethiopian garrison at Gode (May), Somali President Siad Barre committed his army to a full invasion of Ethiopia with massive armoured support. Within a week, the Somalis had captured Gode and Ginir and most of central Ogaden. Their advance in the north was checked at Jijiga and Dire Dawa (July 1977).

Godley Wood ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812
See Baltimore

Godolla ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War
See Hatvan

Goes ❙ 1572 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence
With Zeeland holding out for Spain, Dutch under Jerome de 't Zeraerts besieged Goes on South Beveland. A brilliant night exploit saw veteran Christoforo de Mondragón lead 3,000 men ten miles through chest-deep low tide from the mainland (only nine drowned) to relieve the siege. The Dutch withdrew and the garrison of Goes went west to reinforce Middelburg (26 August–21 October 1572).

Gogland ❙ 1788 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War
See Hogland

Gogra ❙ 1529 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India
Flushed with success after destroying the Rajput army at Khanua (March 1527), the great Mughal Babur advanced into Bihar and Bengal against Sultan Nasrat Ali. Babur won a decisive victory in a three-day battle at the Gogra (Ghagra) where it joins the Ganges. He died soon afterwards and his son Humayun was left to complete the establishment of the 300-year Mughal Empire (6 May 1529).

Gogunda ❙ 1576 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Haldighat

Gohalwar ❙ 1757 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

Afghan ruler Ahmad Shah Durrani was returning home from the sack of Delhi in January when his force was attacked by Baba Deep Singh and he sent his son Timur Shah, Governor of Lahore, to punish the Sikhs. A few miles to the north of Amritsar at Gohalwar, the massively outnumbered Sikhs drove off the Afghans, although General Attal Khan slew Baba Deep (11 November 1757).

Goito ❙ 1848 ❙ 1st Italian War of Independence

In support of Italy's rising against Austria, King Charles Albert of Sardinia took command of the Allied forces and at Goito, on the Mincio east of Mantua, he defeated the Austrians under Marshal Josef Radetzky. While the Austrians were driven back across the Adige, they were victorious a few weeks later at Santa Lucia and in every other battle of the war (10 April 1848).

Golab ❙ 1656 ❙ 1st Northern War

On a fresh advance into Poland after his previous check at Jasna Gora, Charles X of Sweden pursued Polish commander Stefan Czarniecki across the Vistula, south of Warsaw, then attacked him to the southeast at Golab. The Poles were defeated and Charles continued southeast into the Ukraine, where he failed to storm Zamosc (17 February) and fell back towards Sandomierz (8 February 1656).

Golan Heights ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

Responding to shelling from the Golan Heights, Israeli aircraft savaged Syrian positions and General Dan Laner attacked towards the powerful fortifications at Tel Faher. Israeli tanks broke through after severe fighting, then quickly took the nearby fortress at Tel Azaziat. With Jewish forces threatening the northern Golan, Syria accepted a humiliating ceasefire (9–10 June 1967).

Golan Heights (1st) ❙ 1973 ❙ Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War

In a surprise assault on the Golan Heights, Syrian forces seized strategic Mount Hermon and forced the Israelis back along a wide front with massive superiority in men and tanks. After two days of intense fighting, the Israelis counter-attacked and the Syrians were pushed back to their starting point at the original 1967 ceasefire position, known as the Purple Line (6–9 October 1973).

Golan Heights (2nd) ❙ 1973 ❙ Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War

After repulsing a surprise Syrian assault across the Golan Heights, Israeli commander Yitzhak Hofi launched a massive counter-attack under Generals Raful Eitan and Dan Laner. Israeli armour smashed through to seize many key positions, but the Syrian defence was bitterly fought and Laner's over-stretched troops were about to face a widespread counter-offensive (10–12 October 1973).

Golan Heights (3rd) ❙ 1973 ❙ Arab-Israeli Yom Kippur War

As an Israeli offensive across the Golan Heights drove deep into Syria, aid came from Jordan and Iraq for a determined Arab counter-attack. After severe fighting, the Arab effort stalled and, when the recapture of Mount Hermon brought Israeli forces within artillery range of Damascus, Syria agreed to a ceasefire. Both sides eventually broadly returned to the pre-war border (15–19 October 1973).

Golconda ❙ 1687 ❙ Mughal Conquest of the Deccan Sultanates

Emperor Aurangzeb attacked the Muslim Sultanates of Central India, where he captured Bijapur, then besieged Golconda fortress, west of Hyderabad, defended by Sultan Abu-l-Hasan.

The Mughals suffered awful losses in costly sorties and the faulty explosion of two giant mines. Bribery finally opened the gates, ending the independent kingdom of Golconda (28 January–1 October 1687).

Gold Beach ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)
See D-Day

Goldberg ❙ 1635 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)
When John George of Saxony declared war on Sweden in Pomerania, his forces were defeated on the Elbe at Domitz by the Swedish-German army of Johann Banér. A month later he was defeated again to the northeast at Goldberg, 15 miles south of Gustrow. John George was then driven back into Brandenberg, where his army was defeated again at Kyritz (1 December 1635).

Golden Rock ❙ 1753 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War
See Trichinopoly (1st)

Golden Spurs ❙ 1302 ❙ Franco-Flemish Wars
See Courtrai

Golding's Farm ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Garnett's and Golding's Farms

Goldsboro Bridge ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
Union General John G. Foster led an expedition deep into North Carolina along the Neuse, where he dispersed Confederate forces at Kinston and White Hall, then defeated General Thomas L. Clingman's Confederate brigade at Goldsboro Bridge. Foster proceeded to destroy strategic railway facilities, which had been his objective, before returning downstream to New Bern (17 December 1862).

Goliad ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence
As fresh Mexican forces entered Texas, General Martin Perfecto de Cos secured Goliad, then marched to San Antonio leaving a garrison of only about 30, who were soon attacked by volunteers under George Collingsworth and Ben Milam. In a brief action with few casualties, the Texans captured the town, along with vital military supplies then used at the siege of San Antonio (9 October 1835).

Goliad Massacre ❙ 1836 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence
See Coleto Creek

Gollheim ❙ 1298 ❙ Habsburg Wars of Succession
After Rudolf of Germany died, the Electors provoked a bitter dispute by passing over his Habsburg son, Albert of Austria, in favour of the more pliable Adolphus of Nassau. Alienated by the King's unwise rule, some German Princes supported Albert to overthrow Adolphus. West of Worms, near Gollheim, the King was defeated and killed, reputedly by Albert's own hand (2 July 1298).

Golomb ❙ 1656 ❙ 1st Northern War
See Golab

Golovchin ❙ 1708 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War
See Holowczyn

Golpejerra ❙ 1072 ❙ War of Castilian Succession
In the war of succession between the sons of Ferdinand I of Castile, Sancho II of Castile defeated his brother, Alfonso VI of Leon, at Lantada in 1068, and they met again on the nearby battlefield of Golpejerra, near Carrion. Alfonso was defeated and captured and Sancho crowned himself King of Leon, reuniting Castile, Leon and Galicia (January 1072).

Golymin ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)
Following victories at Jena and Auerstadt, Napoleon Bonaparte marched into Poland and, on the same day as the battle at Pultusk, Marshals Louis Davout and Pierre Augereau met part of the Russian army under Prince Andréi Gallitzin further north of Warsaw at Golymin. The outcome was indecisive, but the Russians withdrew and the French were bogged in the mud (26 December 1806).

Gona ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

With Japanese forces driven back across Papua over the Kokoda Trail, Australian General George Vasey attacked the fortified Japanese position on the northern coast at Gona. Repeated assaults supported by artillery and bombing saw Gona finally taken at heavy cost to both sides. The Australians then turned east against nearby Buna (18 November–9 December 1942).

Gonaives ❙ 1802 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Santo Domingo Rising)

French General Charles Leclerc sent to suppress a rising in Santo Domingo by black leader Francois Toussaint l'Ouverture, launched one of the few large battles of the mainly guerrilla campaign on the Plain of Gonaives. While Leclerc seized Gonaives, General Donatien Rochambeau was repulsed at nearby Ravine-à-Coulevres and the rebels held out at Crête-à-Perriot (23 February 1802).

Gondar ❙ 1887 ❙ Sudanese-Ethiopian War

See Debra Sina

Gondar ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Despite Italy's surrender in East Africa at Amba Alagi, substantial Italian forces continued to hold out in the mountains of Ethiopia. Converging east through Chelga, south through Wolchefit Pass and west from Kulkaber, General Charles Fowkes took Gondar after heavy fighting. General Guglielmo Nasi surrendered over 23,000 men and the campaign was finally over (27 November 1941).

Gondra ❙ 1933 ❙ Chaco War

In a massive offensive against Paraguay in the Chaco Boreal, Bolivian forces under the German General Hans Kundt were driven off from the fortress of Nanawa and regrouped to attack Paraguayan Colonel Rafael Franco, under siege at nearby Gondra. A renewed assault commencing on 3 August was also repulsed and the offensive soon came to an end (January–9 September 1933).

Gonzales ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

Facing growing resistance from Texan citizens, Mexican authorities sent a force to repossess the cannon provided to Gonzales, east of San Antonio, for protection against Indians. Led by Colonels John H. Moore and Joseph E. W. Wallace, the residents used the gun to drive off the Mexicans—their battle banner said "Come and Take it"—and the war for Independence truly began (2 October 1835).

Goodrich's Landing ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

In support of besieged Vicksburg, Confederate forces further down the Mississippi under Colonel William H. Parsons advanced south from Arkansas and captured a small Union fortress near Lake Providence, Louisiana. Next day, Union marines led by General Alfred W. Ellet arrived at Goodrich's Landing and heavy fighting forced Parsons to withdraw (30 June 1863).

Goodwin Sands ❙ 1511 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

Scottish commander Andrew Barton returning from a cruise against Portugal was intercepted near the Goodwin Sands by English Admiral Lord Thomas Howard and his brother Sir Edward. With Barton killed in action, his two ships were taken as prizes. The resulting quarrel between Henry VIII of England and James IV of Scotland soon led to war and Scottish disaster at Flodden (2 August 1511).

Goodwin Sands ❙ 1652 ❙ 1st Dutch War

Prior to official declaration of the war, English Admiral Robert Blake intercepted a Dutch fleet under Admiral Maarten Tromp, which had been sheltering near Dover while waiting for a Dutch East Indies convoy. With Blake joined by the Downs squadron of Admiral Nehemiah Bourne, Tromp was defeated off the Goodwin Sands and was driven off with the loss of one ship (29 May 1652).

Goodwood ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

After finally taking Caen, Sir Bernard Montgomery launched a big armoured offensive to the southeast. Operation Goodwood saw over 1,000 British and Canadian tanks attack after massive aerial and artillery bombardment. But Marshal Günther von Kluge halted the controversial offensive after terrible losses on both sides. Montgomery then stalled until the advance on Falaise (18–21 July 1944).

Goose Green ❙ 1982 ❙ Falklands War

British troops marching south from San Carlos advanced on the Argentine garrison at the grass airfield at Goose Green. Unexpectedly outnumbered, Colonel Herbert Jones was killed taking nearby Darwin. Severe fighting cost 17 British and 50 Argentines killed before Air Commodore Wilson Pedroza surrendered Goose Green and 1,500 Argentines were captured (28–29 May 1982).

Gophna ❙ 166 BC ❙ Maccabean War

The first engagement of the war saw the Seleucid General Apollonius march south from Samaria to suppress the Hebrew rebellion, led by Judas Maccabeus. Avoiding an open battle, the outnumbered Jews attacked their enemy in a narrow valley near Gophna, north of Jerusalem. The Seleucid army was routed and Apollonius died on the battlefield.

Gorakhpur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Disheartened by defeat at Sohanpur, Faizabad rebels under Mehndi Husain were attacked at Gorakhpur by about 11,000 Gurkhas under General George MacGregor and Nepalese commander Jang Bahadur. With the rebels routed and pursued across the Rapti, order was restored in Gorakhpur and Jang Bahadur marched west into Oudh to support the British at Lucknow (6 January 1858).

Goraria ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

On the offensive in central India against the rebel Firuz Shah, Colonel Charles Stuart and Agent Henry Durand attacked the rebels at the village of Goraria, near Mandasur (Mandsaur). The rebels were finally driven out of Goraria after stubborn resistance and a heavy artillery bombardment. Firuz Shah and 2,000 men had meantime abandoned Mandasur (23–24 November 1857).

Goraslau ❙ 1601 ❙ Balkan National Wars

Prince Michael of Wallachia lost his throne at Bucov in late 1600, but regained support from Emperor Rudolf II, who sent General George Basta to help recover Transylvania from Sigismund Bathory (restored a year earlier with Basta's aid at Mirischlau). At Goraslau, near Zalau in northwest Transylvania, Basta defeated Sigismund, then murdered the hapless Michael (3 August 1601).

Gorazde ❙ 1994–1995 ❙ Bosnian War

With Sarajevo invested, heavy fighting developed further east around the Muslim enclave at Gorazde, which eventually also came under Serb siege. While NATO air-strikes forced Serb heavy weapons to pull back, fighting and shelling continued and UN peacekeepers were taken hostage. However, the UN "safe haven" held out until the war's end (March 1994–December 1995).

Gorée ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (West Africa)

On campaign against French West Africa, Britain captured Senegal, but was repulsed from nearby Gorée and sent a stronger force under Commodore Augustus Keppel and Colonel Richard Worge. The island fortress surrendered after a daylong bombardment, yielding 300 prisoners and almost 100 guns. At the end of the war, Gorée reverted to France (29 December 1758).

Gorée ❙ 1804 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

The French West African island of Gorée in Senegal, captured by the British in 1800, was retaken after fighting in 1804 by French Colonel Francois Blanchot de Verly, Governor of St Louis. It was then taken again a few weeks later by troops from a British convict transport. In July 1809 it was used by Major Charles Maxwell as the base to capture St Louis. Senegal was returned to France in 1814.

Gorizio ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

See Isonzo (2nd)

Gorlice-Tarnow ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

Despite a check in the Carpathians, the Austro-German army of General August von Mackensen concentrated southeast of Cracow and attacked General Radko Dmitriev on the axis Gorlice-Tarnow. Massive bombardment saw Mackensen break through the Russian line in just two days and take 140,000 prisoners. The Allies soon seized Przemysl and Lemberg (1 May–27 June 1915).

Gorni-Dubnik ❙ 1877 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

As part of the Russian siege of Plevna, south of the Danube, General Ossip Gourko led a large-scale attack against the redoubt of Gorni-Dubnik, 14 miles to the southwest, held by Achmet Hefiz Pasha. The strongpoint fell at a cost of over 3,000 Russian casualties and the nearby redoubt of Telisch fell two days later. Plevna held out another two months (24 October 1877).

Gorodeczno ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

During the Allied offensive into Russia towards Smolensk, a French-Austrian force under General Jean-Louis Reynier and Field Marshal Prince Karl Philipp von Schwarzenberg was challenged at Gorodeczno by Russians led by General Count Alexander Tormazov. The Russians were driven off with heavy losses to both sides and the Allied advance continued (12 August 1812).

Gorodok ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

In the advance on Lemberg (Lvov), Russian forces circled north through Rawa Russka, while west of the city around Gorodok, Austrian Generals Moritz Auffenberg and Svetozar Boroevic met Russians under Generals Nicolai Ruzskii and Aleksei Brusilov. Very heavy fighting forced the Austrians back across the San and the exhausted Russians besieged Przemysl (6–11 September 1914).

Goryokaku ❙ 1869 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration

With pro-Tokugawa rebels crushed at Fushimi, Ueno and Wakamatsu, Imperial General Kuroda Kiyotaka took a force to Hokkaido against Enomoto Takeaki, who had established a "Republic" at Goryokaku in Hakodate Bay. Enomoto was forced to surrender after a bloody assault, finally securing peace for Japan and ending the 250-year Tokugawa Shogunate (20–27 June 1869).

Gorzno ❙ 1629 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

Chancellor Axel Oxenstierna resolved to check Polish raids on outlying Swedish possessions and sent General Hermann Wrangel into northern Poland. Northeast of Torun at Gorzno, a Polish army under General Mikolaj Potocki was decisively defeated. Wrangel then advanced to the walls of Torun (German Thorn) before the threat of Polish reinforcements forced him to withdraw (2 February 1629).

Gotha ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Frederick II of Prussia withdrew west from Prague, leaving General Friedrich von Seydlitz with just 1,900 dragoons to resist Austrian Prince Joseph of Saxe-Hildburghausen and French Duke Charles of Soubise. A comic-opera coup at Gotha, near Erfurt, saw the Austro-French vanguard of 9,500 men routed. The Allied commanders lost again in November at Rossbach (17 September 1757).

Gothic Line ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

When Allied forces breached the Gustav Line and entered Rome, Field Marshal Albert Kesselring fought a bold withdrawal to the Gothic Line, through the Apennines to Rimini in the east, which fell after heavy fighting. The Germans then counter-attacked south of Bologna and the offensive stalled until the spring, when a renewed advance entered the Po Valley (August 1944–April 1945).

Gotland ❙ 1563 ❙ Nordic Seven Years War

While raiding against Oland, off southeast Sweden, Danish commander Peder Skram's 32-strong Danish-German flotilla was boldly attacked off Gotland by just 18 Swedish ships under Jakob Bagge. The resulting action was a hard-fought draw, but Skram was dismissed for failing to defeat the outnumbered Swedes. The two fleets met again the following year off Oland (11 September 1563).

Gottolengo ❙ 1427 ❙ Venetian-Milanese Wars

Venetian Captain-General Francesco Bussone Count Carmagnola captured Brescia in 1426 and continued the war by attacking an outnumbered Milanese army at Gottolengo, northeast of Cremona. The confused battle was broken off with heavy losses on both sides and no clear result. Carmagnola soon gathered his forces for a renewed encounter at nearby Casa-al-Secco.

Gqokli ❙ 1818 ❙ Rise of Shaka Zulu

On a bloody offensive after assuming the Zulu throne, the young warrior Shaka moved against his rival Zwide of the Ndwandwe, who had killed the King's mentor, Dingiswayo. In Shaka's first great victory, at Gqokli near Ulundi, Zwide's larger force under Nomahlanjana was routed—with a claimed 7,000 killed out of 12,000. He was finally beaten the following year at Mhlatuze (April 1818).

Grahamstown ❙ 1819 ❙ 5th Cape Frontier War

Provoked by British intervention after his victory at Amalinda, the Xhosa Chief Ndlambe sent Nxele and 10,000 warriors against the settlement at Grahamstown, defended by Colonel Thomas Willshire and just 450 men. In a battle which virtually saved Cape Colony, the Xhosa were finally repulsed, losing perhaps 1,000 killed. Nxele was defeated in August at the Fish River (22 April 1819).

Grahovo ❙ 1858 ❙ Turko-Montenegran Wars

When Prince Danilo II of Montenegro attempted to annexe some border areas of Herzegovina, he provoked a fresh Turkish invasion by Hussein Pasha. The Turks were heavily defeated in the northwest at Grahovo by Danilo's brother Mirko Petrovich, losing 3,000 men killed and all their guns. The Powers then intervened to secure peace and Danilo was later assassinated (13 May 1858).

Grammos ❙ 1948 ❙ Greek Civil War

Following success at Roumeli, 40,000 government troops began a large offensive against the stronghold on Mount Grammos, but were driven off and General Kalogeropolous was relieved. General Thrasyvoulos Tsakalotos attacked again and, after heavy losses on both sides, Markos Vaphiadis led a brilliant rebel withdrawal into Albania. He soon came back at Kastoria (14 June–22 August 1948).

Grammos ❙ 1949 ❙ Greek Civil War

Ten days after victory in the northwest at Vitsi, huge government forces under Marshal Alexandros Papagos, with intense air support, attacked and overwhelmed the final insurgent stronghold around Mount Grammos. Communist leader Nikos Zakhariadis and about 8,000 survivors crossed into Albania then dispersed into exile. A ceasefire on 16 October ended the war (25–30 August 1949).

Grampians ❙ 84 ❙ Roman Conquest of Britain
See Mons Graupius

Gran ❙ 1683 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars
See Esztergom

Gran ❙ 1685 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars
See Neuhausel

Granada, Nicaragua ❙ 1855 ❙ National (Filibuster) War

The American Filibuster William Walker defeated a Legitimist force in western Nicaragua at La Virgen in September, then bypassed the concentration further north at Rivas by sailing along the lake to land and advance on Granada. Walker surprised and stormed the city and, after executing Legitimist leader Ponciano Corral at Leon, effectively seized power in Nicaragua (13 October 1855).

Granada, Nicaragua ❙ 1856 ❙ National (Filibuster) War

Attacking the American William Walker, who had seized power in Nicaragua, the Central American allies under Mariano Paredes advanced from Masaya to besiege nearby Granada. After shocking losses on both sides to wounds and disease (Paredes died of cholera), Walker burned and abandoned Granada and José Victor Zavala pursued him to Rivas (24 November–13 December 1856).

Granada, Spain ❙ 1491–1492 ❙ Final Christian Reconquest of Spain

In the final campaign of the Reconqista, Ferdinand V of Castile and Aragon launched his massive army against the heavily fortified city of Granada, the last remaining Muslim possession in Spain. Abu Abdallah (Boabdil), King of Granada, surrendered the city after a long and brutal siege and eight centuries of Muslim rule in Spain came to an end (April 1491–2 January 1492).

Grand-Couronné ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)
See Nancy

Grandella ❙ 1266 ❙ Angevin Conquest of the Two Sicilies
See Benevento

Grande Ronde Valley ❙ 1856 ❙ Yakima Indian Wars

While campaigning against Indians in the Columbia Basin resisting removal to reservations, Colonel Benjamin F. Shaw took 400 volunteers from Washington into northern Oregon against Walla Wallas, Cayuse and Umatillas in the Grande Ronde Valley, west of modern La Grande. Shaw's men killed 40 Indians and destroyed a large village. Fighting resumed in 1858 at Pine Creek (17 July 1856).

Grand Gulf ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union Admiral David D. Porter preparing to assault Confederate Vicksburg on the Mississippi led a squadron of ironclads against Confederate batteries downstream at Grand Gulf, Mississippi, commanded by General John S. Bowen. Though Porter's gunboats were driven off after a heavy exchange of fire, the main Union forces landed further south near Port Gibson (29 April 1863).

Grand Port ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Determined to recover the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius, British Commodore Samuel Pym, supported by Captain Nesbit Willoughby, landed on Isle de la Passe (13 August). But in a seabattle off Grand Port, French Commodore Victor Duperre sank or captured all four British frigates. The expedition had to withdraw and Mauritius was not retaken until later in the year (23 August 1810).

Grandson ❙ 1476 ❙ Burgundian-Swiss War

Provoked by a Swiss invasion of Lorraine and defeat at Héricourt, Charles the Bold of Burgundy took an army into Switzerland, where he captured Grandson on Lake Neuchatel and hanged the garrison (28 February). Facing a powerful Swiss counter-attack northeast of the town, his troops panicked and fled, abandoning their arms and baggage. He lost again at Morat in June (2 March 1476).

Granicus ❙ 334 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

Alexander the Great opened his war against Persia by crossing the Dardanelles to the Granicus (modern Kocabas), on the Sea of Marmara, where he met and decisively defeated a smaller scratch force under local Satraps and Greek mercenary commander Memnon. The Persians fled and the mercenaries were largely massacred, though Memnon escaped with the Persian fleet to Miletus (May 334 BC).

Granson ❙ 1476 ❙ Burgundian-Swiss War

See Grandson

Grantham ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Advancing towards Newark, Nottinghamshire, New Model Army commanders Francis Willoughby Lord Parham, Sir John Hotham and Oliver Cromwell were surprised at nearby Grantham by Royalist cavalry under General Charles Cavendish. The Royalists were driven off with substantial losses in a confused action, but the Parliamentary advance on Newark was abandoned (13 May 1643).

Grant's Hill ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Fort Duquesne

Granville ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

In command of a British squadron off northwestern France, Admiral Thomas Dilkes attacked a French convoy of 45 merchant ships and their escort of just three frigates. In a brilliant victory between Granville and Avranches, he drove ashore, captured or destroyed almost the entire fleet. The following year Dilkes was knighted for his part in the great victory off Malaga (26–27 July 1703).

Granville ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Vendée War)

Royalist rebel Henri de la Rochejaquelein marched north into Normandy after victory at Entrammes (26 October) to support a planned landing by émigrés and attacked the port of Granville, defended by Republican General Jean Pierre Varin and a small garrison. The large Vendéean army was disastrously repulsed and retreated towards the Loire before the British navy arrived (November 1793).

Granville Raid ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

Leading an unexpected German offensive late in the war, Admiral Friedrich Huffmeier, commander of occupying forces in the British Channel Islands, sent 600 men in minesweepers and smaller craft from Jersey against the French port of Granville. The raiders, under Lieutenant Carl-Friedrich Mohr, destroyed port facilities and Allied shipping before withdrawing (8–9 March 1945).

Graspan ❙ 1899 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

As British General Lord Paul Methuen advanced to relieve besieged Kimberley, he drove the Boers out of Belmont, then attacked Jacobus Prinsloo and Jacobus de la Rey in a position further north at Graspan. The British lost about 200 men in a successful frontal assault and the Boers about 100 before Methuen continued north across the Modder towards Magersfontein (25 November 1899).

Grass Fight ❙ 1835 ❙ Texan Wars of Independence

While Texan forces maintained a loose blockade of Mexican General Martin de Cos at San Antonio, word was received of an approaching mule train with silver to pay the Mexican garrison. A detachment under James Bowie and Ed Burleson attacked the column and, after a sharp skirmish, captured the load. It proved to be grass collected for horses inside the siege (28 November 1835).

Grassy Lick ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Cove Mountain

Grathe Heath ❙ 1157 ❙ Danish War of Succession

With three claimants to the Danish throne, Sweyn III Grade invited his rivals to mediation at Roskilde, where he assassinated Knut III Magnussen (9 August). However, Waldemar I escaped to Jutland and, south of Viborg at Grathe Heath, he later defeated Sweyn, who was killed by a peasant during the subsequent pursuit. Waldemar became sole King of all Denmark (23 October 1157).

Grattan Massacre ❙ 1854 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

See Fort Laramie

Graus ❙ 1063 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

Having invaded Muslim Saragossa, held by al-Muqtadir, King Ramiro I of Aragon attacked the Pyrennean town of Graus, north of Monson. Concerned by Aragonese expansion, Ramiro's brother Ferdinand I of Castile sent his son Sancho to help the Muslims recover Graus. Aided by Rodrigo Diaz de Bivar—El Cid—Sancho defeated and killed his uncle Ramiro (8 May 1063).

Grave ❙ 1674 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

In command of the counter-attack against French invaders of the Dutch Republic, General Karel Rabenhaupt Baron de Sucha laid siege to Grave, on the Maas northeast of Hertogenbosch, where he had formerly been Governor. The siege lasted over three months—assumed by William III of Orange on 9 October—before the city was finally retaken (15 July–28 October 1674).

Gravelines ❙ 1558 ❙ 5th Habsburg-Valois War

Following the recapture of Calais, French forces under Marshal Paul des Thermes advanced into Spanish Flanders, but were driven back by Count Lamoral of Egmont and trapped on the shore at Gravelines, east of Calais, between the Spanish army and the English fleet, which pounded their flank. The French rout led to peace between England, France and Spain and ended the war (13 July 1558).

Gravelines ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Gaston Duke d'Orleans (son of Henry IV) expanded French territory north into the Spanish Netherlands, where he laid siege to Gravelines, supported by Marshals Charles de la Porte Duke de la Meilleraie and Jacques de Gassion plus a Dutch naval blockade. The port fell after two months, followed by other key towns including Bethune, Cassel, Courtrai and Dunkirk (May–28 July 1644).

Gravelly Run ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Lewis's Farm

Gravelotte ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

With Marshal Francois-Achille Bazaine defeated at Mars-la-Tour, Prussian General Helmut von Moltke attacked at Gravelotte, sending Prince Friedrich Karl of Prussia against Bazaine's right flank at St Privat. Marshal Francois-Antoine Canrobert defended bravely until forced back by numbers. Bazaine then weakly retired east into a strategically disastrous siege at Metz (18 August 1870).

Gravenstafel ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Opening the Second Battle of Ypres, the German Fourth Army under Duke Albrecht attacked in the northeast around Gravenstafel. French troops were forced back by the first use of gas on the Western Front before British and Canadians under General Sir Herbert Plumer checked the advance. The Germans then switched to attack again through nearby St Julien (22–23 April 1915).

Gray ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

German commander Karl August Werder defeated a French force at Chatillon-le-Duc, then marched west towards Dijon against Gardes

Mobiles sent to defend the Vingeanne. The French were put to flight, losing a large number of prisoners in fighting near Gray at Talmay and Essertenne. Werder then sent General Gustav von Beyer probing further west towards Dijon (27 October 1870).

Greasy Grass ❙ 1876 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars
See Little Big Horn

Great Bridge ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

In the wake of humiliation at Hampton (25 October), Virginian Governor John Murray Earl of Dunmore faced an advance on Norfolk itself under American Colonel William Woodford. At the Great Bridge, a causeway south of the town, Captain Charles Fordyce was defeated and killed and Dunmore fell back. When the colonists seized Norfolk, he withdrew to ships in the harbour (9 December 1775).

Great Meadows ❙ 1754 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

Advancing against the French at Fort Duquesne (modern Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania), Colonel George Washington and about 150 Virginia militia encountered a patrol at Great Meadows near the Youghiogany. A sharp action saw the French all killed or captured, including Ensign Joseph Coulon de Villiers killed. Just weeks later, Washington was forced to surrender at Fort Necessity (27 May 1754).

Great Plains ❙ 203 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War
See Bagradas

Great Sortie ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War
See Villiers

Great Swamp Fight ❙ 1675 ❙ King Philip's War

In war against Wampanoag Chief Metacomet—known by New England colonists as King Philip—1,000 men under Governor Josiah Winslow of Plymouth, aided by Mohegan Indians, attacked the fortified village of Philip's Narrangansett ally, Canonchet, at Kingston, Rhode Island. The tribe was devastated in the so-called Great Swamp Fight, although Canonchet escaped (19 December 1675).

Great Wall ❙ 1933 ❙ Manchuria Incident

A sequel to Japan seizing Manchuria at Mukden (modern Shenyang) in 1931, saw Japan invade Jehol (Inner Mongolia) to declare the Great Wall their southern boundary. General He Yingqin led a prolonged resistance in the so-called Battle of the Great Wall but, with Beijing itself threatened, China made peace. Jehol was then absorbed into the puppet state of Manchukuo (23 February–31 May 1933).

Great Zab River ❙ 130 BC ❙ Later Syrian-Parthian War
See Zab

Greece ❙ 1940 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

Encouraged by German success in the west, Italians invaded Greece from Albania under General Sebastiano Visconti-Prasca and later Ubaldo Soddu. They were checked by Greek commander Alexander Papagos, who counter-attacked and entered Albania. Early the next year, German forces invaded Greece and Papagos had to withdraw and surrender (28 October–23 December 1940).

Greece ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

As German forces under Marshal Wilhelm List stormed through the Balkans into Yugoslavia and Greece, 75,000 British and Commonwealth troops under General Henry Wilson arrived from the Middle East in a futile attempt to defend Greece. The Greek army was overwhelmed, with more than 250,000 men captured and the badly mauled Allies evacuated to Crete (6–30 April 1941).

Greenbrier River ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

With the Confederates repulsed on Cheat Summit, south of Huttonsville, West Virginia,

General Joseph Reynolds advanced 12 miles east towards Confederate General Henry R. Jackson on the Greenbrier River. Reynolds was checked in a sharp action at Bartow, but Jackson suffered greater losses and abandoned Bartow for Camp Allegheny, nine miles to the southeast (3 October 1861).

Green Islands ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

New Zealanders under General Harold Barrowclough captured the Treasury Islands, then attacked the Green Islands, northwest of Bougainville, occupied by about 120 Japanese. While the main island, Nissan, was taken at the cost of just ten New Zealanders and three American observers killed, the action secured an important strategic airfield to bomb Truk and Rabaul (15–16 February 1944).

Green River ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Rowlett's Station

Green Spring ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

See Jamestown Ford

Grenada ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution

French Admiral Charles-Hector Comte d'Estaing, commanding in the West Indies, eluded British Admiral John Byron to seize St Vincent (16 June), then sailed south and seized Grenada, along with over 1,000 men and 120 guns. The two fleets met off Grenada and a drawn action saw Byron's ships suffer heavy damage. However, d'Estaing withdrew and later sailed for Savannah (2–6 July 1779).

Grenada ❙ 1796 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Faced by rebellion against British rule in the West Indian island of Grenada, led by French planters and supported by the French in Martinique, British General Sir Ralph Abercromby landed with a small force and recaptured the island after ten days of fighting. The French mulatto leader Fedon was hanged along with a number of rebel planters (June 1796).

Grenada ❙ 1983 ❙ American Invasion of Grenada

When left-wing military forces seized power in Grenada, US President Ronald Regan sent an intervention force of 7,000, supposedly to protect American civilians. When the Grenadian army and 700 Cuban militia resisted fiercely, 19 Americans and perhaps 60 locals and Cubans were killed and many were wounded before order was restored and free elections were ensured (25–27 October 1983).

Grengam ❙ 1720 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Following Russian victory at sea near Osel, off Estonia, Admiral Mikhail Golitsyn's galleys attacked Swedish commander Erik Sjoblad near Grengam in the southern Aland Islands. Lured onto shallow reefs, the Swedes were attacked and boarded, with four frigates and over 400 men captured. The victory further strengthened Russia's position and hastened an end to the war (27 July 1720).

Grevena ❙ 1947 ❙ Greek Civil War

Driven off from Konitsa, near the Albanian border, a large Communist force advanced southeast towards Grevena. Very severe fighting saw over 300 insurgent casualties and also heavy government losses before the attack was finally driven off. However, the insurgents gradually secured considerable territory in the area and, months later, attacked further south at Metsovo (22–25 July 1947).

Grijon ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

With French Marshal Nicolas Soult driven through northern Portugal by an Anglo-Portuguese counter-offensive by General Sir Arthur Wellesley, his rearguard under General Julien Mermet took a defensive position just south of Oporto, at Grijon. Wellesley's cavalry suffered a sharp check on the nearby heights of Carvalho before Mermet withdrew and Oporto fell next day (11 May 1809).

Grimball's Landing ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

Union General Alfred H. Terry renewed the offensive against Charleston Harbour, South Carolina, leading a diversionary landing on the western side of James Island. Terry repulsed an attack by Confederate General Johnson Hagood at Grimball's Landing before withdrawing. The main offensive was launched two days later, further east against Fort Wagner (16 July 1863).

Griswoldville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Union commander William T. Sherman marched through Georgia from Atlanta to Savannah, his right wing under General Charles C. Walcutt was attacked at Griswoldville, just east of Macon, by militia under Generals Pleasant J. Philips and Joseph Wheeler. The Georgians were repulsed with 600 men lost and Wheeler attacked days later at Buck Head Creek (22 November 1864).

Grochow ❙ 1831 ❙ Polish Rebellion

When Poland deposed Duke Constantine, brother of Tsar Nicholas I, Russian Field Marshal Hans von Diebitsch took 100,000 men as far as Grochow on the eastern outskirts of Warsaw, where he was finally halted by Prince Michael Radziwill. Both sides suffered massive losses and the Russian invaders withdrew a few days later after another bloody encounter at Praga (19–20 February 1831).

Grodek ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

See Gorodok

Grodno ❙ 1708 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Charles XII of Sweden and General Carl Gustav Rehnskjold invaded Russian Lithuania and Charles personally took a vanguard of only 800 cavalry to seize the strategic bridge on the Nema at Grodno from 2,000 Russians. Believing the entire Swedish army had arrived, Tsar Peter I fled Grodno and, after a failed counter-attack, the Russians withdrew to the Berezina (26 January 1708).

Grodno ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

Just days after the fall of Brest-Litovsk, Germans under General Hermann von Eichhorn converged north on Grodno (in modern Byelorussia), which was surrounded by strong fortresses. After fighting their way into the city, the Germans were driven out by a powerful counter-attack. The Russian rearguard was then repulsed and the Germans continued northeast towards Vilna (1–4 September 1915).

Groenkloof ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

Facing Boer commandos in the eastern Cape Colony, a strong counter-insurgency column under Colonel Harry Scobell attacked commandant Johannes Lotter in camp at Groenkloof, near the village of Pietersburg, west of Cradock. Surprised at dawn, the Boers lost 60 casualties and another 60 captured. Lotter and seven other prisoners were later executed (4–5 September 1901).

Groenkop ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Tweefontein

Grol ❙ 1627 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Dutch Captain-General Frederick Henry (son of William of Orange) led his first siege in the prolonged war, attacking the Spanish-held town of Grol (modern Groenlo), northwest of Winterswijk, with a force of 30,000 Dutch, French and English troops. When a mine was exploded the attackers stormed Grol, which was forced to surrender (19 July–9 August 1627).

Groningen ❙ 1580 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

See Hardenberg Heath

Groningen ❙ 1594 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Continuing his successful campaign in northern Holland, Prince Maurice of Orange besieged the fortified city of Groningen, which had previously held out against Dutch forces. Supported by English General Sir Francis Vere, Maurice overwhelmed the stubborn pro-Spanish garrison, forcing the city's surrender. Catholicism was officially banned (April–15 July 1594).

Groningen ❙ 1672 ❙ 3rd Dutch War

While France entered the Dutch Republic from the south through Tolhuis and Nijmegen, Bishop Christof Bernhard van Galen of Munster invaded the north on behalf of Louis XIV and besieged Groningen, defended by General Karel Rabenhaupt Baron de Sucha. After more than a month Van Galen was unable to take the fortress city and withdrew (22 July–26 August 1672).

Groote Keeten ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

At the beginning of the British-Russian expedition to Holland, General Sir Ralph Abercromby, supported by General John Moore, made a strongly opposed landing in the north at Groote Keeten, which cost over 500 British casualties. Fortunately, Frederick Augustus Duke of York arrived with reinforcements before battle three weeks later at Bergen-aan-Zee (27 August 1799).

Grossbeeren ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Defeated at Lützen and Bautzen, Prussia and Russia attempted to attack Napoleon Bonaparte's lieutenants, including Marshal Nicolas Oudinot, advancing against Berlin. At nearby Grossbeeren, General Friedrich von Bulow's Prussians and Swedes under former French Marshal Jean Baptiste Bernadotte defeated Oudinot and forced him to withdraw (23 August 1813).

Gross-Gorschen ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Lützen

Gross-Jagersdorf ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

While Prussia's Anglo-Hanoverian allies were defeated in the west at Hastenbeck, 100,000 Russians under Marshal Stefan Apraksin invaded East Prussia against General Hans von Lehwald. The heavily outnumbered Prussians suffered a costly defeat at Gross-Jagersdorf, southeast of Königsberg. Apraksin's hungry army later mutinied and returned to Russia (30 July 1757).

Grotniki ❙ 1439 ❙ Hussite Wars

When Hussite Polish magnates formed a confederation against 15-year-old King Ladislaw III, Regent Bishop Zbigniew Olenski of Cracow sent a large force against them at Grotniki, southwest of Posnan. Rebel leader Spytek of Melsztyn, the Castellan of Belz, was defeated and killed, crushing the resistance and virtually ending the Hussite cause in Poland (4 May 1439).

Groveton ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

At the start of the decisive battle known as Second Bull Run, Confederate General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson surprised a Union force under Generals Rufus King and John Gibbon to the west at Groveton, Virginia. With both sides suffering costly losses, Union commander John Pope moved towards Jackson in apparent pursuit and was drawn into the main battle next day (28 August 1862).

Grumentum ❙ 207 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

As the Carthaginian Hannibal in Italy awaited his brother Hasdrubal marching from Spain, he was attacked southeast of Salerno outside Grumentum (modern Saponara di Grumento) by superior Roman forces under Gaius Claudius Nero and Quintus Fulvius Flacco. An inconclusive action allowed Hannibal to continue towards Apulia, while Nero marched north to defeat Hasdrubal at the Metaurus.

Gruneberg ❙ 1761 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

On a fresh Allied offensive in the west, Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick led a Prussian-British force into Hesse. At Gruneberg, just east of Giessen, he was defeated by French forces under Marshal Victor-Francois Broglie, who captured 2,000 prisoners. Ferdinand was forced to withdraw, but had his revenge a few months later at Vellinghausen (21 March 1761).

Grunwald ❙ 1410 ❙ Later Wars of the Teutonic Knights

See Tannenberg

Guadalajara, Mexico ❙ 1858 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Recovering from the terrible Liberal defeat at Ahualalco (29 September), commander Santos Degollado besieged Guadalajara, which fell by assault after a month (27 October). However, six weeks later Degollado faced 4,000 Conservative government troops under Generals Miguel Miramón and Leonardo Márquez. A sharp defeat forced him to evacuate the city (September–14 December 1858).

Guadalajara, Mexico (1st) ❙ 1860 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Liberal commander Pedro Ogazón regrouped after loss at Colima (December 1859) to attack Guadalajara, successfully defended by a 3,000-strong garrison under General Adrián Woll. General José López Uraga then tried to take the city, but he was defeated and captured wounded. When President Miguel Miramón arrived to complete the Liberal rout, Ogazón had to withdraw (April–25 May 1860).

Guadalajara, Mexico (2nd) ❙ 1860 ❙ Mexican War of the Reform

Six weeks after victory at Silao, new Liberal commander Jesús González Ortega besieged and bombarded nearby Guadalajara, stoutly defended by General Severo del Castillo. President Miguel Miramón sent a relief force under General Leonardo Márquez, but before he arrived Castillo was forced to surrender. Márquez himself lost at nearby Calderón (26 September–3 November 1860).

Guadalajara, Spain ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Despite Nationalist failure around Madrid at Corunna Road and Jarama, Mario Roatta's Italians attacked to the northeast towards Guadalajara, supported by Spanish General José Moscardó. The Nationalists took and then lost Brihuega before the line was stabilised. Republican General Enrique Jurado from Madrid later counter-attacked at Brunete and Teruel (8–23 March 1937).

Guadalaviar ❙ 75 BC ❙ Sertorian War

See Turia

Guadalcanal—Land ❙ 1942–1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

After American victory at Midway, General Alexander Vandergrift landed on Guadalcanal against General Haruyoshi Hyakutake. A bloody, escalating six-month campaign cost 25,000 Japanese and 6,000 American casualties, with major actions at the Tenaru and Matanikau Rivers and at Bloody Ridge, before the Japanese finally evacuated the island (7 August 1942–9 February 1943).

Guadalcanal—Naval (1st) ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

When Admiral Hiroake Abe's bombardment force was met off Guadalcanal by Admiral Daniel Callaghan, a brief night action saw an American cruiser and four destroyers lost and two Japanese destroyers sunk. After dawn, a damaged Japanese battleship was sunk by aircraft and an American cruiser was torpedoed with 700 men lost. Battle resumed next night (13 November 1942).

Guadalcanal—Naval (2nd) ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Returning to bombard Guadalcanal, Admiral Nobutake Kondo lost a battleship and a destroyer in a brutal night action, which also cost Admiral Willis Lee three destroyers sunk and a cruiser damaged. Meanwhile, Admiral Raizo Tanaka's destroyers landed some troops though he lost all 11 of his troop-ships, which were never again used to reinforce Guadalcanal (14–15 November 1942).

Guadalete ❙ 711 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Spain

While Roderic, last Visigothic King of Spain, was campaigning in the north, a small Muslim force under Tarik ibn Ziyad invaded from North Africa and advanced into Cadiz Province, supported by rival Goth leader Achila. Near the town of Xeres (Jerez) at Lake Janda, the Arabs won a great victory and Roderic was killed. The battle is mistakenly best known as Guadalete (19 July 711).

Guadalquivir ❙ 211 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Baetis

Guadeloupe ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (Caribbean)

General Sir Peregrine Hopson and Commodore John Moore regrouped after loss at Martinique and sailed to French Guadeloupe, where they landed after a heavy bombardment. However, the assault stalled through inertia and losses to disease, including Hopson himself. General John Barrington eventually took the island, which was returned to France after the war (23 January–1 May 1759).

Guadeloupe ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Having taken the French West Indian islands of Martinique and St Lucia, British Admiral Sir John Jervis and General Sir Charles Grey landed on Guadeloupe, where General Georges Collot surrendered after a week. General Victor Hugues later counter-invaded and, though Jervis and Grey returned, French reinforcements landed and the island was retaken (12 April–10 December 1794).

Guadeloupe ❙ 1798 ❙ Franco-American Quasi War

In undeclared war with Revolutionary France, three American ships in the West Indies under Captain Alexander Murray were surprised off Guadeloupe by French frigates l'Insurgente (36) and La Volontaire (44). The American schooner Retaliation (Lieutenant William Bainbridge) surrendered after a powerful broadside. L'Insurgente was taken two months later off Nevis (20 November 1798).

Guadeloupe ❙ 1800 ❙ Franco-American Quasi War

A year after his victory off Nevis, American Captain Thomas Truxton in Constellation pursued and attacked the powerful French frigate La Vengeance, off Guadeloupe. French Captain F. M. Pitot withdrew after a bloody, five-hour drawn action, though Constellation was too badly damaged to pursue. A treaty soon ended America's undeclared war with Revolutionary France (1 February 1800).

Guadeloupe ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Although Britain captured the West Indian island of Guadeloupe in 1794, it was immediately recovered by French Governor Victor Hugues. In 1810 Britain sent a fresh expedition under General Sir George Beckwith and Guadeloupe fell within a week. An immediate French attempt to recapture the island failed, but it was returned to France in 1815 (27 January–5 February 1810).

Guad-el-Ras ❙ 1860 ❙ Spanish-Moroccan War

Marshal Leopoldo O'Donnell wanted to punish the Moors for attacking Spanish possessions in North Africa and secured Tetuán (4 February), then advanced east against entrenched positions behind the Guad-el-Ras. The Moors were decisively defeated and British diplomatic pressure brought the war to an end, with Morocco giving Spain the Atlantic coast territory, known as Ifni (23 March 1860).

Gualcho ❙ 1828 ❙ Central American National Wars

After securing Honduras following victory over Central American Federal forces at La Trinidad, General Francisco Morazán marched into El Salvador and routed Federal General

Vicente Dominquez on the Rio Lempa at Gualcho. Morazán occupied San Miguel, but could not break the Federal siege of San Salvador and withdrew, later returning for victory at San Antonio (6 July 1828).

Gualqui ❙ 1819 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

See Hualqui

Guam ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

Early in the war, the American warship Charleston (Captain Henry Glass) and three transports left Honolulu to seize Guam. After a token bombardment of Fort Santa Cruz, Spanish Governor Juan Marino (who had no knowledge of the state of war or Spain's naval defeat at Manila) surrendered the island, giving the United States its first possession in the Pacific (21 June 1898).

Guam ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As war started, Japanese attacked the naval station on Guam, held with nothing larger than machine-guns by 427 marines and sailors and 247 native troops. After two days of bombing, which sank a minelayer in the harbour, 5,400 Japanese landed and brief fighting cost 17 military and about 40 civilians killed. Governor Captain George J. McMillin (USN) then surrendered (8–10 December 1941).

Guam ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Bloody fighting on Saipan in the Mariana Islands delayed the attack on Guam, 150 miles to the southwest, fiercely defended by 19,000 Japanese under General Takeshi Takashina. Landing after a massive naval bombardment, General Roy Geiger virtually annihilated the garrison, although guerrilla resistance continued for months. The last survivor held out until 1972 (21 July–10 August 1944).

Guanajuato (1st) ❙ 1810 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

Militant priest Miguel Hidalgo initiated peasant rebellion at Dolores, then marched on Guanajuato, where the Intendente Juan Antonio de Riano attempted to defend the Alhondiga de Granaditas (granary). De Riano was killed, along with perhaps 300 Spanish soldiers and civilians, and Hidalgo marched towards Mexico City and the Monte de las Cruces (28 September 1810).

Guanajuato (2nd) ❙ 1810 ❙ Mexican Wars of Independence

Two weeks after beating Miguel Hidalgo at Aculco, Royalist commander Félix María Calleja marched north from Querétaro against Revolutionary General Ignacio Allende at Guanajuato. A six-hour action saw the large rebel army defeated, losing about 1,000 killed and 22 cannon, followed by executions and vengeance. Allende escaped to fight two months later at Calderón (23 November 1810).

Guandu ❙ 200 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

Amid the decline of the Han Dynasty, the warlord Yuan Shao took a large force south across the Yellow River and met his rival Cao Cao (Ts'ao Ts'ao) near Guandu, northwest of modern Kaifeng. Cao Cao held the numerically superior force, which fell apart when he cut their supplies. When Yuan Shao died (202), Cao Cao fought his sons and eventually ended Yuan power in 207 at White Wolf Mountain.

Guangchang ❙ 1934 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Mao Zedong's Communists in Jiangxi repulsed four "encirclement campaigns," before facing a massive new Nationalist offensive under German General Hans von Seekt. The Red Army suffered severe casualties trying to defend Guangchang to protect their capital to the south at Ruijin (Juichin). These losses triggered the decision to break out on the Long March to Yan'an (11–28 April 1934).

Guangzhou ❙ 879 ❙ Huang Chao Rebellion

Bandit warlords threatened the Tang Empire and Huang Chao demanded control of the international trade port of Guangzhou (Canton).

When it was refused, he attacked the city in force, killing Military Governor Li Tiao. The ensuing sack of the great city reportedly cost more than 100,000 killed, including many foreign merchants. Huang then returned north to capture Luoyang and Chang'an.

Guangzhou ❙ 1841 ❙ 1st Opium War

Superintendent Captain Charles Elliot secured the Bogue Forts, then sent General Sir Hugh Gough up the Zhujiang with 15 warships under Captain Sir Humphrey Fleming Senhouse to besiege Guangzhou itself. Following a Chinese assault at Whampoa, Gough attacked and Commissioner Yishan capitulated. The British withdrew, but months later renewed the war at Xiamen (25–30 May 1841).

Guangzhou ❙ 1857 ❙ 2nd Opium War

After the British sank junks at Fatshan Creek, Anglo-French troops under James Lord Elgin and Baron Jean-Baptiste Gros advanced on Guangzhou (Canton), supported by Admiral Charles Rigault de Genouilly and General Sir Charles van Straubenzee. Imperial Commissioner Ye Mingshen yielded after brief bombardment. In May 1858, the Allies secured the Dagu Forts (28–30 December 1857).

Guangzhou ❙ 1927 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

While Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalists campaigned in northern China against the warlords, a Communist insurrection broke out in Guangzhou (Canton), where a Soviet was proclaimed under General Ye Ting. Kuomintang General Zhang Fakui brutally suppressed the rising with terrible destruction and thousands were executed (11–14 December 1927).

Guangzhou ❙ 1938 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

As Japan's army drove deep into China towards Wuhan, their navy determined to cut overseas supply lines and attacked the southeast coast. Xiamen (Amoy) fell to amphibious assault (12 May) and troops, with massive naval and air cover, later landed at Bias Bay (Daya Bay) to advance on Guangzhou (Canton). The city fell by storm and the Chinese withdrew (12–21 October 1938).

Guánica ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

With war in Cuba virtually over, American General Nelson A. Miles took 3,300 men against Puerto Rico, landing at the southern port of Guánica. Supported by General Guy V. Henry, Miles defeated the Spanish garrison, killing four without loss to himself, then started east towards Ponce. However, news of peace arrived and Puerto Rico was later ceded to the United States (25 July 1898).

Guantánamo Bay ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War

American Admiral William T. Sampson blockaded Santiago de Cuba, then detached Commander Bowman H. McCalla with two ships further east against Guantánamo Bay. A bold assault enabled McCalla to establish a strong position on Fisherman's Point (McCalla's Hill) and victory a few days later at Cuzco isolated the Spanish forces at Guantánamo City (6 June 1898).

Guararapes ❙ 1648 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars

Following Dutch capture of Recife in Brazil in 1630, traders faced continuing Portuguese attack and came under full siege from August 1645. Reinforced by a Dutch fleet under Witte Cornelius de With, commander Sigismund von Schoppe attacked the Portuguese at nearby Guararapes. He was driven off with 500 dead and 500 wounded and Recife remained under siege (17–18 April 1648).

Guararapes ❙ 1649 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars

Under long-term siege at Recife in Brazil, Dutch forces made a second attack on the Portuguese at nearby Guararapes and managed to secure the town. Next day, they were routed in a counter-attack under Portuguese commander Francisco Barreto, losing almost 1,000 dead. Recife remained under siege another five years and finally fell in January 1654 (18–19 February 1649).

Guarda ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

While the Allies besieged Badajoz in the south, French Marshal Auguste Marmont advanced through northern Portugal and met a Portuguese force under Generals Sir Nicholas Trant and John Wilson in Upper Beira at Guarda. The Portuguese militia were routed but, with the fall of Badajoz, Marmont's offensive had little strategic value and he eventually withdrew (14 April 1812).

Guard Hill ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Cedarville

Guarina ❙ 1547 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

See Huarina

Guastalla ❙ 1734 ❙ War of the Polish Succession

Louis XV of France supported his father-in-law, former King Stanislas Leszcynski of Poland, by sending troops into Lombardy, where Marshal François de Coigny recovered from defeat at the Secchia to counter-attack days later near Luzarra at Guastalla. New Imperial commander Friedrich Ludwig of Württemberg was defeated and killed and Austria retired behind the Po (19 September 1734).

Guatemala City ❙ 1829 ❙ Central American National Wars

With El Salvador secured after victory at San Antonio in late 1828, Liberal General Francisco Morazán of Honduras continued on into Guatemala and besieged Federal President Manuel Jose Arce in Guatemala City. When garrison commander Mariano Aycinena capitulated and Arce was deposed, Morazán became President. In 1834, he moved the Federal capital to San Salvador (13 April 1829).

Guatemala City ❙ 1840 ❙ Central American National Wars

Determined to reunite the Central American Federation, President Francisco Morazán of Salvador repulsed a Honduran invasion at San Pedro Perulapán, then invaded Guatemala. With just 800 men he seized the capital, but next day was thrown out by a Guatemalan counter-attack under José Rafael Carrera. Morazán went into exile but seized Costa Rica in 1842 at Cartago (18–19 March 1840).

Gubat ❙ 1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See Abu Kru

Gubel ❙ 1531 ❙ Swiss Religious Wars

See Zug

Guélémou ❙ 1898 ❙ Franco-Mandingo Wars

On a final offensive against Mandingo warrior Samory Touré, French forces seized the key city of Sikasso, in modern Mali (1 May), and Captain Henri-Joseph Gouraud marched in pursuit of Samory on the Cavally, in modern Ivory Coast. Samory was surprised at Guélémou, near Biankouma and captured after a brief struggle. He was exiled to Gabon and died two years later (29 September 1898).

Guelta Zemmour ❙ 1981 ❙ Western Sahara Wars

When Morocco built fortified sand walls to seal off the northwest of Western Sahara, Polisario guerrillas attacked the remote base at Guelta Zemmour near the Mauritanian border. After failed attempts, a massive offensive briefly overran the base in severe fighting. Morocco abandoned Guelta Zemmour and other bases beyond the wall and a decade of intermittent fighting ensued (12–13 October 1981).

Guenes ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Spanish General Joachim Blake led a futile attempt to counter-attack east towards Bilbao after battle at Valmaseda (5 November) reaching as far as Guenes, where he unexpectedly met a major French force under Marshal Francois Lefebvre. Only nightfall saved Blake from total disaster and he withdrew west to Espinosa, where he was defeated a few days later (7 November 1808).

Guernica ▌ 1833 ▌ 1st Carlist War

Early in the war against Spanish Regent Maria Cristina, Carlists at Guernica under Fernando de Zabala and Simon de La Torre faced attack by Baron Jacobo Maria del Solar de Espinosa. In their first victory against Regulars, the Carlists held out and inflicted over 300 Cristino casualties. They withdrew when reinforcements approached and won again a week later at Asarta (21 December 1833).

Guernica ▌ 1937 ▌ Spanish Civil War

While Nationalist forces besieged Bilbao, German bombers launched a brutal assault to the northeast on Guernica. More a massacre than a battle, the scale of civilian destruction shocked the world and crystallised support for the Republican cause. The Basque city was abandoned two days later, along with Durango to the south, and Bilbao itself fell after three more weeks (26 April 1937).

Guetaria ▌ 1812 ▌ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

British Admiral Sir Home Popham joined an offensive against northern Spain to relieve pressure on the Allies around Salamanca. He seized Lequeitio, but failed to capture nearby Guetaria in early July. A larger attempt, supported by guerrilla leader Jauregui, was driven off by troops from Bayonne under General Pierre-Gabriel d'Aussenac. A third attack in August also failed (19 July 1812).

Guiba ▌ 1916 ▌ World War I (Middle East)

When the pro-Turkish Sultan Ali Dinar of Darfur, in western Sudan threatened British war interests, he was defeated at Beringia, near El Fasher, and his Sultanate was annexed. Pursued into southern Sudan by Major Hubert Huddleston, the Sultan was surprised and killed in camp at Guiba (modern Juba), ending the Turkish-inspired resistance in the Sudan (6 November 1916).

Guildford Courthouse ▌ 1781 ▌ War of the American Revolution

Marching into North Carolina against General Nathanael Greene, the British army under General Charles Earl Cornwallis crossed the Catawba at Cowan's Ford, then advanced on Greene in a well-prepared defensive position at Guildford. Greene withdrew after brutal fighting, yet the victory had cost Earl Cornwallis heavy losses and he began retreating towards Wilmington (15 March 1781).

Guiledge ▌ 1973 ▌ Guinea-Bissau War

After ten years of largely guerrilla warfare, independence forces in Portuguese Guinea secured modern artillery and anti-aircraft missiles and launched a large-scale conventional siege of the southern command base at Guiledge. Deprived of air supremacy, the garrison was badly defeated, greatly boosting the rebel cause. Within 18 months Portugal had recognised independent Guinea-Bissau (May 1973).

Guilin ▌ 1852 ▌ Taiping Rebellion

The Taiping army withdrawing through Guangxi from Yung'an, besieged Guilin (Kweilin), recently reinforced by Imperial General Xiang Rong. When the main government army arrived, its commander Wulantai was killed in the first attack. General Qin Dingsan then continued the bloody assault and, after 33 days, the Taiping withdrew northeast through Quanzhou (18 April–19 May 1852).

Guiling ▌ 353 BC ▌ China's Era of the Warring States

When the army of Wei invaded Zhao and besieged the capital Handan, the neighbouring state of Qi sent an army under Tian Ji and Sun Bin into Wei, forcing them to abandon the siege and withdraw to defend their own country. At Guiling (modern Heze, Shandong), the army of Wei was routed with commander Pang Juan captured. The successful Qi generals defeated Wei again in 341 BC at Maling.

Guilin-Liuzhou ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (China)

As Japan's Ichigo offensive swept through southeast China, General Yasuji Okamura's army drove south from Hengyang towards Guilin and west from Guangzhou to Liuzhou. The huge combined action saw Guilin fall (10 November) and Liuzhou the next day. The capture of Nanning two weeks later secured the important land route to French Indo-China (21 October–11 November 1944).

Guillemont ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Supposedly to distract German attention from the hard-pressed Romanian front, British and French forces taking part in the Battle of the Somme attacked Guillemont, just southeast of Delville Wood. Heavy fighting secured the strong fortress, though stubborn German defence eventually prevented the Allies from capturing several other nearby positions (3–6 September 1916).

Guimaraes ❙ 1128 ❙ Portuguese War of Succession

See Sao Mamede

Guinegate ❙ 1479 ❙ Franco-Austrian War

When Charles Duke of Burgundy died, Louis XI of France invaded the Netherlands and was met by a large army under Archduke Maximilian, son of the Emperor Frederick III and son-in-law of the late Duke. At Guinegate, south of St Omer, French General Philip de Crèvecoeur des Querdes repulsed the Imperial cavalry, but was defeated by Flemish and German infantry (7 August 1479).

Guinegate ❙ 1513 ❙ War of the Holy League

In alliance with Emperor Maximilian I, Henry VIII of England invaded France from Calais and besieged the fortified town of Thérouanne, south of St Omer (22 June). French cavalry sent by King Louis XII were routed at nearby Guinegate by English and German troops (known as the "Battle of the Spurs" from the haste of the French flight). Thérouanne fell a week later (16 August 1513).

Guise ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

With the outnumbered British Expeditionary Force withdrawing southwest from Mons through Le Cateau, French commander Charles Lanzerac launched an unexpected offensive into the flank of General Karl von Bulow's advancing army. The Germans suffered a sharp check in heavy fighting between Guise and St Quentin as the Allies withdrew south to the Marne (29 August 1914).

Gujarat, India ❙ 1178 ❙ Later Muslim Conquest of Northern India

Muhammad of Ghor launched a fresh invasion of northern India from Afghanistan and overthrew the Ghaznevid rulers of Punjab, who had ruled since victory at Waihand in 1008. However, his invasion of Gujarat was decisively repulsed by the Hindu Raja Bhimdev II. The defeat in Gujarat was a rare setback for Muslim expansion and secured the kingdom against further Muslim attack.

Gujarat, Pakistan ❙ 1797 ❙ Punjab Campaigns of Shah Zaman

See Gujrat

Gujranwala ❙ 1761 ❙ Indian Campaigns of Ahmad Shah

Afghan Governor Khwaja Abed Khan of Lahore recovered from the defeat of an Afghan army at Sialkot in August to besiege the victorious Sikhs at Gujranwala, northeast of Lahore. He was, in turn, besieged by Sikh General Charat Singh, who led a massive attack on the Afghan camp. Khwaja Abed lost almost all his guns and baggage and fled back to his capital (September 1761).

Gujrat, Pakistan ❙ 1797 ❙ Punjab Campaigns of Shah Zaman

After Shah Zaman of Kabul was defeated by the Sikhs near Amritsar, he left Ahmad Khan Shahanchi as Governor at Rohtas, who soon advanced across the Jehlum to pre-empt a Sikh attack. In the northern Punjab at Gujrat, a coalition of Sikh leaders routed the Afghans, killing a reported 3,000. Ahmad Khan was executed and his head was sent to Ranjit Singh in Ramnagar (29 April 1797).

Gujrat, Pakistan ❙ 1849 ❙ 2nd British-Sikh War

In the aftermath of costly battles against Sikhs at Ramnagar and Chilianwallah, British commander Sir Hugh Gough was reinforced by General William Whish from the fall of Multan and they advanced and crushed the Sikh army at Gujrat, west of Sialkot. Devastated by artillery fire, Sher Singh and his father Chattar Singh surrendered and Britain annexed the Punjab (21 February 1849).

Guler ❙ 1696 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

Amid warfare in the northern Punjab against Sikh Guru Gobind Singh, Mughal commander Dilawar Khan's son Rustam Khan was routed crossing the Sutlej. Dilawar then sent General Hussain Khan against rebel Raja Gopal of Guler and his Sikh allies. In battle with the Guru and Raja Ram Singh of Jaswan near Guler, southeast of Pathankot, Hussain was defeated and killed (20 March 1696).

Gulina ❙ 1834 ❙ 1st Carlist War

Soon after suffering a costly attack at Alsasua, Spanish Liberal commander Vicente Jenaro de Quesada in Vitoria ordered Brigadier Linares from Pamplona in an attempt to trap Carlist General Tomás Zumalacárregui. Just northwest of Pamplona at Gulina, Zumalacárregui attacked Linares and both sides suffered about 600 casualties before Zumalacárregui was driven off (17 June 1834).

Gulnabad ❙ 1722 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Having seized Afghanistan, Mahmud Ghilzai of Kandahar took a large force into Persia and advanced on Isfahan. Shah Sultan Husain sent Grand Vizier Muhammad Kuli Khan Shamlu and Sayid Abdullah, Wali of Arabia, to meet the invaders at nearby Gulnabad. However, the Persians were destroyed, with a reported 25,000 killed. Mahmud then seized Isfahan and the crown (8 March 1722).

Gumbinnen ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)

General Max von Prittwitz was encouraged at Stalluponen and days later met Russia's invasion of eastern Prussia under General Pavel Rennenkampf near Gumbinnen (modern Guziew). The poorly co-ordinated German attack lost 6,000 prisoners and Prittwitz ordered withdrawal. He was replaced as commander by Paul von Hindenberg, who soon won at Tannenberg (20 August 1914).

Gumburu ❙ 1903 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

During a third expedition against Muhammad Abdullah Hassan of Somaliland, Colonel Alexander Cobbe advanced from Obbia to Galadi, then sent Colonel Arthur Plunkett to Gumburu to rescue a patrol. Ambushed by a massive Dervish force, the British were routed with over 200 killed, including Plunkett. Dervish losses were also high and they soon lost at Daratoleh (17 April 1903).

Gundet ❙ 1875 ❙ Egyptian-Ethiopian War

Egyptians under the Danish officer Soren Adolph Arendup marching southwest into the Abyssinian highlands from Massawa, on the Red Sea, were surprised at night by the army of Yohannes IV of Ethiopia at Gundet, north of Adowa. Although other Egyptians under Rustem Bey arrived to help, Arendup and Rustem were defeated and killed on the second day (15–16 November 1875).

Gunib ❙ 1859 ❙ Russian Conquest of the Caucasus

Russia's final campaign to subjugate Dagestan saw Muslim rebel Imam Shamil driven from his fortress at Vedeno, southeast of Grozny, to take refuge with 400 followers on nearby Mount Gunib, under siege by Prince Aleksandr Bariatinsky. A bloody assault took the position by storm and Shamil surrendered. Resistance ended and he died in Russia in 1871 (21 August–6 September 1859).

Guns ❙ 1532 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

During renewed Turkish invasion of Hungary following repulse at Vienna, Sultan Suleiman I advanced and ravaged much of the country while Vizier Ibrahim Pasha besieged Guns (modern Koszeg), held by Nicolas Jurischitz. Despite extensive mining, every assault was repulsed and Ibrahim withdrew in return for nominal submission. Suleiman later abandoned his expedition (9–28 August 1532).

Gunzburg ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

Napoleon Bonaparte's Grand Army crossed the Rhine in massive force and swung south to cut off the Austrian invasion of Bavaria, under General Karl Mack von Leiberich. Threatened with encirclement at Ulm, Mack attempted to break out east across bridges at the junction of the Danube and Gunz near Gunzburg, where he was repulsed by Marshal Michel Ney (9 October 1805).

Gura ❙ 1876 ❙ Egyptian-Ethiopian War

Advancing inland from Massawa on the Red Sea, Egyptian Sirdar Muhammad Rateb Pasha took a strong entrenched position to the southwest at Gura, then rashly marched out to meet the approaching army of Yohannes IV of Ethiopia. Although the Egyptians were routed, with 3,500 casualties, Yohannes withdrew two days later after a costly assault on the fort (7 & 9 March 1876).

Gura ❙ 1990–1991 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence

See Dekemhare

Guraganj ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Arrah

Gurdas Nangal ❙ 1715 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

Sikh leader Banda Singh Bahadur ravaged northern Punjab, then took a powerful defensive position at the village of Gurdas Nangal, near Gurdaspur, against siege by Mughal General Abdus-Samad Khan, later reinforced by a massive army under Qamr-ud-Din Khan. Starved into surrender, Banda and over 700 Sikhs were taken to Delhi for execution (April–7 December 1715).

Gurdaspur ❙ 1715 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

See Gurdas Nangal

Gurganj ❙ 1221 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

Attacking the Khwarezmian Empire, which once covered Afghanistan, Transoxonia and much of Uran, the Mongol Genghis Khan destroyed Samarkand, then sent his sons Jochi and Ogedei to besiege the former capital Gurganj (modern Urgench), south of the Aral Sea. After a desperate defence, the inhabitants surrendered when the city caught fire. They were all massacred or enslaved (April 1221).

Gurrumkonda ❙ 1791 ❙ 3rd British-Mysore War

Nizam Ali of Hyderabad supported Britain in renewed war against Tipu Sultan of Mysore, sending Hafiz Farid-ud-din against Gurrumkonda in the hills northeast of Kolar. A relief force under Tipu's son Fath Ali and General Ghazi Khan killed Hafiz Farid-ud-din, but siege was renewed by Sikander Jal and Captain Andrew Read and was sustained until the end of the war (December 1791).

Guru ❙ 1904 ❙ British Invasion of Tibet

Britain suspected Russian intervention in Tibet and sent Colonel Francis Younghusband and a military escort of 1,000 under General James Macdonald. The road was blocked at Guru by up to 2,000 poorly armed Tibetans and the resulting massacre saw 600 Tibetans killed and about 300 wounded. The British then advanced through Red Idol Gorge to Gyantse on the way to Lhasa (31 March 1904).

Gustav Line ❙ 1943–1944 ❙ World War II (Southern Europe)

Advancing up Italy from Naples and Termoli, Anglo-American forces faced the fomidable

Gustav Line, along the Garigliano and Rapido in the west, through Monte Cassino to the Sangro. A landing in the rear at Anzio stalled, but the Allies broke through after a massive air offensive on supply lines. Rome was taken and the Germans fell back to the Gothic Line (November 1943–May 1944).

Guyana ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

In action off the Demarara River in Guyana, the American sloop Hornet (Captain James Lawrence) attacked the British sloop Peacock (Commander William Peake). A brief, but bloody action, saw Peake killed and his badly damaged ship sank soon after it was forced to surrender. Among his passengers captured was General Thomas Hislop, en route to command in India (24 February 1813).

Guzów ❙ 1607 ❙ Zebrzydowski's Rebellion

Polish nobles led by Mikolaj Zebrzydowski, Palatine of Cracow, regrouped after defeat at Janowiec (October 1606) and renewed rebellion against Sigismund III. His patience exhausted, the King sent Hetmen Jan Karol Chodkiewicz and Stanislas Zolkiewski, who won at Guzów, near Radom. The rebels were later pardoned again and Sigismund eased his constitutional reforms (6 July 1607).

Gwalior ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War

In a diversion south of Agra following his capture of Ahmadabad, General Thomas Goddard detached Captain William Popham against the powerful Maratha fortress of Gwalior, near Lashkar, held for Mahadji Sindhia. In a remarkable night-time assault—aided by treachery—Popham's small force scaled the walls and the surprised garrison of Ambuji Ingle quickly surrendered (3 August 1780).

Gwalior ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Despite defeat at Kalpi (23 May), rebel leaders Tantia Topi, Rao Sahib and the Rani of Jhansi took 12,000 men and seized Gwalior from Maharajah Sindhia. A bold counter-offensive saw General Sir Hugh Rose win at nearby Morar, kill the Rani at Kotah-Ki-Serai, then take Gwalior by bloody assault. Tantia Topi and Rao Sahib fled, but both were eventually caught and hanged (20 June 1858).

Gwanga ❙ 1846 ❙ 7th Cape Frontier War

When British Colonel Henry Somerset arrived to relieve Fort Peddie, east of Grahamstown in eastern Cape Colony, he attacked the besieging forces of Mhala and Siyolo at nearby Gwanga. Unwisely accepting battle in the open, the Xhosa were destroyed by cavalry. Intermittent fighting continued until 1847, when Sandile surrendered and the British annexed Kaffrari (7 June 1846).

Gwozdiec ❙ 1531 ❙ Polish-Moldavian War

Hospodar Petrylo of Moldavia intervened in the disputed Hungarian succession, invading southern Poland in support of the Turkish cause. At the head of a Polish counter-offensive, Grand Hetman Jan Tarnowski attacked and defeated the Moldavians at Gwozdiec, near Kolmyya in modern Ukraine. However, as he withdrew northeast he was massively outnumbered and besieged at Obertyn.

Gwynn Island ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Virginian Governor John Murray Earl of Dunmore burned and abandoned Norfolk after defeat at Great Bridge (December 1775), then took his ships 40 miles north to Gwynn Island, near the Rappahannock. Attacked six months later by Americans from Williamsburg under General Andrew Lewis, Dunmore was routed and driven off. He eventually returned to England (8–10 July 1776).

Gyantse ❙ 1904 ❙ British Invasion of Tibet

Concerned about possible Russian intervention in Tibet, a British force under General James advanced through Guru and Red Idol Gorge to Gyantse, where they occupied Chang Lo Mission outside the nearby fortress. After weeks of siege and counter-siege, the British were reinforced. When truce talks failed, they stormed Gyantse, then advanced to Lhasa to end the war (12 April–6 July 1904).

Gytheum ❙ 194 BC ❙ Spartan-Achaean Wars

Facing renewed hostility by Nabis of Sparta, the Achaean League and Roman allies won at Argos, then Titus Quinctius Flamininus and his brother Lucius led an attack on the powerful Spartan fortress at Gytheum. Garrison commander Gorgopas surrendered after heavy fighting and loss of this arsenal persuaded Nabis to sue for peace. Fighting resumed two years later at Mount Barbosthene.

Gyula ❙ 1566 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

When Ottoman Sultan Suleiman I and Grand Vizier Sokollu Mehmet invaded Hungary, Suleiman himself besieged Szigetvar in the southwest, while Pertev Pasha and 30,000 men were sent east against the important fortress of Gyula. Commander László Kerecsény held out for two months until he was forced to surrender after most of his garrison had been killed (August–September 1566).

H

Haarlem ❙ 1572–1573 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Advancing into Holland after taking Mons, Don Fadrique Alvarez (son of the Duke of Alva) and 30,000 men besieged commander Wigbold Ripperda at the powerful Protestant city of Haarlem, west of Amsterdam. William of Orange failed attempting to break the siege and Haarlem capitulated after seven months. The surviving garrison were butchered (11 December 1572–12 July 1573).

Habbaniyah ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

Pro-Axis forces seized Iraq, then attacked the Royal Air Force base at Habbaniyah, 40 miles west of Baghdad with artillery and armour. A small scratch force under Air Vice Marshal Harry Smart and Colonel Ouvry Roberts drove off the Iraqis with repeated air-strikes and a bold counter-attack. Days later, relief arrived and the Iraqis were soon defeated at nearby Fallujah (30 April–6 May 1941).

Habry ❙ 1422 ❙ Hussite Wars

Sigismund of Hungary led a massive German crusade into Bohemia against the heretic Hussites, but was beaten southeast of Prague at Nebovidy by Jan Zizka and had to retreat southeast from nearby Kutna Hora. When he attempted to make a stand near Habry, Sigismund suffered a terrible defeat at the hands of the Hussites and his routed army fled south to Nemecky Brod (8 January 1422).

Hacketstown ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

See Carlow

Hadad ❙ 1562 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

In continuing war over Hungary, Emperor Ferdinand I sent forces to assist Menyhart Balassa, a Transylvanian noble rebelling against John Sigismund Zapolya, who ruled Transylvania and part of Hungary as a Turkish vassal. John was defeated in battle in northern Romania at Hadad (modern Ardud) and Ferdinand agreed to pay the Sultan a tribute for Zapolyai Hungary (4 March 1562).

Hadaspur ❙ 1802 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

See Poona

Hadath ❙ 778–779 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars

On a fresh offensive into northern Syria, Byzantine General Michael Lachanodrakon besieged Germanikeia (modern Maras) northeast of Adana, then marched northeast to al-Hadath, where he defeated an Arab army then sacked the city and ravaged the countryside. Abbasid Caliph al-Mahdi retaliated with forces which captured Samalu then humbled Constantinople after victory at Nicomedia.

Hadden Rig ❙ 1542 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Royal Wars

Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk led a force north against Scotland and sent Sir Robert Bowes and 3,000 cavalry towards Berwick, where they were heavily defeated at nearby Hadden Rig by George Gordon Earl of Huntly and Lord George Home. Bowes and about 600 men were captured and the victory encouraged a Scots advance to battle in November at Solway Moss (August 1542).

Hadley ❙ 1676 ❙ King Philip's War

With the Narrangansett destroyed in the Great Swamp Fight (December 1675), Major John Talcott led a strong force of Connecticut colonists and Mohegan Indians scouring Massachusetts for the Wampanoag Chief Metacomet (King Philip). Near Hadley, Talcott beat a large force of Philip's men and won again at Marlborough. Philip died two months later at Mount Hope (12 June 1676).

Hadong ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

As Allied forces withdrew to the Pusan Perimeter in southeast Korea, fresh troops were sent forward to Chinju to stall the North Korean advance and Colonel Harold Mott took a green battalion southwest to the strategic junction at Hadong. Ambushed in a mountain pass, the Americans were routed with over 300 killed and 100 captured, one of their worst single-action losses of the war (27 July 1950).

Hadrianopolis ❙ 378 ❙ 5th Gothic War

See Adrianople

Haelen ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

While German forces besieged the Belgian border fortress of Liège, a cavalry force under General Georg von de Marwitz swept around to the northwest against the town of Haelen on the Gette, held by a small force under General Lèon Ernest de Witte. The Germans were driven off, but a week later Haelen and Tirlement fell as the main invasion advanced on Brussels (12 August 1914).

Haemus ❙ 981 ❙ Byzantine Wars of Tsar Samuel

See Mount Haemus

Haengju ❙ 1593 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

Within days of victory north of Seoul at Pyokjekwan, the Japanese counter-attacked against Korean General Kwon Yul at Haengju fortress, west of Seoul on the Han River. The massively outnumbered Koreans secured victory in an heroic action and Konishi Yukinaga soon sued for peace. Seoul was abandoned and most of the Japanese army left for home (March 1593).

Hafir, Iraq ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Advancing into Persian Mesopotamia from Akraba in January, Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid and Muthanna defeated and killed Hormuz, the local Satrap, near the springs at Hafir, southwest of Basra, capturing massive arms and treasure. Arabs called it "Battle of the Chains," claiming Persian troops had been chained together to prevent retreat. Khalid soon won again at Mazar (March 633).

Hafir, Sudan ❙ 1896 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

With General Herbert Kitchener's British-Egyptian-Sudanese army advancing up the Nile to reconquer the Sudan, Mahdist commander Emir Wad Bashara attempted to block the rapids of Hafir, just north of Dongola. After two days of fighting, additional British artillery was brought up to clear the rapids. Kitchener secured Dongola and advanced towards the Atbara (17–19 September 1896).

Hagelsberg ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

On the same day that Napoleon Bonaparte defeated the Allies at Dresden, a small French force under General Jean-Baptiste Girard came under attack far to the northwest on the Lubnitz River, at Hagelsberg. Prussian General Karl Friedrich Hirschfeld, with Cossack support, routed the heavily outnumbered French and Girard was driven back into Magdeburg (27 August 1813).

Haguenau ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Froeschwiller

Hahozaki ❙ 1274 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Hakata Bay

Haicheng ❙ 1894–1895 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Japanese General Taro Katsura advanced into southern Manchuria through Fenghuangcheng to seize strategic Haicheng, then held it against repeated attacks by Chinese General Song Qing. A Japanese sortie suffered badly at Kangwachai, but after a final repulse at Haicheng, Song withdrew and Katsura marched northwest towards Niuzhuang (13 December 1894–28 February 1895).

Haicheng ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

As Russians drove north into Manchuria from Port Arthur (modern Lüshun), Yingkou fell and General Fleisher attacked Haicheng, held by 4,000 Chinese Regulars and 1,000 Boxer militia. While the city fell after heavy shelling, Fleisher lacked the forces to sustain the advance towards Mukden (modern Shenyang) and had to await reinforcements before continuing on through Shaho (11–12 August 1900).

Haidru ❙ 1813 ❙ Afghan-Sikh Wars

See Attock

Haifa ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Without waiting for expiry of the United Nations Mandate in Palestine, Jewish forces under Moshe Carmel attacked the key port city of Haifa, where British General Hugh Stockwell tried to maintain order. The civilian population of perhaps 50,000 Arabs fled and the city fell after intense fighting. Nearby Acre fell a few days later and Zionists further south attacked Jaffa (21–23 April 1948).

Haikalzai ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

While Akbar Khan, son of deposed Amir Dost Muhammad, besieged Kabul, other Afghans besieged Kandahar, defended by British General William Nott. An ill-prepared relief force under Brigadier Sir Richard England was shamefully repulsed at Haikalzai with over 100 men lost, but a second attempt reached Kandahar on 10 May and Nott advanced towards Kabul (28 March 1842).

Hail ❙ 1921 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

Having fought Kuwait at Jahrah in 1920, Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh turned against the Rashidi capital Hail, destabilised by assassination of the Emir. Supported by his Ikhwan ally Faisal al-Dawish, Aziz seized the city and its new ruler Muhmmad ibn Talal. Aziz then made himself Sultan of Nejd and, a few years later, attacked the Hashemites at Mecca and Medina (2 November 1921).

Hailar ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

See Ongon

Hairini ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

See Rangiaowhia

Haiyang ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Japanese Admiral Sukeyuki Ito disembarked troops in Korea to attack Pyongyang, then sailed north against the Chinese fleet under Admiral Ding Ruchang off the Yalu, near Haiyang Island. Although Ito's flagship Matsushima suffered heavy damage and casualties, he lost no ships. Four Chinese vessels were sunk and the rest retreated damaged to Port Arthur (modern Lüshun) (17 September 1894).

Haji Pir ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

Responding to incursions into northern Kashmir, Indian forces advanced into Pakistani territory behind a prolonged artillery bombardment. In heavy fighting against Pakistani regulars and Azad-Kashmiri elements, the Indians secured Bharat Gali, then seized the strategic high altitude pass at Haji Pir. Pakistan struck back in force further south around Chhamb (21–28 August 1965).

Hajipur ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

As Mughal Emperor Shah Alam II withdrew south through Bengal, pursued by Major John Caillaud after defeat at Sherpur(22 February), Patna itself was threatened by Imperial ally Khadem Husain Khan of Purnea. A small British-Sepoy force under Captain Ranfurlie Knox marched northeast to defeat Khadem Husain at Hajipur and further action a week later secured Patna (16 June 1760).

Haj Omran ❙ 1983 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Iran was halted in central Iraq at Amara and Mehran and swung its effort north into Kurdistan, supported by anti-Baghdad Iraqi Kurds. When they took the major army base at Haj Omran, northeast of Arbil, Iraq launched a heavy counter-offensive. However, their tanks were limited by mountainous terrain and large areas were lost. In October, Iran attacked further south towards Panjwin (22–29 July 1983).

Hakata ❙ 941 ❙ Sumitomo Uprising

Japanese provincial Governor Fujiwara Sumitomo turned against the government and raided along the Inland Sea coast of Honshu. In response, the Imperial court sent a large force under Ono Yoshifuru and Minamoto Tsunemoto, who drove the rebel out of his base in Iyo to Dazaifu in Kyushu. At nearby Hakata, Sumitomo was decisively defeated and fled back to Iyo, where he was executed.

Hakata Bay ❙ 1274 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

In a large-scale assault on Japan, Kubilai Khan sent a Mongol-Korean force under Zhao Liangbi, which landed on Kyushu at Hakata Bay, near modern Fukuoka. Beaten by Japanese defence led by Shoni Sukeyoshi, the invaders lost thousands more when a great storm arose and wrecked the Mongol fleet. A second invasion was repulsed seven years later at the same site (19 November 1274).

Hakata Bay ❙ 1281 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

Another massive assault on Japan by Kubilai Khan saw a huge Mongol-Korean force under Hong Dagu land on Kyushu just north of Hakata Bay, site of a previous failure. Following two months of inconclusive assault and delayed reinforcements, a typhoon—Kamikaze, or Divine Wind—destroyed the Mongol fleet, with thousands drowned as they fled (21 June–16 August 1281).

Hakodate ❙ 1869 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration

See Goryokaku

Hakozaki ❙ 1274 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Hakata Bay

Hakusukinoe ❙ 663 ❙ Sino-Korean Wars

See Paekchon

Halabja ❙ 1988 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Iranian forces and their Kurdish allies renewed the offensive in Iraqi Kurdistan, where they captured Halabja, southeast of Suleimaniya. Iraqi aircraft immediately attacked with cyanide and nerve gas, killing perhaps 5,000, mainly civilians, and maiming thousands. While the world was shocked, Iraq soon began to win the war at Al Faw and many Kurds fled into Iran and Turkey (16 March 1988).

Halai ❙ 1894 ❙ 1st Italo-Ethiopian War

As Italian forces tried to secure Ethiopia, they faced rebellion in the north by former ally Batha Agos of the Okulé-Kusai, who besieged Halai, near Saganeiti, in modern Eritrea. Attacked in the rear by a column under Major Pietro Toselli, Batha Agos was defeated and killed. The survivors fled to Tigre and fought at Coatit. A year later, Toselli was killed at Amba Alagi (18 December 1894).

Haldighat ❙ 1576 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

Mughal Emperor Akbar, facing rebellion by Pratap Singh, the Rajput Rana of Mewar, sent his General Man Singh of Jaipur and 5,000 horsemen into the Punjab. Near the Haldighat Pass, northwest of Udaipur at Gogunda, Pratap Singh was heavily defeated and fled to the hills of Aravilli. However, within ten years he had recovered most of Mewar (18 June 1576).

Halfaya Pass ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

See Sollum-Halfaya

Haliartus ❙ 395 BC ❙ Corinthian War

Fearing that Thebes, Athens, Corinth and Argos were about to ally against them, Sparta sent a small force under the famous General Lysander to secure the central Greek city of Haliartus, in Boeotia. When trapped between the city's garrison and a Theban army attacking from the rear, the Spartans were heavily defeated and Lysander was killed. Sparta was avenged the following year at Coronea.

Halicarnassus ❙ 334 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

After victory at the Granicus, Alexander the Great advanced through Asia Minor via Miletus to besiege Halicarnassus (modern Bodum), held by the Persian Satrap Orontopates and Greek mercenary commander Memnon. The city fell after a difficult siege and Alexander restored his ally Ada, former Satrap of Caria. Ptolemaeus was then left to subdue the province (September–November 334 BC).

Halidon Hill ❙ 1333 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

Advancing into Scotland to support his ally Edward Baliol besieging Berwick, Edward III of England faced a large relief army under Sir Archibald Douglas, Regent for the boy-King David II. Douglas was defeated and killed in a one-sided disaster at nearby Halidon Hill and the English King restored Baliol to the Scottish throne, receiving in return much of the Scottish lowlands (18 July 1333).

Halka ❙ 1939 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

See Khalkan Gol

Halle ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

While Napoleon Bonaparte was routing the main Prussian army at Auerstadt and Jena, a separate Corps under Prince Eugene of Württemberg was held further north on the Saal at Halle, west of Leipzig. A short, sharp action saw Marshal Jean Baptiste Bernadotte drive the Prussians out of a poorly prepared defensive position and they withdrew north towards the Elbe (17 October 1806).

Hallue ❙ 1870 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

A mid-winter French offensive on the Somme saw General Louis Léon Faidherbe attempt to recapture Amiens, taking position to the north-east on the Hallue, where he bravely repulsed an attack by General Edwin von Manteuffel. But with German reinforcements approaching, Faidherbe withdrew north towards Arras. Within days he attacked towards Péronne at Bapaume (23 December 1870).

Halmstad ❙ 1563 ❙ Nordic Seven Years War

With the loss of strategic Alvsborg to Frederick II of Denmark, Erik XIV of Sweden marched south into Danish Halland and attempted to seize Halmstad. After a costly failure, Erik left his troops to depart for Stockholm and was widely accused of cowardice. Meanwhile, the withdrawing Swedish army was decisively defeated two weeks later near Halmstad at Mared (23 October 1563).

Halys ❙ 585 BC ❙ Median-Lydian War

Cyaxeres of the Medes extended his empire into Armenia, where he sustained a prolonged conflict with Alyattes of Lydia. War reached its climax in a semi-legendary confrontation on the Halys (modern Kizil Irmak). When a solar eclipse halted fighting, the combatants made peace and the Halys remained the border until Lydia invaded in 547 BC and was defeated at Pteria (28 May 585 BC).

Halys ❙ 82 BC ❙ 2nd Mithridatic War

Provoking renewed war against King Mithridates VI of Pontus, Lucius Licinius Murena, Roman Propaetor in Asia, advanced into Cappadocia and took Comana. However, he had to fall back on the Halys (modern Kizil Irmak) when Pontic General Gordius was reinforced by Mithridates himself. Murena was heavily defeated and Roman commander Lucius Sulla intervened to restore peace.

Hama ❙ 1925 ❙ Druze Rebellion

Encouraged by Druze capture of Suwayda in southern Syria, rebellion against the French Mandate soon broke out in the north at Hama, led by Fawzi al-Qawukji, a dissident Syrian Legion officer. Aided by other dissidents and Bedouin he seized the city, but it was massively bombarded with over 300 killed. Al-Qawukji fled and the French soon bombarded Damascus itself (4–7 October 1925).

Hamad ❙ 1920 ❙ Saudi-Kuwait War

During a border war between Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh and Salim ibn Mubarak of Kuwait, Salim sent 400 troops south into disputed territory, where they were met by Faisal al-Dawish and his Ikhwan warriors. At the Wells of Hamad, inland from Dawhat Bilbul near Karya al Ulya, the Kuwaitis were routed and Faisal continued north towards Jahrah (May 1920).

Hamadan ❙ 1220 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

After invading the Khwarezmian Empire, which once covered Afghanistan, Transoxonia, and much of Iran, the Mongol Genghis Khan destroyed its capital Samarkand, then sent Generals Jebei and Subetai in pursuit of Sultan Mohammad II. Muhammad was defeated in battle near Hamadan and fled to the Caspian where he died. The Mongol generals returned a year later and destroyed Hamadan.

Hamadan ❙ 1503 ❙ Persian-Turkoman Wars

In his war with the Turkomans, Shah Ismail Safawi of Persia routed the Sultan Alwand at Sharur and, two years later, completed his conquest at Hamadan in the west of modern Iran. Sultan Murad of the Ak Kyunlu (White Sheep) Turkoman confederacy suffered a decisive defeat and the fall of the Turkoman Dynasty secured Ismail effective control of Persia (20 June 1503).

Hamadan ❙ 1630 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

Five years after Turkish forces were repulsed outside Baghdad, Grand Vizier Khuzrev Pasha led a fresh invasion into Persian Kurdistan. Having captured Mosul, he met and defeated a large Persian army under Zaynal Khan near Hamadan, in western Persia. The city then fell to Khuzrev's siege, although he was later driven back from an advance against Baghdad (5 May 1630).

Hamadan ❙ 1731 ❙ Turko-Persian War

When Shah Tahmasp II of Persia was repulsed at Erivan, Governor Ahmad Pasha of Baghdad took another Turkish army, which seized Kermanshah (30 July) then threatened Hamadan. Tahmasp marched south to relieve Hamadan, but 20 miles northeast at Korijan he was routed and had to accept a humiliating peace. The Shah was later deposed by General Nadir Kuli (15 September 1731).

Hamaguri Gomon Incident ❙ 1864 ❙ War of the Meiji Restoration

See Kyoto

Hamburg ❙ 1813–1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

French Marshal Louis Davout seized Hamburg following the battle of Luneberg, but steadfastly refused to surrender the great German city, even after the first abdication of Napoleon Bonaparte in April 1814. It required a written order directly from King Louis XVIII before the determined Marshal agreed to withdraw (30 May 1813–27 May 1814).

Hamburger Hill ❙ 1969 ❙ Vietnam War

See Dong Ap Bia

Hamel ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

During a large-scale raid across the front line, Australians and Americans under Australian General John Monash attacked the town of Le Hamel, 12 miles east of Amiens, which had been seized by the Germans three months earlier to create a salient. The surprise assault was a remarkable success and straightened the German line prior to the major Allied offensive from Amiens (4 July 1918).

Hamirpur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Budhayan

Hammelburg ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

On the offensive against Austria's German allies, Prussian General Edouard von Falckenstein invaded Bavaria and, after victory at Wiesenthal and Zella, sent General Gustav von Beyer against part of General Friedrich von Zoller's army at Hammelburg. As at Kissingen on the same day, the Bavarians were defeated and Zoller and Prince Karl of Bavaria were forced to retire (10 July 1866).

Hampden ❙ 1814 ❙ War of 1812

Leading a British expedition to the Penebscot River in Maine, General Sir John Sherbrooke and Admiral Edward Griffiths captured the fort at Castine. Colonel Henry John and naval Captain Robert Barrie then advanced upriver to Hampden and defeated American militia General John Blake (3 September). Blake surrendered next day and the British withdrew (26 August–9 September 1814).

Hampton ❙ 1775 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British Governor John Murray Earl of Dunmore took the offensive in Virginia and sent naval Captain John Squires against Hampton, on the James River. Reinforced next day by Minutemen under Colonel William Woodford, the town militia sank or captured all six British ships. After further defeats at Great Bridge and Gwynn Island Dunmore was driven out of Virginia (24–25 October 1775).

Hampton Roads ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In the first action between iron-clads, the Confederate ship Monitor under Captain Franklin Buchanan met the converted Union vessel Merrimac (renamed Virginia), commanded by Lieutenant John L. Worden in Hampton Roads, Virginia. With Buchanan badly wounded, Lieutenant Catesby Jones renewed the duel and Worden eventually withdrew with over 400 casualties (8–9 March 1862).

Han, China ❙ 645 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

Near the start of the great rivalry between the Jin (Chin) and Qin (Ch'in) states along the valley of the Yellow River, Jin Prince Hui was met in battle near the Han River by Qin Lord Mu. Hui was defeated and taken prisoner. Following intervention by the Zhou Royal court, Hui was released but Jin-Qin rivalry continued. The Qin soon turned south and also clashed with the Chu (September 645 BC).

Han, Korea ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

After the rapid fall of Seoul, South Korean Generals Yu Jai Hyung and Kim Hong-il bravely organised defence on the Han River, just south of the city, where North Korean commander Lee Kwon Mu attacked towards Yongdung-po. Having rebuilt demolished bridges and broken through in the west at Inchon, the invaders stormed the Han and drove south towards Osan (29 June–3 July 1950).

Hanau ❙ 1635–1638 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Resisting Imperial siege, Scots commander Sir James Ramsay defended Hanau on the Main from Autumn 1635 until June 1636, when he was relieved by Landgrave William of Hesse-Cassel and Swedes, under Sir Alexander Leslie. The siege was immediately renewed and Ramsay capitulated. He seized Hanau again in December 1637, but was captured and died of wounds (1635–12 February 1638).

Hanau ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

As Napoleon Bonaparte withdrew towards the Rhine after defeat at Leipzig, a Bavarian army under Prince Karl Philipp von Wrede attempted to cut off his retreat at Hanau, near Frankfurt. Bonaparte broke through to cross the Rhine and the following day his rearguard under Marshal Édouard Mortier completed the Bavarian defeat, with the Prince severely wounded (30–31 October 1813).

Hancock ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a mid-winter attempt to cut Union rail and river traffic on the upper Potomac, Confederate General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson attacked the garrison at Hancock, on the Pennsylvania–Maryland border, stubbornly defended by General Frederick W. Lander. After a failed bombardment, Jackson was forced to withdraw into West Virginia, where he captured Romney (5–6 January 1862).

Handan ❙ 259–258 BC ❙ China's Era of the Warring States

After crushing a Zhao army at Changping, Qin (Ch'in) General Bai Qi laid siege to the well-fortified capital, Handan. As a result of political intrigue, Bai Qi committed suicide, but the siege continued. Zhao sought aid from Wei, whose king sent an army under General Jin Bi. But when Jin Bi hesitated to help, the King's brother Wuji killed him and led an attack which routed the besieging army of Qin.

Handan ❙ 1945 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Communist General Liu Bocheng routed a Kuomintang incursion of Shangdang (15 October), then moved east to meet Nationalist forces advancing north along the Beijing–Hankou railway. After heavy fighting around Handan, Nationalist General Gao Shuxun defected with over 10,000 men and two other corps were beaten, with General Ma Fawu captured (31 October 1945).

Handoub ❙ 1888 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

When Mahdist General Osman Digna raided towards Handoub in eastern Sudan, Major Herbert Kitchener, Governor in Suakin, marched north with 450 Sudanese troops and irregulars. Near Handoub, they defeated the Dervishes and killed about 300, although Kitchener withdrew badly wounded. His successor defeated Osman again in December at Gemaizeh (17 January 1888).

Hangchow ❙ 1275–1276 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Hangzhou

Hangchow ❙ 1861 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Hangzhou

Hangchow ❙ 1863–1864 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Hangzhou

Hangchow ❙ 1926–1927 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Hangzhou

Hanging Rock ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

American Colonel Thomas Sumter attacked British outposts north of Camden, where he sent Major William Davie against Hanging Rock, South Carolina, held by a Tory force under Colonels Thomas Brown and Morgan Bryan and Major John Carden. Reinforced by Sumter from Rocky Mount, the rebels inflicted about 200 casualties before withdrawing as reinforcements arrived (6 August 1780).

Hango ❙ 1714 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

With Charles XII of Sweden exiled in Turkey, Tsar Peter's newly created fleet entered the Gulf of Finland under Admiral Feodor Apraxin and met Swedish Admiral Johan Ehrenskjold off Cape Hango east of Ahvenanmaa (Aland). The outgunned Russians overwhelmed the Swedes, giving the Tsar his first naval victory—"Poltava at sea"—and aiding his conquest of Finland (6 August 1714).

Hangzhou ❙ 1275–1276 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

The Mongol Kubilai Khan attacked southern China, where Xiangyang fell after a long siege and General Bayan advanced on the Song capital Hangzhou (then Lin'an). Regent Jia Sidao was defeated west of Hangzhou and the Dowager Empress Xie surrendered the city and the young Emperor Gong Zong. The Song Dynasty finally fell in 1279 after defeat at Yashan (July 1275–January 1276).

Hangzhou ❙ 1861 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Despite losing Anqing, Taiping commander Li Xiucheng invaded Zhejiang and besieged Hangzhou, where the walls of the starving city were taken by storm (28 December). The Manchu garrison held out in the inner city, but after bloody fighting, Governor Wang Yuling and thousands of others killed themselves. Li then advanced northeast on Shanghai (26 October–31 December 1861).

Hangzhou ❙ 1863–1864 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

On a fresh offensive against the Taiping in Zhejiang, Imperial commander Zuo Zongtang laid siege to Hangzhou and gradually captured the surrounding towns, including Fuyang to the southwest. In the final assault, General Jiang Yili and French commander Paul d'Aiguebelle destroyed part of the walls and took the city by storm, followed by a terrible sack (20 September 1863–31 March 1864).

Hangzhou ❙ 1926–1927 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Northern warlord Sun Zhuanfang lost Nanchang (November 1926), yet regrouped to launch a fresh offensive under Meng Zhaoyue, who drove Zhou Fengqi out of Hangzhou. Chiang Kai-shek sent a large Nationalist army under Bai Chongxi and heavy losses outside Hangzhou forced Meng to evacuate. Chiang then turned north against Shanghai (22 December 1926–16 February 1927).

Hanigalbat ❙ 681 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

See Khanigalbat

Hankou ❙ 1852 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Wuchang

Hankou ❙ 1911 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolution

When China's revolution began at Wuchang, nearby Hankou also fell to Republican forces (12 October 1911). Imperial troops then counter-attacked under Yin Zhang and Duan Qirui, supported by Admiral Sa Zhening. Very heavy fighting forced rebel commander Huang Xing to abandon Hankou and the Imperials turned on nearby Hanyang (27–30 October 1911).

Hanling ❙ 532 ❙ Wei Dynastic Wars

The warlord Erzhu Rong appointed a puppet Emperor in the Wei court at Luoyang and beat rebel Ge Rong at Ye (528), near modern Anyang. But four years later, their successors Erzhu Zhao and Gao Huan met near Ye at Hanling. Gao won a decisive victory and appointed his own Emperor. In 534, Wei split into rival kingdoms which fought a brutal war including battles at Shayuan, Heqiao and Yubi.

Hanna ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Despite disastrous losses at Sheik Sa'ad and the Wadi, General Sir Fenton Aylmer's Anglo-Indian force trying to relieve besieged Kut-al-Amara, made a third attack on the Tigris just downstream at the defile of Hanna. An ill-conceived British frontal assault was driven off with almost 3,000 casualties and Aylmer withdrew. Another attempt in March was repulsed at Dujaila (21 January 1916).

Hanoi ❙ 1426–1427 ❙ Sino-Vietnamese War

See Dong-do

Hanoi ❙ 1873 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

With French adventurer Jean Dupuis campaigning in northern Vietnam (Tonkin), Lieutenant Francis Garnier invaded with just 200 men and captured the citadel of Hanoi in a sharp action without French loss. Chinese Black Flag forces then intervened and, when Garnier was killed in a sortie (21 December), France made peace and withdrew to southern Vietnam (20 November 1873).

Hanoi ❙ 1882 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

On a fresh advance into northern Vietnam (Tonkin) after the death of Francis Garnier, French Captain Henri Rivière took just 230 men from Saigon to attack Hanoi. Carrying 250 reinforcements, his ships then bombarded the citadel and took it by storm after Governor Hoang Dieu hanged himself to avoid capture. A year later, Rivière captured Nam Dinh, but was killed near Hanoi (25 April 1882).

Hanoi ❙ 1883 ❙ Sino-French War

Captain Henri Rivière captured Hanoi and Nam Dinh in northern Vietnam (Tonkin), then faced intervention by Chinese Black Flag forces under Liu Yongfu, who opened an offensive against Hanoi. On a sortie with 450 men towards Phu Hoai, the French were ambushed and routed at the nearby Pont de Papier. They lost 50 killed (including Rivière) and another 76 wounded (19 May 1883).

Hanover ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Confederate commander Robert E. Lee crossed the Potomac, he unwisely permitted General James "Jeb" Stuart to take his cavalry raiding behind General George G. Meade's Union army. Southeast of Gettysburg at Hanover, Pennsylvania, Stuart was defeated and almost captured by General Judson Kilpatrick. His cavalry played little part in the main battle next day (30 June 1863).

Hanover Court House ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

After directing the Union siege of Yorktown, early in the Peninsula campaign, General Fitz-John Porter met Confederate General Lawrence O'Bryan Branch near Hanover Court House, north of Richmond, Virginia. While Porter claimed he inflicted over 900 casualties, including 700 men captured, the Union army was eventually forced to withdraw through the Seven Days' Battles (27 May 1862).

Hanover Junction ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See North Anna

Hansan ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

Despite disaster off southern Korea at Sachon (8 July), Japan sent a large naval force west from Pusan under Admiral Wakizaka Yasuharu, to support the war in the north. Ambushed off Hansan Island by Korean commander Yi Sun-shin, the Japanese fleet was devastated. Only 14 ships escaped out of 73 and a second action two days later off Angolpo completed the Japanese debacle (14 August 1592).

Hansi ❙ 1037–1038 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Northern India

On a fresh invasion of India, Sultan Masud ibn Mahmud of Afghanistan left Ghazni and, against the advice of his ministers, attacked Hansi, the old capital of Hariyana northwest of Delhi. Overcoming stubborn resistance he breached the city walls, then stormed and sacked the city, slaughtering the men and enslaving the women and children (20 December 1037–1 January 1038).

Hansi ❙ 1801–1802 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

Irish adventurer George Thomas, who became virtual ruler of an area northwest of Delhi, had to abandon Georgegarh and fled to his capital at Hansi, where he was attacked by a Franco-Maratha army under Major Louis Bourquein. After heavy fighting Thomas negotiated a surrender and withdrew with his fortune, but died before he could board the ship home (21 November 1801–1 January 1802).

Hanwella ❙ 1803 ❙ 1st British-Kandyan War

When Britain attempted to intervene in the Kingdom of Kandy, in central Ceylon, a claimed 12,000 Kandyan troops under Pilima Talauva attacked Lieutenant Charles W. Mercer at the small fortress of Hanwella, east of Colombo. Later relieved and reinforced by Captain William Pollard, the fort held out and Colombo was saved, though the war was already virtually over (3–6 September 1803).

Hanyang ❙ 1852 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Wuchang

Hanyang ❙ 1911 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolution

China's revolution began at Wuchang and nearby Hanyang also fell to Republican forces (12 October 1911). An Imperial counter-attack then retook Hankou and General Feng Guozhang launched a massive assault on Hanyang. The city fell after huge losses on both sides, but Wuchang held out until the fall of Nanjing in early December led to establishment of a Republic (20–27 November 1911).

Happo ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

See Okpo

Happrew ❙ 1304 ❙ William Wallace Revolt

Twelve months after defeat at Roslin, a strong English force under Sir John de Segrave, Sir Robert Clifford and Sir William Latimer was sent against the Scottish rebels. At Happrew, just west of Peebles, they defeated Sir William Wallace and Sir Simon Fraser and a year later Wallace was captured and executed. Fraser was beheaded after defeat in 1306 at Kirkincliffe (March 1304).

Hara ❙ 1638 ❙ Shimabara Rebellion

Roused by poverty and oppression, mainly Christian Japanese peasants in the Amakusa-Shimabara region of western Kyushu rebelled against Masuda Shiro. Besieged in Hara Castle, near Shimabara, by Itakura Shigemasa and later Matsudaira Nobutsuna, the rebel stronghold was finally taken by storm. Shiro and up to 35,000 men, women and children were massacred (12 April 1638).

Haraiya ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

British forces under Colonel Francis Rowcroft renewing the British offensive north of the Gaghara opposite Faizabad attacked about 4,000 rebels under Mehndi Husain at Haraiya, east of his previous defeat at Amorha (5 March). The rebels were utterly crushed in the final decisive action and fled, leaving Rowcroft to advance and secure the Gorakhpur District (18 June 1858).

Hard ❙ 1499 ❙ Swabian War

In their final struggle for freedom, the Swiss cantons marched against the Habsburg cities of the Swabian League and advanced to Hard, on the Upper Rhine at Lake Constance near Bregenz, where a reputed 10,000 Germans were put to flight. The Swiss were victorious again in a smaller engagement a month later at Bruderholz (20 February 1499).

Hardaumont ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Louvement

Hardenberg Heath ❙ 1580 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Georges van Lalaing Count Rennenberg turned against William of Orange and declared for Spain. He was then besieged at Groningen by William's ally, Bartold Entens, and Viceroy Alexander Farnese sent a force of pro-Spanish Dutch under Martin Schenck van Neuenaar. To the south at Hardenberg Heath, Count Albert of Hohenloe was routed and Groningen was relieved (17 June 1580).

Harenc ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade

See Albara

Harenc ❙ 1098 ❙ 1st Crusade

Just weeks after Duqaq of Damascus was defeated at Albara attempting to relieve besieged Antioch, Syria, his brother Ridwan of Aleppo (the titular ruler of Antioch) led a second relief army, which captured Harenc, just east of the city. In a bold offensive, Crusader heavy cavalry rode out to meet the Muslim force, which was badly defeated. Antioch fell five months later (9 February 1098).

Harer ❙ 1977–1978 ❙ Ogaden War

Somali forces sweeping into Ethiopa's northern Ogaden through Jijiga advanced on Harer and took part of the ancient walled city. But they were driven out in heavy fighting and defence of the besieged city was the turning point of the war. With a huge airlift of Soviet armour and Cuban troops, Ethiopia began its counter-offensive by relieving the siege at Harer (October 1977–February 1978).

Harfleur ❙ 1415 ❙ Hundred Years War

With France wracked by the Burgundian-Armagnac civil war, newly crowned King Henry V of England took an army to claim the French throne and landed near modern Le Havre to besiege Harfleur. Although the English suffered heavily from casualties and disease, the port surrendered after four weeks. Henry marched to victory a month later at Agincourt (19 August–22 September 1415).

Harfleur ❙ 1416 ❙ Hundred Years War

Following the English victory at Agincourt (October 1415), Bernard of Armagnac Constable of France took a large force to besiege English-occupied Harfleur. A decisive battle off the port saw the blockading French fleet of Count Jean of Dunois and Robinet de Braquemont destroyed by English ships under Sir Walter Hungerford. The siege was lifted a few days later (15 August 1416).

Hargeisa ❙ 1988 ❙ Somalian Civil War

After years of insurgency against the military government of President Siad Barre, Isaaq rebels in northern Somalia seized Burao (27 May), then attacked and captured Hargeisa, Somalia's second largest city. Massive bombing destroyed much of Hargeisa, after which the rebels withdrew. Barre then began a brutal campaign to displace and repress the northern clans (31 May–June 1988).

Harkany ❙ 1687 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

Charles V of Lorraine inflicted a costly Turkish defeat at Vienna then, while campaigning in Hungary, captured Buda for the Holy League and used superior fire-arms to defeat a large Turkish army at Harkany, south of the famous battlefield of Mohacs. In the wake of the Turkish rout, Grand Vizier Suleiman Pasha was executed for failure and Sultan Mehmed IV was deposed (12 August 1687).

Harlaw ❙ 1411 ❙ MacDonald Rebellion

Rising against Regent Robert Stewart Duke of Albany, Donald MacDonald Lord of the Isles gathered a Highland army and was met in bloody battle at Harlaw, near Aberdeen, by Alexander Stewart Earl of Mar and Aberdeen militia under Provost Sir Robert Davidson. While both sides claimed victory, the Highlanders withdrew and Lowland dominance was established (24 July 1411).

Harlem Heights ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

British forces landed on Manhattan Island at Kip's Bay to attack General George Washington in New York City and General Alexander Leslie faced an American defensive line next day at Harlem Heights, held by Colonels Thomas Knowlton and Archibald Crary. While Knowlton and Major Andrew Leitch were killed in a costly action, the British advance was successfully delayed (16 September 1776).

Harmar's Defeat ❙ 1790 ❙ Little Turtle's War

Advancing into the Ohio Valley from Fort Washington (Cincinnati), General Josiah Harmar and 1,500 regulars and militia suffered three humiliating defeats near modern Fort Wayne, Indiana, at the hands of Miami Chief Little Turtle and the Shawnee Blue Jacket. Harmar was forced to retreat and later resigned. A fresh expedition next year was destroyed in St Clair's Defeat (18–22 October 1790).

Harpasus ❙ 229 BC ❙ Pergamum-Seleucid Wars

Attalus I of Pergamum was determined to expand his kingdom in western Anatolia and defeated the Seleucid Antiochus Hierax in Lydia at Lake Koloe. He then marched further south into Caria for a decisive victory against Hierax on the Harpasus. After being repulsed in Mesopotamia by his brother Seleucus II, Hierax fled into exile, while Attalus went on to secure much of Seleucid Asia Minor.

Harper's Ferry ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

After victory in Virginia at Bull Run, Confederate commander Robert E. Lee crossed the Potomac, leaving General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson to besiege Harper's Ferry, West Virginia. Following a brief bombardment, Colonel Dixon S. Miles surrendered more than 12,000 men (before he was killed by a stray shell) and Jackson marched north towards Antietam (12–15 September 1862).

Harra ❙ 683 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

During instability following the death of Umayyad Caliph Mu'awiya, a revolt was raised in Arabia by Abdullah, son of Zubair, the conqueror of Egypt. New Caliph Yazid I sent an army under General Muslim, which captured Medina. When Muslim died, the Umayyad army, led by his successor Hosein ibn Numair, defeated Abdullah ibn Zubair in the Harra, then besieged Mecca (26 August 683).

Harran ❙ 610 BC ❙ Babylon's Wars of Conquest

Following destruction of Nineveh and the death of King Sin-shar-ishkun, Assyrian General Ashur-uballit took his army west to Harran (Carrhae) on the Balikh in southeast Turkey, where he assumed the throne. Attacked by Nabopolassar of Babylon and Cyaxares of Media, the Assyrians were eventually forced to abandon Harran. The survivors were finally beaten five years later at Carchemish.

Harran ❙ 53 BC ❙ Roman-Parthian Wars

See Carrhae

Harran ❙ 1104 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

In a fresh offensive on the Upper Euphrates, Bohemund I of Antioch, just released from captivity, joined with Baldwin of le Bourg and Joscelin of Edessa against the city of Harran. At nearby Carrhae, site of a Roman disaster in 53 BC, the Crusaders were routed by Soqman, ruler of Mardin and Jekermish, Atabeg of Mosul. Baldwin and his cousin Joscelin were captured (May 1104).

Harrison's Landing ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Ball's Bluff

Hartebeestmund ❙ 1905 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

Campaigning in German Southwest Africa, Nama leader Jakob Morenga, who had routed a German column at Freyer's Farm, ambushed Captain von Koppy's pursuing cavalry on the Orange River at Hartebeestmund. In their worst single action of the so-called Herero War, the Germans lost 43 casualties. The Nama were soon defeated at Vaalgras and Van Rooisvlei (24 October 1905).

Hartley Wood ❙ 1554 ❙ Wyatt's Rebellion

See Wrotham Heath

Hartsville, Tennessee ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General John H. Morgan led a bold expedition northeast of Nashville, Tennessee, where he marched north through Lebanon against Colonel Absalom B. Moore guarding the Cumberland at Hartsville. Crossing the river before dawn, Morgan surprised the Union troops and forced their surrender, capturing Moore and about 1,800 men, plus large quantities of supplies (7 December 1862).

Hartville, Missouri ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

On his first expedition into southwestern Missouri, Confederate General John S. Marmaduke was repulsed at Springfield, Missouri and turned east towards Hartville, where he was met west of the town by approaching Union troops under Colonel Samuel Merrill. Bloody fighting forced Merrill back on Hartville, but Marmaduke suffered greater losses and retreated into Arkansas (11 January 1863).

Harvest Moon ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

See Phuoc Ha

Hasankale ❙ 1048 ❙ Seljuk Wars of Expansion

As Seljuk Turks invaded Armenia, Ibrahim Inal, kinsman of Sultan Toghril Beg, met and defeated a largely foreign Byzantine army under Katakalon Kekaumenos and Liparit IV, Duke of Trialeti, near Pasinler, outside Hasankale. The Seljuks then marched west to plunder Erzurum. Duke Liparit was later released from captivity and Constantine IX agreed to peace (18 September 1048).

Hasanpur ❙ 1720 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

Following the murder of his brother Husain Ali Khan, the Mughal king-maker Abdullah Khan proclaimed Prince Ibrahim Emperor in Delhi, then faced the Imperial army under Mohammed Shah and General Amin Khan. Abdullah was crushed in battle at Hasanpur, on the Jumna south of Delhi, where he and the Prince Ibrahim were captured and died in prison (13 November 1720).

Hasbain ❙ 1408 ❙ Hundred Years War

See Othée

Hasenbuhl ❙ 1298 ❙ Habsburg Wars of Succession

See Gollheim

Hashin ❙ 1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

General Sir Gerald Graham was determined to open the road from the Red Sea to the Nile and marched west from Suakin to the village of Hashin, where a large Mahdist force, loyal to Osman Digna, was driven off in heavy fighting. While Graham lost 60 men killed and wounded, the Dervishes suffered perhaps 500 killed. They were defeated again two days later at Tofrek (20 March 1885).

Haslach ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

During Napoleon Bonaparte's advance on Ulm, General Pierre Dupont de L'Etang became isolated on the north bank of the Danube near Haslach. In a remarkable action on the nearby Michelberg Heights, Dupont attacked a massively superior Austrian force under Archduke Ferdinand then withdrew, taking almost as many prisoners as his entire command (11 October 1805).

Hastenbeck ❙ 1757 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Advancing towards Prussia, French Marshal Louis Letellier (later Duke d'Estrées) invaded Hanover against William Augustus Duke of Cumberland. After an indecisive struggle at Hastenbeck, on the Weser near Hameln, the Anglo-Hanoverian army was beaten when Cumberland withdrew prematurely to the Elbe. He later disgracefully agreed to declare Hanover neutral (26 July 1757).

Hastings, England ❙ 1066 ❙ Norman Conquest of Britain

When William of Normandy landed near Pevensey, Sussex, with a well-armed force to claim the English throne, King Harold II hurried back from defeating a Norwegian invasion of Yorkshire at Stamford Bridge. In England's most celebrated battle, Harold was killed and his army was crushed on Senlac Hill near Hastings. William soon conquered the entire kingdom (14 October 1066).

Hastings, Vietnam ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

See Song Ngan

Hatcher's Run ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Leading a Union advance to cut the Boydton Plank Road, southwest of besieged Petersburg, Virginia, General Winfield Scott Hancock was met at Hatcher's Run by Confederate General Henry Heth and cavalry under General Wade Hampton. The Union thrust was bloodily repulsed, though another attack a few months later was more successful (27–28 October 1864).

Hatcher's Run ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

In a fresh Union assault on the strategic Boydton Plank Road, southwest of besieged Petersburg, Virginia, Generals Andrew A. Humphreys and Gouvernor K. Warren attacked near Hatcher's Run in support of cavalry under General David M. Gregg. Confederate General John B. Gordon was initially repulsed before he eventually halted the Union advance (5–7 February 1865).

Hatchie Bridge ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General Earl Van Dorn attempting an offensive in northern Mississippi, was driven off from Corinth and escaped across the Tennessee border, pursued by Union General Edward O. C. Ord. Both sides lost about 500 men in a holding action at Hatchie Bridge, near Middleton, but Van Dorn was able to avoid destruction and returned to Holly Springs, Mississippi (5 October 1862).

Hat Creek ❙ 1876 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

See War Bonnet Creek

Hateley Field ❙ 1403 ❙ Percy's Rebellion

See Shrewsbury

Hatfield Chase ❙ 633 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

See Heathfield

Hat Mon ❙ 42 ❙ Wars of the Later Han

See Lang Bac

Hatra ❙ 199 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus

See Atra

Hatteras ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Fort Hatteras

Hattin ❙ 1187 ❙ 3rd Crusade

Guy of Jerusalem faced an invasion of Palestine by Saladin of Egypt and rashly decided to advance east from well-watered area near Saffuriya, through arid country, to relieve Tiberius on the Sea of Galilee. Near the Horns of Hattin, the Crusaders were utterly annihilated. Saladin went on to retake most major cities of the Holy Land, including Jerusalem, triggering the Third Crusade (4 July 1187).

Hatvan ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

Following defeat at Kapolna, new Hungarian commander General Artur Gorgey assumed the offensive and, east of Budapest at Hatvan, was attacked by Austrian forces under General Franz von Schlick. After costly losses on both sides, Schlick was driven west from Hatvan. Further Imperial defeats at Isaszeg, Waitzen and Nagy Sallo soon forced the Austrians out of Hungary (2 April 1849).

Hausen ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

Encouraged by French reverses in Spain, Austria invaded Bavaria to attack Marshal Louis Davout on the Danube, where Prince Herman Hohenzollern found himself facing the French rearguard under Generals Louis Friant and Louis St Hillaire, south of Regensburg between Hausen and Teugen. Hohenzollern was repulsed and Archduke Charles lost next day at Abensberg (19 April 1809).

Havana ❙ 1555 ❙ Sack of Havana

When pirates sacked Havana in 1538, they accepted a ransom not to burn the city. But a few years later, in one of the largest pirate attacks in the Caribbean, the Huguenot pirate, Jacques de Sores, led four ships, which surprised and plundered the city, then put it to the torch. As a result of this assault, and a further attack in 1558, the fortress of Castillo del Morro was built to protect the harbour.

Havana ❙ 1748 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

English Admiral Charles Knowles patrolling in the West Indies for a Spanish treasure ship was intercepted near Havana by an equal force under Admiral Don Andres Reggio. An indecisive action saw Knowles capture one Spanish ship and another was driven ashore and burned. However, he was court-martialled and reprimanded for slowness in bringing his squadron to action (1 October 1748).

Havana ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Caribbean)

When Spain entered the war, Admiral Sir George Pocock and General Sir George Keppel Earl Albemarle landed on Cuba and besieged Havana, where Castillo del Morro held out heroically until the death of fortress commander Don Luis de Velasco. General Juan de Prado soon surrendered the island and a massive booty. Spain later regained Cuba in return for Florida (6 June–14 August 1762).

Havelberg ❙ 1631 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

See Werben

Havré ❙ 1572 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

With Louis of Nassau under siege in Mons by Don Fadrique Alvarez (son of the Duke of Alva), Huguenot commander Jean de Hangest Sieur de Genlis returned from France with 7,000 men to support William of Orange. However, just east of Mons at Havré, in modern Belgium, the relief force was routed by Spanish troops under Chiappin Vitelli. Genlis was executed and Mons fell two months later (19 July 1572).

Havrincourt ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Épéhy

Haw River ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

As General Nathanael Greene fell back through North Carolina before the advancing British army, he sent General Andrew Pickens and Colonel Henry Lee against Colonel John Pyle and about 300 Loyalist militia on the Haw River. Pyle's force was virtually destroyed in a brief action and, as a result, there was no Loyalist support in the coming battle at Guildford Courthouse (25 February 1781).

Haw's Shop ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union cavalry under General David M. Gregg advancing to cover General Ulysses S. Grant crossing the Pamunkey, northeast of Richmond, Virginia, were blocked at Haw's Shop, west of Hanovertown, by Generals Fitzhugh Lee and Wade Hampton. A large-scale cavalry action saw Gregg eventually halted, but Grant's army was already approaching Totopotomoy Creek (28 May 1864).

Hayfield Fight ❙ 1867 ❙ Red Cloud's War

Working in a hayfield outside Fort C. F. Smith, near modern Yellow Tail on the Big Horn River in Montana, 30 soldiers and civilians were attacked by 300 Sioux and Cheyenne under Crazy Horse. Armed with repeating rifles, the troopers drove the Indians off with heavy losses. A similar attack was repulsed next day 90 miles to the southeast in the Wagon Box Fight (1 August 1867).

Haynes' Bluff ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

See Snyder's Bluff

Hazarasp ❙ 1017 ❙ Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars

When rebels killed Shah Abul Abbas Mamun of Khwarezm, his brother-in-law, Mahmud of Ghazni marched to the Oxus River and in a two-day battle at Hazarasp, northwest of Bokhara, defeated and captured the rebels Kumar-Tash Sharabi, Alptagin and Sayyadtagin. Mahmud had all three trampled to death by elephants and appointed his General Altuntash as Khwarezm-shah (3 July 1017).

Heartbreak Ridge ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

Continuing their offensive in the east, overconfident South Korean and United Nations forces advanced from Bloody Ridge to attack North Korean and Chinese troops well dug in along Heartbreak Ridge, south of Mundung-ni. The area was finally cleared at the cost of 3,700 Allied and perhaps 25,000 Communist casualties and truce talks resumed (13 September–13 October 1951).

Heathfield ❙ 633 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Concerned by the growing power of Christian King Edwin of Northumbria, the Pagan Penda of Mercia and the Christian Caedwallan of Gwynned invaded southern Northumbria, where they defeated and killed Edwin at Heathfield (modern Hatfield Chase), near Doncaster. The defeat split Northumbria into Deira and Bernicia, until victory the following year at Heavenfield (14 October 633).

Heavenfield ❙ 634 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars

Caedwallan of Gwynned (North Wales) joined Mercia to kill Edwin of Northumbria at Heathfield (October 633), but was soon defeated and killed by Edwin's nephew and successor Oswald, son of Aethelfrith, at Heavenfield (Hefenfelth), near Hexham. Oswald's victory restored Northumbria and led to a period of renewed power. The battle site was subsequently named Oswald's Cross.

Hecatombaeum ❙ 226 BC ❙ Cleomenic War

After victory in Arcadia at Ladoceia, Cleomenes III of Sparta became dictator after a coup, then invaded Achaea against Aratus of Sicyon. At Hecatombaeum, near Dyme, Cleomenes secured a decisive victory. The Achaean League sued for peace and began to break up. However, Sparta's aggression provoked intervention by Antigonus III of Macedon, who later beat Cleomenes at Sellasia.

Hechuan ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

See Diao Yu

Hedgeley Moor ❙ 1464 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Despite the terrible Lancastrian defeat at Towton, their cause continued in northern England, where Yorkist John Neville Lord Montagu came under attack leading a force north from Newcastle. At Hedgeley Moor near Alnwick, Lancastrian Henry Beaufort Duke of Somerset was driven off, with Sir Ralph Percy killed. Three weeks later, Montagu beat Somerset again at Hexham (25 April 1464).

Hefei ❙ 1853–1854 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

See Luzhou

Heidelberg ❙ 1622 ❙ Thirty Years War (Palatinate War)

When defeat at Höchst drove the Protestant army west across the Rhine, Johan Tserclaes Count Tilly of Bavaria besieged Heidelberg, defended by German-Dutch-English forces under Henry van de Merven and Sir Gerard Herbert. The city fell by assault after eleven weeks and the citadel capitulated three days later. Tilly then turned against Mannheim (June–19 September 1622).

Heigoutai ❙ 1905 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

See Sandepu

Heijo ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

See Pyongyang

Heiligerlee ❙ 1568 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

The first major action of the Netherlands War saw Count Louis of Nassau and his brother Adolphus lead a force against Count John of Aremberg, Stadtholder of Friesland, and Spanish troops under Gonzales de Braccamonte. Near Heiligerlee, east of Groningen, the Imperial forces were defeated, with Aremberg and Adolphus both killed, reputedly in single combat (23 May 1568).

Heilsberg ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

On a spring offensive in eastern Prussia following Eylau (8 February), Russian General Levin Bennigsen was blocked by Marshals Nicolas Soult and Jean Lannes south of Königsberg, at Heilsberg (modern Lidzbark Warminski). Despite Marshal Joachim Murat's cavalry, the Russians could not be dislodged. Both armies withdrew to meet again four days later at Friedland (10 June 1807).

Hejaz ❙ 1812–1813 ❙ Turko-Wahhabi War

When Wahhabi forces seized most of Arabia and ended the annual pilgrimage, new Ottoman Sultan Mahmud II authorised Viceroy Muhammad Ali of Egypt to send an expedition into the Hejaz. Led by Ali's brilliant son Ibrahim, the Egyptian-Turkish army captured Medina (1812) and Mecca (1813) and restored the Hashemite Dynasty. Turkey ruled the Hejaz until the Arab Revolt of 1916.

Hejaz ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

With support from Britain and France, Sharif Hussein, Emir of Mecca, proclaimed the Arab Revolt against Turkey and launched his campaign in the Hejaz. The Arabs captured Jeddah (17 June) and Mecca (4 July), as well as Yanbu (27 July) and Taif (22 September), but could not take the key city of Medina. When Hussein declared himself Caliph in 1924, he was defeated by the Saudis at Taif.

Hel ❙ 1939 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

At the start of the war, German forces bombarded the Polish naval base at Hel, on a peninsula near Danzig, where garrison commander Wlodzimierz Steyer held out, despite the surrender of nearby Westerplatte. After the fall of Warsaw, amid renewed heavy hand to hand fighting, Admiral Józef Unger surrendered, ending the last Polish resistance in the north (1 September–2 October 1939).

Helena, Arkansas ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate forces under General Theophilus H. Holmes attempting to relieve pressure on besieged Vicksburg, Mississippi, attacked Helena, far up the river in Arkansas, courageously defended by Union General Benjamin Prentiss. Despite superior numbers, Holmes was driven off with the loss of about 400 casualties and 1,200 men captured and Helena remained in Union hands (4 July 1863).

Helena, France ❙ 431 ❙ Roman-Frankish Wars

When Clodion, King of the Franks, began to expand his territory south into Gaul, he was surprised at Helena (Helesme, northeast of Cambrai in modern France) by a large army under Flavius Aetius, Roman Military Governor of Gaul. Clodion (Chlodio) was heavily defeated, though he subsequently managed to capture Cambrai and advance his border to the River Somme.

Helgeaa ❙ 1026 ❙ Norwegian Wars of Succession

Olaf II Haraldsson of Norway and Anund Jakob of Sweden joined forces to threaten Denmark and, in response, the Danish Knut II returned from England to meet their combined fleets at the mouth of the Helge River, in southern Sweden. Knut secured a sharp victory and, after a subsequent battle at Stangebjerg, Olaf fled into exile. Knut then seized the throne of Norway.

Helgoland ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd Schleswig-Holstein War

In support of Prussia's invasion of Denmark, Austrian Captain Wilhelm von Tegetthof's small squadron and some Prussian gunboats attacked Danish Commodore Edouard Svenson, blockading Hamburg and the Elbe and Weser estuaries. Battle off Helgoland saw the Allies driven off and the Austrian flagship Schwarzenberg severely damaged, but the blockade was broken (8 May 1864).

Helgoland Bight ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

At the start of the war, Commodore Reginald Tyrwhitt led cruisers and destroyers against German shipping off Helgoland, which drew six German cruisers into action. Admiral Sir David Beatty arrived with a battle squadron and Germany lost three cruisers sunk and three damaged for few British casualties. In 1916, Beatty became commander of the Grand Fleet (27–28 August 1914).

Helicopter Valley ❙ 1966 ❙ Vietnam War

See Song Ngan

Heliopolis ❙ 640 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Egypt

As they advanced up the eastern branch of the Nile from Pelusium into Byzantine Egypt, the small Muslim force of Amr ibn al-As was reinforced by the powerful General Abdullah ibn Zubair for a decisive battle at Heliopolis, near modern Cairo. Byzantine General Augustalis Theodorus was defeated and the Muslims went on to besiege the nearby citadel of Babylon, Egypt (August 640).

Heliopolis ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

After Britain and Turkey repudiated a negotiated French withdrawal from Egypt, General Jean-Baptiste Kléber renewed the fighting and defeated a Turkish force under Ibrahim Bey at Heliopolis, then recaptured nearby Cairo. Although Kléber was assassinated by a Muslim fanatic three months later, the French held out in Egypt until a new Allied invasion in March 1801 (20 March 1800).

Helles ❙ 1915–1916 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

Following the navy's failure to storm the Dardanelles Narrows, a hastily assembled British force under General Aylmer Hunter-Weston landed around Cape Helles at the tip of the Gallipoli Peninsula, with another landing further north at Anzac. After a badly delayed advance, the Allies were repulsed trying to attack at Krithia. Helles was evacuated on 9 January 1916 (25 April 1915).

Hellespont ❙ 324 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession

Emperor Constantine renewed the war against Valerius Licinius, Emperor in the East, and defeated his rival at Adrianople, then immediately besieged him in Byzantium. Constantine's young son Crispus won a two-day naval battle in the Hellespont and Admiral Amandus retreated after heavy losses. Defeat at sea persuaded Licinius to withdraw across the Bosphorus to Chrysopolis (July 324).

Helmed ❙ 1501 ❙ 1st Muscovite-Lithuanian War

Determined to avenge defeat by the Livonian Order in August at the Seritsa, Prince Ivan III of Moscow sent a massive army under Daniil Shchenya against the fortress of Helmed (near Dorpat in modern Latvia). The Order's army was annihilated and the Russians ravaged eastern Livonia. War dragged on and Russian forces met the knights again a year later at Lake Smolino (24 November 1501).

Helmstadt ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

Prussia secured victory at Aschaffenburg and General Erwin von Manteuffel then proceeded southeast through Werbach. While General August von Goeben attacked Gerchsheim, General Gustav von Beyer set off through Helmstadt for Neubrunn. Bavarian commander Prince Luitpold was heavily defeated and the combined Prussian forces advanced on Würzburg (25 July 1866).

Helsingborg ❙ 1362 ❙ Wars of the Hanseatic League

The ambitious Waldemar IV Atterdag of Denmark captured Visby on the Baltic island of Gotland (July 1361) and found himself at war with the cities of the Hanseatic League, which were Allied with Sweden and Norway. The Allied fleet under John Wittenborg of Lubeck captured Copenhagen, but was destroyed off nearby Helsingborg. In the ensuing peace, Waldemar retained Gotland (8 July 1362).

Helsingborg ❙ 1710 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

With the Swedish army destroyed at Poltava (July 1709), Frederick IV of Denmark sent a 15,000-strong force under Count Christian Reventlow into Swedish Scania in November 1709. Swedish General Magnus Stenbock raised a fresh army and at Helsingborg crushed the invasion, forcing the Danes to withdraw before he marched south to defend Swedish land in Germany (10 March 1710).

Helsingfors ❙ 1918 ❙ Finnish War of Independence

See Helsinki

Helsinki ❙ 1918 ❙ Finnish War of Independence

When pro-Bolshevik forces rose against the government and seized Helsinki (28 January) a bitter civil war ensued. A German division under General Rudiger von de Golz eventually landed and marched on the capital. Bombarded by artillery and Admiral Alexander Meurer's ships offshore, Helsinki was retaken and a Finnish offensive soon seized Vyborg (12–13 April).

Helsinki ❙ 1939 ❙ Russo-Finnish War

The first day of Russia's undeclared war on Finland saw bombers raid 16 locations, most notably Helsinki, which suffered 91 killed and about 250 wounded. Despite further bombing later—particularly three very costly raids in February 1944—Helsinki remained one of three European combatant capitals (with London and Moscow), not occupied by an enemy (30 November 1939).

Helvetia ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

On a new Boer offensive in the eastern Transvaal, Ben Viljoen and Chris Müller took 700 men in a night assault against Helvetia, north of Machadodorp, held by 250 under Major Edward Collen. The badly wounded Collen lost about 40 men and surrendered. Viljoen captured the 4.7-inch gun, "Lady Roberts," then burned the camp and marched south against Belfast (28–29 December 1900).

Hemmingstedt ❙ 1500 ❙ Wars of the Kalmar Union

Resolved to expand his influence, John I of Denmark led a force of North German nobles and mercenaries against rebellious peasant farmers in Holstein. But, on flooded fields at Hemmingstedt in Ditmarschen (in modern Germany), the outnumbered farmers secured a decisive victory. The battle led the nobility of Sweden to overthrow John, who had seized the throne at Rotebro (17 February 1500).

Hengist's Down ❙ 837 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

See Hingston Down

Hengyang ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (China)

As part of Japan's Ichigo offensive, General Isamu Yokoyama drove deep into Hunan, where he seized Changsha, then advanced south against Hengyang, held by General Fang Zianjue. Supported by American bombers, Hengyang held out under siege for 48 days before the Chinese were forced to withdraw. Yokoyama then continued south towards Guilin (23 June–8 August 1944).

Hennebont ❙ 1341–1342 ❙ Hundred Years War

In a disputed succession in Brittany, Charles of Blois captured his rival Jean de Montfort, then attacked Countess Jeanne de Montfort at Hennebont, northeast of Lorient. After repulsing a bloody assault and subsequent siege, she was relieved by Sir Walter Manny, sent by Edward III of England, and withdrew to Brest. Manny then defeated the Spanish at Quimperlé (December 1341–June 1342).

Hennersdorf ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

Despite defeat at Hohenfriedberg and Sohr, Austrian Prince Charles of Lorraine gathered reinforcements and marched into Prussia to threaten Berlin. Turning to face Frederick II of Prussia at Hennersdorf, 12 miles east of Gorlitz, the Austro-Saxon army suffered another terrible defeat. Following a further loss at Kesseldorf, Empress Maria Theresa sued for peace (24 November 1745).

Henni ❙ 1911 ❙ Italo-Turkish War
See Sidi El Henni (1st)

Heqiao ❙ 538 ❙ Wei Dynastic Wars
After destroying an invasion by Eastern Wei at Shayuan (537), Yuwen Tai of the Western Wei launched a counter-offensive east, which captured Luoyang. In severe fighting at the Yellow River near Heqiao (Ho-ch'iao), Yuwen suffered a decisive defeat and withdrew. Five years later, Yuwen attempted a fresh advance on Luoyang and was defeated again at Mangshan (13 September 538).

Heraclea, Anatolia ❙ 806 ❙ Byzantine-Muslim Wars
When Nicephorus deposed Empress Irene and resumed war against Caliph Harun al-Rashid, the Muslim leader again invaded Anatolia and, after defeating a Byzantine army at Crasus, led a reputed 135,000 men against Heraclea (modern Eregli). Following a decisive action, he took Heraclea by storm, then nearby Tyana. Threatened by Bulgaria in the west, Nicephorus sued for peace (September 806).

Heraclea, Anatolia ❙ 1097 ❙ 1st Crusade
Crusaders under Bohemund defeated the Seljuk Turk, Kilij Arslan, at Dorylaeum in July, then seized his capital at Iconium. However, they found their way through eastern Turkey to Syria blocked by the local Emirs of Cappadocia. At Heraclea (modern Eregli), a well-timed charge by heavy cavalry dispersed the Turks and the Crusaders continued towards the key city of Antioch (August 1097).

Heraclea, Anatolia (1st) ❙ 1101 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars
Sultan Kilij Arslan and Malik Ghazi, Danishmend Turkish Emir of Sebastea, moved south from their great victory at Mersivan in July and reached Heraclea in southern Anatolia to cut off the advance by Count William of Nevers. The French troops of the so-called Nivernais Crusade were surrounded and virtually annihilated, though Count William and a handful escaped to Antioch (August 1101).

Heraclea, Anatolia (2nd) ❙ 1101 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars
Within weeks of Crusader defeats at Mersivan and Heraclea, another Christian army set out for southern Anatolia under William IX of Aquitaine and Hugh of Vermandois. The so-called Aquitanian Crusade was also ambushed and routed at Heraclea by Sultan Kilij Arslan and Malik Ghazi of Sebastea. Duke William escaped but Vermandois was fatally wounded (September 1101).

Heraclea, Lucania ❙ 280 BC ❙ Pyrrhic War
Invited by the Greek city of Tarentum to help check Roman domination of Italy, King Pyrrhus of Epirus invaded with a large army, including war elephants never before seen in Italy. On the Plain of Heraclea, west of modern Taranto, Pyrrhus routed Valerius Laevinus. The victory induced more Greek cities to join Pyrrhus against the Romans and he soon won another costly victory at Asculum.

Heraclea, Propontis ❙ 313 ❙ Roman Wars of Succession
See Tzirallum

Herat ❙ 208 BC ❙ Early Syrian-Parthian War
See Arius

Herat ❙ 1221–1222 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan
After destroying the Khwarezmian cities of Merv and Nishapur, the Mongol Tolui (youngest son of Genghis Khan) captured Herat in Khorasan. He spared the population, but when the citizens rebelled after Mongol defeat at Parwan Durrah, Mongol General Eljigidei was sent to punish the city. Herat (in modern Afghanistan) surrendered after a long siege and the citizenry were massacred.

Herat ❙ 1383 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

Early in his campaign of conquest, the Turko-Mongol Tamerlane marched southwest to put down rebellion in Khorasan, then including parts of Iran and Afghanistan. The city of Herat fell to his overwhelming force and he went on to capture Zaranj, Kandahar and Isfizar (where living captives were cemented into towers) as he consolidated his control before turning west against Persia and Azerbaijan.

Herat ❙ 1507 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

The Uzbek conqueror Muhammad Shaybani Khan drove the Mughal Babur from Samarkand in 1498 and later marched southwest into Khorasan to attack Herat, which was held by the Timurid Mughal Mirza Zunnin. When Mirza Zunnun was killed in a fierce battle outside the city, Shaybani captured Herat. The following year, he marched east against Babur himself at Kandahar.

Herat ❙ 1528 ❙ Persian-Uzbek Wars

Having defeated the Persians and their Mongol allies at Kul-i-Malik and Ghujduwan in 1512, the Uzbek leader Ubaid Khan marched into Khorasan and besieged Persian commander Husein Khan Shamlu at Herat (in the west of modern Afghanistan). The starving garrison was on the verge of surrendering after seven months when the Uzbeks were defeated at Damghan and Ubaid withdrew.

Herat ❙ 1588–1589 ❙ Mughal-Uzbek Wars

The great Uzbek leader Abdullah Khan II expanded his power on the Oxus, where he captured Balkh (1568) Gissar and Samarkand (1575), then advanced into Khorasan to attack the Mughal city of Herat. Emperor Akbar made peace with the Uzbeks, conceding Balkh, but ten years later, Abdullah faced counter-attack by Persia at Rabat-i-Pariyan (June 1588–February 1589).

Herat ❙ 1598 ❙ Persian Reconquest of Khorasan

See Rabat-i-Pariyan

Herat ❙ 1719 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

When Asadullah Khan of Herat declared independence, he faced a huge Persian army under Safi Kuli Khan. Near Herat at Kariz, Asadullah's outnumbered Abdali Afghans won an unlikely victory, when the Persians were confused by friendly artillery fire. Safi was captured and Asadullah went on to seize much of Khorasan. Later that year, he was killed at Farah by Mahmud Ghilzai of Kandahar.

Herat ❙ 1729 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Shah Tahmasp II resolved to recover Persia from its Afghan conquerors and captured Meshed in 1726. He later advanced towards Herat, held by Abdali Afghans under Allah Yar Khan, who marched northwest to meet the invaders. After defeat at nearby Kafir Qala, Kusuya, Rabat-i-Paryan and Shakiban, Allah Yar Khan finally pledged allegiance to Tahmasp and retained Herat (May 1729).

Herat ❙ 1731–1732 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

While Shah Tahmasp II besieged Erivan in Turkish Armenia, Abdali Afghans in Herat under Dhul-Fiqar overthrew the Persian nominee Yar Allah Khan. General Nadir Kuli (later Nadir Shah) marched over 1,500 miles east to Herat, which surrendered after a long siege. Yar Allah Khan was then restored. Meanwhile, Tahmasp was defeated at Hamadan (May 1731–27 February 1732).

Herat ❙ 1750 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Following the death of Nadir Shah of Persia, the Afghan ruler Ahmad Shah Durrani took 70,000 men against Herat in western Afghanistan, held for Nadir's teenage son Shah Rukh, by General Emir Shah. The city fell after a long siege and Emir Shah was killed in a final stand in the citadel of Herat. A Persian attempt to retake the city the following year was defeated at Torbat-i-Jam.

Herat ❙ 1837–1838 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Encouraged by Russia, Shah Muhammad of Persia attacked Herat, in western Afghanistan, held by about 4,000 Afghans under Vizier Yar Muhammad, advised by British Major Eldred Pottinger. A heavy assault was repulsed (23 June) and after Britain failed to secure peace, a British landing at Karrack on the Persian Gulf forced a Persian withdrawal (23 November 1837–9 September 1838).

Herat ❙ 1856 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Although the Treaty of Peshawar established peace between Britain and Afghanistan, Shah Nasiruddin of Persia unexpectedly invaded and captured Herat, triggering war with Britain in the Persian Gulf. After defeat at Bushire in December the Persians withdrew, appointing Afghan Sultan Ahmad Khan (nephew of Dost Muhammad) their Governor of Herat (25 October 1856).

Herat ❙ 1863 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Amir Dost Muhammad of Afghanistan annexed Kandahar following the death of his disloyal brother Kohandil Khan, then marched against Herat, held by his nephew Ahmad Khan in the name of the Shah Nasir ad-Din of Persia. Ahmad Khan died during the siege, but a few days after capturing Herat, Dost Muhammad himself also died, triggering a bloody war of succession (June 1863).

Herat ❙ 1870 ❙ Later Afghan War of Succession

In the final act of the struggle for Afghan succession, the brilliant General Yakub Khan and his younger brother Ayub Khan rebelled against their father, the restored Amir Sher Ali, who declined to recognise Yakub as his heir apparent. The brothers seized Herat in a surprise attack, but with British encouragement, Sher Ali pardoned his son and made him Governor of Herat (6 May 1870).

Herat ❙ 1978 ❙ Afghan Civil War

When the city of Herat rose against the Kabul government of President Muhammad Daoud, aided by massive army defection, Kandahar commander General Sayed Mukharam led a large-scale assault, supported by air-strikes. The revolt in Herat was brutally put down with about 5,000 killed, leading directly to a military uprising in Kabul and the overthrow of Daoud (March 1978).

Herbsthausen ❙ 1645 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Mergentheim

Herdonea ❙ 212 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

As he withdrew from Capua, the Carthaginian General Hannibal defeated a Roman blocking force at the Silarus, then a few days later advanced on Herdonea (modern Ordona), south of Foggia, besieged by the praetor, Gnaeus Fulvius Flaccus. With a larger and more experienced force, Hannibal inflicted a decisive defeat. Fulvius fled and his army of about 18,000 was largely destroyed.

Herdonea ❙ 210 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

One year after Roman capture of Capua, Gnaeus Fulvius Centumalus and 22,000 men camped near Herdonea (modern Ordona) were attacked by a larger force under the Carthaginian Hannibal. Taken in the rear by Numidian cavalry, Fulvius was killed and his army was crushed, with perhaps 10,000 killed. Herdonea was then destroyed and shortly afterwards, Hannibal won again at Numistro.

Héricourt ❙ 1474 ❙ Franco-Burgundian Wars

Swiss forces financed by Louis XI of France marched into Lorraine against Charles the Bold of Burgundy and at Héricourt, near Belfort, the Burgundian army of Henry of Neufchatel was heavily defeated. The Swiss occupied Héricourt and many other towns before Charles responded by invading Switzerland itself, where he was defeated in 1476 at Grandson and Morat (13 November 1474).

Héricourt ❙ 1871 ❙ Franco-Prussian War

French General Charles-Denis Bourbaki attempting to relieve Belfort, won at Villersexel, then led over 100,000 men against General Karl August von Werder's heavily outnumbered siege force on the Lisaine at nearby Héricourt. In extreme winter cold, the French were driven off with 6,000 casualties and retreated through Pontarlier. Belfort held out until war's end (15–17 January 1871).

Hermaeum ❙ 255 BC ❙ 1st Punic War

In order to relieve the Carthaginian siege of Clupea (modern Kelibia) in northeast Tunisia, a fresh Roman fleet under Consuls Marcus Aemilius and Servius Fulvius sailed from western Sicily and off Hermaeum, near Cape Bon, inflicted massive damage on the Carthaginian navy. The siege of Clupea was lifted, but the Roman fleet was later virtually destroyed in a storm off Camarina in Sicily.

Hermannstadt ❙ 1442 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

Turkish commander Mezid Bey was sent by Ottoman Sultan Murad II into Transylvania, where he besieged Hermannstadt (modern Sibiu) defended by Hungarians under Janos Hunyadi. After the Turks lost a reported 20,000 men, including Mezid Bey and his son killed, they were forced to withdraw. Later that year another Ottoman force was defeated at Vasaq (18 March 1442).

Hermannstadt ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

Encouraged by Russia's Brusilov Offensive in Galicia, Romania entered the war against the Central Powers and invaded Transylvania. However, German General Erich von Falkenhayn counter-attacked against the southern column at Hermannstadt (Sibiu). Romanian commander General Ioan Culcer was surprised and defeated and withdrew into the mountains (26–29 September 1916).

Hernani ❙ 1836 ❙ 1st Carlist War

In an attempt to relieve the Carlist siege of San Sebastian, Spanish forces and the British Legion under General Sir George de Lacy Evans, supported by naval gunfire, attacked the besieging army on nearby heights at Hernani. Bloody fighting drove the Carlists out of their defensive positions and raised the siege, though victory cost the Allies more than 600 men out of 5,000 (5 May 1836).

Hernani ❙ 1837 ❙ 1st Carlist War

See Oriamendi

Herrings ❙ 1429 ❙ Hundred Years War

See Rouvray

Hertogenbosch ❙ 1629 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

To avenge the loss of Breda in 1625, Frederick Henry of Orange took more than 25,000 men against the fortress of Hertogenbosch held by Antonius Baron Schets van Grobbendonck. Having driven off a large relief army under the Count Henry de Berg, the Stadtholder stormed the outer fortresses of St Isabella and St Anthony and Grobbendonck was forced to capitulate (1 May–14 September 1629).

Hertogenbosch ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Bois-le-Duc

Herzogenbuchsee ❙ 1653 ❙ Swiss Peasant War

Swiss peasant leader Nicolas Leuenberger rose against the city aristocracies and fought an inconclusive battle at Wohlenschwyl, then gathered a force of perhaps 8,000 Emmenthal peasants to oppose Sigismund von Erlach of Bern near Herzogenbuchsee, east of Solothurn. The peasants were defeated and the rising was cruelly crushed, with Leuenberger executed (8 June 1653).

Hesheng ❙ 1926 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

While Nationalist commander Chiang Kai-shek campaigned southwest of Wuchang through Pingjiang and Tingsiqiao, his General Zhang Fakui's "Ironsides" spearheaded fighting along the railway further east. Advancing through Tingzu, they defeated Wu Beifu trying to hold the strategic Hesheng Bridge, then drove north for Wuchang (28–30 August 1926).

Hessich-Oldendorf ❙ 1633 ❙ Thirty Years War (Swedish War)

Duke George of Brunswick-Luneburg and Swedish Marshal Dodo von Knyphausen advanced to the Weser, where they besieged Hameln, then faced a large relief force under Field Marshal Jost Maximilian von Gronsfeld and Count Johann Merode. Northwest of Hameln at Hessich-Oldendorf, the approaching Imperial army suffered a decisive defeat and von Gronsfeld was captured (8 July 1633).

Hetsugigawa ❙ 1587 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States

See Toshimitsu

Hexham ❙ 1464 ❙ Wars of the Roses

Henry Beaufort Duke of Somerset rallied the Lancastrians after defeat at Hedgeley Moor (25 April) and marched towards Newcastle, accompanied by Henry VI and Margaret of Anjou. To the west at Hexham, he was met and routed by John Neville Lord Montagu. Somerset and many others were executed, while Margaret fled to France. Henry went into hiding and was later captured (15 May 1464).

Hibera ❙ 215 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Ibera

High Bridge ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As defeated Confederate forces withdrew west from Petersburg, Virginia, heavy fighting developed on the Appomattox around High Bridge, where Union General Theodore Read was surprised by Confederates under General Thomas L. Rosser. While Read was killed and lost many prisoners, Union General Andrew A. Humphreys continued the pursuit towards Farmville (6–7 April 1865).

Highnam ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

After taking Malmesbury by assault (21 March), Parliamentary commander Sir William Waller surprised Welsh troops under Edward Somerset Lord Herbert of Raglan, who had supported the unsuccessful Royalist siege of Gloucester. Two miles west of Gloucester at Highnam, Herbert's force was utterly destroyed, with over 600 killed and 1,000 captured (24 March 1643).

Higueruela ❙ 1431 ❙ Later Christian Reconquest of Spain

When dissident Muslim nobleman Ridwan Venegas asked John II of Castile to support Ibn al-Maw as King of Granada, John sent his Constable Álvaro de Luna to impose their nominee. Close to Granada at Higueruela, the Castilians defeated the army of Mohammad IX and forced Granada to accept the ursurper as Yusuf IV. But within a year he lost favour and was killed (1 July 1431).

Hill 60, Flanders ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Just before the German offensive against Ypres, British forces exploded a massive mine to seize strategic Hill 60, southeast of the city and held off counter-attacks. Two weeks later the Germans launched a gas-led assault which was initially repulsed before the position fell to a second attempt. Hill 60 was not finally regained by the Allies until September 1918 (17–21 April & 1–5 May 1915).

Hill 60, Gallipoli ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Gallipoli)

Supporting the Allied offensive from Suvla Bay against Scimitar Hill, Australian, New Zealand and Indian forces under General Vaughan Cox attacked on the southern flank at Hill 60 (Kaiajik Aghala), commanding the road from Suvla Bay to Anzac Cove. Two costly assaults secured the lower slopes, but the Allies failed to drive the Turks from the summit (21–22 & 27 August 1915).

Hill 203 ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

General Maresuke Nogi launched one of the hardest fought actions of the Japanese siege of Port Arthur when he stormed 203-metre Hill, defended by Colonel Nikolai Tretyakov. After capturing the strategic hill at a cost of about 10,000 Japanese and 3,000 Russian lives, Nogi immediately installed siege guns to destroy the remaining warships in the harbour (26 November–5 December 1904).

Hill 304 ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

See Le Mort-Homme

Hillabee ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

Amid revenge for the massacre at Fort Mims, Indians were slaughtered at Tallaseehatchee and Talladega in Alabama before General James White, with Tennessee Militia and some Cherokee, attacked Hillabee village, 20 miles further east. White's forces killed 68 Hillabee warriors without loss. A few days later more Indians died in the much larger massacre at Autossee (18 November 1813).

Hillah ❙ 1920 ❙ Iraqi Revolt

See Rustumiyah

Hillsman Farm ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Sayler's Creek

Hill's Plantation ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

On the offensive against Confederates west of the Mississippi in Arkansas, Union Colonel Charles Hovey attacked General Thomas C. Hindman and Colonel William Parsons at Hill's Plantation on the Cache, east of Augusta. After an initial repulse, Hovey was reinforced by General William P. Benton and the defeated Confederates withdrew southwest to Little Rock (7 July 1862).

Himera ❙ 480 BC ❙ Carthaginian Invasion of Sicily

As Carthage expanded her power in the central Mediterranean, the great Carthaginian leader Hamilcar landed on the north coast of Sicily at Panormus (modern Palermo) and marched east against Himera, held by Theron of Acragas. When a relief army under Gelo of Syracuse arrived, Hamilcar was defeated and killed and his ships were burned. The victory saved Sicily from Carthage for 70 years.

Himera ❙ 409 BC ❙ Carthaginian-Syracusan Wars

Determined to avenge his grandfather's death at Himera in 480 BC, Hannibal led a fresh Carthaginian invasion of Sicily to capture Selinus, then besieged Himera in the north. A naval force under Diocles of Syracuse managed to evacuate half the city's population before it was taken by storm. A claimed 3,000 were executed and Himera was burned. Hannibal died at Acragas in 406 BC.

Himera ❙ 383 BC ❙ 3rd Dionysian War

See Cronium

Himera River ❙ 311 BC ❙ Agathoclean War

In a fresh Carthaginian offensive in southern Sicily against the Tyrant Agathocles, Hamilcar (son of Gisco) and 45,000 men advanced to Ecnomus, near the mouth of the Himera, where Agathocles attacked their camp. In a fierce counter-attack, Hamilcar reportedly inflicted 7,000 casualties for just 500 men lost. The badly defeated Tyrant withdrew under siege to Syracuse (June 311 BC).

Hindan ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Ghazi-ud-din-Nagar

Hindenburg Line ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

Following victory at the Marne, Albert and Bapaume, Allied forces attacked Germany's Hindenburg Line behind the Western Front. Widespread fighting included battles at St Mihiel, Épéhy, Argonne, Canal du Nord, Cambrai-St Quentin, Flanders, Courtrai and Le Cateau, as the Allies broke through towards the Selle and Sambre (12 September–11 November 1918).

Hingston Down ❙ 837 ❙ Viking Raids on Britain

King Egbert of Wessex lost to Vikings in Dorset at Carhampton, but two years later he took a big army into Cornwall to fight a large-scale Danish landing, which was supported by the West Welsh, who were taking the opportunity to resist West Saxon rule. Just west of the Tamar near Callington at Hingston Down (Hengestdune) Egbert won a great victory and secured control of Cornwall.

Hipponium ❙ 48 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

See Vibo

Hippo Regius ❙ 430–431 ❙ Roman-Vandal Wars

Two years after beating the Suevi at Merida, in southern Spain, the Vandal Gaiseric took 20,000 warriors plus their families to Africa, where Roman Governor John Bonifacius was defeated, then besieged at Hippo Regius (modern Bone, Algeria). The city fell after 14 months, when a relief attempt from Constantinople under Aspar failed. Gaiseric gradually secured most of North Africa, including Carthage.

Hira ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

Muslim General Khalid ibn al-Walid advanced into Persian Mesopotamia along the west bank of the Euphrates from Ullais and besieged the walled city of Hira, southeast of modern Nadjak. Hira fell by assault, reportedly after Khalid filled in the moat with the bodies of his slain weak camels. Persia's attempt to recover this key city in 634 resulted in the brutal Battle of the Bridge (May 633).

Hirsov ❙ 1773 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

With the Turks destroyed at Turtukai in June, Russian General Alexander Suvorov was sent down the Danube between Matchin and Silistria, where he took a position near the Boriu River and the fortress of Hirsov. Supported by General Mikhail Miloradovich, he brilliantly defeated an attack by 10,000 Turkish cavalry and infantry, though the victory had little strategic value (4 September 1773).

Hittin ❙ 1187 ❙ 3rd Crusade

See Hattin

Hiuchi ❙ 1183 ❙ Gempei War

Determined to avenge humiliation at Fujigawa, Taira Koremori marched north from Kyoto against Minamoto Yoshinaka, who had resumed the war against Japan's ruling clan. Blocked by the mountain fortress at Hiuchi, Komemori took the position by siege, reputedly by destroying its drinking water, but the delay contributed to his disastrous defeat weeks later at Kurikara (17–20 May 1183).

Hjortensjon ❙ 1543 ❙ Dacke's Rebellion

Nils Dacke led a peasant revolt in southern Sweden against King Gustavus I and secured considerable success before he failed in a siege of Kalmar. He was later attacked and decisively defeated by the Royal army at Hjorten Lake, near Hogsby. The wounded rebel was then hunted down and executed, ending the last provincial resistance to the Lutheran Swedish state (20 March 1543).

Hjorungavag ❙ 985 ❙ Scandinavian National Wars

Amid the confused alliances of Scandinavian warfare, Jomsburg Vikings under Vagn Akason, supporting King Sweyn Forkbeard of Denmark, sailed against Haakon Jarl of Norway. Lured into an ambush off Hjorungavag, near Alesund, Norway, the outnumbered Jomsburgs met Haakon's entire fleet and were utterly defeated. Fifteen years later, they helped the Norwegians defeat Sweyn at Svolde.

Hlobane ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

In order to destroy a Zulu position on the Hlobane plateau in northern Zululand, Major Redvers Buller attacked from the east, supported by Colonel John Russell advancing from the west. After bloody fighting on the steep rocky slopes, with 94 British soldiers and over 100 Natal African auxiliaries killed, a massive Zulu force appeared and Buller retreated west to Khambula (28 March 1879).

Hlophekhulu ❙ 1888 ❙ Zulu Rebellion

In support of uSuthu Chief Dinuzulu, Shingana gathered forces further south and raided "loyal" Zulus. When Colonel Henry Stabb marched north from Eshowe with 200 white Regulars and 1,500 African levies, a major attack at Hlophekhulu saw the rebels routed with about 300 killed. The rising collapsed and Dinuzulu and his uncles Shingana and Ndabuko were exiled on St Helena (2 July 1888).

Hoa Binh ❙ 1951–1952 ❙ French Indo-China War

Encouraged by success at Nghia Lo, General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny sent paratroops to cut the Viet Minh supply route at Hoa Binh, on the Black River 40 miles west of Hanoi (14 November). When Viet Minh General Vo Nguyen Giap attacked, both sides poured men into a battle of attrition until new French commander Raoul Salan ordered a bloody retreat (9 December 1951–24 February 1952).

Hoa-Moc ❙ 1885 ❙ Sino-French War

See Tuyen-Quang

Hobkirk's Hill ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Rebel commander Nathanael Greene pursuing the British into South Carolina after battle at Guildford Courthouse in March, paused to await reinforcements just north of Camden at Hobkirk's Hill, where he was attacked and routed by Colonel Lord Francis Rawdon. However, Rawdon had no choice but to evacuate Camden (10 May) and retreated towards Charleston (25 April 1781).

Ho-ch'iao ❙ 538 ❙ Wei Dynastic Wars

See Heqiao

Hochkirch ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Returning to Saxony after victory at Zorndorf in August, Frederick II of Prussia advanced against a superior Austrian army under Marshal Leopold von Daun at Dresden. Frederick was surprised in a dawn attack further east at Hochkirch and only just managed to escape after massive losses in men and guns. Von Daun also suffered heavy losses and eventually withdrew (13 October 1758).

Hochkirchen ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Bautzen

Ho-chou ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

See Diao Yu

Höchst, Frankfurt ❙ 1622 ❙ Thirty Years War (Palatinate War)

Johan Tserclaes Count Tilly of Bavaria and General Gonzalo Fernández de Cordoba destroyed Baden's army at Wimpfen (6 May), then pursued Christian of Brunswick to prevent him joining with Count Ernst von Mansfeld. On the Main west of Franskfort at Höchst, the Imperials intercepted and defeated the Brunswickers and Christian joined Mansfeld retreating across the Rhine (20 June 1622).

Höchstädt ❙ 1703 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Having beaten the Austrians on the Danube at Munderkingen (31 July), French Marshal Claude Villars in the service of Maximilian Emanuel of Bavaria met a second Imperial army under Count Frederick of Styrum at Höchstädt and inflicted a terrible defeat. However, a dispute over the failure to advance on Vienna saw Villars replaced by Marshal Ferdinand Marsin (20 September 1703).

Höchstädt ❙ 1704 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

See Blenheim

Höchstädt ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

Austrian General Paul Kray fell back across the Rhine after defeat at Engen and Stockach and failed to halt the French offensive at Biberach and Erbach and retired to Ulm, on the Danube. Crossing the river further east to cut off the Austrian withdrawal, French General Jean Victor Moreau defeated Kray at Höchstädt. Kray then abandoned Ulm and Austria soon sought an armistice (19 June 1800).

Höchst im Odenwald ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

French General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan invaded Germany and was defeated near Höchst, 25 miles northeast of Mannheim, by Austrian Count Charles von Clerfayt. Jourdan was then driven back across the Rhine. His loss is blamed on French commander Charles Pichegru, who failed to support Jourdan's force and later betrayed the Republic, defecting to the Austrians (11 October 1795).

Hochuan ❙ 1258 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

In a large-scale assault on Sung southern China, the Mongol Khan Mongke, a grandson of Genghis Khan, captured Chengtu, then besieged Sung General Wang Chien at Hochuan (Hechuan) in central Szechwan. After four months, Mongke's last assault was repulsed and he died soon afterwards. The war was then suspended until resumed by his brother Kubilai (May–August 1258).

Hof ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

Responding to the Russian mid-winter offensive in eastern Prussia, French Marshal Joachim Murat drove General Levin Bennigsen north and at Hof, near Landsberg, caught up with the Russian rearguard under General Mikhail Barclay de Tolly. Barclay suffered heavy casualties before joining the main Russian force for battle two days later, a few miles north at Eylau (6 February 1807).

Hofuf ❙ 1913 ❙ Saudi-Ottoman War

Despite acknowledging Ottoman overlordship as ruler of Nejd, Emir Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) determined to drive Turkey from the eastern Arabian province of al-Hasa and attacked Hofuf. As at Riyadh, his men scaled the walls at night and the Governor and 1,200-strong garrison were forced to surrender. Nejd was finally conquered, although Aziz reaffirmed Ottoman authority (9 May 1913).

Hogfors ❙ 1789 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

When a Swedish attempt to invade Finland was repulsed in August on land at Fredrikshamn and at sea on the Svenskund, Swedish Admiral Karl Ehrensward withdrew his flotilla towards Hogfors (modern Karkkila) in southern Finland, northwest of Helsinki. There he suffered a further defeat and both the navy and army were forced to withdraw to their own frontier (1 September 1789).

Hogland ❙ 1788 ❙ 2nd Russo-Swedish War

Gustav III of Sweden was determined to recover Finland from Russia and landed at Helsinki while his brother, Duke Charles of Sodermanland, sailed west against Fredrikshamn. Off Hogland Island (modern Sursaari), Charles met a Russian squadron under English Admiral Samuel Greig and each side lost one ship before the Swedes withdrew under blockade to Sveaborg, outside Helsinki (17 July 1788).

Hogsby ❙ 1543 ❙ Dacke's Rebellion

See Hjortensjon

Hohenfriedberg ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

While advancing to recover Silesia, the Austro-Saxon army of Prince Charles of Lorraine was surprised by Frederick II of Prussia at Hohenfriedberg, near Streigau. Frederick inflicted about 6,000 casualties and took over 7,000 prisoners in a brilliant attack. The defeated Austrians withdrew into Bohemia, but rallied and re-entered Silesia, where Frederick beat them at Sohr (4 June 1745).

Hohenlinden ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

After a failed truce following Austrian defeat at Höchstädt (19 June), Archduke John of Austria took over command and marched against the French occupying Bavaria. During a snowstorm, General Jean Victor Moreau destroyed the Austrian army piece-meal at Hohenlinden, east of Munich, and began his advance towards Vienna. Austria then once again sued for peace (3 December 1800).

Hojuji ❙ 1184 ❙ Gempei War

Minamoto Yoshinaka seized Kyoto after victory at Shinowara, then turned against former Emperor Go-Shirakawa, who was plotting with his cousin Minamoto Yoritomo in Kamakura. In a brutal attack on the Hojuji Palace in Kyoto, Yoshinaka destroyed Go-Shirakawa's troops, burned his palace and seized his Imperial person, provoking intervention by Yoritomo next month at Uji (January 1184).

Hoke's Run ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

As Confederate forces assembled in the Shenandoah, Union General Robert Patterson crossed the Potomac at Williamsport and met part of General Thomas J. Jackson's brigade near Martinsburg at Hoke's Run, West Virginia. The outnumbered Confederates fell back, losing about 100 men. Patterson eventually withdrew, enabling the Confederates to concentrate at Bull Run (2 July 1861).

Hollandia ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

To cut off the Japanese in northern New Guinea, American General Robert Eichelberger landed with 80,000 men at Hollandia, bypassing the main Japanese army at Wewak. With Japanese aircraft previously destroyed by bombardment, General Masazumi Inada was routed with perhaps 9,000 killed. Another landing took place the same day further east at Aitape (22–27 April 1944).

Hollarbrunn ❙ 1805 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (3rd Coalition)

Napoleon Bonaparte captured Vienna, then found his way north blocked by a small Russian rearguard under General Prince Pyotr Bagration at Hollabrunn (sometimes Oberhollarbrunn), northwest of Vienna. Despite heavy casualties, Bagration's delaying action allowed General Mikhail Kutuzov's Russian army to retire, though it was defeated a month later at Austerlitz (16 November 1805).

Holme ❙ 905 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

During a fresh invasion of Wessex and Mercia, Danes from East Anglia marched west, aiding Aethelwald of Mercia claiming the crown of Wessex from his cousin Edward the Elder. Aethelwald had previously been repulsed at Wimborne and, at Holme (modern Holmesdale, Surrey), he was defeated and killed. Edward restored peace with Danish East Anglia until his victory at Tempsford in 918.

Holowczyn ❙ 1708 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

As Charles XII of Sweden advanced into Russia across the Berezina, he met Prince Alexander Menshikov at Holowczyn on the Babich. Boldly attacking across the shallow river, Charles defeated and dispersed the Russians, who withdrew to the Dneiper. However, Charles was running short of supplies and ammunition and unwisely turned south towards the Ukraine (4 July 1708).

Holy Ground ❙ 1813 ❙ Creek Indian War

Following American victory at Talladega and Autossee, General Ferdinand Claiborne took 800 infantry and militia and 150 Choctaw allies under Pushmataha against the Creek Indian camp at Holy Ground Creek, near Econochaca on the Alabama. The Creeks lost over 30 killed and the booty seized reportedly included 300 white scalps from the massacre at Fort Mims (23 December 1813).

Holy River ❙ 1026 ❙ Norwegian Wars of Succession

See Helgeaa

Homildon Hill ❙ 1402 ❙ Anglo-Scottish Border Wars

Following Scottish defeat at Nesbit, Archibald Earl of Douglas led a 10,000-strong raid into Northumberland, supported by Murdoch Stewart Earl of Fife. At Homildon Hill near Wooler, the returning Scots were destroyed by Henry Percy Earl of Northumberland, his son Henry (Hotspur), and George Dunbar Earl of March. The Earls Douglas and Fife were both captured (14 September 1402).

Homs ❙ 1281 ❙ Mongol Invasion of the Middle East

Taking advantage of a fresh Mongol invasion of Syria, Crusaders of the Military Orders and King Leo of Armenia supported the Christian Mongols against the Mamluk Sultan Qalawun. The two large armies met near Homs on the upper Orontes. After a confused battle with heavy losses on both sides, the Mongols withdrew across the Euphrates (30 October 1281).

Homs ❙ 1832 ❙ 1st Turko-Egyptian War

Ibrahim Pasha took Acre (27 May), then completed the Egyptian conquest of Syria by taking Damascus (18 June), aided by Emir Bashir II of Lebanon. When Muhammad Pasha of Aleppo tried to stop him on the Orontes at Homs, Ibrahim won a decisive victory, capturing the enemy guns, 3,000 men and eight Pashas. Days later, he turned against the main Ottoman army at Belen (8–9 July 1832).

Honain ❙ 630 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed

See Hunain

Hondschoote ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

General Jean Nicolas Houchard led a revitalised French Army of the North, advancing on the British-Hanoverian siege of Dunkirk. During a three-day battle ten miles east at Hondschoote, a bayonet attack routed the outnumbered Marshal Count Johann von Walmoden. When Houchard did not follow up, Frederick Augustus Duke of York disengaged and withdrew to Belgium (6–8 September 1793).

Honey Hill ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

In support of the Union march through Georgia towards Savannah, General John Hatch sailed up the Broad River to attack the Confederate railway, northeast of Savannah. At Honey Hill, near Grahamville, he was heavily defeated and repulsed by Colonel Charles Colcock (under General Gustavus W. Smith) and the line to Charleston remained open (30 November 1864).

Honey Springs ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

While on campaign in Indian Territory, Union General James B. Blunt attacked the Confederate depot at Honey Springs, Oklahoma, defended at the nearby Elk Creek by General Douglas H. Cooper and a force comprising mainly American Indians. Cooper was driven off with about 500 casualties and Blunt crossed the Arkansas border to occupy Fort Smith (17 July 1863).

Hong ❙ 638 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era

In the shifting alliances among rival states around the Yellow River, Duke Xiang of Song joined with Wei, Deng, Xu and Chen, and marched on Zheng to try and force it to rejoin his union. After a fruitless campaign, troops from Chu arrived to reinforce Zheng. At the Hong River, Xiang and his allies were decisively defeated. The Duke died the following year from a wound received.

Hong Kong ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (China)

When the Japanese swept into Kowloon, British forces withdrew to Hong Kong Island and, a week later, the invaders stormed across Lei Yu Mun Strait. Bloody fighting cost about 4,500 British and 2,750 Japanese killed before General Christopher Maltby surrendered to General Takashi Sakai. More than 6,500 British, Indian and Canadian troops were taken prisoner (18–25 December 1941).

Honigfelde ❙ 1629 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

See Sztum

Hooglede ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Austrian Count Charles von Clerfayt advancing to relieve the French siege of the Netherlands city of Ypres was repulsed by General Jean-Baptiste Jourdan at Hooglede. A second attack was partially successful at the nearby village of Roulers, but Clerfayt was again heavily defeated at Hooglede and had to withdraw. Ypres capitulated the following day (10–16 June 1794).

Hooglhy ❙ 1632 ❙ Later Portuguese Colonial Wars in Asia

At war with the Portuguese in Bengal, Mughal Emperor Shahjahan sent Governor Qasim Khan and a reported 150,000 men to besiege the small trading settlement at Hooghly, defended by only about 300 European troops and 700 Indian Christians. The starving inhabitants fled downriver after three months, followed by years of persecution of Christians (24 June–24 September 1632).

Hook (1st) ❙ 1952 ❙ Korean War

At the western end of the defensive line across Korea, Chinese forces followed a massive artillery assault with a brutal hand-to-hand attack on the strategic crescent-shaped ridge known as The Hook. American marines under Colonel Mike Delaney were driven off before a huge aerial and artillery bombardment enabled them to regain the ridge in bloody fighting next day (26–27 October 1952).

Hook (2nd) ❙ 1952 ❙ Korean War

After relieving American marines who had defended the ridge northwest of Seoul known as The Hook, the Black Watch under Colonel David Rose faced a massive Chinese assault, which overran forward positions. Very heavy fighting saw the ridge regained at the cost of 12 British killed and 93 missing or wounded. The Chinese lost over 100 dead (18–19 November 1952).

Hook ❙ 1953 ❙ Korean War

Determined to seize the strategic ridge known as The Hook, Chinese forces followed two weeks of bombardment with a bloody infantry assault. The last major British action of the war saw the Duke of Wellington's Regiment under Colonel Ramsay Bunbury repulse the attack at the cost of 149 casualties (28 killed). The Chinese lost perhaps 250 killed and 800 wounded (28–29 May 1953).

Hoover's Gap ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As he marched south from Nashville against General Braxton Bragg at Shelbyville, Union General William S. Rosecrans sent a flank advance further east under General George H. Thomas. At Hoover's Gap, Tennessee, northeast of Wartrace, Confederate General Alexander P. Stewart fought a brilliant holding action, but had to withdraw and Bragg fell back through Tullahoma (24–26 June 1863).

Hopton Heath ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

Compton Spencer Earl of Northampton advanced from Banbury to relieve the Royalist town of Stafford, then a few days later marched out against Parliamentary forces under Sir John Gell and Sir William Brereton. On nearby Hopton Heath, Northampton inflicted a sharp defeat, capturing eight guns, but he was killed during an over-enthusiastic pursuit (19 March 1643).

Horaniu ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

As Allied troops landed elsewhere on Vella Lavella, west of New Georgia, Japanese Admiral Matsuji Ijuin escorted a force to land on the northeast tip of the island. In a night-time destroyer action against Captain Thomas Ryan off Horaniu, the Japanese lost two patrol boats and several troop-carrying barges. However, Ijuin successfully landed most of his force (17–18 August 1943).

Horice ❙ 1423 ❙ Hussite Wars

In continuing war in Bohemia after Imperial defeat at Nemecky Brod, former Hussite General Cenek of Wartenberg led well-armed Royalist cavalry against Taborite Hussites under Jan Zizka, who took a defensive position on a steep hill near Horice, north of Hradec Králové. Forced to fight dismounted, the Royalists were routed and the Taborites soon won again at Strachuv (20 April 1423).

Hormizdagan ❙ 224 ❙ Persian-Parthian War

With the Sassanian leader Ardashir (Artaxerxes) of Persia expanding his power, Artabanus V of Parthia took an army against his dangerous neighbour. But on the Plain of Hormizdagan (location unknown), he was defeated and killed. Ardashir crushed Parthia and took the title Shah of Shahs. He and his son and successor Shapur then led a campaign of conquest to build the 420-year Sassanian Empire.

Hormuz ❙ 1507–1508 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia

The great Portuguese commander Afonso de Albuquerque captured Muscat in Oman, then took seven ships and 500 men against the vital port of Hormuz, guarding the Persian Gulf. The ruler of Hormuz surrendered when Portuguese bombardment destroyed his fleet, but a mutiny and counter-offensive four months later forced Albuquerque to withdraw (September 1507–January 1508).

Hormuz ❙ 1515 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in Arabia

Repulsed in southern Arabia at Aden, the great Portuguese commander Afonso de Albuquerque gathered 27 ships and over 2,000 men for a second offensive against the port of Hormuz. Overwhelmed by the massive assault, the King of Hormuz surrendered and Portugal gained the vital stronghold commanding the Persian Gulf and the trade route between Arabia and Asia (March 1515).

Hormuz ❙ 1622 ❙ Anglo-Portuguese Colonial Wars

Following English victory in the Persian Gulf at Jask, East India ships, under Captain John Weddell, defeated Portuguese Admiral Rui Freire de Andrade to capture Kishm (30 January), then besieged nearby Hormuz to support Persian forces attacking on land. Governor Simon de Mello finally surrendered and the 2,000 Portuguese residents were sent to Muscat (9 February–22 May 1622).

Horncastle ❙ 1643 ❙ British Civil Wars

See Winceby

Hornet* vs Peacock ❙ 1813 ❙ War of 1812

See Guyana

Hornet* vs Penguin ❙ 1815 ❙ War of 1812

See Tristan de Cunha

Hornkranz ❙ 1893 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

When Nama tribesman in German Southwest Africa refused a treaty, Colonel Curt von Francois led a surprise attack on the Khoi camp at Hornkranz, west of Reheboth. Although about 50 women and children were killed, Nama leader Hendrik Witbooi and most his warriors escaped to fight a guerrilla war until defeat at Naukluf. Von Francois was recalled the next month (12 April 1893).

Horns of Hattin ❙ 1187 ❙ 3rd Crusade

See Hattin

Horokiri ❙ 1846 ❙ 1st New Zealand War

After the raid on Boulcott's Farm, outside Wellington, British forces arrested the great Te Rauparaha. Major Edward Last, supported by Ngatiawa allies under Te Rangitake, then pursued his nephew Te Rangihaeata to the nearby Horokiri Valley. Last withdrew after a stubborn action, but Te Rangihaeata soon retreated into remote hills, ending fighting around Wellington (5–7 August 1846).

Horreum Margi ❙ 505 ❙ Gothic War in Italy

Eastern Emperor Anastasius was concerned by Theodoric the Ostrogoth campaigning north from Italy towards the Danube and sent General Sabinian, supported by Bulgarian auxiliaries, to Dacia against Mundo, a descendant of Attila the Hun. At Horreum Margi, near the Margus (modern Morava in Serbia), the Roman-Bulgarian army was totally destroyed by the outnumbered Goth and Hun allies.

Horseshoe Bend ❙ 1814 ❙ Creek Indian War

When Creek Indians renewed their offensive in Alabama after defeat at Econochaca, Generals Andrew Jackson and John Coffee led over 2,000 men against 900 Creek and Cherokee under Chief Menawa on the Tallapoosa north of Dadeville. In decisive action at Horseshoe Bend (Tohopeka) about 700 Indians were killed and 500 women and children captured, ending the war (27 March 1814).

Ho-sheng ❙ 1926 ❙ 1st Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Hesheng

Hostalrich ❙ 1809–1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Marshal Pierre Augereau faced continued resistance in Catalonia following the capture of Gerona and despatched General Alois Mazzuchelli's Italian brigade southwest against Hostalrich. While the mountain town fell (7 November 1809), the Spanish garrison held the local fortress against a four-month siege by General Joseph Souham before fighting their way out (16 January–12 May 1810).

Hoton Nor ❙ 1731 ❙ Chinese-Mongol Wars

Three decades after the Kangxi Emperor routed the Zunghar Mongols at Jaomodo (1696), his son Yongzhen determined to attack new Zunghar ruler Galdan Tseren. Qing General Furdan took an army deep into Mongolia and built a fortress at Khobdo. Lured further into the mountains, his army was ambushed and besieged at Hoton Nor and virtually destroyed. Peace was later agreed (23–27 July 1731).

Hotva ❙ 1638 ❙ Cossack-Polish Wars

See Zhovnyne

Hoxne ❙ 870 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

Danish Vikings under Ivar and Ubba—sons of Ragnar Lodbrok—consolidated their position in southeast England, where they met King Edmund "the Martyr" of East Anglia, at Hoxne (Heglisdune), north of Ipswich in Suffolk. When his force was overwhelmed, Edmund was executed and interred at Beadricesworth, which became known as Bury St Edmund (20 November 870).

Hoyerswerda ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Advancing across the Spree after victory at Bautzen, Napoleon Bonaparte sent Marshal Nicolas Oudinot's division towards Berlin. Marching south in defence, Prussian General Friedrich von Bulow underestimated the French strength and, at Hoyerswerda, northeast of Dresden, was sharply repulsed. Within three months, he had his revenge at Luckau and again at Grossbeeren (28 May 1813).

Hsiang ❙ 1934 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Xiang

Hsiang-chi ❙ 757 ❙ An Lushan Rebellion

See Xiangji

Hsiang-chou ❙ 758 ❙ An Lushan Rebellion

See Xiangzhou

Hsiang-yang ❙ 1206–1207 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

See Xiangyang

Hsiang-yang ❙ 1268–1273 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Xiangyang

Hsien-yang ❙ 207 BC ❙ Fall of the Qin Dynasty

See Xianyang

Hsing-an ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

See Xing-an

Hsinmintun ❙ 1925 ❙ Guo Songling's Revolt

See Xinmintun

Hsuchow ❙ 1927 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War
See Xuzhou

Hsuchow ❙ 1937–1938 ❙ Sino-Japanese War
See Xuzhou

Hsu-I ❙ 451 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties
See Xuyi

Hsü-ko ❙ 707 BC ❙ Wars of China's Spring and Autumn Era
See Xuge

Huachi ❙ 1820 ❙ Ecuadorian War of Independence

In a renewed rising in Ecuador, Patriots led by Luis Urdaneta and José Garcia were met just south of Ambato, at Huachi, by Royalist forces under Colonel Francisco González, who won a bloody victory, with about 800 Patriots killed. When Garcia soon lost again at Tanizahua, General Antonio José de Sucre took command and defeated González in August 1821 at Yaguachi (22 November 1820).

Huachi ❙ 1821 ❙ Ecuadorian War of Independence

Patriot General Antonio José de Sucre followed up victory at Yaguachi (19 August), pursuing Spanish commander Melchior Aymerich to Huachi, just south of Ambato, where the Royalists turned and inflicted a bloody defeat. Sucre lost over half his army, including General José Mires captured, but by May 1822 he recovered with victory at Ríobambo and Pichincha (12 September 1821).

Huaihai ❙ 1948–1949 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

The largest battle in modern China saw perhaps 600,000 Communist troops under Chen Yi and Lin Biao attack an equal Nationalist force around Xuzhou under Liu Zhih and Bai Chongxi. The massive Huaihai offensive sealed the fate of Nationalist rule with perhaps 500,000 men lost at Nianzhuang, Chenguanzhuang and Shuangduiji (7 November 1948–January 1949).

Huaiqing ❙ 1853 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Having captured Nanjing, the Taiping sent Li Kaifang and Lin Fengxiang across the Yellow to besiege Huaiqing (modern Qinyang), northeast of Luoyang, held by Yu Bingdao and Qiu Baoyang. Determined to hold the city, Beijing sent reinforcements under Imperial Commissioner Ne'er Jing'e and the Taiping Northern Expedition had to withdraw west into Shanxi (8 July–1 September 1853).

Hualqui ❙ 1819 ❙ Chilean War of Independence

In bitter action near the war's end, 50 Royalist irregulars led by Vicente Benavides attacked Hualqui (modern Gualqui) on the Bio Bio, 13 miles southeast of Concepción, defended by just 25 Patriots under José Tomás Huerta. Benavides was driven off, losing half his men, and three prisoners later executed. A subsequent loss further south at Valdivia soon ended hostilities (20 November 1819).

Huamachuco ❙ 1883 ❙ War of the Pacific

Despite defeat at Miraflores in 1881 and the fall of Lima, Peruvian forces continued a guerrilla war against the Chilean army of occupation. The last action of the war saw 3,000 Peruvian irregulars, led by General Andrés Avelino Cáceres, attack 1,600 Chileans under Colonel Alejandro Gorostiaga in the Andes at Huamachuco. Peru suffered a decisive defeat and peace was quickly signed (10 July 1883).

Huamantla ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

American General Joseph Lane advancing from Veracruz to relieve the siege of Puebla, met a Mexican blocking force 25 miles to the northeast at Huamantla under General Antonio de Santa Anna. The Mexicans were driven off with over 150 killed and, when Major Samuel Walker was killed by a sniper, Lane permitted his men to rape and sack the town (9 October 1847).

Huanta ❙ 1814 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

Leading an Indian rising in Cuzco, Mateo Pumacahua sent José Gabriel Bejar, Mariano Angulo and Manuel Hurtado de Mendoza west, to Huamanga, where they raised a large Indian force. But they were defeated at Huanta, 15 miles northwest of Ayacucho, by a Royalist force from Lima under Colonel Vicente Gonzalez. Within four months the Indians lost again at Matará (2–3 October 1814).

Huaqui ❙ 1811 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

After defeat at Suipacha in Upper Peru (modern western Bolivia), Spanish Royalist General José Manuel de Goyeneche regrouped and broke an armistice by attacking Patriot commander Juan José Castelli in Bolivia at Huaqui (Guaqui), on Lake Titicaca. The Spanish regulars routed the Patriot army, though in September 1812, the Argentines were avenged at Río Piedras and Tucumán (20 June 1811).

Huara ❙ 1891 ❙ Chilean Civil War

During civil war between Chile's Congress and President José Manuel Balmaceda, Loyalist Colonel Eulogio Robles Pinochet recovered from defeat at San Francisco to take a position two days later at Huara between Iquique and Pasagua against Congressist Colonel Estanislao del Canto Arteaga. The advancing rebels were repulsed with 240 dead, but soon won at Pozo Almonte (17 February 1891).

Huarina ❙ 1547 ❙ Spanish Civil War in Peru

When Gonzalo Pizarro killed the Viceroy of Peru at Anaquito (January 1546), King Charles of Spain appointed Pedro de la Gasca, who sent over 1,000 men under Diego Centeno against the usurper. One of Peru's bloodiest battles, at Huarina on Lake Titicaca, saw 350 Royalists and over 100 Pizarrists killed before Pizarro secured victory. He was defeated a year later at Xaquixaguana (26 October 1547).

Huatai ❙ 450 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties

As Wei forces from northern China encroached beyond the Yellow River, Song Emperor Wen lost Huatai (near modern Jixian, Shandong) in 431, but in 450 he sent Wang Xuanmo to retake the town. After three months of siege, Wang withdrew in the face of a massive Wei army, which caught and routed him. Emperor Tuwai of Wei then continued his southern offensive and besieged Xuyi.

Huayin ❙ 211 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

Checked on the Yangzi at Red Cliffs (208), the northern warlord Cao Cao (Ts'ao Ts'ao) turned against the warlords of the northwest and advanced on a large combined force under Ma Chao and Hun Sui. Using a bold oblique approach, he attacked and destroyed the Allied army at Huayin, at the junction of the Wei and Yellow Rivers. Victory secured the strategic Wei Valley as far as Chang'an.

Huayna Pucará ❙ 1572 ❙ Tupac Amaru Revolt

Thirty-five years after Manco Capac's failed siege of Cuzco, his son Tupac Amaru renewed the revolt and Viceroy Francisco de Toledo launched a large-scale offensive on the Inca mountain stronghold at Vilcabamba. At nearby Huayna Pucará, the Inca army was routed and Vilcabamba fell next day. Tupac Amarau, the last Inca, was pursued and captured and was beheaded at Cuzco (23 June 1572).

Huazhou ❙ 1850 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

At the start of the Taiping rebellion in Guangxi, Chinese Imperial commander Zhou Fengqi sent General Li Dianyuan against rebel leaders Hong Xiuquan and Feng Yunshan at the village of Huazhou in the Penghua Range, northeast of Jintian. Ambushed by Taiping under Meng De-en, General Li was heavily defeated and fled and the victorious Taiping returned to Jintian (4 November 1850).

Hubbardton ❙ 1777 ❙ War of the American Revolution

American General Arthur St Clair withdrew across Lake Champlain from the fall of Fort Ticonderoga, leaving his rearguard under Colonel Seth Warner at Hubbardton, Vermont. Both sides suffered heavy losses in a dawn attack by British forces under Generals Simon Fraser and Friedrich Riedesel. However, Warner was defeated and dispersed towards Bennington (7 July 1777).

Hudayda ❙ 1934 ❙ Saudi-Yemeni War

Amid border war with Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Saudi Arabia, Imam Yahya ibn, Muhammad of Yemen sent forces into disputed territory and Ibn Saud responded with two invading armies under his sons Faisal and Crown Prince Saud. A bold campaign saw Faisal capture the city of al-Hudayda within three weeks. The ensuing peace treaty secured the disputed Asir region for Saudi Arabia.

Hue ❙ 1883 ❙ French Conquest of Indo-China

With France defeated in the north near Hanoi in May, Admiral Amedée Courbet took seven ships and over 1,000 troops against the Imperial capital at Hue in central Vietnam (Annam). Following a massive naval bombardment, the forts on the nearby Perfume River at Thuan-An were destroyed and captured. Emperor Hiep Hoa was forced to accept French overlordship (20 August 1883).

Hue ❙ 1968 ❙ Vietnam War

In the Tet Offensive, North Vietnamese and Viet Cong surprised and took the former Imperial capital Hue. A counter-attack by American and South Vietnamese saw half the city destroyed by air-strikes, artillery and naval bombardment. Hue was finally retaken at a cost of over 5,000 Communists and about 500 Allied troops killed and thousands of civilians executed (31 January–24 February 1968).

Hue ❙ 1975 ❙ Vietnam War

As North Vietnam's final offensive began in the central highlands at Ban Me Thuot, large forces attacking in the north took Quang Tri (19 March), then advanced on Hue, which the government ordered held at all cost. Facing Communist shelling and likely encirclement, South Vietnamese General Ngo Quang Truong abandoned Hue and thousands fled towards Danang (23–25 March 1975).

Huebra ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Anglo-Portuguese troops under Arthur Wellesley Lord Wellington retreating from their failed siege of Burgos, finally reached the Huebra. At San Munoz, the rearguard was attacked by French Marshals Nicolas Soult and Jean-Baptiste Jourdan. However, the artillery bombardment proved ineffective and the Allies crossed the river to reach Ciudad Rodrigo (17 November 1812).

Huesca ❙ 1096 ❙ Early Christian Reconquest of Spain

See Alcoraz

Huesca ❙ 1811 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Ayerbe

Huesca ❙ 1837 ❙ 1st Carlist War

As Spanish pretender Don Carlos V led his army through Aragon, he was unwisely attacked at Huesca by pursuing government forces under General Iribarren and French Foreign Legion Colonel Joseph Conrad. Taking advantage of a superior position and failing light, the Carlists inflicted heavy losses (including Iribarren killed), then continued east through Barbastro (24 May 1837).

Huhnerwasser ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

As Prussian Prince Friedrich Karl invaded Austrian Bohemia through Liebenau and Podol, Austrian forces were sent to defend the Iser, while General Leopold Gondrecourt met Prussian advance units under General Herwath von Bittenfeld at Huhnerwasser. Gondrecourt had to withdraw east after a costly brief action and joined Count Edouard von Clam-Gallas at Münchengratz (27 June 1866).

Huilquipamba ❙ 1840 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

Almost ten years after victory at Palmira, General José María Obando renewed rebellion in the south, but Pasto was occupied by government forces under General Pedro Alcántara Herrán. At nearby Huilquipamba, Obando fled after he was routed by Herrán, supported by Tomás Cipriano de Mosquera and Ecuadorian forces under General Juan José Flores (30 September 1840).

Huirangi ❙ 1861 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

See Te Arei

Huj ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

British forces under General John Shea advanced from victory at Beersheba and attacked a Turkish rearguard—supported by German and Austrian regulars—at Huj, northeast of Gaza. A bold cavalry charge secured the German Headquarters, though at the cost of unexpectedly heavy British casualties. Most of the Turkish force escaped north towards Jerusalem (8 November 1917).

Hukawng ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

Stalled in the Hukawng Valley in northern Burma in late 1943, General Joseph Stilwell's Chinese Divisions were joined by Merrill's Marauders and renewed the offensive against determined resistance under General Shinichi Tanaka. Severe fighting secured Maingkwan-Walawbum (3–7 March) and Shaduzup (29 March), as Stilwell advanced on Myitkyina (January–April 1944).

Hulao ❙ 621 ❙ Rise of the Tang Dynasty

With northwest China secured at Qianshuiyuan (618), the Tang Dynasty turned against its last rivals. The Emperor's son, Li Shimin, besieged Wang Shichong at Luoyang, then continued east against a Xia relief army under Dou Jiande, encamped at Sishui. Lured out to defeat at nearby Hulao, the Xia lost 3,000 killed and perhaps 50,000 captured, including Dou. Wang quickly surrendered (28 May 621).

Huleiqat ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Following the Second Truce, Jewish forces under Ygal Allon renewed the offensive against the Egyptians in the south. Despite initial failure around Gaza, the Israelis attacked the fortified position to the northeast at Huleiqat, which fell by storm after heavy fighting. This opened the way into the Negev towards Beersheba, though further east Faluja held out under siege (18–20 October 1948).

Hulst ❙ 1642 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

See Kempen

Hulst ❙ 1645 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Frederick Henry of Orange determined to secure southern Netherlands, where he captured Sas van Gent, then a year later besieged nearby Hulst, about 15 miles northwest of Antwerp. Driving off a Spanish relief army under Baron Johann von Beck and Duke Charles IV of Lorraine, he captured the town's outer defences and forced it to capitulate (October–4 November 1645).

Humaitá ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

When President Francisco Solano López of Paraguay was defeated in the southwest at Tuyutí, he withdrew from besieged Humaitá, leaving Colonel Paulino Alen and a garrison of about 3,000. An assault by 12,000 men under Brazilian General Manuel Osório was driven off with unexpected losses, but Alen later killed himself and Colonel Francisco Martinez surrendered Humaitá (24 July 1868).

Humblebeck ❙ 1700 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

See Copenhagen

Hummelshof ❙ 1702 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Russian Marshal Boris Sheremetev beat Swedish General Anton von Schlippenbach in Livonia at Erestfer in January, then inflicted an even greater defeat north of Valga at Hummelshof, where his 30,000 men overwhelmed Schlippenbach's 8,000. With more than 5,000 casualties and their artillery lost, the defeat ended Swedish mobile force in Livonia, leaving only fixed garrisons (18 July 1702).

Hunain ❙ 630 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed

Immediately after capturing the strategic city of Mecca, the Prophet Mohammed took the Muslim army of Medina against other infidel allies of the defeated Koreish of Mecca. In the Hunain Valley to the southeast, Mohammed heavily defeated the Hawazin tribes, who withdrew to siege at Taif. They eventually negotiated acceptance of Islamic authority and the war ended (31 January 630).

Hundred Slain ❙ 1866 ❙ Red Cloud's War

See Fetterman Massacre

Hundsfeld ❙ 1109 ❙ Polish-German Wars

See Psie Pole

Hungahungatoroa ❙ 1865 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

Pursuing the religio-military Hauhau on New Zealand's east coast, Major James Fraser, with Captain Charles Westrupp's Forest Rangers and Maori allies, attacked Kereopa and Patara in a major fortified position at Hungahungatoroa, near the Kawakawa. Scaling precipitous cliffs, Fraser secured a decisive victory with over 500 Hauhau captured. He soon won again at Waerenga (October 1865).

Hungnam ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

See Koto-ri

Hungry Hill ❙ 1855 ❙ Rogue River War

With settlers and Indians warring on the Rogue River in southern Oregon, Captain Andrew Jackson Smith led about 250 regulars and volunteers against 100 warriors under Tecumtum at Hungry Hill, between Grave and Cow Creeks. Both sides withdrew after two days of indecisive attack and counter-attack and the war continued until Smith won at Big Meadow (31 October–1 November 1855).

Huningue ❙ 1796–1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Following repeated defeat east of Rhine at the hands of Archduke Charles Louis of Austria, French General Jean Victor Moreau withdrew across the river at Huningue, leaving General Pierre-Marie Ferino to hold the strategic crossing. Ferino capitulated after a remarkable three-month siege and was permitted to march out with all his arms and baggage (26 October 1796–19 February 1797).

Huningue ❙ 1815 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (The Hundred Days)

Among French commanders who refused to surrender after Waterloo was Baron Joseph Barbanege at Huningue, on the Rhine near Basel. His massively outnumbered force withstood two months' siege before surrendering with full honours to an estimated 25,000 Austrians under Archduke John and Swiss under General Nikolaus Bachmann. The town was razed (26 June– 26 August 1815).

Hunt's Gap ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

German tanks under Colonel Rudolph Lang advancing on the important communication centre at Beja, in northern Tunisia, were delayed at Sidi Nsir, which allowed reinforcement of a powerful anti-tank defence 12 miles further west at Hunt's Gap. By the time Lang's armour arrived two days later, he was driven off with very heavy losses and the northern offensive failed (28 February 1943).

Huon Peninsula ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

With Salamaua secured, Australians under General Edmund Herring, with American support, attacked the strategic Huon Peninsula in northeast New Guinea, inland through the Markham Valley and from the sea against Finschhafen. The Japanese counter-attacked at nearby Sattelberg, but General Hotazo Adachi finally had to withdraw west to Wewak (22 September–20 December 1943).

Huoyi ❙ 617 ❙ Rise of the Tang Dynasty

With the Sui Dynasty in decline, Li Yuan rebelled in Taiyuan and led a large force down the Fen, where he was blocked at Huoyi by a strong Sui force under Song Laosheng. Lured into taking his troops outside the walls, Song was badly defeated and Huoyi fell. Li marched on to take the capital Chang'an (9 November) and in 618 he proclaimed himself Gaozu, first Emperor of the new Tang Dynasty (8 September 617).

Hürtgen Forest ❙ 1944–1945 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

After breaching the Siegfried Line at Aachen, American General Courtney Hodges entered the Hürtgen Forest, where some of the hardest fighting in the west saw over 30,000 American casualties in a battle of attrition. The delay helped Germany prepare the Ardennes offensive and the forest was not cleared until a fresh attack finally captured Schmidt (6 October 1944–9 February 1945).

Husainpur ❙ 1720 ❙ Mughal-Hyderabad War

See Ratanpur

Hydaspes ❙ 326 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

As Alexander the Great marched into India past the stronghold at Aornos, Indian Prince Porus attempted to defend the Hydaspes (modern Jhelum) River. Near modern Jalalpur, Alexander secured a brilliant victory over Porus, who used elephants to make up for inferior numbers. Although the victor then occupied the Punjab, his troops mutinied to force a return west and he died en route (May 326 BC).

Hyderabad, India ❙ 1709 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

In the decline of the Mughal Empire following the death of Aurangzeb, his eldest son Muazim returned from Afghanistan to defeat Prince Azam at Jajau. Muazim (now as Emperor Bahadur Shah) then marched against his other brother, Kambakhsh. In battle outside Hyderabad against General Munim Khan and Prince Jahinshah, Kambakhsh was defeated and died of wounds (3 January 1709).

Hyderabad, Pakistan ❙ 1843 ❙ British Conquest of Sind

When the Baluchi Amirs of Sind (modern Pakistan) besieged the Residency at Hyderabad, Britain launched an opportunistic invasion and sent General Sir Charles Napier to relieve Major James Outram. After a stunning victory at Miani, Napier routed Sher Muhammad's siege just outside Hyderabad at Dubba and Britain annexed the Sind (15 February–24 March 1843).

Hyères ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Four months after an unsatisfactory action off Genoa against Admiral Pierre Martin, Admiral Sir William Hotham met Martin again near the Hyères Islands off Provence. When the outnumbered French tried to run, a disorganised pursuit saw one French ship burned, before the wind changed and the over-cautious Hotham broke off the chase. Soon after, he was relieved of command (13 July 1795).

Hyrcanian Rock ❙ 588 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

While war continued in Mesopotamia between Byzantines and Sassanids, a huge Turkish army invaded Persia. Sassanid King Hormizd IV sent General Bahram Chobin to confront the threat and, after marching east with a small force, he ambushed the Turks at Hyrcanian Rock, a narrow pass leading onto the Iranian Plateau. Attacking from the heights above Bahram secured victory and repulsed the invasion.

Hysiae ▌ 669 BC ▌ Rise of Argos

The city-state of Argos in northeastern Peloponnese reached its peak under the Tyrant Pheidon, who greatly expanded Argive power. In a decisive clash at Hysiae, at the foot of Mount Parthenium, Pheidon routed a Spartan army, perhaps by using newly developed hoplite tactics. While victory gave Argos control over much of Peloponnese, Sparta was avenged in 547 in the Battle of the Champions.

I

Ia Drang ❙ 1965 ❙ Vietnam War

After a North Vietnamese attack was beaten at Plei Me, US airborne troops launched a large-scale offensive in the nearby Ia Drang Valley, southwest of Pleiku. In their first major battle against North Vietnamese regulars, the Americans suffered almost 300 killed, including 150 lost in a deadly ambush. However, the Communists had up to 2,000 killed and withdrew (14–18 November 1965).

Ialomitsa ❙ 1446 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

Hungarian Regent Janos Hunyadi intervened in a dispute in Wallachia, taking an army to support Prince Dan III against Vlad the Devil, who had returned with Ottoman forces to regain his Princedom. Hunyadi surprised and destroyed the Turks at the Ialomitsa River and captured Vlad, who was taken to Tirgoviste and executed, along with his eldest son (August 1446).

Iao Valley ❙ 1790 ❙ Hawaiian Wars

See Kepaniwai

Ibarra ❙ 1823 ❙ Ecuadorian War of Independence

Soon after liberation of Ecuador at Pichincha (May 1822), Pasto city rebelled against President Simón Bolívar and defeated local Governor Juan José Flores. Bolívar took 2,000 men and, northeast of Quito, at Ibarra, utterly routed Royalist leader Agustín Agualongo, killing 600 out of 1,500. General Bartolomé Salom soon won again at Catambuco and brutally crushed the rising (17 July 1823).

Ibeka ❙ 1877 ❙ 9th Cape Frontier War

In a final attempt to regain lost Xhosa land, Galekas under veteran chief Kreili resumed war and 8,000 men attacked a force of Frontier Armed Police at Ibeka, in southeast Transkei but were heavily repulsed. The following day Regulars led by Commandant Charles Griffith arrived and burned Krieli's kraal. The Galeka were beaten again four months later at N'Axama (29 September 1877).

Ibera ❙ 217 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

See Ebro

Ibera ❙ 215 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

Carthaginian General Hasdrubal faced renewed Roman success in northeast Spain and attacked Ibera, opposite Dertosa near the mouth of the Ebro, scene of a naval defeat two years earlier. Hasdrubal's Spanish levies faltered in an attempted encirclement and his African troops were routed, giving strategic victory to Scipio the Elder and his brother Gnaeus, who later recaptured Saguntum.

Ibiza ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

See Majorca

Icamole ❙ 1876 ❙ Diaz Revolt in Mexico

Continuing the insurrection against President Sebastián Lerdo de Tejada, General Porfirio Diaz captured Matamaros, then was intercepted to the northwest at Icamole by government troops from Monterrey under General Carlos Fuero. Despite a courageous attack by Francisco Naranjo, Diaz was defeated and fled. His forces lost again a week later at San Juan Epatlán (20 May 1876).

Ice, Battle on the ❙ 1242 ❙ Rise of Russia
See Lake Peipus

Ichigo ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (China)
Reinforced to 25 divisions, Japanese commander Shunroku Hata (later Yasuji Okamura) led the massive Ichigo offensive to seize Allied airfields in eastern China and open a land route to French Indo-China. The brilliant offensive started with Kogo, to clear Central Henan, then entered the Togo phase south to secure Changsha, Hengyang and Guilin-Liuzhou (April–December 1944).

Ichinotani ❙ 1184 ❙ Gempei War
The Minamoto brothers, Yoshitsune and Noriyori, destroyed their rebellious cousin Yoshinaka at the Awazu and two weeks later marched west against the Taira, who had fled Kyoto with the boy-Emperor Antoku after defeat at Shinowara. A brilliant pincer action at Ichinotani, west of Kobe, routed Taira Munemori, who fled with Antoku to the Taira stronghold at Yashima (18 March 1184).

Iconium ❙ 1147 ❙ 2nd Crusade
See Dorylaeum

Idistaviso ❙ 16 ❙ Rome's Germanic Wars
See Weser

Idle ❙ 617 ❙ Anglo-Saxon Territorial Wars
Two years after defeating the Welsh Kingdom of Powys at Chester, King Aethelfrith of Northumbria was attacked in the east by the Saxon King Raedwald of East Anglia. Raedwald defeated and killed Aethelfrith on the east bank of the Idle in Nottinghamshire and established Edwin, son of Aella of Deira, as the first Christian King of Northumbria.

Idstedt ❙ 1850 ❙ 1st Schleswig-Holstein War
Abandoned by Prussia after the failed siege of Fredericia, Schleswig and Holstein fought on alone against Danish reoccupation. Decisive battle at Idstedt, a village just north of Schleswig, saw troops from the rebel Duchies under General Karl Wilhelm von Willisen heavily defeated. After rebel failure to capture Friedrichstadt, the war ended with Danish rule reimposed (25 July 1850).

Ifni ❙ 1957 ❙ Ifni War
While campaigning in Spanish Sahara, newly independent Morocco also sent forces against the Spanish enclave of Ifni in the southwest. Heaviest fighting was in the south of Ifni, where an airdrop of Spanish paratroops failed to secure the area. When the Spanish withdrew into Sidi Ifni town, fighting died down. Twelve years later, Ifni was retroceded to Morocco (25 November–4 December 1957).

Iganie ❙ 1831 ❙ Polish Rebellion
See Siedlce

Igualada ❙ 1809 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)
Generals Laurent Gouvion Saint-Cyr and Louis-Francois Chabot manoeuvring north of Tarragona attacked the Spanish left, under General Mariano Alvarez de Castro at Igualada, 30 miles northwest of Barcelona. Chabot was initially repulsed before St-Cyr arrived with his main force and Castro was beaten. The Spanish fled southwest towards further defeat days later at Valls (17 February 1809).

Iguará ❙ 1895 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence
Revolutionaries under General Máximo Gómez and Antonio Maceo marched into western Cuba where they met and defeated a Spanish force near Iguará. The Spanish fell back, losing 18 men killed, along with large quantity of rifles and cartridges. However, Gómez could ill-afford his handful of casualties and was pursued by General Fernando Oliver west towards Manacal (3 December 1895).

Ihantala ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)

Soviet forces invaded Finland to capture Vyborg, then attacked Finnish defensive lines to the northeast at Tali and Ihantala. Supported by German anti-tank guns and aircraft, the Finns won a decisive defensive victory in one of history's major armoured battles. The Russian advance was stopped, but the invaders meanwhile attempted to attack again around Vuosalmi (25 June–7 July 1944).

Ile d'Aix ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

While assembling in the Bay of Biscay off the port of Rochefort to escort a large merchant convoy to North America, a French naval squadron was attacked by English Admiral Sir Edward Hawke. Although heavily outnumbered, Hawke's ships drove many of the French vessels ashore on the nearby Ile d'Aix, helping ensure Allied victory weeks later in Nova Scotia at Louisbourg (4 April 1758).

Ile de France ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

See Mauritius

Ile de Groix ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

British Admiral Alexander Hood Lord Bridport, assisting the ill-fated émigré landing at Quiberon, met a French squadron off L'Orient near Ile de Groix. Pursuing the outnumbered Admiral Louis-Thomas Villaret de Joyeuse as he attempted to retreat, Bridport captured three French ships and inflicted heavy loss of life. He was however accused of excessive caution (23 June 1795).

Ile de Ré ❙ 1627 ❙ 3rd Huguenot Rebellion

In support of French Huguenots, England sent George Villiers Duke of Buckingham against the Ile de Ré, guarding the Protestant port at La Rochelle. With insufficient forces, Buckingham failed to capture the island's two fortresses, commanded by Jean de Toiras. And when more French troops landed, the English sailed away a total failure (12 July–29 October 1627).

Ilerda ❙ 78 BC ❙ Sertorian War

With rebel General Quintus Sertorius controlling much of Spain after victory at the Baetis and Anas, Lucius Manilius, Roman Consul in Narbonnese Gaul, invaded with three Legions and 1,500 cavalry to support Quintus Metellus Pius, Governor of Further Spain. A disastrous defeat near Ilerda saw Manilius routed by the Sertorian Lieutenant Lucius Hirtuleius and he retreated to Gaul.

Ilerda ❙ 49 BC ❙ Wars of the First Triumvirate

Julius Caesar marched into Spain with 40,000 men against supporters of his rival Pompey and met their army of about 70,000 under Lucius Afranius and Marcus Petreius at Ilerda (modern Lérida), northwest of Tarragona. Caesar drove his enemy into siege with a great campaign of manoeuvre, then forced their surrender. He returned to Italy after capturing Massilia in Gaul (2 May–2 July 49 BC).

Ilescas ❙ 1936 ❙ Spanish Civil War

As the Nationalist army advanced towards Madrid, a diversionary force under General Fernando Barrón captured Ilescas, south of the capital on the road to Toledo. Republican General José Asenio was drawn into the battle, but he was eventually driven back by Nationalist reinforcements. Meantime, the main force advanced west of Madrid through Navalcarnero (18–23 October 1936).

Ilha de Redencão ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance

Crossing the upper Parana into Paraguay, 900 Brazilians under Colonel João Carlos Vilagran Cabrita landed and dug in on a low bank, then known as Ilha de Redencão, near Itapirú. Five days later, Paraguayan Colonel José Eduvigis Díaz attacked with 1,300 men. He was driven off in bloody hand-to-hand fighting with over 600 killed and fell back on Estero Bellaco (10 April 1866).

Ilipa ❙ 206 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

The Carthaginians Mago and Hasdrubal Gisco, attempting to recover territory lost in Spain, gathered a large army at Ilipa (modern Alcalá del Río) near Seville, where they faced Roman General Publius Scipio the Younger. Scipio routed the Carthaginians in a brilliant tactical victory, although a sudden rainstorm prevented pursuit. This decisive action effectively drove Carthage out of Spain.

Illig ❙ 1904 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

Soon after British troops beat Muhammad Abdullah Hassan inland at Jidballi (10 January), two ships attacked Illig on Somaliland's east coast. A Naval brigade and troops under Captain Horace Hood from the cruiser Hyacinth took Fort Illig at bayonet point and killed about 60 Dervishes for only three British dead. The Mullah fled to Italian territory and signed a peace, which lasted until 1908 (21 April 1904).

Illyricum ❙ 261 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

A year after the capture of Emperor Valerian at Edessa, his former General Macrianus rebelled against his successor Gallienus and invaded the west with his son Fulvius Junius Macrianus, as usurper. Reaching the Danube, father and son were defeated and killed in Illyricum, near the border with Thrace, by Gallienus' General Aureolus. The second son, Quietus, was killed in the east by the Palmyreans.

Iloilo ❙ 1899 ❙ Philippine-American War

Soon after war started at Manila, American General Marcus P. Miller delivered an ultimatum to General Martin Delgado at Iloilo, further south on Panay. Delgado, who had seized the town from Spain, refused to surrender and Miller bombarded the town with naval guns. The American then landed and secured Iloilo (which had been looted and burned) and also took nearby Jaro (10 February 1899).

Ilomantsi ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)

Soviet forces invading Finland suffered terrible losses at Ihantala and Vuosalmi, but attempted a new offensive north of Lake Ladoga around Ilomantsi. Despite superiority in men and material, two Russian Divisions were encircled and virtually destroyed. Russia then granted Finland an armistice (5 September), which preserved independence and ended the Continuation War (2–9 August 1944).

Ilorin ❙ 1897 ❙ British Conquest of Northern Nigeria

Sir Charles Goldie of the Royal Niger Company determined to secure northern Nigeria and destroyed the Nupe at Bida, then turned west against Emir Sulaymanu at Ilorin. Once again, ill-armed warriors were destroyed by Maxim guns and artillery and the Emirate was brought under British protectorate. In 1903, British forces attacked further north at Kano and Sokoto (16 February 1897).

Ilu ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See Tenaru

Ilurci ❙ 211 BC ❙ 2nd Punic War

With Roman forces campaigning against the Carthaginian Hasdrubal in Andalusia, Publius Scipio was killed on the Baetis after being forced to split his forces. Shortly afterwards his brother Gnaeus Scipio was defeated and killed by another Carthaginian army at Ilurci (modern Lorca), west of Cartagena. Rome then withdrew north of the Ebro, effectively conceding southern Spain.

Imbembesi ❙ 1893 ❙ Matabele War

See Bembesi

Imjin ❙ 1592 ❙ Japanese Invasion of Korea

With the fall of Seoul after victory at Chongju in June, Japanese Generals Konishi Yukinaga and Kato Kiyomasa advanced to the Imjin, where Korean General Kim Myung attempted a defence. When the Japanese feigned withdrawal, some Koreans were lured across the river and destroyed. King Songju withdrew and Kato marched northeast, while Konishi advanced on Pyongyang (15 July 1592).

Imjin ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

Despite being driven out of Seoul (14 March), Communist Chinese troops launched a fresh offensive to retake the South Korean capital and found their way blocked to the north by Commonwealth forces at the Imjin River. Both sides suffered heavy loses, including the famous stand by the Gloucestershire Regiment, but the line held, as it did further east around Kapyong (22–25 April 1951).

Immae ❙ 218 ❙ Roman Military Civil Wars

Marcus Macrinus became Roman Emperor by conspiring in the murder of his predecessor Caracalla, then faced a conspiracy by Varius Avitus Bassianus, claiming to be the illegtimate son of his cousin Caracalla. Macrinus was in turn overthrown and killed after defeat at Immae, north of Antioch. Bassianus became Emperor as Elagabalus, but proved equally ineffectual (8 June 218).

Immae ❙ 271 ❙ Roman-Palmyrean War

Determined to reassert Roman authority in the east after defeat of Valerian at Edessa in 260, Emperor Aurelian led a major force against Zenobia, warrior Queen of Palmyra, whose empire extended beyond Syria to include Egypt and northern Mesopotamia. Palmyrean General Zabdas marched north from Antioch to the Orontes at Immae and was heavily defeated. He lost again a year later at Emessa.

Imola ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

With the Austrians and Piedmontese defeated in northern Italy, French General Claude Victor took a force against Rome. Advancing south from Imola, southeast of Bologna, supported by General Jean Lannes, Victor smashed into a Papal force under Austrian General Michael Colli. The Papal troops were driven back with heavy losses and Rome was occupied (3 February 1797).

Imphal ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

Japanese commander Renya Mutaguchi's huge offensive into India was stopped at Kohima, while further south Generals Masafumi Yamauchi and Genzo Yanagida converged to cut off General William Slim's army at Imphal (29 March). The campaign's decisive action saw the siege of Imphal broken and Mutaguchi had to withdraw with over 50,000 casualties (22 March–26 June 1944).

Imus ❙ 1896 ❙ Philippines War of Independence

Spanish General Ernesto Aguirre defeated Emilio Aguinaldo in Cavite at Zapote Bridge, then returned with a larger force and attacked the Revolutionary leader in a strongly entrenched position at Imus, 12 miles southwest of Manila. Aguinaldo defeated the 500 Spanish in a bold flanking movement as they crossed the river. Two months later he won again at Binakayan (5 September 1896).

Imus ❙ 1897 ❙ Philippines War of Independence

Having captured Dasmariñas, south of Manila, Spanish General José Lachambre was heavily reinforced and took 15,000 men against Revolutionary leader Emilio Aguinaldo at the Imus. In brutal fighting—with 250 Spanish and 400 rebels killed, including Aguinaldo's brother Crispulo—the entrenched positions were taken at bayonet point. Aguinaldo fell back on Naic (25 March 1879).

Inab ❙ 1149 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

The great Muslim leader Nur-ed-Din led a massive offensive against the Crusader Principality of Antioch, where he besieged the Christian fortress of Inab, east of the River Orontes. Raymond of Antioch approached with a small relief army, supported by the Assassin leader Ali ibn Wafa, but they were ambushed near Inab with both Raymond and Ali killed (29 July 1149).

Inchon ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

See Chemulpo

Inchon ❙ 1950 ❙ Korean War

On a bold offensive behind enemy lines, General Edward Almond landed almost 70,000 men on the west coast at Inchon, where the surprised garrison was overwhelmed with just 20 Marines and perhaps 300 North Koreans killed. The Americans then seized Kimpo Airfield and raced east towards Seoul, supported by the army advancing north from the Pusan Perimeter (15–18 September 1950).

Inda Silase ❙ 1989 ❙ Ethiopian Civil War

Encouraged by Eritrean success at Afabet in March 1988, Tigrayan rebels in northern Ethiopia abandoned guerrilla tactics and launched a large-scale conventional attack on the town of Inda Silase. Aided by Eritrean forces, they destroyed an Ethiopian army of perhaps 20,000 men and the government effectively abandoned Tigray. In May the rebels advanced on Addis Ababa (19 February 1989).

Indaw ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

Behind Japanese lines in northern Burma, British Chindits led by General Orde Wingate (later General Walter Lentaigne) attacked forces under General Yoshihide Hayashi (later General Kaoru Takeda) north of Indaw around the fiercely held fortified positions Aberdeen, White City and Broadway. With Indaw secured, the Allies advanced northeast on Mogaung (5 March–27 April 1944).

Independence ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

A small Confederate force under Colonels John T. Hughes and Gideon W. Thompson renewed the offensive in western Missouri, where they attacked Independence, just east of Kansas City. The garrison under Colonel James Buel surrendered after a brief action in which Hughes was killed. A few days later Thompson supported another victory to the southeast at Lone Jack (11 August 1862).

Independence ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

On his march across Missouri, Confederate General Sterling Price advanced across the Little Blue River to reach Independence, just outside Kansas City, where he was attacked by pursuing Union forces led by General Alfred Pleasonton. His rearguard under General James Fagan fought a bold holding action, then marched southwest to join Price at the Big Blue River (22 October 1864).

Indi ❙ 1676 ❙ Mughal Conquest of the Deccan Sultanates

With Bijapur weak under the infant Sultan Sikander Adil Shah, Mughal Viceroy Bahadur Khan led an invasion against the Regent Buhlul. The Sultanate was forced to cede some fortresses, but at Indi, northeast of Bijapur city, the Mughals suffered a terrible defeat, with Governor Islam Khan Rum of Malwa among many killed. A fresh invasion in 1679 stalled at the fortress of Bijapur (23 June 1676).

India Muerta ❙ 1845 ❙ Argentine-Uruguayan War

While Argentine forces intervened in Uruguay against President Fructuso Rivera and besieged Montevideo, General Justo José Urquiza (who had defeated Rivera at Arroyo del Sauce in January 1844) attacked him again at India Muerta, northeast of Montevideo near Lazcano in Rocha. Rivera was decisively defeated and withdrew into Brazilian territory (27 March 1845).

Indian Key ❙ 1840 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

After looting Caloosahatchee (July 1839), a group of so-called "Spanish" Seminole under Chakaika took the war to the offshore islands and attacked unsuspecting Indian Key, midway along the Florida Keys near Marathon. Thirteen white settlers were killed, including the noted botanist Dr Henry Perrine. Chakaika then burned the little settlement and escaped with his plunder (7 August 1840).

Indore ❙ 1801 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

In a bloody war between rival Maratha Princes, Daulat Rao Sindhia of Gwalior launched a major assault on Maharaja Jaswant Rao Holkar of Indore to avenge his defeat at Ujjain (2 July). Outside Indore, Daulat Rao inflicted a crushing defeat and seized and sacked Holkar's capital. However, he failed to follow up his victory and a year later was utterly defeated near Poona (14 October 1801).

Indus ❙ 458 ❙ Hun Invasion of India

As Huns from Central Asia attempted to enter India, a huge army was met at the Indus by Skandagupta, last ruler of the once-great Gupta Empire. A decisive battle along the river inflicted heavy losses and checked the advance of the "White Huns." But within a few years, they attacked again, penetrating deep into the dying Gupta Empire. By 500 AD they were well established in Malwa.

Indus ❙ 1221 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

Deserted by his Afghan allies after victory at Parwan Durrah, Prince Jalal-ud-din of Khwarezm faced a huge offensive by the Mongol Genghis Khan, who pursued him to the banks of the Indus. Near modern Kalabagh, Jalal-ud-din was heavily defeated and his General Amin Malik was killed. The Prince and his survivors reputedly escaped by swimming their horses across the River (24 November 1221).

Ingavi ❙ 1841 ❙ Bolivian-Peruvian War

President Agustín Gamarra of Peru was overconfident after Bolivian defeat in Peru at Yungay (January 1839) and rashly took an army into Bolivia, where he met a smaller Bolivian force under General José Ballivián at Ingavi, near Viachi. A complete rout saw Gamarra defeated and killed, ending the war and ensuring Bolivian Independence with Ballivián as the new President (18 November 1841).

Ingavi ❙ 1935 ❙ Chaco War

After advancing north into the Chaco Boreal through victory at Yrendagüe and Ybibobo in December 1934, Paraguayan forces were checked by a Bolivian counter-offensive at Boyuibé. But, in a final action further east at Ingavi, Bolivian Colonel Julio Bretel was defeated and surrendered. Peace was signed a week later and three years of negotiation won Paraguay most of the Chaco (7 June 1935).

Ingogo ❙ 1881 ❙ 1st Anglo-Boer War

Despite defeat at Laing's Nek, British General Sir George Colley quickly advanced from Newcastle, Natal, with about 400 men to attack Boer General Nicolaas Smit at Ingogo (Schuinshoogte). Colley lost 64 killed and 77 wounded in heavy fighting for just 18 Boer casualties, but managed to withdraw to nearby Mount Prospect. He was soon defeated again at Majuba Hill (8 February 1881).

Ingolstadt ❙ 1525 ❙ German Peasants' War

Following victory over a peasant army at Königshofen , forces representing German nobility ravaged the countryside in pursuit of rebels and Ludwig IV, Elector Palatine, attacked Florian Geyer and 600 of his Black Troop at the town of Ingolstadt, southeast of Würzburg. The castle was stormed and burned with all but a handful slain. Geyer escaped and was later killed in the pursuit (June 1525).

Ingosten ❙ 1899 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

A French "scientific expedition" into central Algeria under geologist Georges Flamand was escorted by Captain Theodore Pein and shadowed by Captain Marcel Germain. Ambushed by about 300 Arabs at Ingosten, Pein repulsed the Tidikelt, killing more than 50 before Germain arrived. Next day, the French occupied In Salah and imposed a fine on the town (28 December 1899).

Ingur ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War

When Turks under Omar Pasha (Michael Lattas) landed on the Black Sea coast of Georgia at Sukhumi, they advanced to the Ingur River, where they attacked a 12,000-strong Russian force under Prince Knyaz Bagration-Muhranski. While the Russians were defeated and forced back with 400 men lost, the Turkish counter-offensive was too late to relieve Russia's siege of Kars (6 November 1855).

Inhlobane ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War
See Hlobane

Inkerman ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War
Ten days after action near Balaklava, Russian Prince Alexander Menshikov made another attempt to cut off the Allied siege of Sevastopol and attacked at Inkerman. Following a desperate struggle in fog by outnumbered British infantry under General Fitzroy Somerset Lord Raglan, French General Pierre Bosquet arrived to seal victory and Menshikov withdrew (5 November 1854).

Inkovo ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)
As Napoleon Bonaparte's invasion of Russia advanced along the Dnieper, cavalry on his left wing under General Francois Sébastiani were attacked by Cossacks led by General Matvei Platov at Inkovo, northwest of Smolensk. While the French suffered an unexpected check, this action failed to slow Bonaparte's continued advance to victory at Smolensk (8 August 1812).

Inönü (1st) ❙ 1921 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War
A campaign to secure Anatolia for Greece saw General Anastasios Papoulas advance on Eskisehir, 150 miles west of Ankara. He was blocked just further west at Inönü, by Turkish forces under Ismet Pasha and the Greeks were checked in heavy fighting. Papoulas withdrew to regroup and reinforce his army before launching a second, much larger assault (10 January 1921).

Inönü (2nd) ❙ 1921 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War
Greek General Anastasios Papoulas renewed his offensive in Turkish Anatolia with 150,000 men and drove Turkish General Refet Pasha out of Afyon. Once again, he was bravely blocked further north at Inönü by Ismet Pasha. Ismet was promoted to replace Refet (and later took the name Inönü), but he was unable to resist a subsequent Greek attack on nearby Eskisehir (28–30 March 1921).

In Rhar ❙ 1900 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa
Sent to reinforce In Salah, in central Algeria, Colonel Clement d'Eu then marched west against In Rhar, where Captain Maurice Baumgarten had earlier failed for lack of artillery (24–26 January). With a large force and two guns, d'Eu inflicted heavy damage before storming the town. Tidikelt resistance was largely crushed and the French soon also took Timimoun (19 March 1900).

In Salah ❙ 1900 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa
A week after securing the central Algerian town of In Salah after action at nearby Ingosten, French Captain Theodore Pein was attacked by a claimed 1,000 Arabs. Caught in heavy crossfire, the Tidikelt were driven off with over 150 dead for just one French spahi killed. Pein was soon reinforced by Captain Maurice Baumgarten, who led an abortive raid west against In Rhar (5 January 1900).

Intabanka-ka-Ndoda ❙ 1818 ❙ Xhosa Civil War
See Amalinda

Intibucá ❙ 1876 ❙ Central American National Wars
See La Esperanza

Inveraray ❙ 1644 ❙ British Civil Wars
James Graham Marquis of Montrose gathered his Royalist forces in the Highlands after sacking Aberdeen (13 September) and led a midwinter raid on Archibald Campbell Marquis of Argyll at Inveraray. Montrose's largely MacDonald force caused massive damage to their traditional Campbell enemies and Montrose defeated Argyll again two months later at Inverlochy (13 December 1644).

Invercarron ❙ 1650 ❙ British Civil Wars
See Carbiesdale

Invercullen ❙ 961 ❙ Later Viking Raids on Britain

The Scottish King Indulph, son of Constantine II, waged a constant war against Norse raids on the coast of Buchan and Banff. It is claimed Scottish King finally defeated the invaders on Moray Firth near Invercullen and was reputedly killed in the moment of victory (although this is still debated by historians). His son Cullen was defeated four years later at Duncrub.

Inverdovat ❙ 877 ❙ Viking Wars in Britain

During a reign of continuous warfare against Norwegian and Danish Vikings, Constantine I of Scotland marched to defend the coast of Fife against a fresh Viking landing, possibly by Olaf of Dublin and the Dane Ivar. At Inverdovat, in the Parish of Forgan on the Firth of Tay, Constantine is claimed to have repulsed the raiders, though he reputedly died at the moment of victory.

Inverkeithing ❙ 1651 ❙ British Civil Wars

Oliver Cromwell advanced into Scotland after his devastating victory at Dunbar (September 1650) and despatched General John Lambert along the northern shore of the Firth of Forth, where he routed a Royalist force under Sir John Browne at Inverkeithing. Although victory allowed Cromwell to occupy Perth, Charles II invaded England, leading to the decisive battle at Worcester (20 July 1651).

Inverlochy ❙ 1431 ❙ MacDonald Rebellion

With Alexander MacDonald Lord of the Isles defeated at Lochaber (June 1429) and imprisoned by James I, his cousin Donald Balloch of Ranald ravaged Lochaber before facing a Royal army at Inverlochy, near modern Fort William. Royalist commander Alexander Stewart Earl of Mar was defeated and fled. The King himself soon took command to restore peace in the Highlands.

Inverlochy ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Gathering Royalist forces in the Highlands after sacking Aberdeen (September 1644), James Graham Marquis of Montrose and General Alasdair MacDonald raided Archibald Campbell Marquis of Argyll at Inveraray in December, then attacked his large force of Campbell's and lowland Covenanters at Inverlochy. Argyll watched from a ship while his clan army was utterly destroyed (2 February 1645).

Invernahavon ❙ 1370 ❙ Scottish Clan Wars

After invading the Badenoch, 400 Camerons were met on the Spey at Invernahavon by a strong force of Mackintoshes, supported by MacPhersons and Davidsons. In a dispute over leadership, the MacPhersons allowed the Davidsons to be virtually destroyed before they rejoined the battle to help defeat the Camerons. The resulting MacPherson-Davidson feud was fought out at North Inch in 1396.

Inverness ❙ 1646 ❙ British Civil Wars

James Graham Marquis of Montrose withdrew to the Highlands following Royalist defeat at Philiphaugh (September 1645) and gathered fresh MacDonald and MacKenzie forces to besiege Inverness. However, Montrose was driven off by a large Parliamentary army under General John Middleton and he fled abroad when King Charles I surrendered three days later (26 April–5 May 1646).

Inverurie ❙ 1308 ❙ Rise of Robert the Bruce

Robert the Bruce defeated the English at Loudon Hill in May 1307, then secured his position in Scotland by marching against John Comyn Earl of Buchan, cousin of John Comyn the Younger who Bruce had murdered for the Scottish throne. At Inverurie, on the Don northwest of Aberdeen, Bruce routed Buchan and his English allies, then ravaged the whole of the Earldom (probably 22 May 1308).

Inverurie ❙ 1745 ❙ Jacobite Rebellion (The Forty-Five)

Sent to recover Aberdeen from Jacobite rebels, loyal Highlanders under MacLeod of MacLeod and Captain George Munro of Culcain occupied Inverurie, then faced a rebel offensive from Aberdeen under Lord Lewis Gordon. The government force was routed and driven out. Inverurie was later retaken by the Duke of Cumberland marching towards brutal victory at Culloden (23 December 1745).

Ionian Islands ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In June 1797 France gained from Venice the Ionian Islands, off the coast of Greece, which came under attack in September 1798 by a combined Turkish-Russian fleet under Admirals Kadir Bey and Fedor Ushakov. The islands of Cerigo, Zante, Cephalonia and St Maure all fell quickly, though Corfu held out for four months. The islands were returned to France in 1807 (October 1798).

Ionian Islands ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (5th Coalition)

With the Ionian Islands off Greece returned to France by Tsar Alexander of Russia in 1807, British General Sir John Oswald recaptured Zante, Cephalonia, Ithaca and Cerrigo with little resistance in September 1809. However, there was heavy fighting at the fortress of Amaxichi on St Maura before General Louis Camus surrendered. Corfu was never retaken (22 March–16 April 1810).

Ioannina ❙ 1912–1913 ❙ 1st Balkan War

See Jannina

Ionkovo ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Bergfriede

Ipsus ❙ 301 BC ❙ Wars of the Diadochi

In a decisive battle between the successors of Alexander the Great, Antigonus and his son Demetrius, who controlled Asia, were attacked by Lysimachus of Thrace and Seleucus of Babylon. The "Battle of the Kings" at Ipsus, in western Turkey northwest of modern Afyon, saw Antigonus defeated and killed. Demetrius fled, though he later secured Macedonia and his new dynasty ruled until Pydna.

Iquique ❙ 1879 ❙ War of the Pacific

While blockading Iquique, the obsolete Chilean ships Esmerelda and Covadonga were attacked by the Peruvian ironclads Huascar and Independencia under Captain Miguel Grau. Despite heroic defence, Esmerelda was sunk with heavy losses, including Captain Arturo Prat killed. Independencia was lured onto a reef and destroyed and Huascar was lost at Angamos in October (21 May 1879).

Iran ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

When German forces advancing into Russia threatened the oilfields of Iran, British Generals Charles Harvey and William Slim launched a preemptive invasion from the south, while Russians attacked in the north. After a brief resistance, the Shah ordered a ceasefire and abdicated to his son, ensuring Iranian neutrality and securing the vital Allied supply route to Russia (25–28 August 1941).

Iraq ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Middle East)

After a pro-Axis coup under Rashi Ali seized power in Iraq, a British brigade landed at Basra and the Iraqi army attacked the British base at Habbaniyah. The siege was driven off and, following a further Iraqi defeat at Fallujah, Rashid Ali fled from Baghdad. The pro-British Regent Abd al-Ilah resumed government and the Allies turned against Vichy Syria and Lebanon (1 April–31 May 1941).

Iriba ❙ 1990 ❙ Chad Civil Wars

President Hissen Habré crushed an attempted coup in April 1989, but faced heavy attack in Biltine, when Libyan-backed coup leader Idriss Déby invaded from the Sudan and overwhelmed the border town of Iriba. After heavy losses on both sides, government forces retook Iriba and Déby was pursued into the Sudan. In November, he regrouped and attacked in Ouaddai (25 March–6 April 1990).

Iringa ❙ 1894 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

With German East African forces massacred by Hehe rebels at Lugalo, new Commissioner

Friedrich von Schele slowly regrouped, then led a large force against Chief Mkwawa's massive fortress at Iringa (in modern Tanzania), which was taken by storm. While most of the Hehe soon surrendered, Mkwawa fought on until 1898 when he was cornered and took his own life (30 October 1894).

Iringa ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

General Kurt Wahle withdrawing south from Tabora in German East Africa sent Major Georg Kraut and 2,000 men against Iringa, which had been seized by General Edward Northey advancing from Rhodesia. While the Germans cut off the town and defeated a relief column, a direct attack was repulsed. The British eventually secured the north of the colony (23–30 October 1916).

Irish Bend ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

On the offensive in western Louisiana, Union General Nathaniel P. Banks sent General Cuvier Grover to intercept the Confederates withdrawing upstream from Fort Bisland, on the Bayou Teche. The Union force was initially repulsed with costly losses in fierce fighting at Irish Bend, near Franklin, before reinforcements arrived and the Confederates abandoned the field (14 April 1863).

Iron Gates ❙ 86 ❙ Domitian's Dacian War

See Tapae

Iron Mountain, China ❙ 630 ❙ Tang Imperial Wars

Taking advantage of war between Turkish tribes on the northern border, Tang general Li Jing led an expedition against Xieli of the Eastern Turks, who had previously raided deep into China. Driven out of his base at Danxiang, Xieli withdrew to Iron Mountain (Tieshan), where a one-sided slaughter cost perhaps 10,000 Turks killed. The Tang soon controlled the steppe north of the Gobi (27 March 630).

Iron Mountain, South Africa ❙ 1852 ❙ 8th Cape Frontier War

As war in Kaffraria drew to a close, British forces prevented reoccupation of the Waterkloof in the Amatolas, then Colonel John Michel led a bold assault on a strongly defended position at Iron Mountain. Despite costly initial British losses, the place was taken by storm and the Xhosa dispersed to the north. The great Chiefs Sandile and Macomo surrendered in March 1853 (15 March 1852).

Iron Triangle ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

Following success northwest of Saigon around Dau Tieng, 30,000 Americans and South Vietnamese attacked Viet Cong bases in the Iron Triangle, even closer to the capital (Operation Cedar Falls). While most Viet Cong escaped into Cambodia, the Allies bombed and bulldozed the bases, killing up to 700. The Viet Cong later reoccupied the area to launch the Tet Offensive (8–26 January 1967).

Irriwaddy ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

With the Japanese "March to Delhi" stopped at Imphal, commander Hoyotaro Kimura fell back into Burma to hold the Irriwaddy. While he expected the main British advance north of Mandalay, General Sir William Slim atacked in the south and seized the key city of Meiktila. Soon afterwards Mandalay also fell, virtually ending the campaign in Burma (January–March 1945).

Irtysh ❙ 1208 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

In his final decisive battle for supremacy over the tribes of Mongolia, Genghis Khan attacked Khan Toqtoa Beki of the Merkit, supported by Kuchlug of the Naiman, who had escaped the defeat at Khangai. Toqtoa was defeated and killed in battle on the upper Irtysh, east of Lake Zaysan, while Kuchlug fled to the Kara Khitai. He was finally defeated 12 years later at Kashgar.

Irun ❙ 1837 ❙ 1st Carlist War

General Sir George de Lacy Evans recovered from defeat outside San Sebastian at Oriamendi (16 March) and led the British Legion east through Hernani (14 May) to storm the Carlist position at Irun. Fuentarrabia, where he had been bloodily repulsed in July 1836, quickly fell the next day. The British Legion was later disbanded and Evans was knighted for his services in Spain (17 May 1837).

Irurzun ❙ 1795 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

See Bilbao

Irurzun ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

Withdrawing after French defeat at Vitoria, General Jean Baptiste d'Erlon's rearguard under General Jean Darmagnac was caught three days later by Lord Wellington's German Hussars as the French tried to cross the Araquil, northwest of Pamplona near Irurzun. During a sharp attack, Darmagnac lost about 100 men and one of only two guns reportedly brought off the battlefield at Vitoria (24 June 1813).

Isandhlwana ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

The British who invaded Zululand against King Cetshwayo set up camp at Isandhlwana then marched on, leaving the unprotected encampment under Colonel Anthony Durnford. Attacked by up to 20,000 warriors led by Matyana, over 600 European soldiers and 500 African irregulars were killed in one of Britain's worst military disasters. Zulus then attacked nearby Rorke's Drift (22 January 1879).

Isandula ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

See Isandhlwana

Isara ❙ 121 BC ❙ Rome's Gallic Wars

When Rome beat the Allobroges near Avignon, King Bituitus of the Arverni joined his Gallic allies in a powerful coalition. Later that year, Rome sent a fresh army under Consul Fabius Maximus, who crushed the Gauls at the Isara, possibly the Isère near its junction with the Rhone. Bituitis was later captured and the Allobroges made peace, effectively securing Southern Gaul (August 121 BC).

Isaszeg ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

Assuming the offensive at Hatvan, new commander General Artur Gorgey led 42,000 Hungarians against 27,000 Croats under Count Joseph Jellacic at Isaszeg, just east of Budapest. While Gyorgy Klapka's Hungarian Corps was driven from the field, General Gorgey secured victory and occupied Godollo next day. The Habsburgs soon lost again at Waitzen and Nagy Sallo (6 April 1849).

Isfahan ❙ 1050–1051 ❙ Seljuk Wars of Expansion

With Khorasan secured at Dandanaqan (1040), the Seljuk Toghril Beg determined to secure Isfahan in central Iran. In 1043 and 1046 he made Isfahan submit, but in face of renewed resistance laid siege to the city. After almost a year, Abu Mansur Framarz surrendered, ending the Kakuyid Dynasty, and was rewarded with Yadz. Toghril razed the walls of Isfahan and made it his capital (1050–May 1051).

Isfahan ❙ 1387 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

The Turko-Mongol Tamerlane marched south into Persia against the rebellious Shah Zayn al-Abidin, where he entered the Shah's capital at Isfahan in triumph. However, when some of Tamerlane's troops were killed, he stormed and sacked Isfahan, then ordered the entire population killed. It is claimed that 70,000 skulls were collected and cemented into towers as a warning to future rebels.

Isfahan ❙ 1722 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

After invading Persia, Mahmud Ghilzai of Kandahar routed a Persian army at Gulnabad, near Isfahan, then advanced to blockade the capital itself. Crown Prince Tahmasp fled to try and raise a relief army, but after eight months the starving city surrendered. Shah Sultan Hussein abdicated in favour of Mahmud, who ruled as Shah before he eventually went insane (February–12 October 1722).

Isfahan ❙ 1726 ❙ Turko-Persian War
See Kiemereh

Ishibashiyama ❙ 1180 ❙ Gempei War

Despite Minamoto disaster at Ujigawa in June, Minamoto Yoritomo gathered a force against Japan's ruling Taira clan, but was attacked west of Yokohama at Ishibashiyama, near Odawara, by troops of Taira Kiyomori under Oba Kagechika. Yoritomo was outnumbered and routed, escaping into the Hakone Mountains. He soon raised a fresh force to fight again at Fujigawa (15 September 1180).

Ishiyama Honganji ❙ 1570 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States

After defeating his brother-in-law Asai Nagamasa at the Anegawa (30 July), Oda Nobunaga came under attack by 3,000 of the Ikko sect from Ishiyama Honganji (now Osaka Castle) and monks from Enryakuji. Nobunaga was beaten, but soon besieged Ishiyama Honganji. In 1571 he destroyed the Enryakuji monastery at Mount Heie and Ishiyama Honganji finally fell in 1580 (November 1570).

Island Number Ten ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Union General John Pope and Flag-Officer Andrew H. Foote advanced down the Mississippi past Columbus, attacking the fortified Island Number Ten and nearby New Madrid, Missouri, held by Generals John P. McCown and William W. Mackall. New Madrid was abandoned (13 March) and Island Number Ten soon surrendered, leading to the fall of Memphis (28 February–8 April 1862).

Islas Formigues ❙ 1285 ❙ French-Aragonese War
See Las Hormigas

Isly ❙ 1844 ❙ French Conquest of Algeria

Determined to complete the conquest of Algeria after victory at Smala in May 1843, France forced Abd-el-Kader to withdraw into Morocco, where he linked up with the Sultan Abd-el-Rahman. In the war's decisive battle, Marshal Thomas Bugeaud routed a superior combined Arab force at the Isly and was created Duke of Isly. Kader escaped and fought on until November 1847 (14 August 1844).

Ismail ❙ 1790 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War
See Izmail

Ismailia ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Middle East)
See Suez Canal

Isola del Giglio ❙ 1646 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

In support of the French-Savoyard siege of Orbetello, on Italy's west coast, Admiral Jean-Armande de Maillé-Brézé attacked a Spanish relief force under Admiral Francisco Diaz Pimienta off Isola del Giglio. With the 27-year-old French leader killed by a cannon ball his deputy, General Louis Foucault Comte de Daugnon, prematurely broke off the attack and the siege was lifted (14 June 1646).

Isola di Ponza ❙ 1435 ❙ Aragon's Conquest of Naples
See Gaeta

Isonzo ❙ 489 ❙ Goth Invasion of Italy
See Sontius

Isonzo ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

When Italy entered the war against Austro-Hungary, General Luigi Cadorna attacked Austrian Marshal Conrad von Hotzendorf along the Isonzo, north of Trieste. Four successive attacks were repulsed for little gain at the cost of about 280,000 Italian and 160,000 Austrian casualties (23 June–7 July, 18 July–3 August, 18 October–3 November & 10 November–2 December 1915).

Isonzo (1st) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

Following four failed attacks along the Isonzo in 1915, Italian commander Luigi Cadorna launched a fifth attack in heavy snow, rain and fog against General Svetozar Boroevic. As before, Cadorna's forces were repulsed by the Austrians, notably around Tolmino and the action had to be called off to meet the Austrian offensive further north around Asiago (9–17 March 1916).

Isonzo (2nd) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

Italian commander Luigi Cadorna repulsed an Austrian offensive around Asiago (25 June), then returned to the Isonzo front and launched four more attacks against General Svetozar Boroevic. After early success to seize Gorizio (9 August) the so-called Sixth to Ninth battles achieved little and each side lost about 100,000 men (4–17 August, 14–17 September, 10–12 October & 1–4 November 1916).

Isonzo (1st) ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

In the so-called Tenth Battle of Isonzo, reinforced Italian forces under General Luigi Cadorna launched a fresh offensive, which secured some early gains. However, Austrian General Svetozar Boroevic led a powerful counter-offensive and drove the Italians back to their starting point at the cost of perhaps 160,000 Italian and 75,000 Austrian casualties (12 May–8 June 1917).

Isonzo (2nd) ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Italian Front)

Determined on a fresh offensive on the Isonzo, Italian commander Luigi Cadorna sent General Luigi Capello north from Gorizio, while Emanuele Filibert Duke of Aosta attacked south towards Trieste. The so-called Eleventh Battle of Isonzo saw Capello seize the strategic Bainsizza plateau and Austria had to seek German aid, leading to Italian disaster at Caporetto (19 August–12 September 1917).

Issus ❙ 333 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

Alexander the Great secured Asia Minor at Granicus and Halicarnassus, then soon marched east across Turkey to meet a much larger Persian army at Issus, on the Gulf of Iskenderun in Cilicia. Persian King Darius III lost perhaps 50,000 men in a terrible and decisive rout and fled, abandoning his family. Alexander then marched south through Syria to Tyre and Gaza (November 333 BC).

Issus ❙ 194 ❙ Wars of Emperor Severus

Emperor Septimius Severus beat his rival Pescennius Niger at Cyzicus and Nicaea in Asia Minor, then pursued him into Syria later that year for the final, decisive battle. On the Plain of Issus, on the Gulf of Iskenderun, Niger had assembled a much larger army, but his local levies broke and fled in the face of overwhelming casualties. Niger escaped, but was pursued and killed outside Antioch.

Istabulat ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Driving north from Baghdad, Anglo-Indian commander Sir Frederick Maude secured Mushahida, then sent General Sir William Marshall against more than 7,000 Turks around Istabulat. Severe fighting cost over 2,000 casualties on either side before the Turks withdrew. Nearby Samarra fell next day and the northern front stabilised until the final advance on Sharqat (21–22 March 1917).

Itagüí ❙ 1841 ❙ Colombian War of Supreme Commanders

Amid continued campaigning in Antioquia, government forces under General Eusebio Borrero fought an inconclusive action at Itagüí, just southwest of Medellín, against rebel Colonel Salvador Córdoba. Soon afterwards, Borrera was defeated and captured at Garcia. Later the same year (8 July), Córdoba was executed by General Tomás de Mosquera at Cartago (2 February 1841).

Itala ❙ 1901 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War
See Fort Itala

Italeni ❙ 1838 ❙ Boer-Zulu War
See Ethaleni

Italica ❙ 75 BC ❙ Sertorian War
A year after disaster in Spain at Lauron, Roman Quintus Metellus Pius attacked Lucius Hirtuleius, a lieutenant of the rebel commander Quintus Sertorius, at Italica, just northwest of Seville. Unwisely accepting a pitched battle, Hirtuleius was heavily defeated and was subsequently beaten again and killed near Segovia. Later that year, Metellus joined Gnaeus Pompey advancing towards the Turia.

Itamaraca ❙ 1640 ❙ Dutch-Portuguese Colonial Wars
Another attempt to recover Pernambuco in Portuguese Brazil saw a large Spanish-Portuguese fleet assembled in Bahia under Fernando Mascarenhas Conde de la Torre. In a four-day running battle north of Recife off Itamaraca, an outnumbered Dutch fleet under Admirals Willem Loos and Jacob Huygens defeated the Spaniards and the Dutch retained Recife until 1654 (12–15 January 1640).

Itapirú ❙ 1866 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
See Redencão, Ilha de

Ita Ybate ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
In a fresh offensive in central Paraguay against President Francisco Solano López, Marshal Luíz Aldes Marquis of Caxias led Argentine, Brazilian and Uruguayan forces through Avaí against Ita Ybate, southeast of Asunción. Despite heavy Allied losses, the Paraguayans were massively defeated. President López fled the battlefield and died in March 1870 at Cerro Corá (21–27 December 1868).

Itororó ❙ 1868 ❙ War of the Triple Alliance
See Ytororó

Itsukushima ❙ 1555 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States
See Miyajima

Ituzaingó ❙ 1827 ❙ Argentine-Brazilian War
After Juan Antonio Lavalleja of Uruguay repudiated annexation by Brazil and secured victory at Sarandi in 1825, he sought aid from Argentina, which declared war and sent a force led by General Carlos de Alvear. They routed the Brazilians under Feliberto Marques de Barbacena in a decisive action at Ituzaingó in northeast Argentina and Uruguay soon secured independence (20 February 1827).

Iuka ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)
While General Braxton Bragg's Confederate army invaded Kentucky through Munfordville, he sent General Sterling Price west to capture Iuka, Mississippi. Attacked by a Union force under General William S. Rosecrans, Price had to withdraw. However the hesitant Rosecrans failed to secure a decisive victory and Price was able to fight again a few weeks later at Corinth, Mississippi (19 September 1862).

Ivangorod ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
Russian commander Nikolai Ivanov opened his invasion of Silesia by sending Generals Pavel Plehve and Aleksei Evert to storm the Vistula near Ivangorod. Checked by Count Franz Conrad and Victor Dankl, the Russians were reinforced and attacked again. The Austro-German army was forced back through Radom but checked the Russians in December at Limanowa (11–26 October 1914).

Ivanovatz ❙ 1805 ❙ 1st Serbian Rising
When Serbs led by Kara George seized Belgrade, a Turkish relief force advancing from Nish under Hafiz Pasha was blocked by a tiny Serb force at the village of Ivanovatz, near Cuprija. When Kara George arrived with guns and reinforcements, the Turks were driven back to Nish, where the Pasha died of wounds. Twelve months later they suffered a more serious defeat at Misar (18 August 1805).

Ivantelly ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

See Echalar

Ivrea ❙ 1800 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

As he crossed the Alps into northern Italy, Napoleon Bonaparte was delayed by the stubborn little fortress of Bard, guarding the St Bernard Pass. While some of his force drove forward to attack the town of Ivrea on the Dora, General Jean Lannes took the fortress by bayonet charge, seizing massive Austrian supplies, as the main French army prepared to advance into the Piedmont (23 May 1800).

Ivry ❙ 1590 ❙ 9th French War of Religion

Henry of Navarre claimed the French throne as Henry IV and mounted a final decisive campaign against the Catholic Holy League, led by Charles, Duke of Mayenne. The two large armies met at Ivry (modern Ivry-La-Battaille) near Evreux, where Huguenot artillery destroyed the Catholics with massive losses, except for Swiss mercenaries who negotiated surrender (14 March 1590).

Ivuna ❙ 1888 ❙ Zulu Rebellion

Facing rebellion by uSuthu Chief Dinuzulu, British under Colonel Henry Stabb moved forward to garrison Ivuna, with Mandlazaki ally Zibhebhu in camp at nearby Nduna. Advancing with perhaps 3,000 men, Dinuzulu routed Zibhebhu (who he had beaten in 1884 at Tshaneni). Following a previous government loss at Ceza, the troops abandoned Ivuna and withdrew to Nkonjeni (23 June 1888).

Ivy Mountain ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

Confederate General John S. Williams was withdrawing towards Virginia after campaigning in eastern Kentucky, when he was met at Ivy Mountain, northeast of Pikeville, by Union forces under General William Nelson and Colonel Joshua W. Sill. Williams lost over 200 casualties in a confused action, though he was able to continue southeast into Virginia (8–9 November 1861).

Iwo Jima ❙ 1945 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Advancing north from the Mariana Islands, General Harry Schmidt landed over 100,000 men on Iwo Jima, just 650 miles from Tokyo. Brutal action saw the garrison of 23,000 under General Tadamichi Kuribayashi annihilated at a cost of almost 7,000 Americans killed and 18,000 wounded. The island provided vital airfields to support the bombing of Japan (19 February–10 March 1945).

Izmail ❙ 1790 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

Driving deep into Turkish territory after Focsani and Rimnik, Russian General Paul Potemkin besieged the fortress of Izmail at the mouth of the Danube. After months of inaction, General Alexander Suvorov arrived and took the city by storm. The bloody fall of Izmail and the massacre which followed are said to have cost over 50,000 Turkish dead (March–22 December 1790).

Izmir ❙ 1344 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Smyrna

Izmir ❙ 1402 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

See Smyrna

Izmir ❙ 1922 ❙ 2nd Greco-Turkish War

See Smyrna

Izúcar de Matamoros ❙ 1847 ❙ American-Mexican War

American General Joseph Lane relieved the siege of Puebla, then beat General Joaquin Rea at Atlixco (19 October) and pursued his guerrillas through defeat at Tlaxcala to Izúcar de Matamoros, 35 miles southwest of Puebla. Rea was defeated again, with heavy losses in supplies and ammunition and, by early the next year, the Mexican guerrilla campaign was effectively over (23 November 1847).

J

Jabani ❙ 1500 ❙ Persian-Turkoman Wars

Leading a fresh campaign against Shirvan (modern Azerbaijan), Sheikh Ismail of Ardabil in northern Iran attacked Shah Farrukh Yasar, who had killed Ismail's father in battle at Dartanat 12 years earlier. At Jabani, near Shemakha, 70 miles west of Baku, Ismail defeated and killed Farrukh Yasar, then defeated the Shirvan-Shah's Turkoman allies at Sharur and Hamadan (December 1500).

Jackson, Mississippi ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

In support of the siege of Vicksburg, on the Mississippi, Union commander Ulysses S. Grant, with Generals William T. Sherman and James B. McPherson, attacked to the east at Jackson, defended by Generals Josiah E. Johnston and John Gregg. Fighting a rearguard action, the Confederates were forced to evacuate. Sherman soon won again further west at Champion Hill (14 May 1863).

Jackson, Tennessee ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

On campaign in western Tennessee, Confederate General Nathan Bedford Forrest defeated Union cavalry Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll at Lexington, then next day met Colonel Adolph Englemann further west at Jackson. Although Englemann drove off the Confederates, Forrest continued operating to the north before withdrawing through Parker's Cross Roads (19 December 1862).

Jacobovo ❙ 1812 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

As Napoleon Bonaparte advanced into Russia, his left wing led by Marshal Nicolas Oudinot was unexpectedly attacked by Russians under Prince Ludwig Wittgenstein close to Jacobovo, on the Nischtscha near Polotsk. Oudinot made a fighting withdrawal to Polotsk, where he was reinforced for a renewed action against Wittgenstein three weeks later (30 July–1 August 1812).

Jacob's Ford ❙ 1157 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

See Mallaha

Jadar ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)

See Cer

Jaen ❙ 1810 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Peninsular Campaign)

King Joseph Napoleon won at Ocaña in late 1809, then invaded Andalusia and defeated Spanish General Carlos Areizaga in the mountains north of the Guadalquivir around La Carolina. Pursuing the survivors across the river, General Francois Sébastiani finally dispersed them in a sharp action at Jaen in northern Granada, then marched west to take Cordova next day (23 February 1810).

Jaffa ❙ 1192 ❙ 3rd Crusade

See Joppa

Jaffa ❙ 1772–1773 ❙ Mamluk-Ottoman Wars

Driven out of Cairo by his former lieutenant Abu'l-Dhahab, the Great Mamluk Ali Bey fled to his ally Shayk Zahir al-Umar of Acre and supported his siege of Ottoman Jaffa, which held out despite a Russian naval bombardment (6 August). While Abu'l Dhahab sent four ships with supplies, the city was finally starved into surrender. It was retaken two years later (July 1772–17 February 1773).

Jaffa ❙ 1775 ❙ Mamluk Wars

Having defeated his former commander Ali Bey in Egypt at Salihiyya (1 May 1773), the Mamluk Abu'l-Dhahab, with Ottoman support, marched against one-time ally Shayk Zahir al-Umar in Palestine. Abu'l Dhahab besieged and captured Jaffa, followed by a terrible massacre. He then died while besieging Acre (8 June) and his lieutenant Murad Bey led the army home (29 May 1775).

Jaffa ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Middle East)

Napoleon Bonaparte marched from Egypt into Syria, where he defeated Mamluks and Albanians at El Arish in February before besieging Jaffa. Bonaparte took the coastal city by storm, though a subsequent massacre of about 3,000 prisoners was a notorious stain on his record. He then went north to besiege Acre but was repulsed by disease and heavy battle losses (4–7 March 1799).

Jaffa ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

With Haifa secured, Zionist forces moved against Jaffa, the port for Tel Aviv, the largest city in Palestine at that time. British General Sir Gordon MacMillan attempted to position troops to halt the advance, but the Arab population fled. After some sharp fighting and a tense confrontation, Jaffa surrendered the day before the creation of the State of Israel (25 April–13 May 1948).

Jaffna ❙ 1619 ❙ Later Portuguese Colonial Wars

Following the death of Portuguese puppet King Ethirimanna Cinkam of Jaffna in northern Ceylon—established after victory at Mannar in 1591—his nephew Cankili Kumara seized power and secured aid from Calicut. A Portuguese expedition from Colombo under Filipe de Oliveira drove off a fleet from Calicut, then defeated and captured Cankili, ending the Kingdom of Jaffna.

Jagaraga ❙ 1848 ❙ Dutch Conquest of Bali

Facing renewed resistance in northern Bali, previously put down in 1846 at Singaraja, a fresh Dutch expedition was launched against the young Prince Gusti Ketut Jelantik of Belelung. Lured into pursuing the Balinese to an inland fort at Jagaraga, the over-confident Dutch lost more than 200 men killed and withdrew. They returned to Jagaraga a year later with a much larger force (June 1848).

Jagaraga ❙ 1849 ❙ Dutch Conquest of Bali

To avenge a humiliating defeat by Balinese troops at Jagaraga, Dutch administrators in Java gathered a force of over 8,000 men and returned to the Kingdom of Buleleng, where Prince Gusti Ketut Jelantik was killed in the defeat of his army at Jagaraga, southeast of Singaraja. The Raja of Buleleng again sued for peace, giving the Netherlands control of the northern coast of Bali (16 August 1849).

Jagdalak (1st) ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

With Amir Dost Muhammad of Afghanistan deposed following defeat at Ghazni in 1839, his son Akbar Khan later besieged the British in Kabul, forcing their surrender in return for free passage. Passing through the Khurd-Kabul Pass to Jagdalak and Gandamak, General William Elphinstone's commander and its followers were massacred. Only one survivor reached Jalalabad (12–13 January 1842).

Jagdalak (2nd) ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Marching back into Afghanistan to punish Akbar Khan for his massacre of British soldiers and civilians from Kabul, General Sir George Pollock's Army of Retribution captured Gandamak, then advanced against about 4,000 Ghilzais above Jagdalak, east of the Khyber Pass. A disciplined attack defeated and scattered the Afghans and Pollock marched towards Tezin (8 September 1842).

Jagdispur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Rebel leader Kunwar Singh withdrew southwest from defeat at Arrah (3 August) to his hereditary stronghold at Jagdispur, west of Patna, where he attempted to block the pursuing forces of Major Vincent Eyre. Taking a defensive position with 3,000 men just outside Jagdispur near the village of Dullaur, Kunwar Singh was defeated and fled and Eyre took the town (12 August 1857).

Jagdispur (1st) ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Defeated at Azamgarh and Maniar, rebel leader Kunwar Singh reached Jagdispur, east of Patna, to join his brother Amar. A British force which advanced from Arrah under Captain Arthur Le Grand to intercept the rebel was defeated in a confused jungle action, with 130 killed, including Le Grand. Kunwar died three days later of wounds, apparently suffered at Maniar (23 April 1858).

Jagdispur (2nd) ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

When rebel leader Kunwar Singh died of wounds after the victory at Jagdispur, his brother Amar Singh advancing towards Arrah was intercepted near Jagdispur by General Sir Edward Lugard. Amar Singh was defeated and driven off and Lugard occupied Jagdispur next day. He then drove the defeated rebels from the jungle to the west and south with victory at Dalippur (9 May 1858).

Jahazi ❙ 1889 ❙ German Colonial Wars in Africa

See Bagamoyo

Jahrah ❙ 1920 ❙ Saudi-Kuwait War

During border war between Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh and Salim ibn Mubarak of Kuwait, Faisal al-Dawish and his Ikhwan warriors won at Hamad, then advanced north on Jahrah, 20 miles west of Kuwait town. In a famous defence, Salim held the town despite heavy losses. After British intervention, Aziz made peace and turned on his old Rashidi foes at Hail (October 1920).

Jaitak ❙ 1814–1815 ❙ British-Gurkha War

British forces north of Chandigarh were repulsed by Gurkha General Amar Singh Thapa at Mangu, while further east near Nahan his son Ranjor Singh held the fortress of Jaitak against General Gabriel Martindell. After costly assaults and failing to secure the blockade, Martindell was dismissed. However, defeat at Malaon finally led Ranjor Singh to surrender (26 December 1814–21 May 1815).

Jaitpur ❙ 1729 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

While Maratha forces were seizing Malwa after Amjhera (November 1728), Peshwa Baji Rao I marched to aid King Chhatrasal of Bundelkhand against Mughal General Muhammad Khan Bangash of Allahabad. Near Jaitpur, east of Jhansi, Muhammad Khan was defeated, along with his son Qaim Khan arriving with reinforcements, which secured Bundelkhand against the empire (18 April 1729).

Jajau ❙ 1707 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

As the Mughal Empire declined following the death of Aurangzeb, his eldest son Muazim (known as Shah Alam) returned from Afghanistan to claim the throne. At Jajau near Agra, he defeated and killed the second son, Prince Azam and took the throne as Emperor Bahadur Shah. Eighteen months later he defeated and killed his other brother Kambakhsh at Hyderabad (12 June 1707).

Jajce ❙ 1464 ❙ Turkish-Hungarian Wars

On a fresh offensive into Bosnia, Ottoman Sultan Mehmed II took 30,000 men and a huge siege train against Emrich of Zapolya defending the strategic fortress of Jajce (Yaytse), south of Banyaluka. Despite massive mining and bombardment, the final Turkish assault was heavily repulsed. With King Mathias of Hungary approaching, Mehmed then abandoned the siege (10 July–24 August 1464).

Jakarta ❙ 1619 ❙ Early Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Driven off by the British at Bantam in western Java, Dutch Governor Jan Pieterszoon Coen withdrew to the Moluccas, then returned with 16 ships and 1,200 men to attack the Prince of Jakarta, who was besieging the Dutch fortress east of Bantam, near Jakarta. Following a bloody assault and massacre, Jakarta was destroyed and the Dutch built the new city of Batavia (28–30 May 1619).

Jalalabad ❙ 1710 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

Banda Singh Bahadur resolved to recover a large number of Sikh prisoners and marched against Jalalabad, south of Sarahanpur, held by local Mughal ruler Jalal Khan and a Pathan army. After a terrible four-day battle, the Pathans withdrew into the city. Facing strong walls and the onset of the rains, Banda raised his siege. Soon afterwards the Sikh prisoners were all killed (July 1710).

Jalalabad ❙ 1841–1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

After capturing Jalalabad, east of the Khyber, General Sir Robert Sale held off up to 6,000 Afghans under Akbar Khan, son of deposed Amir Dost Muhammad. A brilliant counter-attack against Akbar Khan's camp finally defeated and repulsed the Afghans, though Brigadier William Dennie was killed. General Sir George Pollock's force arrived a week later (13 November 1841–7 April 1842).

Jalalabad ❙ 1989 ❙ Afghan Civil War

Soon after the withdrawal of Soviet ground troops from Afghanistan, Mujahaden forces under Gulbuddin Hekmatyar attacked Jalalabad, held for the Russian-backed Kabul government by Chief of Staff General Assef Delawar. After a ten-week siege, Russian air attack forced the Mujahaden to withdraw. Jalalabad was not captured until Kabul fell in April 1992 (March–April 1989).

Jalandhar ❙ 1298 ❙ Mongol Invasions of India

A claimed 100,000 Mongols under the leader Kadar invaded northern India, where they marched against Ala-ud-dun, Sultan of Dehli. Southeast of Lahore at Jalandhar (modern Jullundur), the Mongols were heavily defeated by the Sultan's Generals Ulugh Khan and Zafar Khan and withdrew. An even larger Mongol invasion was defeated a year later at Kili (5 February 1298).

Jalna ❙ 1679 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

See Samgamner

Jalula ❙ 637 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq

After Persian disaster at Qadisiyya and Madain, Khurrazad and Mihran determined to hold Jalula, near modern Baghdad, against a large Muslim siege by Hashim ibn Utbah. With Persia routed in terrible defeat, conquest of Mesopotamian Iraq was virtually complete. Caliph Omar then regrouped before advancing into the Persian highlands for victory at Nehavend in 641(April–October 637).

Jamaica ❙ 1655 ❙ Anglo-Spanish Wars

English Admiral Sir William Penn failed in an assault on Spain's West Indian colony of Santo Domingo in April, then took his fleet and troops under Colonel Robert Venables against Jamaica, where they landed after a brief bombardment. The main fortress surrendered next day and the island was soon conquered, remaining a British possession until independence in 1962 (10–17 May 1655).

James Island ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Lower Seaboard)

See Secessionville

Jameson Raid ❙ 1896 ❙ Jameson's Raid
See Krugersdorp

Jamestown ❙ 1622 ❙ Powhatan Indian Wars
When white settlers in Virginia executed an Indian accused of murder, Opechancanough, leader of the Algonquin confederation founded by his later brother Powhatan, led a surprise attack on Jamestown. The raid killed 347, including 68 women and children, representing almost one in ten of the population of the young colony. The settlers struck back in 1625 at Pamunkey (22 March 1622).

Jamestown ❙ 1676 ❙ Bacon's Rebellion
Amid virtual civil war in colonial Virginia, Nathaniel Bacon was declared a rebel after an unauthorised attack on Indians at Occaneechee Island. Marching with 500 men against Jamestown, Bacon defeated the forces of Governor Sir William Berkeley, then burned the Virginian capital. He died soon afterwards and Berkeley was later recalled after hanging many rebels (18 September 1676).

Jamestown Ford ❙ 1781 ❙ War of the American Revolution
Withdrawing through Virginia, British commander General Charles Earl Cornwallis ambushed part of Marquis Marie de Lafayette's army under General Anthony Wayne at Jamestown Ford on the James near Green Spring. Very hard fighting cost heavy casualties before Wayne eventually counter-attacked and withdrew. Earl Cornwallis marched on to New York and later Yorktown (6 July 1781).

Jamkhed ❙ 1560 ❙ Wars of the Deccan Sultanates
When Husain Nizam Shah of Ahmadnagar invaded Bijapur, Ali Adil Shah of Bijapur fled to Hindu Vijayanagar, where King Rama Raya joined forces with Ibrahim Qutb Shah of Golconda. The allies advanced on Ahmadnagar and to the southeast at Jamkhed, Nizam Shah was defeated and sued for peace. Ibrahim later supported a fresh offensive by Husain and was defeated at Kondavidu.

Jammu ❙ 1712 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars
After Banda Singh Bahadur ambushed and killed the Mughal leader Shams Khan (June 1711), he was defeated at Parsur near Sialkot by Mughal General Muhammad Amin Khan who pursued the Sikh north to Jammu. Banda was heavily defeated in a large-scale attack (with a reported 500 Sikh heads sent to Lahore), though he later counter-attacked to besiege Sadhaura (22 January 1712).

Jamrud ❙ 1738 ❙ Persian Invasion of India
At the peak of Persian expansion, Emperor Nadir Shah captured Afghanistan and took 50,000 men into India via the Tsatsobi Pass, bypassing a Mughal Governor of Kabul at the Khyber Pass. Taking the Indians in the rear near Jamrud, the Persians inflicted a costly defeat, then took Peshawar and Lahore before advancing on Delhi for decisive battle at Karnal in February (26 November 1738).

Jamrud ❙ 1837 ❙ Afghan-Sikh Wars
Following Sikh annexation of Peshawar in 1834, General Hari Singh built a strong fortress at the mouth of the Khyber Pass at Jamrud. Attempting to recover Peshawar, Dost Muhammad of Kabul sent his son Muhammad Akbar Khan, who was defeated outside Jamrud. Though Hari Singh was killed, the Sikh garrison held out and Akbar raised the siege and withdrew (30 April 1837).

Jand ❙ 1218 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan
As the Mongol Genghis Khan prepared his offensive against the Khwarezmian Empire, his son Juchi and General Subetai pursued their old rivals the Merkit into Kazakhstan. East of the Aral Sea, they met Sultan Muhammad II of Khwarezm advancing from Jand (near modern Kzyl-Ordu) on the Syr Darya. Following a bloody but indecisive action, Muhammad withdrew to Samarkand.

Jankau ❙ 1645 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

Swedish Marshal Lennart Torstensson advancing from the Elbe was intercepted southwest of Prague at Jankau, near Tabor, by a Bavarian-Austrian army under Generals Melchior Hatzfeld and Johann van Werth. In a brilliant Swedish victory—with Hatzfeld captured and Count Johann von Gotz killed—the Bavarian army was routed and Torstensson briefly threatened Vienna itself (5 March 1645).

Jannina ❙ 1912–1913 ❙ 1st Balkan War

With Thessalonica in Turkish Macedonia secured, Greek General Constantine Sapountzakis advanced to besiege Jannina, where he lost many men in costly assaults on surrounding forts, including Bizani. Prince Constantine then arrived to rebuild his force. A massive bombardment and assault finally forced Essad Pasha to surrender the city (12 December 1912–5 March 1913).

Jannitsa ❙ 1912 ❙ 1st Balkan War

Turkish forces withdrawing from defeat at Sarandáporon made a stand at Jannista (modern Yenitsá) to block Prince Constantine of Greece, northwest of Thessalonica. His advance units were checked, but a major assault next day threw the Turks back. A week later, Hassan Taksin Pasha surrendered Thessalonica, along with 25,000 men, 70 guns and munitions (1–2 November 1912).

Janos Massacre ❙ 1851 ❙ Apache Indian Wars

Mexican Colonel José Maria Carrasco and 400 soldiers crossed from Sonora into Chihuahua in northern Mexico, where they attacked the Chiricahua Apache camp of Mangas Coloradas at Janos on the Rio de Casas, while the warriors were away hunting. About 30 Indians were killed with others kidnapped and enslaved. The Apache were avenged a year later in an attack further west at Arizpe (5 March 1851).

Janowiec ❙ 1606 ❙ Zebrzydowski's Rebellion

When Sigismund III of Poland tried to increase Royal power, he was opposed by nobles led by Mikolaj Zebrzydowski, Palatine of Cracow. Facing civil war, the King sent his army against the rebels and after a confrontation at Janowiec, on the Vistula west of Lublin, the insurrectionists were pardoned on condition of allegiance. They renewed rebellion next year and were routed at Guzów (October 1606).

Janvilliers ❙ 1814 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (French Campaign)

See Vauchamps

Jaomodo ❙ 1696 ❙ Chinese-Mongol Wars

Following action against the Qing at Ulan Butong (1690), Galdan of the Zunghar Mongols again moved east and the Kangxi Emperor led a massive converging offensive across the Gobi. North of the Kerulen at Jaomodo, Galdan suffered a terrible defeat and died the following year. Victory stabilised China's northern border until a fresh Chinese offensive ended in 1731 at Hoton Nor (12 June 1696).

Japan Sea ❙ 1904 ❙ Russo-Japanese War

See Ulsan

Jarama ❙ 1937 ❙ Spanish Civil War

Stalemated north of Madrid at Corunna Road, Nationalist Generals Luis Orgaz and José Varela tried a fresh attack southeast of the capital in the Jarama Valley. Republicans under General Sebastián Pozas and later General José Miaja fell back after heavy losses on both sides, but finally held the line. In March they checked the Nationalists again at Guadalajara (6–27 February 1937).

Jarbuiyah ❙ 1920 ❙ Iraqi Revolt

Smarting from defeat at Rustumiyah (24 July), British General Frank Coningham was ordered to evacuate Diwaniyah and withdraw north to Hillah, south of Baghdad. Repairing the railway as he went, Coningham met a strong Arab force attempting to hold the bridge at Jarbuiyah. They were driven off with heavy losses and his large rail convoy reached Hillah two days later (5 August 1920).

Jargeau ❙ 1429 ❙ Hundred Years War

William de la Pole Earl of Suffolk was defeated and driven off from the long English siege of Orleans and withdrew east to nearby Jargeau, captured the previous October by his brother Sir John de la Pole. However, Suffolk was forced to surrender the city to besieging French forces under Jeanne d'Arc and Jean Duke of Alencon. He and his brother were taken prisoner (12 June 1429).

Jarnac ❙ 1569 ❙ 3rd French War of Religion

When Catherine de Medici attempted to arrest Huguenot leaders Louis I de Bourbon Prince of Condé and Admiral Gaspard de Coligny, the flimsy peace failed and Henry of Anjou led a large Catholic army into the field. At Jarnac, near the Charente, Henry and Marshal Gaspard de Tavannes surprised and defeated the Protestants. Condé was taken prisoner and murdered (13 March 1569).

Jarrab ❙ 1915 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

See Jirab

Jarville ❙ 1477 ❙ Burgundian-Swiss War

See Nancy

Jasini ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

Following British disaster at Tanga, General Michael Tighe in Mombasa sent a force, which occupied Jasini, just inside German East Africa (25 December 1914). The Anglo-Indian garrison later repulsed German Colonel Paul von Lettow-Vorbeck, but had to surrender after a second determined German assault. A relief column arrived just hours too late and was driven off (12–19 January 1915).

Jask ❙ 1620 ❙ Anglo-Portuguese Colonial Wars

To help protect trade in the Persian Gulf, four British ships met Portuguese Admiral Rui Freire de Andrade near Jask, east of Hormuz. The Portuguese withdrew after an indecisive first action, but in a second battle Andrade was badly defeated (though British commander Andrew Shilling was fatally wounded). Two years later, British and Persian forces attacked Hormuz (17 & 28 December 1620).

Jasmund ❙ 1676 ❙ Scania War

When Christian V of Denmark sided with the Netherlands against France and her ally Sweden, the brilliant Danish Admiral Niels Juel sailed against a 30-strong Swedish fleet off Jasmund, near Rügen, where the inexperienced Swedish Admiral Lorenz Creutz was defeated. Despite Danish defeats on land, within a year Juel achieved further naval victories at Oland and Koge (25 May 1676).

Jasna Gora ❙ 1655 ❙ 1st Northern War

After Charles X of Sweden captured Warsaw and Cracow, General Burkhardt Müller was blocked further west at the Pauline monastery of Jasna Gora at Czestochowa, held by Prior Augustin Kordecki, with Stefan Zamoiski and Pyotr Czarniecki. Charles withdrew after a brave defence, which rallied Polish resistance, but in 1657 he returned to retake Warsaw (18 November–24 December 1655).

Jassy ❙ 1620 ❙ Polish-Turkish Wars

Intervening to support a revolt by Gaspar Graziani of Moldavia, Poland sent veteran Hetman Stanislas Zolkiewski and Polish regulars to join Cossacks and Moldavians to defeat a Turk-Tatar force on the Pruth at Jassy (modern Iasi, Romania). Zolkiewski's allies abandoned him after the victory and an Ottoman army under Osman II pursued the Poles north to defeat at Cecora (20 September 1620).

Jassy-Kishinev ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Russian Generals Rodion Malinovksy and Fedor Tolbukhin cleared the southern Ukraine, then advanced on Romania, attacking Germans and Romanians under General Johannes Freissner along the Dniester between Jassy and Kishinev. When the Russians broke through, Romania changed sides and German forces began to withdraw from the Balkans (20–30 August 1944).

Játiva ❙ 1707 ❙ War of the Spanish Succession

Franco-Spanish commander Marshal James Duke of Berwick advanced from victory at Almanza and sent Claude-Francois Bidal Chevalier d'Asfeld to besiege Játiva, southwest of Valencia. When the town fell by storm, the English garrison held out in the citadel before capitulating. Játiva was sacked and razed, its destruction symbolising suppression of rebellion in Valencia (5–24 May 1707).

Jaunpur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Marching southeast from Lucknow to relieve besieged Azamgarh, General Sir Edward Lugard was blocked just northwest of Jaunpur at the village of Tigra by 3,000 rebels under Ghulaum Husain. Despite exhaustion from marching in intense heat, the British attacked at once. The rebels were routed and fled, leaving 80 dead, while Lugard continued on to relieve Azamgarh (10 April 1858).

Java ❙ 1293 ❙ Mongol Wars of Kubilai Khan

See Singhasari

Java ❙ 1941–1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

See East Indies

Java Sea ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

After the Japanese victory in Lombok Strait in the East Indies, a large invasion force for Java under Admiral Takeo Takagi was met in the Java Sea by an Australian, British, Dutch and American force under Admiral Karel Doorman. Two Allied cruisers and four destroyers were sunk, with Doorman lost. Just days later, the surviving cruisers were sunk in the Sunda Strait (27 February 1942).

Jawra Alipur ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

The same day as the capture of Gwalior by General Sir Hugh Rose, General Robert Napier and 600 men marched west to nearby Jawra Alipur, where he intercepted Tantia Topi, with the remains of his army defeated at Morar and survivors from Gwalior. Enfiladed by artillery, the rebels broke and fled before Napier's cavalry charge, abandoning 25 guns and massive military stores (20 June 1858).

Jaxartes ❙ 329 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

Alexander the Great defeated Persia at Gaugamela (331 BC), then invaded Turkestan and advanced east to the Jaxartes (Sir Darya), where he founded Alexandria/Khojent (modern Leninabad). Threatened by Turkoman Scythians, Alexander stormed over the river and inflicted a heavy defeat. He then returned to Samarkand to repulse Spitamenes of Sogdia and in 327 BC captured the Sogdian Rock.

Jazmin ❙ 1876 ❙ Diaz Revolt in Mexico

Early in a new rising against President Sebastián Lerdo de Tejada, 4,000 rebels in Oaxaca led by General Fidencio Hernandez attacked 1,000 Federal troops under General Ignacio Alatorre at Cerro del Jazmin, south of Puebla. Alatorre withdrew to nearby Yanhuitlan, where the rebels were routed with losses for the day of about 900. He won again in May at San Juan Epatlán (18 February 1876).

Jebel Akhdar ❙ 1958 ❙ Imam Revolt

Omani rebel Talib ibn Ali recovered from defeat at Rustaq in 1955 and returned from exile to help his brother Imam Ghalib renew rebellion against Sultan Said ibn Taymur. Responding to an appeal for military aid, a British SAS battalion arrived to attack the rebels cornered on the Jebel Akhdar plateau, southwest of Muscat. After fierce fighting, the stronghold fell and the rebels fled (January 1959).

Jebel Akhdar ❙ 1971 ❙ Dhofar War

After prolonged leftist rebellion in southern Oman's Dhofar, new Sultan Qabus ibn Said sought additional British aid and an SAS battalion and local forces under Colonel Johnny Watts advanced onto the precipitous Jebel Akhdar plateau. Attacking against very well-armed guerrillas, the Allies finally took the Jebel after costly losses on both sides and the rebels withdrew (October 1971).

Jebel Libni ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

As Israelis on the coast attacked Rafa, further inland, General Avraham Yoffe led his tanks through supposedly impassable soft sand dunes to surprise and defeat Egypt at Bir Lahfan, then advanced on one of the main forward bases in the Sinai at Jebel Libni. A bold night attack routed General Osman Nasser's Egyptians and Yoffe raced southwest to Mitla Pass (6 June 1967).

Jeddah ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

Soon after Sharif Hussein, Emir of Mecca, proclaimed the Arab Revolt against Turkey in the Hejaz, he attacked the key Red Sea port of Jeddah. Following a six-day bombardment by British warships offshore, a land assault forced the Turkish garrison to surrender. Jeddah was the first major centre in the Hejaz to fall to Sharifi forces and the port became a major Arab supply base (17 June 1916).

Jeddah ❙ 1925 ❙ Saudi-Hashemite Wars

See Medina

Jehol ❙ 1933 ❙ Manchuria Incident

See Great Wall

Jemappes ❙ 1792 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

When Archduke Charles of Austria failed at the siege of Lille (6 October) he withdrew to winter quarters at Jemappes, west of Mons in the Austrian Netherlands. Defending entrenched positions, his outnumbered Austrians were soon routed by French General Charles-Francois Dumouriez, who marched into Brussels a week later to gain Belgium for the Republic (6 November 1792).

Jemmingen ❙ 1568 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Soon after Spanish defeat at Heiligerlee at the start of the Netherlands War, Don Fernando Alvarez, Duke of Alva marched into the northern Netherlands and drew Louis of Nassau, brother of William of Orange, into combat at Jemmingen (modern Jemgum) near Emden. The Dutch were utterly routed in a one-sided disaster and Spain crushed the rebellion in Friesland (21 July 1568).

Jena ❙ 1806 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

As Napoleon Bonaparte's army converged on Prussia, King Frederick William III divided his force and the greater part was defeated by Marshal Louis Davout at Auerstadt. The same day, Bonaparte heavily defeated the smaller Prussian force under Prince Friedrich-Ludwig of Hohenloe, 15 miles south at Jena. The twin defeats virtually knocked Prussia out of the war (14 October 1806).

Jenar ❙ 1751 ❙ Later Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Intervening in a Javanese war of succession, Dutch commander Johan von Hohendorff sent Major Hendrik de Clerq against rebel leader Mangkubumi. Attacked at the Bogowonto River near Jenar, de Clerq's Javanese allies fled and he was killed, with his column virtually destroyed. The Dutch eventually recognised Mangkubumi and gained territory in northern Java (12 December 1751).

Jenin ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

After failing near Gesher (22 May), Iraqi forces regrouped and advanced strongly further south across the Jordan towards Jenin. Met by Israeli Colonel Moshe Carmel, victor of Haifa, a major battle developed and the Iraqis brought up reinforcements and aircraft. They were eventually forced to withdraw, though they held positions outside Jenin until the First Truce (28 May–9 June 1948).

Jenin ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

On the offensive in the north, Israeli General Elad Peled and tank commander Colonel Moshe Bar-Kochva attacked Jenin, defended by Jordanian Colonel Awad el Khalid and armour led by General Runkun al-Ghazi. Some of the heaviest fighting of the war took place in the southwest around Kabatiya before Jenin fell. The Jews then turned south towards Nablus (5–7 June 1967).

Jenipapo ❙ 1823 ❙ Brazilian War of Independence

Facing insurgents in northern Brazil in Piauí, Portuguese Governor, Major João José de Cunha Fidié, marched against rebels at Jenipapo, near Campo Maior, and secured a hard-fought victory. However, Fidié suffered losses he could not replace and had to withdraw west across the Parnaiba to siege at Caixas. He later capitulated (31 July 1823) after the fall of Salvador (March 1823).

Jenkins' Ferry ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Trans-Mississippi)

Union General Frederick Steele marched across Arkansas to capture Camden, then lost men and supplies at Poison Spring and Marks' Mills and began retreating north through Princeton. On the Saline at Jenkins' Ferry, he drove off repeated Confederate attacks under General E. Kirby Smith, then crossed the River and took his failed expedition back to Little Rock (30 April 1864).

Jerba ❙ 1560 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars

See Djerba

Jericho ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

With Jerusalem secured (December 1917), Sir Edmund Allenby sent Australian and New Zealand cavalry under General Charles Cox northeast against Jericho. After storming advanced positions, the horsemen outflanked the entrenchments and attacked from the rear. Jericho quickly fell and a major Turkish counter-offensive in July was repulsed at Abu Tellul (19–21 February 1918).

Jericho Mills ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See North Anna

Jerusalem ❙ 597 BC ❙ Babylon's Wars of Conquest

After driving Egypt from Judah at Carchemish, King Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon faced revolt by King Jehoiakim and attacked Jerusalem. When the king died during the siege, his son Jehoiachin surrendered and was deported to Babylon. Nebuchadrezzar appointed Zedekiah as King, but when Zedekiah revolted ten years later, Nebuchadrezzar returned and destroyed Jerusalem (16 March 597 BC).

Jerusalem ❙ 587–586 BC ❙ Babylon's Wars of Conquest

King Zedekiah of Judah revolted against his overlord, Nebuchadrezzar of Babylon who returned to finally settle with Jerusalem. During a long siege Zedekiah escaped, but was captured and blinded. A month later Babylonian General Nebuzaradan stormed the city, which was sacked and burned. The citizens were then deported to Babylon, ending the Kingdom of Judah.

Jerusalem ❙ 70 ❙ Jewish Rising against Rome

As Rome moved to crush rebellion in Judea, General Vespasian was proclaimed Emperor and he left his son, Titus Flavius Vespasianus to lay siege to Jerusalem, which suffered extreme losses through assault and starvation. Titus finally stormed Jersualem, destroying much of the city and massacring its population. Two years later Roman forces besieged Masada (May–September 70).

Jerusalem ❙ 614 ❙ Byzantine-Persian Wars

Three years after capturing Antioch, Persians under General Shahbaraz advanced along the coast from Ceasarea and besieged Jerusalem. After failed negotiations the city was taken by storm and sacked, with claims of up to 50,000 killed. Patriarch Zacharias and thousands of prisoners were taken to Persia, along with Rome's most precious relic, a supposed fragment of the True Cross (April–May 614).

Jerusalem ❙ 638 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Syria

With Damascus recaptured after his second great victory at the Yarmuk in 636, Muslim conqueror Khalid ibn al-Walid, supported by veteran General Abu Obaidah, turned against Jerusalem, the remaining key city. A severe four-month siege, with continuous attacks and counter-attacks, made the Patriarch Sophonius finally surrender the city. Khalid then marched north against Aleppo.

Jerusalem ❙ 1098 ❙ 1st Crusade

Fatimid Egyptian Vizier al-Afdal took advantage of a Turkish loss to Crusaders at Antioch (December 1097) to move against Suqman ibn Artuq, Amir of Jerusalem, who held out for six weeks against a large-scale siege before yielding the city. Despite defeating the Turks, the Egyptians held Jerusalem for less than a year before losing it to the forces of the First Crusade (July–August 1098).

Jerusalem ❙ 1099 ❙ 1st Crusade

The Crusader army under Godfrey of Bouillon and Raymond of Toulouse advanced from the capture of Antioch through Syria to attack Jerusalem, which was defended by a Fatimid garrison under Ala-al-adin. When Jerusalem was taken by storm after a bloody month-long siege, the city's Muslims and Jews were butchered and Godfrey was elected Guardian (7 June–15 July 1099).

Jerusalem ❙ 1187 ❙ 3rd Crusade

Two months after Crusader disaster at Hattin, Kurdish-Muslim conqueror Saladin besieged Jerusalem, held by a scratch garrison under Balian of Ibelin. The city surrendered after a two-week siege, but unlike the massacre which followed the Crusader victory in 1099, Saladin accepted ransom for the Christian populace and permitted them to leave (20 September–2 October 1187).

Jerusalem ❙ 1244 ❙ Later Crusader-Muslim Wars

When Emperor Frederick II and his Sixth Crusade returned to Europe, the Kingdom of Jerusalem was weakened by years of civil war and the city was attacked by the Khwarezmian army, previously driven out of Persia by the Mongols. The garrison surrendered after a violent assault and it was not until 1917 that Jerusalem was again captured by a Christian army (11 July–23 August 1244).

Jerusalem ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

British commander Sir Edmund Allenby drove north along the coast from Gaza to seize Jaffa after victory at Junction Station, then wheeled northeast to outflank Jerusalem. General Philip Chetwode secured a bloody victory just west of the city on the heights of Nebi-Samweil and Jersualem fell after two days. A Turkish counter-attack two weeks later failed at Tel el Ful (9 December 1917).

Jerusalem (1st) ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

As the British left Jerusalem, Jews under Colonel David Shaltiel seized most of the new city, then attempted to take the old walled city, now reinforced by the Arab Legion under Sir John Glubb. With Jerusalem itself effectively under Arab siege, Jewish troops in the Old Quarter were driven back in fierce house-to-house fighting and were finally forced to surrender (16–28 May 1948).

Jerusalem (2nd) ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

During the so-called Ten Days Offensive, Jews under Colonel David Shaltiel launched a fresh offensive to regain the Old City on the supposed 2,500th anniversary of the breaching of the walls of Jerusalem by Nebuchadrezzar's Babylonians. Very heavy fighting saw the Jews repulsed by the Arab Legion and Jerusalem remained divided until the Six Day War of 1967 (9–18 July 1948).

Jerusalem ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

Opening Jordan's attack on Israel, Brigadier Sherif Zeid Ben Shaker advanced on Jerusalem, where the old city was held by Jordanian Brigadier Ata Ali. Intense fighting developed as Israeli General Uzi Narkiss and Colonel Mordechai Gurr counter-attacked in force. With approaching Arab tanks destroyed by Israeli jets, the Jews stormed and reoccupied the city (5–7 June 1967).

Jerusalem Plank Road ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On an offensive against the Weldon Railroad, south of besieged Petersburg, Virginia, Union Generals Horatio G. Wright and David B. Birney were met in a counter-attack on the Jerusalem Plank Road by Confederate Generals Ambrose P. Hill and William Mahone. The Union advance was driven off, but fighting on the railroad resumed at Sappony Church and Reams Station (21–24 June 1864).

Jetersville ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Amelia Springs

Jhansi ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

General Sir Hugh Rose marched north from Sagar through Madanpur to besiege and bombard the mountain fortress city of Jhansi, held by 12,000 rebels under the Rani of Jhansi. Two days after turning to defeat a relief force at the Betwa, Rose took the fortress by assault, followed by deadly retribution for an earlier massacre. The Rani escaped to Kalpi (21 March–3 April).

Jhelum ❙ 326 BC ❙ Conquests of Alexander the Great

See Hydaspes

Jiangkou ❙ 1851 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

On the offensive in Guangxi after losing at Jintian (1 January), new Imperial Commissioner Li Xingyuan sent Generals Xiang Rong and Zhou Fengqi against rebel Taiping headquarters at Jiangkou (Chiang-kou), west of Pingnan. The Imperial attack was repulsed with over 1,000 killed. When the rebels later withdrew west, the enraged Xiang Rong sacked and burned the town (February 1851).

Jiangling ❙ 1236 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

Following the Mongol conquest of northern China, their former Song allies began seizing territory and the Mongol brothers Koten and Kochu, grandsons of Genghis Khan, took a large army into Hubei. On the Yangzi near Jiangling (modern Jingzhou), they were defeated by Song General Meng Hong (who helped capture Kaifeng in 1233). The Southern Song were later destroyed by Kubilai.

Jiangsu ❙ 1946 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Nationalist commander Chiang Kai-shek ended an American-brokered truce by launching the massive Jiangsu (Kiangsu) offensive in northern China against Communist General Chen Yi. With huge superiority in men and equipment, Chiang took major cities including Chengde and Zhangjiakou plus parts of Manchuria, then announced a unilateral ceasefire (10 July–8 November 1946).

Jiankang ❙ 548–549 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties

Following the death of Gao Huan of Eastern Wei, General Hou Jing rebelled and handed Yingchuan to Western Wei, then turned south across the Yangzi to besiege Jiankang (Chien-k'ang, modern Nanjing), capital of Emperor Wudi of Southern Liang. Despite a brave, prolonged defence by Yang Kan, the city finally fell. Hou Jing later made himself Emperor, but was soon driven out and killed.

Jiankang ❙ 589 ❙ Wars of the Six Dynasties

With northern China reunited after the fall of Taiyuan (577), the throne was taken by Yangjiang who established the Sui Dynasty, then turned against the ailing Chen Dynasty in the south. A bold land and river offensive converged on the Chen capital Jiankang (Chien-k'ang, modern Nanjing), which fell after heavy fighting. The Sui then reunited north and south after almost four centuries of fragmentation.

Jicaral ❙ 1839 ❙ Central American National Wars

In the break-up of the Central American Federation, Conservative forces from Honduras under Francisco Ferrera, aided by Nicaragua, invaded eastern El Salvador against Liberal President Francisco Morazán. The Allies defeated Morazán at Jicaral, just east of San Miguel. However, the following month to the northwest at Espiritu Santo they were defeated and driven out (19 March 1839).

Jicin ❙ 1866 ❙ Seven Weeks War

See Gitschin

Jidballi ❙ 1904 ❙ Wars of the Mad Mullah

Capping victory at Daratoleh (April 1903), Britain sent a fourth expedition under General Charles Egerton to Somaliland, the largest so far against Muhammad Abdullah Hassan. Decisive action east of Olesan at Jidballi saw the Dervishes driven off then pursued and killed by Somali levies. After a small force stormed his fortress at Illig (21 April) the absent Mullah sued for peace (10 January 1904).

Jidda ❙ 1925 ❙ Saudi-Hashemite Wars

See Medina

Jieqiao ❙ 191 ❙ Wars of the Three Kingdoms

Amid civil war which led to the fall of the Han, the northern warlord Gongsun Zan advanced to meet his rival Yuan Shao south of the Jie Bridge (Jieqiao) on the Qing River in modern Hebei. Yuan's disciplined vanguard under Qu Yi repulsed Gongsun's cavalry and Yuan won a decisive victory. Gongsun was eventually defeated and committed suicide (199) and in 200 Yuan Shao was stopped at Guandu.

Jijelli ❙ 1664 ❙ North African War of Louis XIV

In the war against Barbary pirates, a French squadron led by Francois de Vendome Duke of Beaufort landed and captured the small Algerian port of Jijelli (modern Jijel), on the Gulf of Bougie. Turkish and Arab forces in Algiers made Beaufort beat a hasty withdrawal, though defeats at sea the following year persuaded the Dey of Algiers to make peace with France (22 July 1664).

Jijiga ❙ 1977 ❙ Ogaden War

Somali forces supporting separatist rebels in southeast Ethiopia, crossed into the Ogaden from Hargeisa and advanced on Jijiga, where their initial assault was driven off with heavy losses in men and tanks. Reinforced from Dire Dawa they attacked again and the Ethiopian army mutinied and withdrew. The Somalis then advanced west through Marda towards Harer (August–10 September 1977).

Jijiga ❙ 1978 ❙ Ogaden War

With Somali forces advancing deep into the northern Ogaden, Ethiopia secured a massive airlift of Soviet armour and Cuban troops then relieved Harer and Dire Dawa, before converging on Jijiga. Attacked on all sides, the Somalis lost perhaps 3,000 killed in severe fighting. Within days President Siad Barre ordered his army withdrawn from Ethiopia, effectively ending the war (3–5 March 1978).

Jilin ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

Having stormed Qiqihar on the Eastern Railway in Manchuria, Russian General Pavel K. Rennenkamp advanced south from Harbin towards Jilin. With just a small force of Cossacks, Rennenkampf took the city, capturing 69 guns and large quantities of arms and ammunition. Resistance in Jilin Province effectively ended and General Chang Shun sued for peace (23 September 1900).

Jiliste ❙ 1574 ❙ Moldavian Rebellion

John the Brave, Prince of Moldavia, refused to pay tribute to Ottoman Constantinople and soon faced an invasion by a local Turkish-Wallachian army. Supported by Cossack troops he surprised and defeated the invaders near Focsani at Jiliste. However, Sultan Selim II then sent a large army which crushed the Moldavian rebellion in June near the mouth of the Danube at Kagul Lagoon (April 1574).

Jiluo Mountain ❙ 90 ❙ Wars of the Later Han

With the Northern Xiongnu threatening China's border, Han General Dou Xian took a large Imperial army into Mongolia, supported by his allies, the Southern Xiongnu. In a decisive battle at Jiluo Mountain, southwest of modern Ulaanbaatar, the Northern Xiongnu were routed, with the survivors fleeing west across the Altai Mountains. As a result they virtually ceased to exist as a military power.

Jimo ❙ 279 BC ❙ China's Era of the Warring States

Eastern states led by Yen defeated Qi (Ch'i) to curb its expansion (285 BC) and Yen occupied most of the country except two cities, including Jimo, which held out under virtual siege for six years. Garrison commander Tian Dan led a brilliant counter-attack, using stampeding cattle bearing flames and spears, and the army of Yen was routed and withdrew. The Kingdom of Qi was restored but weakened.

Jinan ❙ 1928 ❙ 2nd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

As Nationalist forces overcame the warlords of northern China, Japan occupied Jinan (Tsinan) to protect national interests just as the Northerners withdrew. Following Japanese clashes with Chinese troops, Chiang Kai-shek secured order. However, when Chiang withdrew, General Hikouke Fukuda destroyed the remaining garrison and killed many civilians. Japan held Jinan for a year (3–11 May 1928).

Jinan ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

General Chen Yi continued the Communist offensive in northern China, converging with aid from Liu Bocheng, Chen Geng and Li Xiannian on Jinan (Tsinan) in Shandong, held by General Wang Yaowu. After key Nationalist forces changed sides, the city was taken by bloody assault with 80,000 men captured or defected, leading to the Communist offensive at Huaihai (14–24 September 1948).

Jing Luzhen ❙ 1410 ❙ Ming Imperial Wars

A month after destroying Mongol Prince Bunyashiri at the Onon, Ming Emperor Yongle pursued the Eastern Mongol Chancellor Arughtai east into the Khingan mountains between Mongolia and Manchuria. Arughtai was defeated in battle near the Chaor River at Jing Luzhen, but he later became a Ming ally. The Emperor returned to Beijing claiming victory over the Mongols (July 1410).

Jingxing ❙ 205 BC ❙ Chu-Han War

Recovering from defeat at Pengcheng, Han warlord Liu Bang sent Han Xin against Zhao, where General Chen Yu assembled a large force to defend the strategic gorge at Jingxing (Ching-Hsing). Lured out of their fortified position by a feigned Han withdrawal, the Zhao army suffered a devastating defeat, with King Zhao Xie captured and Chen Yu executed. Liu Bang was later defeated at Chenggao.

Jinji ❙ 1648 ❙ Bijapur-Maratha Wars

See Gingee

Jinji ❙ 1689–1698 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

See Gingee

Jinji ❙ 1750 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

See Gingee

Jintian ❙ 1851 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Following defeat at Guangxi Province at Huazhou (November 1850), Imperial commander Zhou Fengqi sent General Yikebudan against massive Taiping forces gathered at Jintian, near Giuping, where he was killed in the war's first major action. When General Zhou arrived the Taiping withdrew with little loss.

Their leader Hong Xuiquan was then created Heavenly King (1 January 1851).

Jinzhou ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

Communist General Lin Biao opened the Liaoshen offensive in Manchuria by unexpectedly launching his main attack in the south against Jinzhou. A belated relief attempt west from Mukden (modern Shenyang) was destroyed and, after weeks of terrible artillery bombardment, General Fan Hanjie surrendered the city and its massive store of supplies (12 September–17 October 1948).

Jirab ❙ 1915 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

During the struggle for central Arabia, Emir Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh led a claimed 6,000 men against the pro-Turkish Rashid at Jirab, near al-Artawiyah. When their Ajman allies defected, the Saudis suffered a terrible defeat with massive losses, including British observer Captain William Shakespear killed. Later that year Aziz met the Rashid again at Kinzan (24 January 1915).

Jiran ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Marching south from Nimach against Mandasur rebels under Firoz Shah, 400 native troops of Captain Nathaniel B. Tucker's Bombay Light Cavalry attacked Jiran. While Tucker was killed in an early assault, Jiran fell after heavy fighting, although the British were too few to hold it and withdrew. Within a month Firoz Shah failed besieging Nimach and was defeated at Goraria (23 October 1857).

Jiron ❙ 1829 ❙ Peruvian-Colombian War

See Tarqui

Jisr Benat Yakub ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

As part of the broad Allied offensive after Megiddo, the Australian Mounted Division under General Sir Henry Hodgson advanced north around the Sea of Galilee to cross the Upper Jordan near Jisr Benat Yakub. After some bloody resistance, the Turks were driven back. Engineers repaired the partly demolished bridge and, within days, the Australians were in Damascus (28 September 1918).

Jitgargh ❙ 1815 ❙ British-Gurkha War

While British forces attempting to invade southern Nepal were crushed at Parsa and Samanpur, further west beyond Kathmandu General John Sullivan Wood advanced towards Palpa. But he was blocked at the mountain pass at Jitgargh, near Butwal, by General Vazir Singh. Although very heavy fighting saw the Gurkhas suffer greater losses, Wood was forced to withdraw (14 January 1815).

Jitra ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

While Japanese invaders secured Kota Bharu in northeast Malaya, General Takuro Matsui advanced in the west towards the key airfields at Alor Star and Sangei Patania. General David Murray-Lyon was ordered to hold a defensive line at Jitra, but after two days of heavy Japanese attacks the British withdrew across the Perak towards Kampar (11–13 December 1941).

Jiujiang ❙ 1855 ❙ Taiping Rebellion

Zeng Guofan's Xiang army advanced down the Yangzi through Wuchang to attack Taiping Jiujiang (Kiukiang) held by Lin Qirong, later reinforced by Shi Dakai. Part of Zeng's navy was isolated and destroyed on nearby Lake Poyang and, after Zeng himself was routed in another naval defeat on the river, much of his force withdrew towards Wuchang (29 January & 11 February 1855).

Jobito ❙ 1895 ❙ 2nd Cuban War of Independence

Cuban insurgent José Maceo and his brother Antonio continued fighting northwest of Guantánamo, attacking a Spanish column at Jobito. Desperately short of ammunition, José waited until the Spanish had expended their cartridges, then attacked with machetes, killing commander Colonel Joaquin Bosch and many of his men. Antonio Maceo won again in July at Peralejo (13 May 1895).

Jodoigne ❙ 1568 ❙ Netherlands War of Independence

Three months after disastrous Dutch defeat at Jemmingen, William of Orange withdrew southeast pursued by Spanish forces under Don Fernando Alvarez Duke of Alva. Crossing the Geete near Jodoigne, east of Brussels, William's rearguard suffered a sharp defeat, with Antonius de Lalaing Count Hoogstraaten killed. The Dutch Prince then continued south into France (20 October 1568).

Jogjakarta ❙ 1948 ❙ Indonesian War of Independence

Dutch administrators established a provisional government for Indonesia, then launched a "police action" against Nationalists who had proclaimed independence in western Java. Heavy fighting saw Dutch paratroopers take the rebel capital Jogjakarta, but in the face of international condemnation the Netherlands accepted a ceasefire. Within a year they granted full sovereignty (19 December 1948).

Johannesburg ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

See Doornkop

Johnsonville ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

While Confederate commander John B. Hood prepared to invade Tennessee, cavalry under General Nathan B. Forrest attacked the Union supply depot on the Tennessee at Johnsonville, west of Nashville. Despite a courageous defence by Colonel Charles R. Thompson's garrison, Forrest caused massive damage before withdrawing and Hood advanced through Columbia (4–5 November 1864).

Jonesborough ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

With Atlanta, Georgia, virtually besieged, Union commander William T. Sherman took a large force against railroads south of the city, where he was met at Jonesborough by Confederate General William J. Hardee. Heavily outnumbered, Hardee suffered a decisive defeat and, the following night, Confederate commander John B. Hood evacuated Atlanta (31 August–1 September 1864).

Jones Creek ❙ 1824 ❙ Karankawa Indian War

When Texas settlers on the Lower Brazos River were attacked by Karankawa Indians, Captain Randal Jones led a local militia force and attacked their camp near modern Freeport at what later became known as Jones Creek. In a sharp action, supported by the eccentric Captain James Bailey, the Indians lost 15 killed and withdrew across the San Bernard (22 June 1824).

Jonkowo ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Bergfriede

Joppa ❙ 1102 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars

Days after escaping the Crusader disaster at Ramleh, Baldwin I of Jerusalem rallied support against Fatimid commander Sharaf al-Maali, who was now besieging Joppa (modern Jaffa). Reinforced by European Crusaders, who arrived through the Egyptian naval blockade, the King led a major offensive against the Egyptian and Sudanese army and drove it back towards Ascalon (27 May 1102).

Joppa ❙ 1192 ❙ 3rd Crusade

Richard I of England withdrew from his failed advance on Jerusalem and took a small force by sea to relieve Saladin's siege of Joppa (modern Jaffa). Landing against powerful opposition, Richard held off the Muslims until reinforcements overland from Acre helped regain the city. Sultan Saladin then agreed to a five-year truce allowing pilgrims access to Jerusalem (August 1192).

Joppa ❙ 1198 ❙ 4th Crusade

Regrouping a year after defeat at Sidon, Sultan al-Adil Saif al-Din attacked the German garrison at Joppa (modern Jaffa) and Henry

Duke of Saxony was killed repulsing the first attack. A fresh Muslim assault during the Feast of St Martin stormed the city and massacred the inhabitants. However, when Emperor Henry V died in Germany, the "German Crusade" returned home (11 November 1198).

Jotapata ❙ 67 ❙ Jewish Rising against Rome

Faced by a Jewish rising in Judea, which destroyed a Roman Legion at Beth Horon, General Vespasian besieged the steep mountain city of Jotapata, north of Sepphoris. Vespasian stormed the fortress after a bloody 47-day siege and massacred the inhabitants. Most survivors committed suicide, though rebel leader Josephus (the future historian) escaped and later supported the Roman cause.

Jucar ❙ 75 BC ❙ Sertorian War

See Sucro

Jugdespore ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Jagdispur

Jugdulluk ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Jagdalak

Jujuy ❙ 1821 ❙ Argentine War of Independence

Spanish General Pedro Antonio Olañeta resolved to regain the initiative and advanced into northwestern Argentina, where the Royalist vanguard under his brother-in-law Guilllermo Marquigui marched against Jujuy, defended by Governor Ignacio Gorriti of Salta. In the so-called "Great Day of Jujuy," Marquigui was surprised and routed. Olañeta was killed in 1825 at Tumusla (27 April 1821).

Julesburg ❙ 1865 ❙ Cheyenne-Arapaho Indian War

Responding to the Sand Creek Massacre in November, about 1,000 Cheyenne and Arapaho marched on Julesburg on the South Platte in northern Colorado. Captain Nick O'Brien from nearby Camp Rankin was ambushed with 14 killed and the town was sacked. Eluding General Robert Mitchell, the Indians attacked again and burned Julesburg before withdrawing north (7 January & 2 February 1865).

Julian's Defeat ❙ 363 ❙ Later Roman-Persian Wars

See Ctesiphon

Jullundur ❙ 1710 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

See Rahon

Julu ❙ 207 BC ❙ Fall of the Qin Dynasty

As rebel forces weakened the Qin (Ch'in) Dynasty, Qin General Zhang Han was sent to recover lost territory in the east. Stalled at the siege of rebel-held Julu (Chü-lu) in Zhao, he was attacked by the commanding warlord Xiang Yu. The Imperial army suffered a terrible and decisive defeat and Xiang Yu later executed thousands of prisoners. The fall of the capital Xianyang ended the brief Qin Dynasty.

Juncal ❙ 1827 ❙ Argentine-Brazilian War

When Argentina declared war on Brazil in support of Uruguay, Brazil's attempt to blockade the Rio de la Plata was driven off at Quilmes (July 1826). Captain Jacinto Roque de Sena Pereira later renewed the attempt and was met at Juncal, near Martín García, by Patriot Admiral William Brown. The Imperial ships were heavily defeated and later incorporated into Brown's fleet (8–9 February 1827).

Junction City ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

See Suoi Tre

Junction Station ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See El Mughar

Jungfernhof ❙ 1700 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

At the start of the war Augustus II, Elector of Saxony, sent General George von Carlowitz into Swedish Livonia to besiege Riga. However, at nearby Jungfernhof, Carlowitz was killed and his Saxons were driven back across the Dvina by veteran Swedish commander Count Erik Dahlberg. The siege of Riga was later renewed with Russian support until driven off by Charles XII (May 1700).

Junín ❙ 1824 ❙ Peruvian War of Independence

With Chile secured, Simón Bolívar sent forces into Peru against Viceroy José de la Serna, then joined General Antonio José de Sucre against Spanish General José Canterac at Junín, 100 miles northeast of Lima. A cavalry attack by General William Miller, reputedly without a shot fired, saw Canterac lose 360 killed by lance and sabre. He withdrew to fight again at Ayacucho (6 August 1824).

Juno Beach ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Western Europe)

See D-Day

Jupiter Inlet ❙ 1838 ❙ 2nd Seminole Indian War

Following an Indian ambush on a patrol at the Loxahatchee in eastern Florida, near modern Palm Breach, General Thomas Jesup took his main force of regulars and Tennessee volunteers against the Seminole near the Jupiter River. The Indians were driven off in a sharp action, though Jesup was wounded in the face and later yielded command to Colonel Zachary Taylor (24 January 1838).

Juterbog ❙ 1644 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

The incompetent Count Matthias Gallas was sent to aid Denmark against Sweden, but was outmanoeuvred by Swedish Marshal Lennart Torstensson, who attacked him at Juterbog, 20 miles northeast of Wittenberg. With the Imperial army and its Danish allies overwhelmed, Gallas retreated into Bohemia. Torstensson won again the following year at Jankau (23 November 1644).

Juterbog ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

See Dennewitz

Juthas ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russo-Swedish War)

Despite a successful offensive against the Russian invasion of Finland, Sweden's army was driven to the coast, where Russian General Kiril Fedorovich Kazatchovski tried to cut off their route north. A courageous victory at Juthas saw Swedish General Georg von Dobeln repulse the Russians and secure the road for the Swedish retreat following battle next day at Oravais (13 September 1808).

Jutiapa ❙ 1844 ❙ Central American National Wars

When Guatemala supported the ageing Manuel José Arces in a failed invasion of El Salvador against President Francisco Malespín, the Salvadoran President invaded Guatemala and seized the town of Jutiapa, 45 miles southeast of Guatemala City. Terrible losses to disease eventually forced Malespín to withdraw and a peace treaty restored Guatemalan property (20 May–17 June 1844).

Jutland ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (War at Sea)

Admiral Reinhard Scheer led the German High Seas Fleet out to challenge the Grand Fleet of Admiral John Jellicoe and they met off Jutland in the greatest naval battle of the war. The British lost six capital ships and eight destroyers before the Germans escaped with eleven older and smaller ships sunk. However, the German Fleet never again ventured out to sea (31 May–1 June 1916).

K

Kabatiya ❙ 1967 ❙ Arab-Israeli Six Day War

See Jenin

Kabul ❙ 1504 ❙ Mughal Dynastic War

Following the death of the Timurid Prince Ulugh Beg of Kabul, his son-in-law Muhammad Mukim Khan of the Arghunid Dynasty of Kandahar seized the throne. But Mukim was attacked in Kabul by the great Timurid Mughal Babur and withdrew to Kandahar after a brief struggle. Babur then used Kabul as his base to conquer India and establish the Mughal Dynasty (October 1504).

Kabul ❙ 1546–1549 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

Kamran Mirza, second son of the great Babur, was driven out of Kandahar in 1545 by his brother Humayun, yet captured Kabul in 1546. However, in 1547 he was defeated and driven out by Humayun. Kamran was pardoned, but in 1549 again advanced on Kabul, where he defeated and wounded Humayun. With fresh forces, Humayun retook Kabul and eventually captured and blinded his brother.

Kabul ❙ 1738 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Nadir Shah of Persia recaptured Kandahar (24 March) and Ghazni, then attacked Kabul in eastern Afghanistan, defended by the Mughal commander Shir Khan. While the city quickly fell, there was severe fighting before the citadel finally surrendered, after which most of the garrison was slaughtered. Nadir then invaded Mughal India and sacked Delhi after a great victory at Karnal (21–29 June 1738).

Kabul ❙ 1800 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

A well-planned coup saw Afghan ruler Zaman Shah attacked and defeated at Kabul by his brother Mahmud Shah, who was supported by Vizier Fath Khan, son of the former Sirdar Payanda Khan (who had been executed by Zaman). Mahmud blinded his brother and seized the throne, though he was in turn defeated and overthrown three years later by another brother, Shah Shuja.

Kabul ❙ 1818 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

When Prince Kamran of Herat jealously blinded and executed Afghan Vizier Fath Khan after victory at Kafir Qala, he triggered the downfall of his own father Mahmud Shah of Kabul. Within months, the Vizier's brother Dost Muhammad Barakzai raised forces in Kashmir to defeat and overthrow Mahmud at Kabul, ending the Durrani Dynasty. Dost Muhammad himself became Amir in 1826.

Kabul ❙ 1841–1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

More than two years after Amir Dost Muhammad of Afghanistan was deposed following defeat at Ghazni, his son Akbar Khan besieged the British in Kabul and routed a sortie at nearby Bemaru. The unfortunate General William Elphinstone eventually surrendered Kabul in return for safe passage to Jalalabad. However, the British force was massacred at Jagdalak (1st) (November 1841–6 January 1842).

Kabul ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War
See Maidan

Kabul ❙ 1866 ❙ Later Afghan War of Succession
In a war of succession after the death of Dost Muhammad, Amir Sher Ali won at Khujbaz (June 1865), but his brother Azim Khan and nephew Abdur Rahman (son of Afzal Khan) marched on Kabul, held by the son of the Amir. Muhammad Ibrahim Khan was defeated and forced to surrender, while his father's attempt to recover Kabul was repulsed in May at Sheikhabad (24 February 1866).

Kabul ❙ 1879 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War
During renewed hostilities following British victory at Peiwar Kotal (December 1878), a force of 2,000 Afghans from Herat attacked the British Residency at Kabul, defended by about 80 Guides. When envoy Sir Louis Cavagnari was shot, Lieutenant Walter Hamilton VC led a heroic defence before his entire detachment was killed. Britain was avenged a month later at Charasia (3 September 1879).

Kabul ❙ 1929 ❙ Afghan Reformist War
Habibullah Kalakani rose against reformist King Amanullah and seized Kabul. Though the King fled into exile, a bloody counter-offensive by his cousin Muhammad Nadir Khan and his brother Shah Wali Khan retook Kabul. The usurper and ten others were executed and Nadir Khan became King. He introduced constitutional government, but was assassinated in 1933 (14 January–14 October 1929).

Kabul ❙ 1978 ❙ Afghan Civil War
Soon after a rising in Herat was crushed by the increasingly repressive government of President Muhammad Daoud, a Marxist-led revolution saw dissident army and airforce officers attack Kabul with tanks and jet fighters. Despite a bloody defence by loyalist Presidential Guards, Daoud was overthrown and executed, then replaced by Nur Muhammad Taraki (27–28 April 1978).

Kabul ❙ 1979 ❙ Afghan Civil War
When Afghanistan's Marxist President Nur Muhammad Taraki was killed by his former ally Hafizullah Amin (14 September), Russian General Sergei Sokolov invaded to support Soviet candidate Babrak Karmal. Fierce fighting in Kabul saw Amin killed and Karmal installed as puppet President. Russia then faced a brutal war until withdrawal in February 1989 (24–27 December 1979).

Kabul ❙ 1992 ❙ Afghan Civil War
Despite the withdrawal of Soviet troops in 1989, President Mohammad Najibullah held out with continued Russian aid against resurgent Mujahaden forces, which had already captured Khost. However, Kabul finally fell to a hard-fought rebel advance, ending the last Communist government of Afghanistan. Najibullah was executed four years later by the Taliban when they took Kabul (15 April 1992).

Kabul ❙ 1996 ❙ Afghan Civil War
With Afghanistan wracked by rival Mujahaden factions, Pakistani-backed Taliban Islamists took Kandahar late in 1995, then advanced on Kabul, defeating both warlord Gulbuddin Hekmatyar and Defence Minister Ahmad Shah Massud. The Taliban held the devastated city until they were driven out by the Northern Alliance and their British and American allies in November 2001 (September 1996).

Kabul ❙ 2001 ❙ Afghanistan War
The coalition of warlords known as the Northern Alliance captured Mazar-i-Sharif and other key centres in northern Afghanistan, then raced towards Kabul where the Taliban government had vowed to defend the capital at all cost. However, after losses in action outside the city, the Taliban abandoned Kabul and moved south towards their last remaining stronghold at Kandahar (12–13 November 2001).

Kabylie ❙ 1959 ❙ Algerian War
Having choked the flow of men and arms from Tunisia at the Frontier by mid-1958, General Maurice Challe launched 20,000 men on a massive offensive into the forbidding Kabylie Mountains, east of Algiers. The French destroyed the ALN strongholds, killing or capturing over 3,700 insurgents to secure a crushing military victory. However, the political war was ultimately lost (July–October 1959).

Kacanik ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)
See Kossovo

Kadasiya ❙ 636 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq
See Qadisiyya

Kadesh ❙ 1275 BC ❙ Egyptian-Hittite Wars
Ramses II of Egypt took a major expedition into northern Syria, where he ordered a large force against Hittites under Muwatalis at Kadesh, on the Orontes southwest of Hims. After an initial repulse for his advance guard, Ramses arrived to secure a decisive victory. Although the Hittites withdrew under siege into the city. Ramses eventually had to make peace and withdraw (trad date 1275 BC).

Kadesiah ❙ 636 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq
See Qadisiyya

Kadir ❙ 1751 ❙ Later Dutch Wars in the East Indies
See Jenar

Kadirganj ❙ 1751 ❙ Pathan War
See Qadirganj

Kaffa ❙ 1296 ❙ Venetian-Genoese Wars
Two years after Venice had taken the Genoese colony at Galata on the Bosphorus, Venetian Giovanni Soranza advanced into the Black Sea against the Genoese at Kaffa (modern Feodosiya), controlling the rich Crimean grain trade. Attacking with 25 galleys, Soranza seized the port and captured massive plunder. Kaffa was eventually returned by treaty to Genoese control.

Kaffa ❙ 1475 ❙ Genoese-Turkish War
While Turkey was attacking Venetian colonial territories in Greece and the Adriatic, Sultan Mehmed II sent Vizier Ahmad Gedik Pasha against the powerful Genoese colony at Kaffa (modern Feodosiya) in the eastern Crimea. A large Turkish fleet attacked the port and forced its surrender, followed by the fall of Azov, which ended the Genoese presence in the Black Sea (2–5 June 1475).

Kafir Qala ❙ 1818 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars
A large Persian army under Husayn Ali Mirza, son of Shah Fath Ali, approaching Herat was defeated by Afghan Vizier Fath Khan to the northwest at Kafir Qala (modern Kafir Islam). Shortly afterwards, however, Prince Kamran of Herat jealously blinded and killed the Vizier, whose brother Dost Muhammad soon drove Kamran's father Mahmud Shah out of Kabul and later seized the throne.

Kafr ❙ 1925 ❙ Druze Rebellion
After the Druze leader al-Atrash seized the town of Salkhad in the southeast of French Syria, a column of almost 200 Algerian and Syrian troops under Captain Normand set out from nearby Suwayda to rescue a downed aircrew. Ambushed just to the southeast at Kafr, Normand lost more than half his column killed and the survivors withdrew under siege to Suwayda (21 July 1925).

Kagera ❙ 1978 ❙ Tanzanian-Ugandan War
Ugandan President Idi Amin alleged Tanzanian interference in his country and sent forces into northwest Tanzania, where they seized the 700-square-mile Kagera Salient. Tanzanian troops quickly counter-attacked and sharp fighting expelled the Ugandans with costly civilian losses. Tanzania later invaded Uganda and drove Amin out of Kampala (31 October–27 November 1978).

Kagoshima ❙ 1587 ❙ Japan's Era of the Warring States
Japanese ruler Toyotomi Hideyoshi invaded Kyushu against Satsuma and advanced across the Sendaigawa towards Kagoshima, while other forces landed by sea to attack from the south. Kagoshima fell by storm and Shimazu Yoshihisa and his brother Yoshihiro surrendered. Hideyoshi also secured Kyushu before returning to Honshu in 1590 to conquer the Hojo at Odawara (July 1587).

Kagoshima ❙ 1863 ❙ British-Satsuma War

When the merchant Charles Richardson was killed at Kagoshima, Kyushu, British chargé Colonel Edward Neale demanded redress from Prince Shimazu Hisamitsu of Satsuma, then ordered Admiral Augustus Kuper to bombard Kagoshima. Kuper destroyed much of the city, but suffered heavy battle damage and withdrew to Yokohama, allowing Satsuma to claim victory (15 August 1863).

Kagoshima ❙ 1877 ❙ Satsuma Rebellion

Driven off from a costly siege of Kumamoto in central Kyushu in April, rebel Japanese Marshal Saigo Takamori faced a massive Imperial counter-offensive by Prince Arisugawa Taruhito and gradually fell back on Kagoshima, where he fought his way in to retake the city. However, he was soon forced to withdraw to nearby Shiroyama, where he made a bloody final stand (18 August 1877).

Kagul ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

General Pyotr Rumyantsev advanced deep into Turkish Moldavia along the Pruth and found himself between Turk and Tatar armies near Kagul, north of Galati. Moving rapidly forward he routed Ottoman Grand Vizier Halil Pasha, capturing his guns and baggage and forcing him back towards the Danube. Rumyantsev then turned to defeat the Tatars, driving them back to the Crimea (21 July 1770).

Kagul Lagoon ❙ 1574 ❙ Moldavian Rebellion

Determined to punish John the Brave of Moldavia, who had defeated an Ottoman force in April at Jiliste, Sultan Selim II sent a massive force under the Beyleyby of Rumelia, who beat the rebels near the mouth of the Danube at Kagul Lagoon, southeast of Reni. Deserted by his cavalry, John surrendered after three days. However, agreed terms were ignored and he was quartered (10–13 June 1574).

Kahan ❙ 1840 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

Sir John Keane took Ghazni (July 1839), then sent Captain Lewis Brown to secure the southern pass at Kahan, where he was besieged by Dodah Khan. A column sent back to Quetta under Lieutenant Walpole Clarke was massacred and, when Major Thomas Clibborn's relief column was repulsed at the Nufoosk Pass (31 August), Brown negotiated his safe passage (11 May–12 September 1840).

Kahlenberg ❙ 1683 ❙ Later Turkish-Habsburg Wars

See Vienna

Kaifeng ❙ 1126–1127 ❙ Jin-Song Wars

When the Jurchen secured Manchuria at the Songhua (1114), new Jin (Chin) Emperor Wanyan Wuqimai sent his nephew Wo Li Bu against the Song capital, Kaifeng. Emperor Qin Zong offered a massive indemnity and the siege was lifted. But it soon resumed and Kaifeng fell by storm, effectively ending the Northern Song Dynasty. Resistance then moved to Nanjing (January 1126–9 January 1127).

Kaifeng ❙ 1232–1233 ❙ Mongol Conquest of China

Renewed invasion of north China saw the Mongols Ogedai and Tolui (sons of Genghis Khan) defeat the Jin at Yuxian, then leave General Subetai to besiege the capital Kaifeng. When the Southern Song sent General Meng Hong to aid the Mongols, Emperor Ai Zong fled and later committed suicide. After the city was taken, the victors soon fell out and fought at Jiangling (8 April 1232–29 May 1233).

Kaifeng ❙ 1642 ❙ Manchu Conquest of China

With the Ming under assault on all sides, rebel leader Li Zicheng in the north took Nanyang (1641), then attacked Kaifeng. Twice repulsed, he launched a third massive siege. After diverting the Yellow River to isolate Kaifeng, dikes were cut and the city was inundated. Several hundred thousand starved or drowned and Li Zicheng withdrew. In 1644 he captured Beijing (May–October 1642).

Kaifeng ❙ 1948 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

One of the war's largest open battles to date saw more than 200,000 men under Communist General Chen Yi converge on Kaifeng, held by 250,000 Nationalists under Qiu Qingquan and Huang Bodao. Chen took Kaifeng (19 June), but when Chiang Kai-shek arrived with reinforcements, Chen had to withdraw. Chiang claimed victory, despite losing over 90,000 men (30 May–8 July 1948).

Kai-hsia ❙ 202 BC ❙ Chu-Han War

See Gaixia

Kaiping ❙ 1895 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

Determined to ease pressure on Japanese forces holding Haicheng in southern Manchuria, General Maresuke Nogi led a fresh offensive further west, advancing on 4,000 Chinese in well-built redoubts at Kaiping, west of Gai Xian. With a brilliant attack across a frozen river, Nogi seized the city in little more than two hours and the Chinese retreated north towards Yingkou (10 January 1895).

Kaiserslautern ❙ 1793 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

The Prussians of Karl Wilhelm Ferdinand Duke of Brunswick fell back before an advance by French General Louis Lazare Hoche and established themselves in a strong defensive position at Kaiserslautern, west of the Rhine. Hoche attacked with the Moselle army and was beaten back with heavy losses after three days (28–30 November 1793).

Kaiserslautern ❙ 1794 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In a fresh initiative on the Rhine, French General Jean Victor Moreau's new army met with some success until repulsed at Kaiserslautern by Prussian Marshal Richard von Mollendorf. However, Mollendorf failed to follow up and after French success at nearby Platzberg and Trippstadt, the city fell to a two-month siege. Moreau then went on to besiege Mainz (23 May–17 July 1794).

Kaitake ❙ 1864 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

Campaigning just south of New Plymouth, Patara Ruatakauri of the religio-military Hauhau built a strong fortified pa at Kaitake, near Oakura, which was shelled in December 1863 by Colonel Henry J. Warre. A few months later, with 420 regulars and militia, Warre bombarded and stormed the position. Another victory at Sentry Hill soon eased the threat to New Plymouth (25 March 1864).

Kaithal ❙ 1240 ❙ Wars of the Delhi Sultanate

Sultana Raziya succeeded her father Iltutmish as the only woman to occupy the throne of Delhi, but soon offended her nobles by favouritism for the Abyssinian slave, Yaqut. Despite marrying the rebel leader Altuniya to try and stem the revolt, she and her husband of just 12 days were defeated in battle at Kaithal, northwest of Karnal. Both were then executed (13 October 1240).

Kajwa ❙ 1659 ❙ War of the Mughal Princes

See Khajwa

Kajwa ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Khajwa

Kalanga ❙ 1814 ❙ British-Gurkha War

With British northern India threatened by Gurkha expansion west of Nepal, General Robert Gillespie (later Colonel Sebright Mawby) besieged the fortress of Kalanga, near Dehra Dun. Balbhadra Singh Thapa's garrison repulsed repeated assaults, inflicting heavy losses including Gillespie killed. However, after a month of bombardment the Gurkhas withdrew (31 October–30 November 1814).

Kalat ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

After Amir Shah Shuja of Afghanistan was restored following British victory at Ghazni, General Thomas Willshire and a small force marched against the Baluchi Mehrab Khan, who had hindered the British expedition. Willshire bombarded then stormed the powerful fortress of Kalat, in Baluchistan southwest of Quetta, killing the Khan and taking many prisoners (13 November 1839).

Kalighatta ❙ 972 ❙ Later Indian Dynastic Wars

Siyaka II of Malwa refused to pay allegiance to Khotigga of Rashtrakuta, who marched against the rebel and his kinsman Vamka of Vagada. Heavy fighting on the Narmada at Kalighatta saw Vamka killed before Siyaka won and plundered the capital Manyakheta (modern Malkhed). Rashtrakuta troops fought on nearby and Siyaka had to withdraw, but he had won independence for his Paramara Dynasty.

Kali Nadi ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Fategarh

Kaliningrad ❙ 1807 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (4th Coalition)

See Königsberg

Kalinjar ❙ 1631 ❙ Mughal-Ahmadnagar Wars

When Mughal commander Khan Jahan Lodi threatened to ally himself with Nizam Shah II of Ahmadnagar, Imperial forces defeated his rearguard at Sironj. In three days of battles near Kalinjar, south of Banda, Generals Abdallah Khan and Sayyid Muzaffar Khan defeated and killed the rebel and his sons. Ahmadnagar was destroyed two years later at Daulatabad (1–3 February 1631).

Kalisch ❙ 1706 ❙ 2nd "Great" Northern War

Augustus II—Elector of Saxony and deposed King of Poland—joined Russian Prince Alexander Menshikov in a fresh offensive against Charles XII of Sweden, defeating a small Swedish force under General Arvid Marderfeld in western Poland at Kalisch (modern Kalisz). Despite victory, Augustus was forced to make peace and recognise Stanislaus Leszcsynski as King (29 October 1706).

Kalisch ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russian Campaign)

As Napoleon Bonaparte's army withdrew west after the disastrous retreat from Moscow, Saxons under General Jean-Louis Reynier found themselves isolated in southern Poland following the withdrawal of their Prussian allies. Near Kalisch (modern Kalisz), west of Lodz, Reynier was defeated by Russian Baron Ferdinand von Winzeingerode and retired on Glogau (13 February 1813).

Kalka ❙ 1223 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

The Mongols Subetai and Jebei invaded Georgia for victory at the Kuban, then advanced to the Ukraine to meet a Russian–Kipchaq army under Princes Mstislav Romanovitch of Kiev and Mstislav Sviatoslavitch of Chernigov. At the Kalka (modern Kalmius) on the Sea of Azov, the Russians were destroyed with Mstislav of Kiev executed. Subetai later withdrew east after Jebei died (16 June 1223).

Kalka ❙ 1380 ❙ Russian-Mongol Wars

Faced by rebellious Russian Princes, the Mongol leader Mamai was defeated at Kulikovo, then was immediately challenged by his dynastic rival Toktamish, Khan of the White Horde. In battle at the Kalka (modern Kalmius) on the Sea of Azov, Mamai was defeated and Toktasmish, as Khan of the united Golden Horde, went on to suppress the Russian rebellion and burn Moscow.

Kalpi ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

With Jhansi captured (3 April), General Sir Hugh Rose defeated Tantia Topi at Kunch, then continued northeast towards the Rani of Jhansi at Kalpi. After an initial bombardment, a bold counter-offensive by the Rani's allies Rao Sahib and the Nawab of Banda surprised the British.

However, the rebels were defeated in heavy fighting and withdrew west towards Gwalior (19–23 May 1858).

Kalunga ❙ 1814 ❙ British-Gurkha War
See Kalanga

Kalyan ❙ 1682–1683 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars
As he advanced into western India, Mughal General Bahadur Khan defeated a Maratha army (28 November 1682) and seized Kalyan, on the Uhlas northeast of Bombay. A large Maratha counter-attack was repulsed in December, with commander Tukoji killed. The heaviest fighting (27 February 1683) saw the Marathas driven off with heavy losses, though the fort remained under blockade.

Kalyan ❙ 1780 ❙ 1st British-Maratha War
General Thomas Goddard marched northeast from Bombay, sending Captain Richard Campbell to surprise and capture Kalyan, which he held against a powerful Maratha counter-attack by Bajipant Joshi and Sakharampant Panase. At nearby Vithalwadi (24 May) a relief force under Colonel James Hartley routed the Marathas, who withdrew towards Malang-gad (10–15 May 1780).

Kamakura ❙ 1333 ❙ Genko War
Nitta Yoshisada secured victory for the Imperial cause at Kyoto (10 June), then switched sides to support Emperor Go-Daigo and marched on Kamakura, capital of Japanese Dictator Hojo Takatoki. Yoshisada seized the city in a brilliant attack and Takatoki and his followers committed mass seppuku. Go-Daigo regained his throne, but Ashikaga forces later recaptured Kamakura (5 July 1333).

Kamakura ❙ 1335 ❙ Ashikaga Rebellion
Following the restoration of Emperor Go-Daigo, Hojo forces rose in revolt in Kamakura and were suppressed by Ashikaga Takauji (March 1335). Hojo Tokiyuki (son of the later dictator Takatoki) then took the city by storm, expelling Ashikaga Tadayoshi (August 1335). Returning in force, Takauji defeated and killed Tokiyuki, but soon turned against the Emperor and seized Kyoto (September 1335).

Kamarej ❙ 1754 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession
Amid the struggle for control of Persia, Azad Khan Afghan of Azerbaijan captured Shiraz after defeating Regent Karim Khan Zand at Qomsheh, then drove him further southwest. In a defile at Kamarej, near Kazerun, Karim and Rostam Soltan of Khost ambushed and routed Azad's army under Fath Ali Khan Afshar. Azad had to abandon Shiraz and Karim also recaptured Isfahan (October 1754).

Kamenets Podolsk ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
Soon after the great Russian victory at Korsun, Marshals Georgi Zhukov and Ivan Konev tried another encirclement further west at Kamenets Podolsk, southeast of Lvov, where General Hans Hübe commanded 300,000 men of the First Panzer Army. Hübe broke out to the west and fought a brilliant defensive withdrawal to save his army, but died in an air crash (10 March–10 April 1944).

Kamieniec ❙ 1633 ❙ Polish-Tatar Wars
Despite defeat in the Ukraine at Sasowy Rog in July, Tatars under Abaza Mehmed Pasha advanced again and attacked Hetman Stanislas Koniecpolski in a strong position at Panowce, near Kamieniec. When his Moldavian and Walachian levees fled, Abaza Mehmed was defeated and withdrew. The following year Sultan Murad IV had him executed and sued for peace (22 October 1633).

Kamieniec ❙ 1672 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine
Sultan Mehmed IV invaded the Polish Ukraine to support Cossack rebels and sent Grand Vizier Ahmed Fazil Koprulu against Kamieniec (modern Kamenetz). Aided by Cossacks and Tatars, Ahmed seized the key fortress and weak King Michael Wisniowiecki agreed to a humiliating peace. In late 1673 Hetman John Sobieski rallied Poland to a great victory at Khotin (18–26 August 1672).

Kamina ❙ 1914 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

At the start of the war, Captain Frederick Bryant of the West African Frontier Force secured French aid from Dahomey and invaded Togo to seize the naval wireless station at Kamina. A sharp action at the Chra River, near Nuatja, cost the Allies 23 killed and 50 wounded before the Germans blew up the radio station and Governor Hans Von Döring surrendered Togoland (22–26 August 1914).

Kampala ❙ 1979 ❙ Tanzanian-Ugandan War

After Tanzania repulsed Ugandan aggression in the Kagera Salient, about 5,000 Tanzanians and 3,000 anti-Amin exiles invaded Uganda to overthrow President Idi Amin. As they advanced on Kampala, Libyan troops sent to assist Uganda were used to meet the heaviest attack and suffered costly losses just outside the capital. Kampala fell and Amin fled into exile (February–11 April 1979).

Kampar ❙ 1941–1942 ❙ World War II (Pacific)

Driven back from Jitra in western Malaya, the Indian 11th Division abandoned Ipoh (27 December) and retreated to Kampar under new commander Brigadier Archie Paris. Facing frontal attack by General Saburo Kawamura, and threatened in the flank by a fresh coastal landing, the British withdrew to Slim River, the last natural defence north of Johore (29 December 1941–2 January 1942).

Kanauj ❙ 648 ❙ Sino-Indian War

Following the death of Harsha Vardhana of Kanauj, his minister Arjuna usurped the throne of the North Indian kingdom and later attacked a Chinese delegation sent by Tang Emperor Taizong. Ambassador Wang Xuanze escaped, then returned with Nepalese and Tibetan troops, supported by Chinese cavalry. They besieged Kanauj, where Arjuna was defeated then taken in captivity to Chang'an.

Kanauj ❙ 916 ❙ Later Indian Dynastic Wars

In a remarkable military achievement by Rashtrakuta, Indra III took an army against Kanauj, the northern Imperial capital of the Pratiharas, where Mahipala I was defeated and the city was captured and plundered. While Kanauj was later recovered by Mahipala, aided by Chandella and other allies, the Pratihara Dynasty had begun its decline and eventually dwindled to no more than Kanauj itself.

Kanauj ❙ 1540 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

Afghan rebel Sher Khan, leading Indian-Muslim forces against the Mughal Humayun, beat Imperial forces at Chausa. He then pursued the Mughals up the Ganges Valley, where Humayun was again heavily defeated at Kanauj, southeast of modern Farrukhabad. Humayun fled to Persia for 15 years, leaving Sher Khan (later Sher Shah) to become Sultan of Delhi and effective ruler of the empire (17 May 1540).

Kanazawa ❙ 1087 ❙ Later Three Years War

Minamoto Yoshiie renewed war in northeast Japan, where he was repulsed by Kiyohara Iehira at Numa (1087). Reinforced by his brother Yoshimitsu, he then besieged Iehira and his uncle Takehira further north, at Kanazawa Stockade (modern Yokote in southern Akita). Iehira was eventually defeated and killed after a stubborn defence, ending the war and giving the Minamoto power in the east.

Kanchatzu ❙ 1937 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

Local Soviet forces occupied Kanchatzu Island in the Amur along the Manchurian border and Japan's Kwantung forces in puppet Manchukuo later bombarded and sank a Russian gunboat, killing 37 crew. While the Russians eventually agreed to withdraw, the so-called Amur Incident convinced them not to back down a year later at Changfukeng (19 June–3 July 1937).

Kanchi ▌ 610 ▌ Indian Dynastic Wars
See Pullalur

Kanchi ▌ 655 ▌ Indian Dynastic Wars
Following the death of Pulakesin II of Chalukya at Vatapi (642), the victorious Pallava occupied his capital until his bold young son Vikramaditya reasserted sovereignty and ousted the occupiers. He then invaded Pallava itself and in a remarkable military achievement, he defeated Narasimhavarman of Pallava and captured his strongly fortified capital, Kanchi (modern Kanchipuram).

Kanchi ▌ 731 ▌ Indian Dynastic Wars
See Vilande

Kanchi ▌ 740 ▌ Indian Dynastic Wars
Following up victory at Kanchi (731), Vikramaditya II of Chalukya again joined with Sripurusha of Ganga and invaded Pallava. The new King Nandivarman and his general Udaichandra suffered a decisive defeat. Vikramaditya then occupied and sacked Kanchi. He eventually withdrew and the declining Chalukya Empire was overthrown by the Rashtrakuta 12 years later at Khandesh.

Kanchi ▌ 1692 ▌ Mughal-Maratha Wars
During the siege of the Maratha fortress at Gingee, northwest of Pondicherry, Mughal General Zulfiqar Khan's Lieutenant Ali Mardan Khan was attacked by Santaji Ghorpade at Kanchi (modern Kanchipuram). When Ali Mardan led a bold counter-attack to protect Zulfiqar's rear, he was defeated and captured by Santaji's Marathas and was taken to Gingee for ransom (13 December 1692).

Kandahar ▌ 1508 ▌ Mughal-Uzbek Wars
When the Uzbek conqueror, Muhammad Shaybani Khan, seized Kandahar after victory at Maruchak (1507), he granted the city to Mukim Khan, son of the defeated Arghun Mughal Governor. However, Mukim was driven out by his Timurid rival, Babur of Kabul, who gave it to his brother Nasir Mirza. Shaybani returned to defeat Nasir and Babur did not recapture Kandahar until 1522.

Kandahar ▌ 1520–1522 ▌ Mughal Dynastic War
Determined to recover Kandahar in Afghanistan, on the vital southern trade route from India, the Mughal ruler Babur finally retook the city after a lengthy siege from Shah Beg of the Arghun Dynasty, who retired to Quetta. Babur's son Kamran held Kandahar against the Persians (1534–1536) before he finally lost it in 1545 to his brother Humayun and his Persian allies.

Kandahar ▌ 1558 ▌ Persian-Mughal Wars
Shah Tahmasp of Persia took advantage of the weak teenage Mughal Emperor Akbar, sending an army to besiege Kandahar, held by Shah Muhammad, an appointee of the Mughal Regent Bairam Khan. With Emperor Akbar unable to send aid, the strategic city of southern Afghanistan was forced to surrender to Persia and was not regained by the Mughals for almost 40 years.

Kandahar ▌ 1622 ▌ Persian-Mughal Wars
On campaign into southern Afghanistan, Shah Abbas of Persia laid siege to Kandahar, held for the Mughal Emperor Jahangir, who ill-advisedly prevented his son Shahjahan marching to relieve the city. Kandahar fell to Shah Abbas after a three-week siege and mining of the city walls. It was not recovered from the Persians for 15 years.

Kandahar ▌ 1637 ▌ Persian-Mughal Wars
During political unrest in Persia following the death of Shah Abbas, Ali Mardan Khan, Persian Governor of Kandahar, feared for his life and surrendered the southern Afghan city to the Mughals. A Persian army sent to retake Kandahar was defeated by Mughal forces of the Emperor Shahjahan. The city fell to Persia 12 years later and was never again ruled from the Mughal Empire.

Kandahar ❙ 1649 ❙ Persian-Mughal Wars

In response to a fresh Persian offensive in Afghanistan led personally by Shah Abbas, the Mughal Emperor Shahjahan sent his son Aurangzeb to relieve Kandahar. However, it fell before he arrived (11 February 1649). Supported by Chief Minister Sadullah Khan, Aurangzeb besieged the city, but lacked adequate artillery and had to withdraw in disgrace (May–5 September 1649).

Kandahar ❙ 1652 ❙ Persian-Mughal Wars

Having failed to recapture Kandahar from the Persian invaders in 1649, the Mughal Prince Aurangzeb and Chief Minister Sadullah Khan returned to Afghanistan to undertake a second siege. Although better equipped with heavy guns, Aurangzeb failed once more and was again forced to abandon his siege and withdraw (May–July 1652).

Kandahar ❙ 1653 ❙ Persian-Mughal Wars

The Mughal Prince Aurangzeb twice failed to recapture Kandahar from the Persian invaders and Emperor Shahjahan then sent his elder son Dara Shikoh to retake the key Afghan city. Like his brother before him, Dara Shikoh also failed in his father's military designs, withdrawing after an abortive five-month siege. The Mughals never again ruled in Kandahar (May–September 1653).

Kandahar ❙ 1711 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Determined to recover Kandahar from the Afghan rebel Mir Weis, Shah Husain of Persia sent Khosru Khan, Governor of Georgia, who defeated Weis and besieged Kandahar. The Georgian general insisted on unconditional surrender, but when the besiegers ran short of food, Weis counter-attacked to defeat and kill Khosru, along with almost his entire army.

Kandahar ❙ 1714 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

In a second attempt to recover Kandahar from the Afghan rebel Mir Weis, Shah Husain of Persia sent a fresh army under General Mohammad Rustam. Once again, Weis was defeated in the field, but when the Persians besieged Kandahar, Weis attacked and destroyed the besieging army. The Afghan leader remained as virtual ruler of Kandahar Province until he died a year later.

Kandahar ❙ 1737–1738 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Nadir Shah recaptured Herat to secure his position as Shah of Persia, then marched on Kandahar, defended by Mir Husayn Khan, brother of Mahmud. After a long siege, supported by the Abdalis, the town fell by storm and Mir Husayn became a leading general in Nadir's army. Nadir went on to capture Kabul, giving Persia effective control of Afghanistan (February 1737–24 March 1738).

Kandahar ❙ 1834 ❙ Afghan Wars of Succession

With Afghanistan threatened by Persian invasion, deposed Amir Shah Shujar attempted to recover his kingdom from Dost Muhammad. He attacked the key city of Kandahar, but was heavily defeated by Dost Muhammad's General Kohandil Khan and was driven off after a 54-day siege. Shah Shujar was not restored until five years later after British victory at Ghazni (May–29 June 1834).

Kandahar ❙ 1841–1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

While Akbar Khan (son of deposed Amir Dost Muhammad) besieged Kabul, other Afghans besieged Kandahar, defended by British General William Nott. The Afghans suffered heavy losses in sorties at Babi Wali Kotal, then withdrew after further losses in a large-scale assault on the fort. Nott later evacuated Kandahar and marched to Kabul (September 1841–8 August 1842).

Kandahar ❙ 1880 ❙ 2nd British-Afghan War

When Britain proclaimed Abdur Rahman as Amir of Afghanistan, his cousin Ayub Khan beat the British at Maiwand, then besieged General James Primrose at Kandahar. Following a march from Kabul, General Sir Frederick Roberts destroyed Ayub Khan's army outside Kandahar at Mazra, near Babi Wali Kotal, and Britain withdrew from Afghanistan (6 August–1 September 1880).

Kandahar ❙ 1881 ❙ Afghan Civil Wars

Following British withdrawal from Afghanistan in 1880, the rebel Ayub Khan made a renewed attempt to overthrow his cousin, Amir Abdur Rahman, and besieged Kandahar, where he had been routed a year earlier. Outside the walls of Kandahar the Amir personally defeated the rebel, who fled to Persia. Abdur Rahman then ruled for 20 years (27 July–22 September 1881).

Kandahar ❙ 2001 ❙ Afghanistan War

When Kabul fell, Taliban forces and the remnants of their government withdrew south to Kandahar, their last major stronghold and spiritual birthplace. Bombed from the air and besieged between Northern Alliance troops in the north and American and Allied forces to the south, Kandahar was forced to surrender, effectively ending the Taliban regime (25 November–7 December 2001).

Kandurcha ❙ 1391 ❙ Conquests of Tamerlane

See Kunduzcha

Kandy ❙ 1803 ❙ 1st British-Kandyan War

British Major-General Hay Macdowall invaded the Kingdom of Kandy, in central Ceylon (modern Sri Lanka), where he captured the capital and installed Muttusamy after King Sri Wikrama fled. Major Adam Davie's garrison was later attacked by Pilima Talauva. After Muttusamy was handed over then executed, the British force was destroyed and Davie died in captivity (January–June 1803).

Kandy ❙ 1815 ❙ 2nd British-Kandyan War

On a fresh invasion of Kandy, in central Ceylon, British General Sir Robert Brownrigg led a well-organised force against Molliguda, commanding the Sinhalese Royal troops. A brief campaign without any British battle losses then saw Brownrigg entered the deserted capital. King Sri Wikrama died in exile and the ancient Kingdom of Kandy came to an end (11 January–8 February 1815).

Kandy ❙ 1818 ❙ 3rd British-Kandyan War

Rebels attempting to restore the Kingdom of Kandy, in central Ceylon, led a successful guerrilla campaign, but suffered a major defeat in open battle while crossing the Mahivelli (16 July) and the rebellion collapsed. Rebels Keppitipola and Madugalla were executed and Kandyan Regent Pilimi Talauva was exiled. The successful British commander Sir Robert Brownrigg was created a Baronet.

Kangju ❙ 36 BC ❙ Wars of the Former Han

Xiongnu forces in northwest China split into two hordes (51 BC) and the Western horde under Zhizhi Chanyu attacked Han interests, then eventually withdrew to Kangju (Sogdiana). Han army officer Cheng Tang took a force to besiege Kangju, where Zhizhi was defeated and killed, bringing a period of stability in Central Asia. His claimed descendants were later known as the Kirghiz.

Kangwachai ❙ 1894 ❙ Sino-Japanese War

While defending strategic Haicheng in southern Manchuria, Japanese General Taro Katsura sent inadequate forces under General Naotoshi Oseko against Chinese General Song Qing at nearby Kangwachai. Song was eventually forced to withdraw when Oseko was reinforced, though the Japanese suffered about 400 casualties or 10 percent—their highest ratio of losses in the war (19 December 1894).

Kankar ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

As British forces advanced on Lucknow, Colonel Thomas Seaton determined to attack gathering rebel forces threatening the Doab. A night march northwest from Fategarh with 1,000 infantry and 300 cavalry saw Seaton surprise mutineers under Tej Singh near Aliganj at Kankar. The dawn attack caused over 250 rebel casualties and dispersed the planned invasion (7 April 1858).

Kankrauli ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

One week after defeat at Sanganer, the exhausted Gwalior rebels under Tantia Topi attempted to make a stand behind the Banas River, north of Udaipur at Kankrauli. Fording the river under fire, British forces led by General Henry Gee Roberts routed the rebels. However, Brigadier William Parke pursued weakly and the rebels escaped across the swollen Chambal into Jhalwar (14 August 1858).

Kankroli ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Kankrauli

Kano ❙ 1903 ❙ British Conquest of Northern Nigeria

When British Resident Captain C. W. Moloney was murdered in the north at Keffi (3 October 1902), Commissioner Frederick Lugard sent Colonel William Morland with 40 white officers and 800 African troops against the Emirate of Kano. Fulani forces tried to defend Kano, but heavy shelling smashed its gates and the city fell. The British then marched via Rawiya to Sokoto (3 February 1903).

Kanpur ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Cawnpore

Kanwah ❙ 1527 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

See Khanua

Kao-p'ing ❙ 954 ❙ Wars of the Five Dynasties

See Gaoping

Kapain ❙ 1837 ❙ Boer-Matabele War

On a second expedition to avenge Boer defeat at Vegkop in late 1836, Andries Potgieter and Piet Uys led over 300 men against Mzilikazi of the Matabele, who had escaped defeat at Mosega (January 1837). An assault on his camp to the north at Kapain, near Zeerust, saw the Matabele defeated with 400 killed. Mzilikazi and Mkhalipi dispersed north across the Limpopo (4–12 November 1837).

Kapolna ❙ 1849 ❙ Hungarian Revolutionary War

After defeating the Hungarians at Schwechat and Mór in late 1848, Austrian Field Marshal Alfred Windischgratz captured Budapest, then faced advancing Nationalists further east under General Henry Dembinski. An indecisive action at Kapolna, near Eger, saw General Franz von Schlick force the rebels to withdraw. Dembinski was then replaced by General Artur Gorgey (26–27 February 1849).

Kapotai ❙ 1845 ❙ 1st New Zealand War

Repulsed at Puketutu in New Zealand's far north (8 May), Colonel William Hulme withdrew to Auckland, leaving command to Major Cyprian Bridge, who took 200 regular troops and 100 friendly Maoris to attack a pa (fortified village) at Kapotai, on the Waikare just south of Kororareka. After fierce fighting, with two friendlies killed, the pa was abandoned and burned (15 May 1845).

Kappel ❙ 1531 ❙ Swiss Religious Wars

Amid open warfare between Catholics and Protestants in Switzerland, a large Catholic army marched on Zurich. Ten miles to the south at Kappel, a heavily outnumbered Protestant force was routed, the dead including the great Reformation leader Ulrich Zwingli. Following a further Protestant loss at Zug (24 October) Switzerland was permanently divided along religious lines (11 October 1531).

Kapyong ❙ 1951 ❙ Korean War

As part of their Spring Offensive, Chinese troops attacked south across the Imjin towards Seoul and further east towards Kapyong. While Commonwealth and South Korean forces had to withdraw in the face of massive assaults, the Communists failed to break through. A subsequent failed assault further east at the No Name Line ended the last major Chinese offensive (23–25 April 1951).

Karabagh ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Ghoaine

Karachi ❙ 1971 ❙ 3rd Indo-Pakistan War

At the start of the war, Indian missile boats under Commodore Babru Bahan Yadav attacked the Pakistani port of Karachi. The night assault saw a large Pakistani destroyer sunk with 200 men lost, and another badly damaged, as well as a minesweeper and a merchant ship sunk, plus massive devastation to the port and oil installations. A second attack four days later caused further destruction (4–5 December 1971).

Karakilise ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

Turkish General Abdul Kerim secured victory north of Lake Van at Malazgirt (26 July), then continued north and took Karakilise, southwest of Sarikamish, before Russian commander Nikolai Yudenich counter-attacked with 20,000 men under General Nikolai Baratov. Very heavy fighting saw the Turks defeated with about 10,000 casualties and another 6,000 captured (5–8 August 1915).

Karakorum ❙ 1301 ❙ Mongol Dynastic Wars

After Kubilai Khan conquered China and moved his capital to Beijing, his cousin Kaidu of Turkestan (grandson of Ogadei) claimed the Mongol throne and repeatedly attempted to capture Karakorum, in Mongolia. Kaidu was repulsed by Kubilai's General Bayan in 1277 and 1289 and finally (after Kubilai's death), Kaidu was defeated in September 1301 near Karakorum and was killed in flight.

Karakose ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Caucasus Front)

See Karakilise

Karala ❙ 1898 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See Omdurman

Karama ❙ 1968 ❙ Arab-Israeli Border Wars

In response to Palestinian infiltration, Israeli troops and tanks crossed the Jordan to attack the Fatah base at Karama, northeast of Jericho. Palestinian forces suffered very heavy losses before the invaders were driven off by the Jordanian army. This highly mythologized action was claimed as a decisive Arab victory and led directly to Yasser Arafat becoming leader of Palestine (21 March 1968).

Karari ❙ 1898 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See Omdurman

Karbala ❙ 680 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

During the war of succession following the death of the first Umayyad Caliph Mu'awiya (May 680), a revolt was raised against his son and successor, Yazid I, by Hussain, grandson of the Prophet Mohammed and son of the former Caliph Ali. Hussain was defeated and killed at Karbala, on the Euphrates, where his tomb is still one of the most revered Shi'ite shrines (10 October 680).

Karbala ❙ 749 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

In rebellion against the declining Umayyad Caliphs, supporters of Abdul Abbas (grandson of the Prophet's cousin al-Abbas) revolted under the leader Abu Muslim. On the Euphrates at Karbala, the rebel General Kahtaba defeated the army of Merwan II under General Hubaira, though Kahtaba was killed. Soon afterwards in Kufa, Abdul Abbas proclaimed himself Caliph (27–28 August 749).

Karditsa ❙ 1948 ❙ Greek Civil War

While insurgent forces attacked in northern Greece, further south on the Plain of Thessaly, Karagiorgis and about 6,000 troops, including many women, attacked and occupied Karditsa. Facing massive government reinforcements, Karagiorgis pulled out with huge quantities of loot, suffering badly under air attack as he withdrew. He attacked again a month later at Karpenision (11–14 December 1948).

Karee Siding ❙ 1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

With the Boers driven out of Bloemfontein after Driefontein (10 March), General Charles Tucker's infantry division attacked a position at Kareehalte, on the railway 18 miles to the northeast. Tucker lost over 180 casualties in a costly action before the Boers were forced to withdraw. However, two days later a Boer raid further east secured a decisive victory at Sannah's Post (29 March 1900).

Karelia ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Europe)

The so-called Continuation War saw Finnish commander Carl Mannerheim take advantage of the German invasion of Russia to resume hostilities against the Soviets. Vyborg was recaptured (27 August) and, within two months, all territory in the Karelian Isthmus lost in the Winter War had been restored. Finnish forces then supported the German siege of Leningrad (25 June–2 September 1941).

Karelian Isthmus ❙ 1939 ❙ Russo-Finnish War

See Mannerheim Line

Karikal ❙ 1760 ❙ Seven Years War (India)

In the wake of British victory at Wandewash, in southeast India (22 January), Colonel Joseph Smith was sent south to join Major George Monson besieging Karikal, north of Negapatam. Several months later commander Pierre Renault was forced to surrender France's second most important local seaport. Renault was subsequently court-martialled and cashiered (February–5 April 1760).

Kariz ❙ 1719 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

See Herat

Karkal ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

See Kagul

Karkar ❙ 854 BC ❙ Early Assyrian Wars

See Qarqar

Karkuk ❙ 1733 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

Regent Nadir Kuli (later Nadir Shah) resolved to recover land ceded to the Turks by former Shah Tahmasp II and won a victory outside Baghdad, then invested the city. However, a massive relief army of 80,000 men under Topal Osman Pasha approached from the north and, near the Tigris at Karkuk, Nadir suffered a decisive defeat. Nadir had his revenge at Leilan in November (19 July 1733).

Karnal ❙ 1739 ❙ Persian Invasion of India

At the peak of Persian expansion, Emperor Nadir Shah invaded Mughal India and followed victory at Jamrud by crossing the Indus with a reported 100,000 men. West of Delhi at Karnal, Mughal Emperor Muhammed Shah was routed, with perhaps 20,000 killed, and cavalry commander Saadat Khan captured. Nadir restored Muhammed and returned to Persia with massive booty (13 February 1739).

Karo Pass ❙ 1904 ❙ British Invasion of Tibet

With British and Tibetan forces stalemated at Gyantse, Colonel Herbert Brander took a column 50 miles northeast against 3,000 Tibetans defending the narrow Karo Pass at 18,500 feet. In one of the highest actions ever fought, Brander's men climbed the steep walls and fired down on the Tibetans, who were driven out with heavy losses. Brander then returned to Gyantse (6 May 1904).

Karpenision ❙ 1823 ❙ Greek War of Independence

As Mustai Pasha led about 4,000 Turks and Catholic Albanians to reinforce the siege of Missolonghi, his vanguard under Djelaleddin Bey was surprised in mountains just north of Karpenision by Marcos Botzaris and just 350 Greeks. When Botzaris was killed, his brother Kosta completed the victory, inflicting heavy Turkish casualties, though Mustai continued on to Anatoliko (21 August 1823).

Karpenision ❙ 1949 ❙ Greek Civil War

Soon after rebel success in Thessaly at Karditsa, Karagiorgis turned south and stormed the mountain town of Karpenision. A counter-attack was driven off—the only time insurgents held a major town against government forces—and General Ketseas was relieved. Facing fresh attack by General Thrasyvoulos Tsakalotos, Karagiorgis withdrew with heavy losses (19 January–9 February 1949).

Kars ❙ 1745 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars of Nadir Shah

Determined on a fresh invasion of Persia, Sultan Murad IV assembled a reported 100,000 men at Kars in northeastern Turkey under Yeghen Mohammed Pasha. In a four-day battle nearby, Nadir Shah destroyed the Turks, who fled after murdering their commander. Murad finally made peace with Persia, but Nadir Shah was assassinated in June 1747 and his empire collapsed (11 August 1745).

Kars ❙ 1828 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

While the main Russian army crossed the Danube against Turkey in support of Greek independence, General Count Ivan Paskevich advanced into the Caucasus against Emin Pasha at Kars, in northeast Turkey. The fortress fell by storm after a heavy bombardment, yielding valuable military stores and cannon. Paskevich then immediately marched against Akhaltsikhe (5–6 July 1828).

Kars ❙ 1854 ❙ Crimean War

See Kürük-Dar

Kars ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War

Russian General Mikhail Muraviev marched into Armenia where he besieged Kars, defended by Turks under General Sir William Fenwick Williams. While a Russian assault was repulsed with very heavy losses (29 September), a Turkish relief force marching via the Ingur was sent too late and the starving fortress surrendered. However, Russia soon sued for peace (15 July–26 November 1855).

Kars ❙ 1877 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars

As he advanced in the Caucasus, Russian Grand Duke Michael gained a valuable victory at Aladja Dagh over the Turks, who then withdrew under siege to the nearby fortress of Kars. General Mikhail Loris-Melikov stormed the fortress in a brilliant night-time assault and next day Hussein Pasha surrendered about 15,000 prisoners and 300 guns (17–18 November 1877).

Kartarpur ❙ 1635 ❙ Early Mughal-Sikh Wars

On campaign against the Sikhs of Guru Hargobind, a Mughal force under Painde Khan laid siege to Kartarpur, north of Jullundar, defended by Bhai Bidhi Chand, supported by the Guru and his son Baba Gurdita. The Mughals were heavily repulsed, with the dead including the leading commanders Qutab Khan of Jullundar and Kale Khan, brother of Mukhli Khan, killed just a year earlier at Amritsar.

Kartosuro ❙ 1705 ❙ Dutch Wars in the East Indies

Dutch Councillor Herman de Wilde intervened in a Javanese war of succession, leading a large force of Europeans and Javanese to support Pangeran Pugar against his nephew, Amangkurat III. Near Kartosuro, west of Surakarta, Amangkurat was defeated and fled to Bangil, in eastern Java. Pugar was enthroned as Pakubuwana, ceding the Dutch enormous trade and territorial gains (August 1705).

Karuse ❙ 1270 ❙ Early Wars of the Teutonic Knights

After a disputed succession in Lithuania and the murder of Mindaugus (who beat the Livonian knights at Durbe in 1260), Duke Traidenis of Lithiuania sent a large force against the knights in modern western Estonia. In battle near Karuse, northeast of Virtsu, Livonian Master Otto Von Lutterberg was among more than 50 knights killed. Traidenis won again in 1279 at Aizkraulke (16 February 1270).

Kasama ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

Just weeks after inconclusive action in Mozambique after Mahiwa, Colonel Paul von Lettow-Vorbeck re-entered German East Africa and skirted Lake Nyasa to seize Kasama in Northern Rhodesia. In the reputed last action of the war, the German fought a sharp skirmish with British Major Edward Hawkins the day after Armistice in Europe. He surrendered two weeks later (12 November 1918).

Kasegaum ❙ 1774 ❙ Maratha Wars of Succession

At war with Raghunath Rao, who had murdered his nephew Narayan Rao, the Maratha Ministers at Poona sent General Trimbak Rao Pethe to protect Narayan Rao's widow at Purandar. In a surprise attack near Kasegaum, south of Pandharpur, Raghunath utterly routed Pethe, who died of wounds. The usurper was deposed a year later after defeat at Adas (26 March 1774).

Kasemark ❙ 1627 ❙ 2nd Polish-Swedish War

In a fresh offensive to support his siege of Danzig in Polish Prussia, Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden attacked Polish commander Stanislas Koniecpolski 15 miles to the southeast, on the Vistula at Kasemark (Keizmark). Wounded in a risky river crossing at night, Gustavus withdrew. A renewed attack six weeks later secured Kasemark and tightened the siege of Danzig (22–23 May & 4 July 1627).

Kasganj ❙ 1750 ❙ Pathan War

A massive offensive in northern India against Safdar Jang, the Mughal Wazir of Delhi, saw the Pathan leader Ahmad Khan Bangesh defeat the Wazir's army at Farrukhabad. He then meet the Wazir himself a month later to the northwest at Kasganj. With the Wazir severely wounded and his army completely defeated, the Pathans then sacked Lucknow and besieged Allahabad (12 September 1750).

Kasganj ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny

Colonel Thomas Seaton heading a well-equipped advance against rebel forces, marched southeast from Delhi to Aligarh, where he left his convoy, then continued east towards Kasganj, joined by reinforcements from Bulandshahr. Northwest of Kasganj at Gangiri the rebels were heavily defeated and fled. Seaton seized Kasganj and pursued the mutineers north towards Patiala (14 December 1857).

Kashgar ❙ 1218 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

In a prelude to his offensive in the west, Genghis Khan sent his son Jebei into Chinese Turkestan against Kuchlug of the Naiman, who had escaped to the Kara Khitai after defeat at the Irtysh and later usurped the throne. Pursued south of Lake Balkash, Kuchlug was defeated near the caravan city of Kashgar, then fled south towards the Pamir, where he was eventually captured and beheaded.

Kashgil ❙ 1883 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

See El Obeid

Kashlyk ❙ 1582 ❙ Russian Conquest of Siberia

To protect Russia's trade in western Siberia, Cossack leader Yermak Timofeyevich took fewer than 1,000 men against the Tatar Khanate of Sibir, where Khan Kuchum was defeated and driven out of his capital at Kashlyk (also called Sibir or Isker), near modern Tobolsk. Although Timofeyevich was killed a few years later in an ambush, the conquest of Siberia continued unabated (October 1582).

Kasos ❙ 1824 ❙ Greek War of Independence

After Ottoman forces secured Crete, Ismail Djebel Akhdar sailed east with 3,000 Albanian troops under Hussein Bey Djertili to attack the nearby pirate island of Kasos. In a terrible massacre, about 500 men of military age were killed and over 50 ships were seized, while 2,000 women and children were sold as slaves in Alexandria. Weeks later Psara was also devastated (19 June 1824).

Kassassin ❙ 1882 ❙ Arabi's Egyptian Rebellion

When War Minister Arabi Pasha attempted to assert Egyptian sovereignty, British General Sir Garnet Wolseley landed at the canal and marched west from Ismailia through Tel-el-Maskhuta. Advance units led by General Sir Gerald Graham and Colonel Sir Russell Baker beat the Egyptians at Kassassin Lock near Mahsama and Wolseley continued towards Tel-el-Kebir (28 August 1882).

Kassel ❙ 1762 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Driving the French south towards the Rhine after victory at Lutterberg (23 July), Duke Ferdinand of Brunswick suffered a costly check at Amoneburg before returning to northern Hesse to besiege the key city of Kassel, which he had left under blockade. After two weeks the French garrison was forced to surrender and a few days later the war came to an end (16 October–1 November 1762).

Kasserine ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

American General Lloyd Fredenhall landed in North Africa during Operation Torch, then advanced into southern Tunisia, where he was surprised and routed at the Kasserine Pass by German Panzer units under Field Marshal Erwin Rommel. Fredenhall suffered severe losses in men and tanks and was dismissed, but the Americans soon struck back at El Guettar (14–22 February 1943).

Kastel ❙ 1948 ❙ Israeli War of Independence

Jewish forces under Uzi Narkiss and Ytzak Rabin were determined to open the vital road to Tel Aviv and attacked the strategic town of Kastel, just five miles west of Jerusalem. A week of intense fighting saw the hilltop stronghold change hands several times before the charismatic Arab commander Abdul Khader Husseini was killed. His followers then withdrew (2–9 April 1948).

Kastoria ❙ 1948 ❙ Greek Civil War

With his army saved at Grammos, insurgent Markos Vaphiadis soon re-entered Greece from Albania and attacked Kastoria, where government forces fled then suffered continuing heavy losses. Taking command, Thrasyvoulos Tsakalotos bought up government reinforcements and finally secured the city. However, his army was too exhausted to take the offensive (29 August–14 November 1948).

Kastrikum ❙ 1799 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (2nd Coalition)

See Castricum

Katalgarh ❙ 1815 ❙ British-Gurkha War

Determined to curb Gurkha expansion west of Nepal, Colonel William Gardner invaded the Kumaun and circled north towards Almorah, while Captain Hyder Hearsey in the south seized Champawat then besieged nearby Katalgarh. Just to the east at Khilpati, Gurkha commander Hasti Dal surprised and routed the British and Hearsey was captured wounded as his men fled (2 April 1815).

Katamanso ❙ 1826 ❙ 1st British-Ashanti War

See Dodowa

Katar ❙ 1008 ❙ Eastern Muslim Dynastic Wars

See Balkh

Katia (1st) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

In order to protect their position on the Suez Canal, British forces began to push a railway east into the Sinai and established a strong position at Katia (Qatia). A sudden Turkish attack drove the British out with costly losses, though reinforcements soon recovered the railhead. Katia was lost again three months later to a fresh Turkish advance, this time stopped further west at Romani (23 April 1916).

Katia (2nd) ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Middle East)

See Romani

Katikara ❙ 1863 ❙ 2nd New Zealand War

Resumed warfare around New Plymouth saw a nine-man military escort ambushed and killed to the southwest on the disputed Tataramaika block after which General Duncan Cameron led a large force, supported by artillery, to attack the fortified pa on the nearby Katikara. After heavy shelling the Maoris were driven out with the bayonet. The British won again in October at Poutoko (4 June 1863).

Katra ❙ 1774 ❙ Rohilla War
See Miranpur Katra

Katshanik ❙ 1915 ❙ World War I (Balkan Front)
See Kossovo

Katwa ❙ 1742 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

Raghuji Bhonsle directed a Maratha invasion of Bengal, sending Bhaskar Pandit with 12,000 horsemen, who captured Katwa (modern Katoya) on the Bhagirathi north of Calcutta (May 1742) and also occupied Hooghly. However, Mughal Nawab Ali Vardi Khan eventually led a brilliant attack downriver on the Maratha camp at Katwa and drove them out of Bengal (17 September 1742).

Katwa ❙ 1745 ❙ Later Mughal-Maratha Wars

Three years after his failed invasion of Bengal, the Maratha Raghuji Bhonsle occupied Orissa and captured Cuttack, then led 20,000 horsemen into Bengal and sacked Murshidabad. But Mughal Nawab Ali Vardi Khan once again beat the Marathas and turned them back at Katwa (modern Katoya), on the Bhagirathi north of Calcutta. In 1747, Ali Vardi defeated yet another invasion at Burdwan.

Katwa ❙ 1763 ❙ Bengal War

When Nawab Mir Kasim of Bengal destroyed a British force at Patna (25 June) he faced a British column under Major Thomas Adams, who had been sent to restore rival Nawab Mir Jafar. Near the fortress of Katwa, on the Bhagirathi north of Calcutta, Adams defeated and killed Mir Kasim's General Mohammed Taki Shah. He then advanced against Mir Kasim himself at Gheria (19 July 1763).

Katzbach ❙ 1813 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (War of Liberation)

Following defeat at Lützen and Bautzen in May, Prussia and Russia determined to attack Napoleon Bonaparte's lieutenants. General Gebhard von Blucher turned on Marshal Jacques Macdonald, who had unwisely pursued him into Silesia. After a repulse at Lowenberg, the Prussians counter-attacked on the Katzbach at Bremberg, south of Liegnitz, to inflict a costly defeat (26 August 1813).

Kauhajoki ❙ 1808 ❙ Napoleonic Wars (Russo-Swedish War)

Continuing the offensive against Russia's invasion of central Finland, Swedish General Georg von Dobeln helped capture Lapuu, southeast of Vasa (14 July), then continued the advance towards Kauhajoki, where he met a greatly superior Russian force under General Vasily Schepeljeff. A decisive attack forced the Russians to withdraw, but they soon resumed the offensive (10 August 1808).

Kauthal ❙ 1367 ❙ Vijayanagar-Bahmani Wars

Muhammad Shah of Bahmani invaded Vijayanagar in southern India and marched on Adoni. At Kauthal on the Tungabhadra, in the claimed first battle in India to see artillery used, he defeated King Bukka Rai I and killed Hindu commander Mallinatha. Bukka fled to Vijayanagar and accepted a Muslim peace after Muhammad Shah reputedly massacred tens of thousands of Hindu civilians.

Kaveripak ❙ 1752 ❙ 2nd Carnatic War

Two months after taking Conjeeveram in eastern Madras, Britain's Robert Clive was ambushed at Kaveripak, on the River Palar, by Raza Sahib, son of French-appointed Nawab Chanda Sahib, marching to recover Arcot. In a moonlight counter-attack, Clive surprised and routed his enemy, killing 50 French and 300 sepoys and capturing nine guns and many prisoners (28 February 1752).

Kawasaki ❙ 1058 ❙ Earlier Nine Years War

Following victory over the rebellious Abe Clan at Torinomi, in northeast Japan (1057), Imperial Governor Minamoto Yoriyoshi attacked Abe Sadato at Kawasaki, in Iwate east of Ichinoseki. Yoriyoshi's undermanned force suffered a sharp defeat and had to withdraw. The war was suspended for four years until he was heavily reinforced and renewed his campaign at Komatsu.

Kawkareik ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Burma-India)

At the start of the Japanese invasion of Burma, General Hiroshi Takeuchi crossed the densely forested border from Thailand and attacked Anglo-Indian forces at Kawkareik. Amid a breakdown of communication and confused night fighting, Brigadier John "Jonah" Jones fell back to Martaban. The Japanese then advanced west towards Moulmein (20–22 January 1942).

Kay ❙ 1759 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

Count Pyotr Soltikov regrouped after Russia's defeat at Zorndorf (August 1758) and resumed the offensive on the Oder, where he was unwisely attacked at Kay, west of Zullichau, by a heavily outnumbered Prussian force under General Richard von Weddell. The Prussians lost over 6,000 men and Soltikov's Russians advanced on Frankfurt to join the Austrians at Kunersdorf (23 July 1759).

Kayseri ❙ 1511 ❙ Turko-Persian War in Anatolia

Encouraged by Shah Ismail I of Persia, the Safavid preacher Shah Kulu raised rebellion among the Turkomans of Anatolia against Ottoman Sultan Bayazid II, who sent a large army under Grand Vizier Hadim Ali and Prince Ahmed. At Kayseri, in central Anatolia, the rebels were crushed after Shah Kulu was killed. The Safavids were defeated again in 1514 at Chaldiran (August 1511).

Kayseri ❙ 1624 ❙ Anatolian Rebellion

When Governor Abaza Mehmed Pasha of Anatolia rebelled against Sultan Murad IV, he faced a large Ottoman army under Grand Vizier Cerkes Mehmed Pasha. In central Anatolia at Kayseri, Abaza Mehmed was defeated, though he was later restored. Despite further failed revolts in 1627 and 1628, the rebel was again pardoned and his men were absorbed into the army (5 September 1624).

Kazan ❙ 1487 ❙ Russia's Volga Wars

Duke Ivan III of Moscow intervened in a disputed succession in the Mongol Khanate of Kazan, despatching a large force under Daniil Dimitrievich Kholmsky to support Mehmet Amin against Ali Khan. After a failed sortie, Ali Khan withdrew under siege and later surrendered the city. Mehmet was installed as Khan and Moscow secured a virtual vassal in the Crimea (18 May–9 July 1487).

Kazan ❙ 1552 ❙ Russia's Volga Wars

Following three unsuccessful attacks on the middle Volga Khanate of Kazan, Russian Tsar Ivan IV took a large force against the Mongol capital. Kazan fell after two months siege by land and water, followed by the massacre of a reputed 60,000 inhabitants. Christianity was imposed and Russia advanced downriver towards Astrakhan (20 August–20 October 1552).

Kazan ❙ 1774 ❙ Pugachev Rebellion

Despite defeat at Tatishchevo in March, Cossack rebel Emelyan Pugachev stormed and burned the middle Volga city of Kazan, defended by Governor Yakov Illarionovich von Brandt. The same day, a small relief army under Colonel Ivan Michelson retook the city. When Pugachev attacked again two days later, his force was destroyed, with 2,000 casualties and 5,000 prisoners (12–14 July 1774).

Kazan ❙ 1918 ❙ Russian Civil War

Former Czech prisoners of war seized Ekaterinburg for the counter-revolution (25 July), then continued west towards Kazan. An important strategic victory saw troops under Russian Colonel Vladimir Kappel and Czech Colonel Svec capture the city, along with Russia's State gold reserve. Kazan was retaken a month later and the Czechs were soon routed at Samara (6 August 1918).

Kazanlik ❙ 1878 ❙ Russo-Turkish Wars
See Senova

Kazima ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq
See Hafir, Iraq

Kazzaz ❙ 1756 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

Amid struggle for control of Persia, Regent Karim Khan Zand faced a fresh offensive west of Isfahan by Mohammad Hasan Khan of Qajar. At Kazzaz, near Kashan, Karim's General Mohammad Khan Zand was decisively defeated and captured and Mohammad Hasan quickly occupied Isfahan. The great Zand general was later killed after escaping from captivity (27 March 1756).

Kearsage ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (High Seas)
See Cherbourg

Keelung ❙ 1884 ❙ Sino-French War
See Chilung

Kehl ❙ 1796–1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

Driven back to the Rhine by Archduke Charles Louis of Austria after defeat at Emmendingen, French General Jean Victor Moreau soon sent some of his force under General Louis Desaix across the river. Desaix then defended the Rhine town of Kehl for a remarkable three months before capitulating to Austrian General Maximilian Latour (28 October 1796–10 January 1797).

Kellogg's Grove ❙ 1832 ❙ Black Hawk Indian War

Following a futile advance on Apple River Fort, east of Galena in northwest Illinois, the Sauk Chief Black Hawk clashed next day at Kellogg's Grove with Major John Dement's Company. Unlike Major Isaiah Stillman at Rock River, Dement fought back bravely and after losses on both sides, including two of Black Hawk's Chiefs killed, the Indians withdrew to their camp (25 June 1832).

Kelly's Ford (1st) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Campaigning on the Rappahannock towards Culpeper, Virginia, Union General William Averell led almost 3,000 men across Kelly's Ford. In a largely cavalry action, heavily outnumbered Confederate General Fitzhugh Lee engineered a brilliant counter-attack and the Union forces fell back. A few weeks later Lee supported victory further south at Chancellorsville (17 March 1863).

Kelly's Ford (2nd) ❙ 1863 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Rappahannock Station

Kemmel ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Western Front)

German commander Erich von Ludendorff broke open the Allied front in Flanders on the Lys, but after retaking Messines Ridge his advance stalled and French reinforcements secured Kemmel Ridge, south of Ypres. While German Alpine troops then boldly stormed and seized the strategic ridge, further attacks failed and the German offensive was abandoned (17–19 & 25–29 April 1918).

Kemmendine ❙ 1824 ❙ 1st British-Burmese War

When Britain declared war on Burma, General Sir Archibald Campbell secured Rangoon then sent forces against the nearby fortress of Kemmendine. After an initial repulse, which cost 120 British dead, a second assault secured the fortress. It later came under attack in November and held out under siege against the all-out Burmese attack on Rangoon (3 & 10 June 1824).

Kempen ❙ 1642 ❙ Thirty Years War (Franco-Habsburg War)

French General Jean-Baptiste Guébriant supported the Swedish victory at Wolfenbüttel (29 June 1641), then started back towards the Rhine with the Army of Weimar. Just west of the Rhine near Crefeld, between Kempen and Hulst, he defeated and captured Imperial General William von Lamboy. Soon afterwards Guébriant was created a Marshal of France (16 January 1642).

Kempten ❙ 1525 ❙ German Peasants' War

Weeks after destroying a rebel army at Königshofen, Georg Truchsess von Waldburg marched south against about 23,000 peasants around Kempten, southwest of Munich. Many rebel leaders surrendered after a massive bombardment and further fighting forced the remainder to also give up. About 20 leaders were executed, ending the war in Franconia and Swabia (19–25 July 1525).

Kéniéra ❙ 1882 ❙ Franco-Mandingo Wars

Mandingo leader Samory Touré besieging the French-allied city of Kéniéra, in Upper Guinea, faced a rash attack by hugely outnumbered force under Colonel Gustave Borgnis-Desbordes. In his first action against European troops, Samory was driven out by French artillery and Kéniéra was relieved. The following year Borgnis-Desbordes led a pre-emptive attack on Bamako (26 February 1882).

Kenilworth ❙ 1265 ❙ 2nd English Barons' War

After Henry III was beaten by Simon de Montfort Earl of Leicester at Lewes (14 May 1264), Prince Edward gathered a powerful army on the Severn, between the Earl and his son Simon the Younger advancing from London. Edward routed the younger de Montfort in a surprise attack near Coventry at Kenilworth and three days later he defeated and killed the Earl at Evesham (1 August 1265).

Kennesaw Mountain ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Union commander William T. Sherman advanced through Georgia against General Joseph E. Johnston, he won at Kolb's Farm (22 June), then attacked the nearby main Confederate position on Kennesaw Mountain, northwest of Marietta. A rash frontal assault by Sherman was repulsed with over 2,000 men lost, but Johnston eventually withdrew to defend Atlanta at Peachtree Creek (27 June 1864).

Kentani ❙ 1878 ❙ 9th Cape Frontier War

The last major action of the war following Xhosa defeat at Ibeka and N'Axama, saw about 5,000 Xhosa under veteran leaders Kreili and Sandile attack Kentani, just north of the Great Kei. In the face of brave defence by Regulars, Colonials and Mfengu levies under Major Russell Upcher, the Xhosa were heavily defeated. The war soon ended with Britain securing the Transkei (17 February 1878).

Kentish Knock ❙ 1652 ❙ 1st Dutch War

Near Kentish Knock, off the mouth of the Thames, Dutch Admiral Cornelius Witte de With engaged English Admiral Robert Blake in a confused and indecisive action. Both sides had about 45 ships and, while the English were outmanoeuvred, de With was thwarted by his uncooperative subordinates. He was eventually driven off, yielding a narrow victory to Blake (8 October 1652).

Kenyermezo ❙ 1479 ❙ Transylvanian-Turkish Wars

Ottoman commander Ali Bey was returning from a large-scale raid into Transylvania, when he was intercepted by the Voivode Stephen Bathory on the Plain of Kenyermezo—"the Field of Bread"—near Orastie on the Mures. Badly wounded and almost defeated, Bathory was saved by the timely arrival of Paul Kinizsi of Temesvár and the Turks were driven back (13 October 1479).

Kepaniwai ❙ 1790 ❙ Hawaiian Wars

Eight years after securing the Big Island of Hawaii with victory at Mokuohai, the warrior Kamehameha took a large force against the island of Maui, held by Chief Kahekili. A decisive action at the Iao Valley saw the Chief's son Kalanikupulu routed with so many dead that the stream was renamed Kepaniwai—damming of the waters. Five years later, Kamehameha secured Oahu at Nuuanu.

Kerbela ❙ 680 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars
See Karbala

Kerch ❙ 1790 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War
See Yenikale Strait

Kerch ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War
In support of operations in the Crimean Peninsula, General Sir George Brown and Admiral Sir Edmund Lyons took an Anglo-French-Turkish force against the Straits of Kerch, leading into the Sea of Azov. A powerful assault destroyed the Russian base at Kerch and nearby Yenikale was abandoned the same day, severing Russian communications east of the Crimea (24 May 1855).

Kerch ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
General Erich von Manstein left a covering force at Sevastopol and took 15 divisions against Kerch in eastern Crimea, where Russian General Dmitri Kozlov had built up a large army under siege. After a massive German assault, 80,000 Russians evacuated by sea though 175,000 men were captured, along with all their equipment. Manstein then returned to reduce Sevastopol (8–20 May 1942).

Kerch ❙ 1944 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)
While Russian forces broke into the Crimean Peninsula at Perekop, General Andrei Yeremenko led an amphibious assault further east at Kerch, aided at sea by Admiral Filip Oktyabrsky's Black Sea Fleet, which struck German communications and shipping. The Russians rapidly cleared the Kerch Peninsula then raced southwest towards Sevastopol (8–11 April 1944).

Keren ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)
British General William Platt left Sudan to invade Eritrea, where he seized Agordat, then advanced on General Luigi Frusci in the mountain stronghold at Keren. Some of the hardest fighting of the campaign saw the Italians eventually driven out with very heavy losses. Platt then seized the Eritrean capital Asmara, and then Massawa, before turning south towards Amba Alagi (2 February–27 March 1941).

Keren ❙ 1977–1978 ❙ Eritrean War of Independence
As part of their urban offensive, Eritrean forces attacked Keren using artillery taken at Nakfa. Following heavy bombardment, the rebels stormed the city and fort with perhaps 2,000 Ethiopians killed and 1,700 captured. Keren was retaken by an Ethiopian counter-offensive a year later and held out under siege for many years against repeated fresh Eritrean attacks (5–8 July 1977 & 26 November 1978).

Kerensky Offensive ❙ 1917 ❙ World War I (Eastern Front)
Russia's renewed advance in the southwest following the Brusilov Offensive was known as the Second Brusilov or Kerensky Offensive (for War Minister Aleksandr Kerensky). After initial success around Brzezany and Stanislau, Germans counter-attacked through Tarnopol and Russia's last offensive ended in terrible retreat, with final defeat in the north around Riga (1–19 July 1917).

Keresztes ❙ 1596 ❙ Turkish-Habsburg Wars
Following Turkish defeats on the Danube, Sultan Mehmed II personally led a fresh invasion, supported by Grand Vizier Ibrahim Pasha. In a bloody engagement near Erlau at Keresztes, the Austro-Hungarians of Archduke Maxmilian and Sigismund Bathory of Transylvania were routed by a brilliant Ottoman cavalry charge. However, the exhausted Turks then returned to Belgrade (24–26 October 1596).

Kerman ❙ 1721 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars
Mahmud Ghilzai, son of Mir Weis of Kandahar, secured western Afghanistan after victory at Farah (1719), then invaded Persia and captured the eastern city of Kerman. However, he was heavily defeated by Persian General Lutf

Ali Khan (brother-in-law of the Grand Vizier) and driven back to Kandahar. A renewed offensive the following year won Mahmud the Persian crown at Isfahan.

Kerman ❙ 1722 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

Renewing his offensive against Persia, Mahmud Ghilzai of Kandahar again attacked the eastern city of Kerman, where he had been repulsed a year earlier. Mahmud took the city and eventually forced the citadel to surrender. He then marched northwest towards the capital at Isfahan and, despite a further repulse at Yazd, defeated the Persians at Gulnabad and Isfahan.

Kerman ❙ 1794 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

Amid bitter struggle for Persia, the young Shah Lutf Ali marched into southeast Iran and seized the Kerman, where he was besieged by Aga Mohammad Khan of the Qajar. When the city fell by treachery it was utterly destroyed, with a reputed 20,000 males blinded and all the females enslaved. Lutf Ali was tortured to death in 1796, ending the tumultuous Zand Dynasty (July–24 October 1794).

Kermanshah ❙ 1752–1753 ❙ Persian Wars of Succession

In the fight for succession after the assassination of Nadir Shah, Regent Karim Khan sent his General Mohammad Khan Zand against Kermanshah fortress, southeast of Yadz, held for his rival Ali Mardan Khan by Abdul Ali Khan, who finally surrendered after two years. Ali Mardan himself was then attacked and defeated nearby (June 1753) and was later assassinated by Mohammad Khan.

Kernstown ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

On the offensive in the northern Shenandoah, Confederate General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson was met at Kernstown, Virginia, by an unexpectedly much larger Union force under General James Shields. With Shields wounded, Colonel Nathan Kimball led a brilliant assault and Jackson was repulsed with over 700 casualties. Within weeks he recovered to win at McDowell (22–23 March 1862).

Kernstown ❙ 1864 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Confederate General Jubal A. Early resumed the offensive in the Shenandoah Valley after a check at Stephenson's Depot (20 July) attacking General George Crook at Kernstown, just south of Winchester, Virginia. Defeated with about 1,200 casualties, the Union army fell back across the Potomac with Early in pursuit. The Confederates were turned back at Cumberland (24 July 1864).

Kerulen ❙ 1203 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

Determined to secure supremacy in Mongolia, Temujin (later Genghis Khan) recovered from defeat at Khalakhaljit and returned to the Kerulen (modern Herelen) River in eastern Mongolia to attack his rival Ong Khan Toghril of the Kerait. After the Kerait were destroyed, with Toghril and his son Sanggum killed in flight, Temujin turned against the Naiman at Khangai.

Kerulen ❙ 1409 ❙ Ming Imperial Wars

Following victory at Nanjing (1356), Ming forces secured northern China (1368) then determined to invade Mongolia, where General Qiu Fu took a reported 100,000 men to the Kerulen River against Mongol Prince Bunyashiri and his chancellor Arughtai. Lured deep into the steppe, Qiu was defeated and killed west of Onohu. The Ming were soon avenged at the Onon (23 September 1409).

Kesseldorf ❙ 1745 ❙ War of the Austrian Succession

While Frederick II of Prussia met the Austrians at Hennersdorf, other Prussians under Leopold the Elder of Anhalt-Dessau marched up the Elbe towards Dresden against Austria's Saxon allies. At Kesseldorf, west of the capital, Saxon Marshal Friedrich August Rutowski suffered a decisive defeat and Dresden capitulated.

Empress Maria Theresa then sued for peace (15 December 1745).

Kessler's Cross Lanes ❙ 1861 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
See Cross Lanes

Kettle Creek ❙ 1779 ❙ War of the American Revolution
Encouraged by Britain's capture of Savannah, North Carolina Tory militia under Colonel James Boyd campaigned on the upper Savannah, but at Kettle Creek, Georgia, they were attacked in camp by a smaller pro-rebel militia force under Colonel Andrew Pickens. A decisive defeat saw Boyd among 40 killed and 70 others captured, five of them hanged for treason (14 February 1779).

Kettle Hill ❙ 1898 ❙ Spanish-American War
See San Juan Hill

Kettle Run ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)
Confederate General Thomas "Stonewall" Jackson outflanked General John Pope's Union army on the Rappahannock, reaching Bull Run Bridge, Virginia, where he defeated and killed General George W. Taylor. A larger action at nearby Kettle Run saw General Richard S. Ewell inflict heavy losses on Union General Joseph Hooker prior to the main battle at Bull Run (27 August 1862).

Keyes Raid ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)
On the eve of the British offensive at Sidi Rezegh, Colonel Geoffrey Keyes led a commando assault on Rommel's supposed headquarters near Appolonia in Tripolitania. Rommel was away in Italy and Keyes was killed in the failed assault on a minor administration building. All but two of 59 raiders were killed or captured and Keyes won a posthumous Victoria Cross (17–18 November 1941).

Khabar ❙ 1107 ❙ Crusader-Muslim Wars
Amid confused Muslim rivalry in Mesopotamia, Kilij Arslan, the powerful Sultan of Rum, extended his territory east to capture the city of Mosul, on the Tigris. In a battle of great significance to the Christian cause, Kilij Arslan, enemy of Byzantium and destroyer of three Crusades in Anatolia, was defeated and killed on the Khabar River by Ridwan of Aleppo (June 1107).

Khadima ❙ 633 ❙ Muslim Conquest of Iraq
See Hafir, Iraq

Khadki ❙ 1817 ❙ 3rd British-Maratha War
See Kirkee

Khafji ❙ 1991 ❙ 1st Gulf War
An apparent effort to capture prisoners as bargaining chips saw Iraq's only ground offensive of the war, when they entered Saudi Arabia and took Khafji. A counter-attack by American, Saudi and Qatari forces killed about 100 Iraqis and captured 430 as the survivors fled back across the border. The Allies had 44 killed, including 11 Americans and four Arabs lost to friendly fire (29–31 January 1991).

Khajwa ❙ 1659 ❙ War of the Mughal Princes
During bitter war between the sons of the ailing Mughal Emperor Shahjahan, the second son Shuja, after defeat at Bahadurpur, renewed rebellion against his brother Aurangzeb, who had seized the throne. Northwest of Fatehpur at Khajwa, Shuja was outnumbered and defeated by the Imperial army under Aurangzeb's command. He was beaten again three months later at Maldah (7 January 1659).

Khajwa ❙ 1857 ❙ Indian Mutiny
Preparing for Sir Colin Campbell's advance from Fatehpur, a small force under Colonel Thomas Powell attacked over 4,000 rebels blocking the road 20 miles to the northwest at Khajwa. After a gruelling forced march, Powell was killed in a bold assault. But Captain William Peel of the Naval Brigade then secured a hard-fought victory and opened the road to Cawnpore (1 November 1857).

Khalakhaljit ❙ 1203 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

Determined to secure supremacy in Mongolia, Temujin (later Genghis Khan) turned on Ong Khan Toghril of the Kerait, who was supported by Temujin's rival, Jamuqa. Outnumbered and defeated near the Kerulen at Khalakhaljit, Temujin withdrew when the Ong Khan's son Sanggum was wounded. Temujin fled to Lake Baljuna but returned later in the year to smash the Kerait at the Kerulen.

Khalkan Gol ❙ 1939 ❙ Russo-Japanese Border Wars

In the most serious clash between Russia and Japanese-occupied Manchukuo, fighting began near Nomonhan on the Mongolian border along the Khalkan Gol. After months of action, Russian General Georgy Zhukov launched a crushing air and land offensive. General Michitaro Komatsubara lost half his army before Tokyo sought a ceasefire (11 May–16 September 1939).

Khalule ❙ 691 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

Assyrian King Sennacherib campaigning to reassert control over Babylon was confronted by the combined armies of King Mushezib-Marduk of Babylon and King Umman-Menanu of Elam in a huge battle at Khalule, in the Jordan Valley. After very heavy casualties both sides claimed victory. However, Sennacherib was able to seize Babylon the following year and destroyed much of the city.

Khambula ❙ 1879 ❙ Anglo-Zulu War

One day after repulsing the British at Hlobane in northern Zululand, a large Zulu army under Tshingwayo and Mnyamana attacked Colonel Henry Wood's camp further west at Khambula. A courageous defensive action saw the Zulus driven off with very heavy losses, dealing a decisive strategic blow to King Cetshwayo, who was finally defeated in July at Ulundi (29 March 1879).

Khan Baghdadi ❙ 1918 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

After the fall of Ramadi, new Anglo-Indian commander Sir William Marshall sent Generals Harry Brooking and Robert Cassels west along the Euphrates from Baghdad. Supported by aircraft and armoured cars, they attacked and seized Khan Baghdadi. The campaign yielded over 5,000 Turkish prisoners and stabilised the front until the attack north on Sharqat, in October (26 March 1918).

Khandesh ❙ 752 ❙ Indian Dynastic Wars

Despite victory over Pallava at Kanchi (731), the south Indian Kingdom of Chalukya was in decline and, when Warrior King Vikramaditya died (747), his son Kirtivarman faced the rising power of his nominal feudatory, Dantidurga of Rashtrakuta. Dantidurga defeated Kirtivarman in Khandesh and Chalukya was overthrown. The new Rashtrakuta Dynasty dominated the Deccan for over 200 years.

Khandwa ❙ 1720 ❙ Mughal-Hyderabad War

See Ratanpur

Khangai ❙ 1204 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

In one of the decisive battles of his rise to power, the Mongol Temujin (later Genghis Khan) met the Tayang-Khan Baibuqa of the Naiman in the mountains of Khangai (near future Karakorum), in central Mongolia. With Baibuqa fatally wounded, the Naiman were routed and died when they refused to surrender. The Tayang's son Kuchlug escaped and met Temujin in 1208 on the Irtysh.

Khania ❙ 1645 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

After 400 years of Venetian occupation, Turkish forces landed on northern Crete to attack the fortified port of Khania. A brutal siege cost very heavy losses before Khania became the first Cretan centre to fall. The Turks later attacked further east at Candia. A Venetian attempt to retake Khania in 1666 failed and the port remained in Turkish hands until 1898 (24 June–August 1645).

Khania ❙ 1692 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

In an effort to recover Turkish Crete, Venice sent Domenico Mocenigo with a large fleet to besiege Khania. A relief effort was driven off (8 August), but on reports of a Turkish fleet approaching, Mocenigo over-ruled his Maltese and Papal allies and abandoned the siege. Venetian prestige suffered a terrible blow and Mocenigo was dismissed for incompetence (17 July–29 August 1692).

Khanigalbat ❙ 681 BC ❙ Assyrian Wars

Near the end of his reign, the great King Sennacherib of Assyria established his favourite son Esarhaddon as co-ruler. While Esarhaddon was at war in Armenia, two other sons, Sharezer and Adarmalik, murdered Sennacherib and attempted to seize power. At Khanigalbat, near Nisibis west of the Tigris, Esarhaddon defeated the parricides and mounted the throne as King.

Khanikin ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (Mesopotamia)

Russian General Nikolai Baratov attempting to divert the Turks in Mesopotamia invaded northern Persia in late 1915 and took Hamadan and Kermanshah. Having captured Kut-al-Amara, General Ali Ihsan Pasha marched northeast from Baghdad to Khanikin, where he routed part of the Russian force. Baratov withdrew, but the Turks returned to defend Baghdad and fighting died down (1 June 1916).

Khanua ❙ 1527 ❙ Mughal Conquest of Northern India

Opposing the Mughal conquest of northern India after Babur's great victory at Panipat, Rana Sanga, King of Mewar, took a massive Rajput force against the invaders southwest of Bharatpur at Khanua. Babur utterly destroyed the Rajputs, then advanced into Bihar and Bengal, culminating in his decisive victory at the Gogra in 1529 to establish the 300-year Mughal Empire (16 March 1527).

Khan Yaunis ❙ 1516 ❙ Ottoman-Mamluk War

See Yaunis Khan

Kharda ❙ 1795 ❙ Maratha Territorial Wars

Subadar Nizam Ali of Hyderabad took a reported 110,000 men to attack the Marathas of Daulat Rao Sindhia, who was supported by troops from Tukaji Holkar and Raghoji Bhonsle of Berar. While casualties in battle at Kharda, southeast of Ahmadnagar were light, Nizam suffered a humiliating defeat. In 1799 he fought alongside the British in the 4th British-Mysore War (11–12 March 1795).

Kharkov ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Following Russia's winter offensive to save Moscow, Marshal Symeon Timoshenko sent his armour to recover Kharkov in the eastern Ukraine. The Russians penetrated deep before General Ewald von Kleist counter-attacked and cut off the Barvenkovo Salient. Timoshenko lost up to 250,000 men and 600 tanks, opening the way for the German offensive towards Stalingrad (12–22 May 1942).

Kharkov (1st) ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

Flushed with victory after Stalingrad, Russian General Filip Golikov stormed west and retook Kharkov (16 February). Despite being heavily outnumbered, Marshal Erich von Manstein launched a brilliant counter-attack and drove Golikov and General Nikolai Vatutin back to the Donetz with heavy losses. Manstein retook Kharkov and it was held until after Kursk in July (9–16 March 1943).

Kharkov (2nd) ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

As the German offensive at Kursk ground to a halt, Generals Nikolai Vatutin, Ivan Konev and Rodion Malinovsky launched a massive converging counter-offensive south towards Kharkov. Threatened with encirclement after the fall of Belgorod (5 August), General Herman Hoth abandoned Kharkov and Marshal Erich von Manstein withdrew to the Dnieper (17 July–23 August 1943).

Khartoum ❙ 1884–1885 ❙ British-Sudan Wars

General Charles Gordon attempted to hold the Sudan against the Mahdi, Mohammed Ahmed, and found himself besieged at Khartoum on the Upper Nile. A relief force under General Sir Garnet Wolseley defeated the Dervishes at Abu Kru, but arrived too late. Wad el-Najumi had already stormed Khartoum and killed Gordon, so Wolseley returned down the Nile (March 1884–26 January 1885).

Khaybar ❙ 628 ❙ Campaigns of the Prophet Mohammed

A year after capturing Medina, the Prophet Mohammed took 1,800 men against Khaybar, where the Jews were accused of intriguing with his enemies. During a six-week campaign, he gradually captured the town's strong-points. One citadel held out under the Jewish Chief Kinana, who was killed along with most of his men. His teenage widow Safiyya became one of Mohammed's wives (September 628).

Khed ❙ 1707 ❙ Maratha Civil War

Returning to Ahmadnagar 17 years after he was captured at Raigarh, Shahu (son of former Maratha King Sambhaji) was opposed by his aunt Tarabai on behalf of her 12-year-old son, Shivaji. In battle south of Ahmadnagar at Khed, Tarabai's forces under Parashuram Pant Pratinidhi were routed when Dhanaji Jadhev deserted to Shahu, who was crowned a few months later (12 October 1707).

Khelat ❙ 1839 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Kalat

Khelna ❙ 1701–1702 ❙ Mughal-Maratha Wars

Emperor Aurangzeb and General Asad Khan led a renewed offensive in western India, where they besieged the mountain fortress of Khelna, 35 miles northwest of Kolhapur. Over 6,000 Imperial troops were killed in months of attack by the field army of Dhanaji Jadhav, but Maratha commander Parashurampant finally surrendered in return for his life (26 December 1701–6 June 1702).

Khem Karan ❙ 1965 ❙ 2nd Indo-Pakistan War

As part of India's offensive towards Lahore, large forces from both sides met to the southeast in a massive armoured action around the key city of Khem Karan, just inside the Indian border. Almost 100 Pakistani tanks were destroyed or captured in an ambush to the north near Asal Uttar. However, India could not achieve a breakthrough and eventually had to accept a ceasefire (7–10 September 1965).

Khenifra ❙ 1914 ❙ French Colonial Wars in North Africa

Determined to suppress the Zaia of central Morocco after the costly action at El Ksiba (June 1913), Colonel Paul Henrÿs sent 14,000 men in three converging columns against Moha ou Hammou's capital at Khenifra. The French fought their way into the city after very heavy fighting, though Moha ou Hammou and his army had escaped. They struck back in November at El Herri (10–12 June 1914).

Kherla ❙ 1428 ❙ Malwa-Bahmani Wars

With Alp Khan (Hushang Shah) of Malwa occupied by war with Gujarat, Ahmad Shah I of the Bahmani Sultanate determined to recover his former feudatory Kherla. When Ahmad besieged the powerful fortress, on the headwaters of the Tapti east of Deogarh, Alp Khan advanced with a relief army, but suffered a crushing defeat. Renewed war in 1468 saw Malwa fail attempting to retake Kherla.

Khe Sanh ❙ 1967 ❙ Vietnam War

On a major offensive across the demilitarized zone, North Vietnamese regulars attacked the westernmost US marine base at Khe Sanh, close to Laos. While very heavy fighting for the surrounding hills cost the marines 155 killed, the Communists suffered over 900 killed and eventually withdrew to regroup for another offensive further east against the base at Con Thien (24 April–11 May 1967).

Khe Sanh ❙ 1968 ❙ Vietnam War

As part of the Tet Offensive, up to 30,000 North Vietnamese under General Vo Nguyen Giap besieged the US Marine base at Khe Sanh, inside the DMZ. Determined not to suffer a symbolic defeat, America responded with heavy reinforcements and some of the most intense bombing ever. Giap eventually abandoned the bloody siege but the Americans also withdrew (21 January–8 April 1968).

Khidrana ❙ 1705 ❙ Mughal-Sikh Wars

See Muktsar

Khios ❙ 412 BC ❙ Great Peloponnesian War

See Chios

Khios ❙ 357 BC ❙ 1st Greek Social War

See Chios

Khios ❙ 201 BC ❙ 2nd Macedonian War

See Chios

Khios ❙ 1694 ❙ Venetian-Turkish Wars

See Chios

Khios ❙ 1770 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

See Chios

Khios ❙ 1822 ❙ Greek War of Independence

See Chios

Khiva ❙ 1740 ❙ Persian-Uzbek Wars

Determined to punish the Uzbeks for raiding his northern province of Khorasan, Nadir Shah of Persia defeated the Uzbeks of Bokhara at Charjui, then continued down the Oxus (Amu Darya) and defeated the local Uzbeks at Khiva. Ilbars Khan of Khiva was then forced to surrender at the nearby fortress of Jayuk and was executed. The victories secured Nadir's northern borders (November 1740).

Khiva ❙ 1873 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

Russian General Konstantin von Kaufmann led a fresh offensive in Central Asia, where he captured the Khanate of Bokhara and five years later took a reported 10,000 men across the Karakum desert to besiege Khiva. After the city fell, Khan Sayid Muhammad Rahim II signed a peace treaty with von Kaufmann, who took his army against the remaining Khanate of Khokand, in 1875 (29 May 1873).

Khodynka ❙ 1608 ❙ Russian Time of Troubles

Gathering support after victory at Bolkhov, a pretender claiming to be Dimitri—murdered son of former Tsar Ivan IV—continued towards Moscow and, at Khodynka, again defeated Tsar Basil Shuiski. While the "Second False Dimitri" was unable to take the capital, he established a shadow government to the west at Klushino and was murdered in 1610 by one of his followers (25 June 1608).

Khoi ❙ 1584 ❙ Turko-Persian Wars

On a fresh invasion of Azerbaijan, Turkish commander Ferhad Pasha sent forces towards Tabriz. Eighty miles to the northwest near Khoi (modern Khvoy) his advance units were heavily defeated by Persian Crown Prince Hamza Mirza. After a second failure, Ferhad Pasha was succeeded in the command by Osman Pasha, whose renewed advance the following year captured Tabriz.

Khoi ❙ 1822 ❙ Turko-Persian War in Azerbaijan

After beating the Turks at Erzurum in 1821, Persian Prince Abbas Mirza captured Bayazid before being turned back by winter, but entered Azerbaijan again the following year. Near Khoi (modern Khvoy in northwest Iran) he routed an Ottoman army under former Grand Vizier Muhammad Emin Rauf Pasha. However, Abbas Mirza's army was ravaged by cholera and he sued for peace (May 1822).

Khojend ❙ 1220 ❙ Conquests of Genghis Khan

When the Mongol Genghis Khan launched his western offensive against the Khwarezmian Empire, he besieged Otrar, on the Syr Darya, then sent a smaller force upstream against Khojend (Khudjand in Tajikistan), held for Muhammad II of Khwarezm by General Timur Malik. Withdrawing to the citadel on a mid-river island, Timur Malik led a brilliant defence then escaped as the fortress fell.

Khokand ❙ 1875 ❙ Russian Conquest of Central Asia

Russian General Konstanin von Kaufmann conquered Bokhara (1868) and Khiva (1873), then attacked Khokand, the last remaining independent Khanate. Following spirited fighting, commander Abd al-Rahman Avtobachi was decisively defeated at Makhram and nearby Khokand city fell a few days later. Amir Nasir al-Din surrendered, but rebel resistance continued at Andizhan (22 August 1875).

Khoosh-Ab ❙ 1857 ❙ Anglo-Persian War

In response to Persia's capture of Herat in Afghanistan, British forces in the Persian Gulf soon captured Reshire and Bushire, then marched inland towards Brazun. As General Sir James Outram returned he met a Persian army of 10,000 under Suja-ul-Mulk near Khoosh-Ab. The Persians were routed with about 700 killed and made peace. They soon lost again at Mohammerah (8 February 1857).

Khoraiba ❙ 656 ❙ Muslim Civil Wars

See Camel, Iraq

Khorramshahr ❙ 1857 ❙ Anglo-Persian War

See Mohammerah

Khorramshahr ❙ 1980 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

At the start of the war, an Iraqi armoured division advanced against Khorramshahr on the Karun River, but the tanks were repulsed when they attempted to enter the city unsupported. After heavy street fighting against regulars and militia, Khorramshahr was finally taken at severe cost to both sides. The delay enabled Iran to reinforce nearby Abadan (28 September–25 October 1980).

Khorramshahr ❙ 1982 ❙ Iraq-Iran War

Recovering from heavy losses relieving Abadan, Iran launched a broad offensive with up to 150,000 men against Iraqi forces in the south, then sent about 70,000 to recover Khorramshahr. Despite their strong defences, the Iraqis were overwhelmed with about 12,000 men captured. Within a month, President Saddam Hussein ordered most Iraqi forces withdrawn from Iran (30 April–23 May 1982).

Khost ❙ 1985 ❙ Afghan Civil War

On a large-scale guerrilla offensive against the Soviet-backed Kabul government, about 5,000 Mujahaden rebels besieged the city of Khost near the Pakistan border. Armed with rocket launchers they caused severe damage, threatening to close the airfield. Russian commando reinforcements were flown in and the city was saved until a fresh Mujahaden assault six years later (July 1985).

Khost ❙ 1991 ❙ Afghan Civil War

At the start of their final offensive, Mujahaden forces under Jalaluddin Haqqani attacked the city of Khost, held for the Russian-backed Kabul government by General Muhammad Zahir Solamal. After a massive rocket attack the city fell with over 2,000 prisoners, including General Solamal and other high-ranking officers. The next advance was against Kabul itself (13–30 March 1991).

Khosun ❙ 1818 ❙ Persian-Afghan Wars

See Kafir Qala

Khotin ❙ 1600 ❙ Balkan National Wars

Prince Michael the Brave of Wallachia seized Transylvania after Selimbar (October 1599) then led a surprise attack on Moldavia. He pursued the Voyevod Jeremiah Movila to Khotin on the Dniester, where Jeremiah was decisively beaten and expelled to Poland. By briefly uniting Transylvania, Wallachia and Moldavia, Michael is claimed today as the founder of future Romania (May 1600).

Khotin ❙ 1621 ❙ Polish-Turkish Wars

A year after defeating the Poles at Cecora, Sultan Osman II took a large army against the Polish fortified camp at Khotin near the Dniester in the Ukraine. Hetman Jan Karol Chodkiewicz led a brilliant defence and, when he was killed, Stanislas Lubomirski forced the Turks to withdraw. Osman blamed defeat on his Janissaries, who later mutinied and killed him (2 September–9 October 1621).

Khotin ❙ 1673 ❙ Turkish Invasion of the Ukraine

When he invaded the Polish Ukraine in aid of Cossack rebellion, Sultan Mehmed IV captured Kamieniec and humbled King Michael. Hetman John Sobieski then raised 40,000 men to inflict a terrible defeat on Turkish General Hussein Pasha on the Dniester at Khotin. Poland was saved and, after Michael died on the night of the victory, Sobieski was crowned as John III (11 November 1673).

Khotin ❙ 1739 ❙ Austro-Russian-Turkish War

See Stavuchany

Khotin ❙ 1769 ❙ Catherine the Great's 1st Turkish War

Russian Prince Alexander Golitsyn and General Pyotr Rumyantsev advancing against Turkey on the Dniester, were repulsed at Khotin by the Pole Ignatius Potocki. In a later assault, Golitsyn defeated Grand Vizier Emin Pasha (who was executed for failure) then beat new Vizier Moldovani. The Turks evacuated Khotin when the rising river destroyed their bridges (June–26 September 1769).

Khotin ❙ 1788 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

As Austrian Prince Friedrich Josias of Saxe-Coburg advanced into Turkish Moldavia from the west in support of Russia, he moved against Khotin, which held out heroically under siege before it fell after three months. The Moldavian capital Jassy also fell before the Austrians and their Russian allies went on to further victory the following year at Focsani and Rimnik (2 July–19 September 1788).

Khudaganj ❙ 1858 ❙ Indian Mutiny

See Fategarh

Khujbaz ❙ 1865 ❙ Later Afghan War of Succession

When Amir Dost Muhammad of Afghanistan died in June 1863, his son Sher Ali faced rebellion by his brothers Amin Khan and Sharif Khan. The rebels were defeated in battle at Khujbaz, near Kalat, though Sher Ali's son Muhammad Ali was killed by his uncle Amin Khan, who was in turn killed. By mid-1866 the Amir's forces had lost at Kabul and Sheikhabad (6 June 1865).

Khujbaz ❙ 1867 ❙ Later Afghan War of Succession

The war of succession following the death of Dost Muhammad saw usurper Azim Khan and his nephew Abdur Rahman (son of Afzal Khan) take their army south from Kabul against Sher Ali, who had been deposed following defeat at Sheikhabad. At Khujbaz, near Kalat, Sher Ali was defeated when his Kandahar levies deserted. He fled to Herat, held by his son Yakub Khan (17 January 1867).

Khurd-Kabul ❙ 1581 ❙ Mughal Wars of Succession

When Punjab nobles supported Muhammad Hakim of Kabul against his half-brother Akbar, the Emperor raised a massive army and drove the rebel back into Afghanistan. East of Kabul at the pass of Khurd-Kabul, Imperial forces under Prince Murad and General Man Singh heavily defeated Muhammad. Akbar entered Kabul three days later to pardon and reinstate his brother (August 1581).

Khurd-Kabul ❙ 1842 ❙ 1st British-Afghan War

See Jagdalak

Khyber Pass ❙ 1738 ❙ Persian Invasion of India

See Jamrud

Khyber Pass ❙ 1837 ❙ Afghan-Sikh Wars

See Jamrud

Kiangsu ❙ 1946 ❙ 3rd Chinese Revolutionary Civil War

See Jiangsu

Kickapoo Town ❙ 1838 ❙ Kickapoo Indian Wars

Soon after Indian attacks in eastern Texas at Battle Creek and the Killough Massacre, General Thomas J. Rusk led a dawn raid on Kickapoo Town, a group of Indian villages near Frankston. The Kickapoo's Mexican allies fled and after three days of very hard fighting, with 11 Indians dead, the elderly Chief Pecana sued for peace. However, Chief Benito withdrew to continue the war (15–18 October 1838).

Kidney Ridge ❙ 1942 ❙ World War II (Northern Africa)

Facing the British offensive at El Alamein, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel attempted to counter-attack around Kidney Ridge, 20 miles south of the coast. Brilliant defence by a small British unit without field artillery disabled up to 50 Axis tanks and the attack stalled. Commander Colonel Victor Turner was awarded the Victoria Cross. A week later the ridge saw the British breakout (27 October 1942).

Kiemereh ❙ 1726 ❙ Turko-Persian War

When Mahmud Ghilzai, the Afghan conqueror of Persia, went insane he was succeeded by his cousin Ashraf Shah, who faced a massive invasion by Turkish General Ahmad Rahman Pasha with 60,000 men and 70 guns. Outside Isfahan at Kiemereh the Turkish army was routed with a reported 12,000 killed. However, Ashraf made peace and Constantinople recognised him as Shah (November 1726).

Kiev ❙ 1069 ❙ Russian Dynastic Wars

Less than a year after being driven off the Kievan throne following defeat at the Alta, Prince Iziaslav returned with his brother-in-law, Boleslaw II of Poland. Just outside Kiev they met the army of Vseslav of Polotsk, who was defeated and fled. Kiev was then besieged and surrendered to Iziaslav, who regained the throne. Only four years later he was deposed by his brother Sviatoslav.

Kiev ❙ 1240 ❙ Mongol Conquest of Russia

After conquering northern Russia, the Mongol Batu (grandson of Genghis Khan) and his cousin Mongke crossed the frozen Dneiper and besieged Kiev, where Prince Michael of Kiev fled. When Governor Dmitri refused to surrender, the city was taken by storm and utterly destroyed before the Mongols marched west for their great victories at Liegnitz and on the Sajo (6 December 1240).

Kiev ❙ 1482 ❙ Polish-Crimean Tatar Wars

With the Mongols dispersed at the Ugra in November 1480, Crimean Tatars under Khan Mengil Girai, with encouragement from Duke Ivan III of Moscow, advanced into the Polish Ukraine and attacked Kiev. Military Governor Pan Ivan Khodkevich escaped but was captured, while many of those who remained were burned to death in the ensuing brutal sack of the city (1 September 1482).

Kiev ❙ 1658 ❙ Russo-Polish Wars

Cossack leader Ivan Vyhovksy claimed continued loyalty to Moscow despite burning Poltava, but weeks later sent his brother Danilo (supported by Tatar forces) against Kiev, garrisoned by Russian Colonel Fedor I. Sheremetev and Kievan Cossacks. Danilo Vyhovsky was routed and his brother firmed his alliance with Poland. A year later they beat the Russians at Konotop (23 August 1658).

Kiev ❙ 1920 ❙ Russo-Polish War

Having reached the Berezina through Minsk, Polish commander Josef Pilsudski launched a massive offensive towards Kiev, supported by Ukrainian Hetman Semyon Petlyura. Soviet General Aleksandr Yegorov suffered terrible losses in men and equipment before withdrawing and Kiev itself fell without resistance (7 May). Russia soon counter-attacked on the Berezina (25–28 April 1920).

Kiev ❙ 1941 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

After the fall of Smolensk, Panzer General Heinz Guderian turned south into the Ukraine towards Kiev to join General Ewald von Kleist circling north after crushing the pocket at Uman. Stalin ordered Kiev held at all cost, but it fell with 665,000 prisoners, 900 tanks and 3,500 guns. While Kiev was Russia's worst defeat, the delay helped save Moscow (21 August–26 September 1941).

Kiev ❙ 1943 ❙ World War II (Eastern Front)

General Konstantin Rokossovksy spearheaded the Soviet offensive towards the Dnieper, driving west through Chernigov while further south General Nikolai Vatutin advanced on Kiev itself, held by General Herman Hoth's Fourth Panzer Army. Most of the German divisions escaped before Kiev fell. Hoth was dismissed and the Russians continued west to Zhitomir (3–6 November 1943).

Kila Alladad ❙ 1867 ❙ Later Afghan War of Succession

Defeated by his brother Azim Khan at Sheikhabad and Khujbaz, deposed Amir Sher Ali raised a fresh army, aided by Faiz Muhammad, Governor of Afghan Turkestan then marched towards Kabul. In battle to the north at Kila Alladad, near Charikar, Faiz Muhammad was killed and Sher Ali was defeated. In early 1869, Sher Ali regained his kingdom at Zurmat (17 September 1867).

Kilblain ❙ 1335 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

In the war between adherents of young David II of Scotland and English-backed Edward Baliol, Scottish Royalists Sir Andrew Moray, Patrick Dunbar Earl of March and Sir William Douglas of Liddesdale, surprised Earl David of Atholl, besieging Kildrummy, near Alford, Aberdeenshire. Atholl was defeated and killed at nearby Kilblain and his widow fled to Lochindorb.

Kilcommadan ❙ 1691 ❙ War of the Glorious Revolution

See Aughrim

Kilcullen ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

At the start of the rebellion in Ireland, Royalist General Sir Ralph Dundas with just 40 dragoons and 20 militia rashly attacked 300 rebels in a strong defensive position in the churchyard at Kilcullen. After losing about half his force, Dundas joined local Yeomanry to defeat the rebels in an ambush, but fell back to nearby Naas and left them to seize most of County Kildare (24 May 1798).

Kilcumney Hill ❙ 1798 ❙ Irish Rebellion

Father John Murphy and survivors of the disastrous rebel defeat at Vinegar Hill (21 June) trying to make their way back to Wexford were intercepted and beaten by General Sir Charles Asgill near the Wexford county border at Kilcumney Hill, in County Carlow. Father Murphy was later captured and beheaded, effectively ending the two-month rising (26 June 1798).

Kildrummy ❙ 1335 ❙ Anglo-Scottish War of Succession

See Kilblain

Kili ❙ 1299 ❙ Mongol Invasions of India

Despite a Mongol repulse in India at Jalandhar, Dawa Khan of Transoxonia (a descendant of Genghis Khan) sent his son Qutlugh Khwaja with a force claimed to number 200,000 against Sultan Ala-ud-din of Delhi. Outside Delhi at Kili the Sultan's army under Ulugh Khan and Zafar Khan secured a great victory. The Mongols again withdrew, although Zafar Khan was killed.

Kilimanjaro ❙ 1916 ❙ World War I (African Colonial Theatre)

See Morogoro

Kilkis ❙ 1913 ❙ 2nd Balkan (Inter-ally) War

When Bulgaria suddenly attacked her former allies over Macedonia, the Serbs counter-attacked on the Bregalnica, while King Constantine of Greece met them north of Thessalonica. The Greeks suffered costly losses attacking near Kilkis, then advanced along the whole Lachanas-Nigrita front. The Bulgarians had to withdraw, soon trying to make a stand at Kresna (1–3 July 1913).

Killala (1st) ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

In an attempt to support Irish rebellion, three French frigates entered Killala Bay in northwest Ireland to land General Joseph Amable Humbert and 1,100 men, including Matthew Tone (brother of rebel leader Wolfe Tone) and considerable arms and guns. This advance party for the main invasion seized the small town, but French help was too little too late (23 August 1798).

Killala (2nd) ❙ 1798 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (Irish Rising)

Two weeks after securing French-Irish surrender at Ballinamuck, the British turned their attention to the small force under French Colonel Armand Charost holding about 200 Loyalist prisoners in the port of Killala, County Mayo, where the invasion had first landed. The remaining garrison fled after a one-sided disaster, with about 400 killed, and the rebellion was over (23 September 1798).

Killdeer Mountain ❙ 1864 ❙ Sioux Indian Wars

General Alfred Sully beat the Sioux at Whitestone Hill (September 1863), then took 2,000 men towards the Badlands of North Dakota to secure a decisive victory. At Killdeer Mountain, between the Little Missouri and Knife Rivers, he attacked the camp of Chief Inkapduta and perhaps 5,000 warriors. Sully inflicted a terrible defeat, effectively ending organised Sioux resistance (28 July 1864).

Killiecrankie ❙ 1689 ❙ First Jacobite Rebellion

Scottish Catholic supporters of James II resisting the accession of William III attempted a Highland rising under John Graham Viscount Dundee. A Royalist army under General Hugh Mackay was ambushed and virtually destroyed at Killiecrankie, near Pitlochry. However, "Bonny Dundee" was killed in the battle and the rebellion petered out after defeat in August at Dunkeld (27 July 1689).

Killough Massacre ❙ 1838 ❙ Kickapoo Indian Wars

After killing a survey party at Battle Creek, Kickapoo Chief Benito was joined by Mexican insurrectionists under Vicente Cordova attacking a settlement just northwest of Jacksonville, Texas, where Isaac Killough and 17 of his family were killed or captured. The Indians were driven off next day by General Thomas J. Rusk and were defeated days later at Kickapoo Town (5 October 1838).

Kilmallock ❙ 1922 ❙ Irish Civil War

While government forces advanced on Clonmel, further west General Eoin O'Duffy marched south from Limerick against Kilmallock, held by Republicans since 14 July. Desperate fighting around the nearby villages of Bruff and Bruree saw the longest and hardest fought action of the war before Kilmallock fell. The survivors fled for Kerry (23 July–5 August 1922).

Kilsyth ❙ 1645 ❙ British Civil Wars

Six weeks after victory at Alford, James Graham Marquis of Montrose led his Scots and Irish Royalists south across the Forth to Kilsyth, where he destroyed the Covenanter army of Archibald Campbell Marquis of Argyll and Sir William Baillie. Glasgow and Edinburgh submitted to make Montrose master of Scotland, but he was defeated next month at Philiphaugh (16 August 1645).

Kilwa ❙ 1505 ❙ Portuguese Colonial Wars in East Africa

The island state of Kilwa Kisiwani, off East Africa, accepted tribute to Portugal (1502), but when Sultan Ibrahim ceased to make payments a large fleet arrived under Francisco d'Almeida. After sharp fighting, the Portuguese sacked the city then attacked Mombasa. Portugal built Fort Gereza in Kilwa, but lost the city to Arab mercenaries in 1512. They regained permanent control in 1597.

Kimberley ❙ 1899–1900 ❙ 2nd Anglo-Boer War

At the start of the war, with Mafeking besieged, further south Marthinus Wessels and later Piet Cronjé loosely besieged Kimberley, held by 4,000 men under Colonel Robert Kekewich. A relief force was repulsed at Magersfontein, but Kimberley was finally relieved by General John French. Cronjé was pursued east and captured a few days later at Paardeberg (15 October 1899–15 February 1900).

Kinairi ❙ 1848 ❙ 2nd British-Sikh War

See Kineyre

Kinburn ❙ 1787 ❙ Catherine the Great's 2nd Turkish War

Turkish forces resuming the war against Russia attempted a seaborne attack on the fortress at Kinburn, near the mouth of the Dnieper opposite Ochakov. Russian General Alexander Suvorov permitted 6,000–7,000 Turks to land before he counter-attacked with Cossack cavalry and infantry under his personal command and the invaders were utterly annihilated (10 October 1787).

Kinburn ❙ 1855 ❙ Crimean War

In a fresh assault on the Russian coast, an Anglo-French expedition under Admirals Sir Edmund Lyons and Emile-Marius Bruat attacked Kinburn, east of Odessa, held by General Ivan Vasilevich Kokhanovich. A force of 10,000 landed under Generals Sir Augustus Spencer and Achille Bazaine and the town and fortress surrendered after a heavy bombardment (16–17 October 1855).

Kineyre ❙ 1848 ❙ 2nd British-Sikh War

When Britain renewed war against the Sikhs of the Punjab, Lieutenant Herbert Edwardes and a mixed Pathan-Baluchi force joined with Nawab Futteh Mohammed Khan of Bhawalpur at Kineyre, south of Multan, to attack the army of Dewan Mulraj of Multan under Rung Ram. Despite initial repulse, the Allies took the Sikh entrenchments and advanced to besiege Multan (18 June 1848).

King's Mountain ❙ 1780 ❙ War of the American Revolution

A few months after British victory at Camden, Loyalist militia under Major Patrick Ferguson pursued rebel militia under Colonels William Campbell and Isaac Shelby, but were forced to withdraw to King's Mountain, just inside the South Carolina border. In a decisive all-American action, the Tories were encircled, with Ferguson killed and virtually his entire force killed or captured (7 October 1780).

Kingston ❙ 1758 ❙ Seven Years War (North America)

See Fort Frontenac

Kinloss ❙ 1009 ❙ Later Viking Raids on Britain

See Nairn

Kinney's Farm ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

See Hanover Court House

Kinsale ❙ 1601 ❙ Tyrone Rebellion

Following victory at Blackwater for Irish rebel Hugh O'Neill Earl of Tyrone (14 August 1598), 4,000 Spanish under Don Juan d'Aguila captured Kinsale, south of Cork, but were besieged by English forces under Charles Blount Lord Mountjoy and Sir George Carew. Attempting to relieve the siege, O'Neill and the Spaniards were heavily defeated and the rebellion was crushed (24 December 1601).

Kinston ❙ 1862 ❙ American Civil War (Eastern Theatre)

Union General John G. Foster resumed the offensive in North Carolina, advancing from New Bern, inland towards the strategic railway at Goldsboro Bridge. On the upper Neuse at Kinston, Foster met and defeated a Confederate brigade under General Nathan Evans. He then continued his march west through an inconclusive action two days later at White Hall (14 December 1862).

Kinston ❙ 1865 ❙ American Civil War (Western Theatre)

As Union commander William T. Sherman marched east across the Carolinas, Confederate General Braxton Bragg, attempting a flank attack up the Neuse from New Bern, was met by Union General John Schofield, marching north from Wilmington in support. Fierce fighting near Kinston, North Carolina, saw Bragg repulsed. Schofield then joined Sherman at Bentonville (7–10 March 1865).

Kinzan ❙ 1915 ❙ Saudi-Rashidi Wars

Defeated by the pro-Turkish Rashid at Jirab when his Ajman allies defected, Emir Abd al-Aziz (Ibn Saud) of Riyadh and his brother Sa'ad attacked the Ajman late in the year at Kinzan, just west of Hofuf. In the Saudis' worst defeat, Aziz was routed and wounded and Sa'ad was killed. Aziz was unable to support his British allies against Turkey, though by May 1919 he recovered for victory at Turabah.

Kip's Bay ❙ 1776 ❙ War of the American Revolution

Attacking General George Washington in New York City, British commander William Howe bombarded Kip's Bay, on Manhattan Island, held by Colonel William Douglas. General Israel Putnam ordered a withdrawal in order to avoid losses and General Henry Clinton landed his British and Hessian troops at Kip's Bay. Further action ensued next day at Harlem Heights (15 September 1776).

Kirchberg ❙ 1797 ❙ French Revolutionary Wars (1st Coalition)

In a renewed French offensive, General Louis Lazare Hoche crossed the Rhine to defeat the Austrians near Neuwied then sent General Michel Ney's cavalry after Field Marshal Franz Werneck. Ney repulsed the Austrians in a minor engagement next day near Kirchberg but was captured when he fell from his horse in a skirmish at Giessen. He was returned on parole on 6 May (19 April 1797).

Kirchdenkern ❙ 1761 ❙ Seven Years War (Europe)

See Vellinghausen

Kirin ❙ 1900 ❙ Russo-Chinese War

See Jilin

